He'd never dreamed in his wildest fancies that he'd be given a second chance at the house. After his mother had died, he'd traveled to the West Coast. Probably, he later realized, to ge far away as possible from Maine. He'd committed clumsy fraud in Los Angeles and San Fra deliberately alienating Spiritualists and scientists alike in order to be free of them. He'd existed barely for thirty years, washing dishes, doing farmwork, selling door to door, janitorin anything to earn money without using his mind.
Yet, somehow, he'd protected his ability and nurtured it. It was still there, maybe not as spectacular as it had been when he was fifteen, but very much intact--and backed now by th thoughtful caution of a man rather than the suicidal arrogance of a teenager. He was ready t shake loose the dormant psychic muscles, exercise and strengthen them, use them once m that pesthole up in Maine.
Against Hell House.

DECEMBER 21, 1970

11:19 A.M.
The two black Cadillacs moved along the road, which twisted through dense forest. In the lead car was Deutsch's representative. Dr. Barrett, Edith, Florence Tanner, and Fischer rode the second, chauffeur-driven limousine, Fischer sitting on the pull-down seat, facing the othe three.

Florence put her hand on Edith's. "I hope you didn't think me unfriendly before," she said. "It was only that I felt concern for you, going into that house."
"I understand," said Edith. She drew her hand away.
"I'd appreciate it, Miss Tanner," Barrett told her, "if you wouldn't alarm my wife prematurely."
"I had no intention of doing that, Doctor. Still--" Florence hesitated, then went on. "You _have_ prepared Mrs. Barrett, I trust."
"My wife has been advised that there will be occurrences."
Fischer grunted. "One way of putting it," he said. It was the first time he'd spoken in an hour.
Barrett turned to him. "She has also been advised," he said, "that these occurrences will not, in any way, signify the presence of the dead."
Fischer nodded, taking out a pack of cigarettes. "All right if I smoke?" he asked. His gaze flicked across their faces. Seeing no objection, he lit one.
Florence was about to say something more to Barrett, then changed her mind. "Odd that a project such as this should be financed by a man like Deutsch," she said. "I would never hav thought him genuinely interested in these matters."
"He's an old man," Barrett said. "He's thinking about dying, and wants to believe it isn't the end."
"It isn't, of course."
Barrett smiled.
"You look familiar," Edith said to Florence. "Why is that?"
"I used to be an actress years ago. Television mostly, an occasional film. My acting name was Florence Michaels."
Edith nodded.
Florence looked at Barrett, then at Fischer. "Well, this _is_ exciting," she said. "To work with two such giants. How can that house not fall before us?"
"Why is it called Hell House?" Edith asked.
"Because its owner, Emeric Belasco, created a private hell there," Barrett told her.
"Is he supposed to be the one who haunts the house?"
"Among many," Florence said. "The phenomena are too complex to be the work of one surviving spirit. It's obviously a case of multiple haunting."
"Let's just say there's something there," said Barrett.
Florence smiled. "Agreed."
"Will you get rid of it with your machine?" asked Edith.
Florence and Fischer looked at Barrett. "I'll explain it presently," he said.

They all looked toward the windows as the car angled downward. "We're almost there," Barrett said. He looked at Edith. "The house is in the Matawaskie Valley."
All of them gazed at the hill-ringed valley lying ahead, its floor obscured by fog.
Fischer stubbed his cigarette in the ashtray, blowing out smoke. Looking forward again, he v
"We're going in."

The car was suddenly immersed in greenish mist. Its speed was decreased by the driver, a they saw him leaning forward, peering through the windshield. After several moments he sw the fog lights and wipers.
"How could anyone want to build a house in such a place?" asked Florence.
"This was sunshine to Belasco," Fischer said.
They all stared through the windows at the curling fog. It was as though they rode inside a submarine, slowly navigating downward through a sea of curdled milk. At various moment or bushes or boulder formations would appear beside the car, then disappear. The only sou the hum of the engine.
At last the car was braked. They all looked forward to see the other Cadillac in front of them. There was a faint sound as its door was closed. Then the figure of Deutsch's represen loomed from the mist. Barrett depressed a button, and the window by his side slid down. He grimaced at the fetid odor of the mist.
The man leaned over. "We're at the turnoff," he said. "Your chauffeur is going into Caribou Falls with us, so one of you will have to drive to the house--it's just a little way. The telephone has been connected, the electricity is on, and your rooms are ready." He glanced floor. "The food in that basket should see you through the afternoon. Supper will be delivere six. Any questions?"
"Will we need a key for the front door?" Barrett asked.
"No, it's unlocked."
"Get one anyway," Fischer said.
Barrett looked at him, then back at the man. "Perhaps we'd better."
The man withdrew a ring of keys from his overcoat pocket and disconnected one of them, handing it to Barrett. "Anything else?"
"We'll phone if there is."
The man smiled briefly. "Good-bye, then," he said. He turned away.
"I trust he meant _au revoir_," said Edith.
Barrett smiled as he raised the window.
"I'll drive," Fischer said. He clambered over the seat and got in front. Starting the motor, he turned left onto the rutted blacktop road.
Edith drew in sudden breath. "I wish I knew what to expect."
Fischer answered without looking back. "Expect anything," he said.

11:47 A.M.
For the past five minutes Fischer had been inching the Cadillac along the narrow, fogbound road. Now he braked and stopped the engine. "We're here." he said. He wrenched up the do handle and ducked outside, buttoning his Navy pea coat.
Edith turned as Lionel opened the door beside him. She waited as he struggled out, then edged across the seat after him. She shivered as she got out. "Cold," she said, "and that _smell_."
"Probably a swamp around here somewhere."
Florence joined them, and the four stood silent for a few moments, looking around.
"That way," Fischer said then. He was gazing across the hood of the car.
"Let's take a look," said Barrett. "We can get our luggage afterward." He turned to Fischer. "Would you lead?"
Fischer moved off.
They had gone only a few yards when they reached a narrow concrete bridge. As they walke across it, Edith looked over the edge. If there was water below, the mist obscured it from sig She glanced back. Already the limousine was swallowed by fog.
"Don't fall in the tarn." Fischer's voice drifted back. Edith turned and saw a body of water ahead, a gravel path curving to its left. The surface of the water looked like clouded gelatin sprinkled with a thin debris of leaves and grass. A miasma of decay hovered above it the stones which lined its shore were green with slime.
"Now we know where the odor comes from," Barrett said. He shook his head. "Belasco _wou have a tarn."
"Bastard Bog," said Fischer.
"Why do you call it that?"

Fischer didn't answer. Finally he said, "I'll tell you later."
They walked in silence now, the only sound the crunching of gravel underneath their shoes. The cold was numbing, a clammy chill that seemed to dew itself around their bones. Edith d the collar of her coat and stayed close to Lionel, holding on to his arm and looking at the ground. Just behind them walked Florence Tanner.
When Lionel stopped at last, Edith looked up quickly.
It stood before them in the fog, a massive, looming specter of a house.
"_Hideous_," said Florence, sounding almost angry. Edith looked at her. "We haven't even gone inside, Miss Tanner," Barrett said.
"I don't have to go inside." Florence turned to Fischer, who was staring at the house. As she looked at him, he shuddered. Reaching out, she put her hand in his. He gripped it so ha made her wince.
Barrett and Edith gazed up at the shrouded edifice. In the mist, it resembled some ghostly escarpment blocking their path. Edith leaned forward suddenly. "_It has no windows_," she s

"He had them bricked up," Barrett said.
"Why?"
"I don't know. Perhaps--"
"We're wasting time," Fischer cut him off. He let go of Florence's hand and lurched forward.
They walked the final yards along the gravel path, then started up the wide porch steps. Edith saw that all the steps were cracked, fungus and frosted yellow grass sprouting from th fissures.
They stopped before the massive double doors.
"If they open by themselves, I'm going home," Edith said, trying to sound amused. Barrett gripped the handle on the door and depressed its thumb plate. The door held fast. He glanc Fischer. "This happen to you?"
"More than once."
"Good we have the key, then." Barrett removed it from his overcoat pocket and slid it into the lock. It wouldn't turn. He wiggled the key back and forth, attempting to loosen the bolt. Abruptly the key turned over, and the heavy door began to swing in. Edith twitched as Florence caught her breath. "What is it?" she asked. Florence shook her head. "No cause fo alarm," Barrett said. Edith glanced at him in surprise.
"It's just reaction, Mrs. Barrett," Florence explained. "Your husband is quite right. It's nothing to be alarmed about."
Fischer had been reaching in to locate the light switch. Now he found it, and they heard him flick it up and down without result. "So much for restored electrical service," he said.
"Obviously the generator is too old," Barrett said.
"Generator?" Edith looked surprised again. "There's no electrical service here?"
"There aren't enough houses in the valley to make it worth the effort," Barrett answered.
"How could they put in a telephone, then?"
"It's a field telephone," Barrett said. He looked into the house. "Well, Mr. Deutsch will have to provide us with a new generator, that's all."
"You think that's the answer, do you?" Fischer sounded dubious.
"Of course," said Barrett. "The breakdown of an antique generator can scarcely be classified as a psychic phenomenon."
"What are we going to do?" asked Edith. "Stay in Caribou Falls until the new generator is installed?"
"That might take days," said Barrett. "We'll use candles until it arrives."
"Candles," Edith said.
Barrett smiled at her expression. "Just for a day or so."
She nodded, her returned smile wan. Barrett looked inside the house. "The question now," he said, "is how do we find some candles? I assume there must be some inside--" He broke looking at the flashlight Fischer had taken out of his coat pocket. "_Ah_," he said.

Fischer switched on the flashlight, pointed the beam inside, then, bracing himself, stepped acoss the threshold.
Barrett went in next. He stepped through the doorway, seemed to listen briefly. Turning then, he extended his hand to Edith. She entered the house, clutching at his hand. "That _sı she said. "It's even worse than outside."
"It's a very old house with no aeration," Barrett said. "It could also be the furnace, which hasn't been used in more than twenty-nine years." He turned to Florence. "Coming, M Tanner?" he asked.

She nodded, smiling faintly. "Yes." She took a deep breath, held herself erect, and stepped inside. She looked around. "The _atmosphere_ in here--" She sounded queasy.
"An atmosphere of this world, not the next," said Barrett dryly.
Fischer played the flashlight beam around the dark immensity of the entry hall. The narrow cone of light jumped fitfully from place to place, freezing momentarily on hulking groups of furniture; huge, leaden-colored paintings; giant tapestries filmed with dust; a staircase, broa and curving, leading upward into blackness; a second-story corridor overlooking the entry ha and far above, engulfed by shadows, a vast expanse of paneled ceiling.
"Be it ever so humble," Barrett said.
"It isn't humble at all," said Florence. "It reeks of arrogance." Barrett sighed. "It reeks, at any rate." He looked to his right. "According to the floor plan, the kitchen should be that way."
Edith walked beside him as they started across the entry hall, the sound of their footsteps loud on the hardwood floor.
Florence looked around. "It knows we're here," she said.
"Miss Tanner--" Barrett frowned. "Please don't think I'm trying to restrict you--"
"Sorry." Florence said. "I'll try to keep my observations to myself."
They reached a corridor and walked along it, Fischer in the lead, Barrett and Edith behind him, Florence last. At the end of the corridor stood a pair of metal-faced swinging doors. Fis pushed one of them open and stepped into the kitchen, holding the door ajar for the others.
all of them had gone inside, he let the door swing back and turned.
"Good Lord." Edith's eyes moved with the flashlight beam as Fischer shifted it around the room.
The kitchen was twenty-five by fifty feet, its perimeter rimmed by steel counters and darkpa cupboards, a long, double-basin sink, a gigantic stove with three ovens, and a massive walk-in refrigerator. In the center of the room, like a giant's steel-topped casket, stood a hug steam table.

"He must have entertained a good deal," Edith said.
Fischer pointed the flashlight at the large electric wall clock above the stove. Its hands were stopped at 7:31. A.M. or P.M., and on what day? Barrett wondered as he limped along to his right, pulling open drawers. Edith and Florence stood together, watching him. Barrett pulled open one of the cupboard doors and grunted as Fischer shone the light over. "Genuin spirits," he said, looking at the shelves of dust-filmed bottles. "Perhaps we'll raise some after supper."
Fischer pulled a sheet of yellow-edged cardboard from one of the drawers and pointed the flashlight at it.
"What's that?" Barrett asked.
"One of their menus, dated March 27, 1928. Shrimp bisque. Sweetbreads in gravy. Stewed capon. Bread sauce in gravy. Creamed cauliflower. For dessert, _amandes en crème_: crus in whipped egg whites and heavy cream."
Barrett chuckled. "His guests must have all had heartburn."
"The food wasn't aimed at their hearts," said Fischer, taking a box of candles from the drawer.
12:19 P.M.
They started back across the entry hall, each carrying a candle in a holder. As they moved, the flickering illumination made their shadows billow on the walls and ceiling.
"This must be the great hall over here," said Barrett.
They moved beneath an archway six feet deep and stopped, Edith and Florence gasping alr simultaneously. Barrett whistled softly as he raised his candle for a maximum of light.
The great hall measured ninety-five by forty-seven feet, its walls two stories high, paneled in walnut to a height of eight feet, rough-hewn blocks of stone above. Across from w they stood was a mammoth fireplace, its mantel constructed of antique carved stone.
The furnishings were all antique except for scattered chairs and sofas upholstered in the fashion of the twenties. Marble statues stood on pedestals in various locations. In the northw corner was an ebony concert grand piano, and in the center of the hall stood a circular table more than twenty feet across, with sixteen high-backed chairs around it and a large chandel suspended over it. Good place to set up my equipment, Barrett thought; the hall had obvious cleaned. He lowered his candle. "Let's push on," he said.

They left the great hall, moved across the entry hall, beneath the overhanging staircase, and turned right into another corridor. Several yards along its length, they reached a pair of swinging walnut doors set to their left. Barrett pushed one in and peered inside. "The theate he said.
They went inside, reacting to the musty smell. The theater was designed to seat a hundred people, its walls covered with an antique red brocade, its sloping, three-aisled floor with thic red carpeting. On the stage, gilded Renaissance columns flanked the screen, and spaced al walls were silver candelabra wired for electricity. The seats were custom-made, upholstered wine-red velvet.

"Just how wealthy _was_ Belasco?" Edith asked.

"I believe he left in excess of seven million dollars when he died," Barrett answered.

"Died?" said Fischer. He held open one of the doors.

"If there's anything you care to tell us . . ." Barrett said as he stepped into the corridor.

"What's to tell? The house tried to kill me; it almost succeeded."

Barrett looked as though he meant to speak. Then he changed his mind and peered down th corridor. "I think that staircase leads down to the pool and steam room," he said. "No point in going there until the electricity's on." He limped across the corridor and opened a heavy woo door.

"What is it?" Edith asked.

"Looks like a chapel."

"A _chapel?_" Florence looked appalled. As she neared the door, she started making sounc of apprehension in her throat. Edith glanced at her uneasily.

"Miss Tanner?" Barrett said.

She didn't answer. Almost to the door, she held back.

"Better not," said Fischer.

Florence shook her head. "I must." She began to enter.

With a faint, involuntuy cry, she shrank back. Edith started. "What _is_ it?" Florence was unable to reply. She sucked in breath and shook her head with tiny movements. Barrett put on Edith's arm. She looked at him and saw his lips frame the words, "It's all right."

"I can't go in," Florence said, as though apologizing. "Not now, anyway." She swallowed. "The atmosphere is more than I can bear."

"We'll only be a moment," Barrett told her.

Florence nodded, turning away.

As she went inside the chapel, Edith braced herself, expecting a shock of some kind. Feeling nothing, she turned to Lionel in confusion, started to speak, then waited until they w apart from Fischer. "Why couldn't she come in?" she whispered then.

"Her system is attuned to psychic energy," Barrett explained. "Obviously it's very strong in here."

"Why here?"

"Contrast, perhaps. A church in hell; that sort of thing."

Edith nodded, glancing back at Fischer. "Why doesn't it bother him?" she asked.

"Perhaps he knows how to protect himself better than she does."

Edith nodded again, stopping as Lionel did to look around the low-ceilinged chapel. There were wooden pews for fifty people. In front was an altar; above it, glinting in the candlelight, life-size, flesh-colored figure of Jesus on the cross.

"It _looks_ like a chapel," she started to say, breaking off in shock as she saw that the figure of Jesus was naked, an enormous phallus jutting upward from between the legs. She sound of revulsion, staring at the obscene crucifix. The air seemed suddenly thick, coagulati her throat.
Now she noticed that the walls were covered with pornographic murals. Her eye was caught by one on her right, depicting a mass orgy involving half-clothed nuns and priests. The faces the figures were demented--leering, slavering, darkly flushed, distorted by maniacal lust.
"Profanation of the sacred," Barrett said. "A venerable sickness."
"He _was_ sick," Edith murmured.
"Yes, he was." Barrett took her arm. As he escorted her along the aisle, Edith saw that Fischer had already left.
They found him in the corridor.
"_She's gone_," he said.

Edith stared at him. "How can she--?" She broke off looking around.
"I'm sure it's nothing," Barrett said.
"_Are_ you?" Fischer sounded angry.
"I'm sure she's all right," said Barrett firmly. "Miss Tannet!" he called. "Come along, my dear." He started down the corridor. "Miss Tanner!" Fischer followed him without making a s
"Lionel, why would she--?"
"Let's not jump to conclusions," Barrett said. He called again. "Miss Tanner! Can you hear me?"
As they reached the entry hall, Edith pointed. There was candlelight inside the great hall.
"Miss Tanner!" Barrett called.
"Yes!"
Barrett smiled at Edith, then glanced over at Fischer. Fischer's expression had not relaxed.
She was standing on the far side of the hall. Their footsteps clicked in broken rhythm on the floor as they crossed to her. "You shouldn't have done that, Miss Tanner," Barrett said. " caused us undue alarm."
"I'm sorry," Florence said, but it was only a token apology. "I heard a voice in here."
Edith shuddered.
Florence gestured toward the piece of furniture she was standing beside, a phonograph installed inside a walnut Spanish cabinet. Reaching down to its turntable, she lifted off a rec and showed it to them. "It was this."

Edith didn't understand. "How could it play without electricity?"
"You forget they used to wind up phonographs." Barrett set his candle holder on top of the cabinet and took the record from Florence. "Homemade," he said.
"Belasco."
Barrett looked at her, intrigued. "His voice?" She nodded, and he turned to put it back on the turntable. Florence looked at Fischer, who was standing several yards away, staring at t phonograph.
Barrett wound the crank tight, ran a fingertip across the end of the steel needle, and set it on the record edge. There was a crackling noise through the speaker, then a voice.
"Welcome to my house," said Emeric Belasco. "I'm delighted you could come."
Edith crossed her arms and shivered.
"I am certain you will find your stay here most illuminating." Belasco's voice was soft and mellow, yet terrifying--the voice of a carefully disciplined madman. "It is regrettable I cannot be with you," it said, "but I had to leave before your arrival."
Bastard, Fischer thought.
"Do not let my physical absence disturb you, however. Think of me as your unseen host anc believe that, during your stay here, I shall be with you in spirit."
Edith's teeth were set on edge. _That voice_.
"All your needs have been provided for," Belasco's voice continued. "Nothing has been overlooked. Go where you will, and do what you will--these are the cardinal precepts of my h Feel free to function as you choose. There are no responsibilities, no rules. 'Each to his own device' shall be the only standard here. May you find the answer that you seek. It is here, I promise you." There was a pause. "And now . . . _auf Wiedersehen_."
The needle made a scratching noise on the record. Barrett raised the needle arm and switched off the phonograph. The great hall was immensely still.
"_Auf Wiedersehen_." said Florence. "_Until we meet again_."
"Lionel--?"
"The record wasn't meant for us," he said.
"But--"
"It was cut a good half-century ago," said Barrett. "Look at it." He held it up. "It's merely a coincidence that what he said seems applicable to us."
"What made the phonograph go on by itself, then?" Florence asked.
"That is a separate problem," Barrett said. "I'm only discussing the record now." He looked at Fischer. "Did it play by itself in 1940? The accounts say nothing of it."
Fischer shook his head.
"Do you know anything about the record?"
It appeared that Fischer wasn't going to answer. Then he said, "Guests would arrive, to find him gone. That record would be played for them." He paused. "It was a game he played the guests were here, Belasco spied on them from hiding."

Barrett nodded.
"Then, again, maybe he was invisible," Fischer continued. "He claimed the power. Said that he could will the attention of a group of people to some particular object, and move among t unobserved."
"I doubt that," Barrett said.
"Do you?" Fischer's smile was strange as he looked at the phonograph. "We all had our attention on that a few moments ago," he said. "How do you know he didn't walk right by us we were listening?"
12:46 P.M.
They were moving up the staircase when an icy breeze passed over them, causing their candle flames to flicker. Edith's flame went out. "What was that?" she whispered.
"A breeze," said Barrett instantly. He declined his candle to relight hers. "We'll discuss it later."
Edith swallowed, glancing at Florence. Barrett took her by the arm, and they started up the stairs again. "There'll be many things like that during the week," he said. "You'll get used to them."
Edith said no more. As she and Lionel ascended the stairs, Florence and Fischer exchange a look.
They reached the second floor and, turning to the right, started along the balcony corridor. On their right, the heavy balustrade continued. To their left, set periodically along a paneled wall, were bedroom doors. Barrett approached the first of these and opened it. He l inside, then turned to Florence. "Would you like this one?" he asked.
She stepped into the doorway. After several moments, she turned back to them. "Not too bad," she said. She smiled at Edith. "You'll rest more comfortably here."
Barrett was about to comment, then relented. "Fine," he said. He gestured toward the room. He followed Edith inside and shut the door. Edith watched as he limped around the bedroom To her left were a pair of carved walnut Renaissance beds, between them a small table with and a French-style telephone on it. A fireplace was centered on the opposite wall, in front of a heavy walnut rocking chair. The teakwood floor was almost covered by a twenty-by-thirty-f blue Persian rug, in the middle of which stood an octagonal-topped table with a matching ch upholstered in red leather.
Barrett glanced into the bathroom, then returned to her. "About that breeze," he said. "I didn't want to get involved in a discussion with Miss Tanner. That's why I glossed over it."
"It really happened, didn't it?"
"Of course," he answered, smiling. "A manifestation of simple kinetics: unguided, unintelligent. No matter what Miss Tanner thinks. I should have mentioned that before we le

"Mentioned what?"
"That you'll need to inure yourself to what she'll be saying in the next week. She's a Spiritualist, as you know. Survival of and communication with the so-called disincarnate is th foundation of her belief; an erroneous foundation, as I intend to prove. In the meantime, thou he smiled--"be prepared to hear her views expressed. I can't very well ask that she remain n
To her right, their heads against the wall, were a pair of beds with elaborately carved headboards, between them a huge chest of drawers. Above the chest, suspended from the a large Italian silver lamp.
Directly across from her, by the paneled window shutters, was a Spanish table with a matching chair. On top of the table was a Chinese lamp and a French-style telephone. Flore crossed the room and pickd up the receiver. It was dead. Did I expect it to be working? she thought, amused. At any rate, it had doubtless been used only for calls made within the hous
She turned and looked around the room. There was something in it. What, though? A personality? A residue of emotion? Florence closed her eyes and waited. Something in the a doubt of it. She felt it shift and throb, advancing on her, then retreating like some unseen, timorous beast.

After several minutes she opened her eyes. It will come, she thought. She crossed to the bathroom, squinting slightly as its white tile walls glittered with reflected candlelight. Setting the holder on the sink, she turned the hot-water faucet. For a moment, nothing happened. T with a gurgling rattle, a gout of darkly rusted water splattered into the basin. Florence waited until the water cleared before she held her hand beneath it. She hissed at its coldness. I hop the water heater isn't broken too, she thought. Bending over, she started patting water onto face.
I should have gone into the chapel, she thought. I shouldn't have backed off from the very first challenge. She winced, remembering the violent nausea she'd felt as she was about to An awful place, she thought. She'd have to work her way up to it, that was all. If she forced i now, she might lose consciousness. I'll get in there soon enough, she promised herself. Goo grant the power when it's time.
His room was smaller than the other two. There was only one bed with a canopy top. Fische sat at the foot of it, staring at the intricate pattern on the rug. He could feel the house around him like some vast, invisible being. It knows I'm here, he thought; Belasco knows, they all kn that I'm here: their single failure. They were watching him, waiting to see what he'd do.
He wasn't going to do anything prematurely, that was certain. He wasn't going to do a thing until he got the feel of the place.
2:21 P.M.
Fischer came into the great hall carrying his flashlight. He had changed into a black turtleneck sweater, black corduroy trousers, and a pair of scuffed white tennis shoes. His ste were soundless as he moved toward the huge round table where Barrett, seated, and Edith, were opening wooden boxes and unloading equipment. In the fireplace, a fire was burning. Edith started as Fischer emerged from the shadows. "Need help?" he asked.

"No, it's going fine," said Barrett, smiling. "Thank you for the offer, though."
Fischer sat in one of the chairs. His eyes remained on Barrett as the tall, bearded man removed an instrument from protective excelsior, wiped it carefully with a cloth, and set it on the table. Fussy about his equipment, Fischer thought. He pulled a pack of cigarettes from h pocket and lit one, watching the gamboling deformity of Edith's shadow on the wall as she p up another wooden box and carried it to the table.
"Still teach physics?" he asked.
"Limitedly, because of health." Barrett hesitated, then continued. "I had polio when I was twelve; my right leg is partially paralyzed."
Fischer gazed at him in silence. Barrett took another instrument from its box and wiped it off. He set the instrument on the table and looked at Fischer. "It won't affect our project in ar way," he said.
Fischer nodded.
"You referred to the tarn before as Bastard Bog," Barrett said, returning to his work.
"Why was that?"
"Some of Belasco's female guests got pregnant while they were here."
"And they actually--?" Barrett broke off, glancing up.
"Thirteen times."
"That's hideous," said Edith.
Fischer blew out smoke. "A lot of hideous things happened here," he said.
Barrett ran his eyes across the instruments already on the table: astatic galvanometer, mirror galvanometer, quadrant electrometer, Crookes balance, camera, gauze cage, smoke manometer, weighing platform, tape recorder. Still to be unpacked were the contact clock, electroscope, lights (standard and infrared), maximum and minimum thermometer, hygrosco sthenometer, phosphorescent sulfide screen, electric stove, the box of vessels and tubes, th molding materials, and the cabinet equipment. And the most important instrument of all, Bar thought with satisfaction.
He was unpacking the rack of red, yellow, and white lights when Fischer asked, "How are you going to use those when there's no electricity?"
"There will be by tomorrow," Barrett said. "I telephoned Caribou Falls; the phone is near the front door, incidentally. They'll install a new generator in the morning."

"And you think it will work?"
Barrett repressed a smile. "It will work."
Fischer said no more. Across the hall, a burning log popped, making Edith twitch as she walked to one of the larger wooden boxes.

"Not that one, it's too heavy," Barrett told her.
"I'll do it." Rising from his chair, Fischer walked to Edith and, stooping, lifted the box. "What is it, an anvil?" he asked as he set it on the table.
Barrett was aware of Fischer's curious gaze as he pried up the boards on top of the box.
"Would you--?" he asked. Fischer lifted out the bulky metal instrument and set it on the table was cube-shaped, painted dark blue, an uncomplicated dial in front of it numbered 0-900, th red needle pointed at zero. Across the top of the instrument was stenciled, in black letters: BARRETT--EMR.
"EMR?" asked Fischer.
"I'll explain it later," said Barrett.
"This your machine?"
Barrett shook his head. "That's being constructed."
They all turned toward the archway at the sound of heels. Florence was approaching, carrying a candle in its holder. She had changed to a heavy green, long-sleeved sweater, th tweed skirt, and low-heeled shoes. "Hello," she said cheerfully.
As she came up to them, her gaze ran across the array of devices on the table, and she smiled. She turned to Fischer. "Like to take a walk with me?" she asked.
"Why not?"
After they were gone, Edith saw a typed list on the table and picked it up. It was headed, "Observed Psychic Phenomena at the Belasco House":
Apparitions; Apports; Asports; Automatic drawing; Automatic painting; Automatic speaking ; Automatic writing; Autoscopy; Bilocation; Biological phenomena; Book tests; Breezes; Catal Chemical phenomena; Chemicographs; Clairaudience; Clairsentience; Clairvoyance; Comm Control; Crystal gazing; Dematerialization; Direct drawing; Direct painting; Direct voice; Dire writing; Divination; Dreams; Dream communications; Dream prophecies; Ectoplasm; Eldolor Electrical phenomena; Elongation; Emanations; Exteriorization of motricity; Exteriorization o sensation; Extras; Extratemporal perception; Eyeless sight; Facsimile writing; Flower clairsentience; Ghosts; Glossolalia; Hyperamnesia; Hyperesthesia; Ideomorphs; Ideoplasm; Impersonation; Imprints; Independent voice; Interpenetration of matter; Knot tying; Levitatior Luminous phenomena; Magnetic phenomena; Materialization; Matter through matter; Metag Monition; Motor automatism; Newspaper tests; Obsession; Paraffin molds; Parakinesis; Par Paresthesia; Percussion; Phantasmata; Poltergeist phenomena; Possession; Precognition; Presentiment; Prevision; Pseudopods; Psychic photography; Psychic rods; Psychic sounds; touches; Psychic winds; Psychokinesis; Psychometry; Radiesthesia; Radiographs; Raps; Retrocognition; Scriptograph; Sensory automatism; Skin writing; Skotography; Slate writing; Smells; Somnambulism; Stigmata; Telekinesis; Teleplasm; Telescopic vision; Telesthesia; Transcendental music; Transfiguration; Transportation; Typtology; Voices; Water sprinkling; Xenoglossy.

Edith put the list down numbly. My God, she thought. What kind of week was it going to be?
2:53 P.M.
The garage had been built to accommodate seven automobiles. Now it was empty. As they entered, Fischer thumbed off his flashlight, enough daylight filtering through the grimy door windows for them to see. He looked at the greenish mist which pressed against the panes o
"Maybe we should keep the car in here," he said.
Florence didn't answer. She was walking across the oilspotted floor, turning her head from side to side. She paused by a shelf and touched a dirty, rust-flecked hammer.
"What did you say?" she asked.
"Maybe we should keep the car in here."

Florence shook her head. "If a generator can be tampered with, so can a car."
Fischer watched the medium move around the garage. As she passed close by, he caught a scent of the cologne she wore. "Why did you give up acting?" he asked.
Florence glanced at him with a fleeting smile. "It's a long story, Ben. When we've settled down a bit, I'll tell it to you. Right now, I'd better get the feeling of the place." She stopped in a patch of light and closed her eyes.
Fischer stared at her. In the dim illumination, the medium's ivory skin and lustrous red hair gave her the appearance of a Dresden doll.
After a while she returned to Fischer. "Nothing here," she said. "You agree?"
"Whatever you say."
Fischer switched on his flashlight as they ascended the steps to the corridor. "Which way now?" she asked.
"I don't know the place that well. I was here only three days."
"We'll just explore, then," Florence said. "No need--" She broke off suddenly and stopped, head twisted to the right, as though she heard a noise behind them. "Yes," she murmured. " Sorrow. Pain." She frowned and shook her head. "No, no." At length she sighed and looked Fischer. "You felt it," she said.
Fischer didn't answer. Florence smiled and looked away. "Well, let's see what else we can find," she said.
"Have you read Doctor Barrett's article in which he compares sensitives to Geiger counters?" she asked as they walked along the corridor.
"No."
"It's not a bad comparison. We _are_ like Geiger counters in a way. Expose us to psychic emanations, and we tick. Of course, the difference is that we are judge as well as instrumen only picking up impressions, but evaluating them as well."
"Uh-huh," said Fischer. Florence glanced at him.

They started down the flight of stairs across from the chapel, Fischer pointing the flashlight beam at their feet. "I wonder if we're going to need the full week," Florence said. "A full year wouldn't be too long."

Florence tried to make her sound of disagreement mild. "I've seen the most abstruse of psychic problems solved overnight. We mustn't--" She stopped, hand clamping on the banis "_This goddamn sewer," she muttered in a savage voice. She jolted in dismay and shook he "Oh, dear. Such fury. Such destructive venom." She drew in trembling breath. "A very hostile she said. "No wonder. Who can blame him, imprisoned in this house?" She glanced at Fisch

Reaching the lower corridor, they moved to a pair of swinging metal doors with porthole windows in them. Fischer pushed at one of the doors and held it open for Florence. As they inside, their footsteps sounded sharply on a tile floor and reverberated off the ceiling.

The pool was Olympic size. Fischer shone his flashlight into the murky green depths of it. He walked to the end of the pool and knelt at its corner. Pulling up the sleeve of his sweater put his hand in the water. "Not too cold," he said, surprised. He felt around. "And water's cor in. The pool must work on a separate generator."

Florence gazed across the glinting pool. The ripples made by Fischer were gliding across its surface. "Something in here," she said. She did not look to Fischer for verification.

"Steam room's down the other end." Fischer returned to her side.

"Let's look at it."

The ringing echoes of their footsteps as they walked along the edge of the pool made it sound as though someone were following them. Florence glanced across her shoulder. "Yes murmured, unaware that she had spoken.

Fischer pulled open the heavy metal door and held it ajar, playing the flashlight beam inside. The steam room was twelve feet square, its walls, floor, and ceiling tiled in white. Bui wooden benches lined the walls, and spiraling across the floor like some petrified serpent wa a length of faded green hose connected to a water outlet.

Florence grimaced. "Perverted," she said. "In there--" She swallowed as though to rid her throat of sour bile. "In _there_," she said. "But what?"

Fischer let the door swing shut, the thumping closure of it echoing loudly. Florence glanced at him; then, as he turned away, she fell into step beside him. "Doctor Barrett is certainly well equipped, isn't he?" she said, trying to lighten his mood. "It's strange to think he really believes that science alone can end the power of this house."

"What will?"

"Love," she answered. She squeezed his arm. "We know that, don't we?"

Fischer held open the swinging door for her, and they went back into the corridor. "What's over there?" Florence crossed the hallway and opened a wooden door. Fischer pointed the beam inside. It was a wine cellar, all its shelves and racks empty. Florence winced. "I see th room completely filled with bottles." She turned away. "Let's not go in."

They went back up the staircase and started along the first-floor corridor. As they passed the chapel door, Florence shuddered. "That place is the worst of all," she said. "Even though haven't seen the entire house, somehow I have the feeling . . ." Her voice faded as she spok She cleared her throat. "I'll get in there," she said.
They turned into an adjoining corridor. Twenty yards along its right wall was an archway. "What have we here?" Florence walked beneath the archway and caught her breath. "_This she said.
The ballroom was immense, its lofty, brocaded walls adorned with red velvet draperies. Three enormous chandeliers hung, spaced, along the paneled ceiling. The floor was oak, el parqueted. At the far end of the room was an alcove for musicians.
"A theater, yes, but this?" said Florence. "Can a ballroom be an evil place?"
"The evil came later," Fischer said.
Florence shook her head. "Contradictions." She looked at Fischer. "You're right, it's going to take a while. I feel as if I'm standing in the center of a labyrinth of such immeasurab intricacy that the prospect of emerging is--" She caught herself. "We _will_ emerge, howeve Overhead, there was a tinkling noise. Fischer jerked up his arm, pointing the flashlight at the parabola of heavy hanging crystal above them. Its pendants refracted the light, splayi colors of the spectrum across the ceiling. The chandelier was motionless.
"The challenge is met," whispered Florence.
"Don't be too quick to accept it," Fischer warned.
Florence looked at him abruptly. "You're blocking it off," she said.
"What?"
"_You're blocking it off_. That's why you didn't feel those things."
Fischer's smile was cold. "I didn't feel them because they weren't there. I was a Spiritualist too, remember. I know how you people find things in every corner when you wan "Ben, that isn't true." Florence looked hurt. "Those things _were_ there. You would have felt them just as I did if you weren't obstructing--"
"I'm not obstructing anything," he cut her off. "I'm just not sticking my head on the block a second time. When I came here in 1940, I was just like you--no, worse, much worse really thought I was something. God's gift to psychical research."
"You were the most powerful physical medium this country has ever known, Ben."
"Still am, Florence. Just a little bit more careful now, that's all. I suggest the same approach for you. You're walking around this house like an open nerve. When you really _d something, it'll tear your insides out. This place isn't called Hell House for nothing, you know It intends to kill every one of us, so you'd damn well better learn to protect yourself until you're ready. Or you'll just be one more victim on the list."
They looked at each other in silence for a long time. Finally she touched his hand. "'But he who buried his talent--'" she began

"Oh, shit." Turning on his heel, he stalked away from her.
6:42 P.M.
The dining hall was sixty feet in length, and as high as it was wide--twenty-seven feet in both directions. There were two entrances to it--one an archway from the great hall, the othe swinging door leading to the kitchen.
Its ceiling was divided into a series of elaborately carved panels, its floor polished travertine. Its walls were paneled to a height of twelve feet, stone-blocked above. In the cent of the west wall was a giant fireplace, its Gothic mantel reaching to the ceiling. Spaced at intervals above the length of the forty-foot table in the center of the hall hung four immense sanctuary lamps, wired for electricity. Thirty chairs stood around the table, all of them constructed of antique walnut with wine-red velvet upholstery.
The four were sitting at one end of the table, Barrett at its head. The unseen couple from Caribou Falls had left the supper at six-fifteen.
"If no one objects, I'd like to try a sitting tonight," Florence said.
Barrett's hand froze momentarily before continuing to spoon himself a second portion of broccoli. "I have no objection," he said.

Florence glanced at Edith, who shook her head. She looked at Fischer. "Fine," he said, reaching for the coffeepot.
Florence nodded. "After supper, then." Her plate was empty; she'd been drinking only water since they'd sat down.
"Would _you_ care to sit in the morning, Mr. Fischer?" Barrett asked.
Fischer shook his head. "Not yet."
Barrett nodded. There; it's done, he thought. He'd asked and been refused. Since his part in the project required the services of a physical medium, Deutsch couldn't object to his sen for one of his own people. _Excellent_, he thought. He'd get it settled in the morning.
"Well," he said, "I must say that the house has scarcely lived up to its reputation so far."
Fischer looked up from the scraps of food on his plate. "It hasn't taken our measure yet," he said. His lips flexed briefly in a humorless smile.
"I think we'd be mistaken to consider the house as the haunting force," Florence said. "Quite evidently, the trouble is created by surviving personalities--whoever they may be. The one we can be sure of is Belasco."
"You contacted him today, did you?" Barrett asked. His tone was mild, but Florence sensed the goading in it. "No," she said. "But Mr. Fischer did when he was here in 1940. And Belasc presence _has_ been documented."
"Reported," Barrett said.

Florence hesitated. Finally she said, "I think it might be well for us to lay our cards on the table, Doctor Barrett. I take it you are still convinced that no such things as ghosts exist."
"If, by that, you mean surviving personalities," said Barrett, "you are quite correct."
"Despite the fact that they've been observed throughout the ages?" Florence asked. "Have been seen by more than one person at a time? Been seen by animals? Been photographed imparted information that was later verified? Have touched people? Moved objects? Been w
"These are facts in evidence of a phenomenon, Miss Tanner, not proof of ghosts."
Florence smiled wearily. "I don't know how to answer that," she said.
Barrett returned her smile, gesturing with his hands as though to say: We don't agree, so why not let it go at that?
"You don't accept survival, then," Florence persisted.
"It's a charming notion," Barrett said. "I have no objection to it, so long as I am not expected to give credence to the concept of communicating with the so-called survivors."
Florence regarded him sadly. "You can say that, having heard the sobs of joy at seances?"
"I've heard similar sobs in mental institutions."
"_Mental institutions?_"
Barrett sighed. "No offense intended. But the evidence is clear that belief in communication with the dead has led more people to madness than to peace of mind."
"_That isn't true_," said Florence. "If it were, all attempts at spirit communication would have ended long ago. They haven't, though; they've lasted through the centuries." Sh intently at Barrett, as though trying to understand his point of view. "You call it a charming notion, Doctor. Surely it's more than that. What about the religions that accept the idea of life after death? Didn't Saint Paul say: 'If the dead rise not from the grave, then is our religion vain'?"
Barrett didn't respond.
"But you don't agree," she said.
"I don't agree."
"Have you any alternative to offer, though?"
"_Yes_." Barrett returned her gaze with challenge. "An alternative far more interesting, albeit far more complex and demanding; namely, _the subliminal self_, that vast, concealed of the human personality which, iceberglike, inheres beneath the so-called threshold of consciousness. That is where the fascination lies, Miss Tanner. Not in the speculative realm afterlife, but _here, today; the challenge of ourselves_. The undiscovered mysteries of the h spectrum, the infrared capacities of our bodies, the ultraviolet capacities of our minds. This i the alternative I offer: _the extended faculties of the human system not as yet established_. faculties by which, I am convinced, all psychic phenomena are produced."
Florence remained silent for a few moments before she smiled. "We'll see," she said.
Barrett nodded once. "Indeed we shall."

Edith looked around the dining hall. "When was this house built?" she asked.
Barrett looked at Fischer. "Do you know?"
"Nineteen-nineteen," Fischer answered.
"From several things you said today, I have the impression that you know quite a bit about Belasco," Barrett said. "Would you care to tell us what you know? It might not be amiss to"--repressed a smile--know our adversary."
Amused? thought Fischer. You won't be when Belasco and the others get to work. "What do you want to know?" he asked.
"Whatever you can tell us," Barrett said. "A general account of his life might be helpful."
Fischer poured himself another cupful of coffee, then set the pot back on the table, wrapped his hands around the cup, and began to speak.
"He was born in 1879, the illegitimate son of Myron Sandler, an American munitions maker, and Noelle Belasco, an English actress."
"Why did he take his mother's name?" Barrett asked.
"Sandler was married," Fischer said. He paused, went on. "His childhood is a blank except for isolated incidents. At five he hanged a cat to see if it would revive for the second of its nine lives. When it didn't, he became infuriated and chopped the cat to pieces, flinging the p from his bedroom window. After that, his mother called him Evil Emeric."
"He was raised in England, I presume," Barrett interjected.
Fischer nodded. "The next verified incident was a sexual assault on his younger sister," he said.
Barrett frowned. "Is it all to be like this?"
"He didn't live an exemplary life, Doctor," Fischer said, a caustic edge to his voice.
Barrett hesitated. "Very well." he said. He looked at Edith. "You object, my dear?" Edith shook her head. He glanced at Florence. "Miss Tanner?"
"Not if it will help us understand," she said. Barrett gestured toward Fischer, bidding him continue.
"The assault put his sister in the hospital for two months," Fischer said. "I won't go into details. Belasco was sent to a private school--he was ten and a half at the time. There, h was abused for a number of years, mostly by one of the homosexual teachers. Belasco later the man to visit his house for a week; at the end of that time, the retired teacher went home hanged himself."
"What did Belasco look like?" Barrett asked, attempting to guide the course of Fischer's account.
Fischer stared into his memory. After a while, he began to quote: " 'His teeth are those of a carnivore. When he bares them in a smile, it gives one the impression of an animal snar

His face is white, for he despises the sun, eschews the out-of-doors. He has astonishingly g eyes, which seem to possess an inner light of their own. His forehead is broad, his hair and beard jet black. Despite his handsomeness, his is a frightening visage, the face of some demon who has taken on a human aspect'"
"Whose description is that?" asked Barrett.
"His second wife's. She committed suicide here in 1927."
"You know that description word for word," said Florence. "You must have read it many times."
Fischer's smile was somber. "As the Doctor said," he answered, "know thine adversary."
"Was he tall or short?" asked Barrett.
"Tall, six-foot-five. 'The Roaring Giant,' he was called."
Barrett nodded. "Education?"
"New York. London. Berlin. Paris. Vienna. No specific course of study. Logic, ethics, religion, philosophy."
"Just enough with which to rationalize his actions, I imagine," Barrett said. "He inherited his money from his father, did he?"
"Mostly. His mother left him several thousand pounds, but his father left him ten and a half million dollars--his share of the proceeds from the sales of rifles and machine guns."
"That could have given him a sense of guilt," said Florence.
"Belasco never felt a twinge of guilt in his life."
"Which only serves to verify his mental aberration," Barrett said.
"His mind may have been aberrant, but it was brilliant, too," Fischer went on. "He could master any subject he chose to study. He spoke and read a dozen languages. He was verse natural and metaphysical philosophy. He'd studied all the religions, cabalist and Rosicrucian doctrines, ancient mysteries. His mind was a storehouse of information, a powerhouse of en He paused. "_A charnelhouse of fancies_."

"Did he ever love a single person in his life?" asked Florence.
"He didn't believe in love," Fischer answered. "He believed in will. 'That rare _vis viva_ of the self, that magnetism, that most secret and prevailing delectation of the mind: influence Unquote. Emeric Belasco, 1913."
"What did he mean by 'influence'?" asked Barrett.
"The power of the mind to dominate," Fischer said. "The control of one human being by another. He obviously had the kind of hypnotic personality men like Cagliostro and Rasputin Quote: 'No one ever went too close to him, lest his terrible presence overpower and engulf t His second wife, again."
"Did Belasco have any children?" Florence asked.
"A son, they say. No one's really sure, though."

"You said the house was built in 1919," Barrett said. "Did the corruption start immediately?"

"No, it was innocent at first. _Haut monde_ dinner parties. Lavish dances in the ballroom. Soirees. People traveling from all over the country and world to spend a weekend here. Bela a perfect host--sophisticated, charming.

"Then--" He raised his right hand, thumb and index finger almost touching. "In 1920: '_un peu_,' as he referred to it. A _soupçon_ of debasement. The introduction, bit by bit, of open sensuality--first in talk, then in action. Gossip. Court intrigues. Aristocratic machinations. Flowing wine and bedroom-hopping. All of it induced by Belasco and his _influences_.

"What he did, in this phase, was create a parallel to eighteenth-century European high society. It would take too long to describe in detail how he did it. It was subtle, though, engineered with great finesse."

"I presume that the result of this was primarily sexual license," Barrett said.

Fischer nodded. "Belasco formed a club he called Les Aphrodites. Every night--later, two and three times a day-- they'd hold a meeting; what Belasco called his Sinposium. Having al partaken of drugs and aphrodisiacs, they'd sit around that table in the great hall talking abou sex until everyone was what Belasco referred to as 'lubricous.' Then an orgy would commen

"Still, it wasn't exclusively sex. The principle of excess was applied to every phase of life here. Dining became gluttony, drinking turned to drunkenness. Drug addiction mounted. the physical spectrum of his guests was perverted, so, too, was their mental."

"How?" asked Barrett.

"Visualize twenty to thirty people set loose upon each other mentally--encouraged to do whatever they wanted to one another; no limits set but those of imagination. As their minds l to open up--or close in, if you like--so did every aspect of their lives together. People stayed here months, then years. The house became their way of life. A way of life that grew a little r insane each day. Isolated from the contrast of normal society, the society in this house beca the norm. Total self-indulgence became the norm. Debauchery became the norm. Brutality a soon became the norm."

"How could all this . . . bacchanalia take place without repercussions?" Barrett asked. "Surely someone must have-- what's the expression?--blown the whistle on Belasco?"

"The house is isolated; really isolated. There were no outside telephones. But, just as important, no one dared to implicate Belasco; they were too afraid of him. Once in a while, private detectives might do a little probing. They never found a thing. Everyone was on their behavior while the investigation was taking place. There was never any evidence. Or, if ther Belasco bought it."

"And, during all this time, people kept coming to the house?" Barrett asked, incredulous.

"In droves," said Fischer. "After a while, Belasco got so tired of having only eager sinners in his house, he started to travel around the world enlisting young, creative people fo visit to his 'artistic retreat--to write or compose, paint or meditate. Once he got them here, of course--" He gestured. "_Influences_."

"The most vile of evils," Florence said, "corruption of the innocent." She looked at Fischer almost pleadingly. "Had the man no trace of decency at all?"
"None," said Fischer. "One of his favorite hobbies was destroying women. Being so tall and imposing, so magnetic, he could make them fall in love with him at will. Then, when they we the deepest throes of adoration, he'd dump them. He did it to his own sister--the same one h assaulted. She was his mistress for a year. After he rejected her, she became a drug addict the leading lady of his Little Theater Company. She died here of an overdose of heroin in 19
"Did Belasco take drugs?" asked Barrett.

"In the beginning. Later on, he started to withdraw from all involvement with his guests. He had it in mind to make a study of evil, and he decided that he couldn't do that if he was a active participant. So he began to remove himself concentrating his energies on the mass corruption of his people.
"About 1926, he started his final thrust. He increased his efforts at encouraging guests to conceive of every cruelty, perversion, and horror they could. He conducted contests to se could come up with the ghastliest ideas. He started what he termed 'Days of Defilement,' tw hour periods of frenzied, nonstop depravities. He attempted a literal enactment of de Sade's _120 Days of Sodom_. He began to import monstrosities from all over the world to mingle w guests--hunchbacks, dwarfs, hermaphrodites, grotesques of every sort."
Florence closed her eyes and bowed her head, pressing tightly clasped hands against her forehead.
"About that time," continued Fischer, "everything began to go. There were no servants to maintain the house; they were indistinguishable from the guests by then. Laundry service fa and everyone was forced to wash their own clothes--which they refused to do, of course. Th being no cooks, everyone had to prepare their own meals with whatever was at hand--which and less, because the pickups of food and liquor had dwindled so much, with no acting serv
"An influenza epidemic hit the house in 1927. Believing the reports of several of his doctor guests that the Matawaskie Valley fog was injurious to health, Belasco had the windo sealed. About that time, the main generator, no longer being maintained, started functioning erratically, and everyone was forced to use candles most of the time. The furnace went out i winter of 1928, and no one bothered to relight it. The house became as cold as a refrigerato Pneumonia killed off thirteen guests.
"None of the others cared. By then they were so far gone that all they were concerned with was their 'daily diet of debaucheries,' as Belasco put it. They were at the bottom by 1928, delving into mutilation, murder, necrophilia, cannibalism."
The three sat motionless and silent, Florence with her head inclined, Barrett and Edith staring at Fischer as he kept on speaking, quietly, virtually without expression, as though he were recounting something very ordinary.

"In June of 1929, Belasco held a version of the Roman circus in his theater," he said.
"The highlight was the eating of a virgin by a starving leopard. In July of the same year, a gr of drug-addicted doctors started to experiment on animals and humans, testing pain thresho exchanging organs, creating monstrosities.
"By then everyone but Belasco was at an animal level, rarely bathing, wearing torn, soiled clothes, eating and drinking anything they could get their hands on, killing each other for foo or water, liquor, drugs, sex, blood, even for the taste of human flesh, which many of them ha acquired by then.
"And, every day, Belasco walked among them, cold, withdrawn, unmoved. Belasco, a latterd Satan observing his rabble. Always dressed in black. A giant, terrifying figure, looking at the hell incarnate he'd created."
"How did it end?" asked Barrett.
"If it had ended, would we be here?"
"_It will end now_," Florence said.
Barrett persisted. "What happened to Belasco?"
"No one knows," said Fischer. "When relatives of some of his guests had the house broken into in November of 1929, everyone inside was dead--twenty-seven of them.
"Belasco was not among them."
8:46 P.M.
Florence came walking back across the great hall. For the past ten minutes, she'd been sitting in a corner, "preparing herself," she'd told them. Now she was ready. "As ready as on be in this kind of climate. Excessive dampness is always a handicap." She smiled. "Shall we our places?"
The four sat at the huge round table, Fischer across from Florence, Barrett several chairs away from her, Edith next to him.
"It's occurred to me," Florence said as she settled herself, "that the evil in this house is so intensely concentrated that it might be a constant lure to earthbound spirits everywhere other words, the house might be acting like a giant magnet for degraded souls. This could e its complicated texture."

What is one supposed to say to that? Barrett thought. He glanced at Edith, forced to repress a smile at her expression as she gazed at Florence. "You're certain this equipment i going to bother you?" he said.
"Not at all. As a matter of fact, it might not be amiss for you to switch on your tape recorder when Red Cloud starts to speak. He might say something valuable."
Barrett nodded noncommittally.

"It works on battery as well, doesn't it?"
Barrett nodded again.
"Good." Florence smiled. "The rest of the instruments, of course, are of no use to me."
She looked at Edith. "Your husband has explained to you, I'm sure, that I'm not a physical m Mine is solely a mental contact with those in spirit. I admit them only in the form of thought."
She glanced around. "Will you put out your candles now?"
Edith tensed as Lionel wet two fingers and crimped out the wick of his candle, Fischer blew his out. Only hers remained, a tiny, pulsing aura of light in the vastness of the hall; the fire had gone out an hour earlier. Edith was unable to make herself extinguish it. Barrett rea out and did it for her.
Blackness seemed to crash across her like a tidal wave, taking her breath. She groped for Lionel's hand, the moment reminding her of a visit she had made once to the Carlsbad Cave one of the caverns, the guide had turned out the lights, and the darkness had been so inten she had felt it pressing at her eyes.
"O Spirit of Love and Tenderness," Florence began. "We gather here tonight to discover a more perfect understanding of the laws which govern our being."
Barrett felt how cold Edith's hand was and smiled in sympathy. He knew what she was goin through; he'd been through the same thing dozens of times in the early days of his work. Tru she'd been to seances with him before, but never in a place with such an awesome size and "Give us, O Divine Teacher, avenues of communication with those beyond, particularly thos who walk this house in restless torment."
Fischer pulled in a long, erratic breath. He recalled his first sitting here in 1940--in this hall, at this very table. Objects had been hurled about; Dr. Graham had been knocked unconscious by one of them. A greenish, glowing mist had filled the air. Fischer's throat felt parched. I shouldn't be sitting in on this, he thought.
"May the work of bridging the chasm of death be, by us, so faithfully accomplished that pain may be transformed into joy, sorrow into peace. All this we ask in the name of our infini Father. Amen."
It was silent for a while. Then Edith's legs retracted as Florence began to sing in a soft, melodious voice: "'The world hath felt a quickening breath from heaven's eternal shore. souls, triumphant over death, return to earth once more.'" Something about the sound of her singing in the darkness made Edith's flesh crawl.
When the hymn had ended. Florence started to breathe in deeply, making passes in front of her face. After several minutes, she began to rub both hands over her arms and shoulders, across her breasts, and over her stomach and thighs. The strokings were almost sensual as massaged herself, lips parted, eyes half-closed, an expression of torpid abandonment on he Her breathing became slower and louder. Soon it was a hoarsely sibilant, wheezing sound. her hands lay flaccid in her lap, her arms and legs twitching slightly. Bit by bit, her head leaned back until it touched the chair. She drew in an extended, quavering breath, then was

The great hall was without a sound. Barrett stared at the place where Florence sat, though nothing was visible to him. Edith had closed her eyes, preferring an individual darkness to th of the room. Fischer sat tensely in his chair, waiting.
Florence's chair made a creaking noise. "Me Red Cloud," she said in a sonorous voice. Her face, in the darkness, was stonelike, her expression imperious. "Me Red Cloud," she repeat Barrett sighed. "Good evening."
Florence grunted, nodding. "Me come from afar. Bring greeting to you from realm of Eternal Peace. Red Cloud happy see you. Always happy see earthlings gather in circle of belief. We you always, watch and ward. Death not end of road. Death but door to world without end. Th know."
"Could you--?" Barrett started.
"Earthling souls in prison," Florence interrupted. "Bound in dungeons of flesh."

"Yes," said Barrett. "Could you--?"
"Death the pardon, the release. Leave behind what poet call 'muddy vesture of decay.' Find freedom--light--eternal joy."
"Yes, but do you think--?"
Edith bit her lower lip to keep from laughing as Florence interrupted again. "Tanner woman say put on machine, get voice on ribbon. Not know what she mean. You do that?"
Barrett grunted. "Very well." Reaching across the table, he felt around for the tape recorder, switched it on, and pushed the microphone toward Florence. "Now, if you'd--"
"Red Cloud Tanner woman guide. Guide second medium on this side. Talk with Tanner wor Bring other spirits to her."
Florence looked around abruptly, teeth bared, eyebrows pressing down, a growl of disapproval rumbling in her throat "Bad house. Place of sickness. Evil here. Bad medicine." shook her head and growled again. "_Bad_ medicine."
She twisted around the other way, grunting in surprise, as though someone had come up behind her and attracted her attention. "Man here. Ugly man. Like caveman. Long hair. Dirt face. Scratches, sores. Yellow teeth. Man bent over, twisted. No clothes. Like animal. Breat hard. In pain. Very sick. Say: 'Give me peace. Let free.'"
Edith clutched at Lionel's hand, afraid to open her eyes lest she see the figure Florence had described.
Florence shook her head, then slowly raised her arm and pointed toward the entry hall.
"Go. Leave house." She stared into the darkness, turned back with a grunt. "No good. Here long. Not listen. Not understand." She tapped her head with an index finger. "Too much sick inside."
She made a sound as though something interesting had been imparted to her. "Limits," she said. "Nations. Terms. Not know what that mean. Extremes and limits. Terminations and extremities." She shook her head. "Not know."

She jerked around as though someone had grabbed her rudely by the shoulder. "No. Go aw She grunted. "Young man here. Say must talk--must talk." She made a grumbling noise and still.
All three twitched as Florence cried out, "I don't know you people!" She looked around the table, her expression one of rabid agitation. "Why are you here? It does no good. Nothing ev changes. _Nothing!_ Get out of here, or I'll hurt you! I can't help myself! God damn you filthy sons of bitches!"
Edith pressed back hard against her chair. The voice was totally unlike Florence's--hysterical, unbalanced, threatening. "Can't you see I'm helpless! I don't want to hurt you, but _must!_" Florence's head shifted forward, eyes hooding, lips drawn back from clenching tee warn you," she told them in a guttural voice. "_Get out of this house before I kill you all_."
Edith cried out as a series of loud, staccato rappings sounded on the table. "What's that?" she asked. Her voice was lost beneath the chain of savage blows. It sounded as thou berserk man were pounding a hammer on the tabletop as hard and fast as he could. Barrett to reach for his instruments, then remembered that there was no electricity. Damn! he thoug
Abruptly, the rappings ceased. Edith looked toward Florence as the medium started making groaning noises. She could still hear the blows ringing in her ears. Her body felt numb, as th the vibrations had deadened her flesh.
She started as Lionel pulled his hand free. She heard a rustling of his clothes, then started again as a small red light appeared where he was sitting. He had taken the pencil flashlight from his pocket and was pointing it at Florence. In the dim illumination, Edith could see the medium's head lolling back against the chair, eyes shut, mouth hanging open.
She stiffened, suddenly aware of a mounting coldness underneath the table. Shuddering, sh crossed her arms. Fischer clenched his teeth together, willing himself not to jump from his c Barrett tugged at the microphone wire, the scraping of the microphone across the table making Edith shudder. Picking it up, he noted quickly, "Temperature decline. Strictly tactile. Instrument reading impossible. Physical phenomena commenced with series of severe perc pointed the flashlight at Florence again. "Miss Tanner reacting erratically. Trance state retained, but variable. Possible confusion at onset of unexpected physical phenomena. Abs cabinet a probable factor. Handing subject tube of uranium-salt solution."
Edith watched the red light flicking around the tabletop. She saw Lionel's dark hand pick up the tube. The coldness beneath the table was making her legs and ankles ache. Still, she little better, the unruffled tone of Lionel's voice having had a quieting effect on het. She watched as he pressed the tube into Florence's hands.
Florence sat up quickly, opening her eyes.

Barrett frowned in disappointment. "Subject out of trance." He switched off the tape recorder and struck a match. Florence averted her face while he relit the candles.
Fischer stood and moved around the table to a pitcher of water. As he poured some into a glass, the lip of the pitcher rattled on the glass edge. Barrett glanced at him. Fischer handed the glass to Florence, who drank its contents in a single swallow. "There." She smiled at Fis "Thank you." She set the glass down, shivering. "What happened?"
When Barrett told her, she stared at him in confusion. "I don't understand. I'm not a physical medium."
"You were just now. The embryo of one, at any rate."
Florence looked disturbed. "That doesn't make sense. Why should I suddenly become a physical medium after all these years?"
"I have no idea."
Florence gazed at him. Finally she nodded with reluctance. "Yes; this house." She looked around. At last she sighed. "God's will, not mine," she said. "If my part in the cleansing is to alter my mediumship, so be it. All that matters is the end." She didn't look at Fischer as she spoke. The weight's been lifted from his shoulders to be put on mine, she thought.
"We can work together now if you're amenable," said Barrett.
"Yes, of course."
"I'll telephone Deutsch's man and have him see to the construction of a cabinet tomorrow morning." Barrett wasn't convinced that what had happened indicated a physical mediumshi Florence extensive enough for his needs. There was certainly no immediate harm in seeing had the capability, however. If she did it would be more expeditious to work with her than be forced to wait for Deutsch's permission to bring up one of his own people.
Seeing her expression still reflect uneasy doubt, he asked, "You really want this?"
"_Yes, yes_." Her smile was disconcerted. "It's just that . . . well, it's difficult for me to understand. All these years, a mental medium." She shook her head. "Now this." She sound of wry amusement. "The Lord moves in mysterious ways indeed."
"So does this house," said Fischer.
Florence looked at him in surprise. "You think the house had something to do with me--?"
"Just watch your step," he cut her off. "The Lord may not have too much influence in Hell House."
9:49 P.M.
Science is more than a body of facts. It is, first and foremost, a method of investigation, and there is no acceptable reason why parapsychological phenomena should investigated by this method, for, as much as physics and chemistry, parapsychology is a sci the natural.
_This, then, is the intellectual barrier through which man must inevitably break. No longer can parapsychology be classified as a philosophical concept. It is a biological reality, and science cannot permanently avoid this fact. Already it has wasted too much time skirting borders of this irrefutable realm. Now it must enter, to study and learn. Morselli expressed it thus: "The time has come to break with this exaggerated, negative attitude, this constant cas of the shadow of doubt with its smile of sarcasm."_

It is a sorry condemnation of our times that those words were published sixty years ago-- because the negative attitude of which Morseili wrote still persists. Indeed--

"Lionel?"

Barrett looked up from his manuscript.

"Can I help?"

"No, I'll be finished in a few moments." He looked at her propped against a bank of pillows. She was wearing blue ski pajamas, and with her short hair and slight figure she look somehow, like a child. Barrett smiled at her. "Oh, it can wait," he said, deciding with the word He put the manuscript back in its box, looking briefly at the title page: "Borders of the Human Faculty, by Lionel Barrett, B.S., M.A., Ph.D." The sight of it gratified him. Really, everything was going wonderfully. The chance to prove his theory, ample funds for retireme the book almost completed. Perhaps he'd add an epilogue about the week here; maybe eve appending volume. Smiling, he extinguished the candle on the octagonal table, stood, and c the room. He had a momentary vision of himself as some baronial lord crossing a palace ch converse with his lady. The vision amused him, and he chuckled.

"What?" she asked.

He told her, and she smiled. "It is a fantastic house, isn't it? A museum of treasures. If it weren't haunted--" Lionel's expression made her stop.

Barrett sat down on her bed and put aside his cane. "Were you frightened before?" he asked. "You were very quiet after the sitting."

"It was a bit unnerving. Especially the coldness; I can never get used to that."

"You know what it is," he said. "The medium's system drawing heat from the air to convert it into energy."

"What about those things she said?"

Barrett shrugged. "Impossible to analyze. It might take years to trace down each remark and determine its source. We only have a week. The physical effects are where the answer He broke off as she looked across his shoulder with a gasp. Twisting around, he saw that the rocking chair had begun to move.

"What is it?" Edith whispered.

Barrett stood and limped across the room. He stood beside the chair and watched it rocking back and forth. "It's likely the breeze," he told her.

"It moves as though someone were sitting in it." Edith had unconsciously pressed back against the pillows.

"No one's sitting in it, that I guarantee you," Barrett said. "Rocking chairs are easy to set in motion. That's why the phenomenon is so frequent in haunted houses. The least appli of pressure suffices."
"But--"
"--what applies the pressure?" Barrett finished for her. "Residual energy." Edith tensed as he reached out and stopped the chair. "See?" His hand had withdrawn, and the chair rem motionless. "It's dissipated now." He pushed the chair. It rocked a few times, then was still again. "All gone," he said.
He returned to her bed and sat beside her. "I'm not very good parapsychologist material, I'm afraid," she said.
Barrett smiled and patted her hand.
"Why does this residual energy suddenly make a chair rock?" she asked.
"No specific reason I've been able to discover. Although our presence in the room undoubtedly has something to do with it. It's a kind of random mechanics which follows the l least resistance--sounds Sand movements which occurred most often in the past, establishi pattern of dynamics: breezes, door slams, rappings, footsteps, rocking chairs."
She nodded, then touched the tip of his nose. "You have to sleep," she said.
Barrett kissed her on the cheek, then stood and moved to the other bed. "Shall I leave the candle on?" he asked.
"Would you mind?"
"No. We'll use a night light while we're here. No harm in it."
They settled down, and Edith looked up at the shell design carved in the walnut ceiling panels. "Lionel?" she asked.
"Yes?"
"Are you sure there are no such things as ghosts?"
Barrett chuckled. "Nary a one."
10:21 P.M.
The hot stream of water sprayed off Florence's upper chest and rivuleted down between her breasts. She stood in the shower stall, head back, eyes shut, feeling the ribbons of water lac across her stomach and down her thighs and legs.
She was thinking about the tape recording of her sitting. Only one thing in it seemed of import: that crazed and trembling voice which had told them to get out of the house or be kil There was something there. It was amorphous, just beginning, but most compelling. _Can't y I'm helpless?_ she heard the pitiful voice in her mind. _I don't want to hurt you, but I must!_ It could be part of the answer.

She twisted off the faucets and, pushing open the shower door, stepped out onto the bathmat. Hissing at the cold, she grabbed a bath towel from its rack and rubbed herself brisl

Dry, she pulled the heavy flannel gown across her head and thrust her arms into its full-leng sleeves. She brushed her teeth, then moved across the bedroom with the candle, set it dow got into the bed closest to the bathroom door. She thrashed her legs to warm the sheets, the stretched out, pulling the bedclothes to her chin. After a while, her shivering stopped. She w two fingers and, reaching out, crimped the candle flame between them.

The house was massively silent. I wonder what Ben is doing, she thought. She clucked in distress. Poor, deluded man. She brushed aside the thought. That was for tomorrow. Now s think about her part in the project. That voice. Whose had it been? Beneath its threatening h been such despair, such harrowed anguish.

Florence turned her head. The door to the corridor had just been opened. She looked acros the darkness of the room. The door closed quietly.

Footsteps started toward her.

"Yes?" she said.

The footsteps kept approaching, muffled on the rug. Florence started reaching for the candle, then withdrew her hand, knowing it was not one of the other three. "All right," she murmured.

The footsteps halted. Florence listened carefully. There was a sound of breathing at the foot of the bed. "Who's there?" she asked.

Only the sound of breathing. Florence peered into the darkness, but it was impenetrable. She closed her eyes. Her tone was even, undismayed. "Who is it, please?"

The breathing continued.

"You wish to speak to me?"

Breathing.

"Are you the one who warned us to get out?"

The sound of breathing quickened. "Yes," she said. "It _is_ you, isn't it?"

The breathing grew more labored. It was that of a young man. She could almost visualize him standing at the foot of the bed, his posture tense, his face tormented.

"You must speak or give me some sign," she said. She waited. There was no reply. "I wait for you with God's love. Let me help you find the peace I know you hunger for."

Was that a sob? She tightened. "Yes, I hear, I understand. Tell me who you are, and I can help you."

Suddenly the room was still. Florence cupped her hands behind her ears and listened intently.

The sound of breathing had stopped.

With a sigh of disappointment, she reached to the left until her fingers found the matchbook on the chest of drawers. Striking one, she lit her candle and looked around. Ther still something in the room.

"Shall I put out the candle?" she asked.

Silence.
"Very well." She smiled. "You know where I am. Anytime you want--"
She broke off, gasping, as the bedspread leaped into the air and sailed across the foot of the bed, then stopped and settled downward flutteringly.
A figure stood beneath it.
Florence regained her breath. "Yes, I can see you now," she said. She estimated height. "How tall you are." She shivered as Fischer's words flashed across her mind. _"The Roaring he was called_. She stared at the figure. She could see its broad chest rise and fall, as thou with breath.
"No," she said abruptly. It was not Belasco. She began to rise, easing the bedclothes from her body, gazing at the figure. She let her legs slide off the mattress, stood. The head of the figure turned, as though to watch her while she drifted toward it. "You're not Belasco, are yo Such pain would not be in Belasco. And I feel your anguish. Tell me who--"
The bedspread suddenly collapsed. Florence stared at it awhile, then leaned over to pick it up.
She reared with a gasp as a hand caressed her buttocks. Angrily, she looked around the room. There was a chuckling-- low-pitched, sly. Florence drew in a shaking breath. "You've your sex to me, at any rate," she said. The chuckling deepened. Florence shook her head in "If you're all that clever, why are you a prisoner in this house?"
The chuckling stopped, and all three blankets flew from the bed as though someone were pulling them away in rage. The sheets went next, the pillows, then the mattress cover. In sev seconds, all the bedclothes lay in scattered heaps across the rug, the mattress shifted to the side.

Florence waited. When nothing more occurred, she spoke. "Feel better now?"
Smiling to herself, she started gathering up the bedclothes. Something tried to pull a blanket from her hands. She jerked it back. "That's enough! I'm not amused!" She turned to bed. "Go away, and don't come back until you're ready to behave."
As she started to remake the bed, the corridor door was opened. She didn't even look around to watch it shut.

DECEMBER 22, 1970

7:01 A.M.
I'm afraid not." Barrett drew his foot from the water. "Maybe it'll be warm enough by tomorrow morning." He dried the foot and pulled his slipper on again. Pushing to his feet, he looked at Edith with a rueful smile. "I could have let you sleep."
"That's all right."

Barrett looked around. "I wonder if the steam room works."
Edith pulled the heavy metal door and held it open for him. Barrett limped inside and turned to watch her follow. The door thumped shut. Barrett raised his candle and peered arc then leaned forward, squinting.
"Ah." Setting down his cane and candle, he eased himself into a kneeling position. He reached underneath and tried to turn the tap wheel of the steam outlet.
Edith sat across from him and leaned against the tile wall, straightening as the chill of it pierced her robe. She stared at Lionel sleepily. The flickering of their candles and his bobbing shadow on the walls and ceiling seemed to pulse against her eyes. She closed ther momentarily, then opened them again. She found herself beginning to appraise the shadow on the ceiling over Lionel. It seemed, somehow, to be expanding. How could that be? There movement of air in the room; the candle flames burned straight up now. Only Barrett's shiftir he labored with the tap wheel was reflected on the walls and ceiling.
She blinked and shook her head. She could swear the edges of the shadow were extending like a spreading inkblot. She shifted on the bench. The room was still except for Lionel's breathing. Let's go, she thought. She tried to speak the words aloud, but something kept her it.
She stared at the shadow. It hadn't gone across that corner before, had it? Let's get out of here, she thought. It's probably nothing, but let's go.
She felt her body going rigid. She was sure she'd seen a patch of lighted wall go black.
"Lionel?" The sound she made was barely audible, a feeble stirring in her throat. She swallo hard. "Lionel?"
Her voice came so abruptly that Barrett jerked around with a gasp. "What _is_ it?"
Edith blinked. The shadow on the ceiling looked normal now.
"Edith?"
She filled her lungs with air. "Let's go?"
"Nervous?"
"Yes, I'm . . . seeing things." Her smile was wan. She didn't want to tell him. Still, she had to. If it did mean something, he would want to know. "I thought I saw your shadow start grow." He stood and picked up his cane and candle holder, turning back to join her. "It's possible," he said, "but following your sleepless night in this particular house, I'm more inclined to think it was imagination."

They left the steam room and started back along the pool edge. It _was_ imagination, Edith thought. She repressed a smile Who ever heard of a ghost in a steam room?
7:33 A.M.
Florence knocked softly on the door to Fischer's room. When there was no answer, she knocked again. "Ben?" she called.

He was sitting up in bed, eyes closed, head leaning back against the wall. On the table to his right, his candle was almost guttered. Florence drifted across the room, protecting the fla of her candle with an upraised hand. Poor man, she thought, stopping by the bed. His face w drawn and pale. She wondered when he'd gotten to sleep. Benjamin Franklin Fischer: the gr American physical medium of the century. His sittings in Professor Galbreath's house at Ma College had been the most incredible display of power since the heyday of Home and Pallad shook her head with pity. Now he was emotionally crippled, a latter-day Samson, selfshorn o might.

She returned to the corridor and shut the door as quietly as possible. She looked toward the door to Belasco's room. She and Fischer had gone there yesterday afternoon, but its atm had been curiously flat, not at all what she'd expected.

She crossed the corridor and entered it again. It was the only duplex apartment in the house, its sitting room and bath located on the lower level, its bedroom on a balcony reache curved stairway. Florence moved to it and ascended the steps.

The bed had been constructed in seventeenth-century French style, its intricately carved columns as thick as telephone poles, the initials "E. B." carved in the center of the headboar Sitting down on it, Florence closed her eyes and opened herself to impressions, wanting to v that it had not been Belasco in her room the night before. She released her mind as much a possible without going into a trance.

A tumble of images began to cross her consciousness. The room at night, lamps burning. Someone lying on the bed. A figure chuckling. Lucid, staring eyes. A calendar for 1921. A m black. A smell of pungent incense in her nostrils. A man and woman on the bed. A painting. cursing voice. A wine bottle hurled against the wall. A sobbing woman flung across the balco rail. Blood oozing on the teakwood floor. A photograph. A crib. New York. A calendar for 190 pregnant woman.

The birth of a child; a boy.

Florence opened her eyes. "Yes." She nodded. "_Yes_."

She went down the stairs and left the room. A minute later, she was entering the dining hall, where Barrett and his wife were breakfasting.

"Ah, good, you're up," Barrett said. "Breakfast just arrived."

Florence sat at the table and served herself a small portion of scrambled eggs, a piece of toast; she wouldn't be sitting until later in the day, since they had to wait for a cabinet to be built. She exchanged a few remarks with Mrs. Barrett, answered Barrett's questions by sayin she felt it would be better to let Fischer sleep than wake him up, then, finally, said, "I think I have a partial answer to the haunting of the house."

"Oh?" Barrett looked at her with interest that was clearly more polite than genuine.

"That voice warning us. That pounding on the table. The personality that approached me in my room last night. A young man."

"Who?" asked Barrett.
"Belasco's son."
They looked at her in silence.
"You recall that Mr. Fischer mentioned him."
"But didn't he say that no one was sure whether Belasco had a son or not?" Barrett said.
Florence nodded. "But he did. He's here now, suffering, tormented. He must have gone into spirit at an early age-- just past twenty, I feel. He's very young and very frightened-- and, because he's frightened, very angry, very hostile. I believe if we can convince him to go on, portion of the haunting force will be eliminated."
Barrett nodded. Don't believe a word of it, he thought. "That's very interesting."
Florence thought, I know he doesn't believe me, but it's better that I tell him what I think.
She was about to change the subject when there was a loud knocking on the front door.

Edith, who was drinking coffee, spilled some as her hand jerked. Barrett smiled at her. "Our generator, I imagine, And a carpenter, I hope."
Standing, he picked up his candle holder and cane and started toward the great hall. He stopped to look back at Edith. "Well, I guess it's safe to leave you long enough to answer the door," he said after a few moments.
He crossed the great hall and moved into the entry hall. Opening the front door, he saw Deutsch's representative standing on the porch, coat collar raised, an umbrella in his hand. Barrett's surprise, he saw that it was raining.
"I've got your generator and your carpenter," the man said.
Barrett nodded. "What about the cat?"
"That too."
Barrett smiled with satisfaction. Now he could move.
1:17 P.M.
The lights went on, and, in unison, all four uttered sounds of pleasure. "I'll be damned," said Fischer. They exchanged spontaneous smiles. "I never thought electric lights could look good," Edith said.
Bathed with light, the great hall was another place entirely. Now its size seemed regal rather than ominous. No longer black with looming shadows, it was a massive chamber in so museum, and not a haunted cavern. Edith looked at Fischer. He was obviously pleased, his different, apprehension cleansed from his eyes. She looked at Florence, who was sitting with cat on her lap. The lights on, she thought. That cat resting peacefully. She smiled. It didn't seem like a haunted house at all now.
She gasped as the lights flickered, went out, then on again. Immediately, they began to dim. "Oh, no," she murmured.

"Easy," Barrett said. "They'll get it."
A minute later, the lights were bright and steady. When another minute passed without a change, Barrett smiled. "There, you see?"
Edith nodded. Her relief had ended, though. From relaxed assurance, she had fallen back to a nagging dread that, any second, they might once more be in darkness.
Florence looked at Fischer, caught his eye, and smiled at him. He did not return it.
Idiots, he thought. Some bulbs go on, and they all think the danger's over.
1:58 P.M.
The cabinet had been constructed in the northeast corner of the great hall by the installation of an eight-foot-long round wooden bar between the walls. A pair of heavy green draperies was hanging from the bar on rings, forming a triangular enclosure seven feet high. Inside the enclosure was a straight-backed wooden armchair.
Barrett edged aside the draperies on each side until there was an opening in the middle large enough to accommodate a small wooden table he had asked Fischer to carry in. Push table in front of the opening, he placed on top of it a tambourine, a small guitar, a tea bell, and a length of rope. He looked at the cabinet appraisingly for several moments, then turned the others.
They watched as he rummaged through the contents of the wooden chest from which he'd gotten the rope, tea bell, guitar, and tambourine. He lifted out a pair of black tights and a black long-sleeved smock and held them out to Florence. "I believe they'll fit," he said.
Florence stared at him.
"You don't object, do you?"
"Well--"
"You know it's standard procedure."
"Yes, but"--Florence hesitated, then went on--"as a precaution against fraud."
"Primarily."
Florence's smile was awkward. "Surely you don't think I'm capable of perpetrating fraud with a form of mediumship I didn't even know I had before last night."

"I'm not implying that, Miss Tanner. It's simply that I must maintain a standard. If I don't, the results of the sitting are scientifically unacceptable."
Finally she sighed. "Very well." She took the tights and smock, looked around, then went inside the cabinet to change, pulling the draperies together. Barrett turned to Edith. "Would y examine her, my dear?" he asked. Bending over the box, he lifted out a spool of black threa a needle pushed through the thread, and handed it to her.
Edith moved toward the cabinet, a discomfited look on her face. She'd always hated doing this, although she'd never indicated it to Lionel. Stopping by the cabinet, she cleared her throat. "May I come in?"

There was a momentary silence before Florence answered. "Yes." Edith pushed between th drapery edges, stepping into the cabinet.

Florence had removed her skirt and sweater and was leaning over, stepping from her halfsli Straightening, she draped the slip across the chair back. As she reached back to unhook he white brassiere, Edith stepped aside. "I'm sorry," she murmured; "I know it's--"

"Don't be embarrassed," Florence said. "Your husband is quite right. It's standard procedure."

Edith nodded, keeping her eyes on Florence's face as the medium hung her brassiere acros the chair back. Her gaze dropped as Florence bent forward to remove her underpants. She startled by the fullness of the medium's breasts, and looked up quickly. Florence stood erect

"All right," she said. Edith saw a stippling of gooseflesh on the medium's arms.

"We'll make it quick so you can dress," she said. "Your mouth?"

Florence opened her mouth, and Edith looked inside. She felt ridiculous. "Well, unless you have a hollow tooth or something--"

Florence closed her mouth and smiled. "It's just a technicality. Your husband knows I'm not concealing anything."

Edith nodded. "Your hair?"

Florence reached up both hands to unpin her hair. The movement made her breasts hitch, s their hardened nipples brushed against Edith's sweater. Edith twitched back, watching the tr of thick red hair as they rippled downward, spilling over Florence's creamy shoulders. She'd examined a woman so beautiful before.

"All right," Florence said.

Edith started fingering through the medium's hair. It was warm and silky to the touch. The fragrance of Florence's perfume drifted over her. Balenciaga, she thought. She drew in a lab breath. She could feel the pressing weight of Florence's breasts against her own. She wante step back but couldn't do it. She looked into the medium's green eyes, looked down quickly. Turning Florence's head, she looked into her ears. I will not look up her nose, she thought. S drew her hands back awkwardly. "Armpits?" she said.

Florence raised her arms and caused her breasts to jut again. Edith edged away from her and glanced down at her shaved armpits. She nodded once, and Florence lowered her arms her heartbeat thudding. The inside of the cabinet seemed very close. She looked at Florenc unhappily. It seemed as if the two of them were stopped in time. Then she noted Florence g down, and lowered her gaze. She started at the sight of Florence's hands cupped beneath h breasts, holding them up. This is ridiculous, she thought. She nodded once, and Florence to hands away. That's enough, Edith decided. I'll just say I did the rest. Obviously she has no intention of committing fraud.

She watched as the medium sat in the chair, hissing at its coldness. She looked up at Edith. I'll just say I did the rest, Edith thought.

Leaning back, Florence spread her legs apart.
Edith stared down at the medium's body: the heavy, ovate loll of her breasts, the swell of her stomach, the milk-white fullness of her thighs, the parted tuft of glossy copper hair betwe her legs. She couldn't take her eyes away. She felt a drawing hotness in her stomach.
She jerked her head around so quickly, looking up, that it sent a shooting pain through her neck.
"What _is_ it?" Florence asked.
Edith swallowed, staring up across the wooden rod. There was only ceiling visible. She looked at Florence. "_What?_" the medium asked.
Edith shook her head. "I think we can assume--" She broke off, gesturing with a trembling hand, then turned and pushed from the cabinet.
She nodded to Lionel and crossed to the fireplace. She was sure she looked completely disconcerted, but hoped he wouldn't ask her why.

She stared into the fire. There was something in her hand. She looked at it; the spool of thread. Now she'd have to bring it back. She closed her eyes. Her neck still hurt from the wrenching she'd given it. Had she really seen a movement? There'd been nothing there. Stil could have sworn that someone had been looking down into the cabinet.
At her.
2:19 P.M.
"Too tight?" asked Barrett.
"No, it's fine," Florence answered quietly.
Barrett finished tying the gloves at her wrists. As he did, Florence looked across his shoulder at Edith, who was sitting by the equipment table, the cat resting on her lap.
"Put your palms on the chair plates," Barrett instructed. The gloves he'd fastened to Florence had metal plates attached to their palms. As Florence rested them on the plates na the chair arms, a pair of tiny bulbs on the equipment table lighted.
"So long as your hands remain in place, the bulbs will burn," Barrett told her. "Break contact--" He lifted her hands, and the bulbs went out.
Florence watched as Barrett unrolled the wire for the shoe plates. It disturbed her that Edith had looked up the way she had, when she'd been conscious of nothing.
"Will the foot plates activate the same two bulbs?" she asked.
"Two others."
"Isn't that a lot of light?"
"The combined wattage of all four bulbs is less than ten," he answered as he connected the shoe plates.
"I'd assumed we'd be in darkness."
"I can't accept darkness as a test condition." Barrett glanced up. "Would you try the foot plates?"

Florence set the plates attached to the soles of her shoes on the pair of plates Barrett had placed on the floor. On the equipment table, two more small bulbs went on. Barrett push wincing. "Don't be concerned," he said. "There'll be just enough illumination to observe by."
Florence nodded. Barrett's words failed to reassure her, though. Why do I feel so upset? she thought.
Fischer sat looking at the medium, her luxuriant figure outlined by the skin-tight costume. The sight did not arouse him. Those damned black outfits, he was thinking. How m them had he worn? The memory of his early teen years was of endless sittings like this, his and himself riding from city to city on buses, from one test to another.
He lit another cigarette and watched as Barrett connected wire leads to Florence's arms and thighs, roped her to the chair, then picked up a folded piece of mosquito netting to which tiny bells had been sewn. Shaking it open, Barrett fastened it to the wooden rod so that the netting hung down in the space uncovered by the draperies. He pulled the small table sever inches toward himself. Now the netting filled the space between the table and Florence, wei its bottom holding it taut.
Barrett arranged the infrared lights so they'd shine across the surface of the table in front of the cabinet. Switching on the invisible lights, he moved his hand across the cabinet table. There was a clicking noise as the synchronized shutters of the two cameras were acti Satisfied, Barrett checked the dynamometer and the globe of the telekinetoscope. He set ou modeling clay and briefly stirred the melted paraffin wax in its pot on the small electric stove "We're ready now," he said.
As if it understood his words, the cat jumped suddenly from Edith's lap and loped across the room, heading for the entry hall. "Isn't that encouraging?" she said.
"Doesn't mean a thing," Barrett told her. Adjusting the red and yellow lights to minimum illumination, he moved to the wall switch and depressed it. The great hall darkened. Barrett t his place at the table, switching on the tape recorder. "December 22, 1970," he said into the microphone. "Sitters: Doctor and Mrs. Lionel Barrett, Mr. Benjamin Franklin Fischer. Medium Florence Tanner." Quickly he recited the details of arrangements and precautions, then sat b "Proceed," he said.
The three sat quietly as Florence spoke an invocation and sang a hymn. After she was finished, she began to take in deep breaths. Soon, her hands and legs began to twitch as th

she were being subjected to a series of galvanic shocks. Her head began to loll from side to her face becoming flushed. Low-pitched groans quavered in her throat. "No," she muttered. now." Gradually her noises faded, until, following a wheezing inhalation, she relapsed into silence.
"Two-thirty-eight p.m.; Miss Tanner in apparent trance," Barrett said into the microphone.

"Pulse rate: eighty-five. Respiration: fifteen. Four electric contacts maintained." He checked self-recording thermometer. "No change in temperature. Steady at seventy-three-point-two d Dynamometer reading: eighteen hundred and seventy."
Twenty seconds later, he spoke again. "Dynamometer reading decreased to eighteen hundr and twenty-three. Temperature lowering; now at sixty-six-point-six degrees. Pulse rate: nine point-five and rising."
Edith drew in her legs, pressing them together as she felt coldness underneath the table.
Fischer sat immobile. Even sheltered, he could feel the power gathering around him.
Barrett checked the thermometer again. "Temperature drop now twelve-point-three degrees Dynamometer tension reduced to seventeen hundred and seventy-nine. Pressurometer neg Electric contacts still maintained. Rate of breath increasing. Fifty . . . fifty-seven . . .
sixty; rising steadily."
Edith stared at Florence. In the feeble light, all she could make out was the medium's face and hands. She seemed to be lying back against the chair, eyes shut. Edith swallowed was a cold knot in her stomach, which even Lionel's assured tones could not dispel.
She started as the camera shutters clicked. "Infrared rays broken, cameras activated," Barrett said. He looked at the dark blue instrument and tightened with excitement. "Evidence EMR commencing."
Fischer looked at him. What was EMR? Clearly it was something vital to Barrett.
"Medium's respiration now two hundred and ten," Barrett was saying. "Dynamometer fourtee hundred and sixty. Temperature--"
He broke off at the sound of Edith's gasp. "Ozone present in the air," he said.
Remarkable, he thought.
A minute passed, then two, the smell and coldness steadily increasing. Abruptly Edith closed her eyes. She waited, opened them again, and stared at Florence's hands. It had not her imagination.
Threads of pale white, viscous matter were oozing from the medium's fingertips.
"Teleplasm forming," Barrett said. "Separate filaments uniting into single filmy strand.
Will attempt matter penetration." He waited until the teleplasm strand was longer, then said t Florence, "Lift the bell." He paused before repeating the instruction.
The viscous tentacle began to rear up slowly like a serpent. Edith drew back in her chair, staring at it as it glided forward through the air, penetrated the net, and headed for the table.
"Teleplasmic stalk through net and moving toward the table." Barrett said. "Dynamometer reading: thirteen hundred and forty, dropping steadily. Electric contacts still maintained."
His voice became a blur of meaningless sounds to Fischer as he watched the moist, glistening tentacle inch its way across the table like a giant worm. A photograph flared briefly in his mind: him, fourteen, deep in trance, a similar extrusion from his mouth. He shivered as filmy member twined itself around the handle of the tea bell. The tentacle began to tighten slowly. Suddenly it raised the bell, and Fischer's legs twitched spastically as the bell was shaken.

"Thank you. Put it down, please," Barrett said. Edith looked at him, astounded by his casual tone. Her gaze returned to the table as the gray extremity put down the bell, uncurlin itself from the handle.
"Will try for specimen retrieval," Barrett said. Standing, he set a porcelain bowl on the cabinet table; at his approach, the tentacle jerked back as though in startled retreat. "Leave section in the bowl, please," Barrett said, returning to his chair.
The gray appendage started swaying back and forth like the stalk of some undersea plant undulating in the current. "Leave a section in the bowl, please," Barrett repeated. He looked the EMR recorder. The needle had passed the 300 mark. He felt a glow of satisfaction. Turn to the cabinet, he repeated his instruction once more.
He was forced to speak the words seven times more before the glistening filament began to move. Slowly it started toward the bowl. Edith stared at it, repelled yet fascinated. It looked like an eyeless, gray-scaled serpent. As it reached the bowl, it slithered up across the rim. S flinched as it recoiled. Again it advanced on the bowl, with perceptible caution in its moveme Once again it snapped back soundlessly.
On the fifth advance, the tentacle remained in place, coiling with a languid, spiraling movement, until it filled the bowl. Thirty seconds later it withdrew. Edith started as it disappeared from sight.

Barrett rose and transferred the bowl to the equipment table. Edith glanced at the transparent liquid inside it. "Specimen retained in bowl," Barrett said, looking at it. "No odor. Colorless and slightly turbid."
"Lionel." Edith's urgent whisper made him look up.
Across the bottom half of Florence's face, a cloudy mass was starting to form.
"Teleplasmic matter being generated across lower part of medium's face," Barrett said. "Issuance from mouth and nostrils."
As he continued speaking into the microphone, describing the materialization and noting the flux of instrument readings, Edith stared at the formation in front of Florence's face. Now resembled a torn, grimy handkerchief, the lower part of which hung down in shreds. The upp was starting to rise. It spread with a swaying movement, first obscuring Florence's nose, the eyes, finally her brow, so that her face was cloaked entirely, the formation like a ragged veil through which her pale features could be seen.
"Teleplasmic veil beginning to condense," said Barrett. This really was remarkable, he thought. For a mental medium to produce such striking teleplasm at her first physical sitting almost unprecedented. He watched with mounting interest.
The texture of the mistlike veil looked curdled now; in less than half a minute, Florence's face had vanished behind it. Soon, her head, then upper shoulders, were concea beneath folds of what appeared to be a soggy, grayish shroud. The bottom of this dingy fabr descending toward her lap, lengthening into a solid strip several inches wide. As it descende began to take on coloration.

"Separate filament extending downward," Barrett said. "Reddish hue impinging on the grayness. Stretching tissue seems to be inflamed. Getting brighter . . . brighter. The color of open flesh now."
Fischer felt numb. His chair seemed to be tilting backward as he watched the altering vesture on Florence's head and body. Sudden panic struck him. He was going under! He du into his palms until pain overshadowed all else.
The shroud on Florence was becoming more albescent every moment, starting to resemble linen dipped in white paint, transparent in some places, solid in others. Veillike strips and patches were beginning to appear at other spots on her body--her right arm and leg, her righ breast, the center of her lap. It looked as though a solid bedsheet had been dipped into som iridescent liquid, then torn apart, the fragments thrown across her indiscriminately, the large piece settling on her head and shoulders.
Edith pressed back hard against her chair, unaware that she was doing so. She had witnessed physical phenomena before, but never anything like this. Her face was masklike a watched the teleplasmic sections start to coalesce. Bit by bit, they started to assume a shap The filament, now pale again, looked vaguely like an arm and wrist.
"Something taking form," said Barrett.
Twenty-seven seconds later, a white figure stood before the cabinet, garbed in a shapeless robe, sexless, incomplete, its hands like rudimentary claws. There was a mouth, and two da for nostrils, and it had two eyes which seemed to gaze at them. Edith drew in a rasping brea "Easy," Barrett said. "Teleplasmic figure formed. Imperfectly--"
He broke off as the figure chuckled.
Edith made a stricken noise. "_Easy_," Barrett told her.
The figure laughed: a rolling laugh, deep and resonant, which seemed to gorge the air. Edith felt her scalp begin to crawl. _The figure was turning to look at her_. It seemed to be coming closer. A frightened whimper filled her throat. "_Hold still_," Barrett whispered. Suddenly the figure reached for her, and Edith screamed, throwing her arms across her face. With a noise that sounded like the snapping of a giant rubber band, the figure vanished Florence cried out hoarsely, making Edith jump again. Fischer struggled to his feet. "Hold it!" Barrett ordered.
Fischer stood beside the table rigidly as Barrett drew up the netting and shone the red beam of his pencil flashlight into Florence's face. Immediately he turned it off and checked h instruments. "Miss Tanner coming out of trance," he said. "Premature retraction, causing bri systemic shock." He looked at Fischer.

"Help her now," he said.

4:23 P.M.

Edith woke with a start. She checked her watch and saw that she'd been sleeping more than an hour.

Lionel was sitting at the octagonal table, looking into his microscope and making notes.

Edith dropped her feet across the mattress edge and worked them into her shoes. Standing, walked across the rug. Barrett looked up, smiling. "Feeling better?"

She nodded. "I apologize for what I did before."

"No problem."

Edith made a pained face. "I caused a 'premature retraction,' didn't I?"

"Don't worry, she'll get over it; I'm sure it's not the worst thing that's ever happened to her during a sitting." Barrett looked at her a moment, then asked, "What was it that upset before the sitting? The examination?"

Edith was aware of restraining her reply. "It was a little awkward, yes."

"You've done it before."

"I know." She felt herself tensing. "I just felt awkward this time."

"You should have told me. I could have done it."

"I'm glad you didn't." Edith managed a smile. "Compared to her, I look like a boy."

Barrett made a scoffing noise. "As if that would matter."

"Anyway, I'm sorry I ruined the sitting." Edith was conscious of changing the subject.

"You didn't ruin anything. I couldn't be more satisfied."

"What are you doing?"

Barrett gestured toward the microscope. "Take a look."

Edith peered into the eyepiece. On the slide, she saw groups of shapeless forms and groups of oval and polygonal bodies. "What am I looking at?" she asked.

"A specimen of that teleplasm prepared in water. What you see are conglomerates of etiolated, lamellar, cohesive bodies, as well as single laminae of varied forms resembling epithelium without nuclei."

Edith looked up chidingly. "Now, do you really think I understood what you just said?"

Barrett smiled. "Just showing off. What I'm trying to say is that the specimen consists of cell detritus, epithelium cells, veils, lamellae, filmy aggregates, isolated fat grains, mucus, and so on."

"Which means--?"

"Which means that what the Spiritualists refer to as ectoplasm is derived almost entirely from the medium's body, the remainder being admixtures from the air and the medium's cos fibrous vegetable remains, bacterial spores, starch grains, food and dust particles, et cetera The bulk of it, however, is organic, living matter. Think of it, my dear. _An organic externalization of thought_. Mind reduced to matter, subject to scientific observation, measurement, and analysis." He shook his head in wonderment. "The concept of ghosts see dreadfully prosaic compared to that."

"You mean Miss Tanner made that figure from her own body."
"Essentially."
"_Why?_"
"To prove a point. That figure was undoubtedly supposed to be Belasco's son--a son who, I'm convinced, never existed."
4:46 P.M.
The cat lay warmly indolent beside her. Its body throbbed with purrs as Florence stroked its neck.
When she'd come upstairs, she'd found it cowering outside her door and, despite her wretchedness, had picked it up and carried it inside. She'd held it in her lap until its trembling had stopped, then had put it on the bed and taken a hot shower. Now she was lying in her ro bedspread pulled across her.
"Poor puss," she murmured. "What a place to bring you." She ran the edge of a finger along the front of its neck, and the cat raised its head with a languid movement, eyes still closed.

Barrett had said that he needed it as an additional verification of "presence" in the house. It seemed a harsh measure, though, merely to acquire a slight scientific validation. Maybe she get it taken away by the couple who brought their meals. She'd ask Barrett to let her know th moment the cat had served its purpose.
Florence closed her eyes again. She wished she could sleep, but things kept nagging at her mind. Mrs. Barrett's strained embarrassment--the way she'd jerked around, as though some looking at her; Barrett's overzealous safeguards against fraud; the onset of physical medium in herself; her inability to go inside the chapel; her concern for Fischer; her feeling of dissatisfaction with herself; her fear that she was giving more importance to Belasco's son th he warranted. After all--
She jolted, gasping, as the cat leaped from the bed. Sitting up, she saw it rushing to the door and crouching there, back arched, fur on end, its pupils expanded so completely that its looked black. Hastily she stood and crossed to it. The instant she opened the door, it darted into the corridor and disappeared.
Something flapped behind her, and she whirled, to see the spread and blankets landing on the rug.
There was something underneath the sheet.
Florence stared at it. It was the figure of a man. She started toward the bed, tightening as she saw that the figure was nude. She could make out every body contour, from the swel broadness of the chest to the bulge of genitals. She felt a stir of sensual awareness in her b

No, she told herself; that's what he wants. "If you're here only to impress me with your cleverness again, I'm not interested," she said.
The figure made no sound. It lay immobile underneath the sheet, chest expanding and contracting in a perfect simulation of breath. Florence peered at its face. "Are you Emeric Belasco's son?" she asked. She edged along the side of the bed. "If you are, you said that n changes. Yet, with love, all things are possible. This is true of life, and true of life beyond life." She leaned across him, trying to make out his features. "Tell me who you are," she said
"Boo!" the figure shouted. Florence jumped back with a cry. Instantly the sheet collapsed, and there was nothing on the bed. The air began to ring with mocking laughter. Florence tigl with resentment. "Very funny," she said. The laughter rose in pitch, taking on a frenzied qua Florence clenched her hands. "If practical jokes are all you're interested in, stay away from r she ordered.
For almost twenty seconds, it was deathly still inside the room. Florence felt her stomach muscles slowly tightening. Suddenly the Chinese lamp was pitched to the floor, shattering its bulb; only the light from the bathroom kept the room from total darkness. Florence twitched a footsteps thudded across the rug. The door to the corridor was flung open so hard that it cra against the wall.
She waited for a while before she crossed the room to shut the door. Switching on the overhead light, she moved to the fallen lamp and picked it up. Such anger, she thought. Yet wasn't only anger; that was clear.
It was a plea as well.
6:21 P.M.
Florence walked into the dining hall. "Good evening," she said.
Fischer's smile was cursory. Florence sat down. "Have you seen this couple yet?" she asked, gesturing toward the table, which was set for supper.
"No."
She smiled. "Funny if there wasn't any couple."
Fischer showed no sign of amusement. Florence glanced toward the great hall. "I wonder where the Barretts are," she said. She looked back at him. "Well, what have you been doing "Scouting." Fischer lifted the cover from one of the serving dishes and eyed the heap of lamb chops. He replaced the cover.
"You should eat," she said.
He pushed the dish toward her. "Maybe we should wait," she said.
"Go ahead."
Florence waited a few more seconds. Then she said, "I'll have some salad." She served her plate and looked at him. He shook his head. "A little?" Fischer shook his head again.

Florence ate some salad before she spoke again. "Were you in contact with Belasco's son when you were here before?"

"All I was in contact with was a live wire."
The sound of footsteps made them look around. "Good evening," Florence said.
"Good evening." Barrett smiled politely; Edith nodded. "Are you feeling better?" Barrett asked.
Florence nodded. "Yes, I'm fine."
"Good," Barrett and his wife sat down, served themselves, and started eating.
"We were talking about Belasco's son," Florence said.
"Ah, yes; Belasco's son."
Something in Barrett's tone made Florence bristle. Suddenly the thought of having been subjected by him to the indignity of a physical examination galled her. The costume, those ridiculous precautions: ropes and nets and infrared lamps, hand and foot plates turning light cameras. She tried to repress a mounting anger but couldn't. How dare Barrett treat her this Her position in this project was just as vital as his.
"Will it never end?" she said.
The others looked at her. "Were you addressing me?" inquired Barrett.
"I was." Again she tried to quell her anger, but again the vision of the physical examination flashed across her mind, the costume, the absurd safeguards against fraud.
"Will what never end?" asked Barrett.
"This attitude of doubt. Distrust."
"Distrust?"
"Why should mediums be expected to produce phenomena only under conditions which scie dictates?" she demanded. "We're not machines. We're human beings. These rigid, unyieldin by science have done more harm than good to parapsychology."
"Miss Tanner--" Barrett looked confused. "What brought this on? Have I--"
"I'm not a medium for the fun of it, you know." Florence cut him off. The more she spoke, the more infuriated she became. "It's often painful, often unrewarding."
"Don't you think--?"
"It just so happens I believe that mediumship is God's manifestation in man." She couldn't stop herself. "'When I speak with thee,'" she quoted angrily. "'I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say to them: Thus saith the Lord.'"
"Miss Tanner--"
"There is nothing in the Bible--not a single recorded phenomenon--which does not occur today, whether it be sights or sounds, shaking of the house, or coming through closed doors rushing winds, levitations, automatic writing, or the speaking in tongues."
There was a heavy silence. Florence glared at Barrett, conscious of Fischer and Edith staring at her. Somewhere, deep inside her mind, she heard a warning cry, but fury stilled it. watched Barrett pour himself some coffee, watched him pick up his cup. He looked at her. "I Tanner," he said, "I don't know what's bothering you, but--"

He broke off as the cup exploded in his hand. Edith jerked back, gasping. Barrett, frozen, gaped at the shard of handle still in his fingers. Blood was starting to drip from the cut in his thumb. Florence felt a pounding at her temples. Fischer looked around in startlement. "What God's name--?" Barrett started.
He was drowned out as the glass beside his plate burst apart, its fragments scattering across the table. Edith jerked her hands back as her plate leaped from the table, flipping ove rapidly and dumping food across the floor before it landed, shattering. She recoiled as the to part of her glass broke off with a cracking noise and jumped across the table toward her hus Barrett, pulling out a handkerchief, twisted to the side. The glass top thudded off his arm and tumbled to the floor. Fischer's glass exploded, and he lurched back, flinging an arm in front o his face.
Florence's plate somersaulted, scattering salad over the table. She reached out to grab it, then jolted back as the plate went flying across the table. Barrett jerked his head aside. Th plate scaled past his ear and landed on its edge, rolling rapidly across the floor, to break against the wall. Edith cried out as a heavy serving dish began to slide across the table towa him. Barrett jumped up, toppling his chair. He almost fell, then leaned against the table. The serving dish slid off the table edge and crashed to the floor. Mashed potatoes splattered ove shoes and trouser cuffs.
Fischer was on his feet now. He tried to turn from the table, but was slammed against it as his chair lurched hard against his legs. He saw his cup go leaping from the table, gouting coffee over Barrett's shirt front as it struck him in the middle of the chest. Edith's scream choked off as Fischer's plate was catapulted from the tabletop, flying closely over her head. chair slid back from Fischer, and he crumpled to his knees, his face a mask of shock.

Barrett tried to twist the handkerchief around his bleeding thumb. The silver pot fell over and began to spin across the table at him, spouting coffee. Barrett lurched aside to avo it, slipped on the potatoes, flailed for balance, then went crashing onto his right side. The coffeepot fell off the table, bouncing off his left calf. He cried out at the burning impact.
Edith tried to stand to help him, but her chair rocked backward, throwing her off balance. A k and spoon went flying past her cheek.
Florence shrank into her chair as another serving dish began to skid across the table, headed for Barrett. Barrett scrabbled aside with a gasp. The serving dish crashed down bes the edge of its cover striking his shin. Edith struggled to her feet. "Under the table!" Fischer cried. Florence slid from the chair, falling to her knees. Fischer flung himself beneath the table. Overhead, the hanging lamp began to pendulum, the length of its swings increasing ra
They were barely in the shelter of the table when the objects on the monastery table against the east wall came to life. A heavy silver chafing dish arced across the room and hit their table with a deafening impact. Edith cried out. Barrett started reaching for her automatically, then went back to wrapping his thumb. A silver bowl came hurtling at them, st table leg, and spun around in a blur of movement. Florence glanced at Fischer. He was on h knees, eyes staring, face a frozen mask of dread. She wanted to help him but felt too dazed was a churning coldness in her stomach.

All of them looked up in shock as the dining table started rocking back and forth. The silver creamer landed nearby, contents splattering across the floor like a gout of ivory paint. The silver sugar bowl fell beside it as the table rocked with mounting violence, legs crashing down like pounding horse hooves. The table shifted suddenly, and Barrett had to jerk his ha to keep from getting it crushed. The chairs began to overturn, banging one by one against th floor, the noise like rifle shots.

Suddenly the table surged away from them, sliding fast across the polished floor. It smashed against the fire screen and bent it out of shape. Above them, all the sanctuary lam swinging violently. One of them tore loose and hurtled sideways, creating a shower of spark collided violently with the stone mantel, then crashed to the tabletop. A silver candelabrum fl across the room and landed on the floor by Barrett, thudding against his side. He fell with a of pain. Florence cried out. "_No!_"

All movement ceased abruptly, except for the decreasing arcs of the remaining sanctuary lamps. Edith bent over Barrett anxiously. "Lionel?" She touched his shoulder. He managed t "Ben, you've got to leave this house."

Fischer turned to Florence, startled by her words.

"You aren't up to it," she told him.

"_What the hell are you talking about?_"

Florence turned to Barrett for support. "Doctor--" she began, then stopped, seeing how he looked at her as Edith helped him to his feet. "Are you all right?" she asked.

He didn't answer, leaning against the table with a groan. Edith looked at him in fright. "Lionel?"

"I'll be all right." He tightened the handkerchief around his thumb. The cut was deep; it stung. There were islands of pain all over his body--his arm, his chest, his shin, his ankle, mostly his side. His leg ached horhbly.

Florence stared at him. Why had he looked at her that way? Suddenly she thought she knew

"I'm sorry I spoke so angrily," he said. "But please support me in this. I think it's important that Ben--that Mr. Fischer leave the house."

Barrett clenched his teeth against the pain. "Trying to get us both out now?" he muttered.

Florence looked at him in surprise. "Help me to our room, please?" Barrett asked his wife. E nodded faintly, handed him his cane, and took his arm.

Florence didn't understand. "What do you mean, Doctor Barrett?"

He threw a glance around the wreckage of the hall. "I should think that was obvious," he said.

Stunned into silence, Florence watched the Barretts leave. After they were gone, she looked at Fischer. "What is he saying?" she asked. "That _I_--?"
Fischer turned away from her.
"Ben, it isn't true!"
He lurched away. Still moving, he glanced back at her. "You're the one who'd better leave," he said. "You're the one who's being used, not me."

6:48 P.M.
Barrett sat down gingerly. "My bag," he murmured. Edith let go of his arm and hurried to the Spanish table, lifting off the small black bag in which he kept his codeine and first-aid kit Returning quickly to the bed, she set the bag beside him. Lionel was removing the handkerc from his thumb with slow, careful movements, his teeth clenched at the pain.
The sight of the deep, blood-oozing cut made Edith hiss. "It's all right," Barrett told her. Reaching into the bag, he took out the first-aid kit and opened it. Removing a packet of sulfa powder, he tore it open. "Would you get me a glass of water, please?"
Edith turned to the bathroom. Barrett drew a box of gauze from the first-aid kit and started to break the seal on its cover. When Edith returned, he handed her the box. "Would bandage it?" he asked. She nodded, giving him the glass of water. Taking his container of p from the black bag, he got one out and washed it down.
Edith winced as she started bandaging. "This needs stitches."
"I don't think so." Barrett gritted his teeth, eyes narrowing, as she wrapped the gauze around the thumb. "Make it tight."
When the thumb was bandaged and taped, he eased up his left trouser leg. There was a da burn on the calf. Edith looked at it in dismay. "You have to see a doctor."
"Put some Butesin picrate on it."
She looked at him for several moments indecisively. Then, kneeling beside him, she spread the yellow cream across the burn. Barrett hissed and closed his eyes. "It's all right," he muttered, knowing she was looking at him.
Edith wrapped some gauze around his leg, then helped him lie down. Barrett groaned and shifted onto his left side. "I am one gigantic mass of bruises," he said, trying to make it soun like a joke.
"Lionel, let's go home."
Barrett took another sip of water and handed her the glass. He slumped back on the pillows she had propped behind him. "I'm all right," he said.
"What if it happens again?"
He shook his head. "It won't." He looked at her a moment. "You could go, though."
"_Leave_ you here?"

Barrett raised his right hand as though making a pledge. "Believe me, it won't happen again."
"Then why should I leave?"
"I just don't want you hurt."
"You're the one who's hurt."
Barrett chuckled. "That I am. It had to be that way, of course. I'm the one who angered her."
"You're saying"--Edith hesitated--"she did all that?"
"Making use of the power in the room," he said. "Converting it to poltergeist-type phenomena directed at me."
Edith thought about the violence of what had happened. The gigantic table rocking back and forth, then hurled across the floor like an express train. The whipping movement of those ma hanging lamps. "My God," she said.
"I made a mistake," Barrett told her. "I accepted her genial attitude toward me at face value. You can never do that with a medium. You never know what's underneath. It might be hostility, and if it is"--he blew out breath--"by making unconscious use of their power, they ca inflict tremendous damage. Especially when that power can be amplified a hundredfold by th of energy that fills this house." His smile was grim. "I'll not make that mistake again."
"Is it so important that we stay?" she asked.
Lionel answered quietly. "You know it means everything to me."
Edith nodded, trying to suppress the rise of panic in herself. _Five more days of this_, she thought.
8:09 P.M.

As she paced restlessly, her mind kept going over it again and again. Was Barrett right? She couldn't make herself believe it. Yet the evidence was there. She _had_ been furious w The poltergeist phenomena _had_ been directed primarily at him. Her body _did_ feel enerv it always did after psychic use.
She turned and crossed her room again. I was angry with him, yes, she thought, but I wouldn't try to hurt him just because our views are different.
_No_. She wouldn't accept it. She respected Dr. Barrett; loved him as a fellow human being, as a fellow soul. She'd die before she'd harm him. Truly. Truly!
With a faint sob, Florence knelt beside the bed and bowed her head to rest it on tightly clasping hands. Dear God, please help me. Show me the path to follow. I am yours to lead. consecrate my heart and soul to your exalted works. Dear Lord, I beg you for an answer. Re your hand and lift my spirit, help me to walk in your light, along your blessed way.
She looked up suddenly, eyes opened. For several moments she was frozen to the spot, he expression one of indecision. Then a radiant smile pulled back her lips, and standing eagerl crossed the room and went into the corridor. She glanced at her wristwatch; they would still awake. Walking to the door of the Barretts' room, she knocked four times in quick successio Edith opened the door. Across her shoulder, Florence could see Dr. Barrett sitting up in bed, his legs beneath the covers.

"May I speak to you?" she asked.

Barrett hesitated, his face drawn with pain.

"I'll only be a moment," she said.

"Very well."

Edith stepped aside, and Florence crossed the room to Barrett's bed. "I know what happene now," she said. "It wasn't me. It was Belasco's son."

Barrett looked at her without response.

"Don't you see? He wants to separate us. Disunited, we are far less of a challenge to him."

Barrett didn't speak.

"Please believe me," Florence said. "I know I'm right. He's trying to turn us against each other." She looked at him with anxious eyes. "If you don't believe me, he'll have succeeded; you see that?"

Barrett sighed. "Miss Tanner--"

"I'll sit for you first thing in the morning," she broke in. "You'll see."

"There'll be no further sittings."

Florence stared at him, incredulous. "No further sittings?"

"It isn't necessary."

"But we've barely begun. We can't stop now. We've so much to learn."

"I've learned everything I wish to learn." Barrett was trying to control his temper, but the pain was making it difficult.

"You're cutting me off because of what happened before," Florence objected. "It wasn't my fault. I've told you that."

"Telling me is not convincing me," Barrett answered in a tightly restrained voice. "Now, if you don't mind--"

"Doctor, we can't stop the sittings!"

"I am doing so, Miss Tanner."

"You think it was me who--"

"Not only think it, Miss Tanner, but know it," he interrupted. "Now, _please_, I'm in considerable pain."

"Doctor, I was not responsible! It was Belasco's son!"

"Miss Tanner, _there is no such person!_"

The sharpness of his voice made Florence shrink away from him. "I know you're in pain--" she started faintly.

"Miss Tanner, will you _go?_" he asked through gritted teeth.
"Miss Tanner--" Edith began.
Florence looked around at her. She wanted desperately to convince Barrett, but the look of concern on his wife's face stopped her. She looked back at him. "You're wrong," she said. T away, she started for the door. "I'm sorry," she murmured to Edith. "Please forgive me."
She held herself in check until she'd returned to her room. There she sat down on the edge of her bed and started to cry. "You're wrong," she whispered. "Don't you see? You're wrong.

wrong."
10:18 P.M.
Edith lay on her back, staring at the ceiling. She'd closed her eyes a dozen times, only to open them again in seconds. She couldn't conceive of falling asleep. It seemed an impos to her.
She turned her head on the pillow and looked at Lionel. He was heavily asleep. It was no wonder, after what he'd been through. She'd been appalled when she'd helped him undress his pajamas. His entire body was discolored by bruises.
She closed her eyes again, a terrible uneasiness inside her--nervousness with no apparent source. It was probably the house that made her feel it. What in God's name was this power kept talking about? That it was present was undeniable. What had happened in the dining h been terrifying proof of its existence. The thought that Miss Tanner could utilize that power against them was unnerving.
Edith sat up, turning back the bedclothes. Frowning, she slid her feet into her slippers and stood. She wandered across the rug and stopped by the octagonal table, looking at the which Lionel kept his manuscript. Abruptly she turned and walked across the room. Stoppin front of the fireplace, she looked inside. There was a low-burning fire, mostly glowing wood coals. She thought of putting on another log, sitting in the rocking chair, and staring at the fire until sleep came. She glanced uneasily at the rocking chair. What would she do if it start moving by itself again?
She rubbed a hand across her face. There was a tingling underneath the skin. She drew in a shaking breath and looked around. She should have brought a book to read. Something ligh undemanding. A mystery novel would be good. Better still, some humor; that would be perfe H. Allen Smith or Perelman.
She moved to the cabinet to the right of the fireplace and opened one of its doors. "Oh, good," she murmured. There were shelves of leatherbound volumes inside. None of them w She pulled one out and opened it. It was a treatise on _Conation and Volition_. She frowned slid it back onto its shelf; drew out another. It was printed in German. "Wonderful." She repla it on the shelf, pulled out a third book. It dealt with eighteenth-century military tactics.
Edith's smile was pained. Water, water everywhere, she thought. Sighing, she pushed the b onto its shelf and pulled out a larger volume bound in blue leather with gold-edged pages. The book was false, its center hollowed out. As she opened the cover, a pack of photographs fell out and spilled across the rug. Edith started, almost dropping the book. Her heartbeat quickened as she stared down at the fading photographs.

Swallowing, she stooped and picked one up. A shudder rippled through her flesh. The photograph was of two women in a sexual embrace. All the photographs were pornographic women in a variety of poses. Some of them made it evident that the men and women were p on the huge round table in the great hall while other men and women sat around the table, w avidly.

Edith pressed her lips together as she picked up all the photographs and pressed them into a bundle. What an ugly house this is, she thought. She put the photographs into the hollow b and thrust it back onto its shelf. As she closed the cabinet door, she saw, on one of the uppe shelves, a decanter of brandy on a silver tray with two small silver cups beside it.

She walked across the room and sat on her bed again. She felt uncomfortable and restless. Why did she have to look in that cabinet? Why, of all the books inside it, did she have to pick out that one?

She lay down on her side and drew her legs up, crossing her arms. She shivered. Cold, she thought. She stared at Lionel. If only she could lie beside him; not for sex, just to feel his warmth.

Not for sex. She closed her eyes, a look of self-reproach on her face. Had she ever wanted sex with him? She made a pained sound. Would she have even married him if he ha twenty years her senior and left virtually impotent by the polio?

Edith twisted on her back and glared up at the ceiling. What's the matter with me, anyway? she thought. Just because my mother told me sex is evil and degrading, do I have to fear it a life? My mother was a bitter woman, married to an alcoholic woman-chaser. I'm married to a kind of man entirely. I have no reason to feel like this; no reason at all.

She sat up suddenly and looked around in terror. _Someone's watching me again_, she thought. She felt the skin on the back of her neck begin to crawl. Her scalp was covered with icy tingling. Someone's looking at me, knowing what I feel.

Pushing up, she walked to Lionel's bed and looked at him. She mustn't wake him up; he needed rest. Turning hurriedly, she moved to the octagonal table and dragged its chair besid Lionel's bed. She sat on the chair, and carefully, so as not to wake him, put her hand on his There couldn't be anyone looking at her. There were no such things as ghosts. Lionel had sa Lionel knew. She closed her eyes. There are no such things as ghosts, she told herself. No looking at me. There are no such things as ghosts. _Dear God in heaven, there are no such as ghosts_.

11:23 P.M.

Fischer broke the seal on the bottle and unscrewed its cap. He poured two inches of bourbon into a glass and set down the bottle. Picking up the glass, he swirled the liquor arou
He hadn't had a drink in years. He wondered if it was a mistake to start again. There had be time when he couldn't stop once he'd started. He didn't want to sink to that again. Especially here.
He took a sip, grimacing as he swallowed. He coughed, and his eyes watered; he rubbed a finger over them. Then he leaned against the cupboard and began to take tiny sips of the bo
It felt comfortingly warm as it trickled down his throat and settled in his stomach.
Better thin it down, he thought. He walked around the steam table and over to the sink, where he turned on the cold water. After it had cleared, he held the glass of bourbon undern the faucet and added an inch of water. That was better. Now the relaxation could come with danger of his getting drunk.
Fischer lifted himself onto the sink counter and took judicious sips of his drink as he thought about the house. What was it doing this time? he wondered. There _was_ a plan; of had no doubt. That was the horror of the place. It was not amorphously haunted. Hell House method. It worked against invaders systematically. How it did this, no one had ever found ou Until December 1970, he thought, when B. F. Fischer, moving just as systematically--
His right hand twitched so violently as the corridor door was opened that he spilled half his drink across the floor. Florence came into the kitchen, looking harried and exhausted.
"Why aren't you in bed?" she asked.
"Why aren't you?"
"I'm looking for Belasco's son."
He didn't speak.
"You don't think he exists either, do you?"
Fischer didn't know what to say.
"I'll find him," she said, turning away.
Fischer watched her go. He wondered if he should offer to accompany her. He shook his head. Things always happened around her, because she was too open. He didn't want to ex anything more today. He watched her push through the swinging door and disappear into th hall. Her footsteps faded. It was still again.
All right, the house, he thought; his plan. Two days had passed. He had the feel of the place now. It was time to start figuring what his approach was going to be. Obviously, it coul not consist of working in tandem with Barrett or Florence. He'd have to function on his own. how?
Fischer sat immobile, staring at the floor. After a while, he took a sip of his drink. It had to be something clever, he thought, something different, something that would circumve house's method.
He tapped the fingers of his left hand on the drainboard. Clever. Different. Florence was right about the multiplehaunting idea; that much he could agree on. Belasco and a host of ot were in this house. How to best them, though?

After several minutes Fischer put the drink down, jumped abruptly to the floor, and started toward the entry hall. A walk around the house, he thought. All by himself this time, without Florence Tanner to distract his train of thought. Those things she'd "felt." Jesus Chri
He shook his head, a mirthless smile on his lips. Those Spiritualists were too damn much.
He was crossing the entry hall when he froze in his tracks, his heartbeat leaping. A figure was drifting down the staircase. Fischer blinked his eyes and squinted, trying to see w or what it was; there were no lights on the stairs.

He started as the figure reached the foot of the steps and started toward the front door.
It was Edith in a pair of light blue ski pajamas, her eyes staring straight ahead. Fischer stood motionless as she glided like a wraith across the entry hall and pulled open the front door.
She went outside, and Fischer, starting, ran across the entry hall. He dashed through the open doorway, gasping in shock as he saw that she had disappeared into the mist. He ran a porch and down the steps, hearing a crackling of frost beneath his tennis shoes as he ran al the path. He saw a blur of movement ahead. _Is it really her?_ he thought in sudden horror.
he being tricked? He started slowing down, then caught his breath. The figure was headed t
"No!" He bolted forward, grabbing. Two emotions flared in him at once--relief that it was flesh and skin he clutched, and fierce elation that he'd thwarted the will of the house. He pul Edith away from the edge of the tarn. She looked at him without a sign of recognition, eyes l glass.
"Come back inside," he said.
Edith held back stiffly, face expressionless.
"Come on. It's cold out here." He turned her toward the house. "Come on."
Edith began to shiver as he led her. For several frightening moments he thought he'd lost his sense of direction; that they were going to walk into the freezing night to die of exposure.
Then he saw, through the swirling mist, the nebulous rectangle of the front doorway, and hu toward it, one arm around Edith, drawing her along beside him. He led her up the porch step into the house, pushing the door shut as they went inside. As quickly as he could, he guided across the entry hall and into the great hall. Standing Edith before the hearth, he bent over a picked up a log, tossing it onto the coals. He grabbed a poker and jabbed at the log until it caught fire. Tongues of flame leaped upward cracklingly. "There we go," he said. He turned at Edith. She was staring at the mantel, her expression taut, unreadable. Fischer turned and looked. There were pornographic carvings on the mantel he hadn't noticed before.
Edith's groan was one of such revulsion that Fischer looked back sharply. She was shivering. He pulled off his sweater and held it out to her. She didn't take it. Her eyes were fixed on his face. "I'm not," she said.

Fischer stiffened as she reached up and began to remove her pajama top. "What are you doing?" he asked. His heartbeat quickened as she pulled the pajama top over her head and it on the floor. Her skin was covered with gooseflesh, but she didn't seem aware of being co
She started to work the pajama bottoms over her hips. Her blank expression was unnerving it," Fischer told her.
She didn't seem to hear. She pushed down hard, and the pajama bottoms slipped down her legs. She stepped out of them and moved toward Fischer. "No," he muttered, as she steppe to him. She pressed against him with a moan and slid her arms around his back. She pushe loins against him. Fischer started as she kissed his neck. She started reaching down to touc Fischer pulled back. Edith's eyes were blank. He braced himself and slapped her as hard as could.
Edith spun around with a gasp and almost fell. Fischer grabbed her arm and pulled her back to her feet. She stared at him in shock. Suddenly she looked down at herself; gasping in hor
She yanked free of his grip so violently that it made her stagger backward. She almost fell a Regaining her balance, she snatched her pajamas off the floor and held them in front of hers
"You were walking in your sleep," he told her. "I found you outside, starting to go into the tarn."
She didn't respond. Her eyes were wide with fear. She backed away from him, heading towa the archway.
"Mrs. Barrett, it was the house--"
He broke off as she whirled and ran across the room. He started after her, then stopped and listened. After almost a minute, he heard a door being closed upstairs. His shoulders slu Turning, he stared into the fire.
Now the house was getting to her as well.
11:56 P.M.
Something kept drawing her to the cellar. Florence descended the stairs and pushed throug the swinging metal door that opened on the swimming pool. She remembered the feeling sh when she and Fischer had looked into the steam room yesterday: a sense of something per something unwholesome. She could not resign that feeling to what she felt about Belasco's Still, she had to be sure.

Her footsteps echoed and re-echoed as she walked along the edge of the pool. She blinked
Her eyes were tired. She felt badly in need of sleep. But she couldn't go to bed the way thing were. Before she slept, she had to prove--to herself; at least--that Belasco's son was not imagination.
She pulled open the door to the steam room, looked inside. The pipe valve had been fixed, she saw. The room was filled with steam. She stared into the curling depths of it. There was something in there, without a doubt, something terribly malignant. But Belasco's son was no way. His fury was defensive. He was desperately in need of help, and desperately desired th help, yet, at the same time, had such scarified malaise of soul that he fought against help in almost suicidal fashion.

She turned from the steam room and walked back along the length of the pool. She'd better warn Dr. Barrett not to use the steam room. She looked around. If Belasco's son was not he had she felt a compulsion to come to the cellar? There was only the pool and steam room. N wasn't true; she remembered now. There was a wine cellar across the corridor.

The moment she remembered it, it seemed as though a burst of cognizance exploded throu her. An excited smile beginning on her lips, she hurried to the swinging door and pushed it o Running across the corridor, she opened the wine-cellar door and felt around for a light swit After a moment she found it, pushed it up. The light was dim, the overhead bulb filmed with and grime.

Florence walked into the room and looked around. The feeling was intense. Her gaze jumpe from wall to wall, across the empty wine racks. Suddenly it froze on the wall across from the door. She stared at it. _Yes_, she thought. She started toward it.

She cried out as unseen hands clutched her by the throat. She reached up and began to grapple with the hands. They were cold and moist. She yanked them away and staggered to Regaining direction, she lunged for the wall. The hands grabbed her arm and slung her side She reeled across the floor and crashed against a wine rack. "Don't!" she cried. She turned looked around the room. "I'm here to help!"

She pushed away from the wine rack, started for the wall again. Again the hands were on her, clutching at her shoulders. She was turned and hurled away. She almost hit the door be she caught her balance, whirling. "_You will not deter me_." She started forward slowly, pray in a soft, determined voice. The hands grabbed hold of her again. They jerked free as she s out loudly: "In the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost!" Florence rushed to the and pressed herself against it. She was flooded with awareness. "Yes!" she cried. A vision le across her mind: a lion's den--a young man looking at her pleadingly. She sobbed with joy. "Daniel!" She had found him! "_Daniel!_"

DECEMBER 23, 1970

6:47 A.M.

The distant scream cut like a knife into Edith's sleep. She twitched awake, staring upward in confusion. A sound of rustling made her jerk around. Lionel was propped on his left elbow looking at her.

"What _was_ it?" she asked.

Barrett shook his head.

"I mean, was it real?"
Barrett didn't answer.
The second scream made her gasp. Barrett caught his breath. "Miss Tanner." He dropped h legs across the mattress edge and felt for his slippers. Edith started sitting up. She gasped again as Lionel's legs gave way. He fell against his bed, hissing at the pain in his thumb.
"Are you all right?" she asked.
He nodded once and pushed erect again, grabbing for his cane. Edith stood up, pulling on her quilted robe. She followed Lionel quickly to the door. He pulled it open, and they moved the corridor, Lionel hobbling badly. Edith walked beside him, buttoning her robe. She glance toward Fischer's room. Surely he had heard.
Barrett stopped at Florence Tanner's door and knocked three times in quick succession. When she failed to answer, he opened the door and went inside. The room was dark. Edith herself stiffen with anticipation as Lionel flicked up the wall switch.
Florence Tanner was on her back, arms clutched across her chest. Barrett limped to her bed, Edith close behind him. "What is it?" he asked.
Florence stared at him with narrowed, pain-glazed eyes. He leaned down, wincing at the pull of stiffened muscles. "Miss Tanner?"
She shuddered, digging teeth into her lower lip to keep from crying. Slowly she withdrew her arms, and Edith started as she saw him begin to unbutton the medium's gown. There we damp patches on it, one above each breast. Florence closed her eyes as Barrett drew aside edges of the gown. Edith shrank back.
There were deep teeth marks ringing the nipples on Florence's breasts.
Abruptly Florence pulled the blankets to her chin. Despite her will, a sob convulsed her throat; she tried in vain to check it. "Don't fight it," Barrett told her. Florence sobbed again, tears spilling down her cheeks.
Edith stared at Florence as she cried. For the first time since they'd met, the medium seemed vulnerable, and Edith felt a rush of sympathy. "Is there anything I can do?" she aske Florence shook her head. "I'll be all right."
Edith glanced aside as Fischer entered the room and joined them by the bed. "What happened?" he asked.
Florence hesitated before drawing down the covers briefly. Edith tried not to look, but couldn't help herself. Her breath shook as she saw the bites on Florence Tanner's breasts a "He's punishing me," Florence said.
Edith's face went blank. She glanced at Lionel, who was looking at the medium without expression.
"I found him last night," Florence told him. "Daniel Belasco."
There was heavy silence. Barrett looked embarrassed. Florence managed a smile. "No, I'm not imagining it." She laid a hand on her breasts. "Did I imagine these?"

Barrett gestured inconclusively.
"His body is in the wine cellar."
Edith could see how awkward Lionel felt. She knew that he wanted to be sympathetic but didn't know what to say that wouldn't hurt her further.
"Will you help exhume the body?" Florence asked.
"I would, but after last night, I'm afraid I'm in no condition for heavy labor."
Florence stared at him in disbelief. "But, Doctor, he's _there_. Doesn't that mean anything to you?"
"Miss Tanner--"
Florence turned to Fischer. "Will you help me, then?"
Fischer looked at her in silence. He _had_ heard her scream, Edith realized abruptly; heard but been afraid to come until Lionel had arrived. Now he was afraid to offer help. It wa not surprising. Whenever something violent occurred, Miss Tanner was always there.
When he didn't answer, Florence clenched her teeth, forcing back a sob. "All right, I'll do it myself." The pain of the bites seemed to overwhelm her, and she closed her eyes.
"I'll help you," Fischer said.
Florence opened her eyes and tried to smile. "Thank you."
Barrett put his hand on Edith's arm and started turning.
"Are you so afraid I might be right, Doctor?" Florence asked him.
Barrett looked at her appraisingly. At last he nodded. "Very well. We'll go downstairs with you. I can't dig, however, if that's what you intend to do."
"Ben and I will do that," Florence told him.
Edith glanced at Fischer. He was standing at the foot of the bed, looking at Florence without expression. Suddenly she felt a shiver plaiting up her back.

Was there really something down there?
7:29 A.M.
Fischer drove the crowbar edge into the cleft, and, straining, levered out another chunk of brick and mortar. It had taken him more than twenty minutes to gouge away an opening n than his fist. His pants and tennis shoes were streaked with mortar stains; there was a film o powder on his hands. He sneezed as mortar dust got up his nostrils. Turning, he withdrew h handkerchief and blew his nose. He looked at Florence, who was watching him with anxious forced a smile. "I know it's hard."
Fischer nodded, drawing in a ragged breath. He almost sneezed again, controlled it, then, raising the crowbar, jammed its edge into the breach. It slipped as he began to pry away and clump of brick, and, losing balance, he pitched against the wall. "Damn!" he muttered. He straightened up, teeth set on edge, and once more drove the crowbar edge into the wall gap He jimmied out another piece of brick, which bounced across the floor, then looked at Florence. "This could take all day," he said.

"I know it's hard," she said again. Fischer stretched his back. "Let me do it for a while," she offered. Fischer shook his head and raised the crowbar.
"Before you continue--" Barrett said.
Fischer turned.
"Since this is clearly going to take a long time," Barrett said to Florence. "you won't mind if I go upstairs and get off this leg. It's rather painful."
"Yes, of course," she said. "We'll call you when we've found him."
"Quite." Barrett took hold of Edith's arm and turned for the door. Florence exchanged a look with Fischer as he turned back to the gap in the wall.
He was about to thrust the crowbar when he saw it. "_Wait_." Barrett and Edith looked around as he picked up his flashlight and shone the beam of light into the opening.
"What is it?" Florence was unable to contain her eagerness.
Fischer squinted through the haze of dust. He blew into the gap, then pointed the flashlight beam again. "Looks like a rope," he answered.
Florence came over, and Fischer handed her the flashlight. "Keep pointing it in there."
She nodded quickly. Fischer reached into the opening and clamped his fingers on the dusty pulled down, but there was no give. He pulled up, felt the rope grow slack, then tauten as he go. "I think there's a weight on the end of it," he said.
Florence caught her breath. "A _counterbalance_."
Fischer grabbed the crowbar and started jabbing its beveled edge at the sides of the hole, widening it as quickly as he could. After a minute of forceful digging he dropped the crowbar before the clanging resonance had faded, had both hands through the opening. Clutching at rope, he started pulling upward. The resistance was too strong. He braced himself and pulle all his might, forehead pressed against the wall, eyes closed, teeth gritted. Move, you bastar _move_, he thought.
Suddenly the rope lurched upward, slamming the edge of his right wrist against the jagged brick edge. Fischer jerked his hands back. He was examining his wrist when a rumbling nois inside the wall. He looked up, startled.
A section of wall was hitching slowly to the right. Fischer braced himself for what they'd see--or wouldn't see. He was conscious of Florence standing beside him tensely as the wall creaked and shuddered to the side.
Edith made a gagging noise and turned away. Fischer's lips pulled back in a grimace. Florence's sigh of relief fell strangely on his ears.
Shackled to the wall inside the narrow passage were the mummified remains of a man. Barrett murmured, "Shades of Poe."
"I told you he was here," Florence said.
Fischer stared at the grayish, parchmentlike features of the corpse. Its eyes were like dark, hardened berries, its lips drawn back and frozen in a soundless scream. Obviously, he tied behind the wall while still alive.

"Well, Doctor?" Florence asked.
Barrett drew in a faltering breath. "Well, what?" he asked. "I see the mummy of a man. How do you know it's Daniel Belasco?"

"I _know_," she said.
"Beyond a doubt? Beyond the slightest doubt?"
"_Yes_." She looked incredulous.
Barrett smiled. "I think more proof than that is called for."
Florence stared at him. "You're right," she said abruptly.
Turning to the opening, she reached out for the left hand of the shackled figure. Fischer watched her remove a ring. "Here." She held it out to Barrett.
Barrett hesitated before taking it. Fischer glanced at Edith. She was staring at her husband with a look of apprehension. He looked at Barrett. The physicist was handing back ring, a forced smile on his lips. "Very good," he said.
"Do you believe me now?"
"I'll think it over."
"_Think it over?_" Florence gaped at him. "Are you telling me--?"
"I'm telling you nothing," Barrett cut her off. "I'm saying that I need more time to digest this information and work out my interpretation of it. I must advise you, however, not t presume that one cadaver with a ring can reverse the scientific convictions of a lifetime."
"Doctor, I'm not _trying_ to reverse your convictions. All I'm asking is that we work together. Can't you see that both of us can be right?"
Barrett shook his head. "I'm sorry, no. That I cannot see; and never will." He turned abruptly, limping toward the corridor. "My dear?" he said.
Edith looked at Florence for a moment, then turned to follow her husband across the room.
Fischer took the ring from Florence. It was made of gold, with an oval crest.
Across the crest, in scroll-like letters, were the initials "D. B."
8:16 A.M.
They had eaten in silence for almost twenty minutes now. Barrett pushed aside his plate and drew his cup of coffee in front of himself. He stared across the table at the EMR indicato Awkward that they had to take their meals at the same table on which his equipment was pla Still, there was no help for it, since the dining hall was wrecked.
He glanced at Edith. She was sitting motionless, both hands wrapped around her coffee cup as if for warmth. She looked like a frightened child.
He thrust aside his thinking on the problem. "Edith?" She looked at him, and Barrett smiled. "Disturbed?"

"Aren't you?"
He shook his head. "No, not at all. Is that why you think I've been quiet?"
Edith seemed to hesitate, as if afraid to bring up points he might not be able to refute.
"There _was_ a figure," she finally said.
"Quite a dreadful one."
Edith gazed at him uneasily.
"Not necessarily _the_ figure, however," he said.
"But the ring."
"D. B. doesn't _have_ to stand for Daniel Belasco."
She did not look reassured.
"It could stand for David Bart," he said. "Donald Bascomb." He smiled. "Doctor Barrett."
"But--"
"On the other hand, it might actually _be_ Daniel Belasco-- assuming such a person existed at all."
"Doesn't that prove her story, then?"
"It would appear to."
"I don't understand, then."
"The point is not the evidence or what it seems to prove, but _who found_ that evidence."
Edith still looked bewildered. Barrett smiled. "My dear," he said, "Miss Tanner is a sensitive of considerable development. Add to that the vast power residuum in this house to she, as a medium, has access. The result is a loaded psychic situation in which she is enab create any number of effects to validate her views. She was responsible for that 'poltergeist' attack on me last night, later claiming its source as Daniel Belasco. Next she became 'aware his body and 'discovered' it this morning, thus verifying her story even further. The fact that those may actually be the remains of Daniel Belasco is irrelevant. The point is simply that M Tanner is manipulating her power and the power in the house to build a case for herself."

Edith looked at him anxiously. Barrett knew she wanted to believe him but was still thrown off by what had happened. "What about the teeth marks, though?" he said.
She started.
"That _is_ what you're thinking, isn't it?"
Her smile was faint. "You must be psychic, too."
Barrett chuckled. "Not a bit. It has to be the only point remaining on which you're still uncertain."
"Isn't it proof?"
"To her it is."
"They _were_ teeth marks."
"They appeared to be."

"Lionel--" Edith looked more confused than ever. "Are you telling me they _weren't_ teeth marks?"
"They may have been," he said. "All I'm saying is that they most certainly were not inflicted by Daniel Belasco."
Edith grimaced. "She did it to herself?"
"Perhaps not directly, although I can't discount the possibility," he said. "More likely, though, it falls under the category of stigmata."
Edith looked a little ill.
"Stranger things have happened." Barrett hesitated, then Went on. "I never did tell you what happened to Martin Wrather that time; if you recall, I merely said he'd suffered injury w sitting. What happened was that his genitals were nearly severed. He did it to himself in a m of hysteria. To this day, however, he remains convinced that 'forces from the other side' attempted to emasculate him." He smiled somberly. "Which is a far cry from a few small bite female breasts--although I'm sure the pain she's suffering is considerable.
"You see how she's rounding out her case, though," he continued. "She comes upon the bo last night--and this morning, in a rage at having his secret discovered, Daniel Belasco punis her, tries to frighten her away."
"But you"--she gestured weakly--"don't believe any of it."
"None."
She sighed, as if surrendering. "What's going to happen, then?"
"What's going to happen is that my machine will arrive this morning, and by tomorrow I'll end the so-called curse of Hell House by purely scientific means."
They looked around as Fischer entered the great hall and walked over to the table, wearing his pea jacket, his clothes and hands streaked with earth stains. He said nothing as he sat a poured himself a cup of coffee, lit a cigarette.
"Are the services completed?" Barrett asked, the faintest edge of gibing in his voice.
Fischer glanced at him, then lifted the silver cover from the platter of bacon and eggs and looked at them before he dumped the cover back in place.
"Isn't Miss Tanner having breakfast?" Barrett asked.
Fischer shook his head, then drank some coffee. Barrett studied him. The man was obvious under pressure. He'd never given it much thought, but for Fischer to have come back to this after what had happened must have required a tremendous act of will.
"Mr. Fischer," he said.
Fischer raised his eyes.
"I didn't respond to Miss Tanner last night because I was in pain and . . . well, to be quite frank, angry with her, too. But I do think she was right when she suggested that you le Fischer eyed him coldly.
"Please don't take this as criticism. I simply think that, for your own good, it might be wise for you to go."

Fischer's smile was bitter. "Thanks."
Barrett laid his napkin on the table. "Well, I've given you my feelings on the matter. The decision is yours to make, of course." He took out his pocket watch and raised the lid. As he the watch back into its pocket, he noticed Edith glancing away from Fischer. "Perhaps we sh bring some food to Miss Tanner," he suggested.
"She wants to be alone right now," Fischer said.
Barrett nodded, then pushed to his feet, flinching as he set his weight down on his burned leg. "My dear?" he said. She nodded with a faint smile, standing.

"He seems particularly tense today," he said as they started across the entry hall.
"Mmm."
He looked at her. "So do you."
"It's the house."
"Of course." He smiled. "Wait until tomorrow. You'll notice quite a change."
He looked around with an elated smile as someone knocked on the front door. "My machine he said.
8:31 A.M.
So this broken body has released the spirit which shall never return to it again. This body has served its purpose, it can serve that purpose no more. Earth to earth, ashes to ash dust to dust. Amen."
She had spoken the words of the funeral service three times now, the first time when she and Fischer had laid Daniel Belasco's body to rest, twice more upon returning to her room. N soul could rest.
It had been bitterly cold outside, the ground as hard as iron. Fischer's attempt to dig a pit finally had to be abandoned. They had searched the area around the house until they'd fo hollow in the earth, placed the body in that, and covered it with leaves and stones. Then she recited the words of the funeral service, both of them standing beside the makeshift grave, h bowed, eyes closed.
Florence smiled. She'd see to it that Daniel had a proper burial as soon as possible. What mattered now was that he was released from this house.
Reaching into the pocket of her sweater, she drew out Daniel's ring and held it in her palm, closing her fingers over it.
The images began immediately. She saw him: dark-haired, handsome, imperious in attitude yet, underneath the superficial arrogance, as defenseless as a child. She saw him laughing table in the dining hall, saw him in the ballroom, waltzing with a beautiful young woman. The was only youth and tenderness in his smile.
The visions darkened. Daniel in the theater, looking at a play, face taut, eyes glittering. Florence tightened. This was not what he desired; but he was young, impressiona Everything degrading was available. She saw him reeling down a corridor, a drunken woma arm. She saw him in this very bedroom, trying, in spite of everything, to find a sense of beau in the sex act.

The corruption deepened. Drunkenness. Despair. A brief escape, then, helplessly, retreat to Hell House, never to escape again. Florence winced. She saw him in the great hall, nake sitting at the huge round table, watching avidly. She saw him sliding a hypodermic needle in arm, saw him venting sexual desires that made her tremble in the darkness. Yet, always, be mask--the face that Hell House had created--cowered the boy; wanting to flee, but incapable doing so; wanting love, but finding only license.
She caught her breath, seeing him approach his father. She could not make out the face of Emeric Belasco; the figure stood in shadows, giant, menacing. She moved her lips in prayer ring gripped tightly in her hand. The shadows started to contract. In a moment she would se Something cold began to fill her chest; the vision faltered. Florence groaned. She mustn't los it! She descended deeper with a surge of will. If only she could see the father, get inside the father, understand the father. Sweat broke out across her brow. She felt a snake uncoiling in stomach, cold and wet. "No," she murmured. She must not surrender. There was meaning h answer.
She cried out as a violent shock coursed through her body. Instantly her hand unclasped, the ring slipped off. She heard it thumping on the rug, a vast distance below. She felt as thou she lay in some great cavern, wounded. She could not perceive the walls or ceiling; in every direction lay only darkness and distance. She tried to open her eyes but couldn't. Blackness trickled sluggishly across her mind, blotting out awareness. Power, she thought. Dear God, t power.
She started slipping down the wall of a gigantic pit, moving downward toward a darkness which was blacker than any she had ever known. She tried to stop herself but couldn't. The sensation was physical--her body sliding down and down, the walls of the pit adhesive enou keep her from pitching into space, not enough to stop her inexorable descent toward the dar below. The darkness that waited had a character, a personality. It's him, she thought. He wa for me.

Oh, God, he waits for me!
She fought against it, praying to her guides, her spirit doctors, all those who had helped her in the past. Keep me from falling deeper, she entreated them. Take my hand and bear m ask this in the name of our eternal God. Help me, help me!
Abruptly she was back inside the room, the pit and cavern gone. She was asleep, yet not asleep. She knew that she was on the bed, unconscious; knew she was aware, as well. She opening and closing of a door. Was it the door of her room, or some imagined door within he

All she knew was that her eyes were fastened shut; that she slept, yet was awake. She hear footsteps drawing near.
She saw a figure. With her eyes closed, she could see it coming toward her like a silhouette cut from black paper. Did she imagine it? Was the figure in the room, or in her mir
It reached the bed and sat beside her; she could feel the mattress yielding as it sat.
Suddenly she knew that it was Daniel, and a groaning noise enveloped her. Was it a real gro issuing from her lips, or a thought sound which expressed the shock she felt? _It could not b him_. He was at rest. She and Fischer had placed his body in a consecrated grave. He coul back again; it was impossible. Asleep, awake, she saw him sitting on the bed beside her, a f in black. Was he looking at her? Were there eyes in that dark head?
"Is it you?" she asked. She heard her voice but couldn't tell if it was thought or real.
"It is."
"_Why?_" she asked, she thought. "You should have gone on."
"I cannot."
She tried to wake herself, unable to endure this limbo of fragmentary awareness. "You have to go," she told him. "You were given your release."
"It's not the release I seek."
"What _is_, then?" She became more conscious of the battle to awaken. She had to separat herself before it was too late.
"You know what it is," he said.
She did know, suddenly. The knowledge was a chilling wind across her heart. "_You must g on_," she said.
"You know what you must do," he answered.
"No."
"I need it, or I cannot leave."
"No!" she answered. _Wake!_ she thought.
Daniel said, "Then I must kill you, Florence."
Icy hands were clamped around her neck. Florence cried out in her sleep. She reached up, clawing at them. Suddenly she woke. The hands were gone. She started pushing up, then fr shock, her heartbeat staggering.
There was a hideous sound beside her on the bed; an eerie sound, half-animal, half-human liquid, and deranged. She couldn't move. What was it? Very slowly Florence turned her eyes bathroom door was open slightly, faint illumination clouding through the room.
It was the cat.
She watched it staring at her. Its eyes were glittering, insane. It kept making the wavering, unnatural sound in its throat. She began to lift her hand. "In the name of God," she whispered.
With a savage yowl, the cat leaped at her face. Florence jerked back, both arms flung before her. The cat thrashed into her, its sharp claws hooking deep into her arms. She cried as she felt its teeth dig brutally into her head. She tried to push it loose but couldn't; it was sprawled across her face, its hot fur in her eyes and mouth. Its teeth dug deeper, front claws buried in her arms, the harsh, demented sound still bubbling in its throat. Florence jerked he left arm free and dug her fingers into fur and skin, trying to pull its head back. The teeth pulled loose. Instantly the cat's head lunged berserkly at her throat. Florence blocked its wa with her right arm, and the cat's teeth sank into her flesh again. She sobbed in pain and trie jerk its head away. The cat began to kick its rear legs. Florence grabbed its throat and starte squeezing. It began to make a gurgling noise, its rear legs thrashing, clawing at her chest a stomach through the sweater. Suddenly the teeth pulled free. Florence hurled the cat to the She sat up quickly, gasping for breath. In the faint light from the bathroom she could see the cat roll over and regain its feet. She jumped from the bed and lunged toward the bathroo cat hurled itself against her legs, digging teeth and claws into her calves. She cried out, alm falling. Struggling to regain balance, she toppled against the Spanish table, right arm crashi on the telephone. Instantly she snatched up the receiver, swung down at the cat with it. The blow smashed against her knee. She sobbed and swung again, hitting the cat's head. She b hit it again and again, battering at its skull until, abruptly, the teeth jerked out. Kicking the cat away, she spun around and dashed for the bathroom. The cat raked to a halt, then darte her. Lurching through the doorway, Florence slammed the door and fell against it as the cat crashed against the other side and started clawing frenziedly at the wood.

Florence stumbled to the sink and looked at her reflection in the mirror. She gasped in shock, seeing the deep holes in her forehead, blood oozing from the cavities. Tugging up he sweater, she pulled it over her head, groaning at the sight of her chest and stomach crisscro with a network of bleeding lacerations, her torn bra spotted with bloodstains.

She looked at her arms, wincing at the perforations the cat's teeth had dug into her flesh. She whimpered, turning on the cold water. Dragging a washcloth off its rack, she held underneath the faucet until it was soaked, then began to pat it on the bites and scratches. S started crying at the pain, digging teeth into her lower lip. Hot tears blurred her sight.

As she washed the wounds, she heard the cat outside the door, raking its claws through the wood and making the horrible noise in its throat.

9:14 A.M.

"It's big," Edith said.

Barrett grunted as he jimmied the end of a plank from the side of a plank from the side of the crate stamped FRONT. His movements were excited, overquick. The crowbar slipped.

"Don't overdo it, now."

He nodded, prying at the other end of the plank. She hadn't seen him so worked up in years. "Can I help you?"

Barrett shook his head.
Edith watched uneasily as he leaned forward in his chair and pried the boards loose, cracking several of them, pulling off jagged pieces with his left hand, and tossing them onto floor. "They packed it well enough," he muttered. She couldn't tell if he was pleased or anno by the fact.
The crate was eight by ten feet in width and length, and taller than Barrett by a foot.
What was in it? Edith wondered. His machine, yes; but what was his machine, and how was supposed to end the haunting of a house?
"Damn!"
She twitched as Barrett cursed and dropped the crowbar with a hiss of pain to clutch at his bandaged thumb.
"Lionel, please don't overdo it."
"All _right_," he said impatiently. He picked up the crowbar and returned to the crate.
"Why don't you ask Fischer to help you?"
"Do it myself," he muttered.
Edith flinched as he drove the crowbar in between two planks and started jimmying out one of them. "Lionel, _take it easy_," she said. "You look as though you mean to tear that crate a with your teeth."
Barrett stopped and looked at her, his chest rising and falling heavily, a dew of perspiration on his forehead. He made a sound which might have been amusement. "It's jus this is--well, the culmination of all my years in parapsychology," he said. "You can understar why I'm excited."
"And you can understand why I'm concerned."
He nodded. "I'll restrain myself," he promised. "I guess I can spare a few more minutes after twenty years."
Edith leaned back in her chair, relieved. Maybe if she kept him talking while he worked, he wouldn't get too overwrought.
"Lionel?"
"Yes?"
"Should we report that body to the police?"
"We will," he said, "when the week is up."
Edith nodded, wondering what to talk about next.
"Was Fischer really a powerful psychic?" she asked, wondering why the question came to mind.

"At one time, it was generally conceded that he ranked with Home and Palladino."
"What did he do?"
"Oh"--Barrett pried away another plank end from the front of the crate and set the board aside, revealing a line of glass-fronted dials--"the usual: levitation, direct voice, biological phenomena, imprints, percussion, materialization-- that sort of thing. At one sitting, a table that weighed almost five hundred pounds was raised to the ceiling in full light, him with it, an the combined strength of six men couldn't pull it down.

"Later, when the lights were out in the testing room--full controls in operation--a group of seven perfectly formed faces floated around the room. One of the testers--Doctor Wells, t famous Harvard chemist--had his face blown into by one of them, and another tried to kiss h believe he was rather a cynic about the entire subject until that night."

"What else?" Edith prompted as he fell silent again.

"Oh, a . . . dark shadow in the shape of a man walked around the testing room with a tread that shook the walls. Green phosphorescent lights, like outsize butterflies, fluttered around th table and nested in the sitters' hair. A mandolin floated near the ceiling, playing 'My Bonny L Over the Ocean.' Professor Mulvaney of the Pittsburgh Parapsychological Association held a perfectly formed materialized hand for more than ten minutes, describing it as possessing bo skin, hair, nails, and warmth. It dissolved in his grip in less than a second.

"Finally, a mass of teleplasm flooded from Fischer's mouth and formed the figure of a Chinese mandarin, seven feet tall, complete to the finest detail. It spoke to the group for twe minutes before being retracted into Fischer's body." Barrett set aside another plank. "Fische all of thirteen at the time."

"He was genuine, then."

"Oh, yes, completely." Barrett started working on the final plank. "Unfortunately, that was long ago. It's like a muscle, you see. Fail to use it, and it atrophies." He set aside the final plank and stood with his cane. "_Now_," he said.

Edith rose and walked over to him. He was peeling off a large envelope that was taped to the front of the machine. As he opened it and slid out his blueprints, Edith looked at the cont panel with its array of switches, dials, and knobs. "What did this cost to build?" she asked.

"I'd say in excess of seventy thousand dollars."

"_My God_." Edith ran her gaze over the dials. "EMR," she murmured, reading the metal plate fastened below the largest dial. The numbers on it ranged from zero to 120,000.

"What _is_ EMR, Lionel?"

"I'll explain it later, dear," he said distractedly. "I'll tell all of you exactly what the Reversor is designed to do."

"The Reversor," she said.

He nodded, looking at the top blueprint. Pulling the pencil flashlight from his pocket, he shone its thin beam through a grille-like opening on the side of the machine. He frowned and limping to the table, set down the blueprints, and picked up a screwdriver. Returning to the machine, he began to unfasten a plate.

Edith moved to the fireplace and held her hands toward the flames. She'd stood right here, she thought after a moment. She could remember nothing before being slapped from sleep, herself naked in front of Fischer. She shuddered, trying not to think about it.

She was moving back toward Lionel when Fischer suddenly came dashing in. Edith started he called out, "Doctor!"
Barrett whirled.
"It's Miss Tanner!"
Edith froze. My God, what's happened now? she thought.
"She's been hurt again."
Barrett nodded once and, limping to the table, grabbed his black bag. "Where?" he asked.
"In her room."
The three moved hurriedly across the great hall, Barrett setting the pace as best he could. "How bad is it?" he asked.
"She's scratched--torn--bitten."
"How did it happen?"
"I don't know; the cat, I think."
"The _cat?_"
"I was bringing her some food. When she didn't answer my knock, I opened the door. The second I did, the cat shot out and disappeared."
"And Miss Tanner?"

"She was in the bathroom," Fischer said. "At first she wouldn't come out. When she did--"
He stopped, grimacing.
She was lying on her bed when they came in; she opened her eyes and turned her head as they crossed the room. Edith made a sound of shock. The medium's skin was as pale as wa blood-encrusted indentations on her head, puffy scratches on her face and neck.
Barrett put his bag by her bed and sat down beside her. "Have you disinfected these?" he asked, looking at the bites on her head.
She shook her head. Barrett opened his bag and removed a small brown bottle and a box o
He glanced at the rips in Florence's sweater. "Your body, too?"
She nodded, tears welling in her eyes.
"You'd better take the sweater off."
"I've washed myself."
"That's not enough. There could be infection."
Florence glanced at Fischer. Without a word, he turned and walked to the other bed, sitting down on it, his back to them. Florence started to remove her sweater. "Would you hel Edith?" Barrett asked.
Edith moved to the side of the bed, wincing as she saw the pattern of the jagged slashes across Florence's chest and stomach, the bites and lacerations on her arms. She reached b medium to unhook her bra, stepping back as Florence slipped it off. The medium's breasts w covered with scratches as well.

Barrett unscrewed the cap of the bottle. "This is going to hurt," he said. "Would you like a codeine?"
Florence shook her head. Barrett dipped a Q-Tip into the bottle and began to swab out one of the puncture wounds in her forehead. Florence hissed and closed her eyes, tears pressin beneath the lids. Edith couldn't watch. She turned away and looked at Fischer. He was stari the wall.
Several minutes passed, the only sound Florence's hissing and an occasional murmur of apology from Barrett. When he was done, he drew a blanket across her chest. "Thank you," Edith turned back.
"The cat attacked me," Florence said. "It was possessed by Daniel Belasco."
Edith looked at her husband. His expression was unreadable.
The medium tried to smile. "I know, you think--"
"It doesn't really matter what I think, Miss Tanner," Barrett cut her off. "What matters is your being mauled."
"I'll be all right."
"I wonder if that's so, Miss Tanner. I wonder if it might not be advisable for _you_ to leave rather than Mr. Fischer."
Edith was aware of Fischer twisting around to look at them.
"No, Doctor." Florence shook her head. "I don't think it would be advisable at all."
Barrett looked at the medium for several moments before he spoke again. "Mr. Deutsch needn't know," he said.
Florence looked confused.
"I mean"--he hesitated--"you've more than contributed your share to the project."
"And you'll see to it that I get paid off, is that it?"
"I'm only trying to help. Miss Tanner."
Florence started to reply, then held back. She averted her eyes before she looked at Barrett again. "All right," she said, "I'll accept that. But I'm not going to leave."
Barrett nodded. "Very well. It's up to you, of course." He paused, then added, "But I would feel derelict in my responsibility toward you if I didn't urge, no, _warn_ you to leave thi house while you can." He paused again. "Furthermore, if I think your life is in danger, I may see to it that you go."
Florence looked appalled.
"I don't intend to stand by knowingly and allow you to become yet one more victim of Hell House," Barrett told her. He snapped his bag shut, picked it up. "My dear?" he said. Struggli his feet, he turned for the door.
10:43 A.M.

Edith turned onto her right side and looked at the other bed. Lionel was asleep. She should never have let him work on that crate. They should have asked Fischer to open it. She thought about what Lionel had said before he'd gone to sleep: that Florence Tanner wa becoming so anxious to prove her case that she was sacrificing her bodily well-being to do i "Dissociation of mind resulting in a modification of self is the basic cause of mediumistic phenomena," he had said. "I don't know if there really was a Daniel Belasco or but the personality Miss Tanner claims to be in touch with is nothing more than a division of own personality."

Edith blew out a harried breath and turned onto her back. If only she could understand as Lionel did. All she could think of were those horrible teeth marks around Florence Tanner's nipples; the scratches and bites which Florence claimed the cat had inflicted. How could she done those things to herself, even unconsciously?

Edith slipped her legs across the mattress edge and sat up. She stared at her shoes for several minutes before pushing her feet into them. Standing, she moved to the octagonal ta looked at the manuscript. She ran a finger over the title page. Would it really hurt? she thou It was ridiculous to have this almost mindless dread of alcohol. Just because her father's drinking had made her childhood miserable was no reason to condemn liquor per se. All she contemplating was one small drink in order to relax.

She moved to the cabinet and opened the door. Lifting out the decanter and one of the small silver cups, she carried them to the table. She pulled a tissue from her purse and clea out the silver cup before she poured it full of brandy. It was very dark. She wondered sudde it could be poisoned. That would be a grisly way to end things.

She dipped a finger into the brandy, touched it to her tongue. Would she know if it was poisoned? Her tongue began to burn, and she swallowed nervously. The warmth spread de the tissues of her throat. Edith raised the silver cup and held it underneath her nostrils. The aroma was pleasing. How could it be poisoned? Surely someone had tasted it before this. She took a tiny sip, closing her eyes as it trickled down her throat. The inside of her mouth grew warm. She made a sound of pleasure as the brandy reached her stomach and heat began expanding there. She took another sip. It's what I need, she thought. I'm not a potential drunk just because I sip a little brandy. She moved to the rocking chair, hesitated, then sat down. Leaning back, she closed her eyes and drank the brandy with deliberate sips When the cup was empty, she opened her eyes and looked toward the table. No, she thou One was enough. She felt relaxed now; that was all she wanted. She held the cup before he examining the intricacies of its silverwork. Maybe she'd take it home as a souvenir when the was over. She smiled. There; that was better. She was planning ahead.

She thought about Fischer. She really should apologize to him for avoiding him so rudely this morning. She should thank him for saving her life. She shivered, thinking of the stagnan water in the tarn, and stood up, wavering slightly as she crossed the room. She opened the and stepped into the corridor, closing the door behind herself as quietly as possible.

A wave of dread swept over her for an instant as she realized that she was alone for the first time since they'd entered the house. She scoffed away the dread. She was being foolish Lionel was just inside the room. Florence was probably in her room, Fischer in his. She mov along the hallway to his door. Was she making a mistake? No, she thought; I owe him an ap owe him thanks.
She knocked on Fischer's door and waited. There was no sound inside the room. After several moments she knocked again, but there was no response. Edith turned the knob and the door. What am I doing? she thought. She couldn't stop herself. Opening the door, she lo inside.
The room was considerably smaller than the one she and Lionel were in. There was only on massive bed with a high, square-cut canopy. To its right was a table with a French telephon an ashtray on it. Edith looked at the ashtray filled with mashed cigarette butts. He smokes to much, she thought.
She drifted to the armchair beside the table. Fischer's tote bag was on it, its zipper undone. Edith looked inside and saw some T-shirts and an open carton of cigarettes. She s reaching down to touch the bag.
She whirled with a gasp.
Fischer was standing in the doorway, looking at her.
For a terribly extended time, it seemed to her, they stared at each other. Edith's heartbeat raced; she felt a licking heat across her face.
"What is it, Mrs. Barrett?"
She tried to get control of herself. What must he be thinking to find her here like this?

"I came to thank you," she managed.
"Thank me?"
"For saving my life last night."
She drew back unconsciously as Fischer walked over to her. "You shouldn't have left your husband."
She didn't know what to say.
"Are you all right?"
"Of course."
Fischer looked at her closely. "I think you should go back to your room now," he said.
He moved beside her as she crossed the rug. "Try tying your wrist to the bed at night," he told her.
Edith nodded as he followed her into the corridor and to her room. She turned to face him.
"Thank you."

"Don't leave your husband again," he said. "You should never--"
He broke off, leaning forward suddenly as though to kiss her. Edith twitched and drew back. "Have you been drinking?" he asked.
She tightened. "Why?"
"Because it isn't safe to drink here. It isn't safe to lose control."
"_I am not losing control_," she told him stiffly. She turned and went inside her room.
11:16 A.M.
Florence started as someone knocked on the door. "Come in."
Fischer entered.
"Ben." She tried to rise.
"Don't get up," he told her. He started across the room. "I'd like to talk to you."
"Of course." She patted the bed. "Sit here beside me."
Fischer settled on the mattress edge. "I'm sorry you're in pain."
"It will pass."
He nodded, unconvinced, then looked at her in silence, until Florence smiled. "Yes?" she asked.
He braced himself for her reaction. "I agree with Doctor Barrett. I think you should leave."
"_Ben_."
"You're being torn to pieces, Florence. Can't you see that?"
"You don't think I'm doing these things to _myself_, do you?"
"No, I don't," he answered. "But I don't know who is doing them, either. You say it's Daniel Belasco. What if you're wrong? What if you're being fooled?"
"Fooled?"
"There was a woman medium here with us in 1940. Grace Lauter. She became convinced th pair of sisters haunted the house. She built a very convincing case for it. The only trouble wa she was wrong. She cut her throat the third day we were here."
"But Daniel Belasco does exist. We found his body, found his ring with his initials on it."
"We also put him to rest. _Why isn't he at rest, then?_" Florence shook her head. "I don't know." Her voice was faltering. "I just don't know."
"I'm sorry." He patted her hand. "I'm not trying to pick at you. I'm just concerned, that's all."
"Thank you, Ben." After several moments she smiled at him. "Benjamin Franklin Fischer," she said. "Whoever gave you such a name?"
"My father. He was nuts for Benjamin Franklin."
"Tell me about him."
"There's nothing to tell. He left my mother when I was two. I don't blame him. She must have driven him mad."

Florence's smile faded.
"She was a fanatic," Fischer said. "When I started showing signs of mediumship at nine, she devoted her existence to it." His smile was humorless. "My existence, too."
"Do you regret it?"

"I regret it."
"Truly, Ben?" She looked at him with deep concern.
Fischer smiled abruptly. "You said you were going to tell me about Hollywood when we settled down." His smile went wry. "Not that things have settled down much."
"It's a long story, Ben."
"We have time."
She gazed at him in silence. "All right," she finally said. "I'll tell you briefly."
Fischer waited, looking at her.
"Perhaps you read about it," Florence said. "The gossip columns made a lot of it at the time. _Confidential_ even did a story on the Spiritualist meetings I held in my home. They m sound like something else, of course.
"It wasn't, Ben. It was exactly what I claimed. As for the stories about me never marrying because I wanted to 'play the field,' as they called it, they weren't true either. I never married because I never met a man I wanted to marry."
"How did you become an actress?"
"I loved to act. When I was a child, I put on little shows for my parents and relatives. Later on, I joined the high-school drama club, a local theater group, majored in dramatics at college. The progression was remarkably smooth; it happens that way sometimes. A God-gi appearance, a combination of fortunate events." She smiled a little ruefully. "I was never a g success at it. I didn't apply myself enough. But there was never anything questionable, eithe dark past, no scars covering childhood wounds. I had a wonderful childhood. My parents lov and I loved them. They were Spiritualists; I became a Spiritualist."
"Were you an only child?"
"I had a brother. David. He died when he was seventeen--spinal meningitis." She looked into the past. "It was the only real sorrow of my life."
She smiled again. "It was the 'waning' of my career, they said, that made me 'flee' from Hollywood, 'turning to religion' for comfort. They always neglected to mention that I'd been a Spiritualist all my life. Actually, I blessed my fading career. It gave me the opportunity to do what I always knew I should do--devote myself exclusively to mediumship.
"I didn't fear Hollywood--or flee from it. There's nothing fearful about it. It's a location and an enterprise, nothing more. What those involved in it make of their lives is thei own choice. The so-called 'corrupting' influences are no greater than similar influences that exist in any line of work. It isn't the business that matters, but the corruptibility of those who enter it.

"Not that I was unaware of the moral vacuum which usually surrounded me. On crowded set at parties, I was often overwhelmed by the atmosphere of unwholesome tension in the air." S smiled, remembering. "One night, when I went to bed, I said the Lord's Prayer as I always do Suddenly I realized that what I'd said was 'Our Father which art in heaven, Hollywood be thy name.'" She shook her head in amusement. "I left within the month and came East to stay."
Fischer began to speak, then broke off as somewhere, faintly, in the distance, the cat yowled. _End of pleasant interlude_, he thought. Florence looked pained. "The wretched thi started to rise.
Fischer pressed her back against the pillows. "I'll look."
"But--"
"Rest." he told her, standing.
"Before you go, would you get my purse?"
Fischer walked across the room and got it for her. Florence opened it and removed a medallion, holding it out to him. Fischer took it. There was a single word engraved on it: BELIEVE.
"It's all within you if you do," she said.
He started to hand it back to her. "No, keep it," she said. "From me to you, with love."
Fischer forced a smile. "Thank you." He slipped the medallion into his pocket. "I'm really all right, though. Worry about yourself, not me."
"Will you sit with me after I rest?" she asked. "I've got to contact Daniel Belasco, and trance is the quickest way. But I don't want to sit alone."
"You won't consider leaving, then?"
"I can't, Ben, you know that." She paused. "Will you sit with me?"
Fischer looked at her uneasily. Finally he nodded. "Right."
He left the room without another word.

12:16 P.M.
The cool water rippling against his face felt good. The skin of his burned calf had contracted, making it painful to kick, but he didn't want to stop. Every time he lifted his right hand from the water, the pain in his thumb intensified. I need this, though, he thought. He ha been swimming for almost a week.
He reached the shallow end of the pool and stopped, holding on to the coping with his left hand. Edith was sitting on a wooden bench near the steam-room door. "Don't overdo," she s
"I won't. I'll just do two more laps."
Twisting around, Barrett began to swim again. He closed his eyes and listened to the splashing sounds his arms and feet made.

He wondered how badly the atmosphere of the house was affecting Edith. When he'd wake he'd tried to rise without disturbing her, but the moment he'd stirred, her eyes had opened.
There'd been a smell of brandy on her breath, and when he'd gotten up he'd seen a decante on the table, a small silver cup beside it. She'd told him that she'd found them in the cabinet and taken one cupful to relax. He'd put the decanter back in the cabinet, telling her she'd tak a serious risk drinking anything in this house. She'd promised not to touch any more.
Barrett's hand touched the far end of the pool and, turning, he started swimming back. We should be out of here by tomorrow night, he thought. If he could get the Reversor functioning without delay, he was certain they could leave by then. He smiled to himself, wondering if Ed had any concept at all how the Reversor was going to change the atmosphere of the house.
He reached the shallow end and stood up, hissing at the coldness of the air on his body.
Edith helped him up the steps and wrapped a towel around his shoulders. "Can you stand a minutes in the steam room?" he asked.
She nodded, handing him his cane.
"I think it would do me good."
"Yes. Go in." She pulled open the heavy door.
"You'd better remove your outer clothes," he told her.
"All right."
Barrett tossed the towel onto the wooden bench and limped inside the steam room as Edith let the door thud shut. He groaned in pleasure at the feeling of the wet heat on his body.
Breathing through his teeth, he felt around until he found a bench. The top of it was burning
He eased around the room, feeling with his cane, until it touched the hose. Moving his left ha along its length until he reached the wall, he turned the spigot once. Cold water gushed from end of the hose. Barrett washed it over the bench top and sat down, putting aside his cane.
Reaching down, he worked the bathing suit across his hips. It slithered down his legs, and h shook it off.
He looked toward the door. Edith was taking rather a long time. He frowned. He didn't want to stand again. Still, he mustn't leave her alone for more than seconds.
He was on the verge of getting to his feet when the door opened and he saw the outline of her figure. He was surprised to see that she had taken all her clothes off. As the door jarred shut, he said, "Over here." He'd have to remember to put in a brighter bulb. The one overhea either deficient in wattage or covered with grime; probably both.
Edith moved cautiously across the steam-obscured room. She made a faint sound as she walked through the gush of cold water. Barrett pulled the hose until the end was in his hand, washed off the bench beside himself, wincing as some of the water sprayed against his leg.
tossed down the hose, and Edith sat beside him. Barrett heard her drawing in erratic breaths trying not to let the hot air down her throat. "All right?" he asked.
She coughed. "I never could get used to breathing in steam rooms."

"Try putting water on your face and taking a breath as you do."
"I'm all right."
Barrett closed his eyes and felt the damp heat seeping into his flesh. He twitched as Edith's hand settled on his leg. He covered it with his. After several moments she leaned ov kissed his cheek. "I love you," she said.
Barrett put his arm across her shoulders. "I love you, too," he said. She kissed him on the cheek again, then on the corner of his lips. He felt a stirring in his body as she pressed h lips to his, moving her head as she kissed him. Barrett opened his eyes as one of her hands down his stomach. Edith? he thought.

After several moments she swung around and straddled him, her lips never leaving his. He felt her hot, slick stomach thrust against his. Reaching down, she took hold of his sex and be to rub it against herself. Barrett's breath began to labor. The hot air seared his throat and chest. He made a startled sound as she dug her teeth into his lower lip. He could smell the b on her breath.
Her lips ran across his cheek, her tongue trailing over the skin. "Make it hard," she whispered in his ear. Her voice was almost fierce. Barrett caught his breath as she grabbed injured hand and pulled it up against her breast. He jerked it back as fiery pain ran up his wrist. "_Don't!_" she ordered, clutching it again.
"My thumb!" he cried. The pain was so severe, his vision started blurring. He could hardly breathe, his lungs struggling with the scalding air. Edith didn't seem to hear. She clutched at his organ, groaning so loudly it made Barrett's heartbeat leap. "For Christ's sake, make it ha she cried. She jammed her lips on his again.
Barrett couldn't breathe. Gagging, he jerked his head back, slamming it against the tile wall. He cried out in new pain, his face contorted. Edith fell against him, sobbing. Barrett trie to catch his breath. "Edith," he gasped.
She wrenched to her feet and turned away. "Don't," he muttered, reaching for her dazedly. He felt a rush of cold air as she opened the door, saw her outline vaguely. Then the door thu shut again.
Wincing, he bent over, feeling for the hose. He rubbed cold water on his face, drawing in a breath through clenched teeth. My God, what's come over her? he thought. He knew that curtailment of their sex life must have had a damaging effect on her, but she'd never shown like this. The house _must_ be affecting her. Standing groggily with his cane, he inched his across the steam-filled room, grimacing at the increase of heat on his face. The ceiling bulb all but disappeared from view now, no more than a spot of pale light overhead. Barrett reach door and felt for the handle. Finding it, he closed his fingers over it and pushed. The door he fast. He pushed it harder. The door wouldn't move. His features tightened. Clutching the har hard as he could, he pushed again.

The door refused to budge.
A flicker of uneasiness oppressed him. Barrett willed it off. "Edith?" he called. He hit the door with the palm of his left hand. "Edith, the door is stuck!"
There was no reply. _My God, she didn't go upstairs_, he thought with sudden dread. He pushed at the handle again. The door was wedged in its frame. The heat and dampness, he himself; the door had warped, expanded. "Edith!" he called. He pounded on the door with his
"What _is_ it?" he heard her answer faintly.
"The door is stuck! Try to open it from your side!"
He waited. There was a thump on the door, and he felt it stir. He grabbed the handle again and pulled with all his strength as she thrust her weight against the door on the other side. The door held.
"What are we going to do?" he heard her ask. She sounded frightened.
Could she possibly use the bench to batter open the door? No, it was too heavy. Barrett scowled. The heat seemed to be getting worse. He'd better turn it off.
"Lionel?"
"I'm all right!" He lowered himself gingerly to his left knee to get below the worst of the heat. He made a worried sound. Well, there was no other way. He couldn't stay in here. better get Fischer!" he called.
"_What?_" He couldn't tell if she hadn't heard or was appalled by what he'd said.
"_You 'd-better-get-Fischer!_" Silence. Barrett knew the thought of going alone through the house was terrifying to her.
"It's the only way!" he shouted.
Edith didn't answer for a long time. Then he heard her call. "All right! I'll be right back!"
Barrett remained motionless for a while. He hoped to God she didn't run into anything. In her mental state, it could be catastrophic. He scowled. I can't just stay like this, he thought. I'd better turn off that steam.
He looked abruptly to his right; he thought he'd heard a sound. There was nothing but swirling steam. He stared at it with slitted eyes. It was thick and white and coiling, and made shapes. A person with an uncontrolled imagination might see all sorts of things in it.
Barrett hissed. "Ridiculous." He stood and edged his way across the floor until his shins bumped against the edge of the wooden bench. Kneeling again, he reached beneath the be tap wheel. He couldn't find it and began to crawl along the bench, feeling for it.

He froze. He was certain that he'd heard something this time, a kind of--_slithering_ noise? Barrett shivered despite the heat. "Ridiculous," he muttered. He continued crawling. I wonder this house had claimed so many victims. Its atmosphere was incredibly conducive to delusions. The sound he'd heard was probably coming from the tap wheel he was searching escape of steam, probably too much pressure. It was getting awfully hot in here.

His hand came in contact with the tap wheel, and he felt a burst of relief. He tried to turn the wheel, but it stuck. He fought off premonition, gritting his teeth against the pain in his leg as he wrapped both hands around the wheel. "Stuck," he said aloud, as though to co somebody in the room that the problem was a normal one. He strained the muscles of his ar back, trying to revolve the wheel.
It wouldn't move.
"Oh, no." He swallowed, flinching at the scorch of air in his throat and chest. This is not good, definitely not good, he thought. Still, it was a physical problem: a door stuck in its frame, a steam valve stuck--things to be expected in an old house. Edith would be back with Fischer in a few moments. If worse came to worst, he could lie on the floor and wash his fac with the water while--
He jerked around. The noise again, too definite to be imagination. It _was_ a slithering noise, no doubt of it, like the stirring of some torpid serpent on the floor. Barrett's face hardened. Come _on_, he told himself, don't go childish on me now. He turned around slowl leaning his back against the bench and trying to see through the steam. If it _was_ some phenomenon, he had only to keep his wits about him. There was nothing in the house that c him so long as he didn't panic.
He listened carefully, wincing at the throb of pain in his thumb. After what seemed to be a minute or more, he heard the sound again, a liquid, sliding noise. He imagined lava pourin slowly down a coal chute, splattering like smoky gruel into a bin. He shuddered. "_Stop_ it," ordered himself. He was reacting as credulously as Miss Tanner now.
The hose! he thought abruptly. If wet heat could cause the door to warp out of shape, wet coldness might reverse the process. He began to feel around for the hose.
He heard the sound again, ignored it this time. _Psi phenomena abound in realms of credulity_. The sentence flashed across his mind. Precisely, he thought. He gulped in breath without thinking, groaning at the fire of it in his throat and chest. Where the hell was that damned hose, anyway? The tile floor was beginning to hurt both legs now.
He felt the gush of water then and made a sound of gruff satisfaction. He reached for the hose, edging his hand across the floor.
He cried out, jerking back his hand. It had touched what felt like hot slime. Barrett held his hand to his face and looked at it. The light was very dim; he had to squint. He felt his heartbeat catch. There seemed to be a kind of darkish ooze clinging to his palm and fingers a gagging sound, he reached down quickly, rubbing his palm on the floor. What in God's nar Melted grout from between the tiles? Some sort of--?
He jerked around so fast it made his neck hurt. He stared into the roiling steam, heartbeat jolting. The sound had started up again, louder now, moving toward him. Barrett d back unconsciously, trying to see. He rubbed his hand across his eyes without thinking, sme some of the slime on his face. He made an angry, sickened noise and rubbed it off with his l hand. It had a vaguely familiar smell. Where the hell is she? he suddenly thought. For an ins he felt a rush of panic as he imagined her not telling anyone, leaving him imprisoned here be of what had happened between them.

"No," he muttered. That was ludicrous. She'd be back any moment. He'd better get to the door and wait. He wavered to his feet and moved haltingly away from the sound, visualizing gigantic jellyfish heaving its transparent, quivering bulk across the floor at him. "That's enough," he muttered, furious at himself. He had to get to the door. He stared into the steam couldn't see which way the door was. The noise continued--a dragging, soggy noise. Barrett chill of dread lace up his back. He'd best prepare himself. He mustn't panic.
He cried out in shock as his feet sank into hot, thick slime. He started jumping back and slipped, landing on his left elbow and crying out again as jagged pain shot up his arm. He wr in agony on the floor.
Suddenly he felt the slime push up against his side like heated gelatin. He thrashed away from it, the odor welling over him. It was the smell of rot--_the odor of the tarn!_ It's come inside! his mind cried, terrified. He flung himself to his knees. The door; where was the door guessed and, shoving to his feet, hobbled clumsily in that direction.
Something blocked his way--something near the floor that had size and bulk and was alive.
With a cry of horror, Barrett fell across it. It reared up, shoving him onto his back, hot and jellylike, reeking of stagnation. Barrett screamed as it flopped across his legs. He struck out wildly with his left foot, feeling it sink into muculent slime, then strike what felt like skin the texture of cooked mushroom.

Suddenly it was before his eyes, bulbous, glistening darkly. "No!" he screamed. He kicked at it again, thrashing back across the floor, until his back slammed violently against the door
He felt the ropy form start oozing up his legs adhesively. Shrieks of terror flooded from his lips. The room began to swirl and darken. He could not dislodge the glutinous weight. He fel hotness of it sucking at his flesh.
Suddenly the door was shoving in behind him, pushing him directly into the gelatinous form. It struck his face; his screaming mouth was filled with turgid jelly. Coldness washed ac his side. He felt hands slip beneath his arms. He thought he heard Edith screaming. Someon started dragging him across the floor. Looking up, he made out Fischer's face above him, pa indistinct. Just before he lost consciousness, Barrett saw his body. There was nothing on it.
12:47 P.M.
Fischer gulped down coffee, holding the cup with both hands. Once again the couple from Caribou Falls had come and gone, unseen.
He'd been in the theater, searching for the cat, when he'd heard Mrs. Barrett's shouting.
Rushing to the entry hall, he'd met her, and she'd told him, frightenedly, that her husband wa locked in the steam room.

In there; he'd suddenly remembered Florence's words. Without a word, he'd dashed downstairs, shoved through the swinging doors, and raced along the side of the pool, the ra padding of his tennis shoes echoing off the walls and ceiling.
He'd heard Barrett's screams before he reached the steam-room door. He'd jarred to a halt and almost turned around when Mrs. Barrett had come running in. He'd been unable to retre her look of panic. Turning back, he'd sprinted to the steam-room door and thrown his weight against it, to no avail. Mrs. Barrett had come rushing up behind him, begging him to save he husband, her voice unnatural, shrill.
Grabbing one end of the wooden bench against the wall, he'd dragged it to the steam-room door and rammed it hard against it. Immediately the door had given, and dropping the bench shoved the door in. Inside, Barrett's screams had cut off suddenly, and Fischer had felt his weight against the door and reached around to grab him in the burning steam and pull him o forced to strain every muscle because of Barrett's weight. By then Barrett's wife was shakin uncontrollably, her face almost gray. Somehow the two of them had managed to get Barrett and put him on his bed. Fischer had offered to help put Barrett's pajamas on, but Mrs. Barre a tight, almost inaudible voice, had told him she could do it. He'd left immediately and come downstairs.
He set down the empty cup and covered his eyes with his left hand, mind a jumble of confusions. The unlocked door that had been locked by the time they'd reached the house. restored electrical system that had failed to work. Florence's inability to enter the chapel. Th record playing by itself. The cold breeze on the stairs. The tinkling chandelier. The pounding noises during the séance; Florence suddenly, inexplicably, becoming a physical medium. Th at the séance; its hysterical warning to them. The poltergeist attack. Mrs. Barrett being led to the tarn in her sleep; removing her pajamas; acting so peculiarly this morning. The bites on Florence's breasts. The body in the wall; the ring. The attack on Florence by the cat. Now th attack on Barrett in the steam room.
He slumped back in the chair. Nothing fitted, he thought. Nothing added up. They were exactly nowhere in their quest. But Florence was being torn apart emotionally and physicall Barrett was losing control. Barrett had been violently assaulted twice. And, as for himself--
His mind leaped back, remembering. Faces sprang before him: Grace Lauter's, Dr. Graham Professor Rand's, and Fenley's. Grace Lauter working by herself, convinced that she, alone solve the mystery of Hell House; not even talking to the rest of them. Him working with Dr. G and Professor Rand, who, in turn, refused to work with Professor Fenley because he was a Spiritualist and not a "man of science."
Three demoralizing days before it ended. Grace Lauter with her throat cut by her own hand; Dr. Graham, dead drunk, wandering outdoors to perish in the woods; Professor Rand dying cerebral hemorrhage after an experience in the ballroom he'd been unable to describe befor died; Professor Fenley still in Medview Sanatorium, hopelessly insane. Himself found naked front porch, horror-ridden, old before his time.

"And now I'm back," he muttered in a trembling voice. "I'm _back_." He closed his eyes and couldn't stop from shaking. _How?_ he thought. I'm not afraid to try, but how do I begin? A r of bewilderment clamped his muscles suddenly. Jerking open his eyes, he grabbed his cup it far across the room. _It's too damn complicated!_ screamed his mind.
1:57 P.M.
She blinked her eyes. Lionel was awake. She put her hand in his. "Are you all right?"
He nodded, didn't smile. Edith forced control into her voice. "I'll pack our bags," she said. She waited. Lionel returned her look without expression.
"We'll go today," she said.
"I want you to go."
Edith stared at him. "We'll both go, Lionel."
"Not until I'm finished."
She couldn't believe it, even though she'd anticipated his response. Her lips twitched, words unspoken stammering in her mind.
"You go into Caribou Falls," he told her. "I'll join you tomorrow."
"Lionel, I want both of us to go."
"Edith--"
"No. I don't want to hear a word. You can't convince me, anymore, you know what's happening. You would have died down there if Fischer hadn't come. You would have been k
. . _what?_ By _what?_ We have to go before this house destroys us all. _Now_, Lionel. _N
"Listen to me," he said. "I know it's gone beyond the point of endurance for you. It hasn't for me, however. I'm not going to let what happened frighten me away. I've waited twe years for this. Twenty long years of work and research, and I'm not about to lose it all becau of--something in a steam room."
Edith stared at him, a pulsing at her temple.
"It was a shock," he said. "I admit it. It was a terrible shock. I've never experienced anything remotely like it in my life. But it was not the dead. You hear me, Edith? _It was not dead_."
He closed his eyes. "Please," he said. "Go into Caribou Falls. Fischer will drive you there. I'll join you tomorrow."
He opened his eyes after a while and looked at her. "Tomorrow, Edith. After twenty years, there's only one more day before I prove my theory. _One more day_. I can't retreat when I'm close. What happened was ghastly, yes, but I can't, I _won't_ let it chase me away." His han closed tightly over hers. "_I'd rather die than leave_."
The room was still. Edith felt her heartbeat like a slow, erratic drumbeat in her chest.

"Tomorrow," she said.
"I swear to you I'll end the reign of terror in this house by then."
She stared at him, feeling lost and helpless. She had no faith of her own remaining. She could only cling to his. God help us if you're wrong, she thought.
2:21 P.M.
"O Spirit of Immortal Truth," Florence began, "help us, this day, to rise above the doubts and fears of this life. Open our natures to mighty revelations. Give us eyes to see, and ears hear. Bless us in our efforts to lift the darkness from the world."
The bathroom light cast dim illumination on the place where they sat. Florence sat in the chair beside the table, eyes closed, hands on her lap, knees and feet pressed tightly togethe Fischer had pulled the other chair across the floor and sat facing her at a distance of four fe
"The sweetest expression of spiritual life is service," Florence was saying. "We offer ourselves for the service of the spirits. May they find us ready, and may they, so that naught impede our free expression, commune with us this day and reveal their light to us. Most of a may they impart to us the power to communicate with that tortured soul who still hovers in th place, unsanctified, imprisoned: Daniel Belasco." She raised her face. "Attend us, ministerin angels. Help us in our effort to lift the burden from this soul. All this we ask in the name of the Eternal and Most Everlasting Spirit. Amen."

There was momentary silence. Fischer heard the crackling noise his throat made as he swallowed. Then Florence began to sing: "'Sweet souls around us, watch us still. Press nea our side. Into our thoughts, into our prayers, with gentle helpings glide.'"
When the song was ended, Florence began to take in deep breaths, drawing air into her lungs convulsively through clenched teeth as she rubbed both hands over her body. Soon h fell open, and her head began to loll back. The heavy breathing continued. Florence slouche in the chair, head rolling from side to side. At last she was still.
Minutes passed. Fischer began to shiver. Coldness was starting to gather between them, rising slowly like ice water, until he felt as though he were submerged to the waist in it.
He twitched as faint spots of light began to appear in front of Florence. _Focuses of condensation_; the phrase drifted across his mind. He stared at the spots as they grew in si number, hovering in the air in front of Florence like a galaxy of pale, miniature suns. His legs felt almost numb now. Soon, he thought.
His fingers dug into the chair arms as teleplasm started oozing from the medium's nostrils. The viscous filaments resembled twin gray serpents gliding downward from her nos Fischer watched in dry-mouthed silence, they joined to form a heavier coil, which started to unravel, then began to rise and cover Florence's face. Fischer lowered his eyes. He heard a like rustling paper, closed his eyes.
The smell of ozone penetrated his nostrils like the odor of a badly chlorinated swimming pool. Compelled, he opened his eyes and looked up, wincing. The teleplasm had covered Fl head, hanging over it like a wet, filmy sack. As he stared at it, he saw it being shaped as tho by some invisible sculptor, the eye pits pressed in, a ridge of nose appearing, nostrils, ears, line of mouth. In less than a minute, it was complete; the face of a young man, dark-haired, handsome, grave in its expression.

Fischer cleared his throat. His heartbeat felt unreal. "Have you a voice?" he asked.

There was a labored, gurgling noise like the sound of a death rattle. Fischer felt his skin crawl. After half a minute, the sound stopped, and there was silence again.

"Can you speak now?" Fischer asked.

"I can." The voice was undeniably masculine.

Fischer hesitated, then drew in a quick breath. "Who are you?"

"Daniel Belasco." The lips of the face did not move, but the voice was coming from the pallid features of the young man.

"Was it your body we found behind the wall of the wine cellar this morning?"

"It was."

"We gave you proper services outside. Why are you still here?"

"I cannot leave."

"Why?"

There was no answer.

"Why?"

No answer. Fischer clutched his hands together on his lap. "Did you have anything to do with the attack on Doctor Barrett in the steam room?"

"No."

"Who did it, then?"

There was no answer.

"Did you attack Doctor Barrett in the dining hall last night?" Fischer asked.

"I did not."

"Who did?"

Silence.

"Did you bite Miss Tanner this morning?"

"I did not."

"Who did?"

Silence.

"Did you possess the cat to attack her?"

"I did not."

"Who did, then?"

Silence.

"Who did, then?" Fischer persisted. "Who attacked Doctor Barrett? Who bit Miss Tanner? W possessed the cat?"

Silence.
"Who?" demanded Fischer.
"Cannot say."
"Why not?"
"Cannot."
"Why?"
Silence.
"You have to tell me. Who attacked Doctor Barrett in the dining hall and steam room? Who bit Miss Tanner? Who possessed the cat?"
He heard a quickening of breath.
"Who?" he demanded.
"Cannot--"
"You have to tell me."
The voice began to plead. "Cannot--"
"Who?" asked Fischer.
"Cannot say--"
"Who?"
"Please--"
"Who?"
He heard something like a sob.
"Him," said the voice.
"Who?"
"Him."
"_Who?_"
"Him. Him!"
"_Who?_"
"_Him!_" cried the voice. "The Giant! Him! Father, Father!"
Fischer sat in rigid silence as the face lost form, the teleplasm rippling. Suddenly it began to steam back into Florence's nostrils. As it vanished, Fischer heard her moan with pa less than seven seconds it was gone.
He sat immobile for almost a minute before standing. He felt numb as he walked into the bathroom, ran some water into a glass, and carried it back into the bedroom, standing motio beside the chair until she opened her eyes.
After she had drunk the water in one long swallow, he moved to the wall switch and turned on the hanging lamp beside her bed.
He sank down heavily on the chair across from hers.

"Did he come through?" she asked.
As he told her what had happened, her expression tensed to one of deep excitement.
"_Belasco_," she said. "Of course. Of _course_. We should have realized it."
Fischer did not respond.
"Daniel would never have hurt me. He would never have hurt Doctor Barrett. I _knew_ it couldn't have been him, despite the evidence; it simply didn't _feel_ right. He's as much a vi of the house as anyone." She looked at Fischer's unconvinced expression. "Don't you see?" said. "_He's being kept here by his father_."
Fischer regarded her in silence, wanting to believe what she was saying but afraid to commit his mind.
"Don't you see?" she asked him eagerly. "They're warring together, Daniel trying to escape from Hell House, his father doing everything he can to prevent it by trying to turn me against Daniel, trying to make me believe that Daniel means me harm, when he doesn't. When all h -"
She stopped so quickly that Fischer's eyes narrowed. "Wants _what?_" he asked.
"My help."
"That's not what you were going to say."
"Yes, it was. I'm the only one who can help. I'm the only one he trusts. Don't you see?"
Fischer eyed her guardedly. "I hope I do," he said.
3:47 P.M.

Edith sat up and slid her legs across the mattress edge. Reaching out, she picked up Lionel's watch from the table and raised its lid. Nearly four o'clock. How could he possibly ge his machine ready by tomorrow?
She stared at him as he slept, wondering if he still believed everything he said. Somehow, she had the uncomfortable feeling that he was no longer as confident as he claimed. Not tha would ever show it, not even to her. When it came to his work, he was a man of unrelenting always had been.
Standing abruptly, Edith moved to the cabinet and opened the door. All right, both of them had warned her. Nothing had happened, had it? The brandy had relaxed her, nothing more. going to stay in this house until tomorrow, she was damned well going to take a few steps to that stay endurable.
She carried the decanter and one of the silver cups to the table. Setting down the cup, she pulled out the decanter top and poured the cup full of brandy. Picking up the cup, she dr its contents with a swallow. She threw her head back, eyes closed, mouth open wide, suckin air as brandy scalded down her throat. It was like pouring hot syrup into her chest and stoma Heat pulsed outward, radiating through her veins.
She poured herself another cupful, took a sip of it, and eased herself onto the table, pushing aside the box with Lionel's manuscript in it. She took another sip of brandy, then swallowed the entire cupful, head laid back again, eyes closed, a look of sensual enjoyment face.

She thought about being in the steam room with Lionel, trying not to face the nagging qualm that, beyond a certain point, she'd been infuriated at his impotence, as if, somehow, i were his fault and not that of the polio. She tightened, thinking that the real reason he wante her to go to Caribou Falls was that he didn't want to be annoyed by her needs; that he wante concentrate on his machine.

She blinked. That was a terrible thing to think of Lionel. If he'd been able to, he would have made love to her.

Would he? her mind demanded. Or did he really care at all whether they ever had sex?

With an impulsive movement, she reached around for the decanter, knocking the box off the table, spilling pages of the manuscript across the rug. She started to get up, then, with a frow ignored it. Let it lie, she thought. I'll get it later. She closed her eyes, emptying another cupful of brandy into her mouth and swallowing it.

She slipped off the table, almost fell. I'm _drunk_, she thought. A momentary pang of guilt assailed her. Mom was right, I am like him, she thought. She fought it off. I'm _not!_ she told her unseen mother; I'm a good girl. "_Hell_--" She scowled. I'm not a girl at all, I'm a woman. With desires. He should know that. He's not _that_ old. Or that impotent. It was his religious mother, not the polio. It was--

She frowned away the thought, weaving across the bedroom toward the cabinet. Her limbs felt warm and silky, and there was a lovely numbness in her head. They were wrong; getting was the only answer. She thought about the cabinet of liquor in the kitchen. Maybe she'd ge bottle of bourbon from it--maybe two bottles. Maybe she'd just drink herself insensible until tomorrow came.

She removed the hollowed book so quickly that it slipped from her fingers and thudded on the rug, the photographs scattering. She sank to her knees and started looking at them one She licked her upper lip unconsciously. She stared at a photograph of the two women lying great hall table, performing mutual cunnilingus. The room seemed to get hotter and hotter. Abruptly she flung away the photograph as though it was burning her fingers. "_No_," she muttered frightenedly. She started, looking back toward Lionel as he stirred, then pushed clu to her feet and looked around the bedroom like a cornered animal.

She walked across the room quickly. Opening the door, she moved into the hall and closed the door, flinching at the noise; she'd meant to be more quiet. Shaking her head to clear it, s walked to Fischer's room.

He wasn't there. Edith stared into his room and wondered what to do. Closing the door, she turned and started back along the hallway, drifting to her left until she reached the banister rail. She held on to it for balance as she headed for the staircase. For some strange reason, house did not seem frightening to her. Further proof that alcohol was just the thing, she thou

She had the sensation of floating down the staircase. Vaguely she recalled some film about the South she'd seen at a revival. All she could remember clearly was some woman in hoop gliding down the stairs as though she were descending on a track. She felt the same way. S wondered why she felt so confident.

A glimmer, faint, too fleeting to be captured. Edith blinked and hesitated. Nothing. She continued down the stairs. He's in the great hall, she decided. He was always where the cof was. She couldn't recall ever seeing him eat. No wonder he was so thin.
As she crossed the entry hall, she heard a sound of splintering wood. Again she stopped. She hesitated, then moved forward once again. Of course, she thought. She smiled. She'd s so fuzzy in her life. She closed her eyes. I'm floating, said her mind. Father and daughter, drunks forever.
She stopped in the archway and leaned against it dizzily. She blinked her eyes, refocusing with effort. Fischer had his back to her. He was using the crowbar to pry apart the crate. Tha sweet, she thought.
She started as Fischer spun around, the crowbar raised as though to strike at some attacker. He whirled so quickly that the cigarette between his lips arced to the floor.
"_Kamerad_," she said. She raised her arms as though surrendering.
Fischer stared at her without a sound. She saw his chest rise and fall with agitated breath. "Are you angry?" she began to say.
He cut her off. "What the hell are you doing here?"
"Nothing." She pushed off from the archway and started toward him weavingly.
"Are you _drunk?_" He sounded stunned.
"I've had a few drinks, if that's any of your business."
Fischer dumped the crowbar on the table, moving toward her. "Lionel will be pleased that you--" She gestured airily toward the machine.
Fischer reached her, took her arm. "Come on."
She pulled away from him. "Come on, yourself." She staggered slightly, then regained her balance, turning toward the machine.
"Mrs. Barrett--"
"Edith."
Fischer took her arm again. "Come _on_. You shouldn't leave your husband."
"He's all right. He's sleeping."
Fischer tried to turn her, but she wouldn't do it. Snickering, she pulled away from him again. "For Christ's sake!" he snapped.
A teasing smile drew back her lips. "No, not for his sake." Fischer looked at her confusedly.

As she started toward the table, the room was nebulous around her, and she had the vague impression it was filled with people standing just beyond the limits of her vision. That's imagination, said her mind. All there is in here is mindless energy.
She reached the table and rubbed a finger on its surface. Fischer rejoined her. "You've got to go upstairs."
"No, I don't." She took hold of his right hand. Fischer pulled it away. Edith smiled and rubbed her finger on the table again. "This is where they met," she said.
"Who?"
"Les Aphrodites. Here. Around this table."
Fischer took her arm again. Edith jerked it in against herself so that his hand was pinned against her breast. "Here. Around this table," she repeated.
"You don't know what you're saying." Fischer pulled his hand away.
"I know exactly what I'm saying. Mr. Fischer." Edith snickered. "Mr. B. F. Fischer."
"Edith--"
He tightened as she pushed against him, sliding her arms around him. "Don't you like me at all?" she asked. "I know I'm not as beautiful as Florence, but I--"
"Edith, it's the house. It's making you--"
"_The house is doing nothing_," she broke in. "_I'm_ doing it."
He tried to pull away her arms. She pressed against him harder. "Are you impotent too?" she teased.
Fischer wrenched her arms loose, pushing her away. "Wake up!" he shouted.
Fury burst inside her. "Don't tell _me_ to wake up! _You_ wake up!--you sexless bastard."
Edith stumbled back against the table, wriggled up on top of it, and yanked her skirt with cla fingers. "What's the matter, little man?" she jeered. "Never had a woman?" Grabbing at her front, she jerked it open, popping buttons. Dragging aside the edges, she undid the front hoo her bra and, clutching at her breasts with palsied fingers, held them up, a look of furious derision on her face. "What's the _matter_, little man?" she ranted. "Never had a tit before? _Try_ it! It's delicious!"

Sliding off the table, she advanced on Fischer, fingers gouging at her breasts. "Suck them," she said, her voice trembling with hatred. Her face convulsed with sudden fury. "Suc you fairy bastard, or I'll get myself a woman who will!"
His head jerked sideways. Edith scanned the movement, and a sudden weight crashed dow her.
Lionel was standing in the archway.
A wave of darkness billowed up at her. Her legs gave way; she started falling. Fischer leaped to catch her. "No!" she screamed. She twisted to the left and fell against a marble sta on a pedestal. She caught at it; the cold stone pressed against her breasts. It seemed as tho the face was leering at her Edith cried out as the weight of it fell backward from her grasp ar shattered on the floor. She landed on her knees and toppled forward.

Darkness swallowed her.
4:27 P.M.
Somewhere there was music playing, slowly, tenderly; a waltz. She was dancing to the music, gliding through a kind of mist. Was she in the ballroom? She could not be sure. Her partner's face was indistinct, yet she felt certain it was Daniel's. She could feel his arm arour her and his left hand holding out her right. It was warm. There was a scent of flowers in the a roses, she decided. A summer dance. A small string orchestra performing. Florence danced languorous circles with her partner.
"Are you happy?" he asked.
"Yes," she murmured. "Very."
Was she on a set? Was that it? Was she making a film? She tried to recall but couldn't. Still, how could it be a film? It was all too real; no camera, no banks of lights, no fourth wall missing and the crew in sight, the sound man at his board. No, it was a real ballroom. Floren tried again to see her partner's face, but couldn't focus her eyes. "Daniel?" she murmured.
"My dear?"
"It _is_ you," Florence said.
She saw him then, his grave face very handsome, very gentle. His arm drew tight around her. "I love you," he said.
"And I love you."
"You'll never leave me? Always be beside me?"
"Yes, my darling, always; always."
Florence closed her eyes. The music quickened, and she felt herself being swept around the ballroom floor. She heard the rustling of a hundred skirts, the ballroom filled with dancers, lovers. Florence smiled. And she loved, too; loved Daniel. Daniel held her safely as they dar She scarcely felt her feet; she seemed to float.
She felt a scented breeze across her face and smiled again. He'd danced her out onto the wide veranda. Overhead, the sky was filled with stars, like diamond fragments sprinkled on l velvet; she didn't have to look to know that they were there. The moon was full, pale silver, glowing. It shed soft radiance on the garden just beyond. She didn't have to look; she knew. she been drinking wine? She felt intoxicated. No; it was intoxication of the spirit. It was joy and love, sweet music playing in the distance as she waltzed with her beloved Daniel, arour around, dancing slowly toward--
He shouted. "No!"
Florence gasped in shock, all senses flooded. Daniel stood before her in the mist, whiteface frightened, gesturing for her to stop. Icy water numbed her feet and ankles, cold wind scored her face, the smell of rot assailed her nostrils; crying out, she staggered back and fel

Something seemed to rush away behind her. Florence thrashed around and caught a mome someone very tall and dressed in black vanishing into the mist.
She shuddered as the freezing air sliced deep into her flesh. She lay beside the tarn.
She had been walking into it.
With a sound of sickened dread, she pushed up, started running for the house. Her shoes were wet, the bottoms of her stockings. Shivering, she dashed along the gravel path. The bl face of the house loomed darkly from the mist. She ran across the gravel, up the steps. The doorway yawned. She ran inside and slammed the door, falling back against it.
She was shaking from the cold, from fright. She couldn't stop herself. _She'd almost walked into the tarn_. The knowledge horrified her.

She started as a figure hurried down the hallway from the kitchen. It was Fischer, with a glass in his hand. Seeing her, he stopped a moment, then advanced again. "What happened asked.
"Is that whiskey?"
Fischer nodded.
"Let me have some."
He handed her the glass, and Florence drank, choking as the liquor scalded down her throat. She handed back the glass.
"What happened?" Fischer asked.
"He tried to kill me."
"Who?"
"_Belasco_," she said. She clutched at his arm. "I _saw_ him, Ben. I actually caught a glimpse of him as he left me by the tarn."
She told him what had happened, how Belasco had made her think she was dancing in the ballroom with Daniel, while he'd led her to the tarn to drown her. How Daniel had warned he the moment she was going in.
"How did Belasco get control of you?" he asked.
"I must have dozed off. I was tired after sitting, after everything that's happened today."
Fischer looked ill. "If he can get you in your sleep now--"
"_No_." She shook her head. "He won't again. I'm warned now. I'll retain my strength." She shivered. "Can we go in by the fire?"
When they were sitting in front of the fire, her shoes and stockings off, her feet propped on a stool, a new log crackling on the fire, Florence said, "I think I know the secret of Hell House, Ben."
Fischer didn't speak for almost half a minute. "Do you?" he asked then.
"It's Belasco."

"How?"
"He safeguards the haunting of his house by reinforcing it," she said. "By acting as a hidden aide for every other haunting force."
Fischer did not respond, but she could tell from the sudden flare of interest in his eyes that she had gotten through to him. He sat up slowly, as though uncoiling, his eyes fixed on
"Think of it, Ben," she said. "_Controlled multiple haunting_. Something absolutely unique in haunted houses: a surviving will so powerful that he can use that power to dominate every surviving personality in the house."
"You think the others are aware of it?" he asked.
"I don't know about the others. All I know is that his son is. If he weren't, he couldn't have saved my life.
"It all fits, Ben," she said. "It's been Belasco from the start. He's the one who's kept me from the chapel. He's the one who tried to keep me from discovering Daniel's body last n He's the one who made it seem that Daniel had bitten me, the one who possessed the cat. H one who caused the poltergeist attack on Doctor Barrett, trying to turn us against each other He's the one who's keeping Daniel's soul imprisoned here.
"Think of what fantastic power he possesses, Ben. To actually be capable of keeping another's spirit from progression, _despite_ a consecrated burial. Maybe it's because Daniel his son, but, even so, it's incredible."
She leaned back in her chair, looking at the flames. "He's like a general with his army. Never entering the battle, but always controlling it."
"How can he be hurt, then? Generals don't get killed in war."
"We'll hurt him by decreasing the size of his army until he has no one left, until he has to fight his war alone." She looked at him with challenge in her eyes. "A general without an a is nothing."
"But we have only till Sunday."
Florence shook her head. "I'm staying here until the job is done," she said.
She closed the door and moved immediately to her bed. Kneeling beside it, she offered up a prayer of gratitude for the enlightenment which had been given her, a prayer of request for strength to deal with what she had discovered.
When the prayers were ended, she rose and moved into the bathroom to cleanse her ankles and feet; there was still a residue of odor from the tarn on them. As she washed and dried th she thought about the massive project which lay ahead: to release the earthbound spirits fro house, against the will of Emeric Belasco. It almost seemed too much to accomplish.

"But I will," she said aloud, as though Belasco listened. She'd have to be alert, though.
What Ben had said was true. "You've been fooled before," he'd said. "Make sure you aren't again."

"I'll be careful," she'd replied.
She would. She recognized the sense in what he'd said. How thoroughly she had been foole last night into believing that, perhaps, she'd been responsible for the poltergeist attack on Dr Barrett. How thoroughly she had been fooled this morning into thinking that Daniel was resp for the bites and for the cat's attack on her. She must not allow herself to be fooled again. Daniel had not been responsible for any of those things. He was tormented, not tormentor.
Florence closed her eyes, hands clasped in front of her. Daniel, listen now, she whispered in her mind. I thank you, with all my heart, for saving my life. But don't you see what it mean If you can thwart your father's will in that way, you can also thwart it by departing from this house. You don't have to stay here any longer. You're free to go if only you believe. Your fat has no power to hold you prisoner. Ask for the help of those beyond, and it will come to you. _can_ leave this house. You _can!_
Florence opened her eyes abruptly. Moving to the Spanish table, she opened her purse. She took out a pad and pencil, laid the pad on the table, picked up the pencil, and held its point against the paper. Instantly it started moving. She closed her eyes and felt it writing by itself tugging her hand this way and that. In seconds it stopped, and the feeling of control drained her hand. She looked at the pad.
"No!" She tore the top sheet off and crumpled it into a ball, flinging it to the floor,
"No, Daniel! No!"
She stood beside the table, trembling, staring at the paper, the words engraved on her mind.
One way only.
6:11 P.M.
Fischer stood at the edge of the tarn, shining his flashlight at the turbid surface of the water. Twice now, he was thinking. Edith first, then Florence. He moved the cone of light acr the water, grimacing at the stench which hovered over it. Once when he'd been working in a hospital, an old man had died of gangrenous wounds on his back. The smell of his room had like this.
He looked around. Footsteps were approaching through the mist. Abruptly he switched off his flashlight and turned. Who was it? Florence? Surely she would not be coming back after had happened. Barrett or his wife? He couldn't believe that they'd come out here either. Who then? Fischer tensed as the footsteps drew closer. He could not determine their origin in the mist. He waited, rigid, heartbeat thudding.
They were on him suddenly. Seeing the glow of a lantern, he flicked on his flashlight.
There was a strangled gasp. Fischer stared with blank confusion at the two gaunt faces in h light.
"_Who's that?_" the old man asked. His voice was trembling.
Fischer caught his breath and lowered the beam of light. "I'm sorry," he said. "I'm one of the four."

The old woman released a breath which sounded like a groan. "Lord," she muttered.
"I'm sorry, I was startled, too," Fischer apologized, "I didn't realize what time it was."
"You scared the livin' breath from us," the old man said resentfully.
"Sorry." Fischer turned away.
The couple mumbled indistinctly as they trailed him to the house. Fischer held the door for them, then followed as they hurried across the entry hall, looking around uneasily. They w wearing heavy overcoats, the woman a woolen scarf on her head, the man a battered gray f
"How are things in the world?" asked Fischer.
"Mmm," the man responded. The old woman made a sound of disapproval.
"No matter," Fischer said. "We have our own world here."
He moved behind them into the great hall, observing as they set the covered dishes on the table. He saw them looking at Barrett's machine, exchanging glances. Quickly they gathered lunch things and started toward the entry hall. Fischer watched their departure, fighting an u to yell "Boo!" and see what would happen. If they thought a flashlight beam in the face was frightening, what would they think of what had happened in the house since Monday?

"Thank you!" he called as they moved beneath the archway. The old man grunted sourly, an he saw them exchange another look.
When the front door had shut, Fischer moved to the table and lifted the covers of the trays. Lamb chops, peas and carrots, potatoes, biscuits, pie, and coffee. _A Meal Fit for a Ki he thought. His smile was dour. Or was it _The Last Supper?_
Removing his pea coat, he tossed it onto a chair, setting the flashlight on top of it. He forked a lamb chop onto a plate, added a spoonful of carrots and peas, poured himself a cup coffee. Community meals seem to have gone by the board since last night, he thought. He s table and drank some coffee, then began to eat. He'd bring some food to Florence in a while
He began to think of what she'd said. He'd been thinking of it constantly, trying to find loopholes in it. So far he'd been unable to; it made sense, there was no escaping it.
This time Florence was on the right track.
It was a strange, not altogether satisfying certainty he felt. They'd always known that Belasco was here--he and Florence had, at any rate--but the knowledge had been an unexp at least on his part. That they would come to terms with Belasco himself had never really oc to him. True, he had contacted him in 1940, but the juncture had been evanescent, a nonco tissue in the body of Hell House.
This was more than that. This was integral. He'd tried to pick it apart a dozen different ways without success. It was too logical. By using these anomalous means, Belasco could a area without his presence ever being known. He could create an all but incomprehensible ta of effects by manipulating every entity within the house, shifting from one to the other, alway in the background--as Florence had said, a general with his army.

He thought about the record suddenly. It had been no coincidence. It had been Belasco greeting them upon their entrance into his home--his battlefield. He heard the eerie, mocking voice inside his mind again. _Welcome to my house. I'm delighted you could come_.
Fischer turned to see Barrett limping across the room, looking pale and solemn. He wondered if the older man were going to speak to him. He'd said nothing earlier, obviously suffering humiliation on humiliation by the fact that he'd been unable to carry Edith upstairs himself.
He waited. Barrett stopped and looked at his machine with a confused expression. He looke at Fischer then. "Did you do that?" he asked, his voice subdued.
Fischer nodded.
The faintest tremor raised the ends of Barrett's mouth. "Thank you," he murmured.
"You're welcome."
Barrett limped to the table and began to put food on two plates, using his left hand.
Fischer glanced at his right and saw how awkwardly the thumb was held.
"I haven't thanked you for what you did this afternoon," Barrett said. "In the steam room," he added quickly.
"Doctor?"
Barrett looked up.
"What happened in here before--"
"I'd rather not discuss it, if you don't mind."
Fischer felt obliged to speak. "I'm only trying to help."
"I appreciate that, but--"
"Doctor," Fischer interrupted, "something in this house is working on your wife. What happened before--"
"Mr. Fischer--"
"--was not her doing."
"If you don't mind, Mr. Fischer--"
"Doctor Barrett, this is life and death I'm talking about. Did you know she almost walked into the tarn last night?"
Barrett started, looking shocked. "When?" he demanded.
"Near midnight. You were asleep." Fischer paused for emphasis. "So was she."
"_She walked in her sleep?_" Barrett looked appalled.
"If I hadn't seen her go outside--"
"You should have told me sooner."
"_She_ should have told you," Fischer said. "The fact that she didn't is--" He broke off at the look of offense on Barrett's face. "Doctor, I don't know what you think is going on in th house, but--"

"What I think is going on is irrelevant to this conversation, Mr. Fischer," Barrett said stiffly.
"_Irrelevant?_" Fischer looked amazed. "What the hell do you mean, irrelevant? Whatever's going on is getting to your wife. It's gotten to Florence, and it's gotten to you. Or maybe you haven't noticed."
Barrett regarded him in silence, his expression hard. "I've noticed a number of things, Mr. Fischer," he finally said. "One of which is that Mr. Deutsch is wasting approximately a th of his money."
Picking up the plates of food and two forks, he turned away.
For a long time after he'd gone, Fischer sat without moving, staring across the great hall.
"Like hell," he muttered then. What in the name of God did Barrett expect him to do?--commit progressive suicide like Florence? If he wasn't handling things the way they should b handled, how come he was the only one unharmed so far?
The truth crashed over him so violently it made him catch his breath. "_No_," he muttered angrily. It wasn't true. He knew what he was doing. Of the three of them, he was the only on The defensive thought broke off in fragments. Fischer felt a wave of nausea rush through him. Barrett was right. Florence was right.
Those thirty years of waiting had been nothing but delusion.
Standing with a muffled curse, he strode to the fireplace. No, it was impossible. He couldn't deceive himself so completely. He struggled to remember what he'd done since Mo known the door would be locked, hadn't he? His mind rejected that. All right, he'd rescued E Only because you couldn't sleep and happened to be downstairs, came the answer. What a Barrett, then? _Nothing_, said his mind. He'd been available, that was all--and even then he have fled if it hadn't been for Mrs. Barrett's presence. What was left? He'd pulled the plankin off the crate. Wonderful, he thought, in sudden rage. Deutsch hired himself a hundred-thous handyman!
"Christ," he muttered. He shouted, "_Christ!_" He'd been the most powerful physical mediun in the United States in 1940--and at fifteen. _Fifteen!_ Now, at forty-five, he was a goddamn self-deluding parasite, malingering his way through the week in order to collect a hundred thousand dollars. Him! The one who should be doing the most!
He paced back and forth in front of the fireplace. The feeling he had was almost unendurable, compounded of shame and guilt and fury. He'd never felt so meaningless. To around in Hell House like a turtle with its head pulled in, a blind shell seeing nothing, knowin nothing, doing nothing, waiting for the others to accomplish the work he should be accompli He'd wanted to come back here, hadn't he? Well, he was back! Something--God only knew seen fit to give him a second chance.

Was he going to let it pass him by, untouched?
Fischer stopped and looked around the great hall with a furious expression. Who the hell is Belasco? he thought. Who the hell are any of the goddamned dead who glut this house lik maggots on a corpse? Was he going to let them terrify him to his dying day? They hadn't be to kill him in 1940, had they? He'd been a child, a thoughtless, overconfident fool--and even they'd been unable to destroy him. Grace Lauter they'd destroyed--one of the most respecte mediums of the day. Dr. Graham they'd destroyed--a hardheaded, dauntless physician. Prof they'd destroyed--one of the nation's most noted chemistry teachers, head of his departmen Hale University. Professor Fenley they'd destroyed--a shrewd, experienced Spiritualist who survived a hundred psychic pitfalls.
Only he had lived and kept his sanity--a credulous boy of fifteen. Despite the fact that he had virtually begged to be annihilated, the house had been able to do no more than eject leaving him on its porch to die of exposure. It had not been able to kill him. Why had he neve thought of it in just that way before? Despite the perfect opportunity, _it had not been able to kill him_.
Fischer moved to one of the armchairs and sat down hurriedly. Closing his eyes, he began to draw in deep breaths, starting to unlock the gates of consciousness before he had a chan change his mind. Confidence suffused his mind and body. He was not a boy now, but a thinl not so blindly confident that he would make himself a vulnerable prey. He would open up wit stage by stage, not allowing himself to be overwhelmed by impressions, as Florence did. Slo carefully, monitoring each step of the way with his adult intelligence, trusting only to himself, not allowing others to control his perception in any way.

He stopped his heavy breathing, waited, tense, alert. Nothing yet. A flatness and a vacancy about him. He waited longer, antennae feeling at the atmosphere. There was nothi drew in further breath, opening the gates a little wider, stopped again, and waited. Nothing. Fischer felt a flicker of involuntary dread cross his mind. _Had he waited too long?_ Had his power atrophied? His lips pressed hard together, whitening. _No_. He still possessed it. He breathed in deeply, inspiring further cognizance into his mind. He felt a tingling in his fingertips, the sensation of a spider web collecting on his face, his solar plexus drawing inward. He had not done this in years; too long. He had forgotten how it felt, that surging growth of awareness, all his senses widening in spectrum. Every sound was heard exaggeratedly: the crackling of the fire, the infinitesimal creaking of his chair, the sound of his breath soughing in and out. The smell of the house became intense. The texture of his c felt rough against his skin. He could feel the delicate waft of heat from the fire.
He frowned. But nothing else. What was happening? It made no sense to him. This house h to be gorged with impressions. The moment he'd walked in on Monday he'd sensed their pre some cloud of influences, always ready to attack, take advantage of the slightest flaw, the le misstep in judgment.

It struck him suddenly. _Misstep in judgment!_
Instantly he started pulling back. But, already; something dark and vast was hurtling at him, something with discernment, something violent that meant to pounce on him and crush
Fischer gasped and pressed back hard against the chair, recoiling his awareness desperate
He was not in time. Before he could protect himself, the force swept over him, entering his system through the chink still open in his armor. He cried out loudly as it wrenched into h vitals, twisting, clawing, threatening to disembowel him, slice his brain to shreds. His eyes leaped open, staring, horrorstricken. Doubling over, he clapped both hands across his stoma Something slammed against his back, his head, hurling him out of the chair. He crashed aga table edge, was flung back with a strangling gasp. The room began to spin around, its atmos whirlpool of barbaric force. Fischer crumpled to his knees, arms crossed, trying to shut out th savage power. It tried to rip his arms apart. He fought it, teeth clenched, face a stonelike ma of agonized resistance, gurgling noises in his throat. You won't! he thought. You won't! You _won't!_
The power vanished suddenly, sucked back into the air. Fischer tottered on his knees, across his face the dazed expression of a man who'd just been bayoneted in the stomach. H to hold himself erect but couldn't. With a choking noise, he fell, landing on his side and draw up his legs, bending forward at the neck until he had contracted to a fetal pose, eyes closed body shivering uncontrollably. He felt the rug against his cheek. Nearby, he heard the pop a crackle of the fire. And it seemed as though someone were standing over him, someone wh him with cold, sadistic pleasure, gloating at the sight of his ravaged form, the helpless dissolution of his will.
And wondering, idly, casually, just how and when to finish him off.
6:27 P.M.
Barrett stood beside the bed, looking at Edith, wondering whether to wake her or not. The food was getting cold; but was it food she needed, or rest?
He moved to his own bed and sat with a groan. Crossing his left leg over his right, he touched the burn gingerly. He couldn't use his injured thumb. The cut should have been sutu God knew how infected it was getting. He was afraid to remove the bandage and look.
He didn't see how he was going to work on the machine tonight. The least exertion brought on pain in his leg and lower back; just walking downstairs and up had been a strain. Grimaci eased off his left shoe. His feet were swelling too. He had to end it by tomorrow. He wasn't s he could last beyond then.
The realization drained his waning confidence even further.
Noises had awakened him--the sound of something thumping on the rug. Slowly he had surfaced from a leaden sleep, thinking that he heard a door shut somewhere.
When he'd opened his eyes, Edith was gone.

For several groggy moments he had thought she was in the bathroom. Then, on the periphe of vision, he'd caught sight of something on the floor, and sat up, staring at the manuscript pages scattered across the rug. His gaze had shifted to the area beside the cabinet. Photog were lying strewn about; a book had fallen.

Alarm had started rising in him then. Grabbing his cane, he'd stood, his attention caught by the brandy decanter on the table, the silver cup. Crossing to the cabinet, he'd looked dow the photographs, tensing as he saw what they were.

"Edith?" He'd turned toward the bathroom. "Edith, are you in there?" He'd limped to the bathroom door and knocked. "Edith?"

There'd been no reply. He'd waited several moments before turning the knob; the door was unlocked.

She was gone.

He'd turned in dismay, hobbling to the door as quickly as he could, trying not to panic; but everything about the situation was ominous: his manuscript thrown to the floor, those photographs, the brandy decanter back on the table, and on top of all that, Edith's absence.

He'd hurried into the corridor and moved to Florence Tanner's room. Knocking, he'd waited for several seconds, then knocked again. When there'd been no reply, he'd opened the door Miss Tanner heavily asleep on her bed. He'd backed out, shut the door, and moved to Fisch room.

There'd been no one there, and he'd begun to panic then. He'd moved across the corridor and looked into the entry hall below, thinking he heard voices. Frowning, he'd limped to the stairs and started to descend as quickly as he could, teeth set against the pain in his leg. He _told_ her not to do this! What was the matter with her?

He'd heard her voice as he crossed the entry hall, her tone unnatural as she said, "It's delicious!" With renewed alarm, he'd hastened his steps.

Then he'd reached the archway and was frozen there, staring into the great hall with a stunned expression, watching Edith, sweater open, bra unhooked, advancing on Fischer, br her hands, ordering him to--

Barrett closed his eyes and pressed a hand across them. He'd never heard such language from her in their married life, never seen a hint of such behavior, not even to himself, much l to any other man. That she was probably repressed, he'd always known; their sex life had b necessarily constrained. But this--

He dropped his hand and looked at her again. The pain was returning, the distrust, the anger, the desire for retaliation of some kind. He struggled against it. He wanted to believe t the house had done it all to her, but he could not expunge the nagging doubt that somewher within her lay the real cause of what had happened. Which, of course, explained his sudden animosity toward Fischer's words, he recognized.

He stood and crossed to her. They had to talk; he couldn't stand this doubting any longer. Reaching down, he touched her shoulder.
She awakened with a gasp, eyes flung open, legs retracting suddenly. Barrett tried to smile but couldn't. "I've brought your supper," he said.
"Supper." She spoke the word as though she'd never heard it in her life.
He nodded once. "Why don't you wash up?"
Edith looked around the room. Was she wondering where he'd put the photographs? he thought. He withdrew as she sat up, looking down at herself. He'd refastened her bra and cl her sweater with what buttons remained. Her right hand fluttered up the front of her sweater she stood and crossed to the bathroom.
Barrett limped to the octagonal table, picked up the boxed manuscript, and placed it on the library table against the wall. With great effort he pulled the chair beside her bed over to the octagonal table and sat down. He eyed the lamb chops and vegetables on his plate and He should never have brought her to this house. It had been a dreadful mistake.
He turned as the bathroom door opened. Edith, her face washed and hair combed, walked c to the table and sat. She did not pick up her fork, but sat hunched over, gaze deflected, look like a chastened girl. Barrett cleared his throat. "The food is cold," he said, "but. . . well, you need something."
He saw her dig her teeth into her lower lip as it began to tremble. After several moments she replied, "You don't have to be polite to me."
Barrett felt a sudden need to shout at her, fought it off. "You shouldn't have had any more of that brandy," he said. "I examined it before, and unless I'm mistaken, it contains mo than fifty percent absinthe."
She looked up questioningly.
"An aphrodisiac."

She gazed at him in silence.
"As for the rest," he heard himself say, "there _is_ a powerful influence in this house. I think it's begun to affect you." Why am I saying this? he wondered. Why am I absolving her? Still, the look. Barrett felt a tremor in his stomach.
"Is that all?" she finally asked.
"All?"
"You've . . . solved the problem?" There was an undertone of resentful mortification in her voice.
Barrett tensed. "I'm trying to be rational."
"I see," she whispered.
"Would you rather I ranted? Called you names?" He pulled himself erect. "I'm trying, for the moment, to blame it on outside forces."

Edith said nothing.
"I know I haven't provided sufficient . . . physical love," he said with difficulty.
"There _is_ the polio damage, but I suppose that's not a full excuse. Maybe it's my mother's influence, maybe my total absorption in my work, my inability to--"
"_Don't_."
"_I'm blaming it on that_," he said determinedly. "On myself and on the house." There was a sheen of perspiration on his brow. He took out his handkerchief and wiped it off. "Kindly pe me to do so," he said. "If there are other factors involved . . . we'll work them out later. After we've left this house."
He waited. Edith managed a nod.
"You should have told me what happened last night."
She looked up quickly.
"About your almost walking into the tarn."
She looked as though she were about to speak; but as he said no more, she changed her mind. "I didn't want to worry you," she said.
"I understand." He stood with a groan. "I think I'll rest my leg a bit before I go downstairs."
"You have to work tonight?"
"I have to finish by tomorrow."
She walked beside him to the bed and watched as he lay down, lifting his right leg with effort. He saw her trying not to show reaction to the swollen state of his ankles. "I'll be all right," he told her.
She stood beside the bed, looking at him worriedly. Finally she said, "Do you want me to leave, Lionel?"
He was quiet for a while before he answered. "Not if you'll stay with me all the time from now on."
"All right." She seemed to hold back, then, on impulse, sat beside him. "I know you can't forgive me now," she said. "I don't expect it--no, please don't speak. I know what I've done. I give twenty years of my life to undo it."
Her head dropped forward. "I don't know why I drank like that, except that I was nervous--frightened. I don't know why I went downstairs. I was conscious of what I was doing, yet, at t same time--"
She looked up, tears brimming in her eyes. "I'm not asking for forgiveness. Just try not to hate me too much. I need you, Lionel. I love you. And I don't know what's happening to m could hardly speak now. "I just don't know what's happening to me."
"My _dear_." Despite the pain, Barrett sat up and put his arms around her, pressing his cheek to hers. "It's all right, all right. It will all pass after we've left this house." He turned his face to kiss her hair. "I love you, too. But then, you've always known that, haven't you?"

Edith clung to him, sobbing. It's going to be all right, he told himself. It _had_ been the house. Everything would be resolved after they left.
7:31 P.M.
Florence straightened with a groan. Leaning her elbow on the mattress edge, she levered to her feet. What time is it? she wondered. Declining her head, she raised her watch. _That lat

she thought, dismayed.
And still he was here.
Sighing wearily, she trudged into the bathroom and rinsed her face with cold water. As she dried her skin, she gazed at her reflection in the mirror. She looked haggard.
For more than two hours she'd been praying for Daniel's release. Kneeling beside the bed, hands clasped tightly, she had called upon all those in the spirit world who had helped her in past, asking them to aid Daniel in breaking the bonds which kept him a prisoner of Hell Hous It hadn't worked. When the hours of prayer were ended and she'd sent out feelers of awareness, Daniel had been nearby.
Waiting.
Florence hung up the towel and left the bathroom. Crossing the bedroom, she went into the corridor and started for the stairs. More and more, her deepening involvement with Daniel w disturbing her. I should be doing more, she thought. There were so many other souls to be reprieved as well. Could she really manage to remain in Hell House for as long as it would ta do that? Without light or heat or food, how could she subsist? It was obvious that, after Sund Deutsch would want the house closed up.
What about the other entities she'd contacted since Monday?--and that only a small percentage of the actual number, she was convinced. Recollections tided through her mind descended the staircase. The "something" in her room; it might not have been Daniel. That s pain and sorrow she'd experienced while leaving the garage on Monday afternoon. The furio on the staircase to the basement who had called this house a "goddamn sewer." The perver in the steam room. She still felt a terrible guilt for failing to warn Dr. Barrett. The spirit Red Cloud had described as like a caveman covered with sores. Whatever it was in the chapel w prevented her from entering; it might not be Belasco. The figure at the sitting which had reac for Mrs. Barrett. Florence shook her head. There were so many, she thought. Unhappy pres filled this house wherever she moved. Even now she felt that, if she opened herself, she wou come upon many more of them. They were everywhere. In the theater and the ballroom, in t hall, the great hall--everywhere. Would a year be long enough in which to contact all of them She thought, with anguish, about the list which Dr. Barrett had. _Apparitions_; _Apports_ . . . _Bilocation_ . . . _Chemical phenomena_ . . . _Clairsentience_ . . . _Direct voice_ . . . _Elongation_ . . . _Ideoplasm_ . . . _Imprints_ . . . There must be more than a hundred items the list. They had barely scratched the surface of Hell House. A massive sense of hopelessn assailed her. She tried to fight it off but found it impossible. It was one thing to speak of solving the enigma, step by step, if one had unlimited time. But a week. No, less. Only a little more than four days now.

Willfully, she thrust her shoulders back and walked erect. _I'm doing all I can_, she told herself. I can do no more. If all she did in the entire week was give Daniel peace, it would be enough. She walked determinedly into the great hall. She needed food. She wasn't going to anymore. She'd make sure she ate well for the rest of the week. Moving to the table, she be serve herself some dinner.

She was about to sit at the table when she saw him. He was sitting before the fireplace, staring at the lowering flames. He hadn't even turned to look at her.

"I didn't see you," she said. She carried her plate of food over to him. "May I sit with you?"

He glanced at her as though she were a stranger. Florence sat down on another armchair a began to eat.

"What's wrong, Ben?" she asked when he gave no indication of accepting her company.

"Nothing."

She hesitated, then went on. "Has something happened?"

Fischer didn't answer.

"You seemed so hopeful before, when we were talking."

He said nothing.

"What's happened, Ben?"

"Nothing."

Florence started at the anger in his voice. "Have I done something wrong?"

He drew in breath, said nothing.

"I thought we trusted each other, Ben."

"_I don't trust anyone or anything_," he said. "And anyone who does, in this house, is a fool."

"Something _has_ happened."

"A lot of things have happened," Fischer snapped.

"Nothing we can't handle."

"_Wrong_." He turned on her, his dark eyes filled with venom--and with fear, she saw.

"There's nothing in this house we _can_ handle. Nothing anyone is _ever_ going to handle."

"That isn't true, Ben. We've made wonderful progress."

"Toward what? _Our mutual graves?_"

"No." She shook her head. "We've discovered much. Daniel, for instance; and the way Belasco works."

"_Daniel_," he said contemptuously. "How do you know there _is_ a Daniel? Barrett thinks you made him up in your mind. How do you know he isn't right?"
"Ben, the body, the ring--"
"_A_ body, _a_ ring," he broke in. "Is that your proof? Your logic for putting your head on the block?"
Florence was shocked at the malevolence in his voice. What had _happened_ to him?
"How do you know you haven't been deluding yourself from the first moment you entered thi house?" he demanded. "How do you know Daniel Belasco isn't a figment of your imaginatio you know his personality isn't exactly what you've made it, his problem exactly what you've r it? _How do you know?_"
He jarred to his feet, glaring at her. "You're _right_," he said. "I'm obstructed, shut off. And I'm going to _stay_ shut off until the week is over. At which time I'll collect my hundred thousand clams and never come within a thousand miles of this goddamned house suggest you do the same."
Turning on his heel, he moved across the floor with angry strides. "Ben--!" she called. He ignored her. Florence tried to stand to follow, but she didn't have the strength. She sat slump on the chair, gazing toward the entry hall. After a while she set her plate aside. His words ha had a terrible impact on her. She tried to repress them, but they would not be repressed. All uncertainties were returning. She'd always been a mental medium. Why should she have, su become a physical one? It made no sense, it was unprecedented.
It threatened her faith.
"No." She shook her head. It wasn't true. Daniel _did_ exist. She had to believe that.
He'd saved her life. He'd spoken to her, pleaded with her.
Pleaded. Spoken. Saved her life.
How do you know Daniel Belasco isn't a figment of your imagination?
She tried to repel the notion, but it wouldn't leave. All she could think was that if he _were_ a product of her imagination, she would have had him save her life exactly as he did trance, she would have taken herself down to the tarn to prove Belasco's murderous intent, awakened herself at the moment of entering the tarn in order to prove that Daniel existed an wanted to save her life; even given herself the vision of him standing before her, blocking the way; the vision of Belasco fleeing.
"_No_." She shook her head again. It wasn't true. Daniel did exist; he _did_.
Are you happy? she thought, the words rising unexpectedly to the surface of consciousness. _Yes. Very_. The words she'd exchanged with Daniel as she'd danced with thought that she was dancing with him. _Are you happy?_ _Yes. Very_. _Are you happy?_ _
"Oh, my God," she murmured.
She'd spoken those words in a television play once.
Her mind strained desperately to resist the onrush of doubt--but now the dam of her resistance had fallen, and the dark waters were flooding in. _I love you_. _And I love you_. ' she whispered, tears welling in her eyes. _You'll never leave me, will you? You'll always be beside me?_ _Yes, my darling, always; always_.

She saw him as he'd looked that evening in the hospital, pale, drawn, eyes bright with the glitter of impending death; her beloved David. The remembrance chilled her. He had whispe her earlier of Laura, the girl he loved. He'd never shared her physical love, and now he was dying, and it was too late.
He'd held her hand so tightly it had hurt, his face a lined, gray mask, his lips bloodless as he'd spoken those words to her: _I love you_. She had whispered back: _I love you, too_ known, by then, that it was her in the room with him? Dying, had he thought that she was La You'll never leave me, will you? he'd murmured. _You'll always be beside me?_ And she answered: _Yes, my darling, always; always_.
A sob of terror broke inside her. No, it wasn't true! She started crying. But it _was_ true. _She had made up Daniel Belasco in her mind_. There _was_ no Daniel Belasco. Ther the memory of her brother, and the way he'd died, the loss he'd felt, the need he'd carried to grave.

"No, no, no, no, no." Her hands were clutching at the arms of the chair, her head slumped forward, shaking, hot tears spilling from her eyes. She couldn't seem to breathe, kept gulpin the air, as if her lungs were bursting. No, it wasn't true! She could not have done this thing, this blinded, terrible, deluded thing! There had to be some way of proving that! There had to She jerked her head up with a gasp, staring at the fire through gelatinous tears. It seemed as though someone had whispered in her ear: two words.
The chapel.
A trembling smile drew back her lips. She wavered to her feet and started toward the entry hall, rubbing at her eyes. There was an answer in the chapel; she had always known that. N an instant, she knew it was the answer she needed; it was proof and vindication.
This time she would get in.
She tried not to run but couldn't help herself. She rushed across the entry hall and past the staircase, skirts rustling, shoes thudding on the floor. Turning the corner, she started dov the side corridor, running as fast as she could.
She reached the chapel door and placed her hands against it. Instantly the rush of cold resistance filled her vitals, the grinding churn of nausea. She pressed both palms against the door and started praying. Nothing in this world or in the next was going to stop her now.
The force within the chapel seemed to waver. Florence pressed her weight against the door "In the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost!" she said in a loud, clear voice. Th force began retreating, drawing backward and inward, as though it were shrinking. Her lips r quickly as she prayed. "You cannot keep me from this place, for God is with me! We will ent together! Open! You cannot repel me any longer! _Open!_"

Suddenly the force was gone. Florence pushed the door and went inside, switching on the lights. Leaning back against the door, she closed her eyes and spoke. "I thank thee, Lord, fo giving me strength."
After several moments, she opened her eyes and looked around. The dim illumination of the wall lights barely held the darkness at bay. She was standing in a shadow, only her face in li as she searched the room with her eyes. The silence was intense; she seemed to feel its pr on her eardrums.
Moving forward abruptly, she drifted down the center aisle, averting her shocked gaze from the crucifix above the altar. This was the way; she felt it unmistakably. Unseen filaments wer drawing at her.
She reached the foot of the altar and looked at it. A massive Bible with metal clasps was set on top of it. A Bible in this hideous place, she thought, shuddering. Her gaze shifted arou the wall. The drawing power was so intense it seemed as though invisible threads were tied pulling her toward . . . what? The wall? The altar? Surely not the crucifix. Florence felt herse drawn forward, forward.
She gasped, all movement frozen, as the cover of the Bible was flung back violently. As she stared at it, the pages began to turn so rapidly that they became a blur of movement. Fl felt a throbbing at her temples. Suddenly the pages stopped, and bending down, she looked page which had been uncovered.
"Yes!" she whispered joyously. "Oh, _yes!_"
The top of the page was titled BIRTHS. Below it was a single faded entry: "Daniel Myron Belasco was born at 2:00 A.M. on November 4, 1903."
9:07 P.M.
There must be _something_ I can do," she said. Barrett turned from the machine, where he was working on an uncovered circuit assembly, comparing its maze of wires and transistors of his blueprints. She had been watching him in restive silence for the past twenty minutes, noticing how tired he looked. Finally she'd had to speak.
"I'm afraid there isn't," he told her. "It's just too complicated. It would take ten times as long to explain what I wanted done as it does for me to do it myself."
"I know, but--" Edith broke off worriedly. "How much longer will it be?"
"Hard to say. I have to make certain everything's been done as specified. Otherwise there could be a malfunction, and all my work would be for nothing. I can't afford that." He tried to smile, but it was more like a grimace of pain. "I'll finish as soon as possible."
Edith nodded without assurance. She glanced at Lionel's watch on the table. He'd been at it for more than an hour now and had barely finished checking one circuit assembly. The Re was gigantic. At this rate it could take all night, and his energy simply wasn't up to it. She'd phone Dr. Wagman if she thought it would do any good, but she knew that Lionel would drop tracks before stopping now.

The cold weight in her stomach seemed to press down as she watched him work. He was no confident as he had been. He'd been trying to conceal it from her but she knew his convictio been badly shaken by the occurrence in the steam room. She knew how vulnerable she'd fe what she'd done.

Despite his façade of certainty, Lionel must be feeling the same way.

She had to know. "What is your machine supposed to do?"

He looked across his shoulder. "I'd rather not explain it now, my dear. It's quite involved."

"Can't you tell me anything?"

"Well, in essence, I'm going to pull the plug on all the power in the house." He swallowed dryly, turned to get a drink of water. "I'll explain it in detail tomorrow," he continued, pouring water into a glass. "Suffice to say that any form of energy can be dissipated--which is what I plan to do."

She watched him take out a codeine pill and wash it down. He drew in a shaking breath and smiled. "I know it doesn't sound too satisfying at the moment, but you'll see." He set the glas down. "By this time tomorrow, Hell House will be drained, de-energized."

They looked around abruptly at the sound of measured clapping. Fischer stood in the archway, looking at them, a bottle underneath his right arm. "Bravo," he said.

Edith turned away, a dark flush on her face.

"Have you been drinking, Mr. Fischer?" Barrett asked.

"Have been, will continue to," said Fischer. "Not enough to lose control," he cut off Barrett's words. "Just enough to blunt the senses. Nothing in this goddamn house is going to another crack at me. I've had it. I have _had_ it."

"I'm sorry," Barrett said after a few moments. He felt, somehow, responsible for Fischer's black mood.

"Don't be sorry for me. Be sorry for yourself." Fischer pointed at the Reversor. "That goddamn pile of junk isn't going to do a goddamn thing but make a lot of noise . . . assuming it works at all. You think this house is going to shape up 'cause you play your goddamn mus The _hell_ it is. Belasco's going to laugh in your face. They're all going to laugh in your face the way they've been laughing all these years at any idiot who tries to come in here and . . . deenergize the place." He made a hissing sound. "De-energize, my ass." He glared at Barre gesturing toward Edith. "Get her out of here," he said. "Get yourself out. You don't have a chance."

"What about yourself?" asked Barrett.

"I'm all right. I know the score. You don't fight this place, it can't get at you. You don't let it get inside your skin, you're fine. Hell House doesn't mind a guest or two. Anyone stay here if they don't mind fun and games. What it doesn't like is people who attack it. Bela doesn't like it. All his people, _they_ don't like it, and they fight back, and they kill you.

He's a general, did you know that? A general with an army. He directs them!" Fischer gestu floridly. "Directs them like a--_mess of goddamn troops!_ No one makes a move without hi son, not anybody."
Fischer pointed at Barrett, his expression suddenly rabid.
"I'm telling you," he said. "I'm _telling_ you! Cut out this bullshit! Leave that damn machine alone, forget it! Spend your week here eating, resting, doing nothing. Then, when S comes, tell old man Deutsch anything he wants to hear, and bank your money. Hear me, Ba anything more than that, and you're a dead man, _a-dead-man_." He looked at Edith. "With wife by your side."
He jerked himself around. "Oh, hell, why bother anyway? No one listens. Florence doesn't listen. You don't listen. No one listens. Die, then. Die!" He stumbled off. "I was the only one who made it out alive in 1940, and I'll be the only one to make it out alive in 1970." He weav across the entry hall. "You hear me, Belasco, you son of a bitch! I'm closed off! Try to get m You never will! You _hear_ me?"
Edith sat staring at her husband. He was watching Fischer's departure with a troubled look.
He looked at her, "Poor man. This house has really beaten him."
He's right; she heard the words in her mind. She hadn't the courage to voice them.
Barrett limped over, pulled a chair beside hers, and sat with a groan. He was silent for a while, then drew in a heavy breath and said, "He's wrong."

"Is he?" Edith's voice was faint.
He nodded. "What he calls a pile of junk"--he smiled at the words--"is nothing more or less than the key to Hell House." He raised a hand. "All right, grant you, things have happen which I don't quite comprehend--although I would if I had time." He rubbed his eyes. "That's the point, however. Man controls electricity without understanding its true nature. What the details are of the energy inside this house is not as vital as the fact that I" --he pointed-- "that _machine_ . . . has the power of life and death over it."
He stood. "And _that_ is _that_. I told you from the start that Miss Tanner is wrong in what she believes. I tell you now that Fischer is equally in error. And tomorrow I'll prove my case beyond a solitary doubt."
He turned away and hobbled back to the Reversor. Edith watched him go. She wished she could believe him, but Fischer's words had driven fear so deep inside her she could feel it in blood, chill and acidic, eating at her.
10:19 P.M.
_. . . Daniel, please. You have to understand. What you ask is inconceivable. You know that. It isn't that I have no sympathy. I do. I've opened up my heart completely to you. I belie in you and trust you. You saved my life. Now let me save your soul._

_You don't have to stay in this house any longer. Help is present, if only you will ask for it. Believe me, Daniel. There are those who love you and will help you if you ask. Your fa doesn't have the power to stop you. Not if you seek out those beyond, and take the hand the
you. Let them help you. Take their hand. If you only knew the beauty which awaits you, Dan you only knew how lovely are the realms which lie beyond this house. Would you keep yours locked in a barren cell when all the beauties of the universe await you on the outside? Think Accept! Don't close yourself to those who would so gladly help you. Try; only try. They wait f you with open arms. They will help you, give you comfort. Don't remain within these cheerles walls. You can be free. Believe that, Daniel. Believe it, and it will be so. I pledge you this.
Trust me. Let go. Let go._
She could barely stand. Shuffling to the bathroom, she washed and changed into her nightgown with infirm movements. Her limbs were like iron. She had never felt such helpless enervation in her life.
Daniel wouldn't listen. He simply would not listen.
She returned to the other room and got into bed. Tomorrow, then, she told herself. He had to listen sooner or later. In the morning, she would start again. She slumped back heavily on pillow, wincing at the flare of pain in her breasts. She lay on her back, staring at the ceiling with heavylidded eyes. Tomorrow, she thought.
She turned her head.
There was a figure standing by the door. She gazed at it without alarm. There was no menace in it.
"Daniel?"
The figure advanced. In the feeble light from the bathroom she saw its features clearly:
youthful, handsome, the expression grave, the eyes filled with despair.
"Can you speak?" she asked.
"Yes." His voice was gentle, pained.
"Why won't you go?"
"I cannot."
"But you must."
"Not without--"
"Daniel, no," she said.
He turned his face away.
"Daniel--"
"I love you," he said. "You're the only woman I've ever said that to. I never met another like you. You're so good . . . so good . . . the kindest person I have ever known."
His face turned back to her, dark eyes searching her face. "I need--" He broke off, twisting toward the door. "I _will_ speak to her!" he said frightenedly. "You can't stop me!" He looked back at her. "I can't remain much longer; he won't let me," he said. "I beg of you. Plea give me what I ask. If I am driven from this house without fulfillment . . ."

"Driven?" Florence tensed.
"_Your Doctor Barrett has the means_."
She gazed at him, stunned.
"He knows the mechanism of my being in this house and can drive me from it," he said. "But that is _all_ he knows. Whatever else I am--my heart, my mind, my soul--he knows nothing o nothing for. He's going to drive me from one hell to another, don't you see? Only you can he I can leave this house tonight if you'll help me. Please." His voice began to fade. "If you carefor me at all, have pity. Please have pity. . . ."
"_Daniel--_"
For several moments she could hear his wretched sobbing; then the room was still. She stared at the spot where he'd been standing. "You know I can't," she said. "Daniel, please. Y know I can't. _You know I can't_."
10:23 P.M.
Barrett's eyes were slitted as he climbed the stairway slowly, his arm across Edith's shoulders. He tried not to put too much weight on her, tried not to make any sounds of pain. had enough distress today; and it was only temporary, after all. Another pill, a good night's sleep, and he'd be fit enough by morning. He could endure the pain another day or so. The was almost ready for use. Another hour's work tomorrow, and he'd be prepared to prove his After all these years, he thought, the final proof. What was a little pain compared to that?
They reached the top of the stairs, and Barrett tried to walk by himself, despite the throbbing in his leg and back. Hobbling weakly, he made a sound which he intended to be w amusement but which, instead, emerged as one of pain. "After we're home," he said, "I'm go take a month's vacation. Finish up the last few pages of the book. Relax. Enjoy your compan
"Good." She didn't sound convinced. Barrett patted her shoulder. "It's going to be all right," he said.
Edith opened the door and helped him to the bed. She watched in concern as he sank down heavily on the mattress. "Lie back," she told him. She propped pillows against the headboar Barrett hitched himself against them as she lifted his legs onto the bed. He slumped back. "G He forced a smile. "Well, no one can say we aren't earning our money."
"_You_ are." Edith flinched as she pulled off his shoes; they were on so tightly. Peeling off his socks, she began to massage his feet and ankles. Barrett saw that she was trying not show distress at the swollen look of them.
"I'd better take another codeine," he said.
Edith stood and moved to his bag. Barrett tried to shift his weight on the mattress, hissing at the effort. He felt as heavy as a statue. He wouldn't mention it to Edith, of course, but it might not be amiss for him to undergo a short period of hospitalization after they got home.

He was winding his watch when Edith returned with the pill and a glass of water. Reaching out, he set the watch on the bedside table, then washed down the pill. Edith started to unbut his sweater.
"That's all right," he said. "I'll sleep in my clothes tonight. It'll be simpler."
She nodded. "All right." She unbuckled his belt and loosened the top of his trousers.
"I'll sleep in my clothes, too."
"You may as well."
Edith sat beside him on the bed and, leaning over, pressed herself against him. Her weight on his chest made it hard to breathe, but Barrett said nothing.
"If only today had never happened," she murmured.
"We can work it out." Barrett rubbed her back, wishing he cou'd think of some excuse to get her up that wouldn't hurt her feelings.
"Would you get my tie?" he asked after several moments.
Edith sat up, looking at him curiously.
"It's hanging in the closet."
She rose and got the tie, handing it to him.

"You want to wash up, brush your teeth before you go to bed?" he asked.
"All right."
Barrett lay, half-sitting, on the bed, listening to the sounds she made in the bathroom--the splashing of water as she washed, the brushing of her teeth, the rinsing of her mouth.
Symphonie Domestique, he thought.
In hell.
He stared across the room. It was difficult to believe that they had been here only three days. He looked at the rocking chair. Two nights ago, it had moved by itself. For all the sens time he felt, it might have been two weeks ago, two months.
His gaze moved lingeringly around the room. Grotesque, he thought. It could be a display room in some museum; the house was a treasure trove of art works. Thousands upon thous creations conceived and executed in the name of beauty--ending up in this house, which ha the epitome of ugliness.
He blinked, refocusing his eyes as Edith came back into the room. "Can you stand to lie beside me in this tiny bed for one night?" he asked.
"I'd love to."
When she was lying beside him, both of them covered, Barrett started to fasten one end of the tie to her wrist. "I'm doing it so you won't sleepwalk." He tied the other end of the tie to one of the headboard posts. "That should give you enough freedom of movement."

Edith nodded, then, as Barrett put his arm around her, pressed against him, cradling her head in the hollow between his arm and chest. She sighed. "I feel safe now."
11:02 P.M.
If only I could sleep, she thought. Her smile was barren. The human mind, she thought. This afternoon she'd wanted to stay awake until their stay in Hell House was ended. Now sh nothing more than to drift into unconsciousness, eliminating eight or nine hours of their remaining time here.
She closed her eyes again. How many times had she closed and opened them now? Forty, fifty, a hundred? She drew in a long, slow breath. That smell; always that fetid smell.
Hell House should be burned to the ground.
She opened her eyes and looked at Lionel. He was deeply asleep. Moving her right hand, sl felt the tug of the tie on her wrist. Had he really done it because she'd walked in her sleep la night? Or was it Fischer he was worried about? Did he really fear she'd go to Fischer again? couldn't fathom what had driven her to him the first time. Had it truly been the house? Or wa something in herself? She'd never had such overt sex desires before--not even about Lionel less other men. Or women; she shuddered at the thought. She was frightened and appalled things she'd said and done.
She pressed her lips together. It was more than just herself; it had to be. Something had invaded her, some virus of corruption which, even as she lay here, might be spreading its di throughout her mind and body. She would not believe it was herself alone, some unsuspecte her nature starting to emerge. It had to be the house. It had affected others. She could scarc hope to be immune.
Her chin jerked up. She stared across the room.
The rocking chair had started moving.
"Lionel," she murmured. _No_. He needed sleep. It's force, she told herself unguided, unintelligent; kinetics taking the path of least resistance--slamming doors, winds, footsteps, rocking chairs.
She wanted to close her eyes but knew that, even if she did, she'd hear the rhythmic squeaking of the chair. She stared at it. Dynamics. Force. Residuum. Her mind repeated the again and again.
Yet all the time, she knew, she really knew, that it was someone sitting in the chair--someone whom she couldn't see. Someone cruel, implacable, waiting to destroy her, waiting destroy them all. Was it Belasco? she thought in horror. What if he were suddenly to appear gigantic, terrifying, smiling at her as he rocked? There's no one there! she forced herself to think. No one there at all!
The chair rocked slowly back and forth. Back and forth.

11:28 P.M.

The room felt hot. Groaning, Florence peeled aside the top blanket and dropped it to the floor. She turned on her side and closed her eyes again. Sleep, she told herself. Tomorrow w get back to it again.

A few minutes later she thrashed onto her back and looked at the ceiling again. No use, she thought. She wasn't going to sleep tonight.

Daniel's words had stunned her. She had always thought in terms of working with Dr. Barrett, but it had never occurred to her that such an alliance was an absolute necessity. She'd almost gone to see him, tell him that they had to solve the problem of Daniel Belasco together. Then she'd realized that it would be a waste of time. As far as Dr. Barrett w concerned, there _was_ no Daniel Belasco; he was a product of her own subconscious. Wh would talking to him do? He hadn't accepted the body or the ring. Why should a Bible entry m any difference to him?

She drew aside the covers restlessly and sat up. _What was she to do?_ She couldn't just stand by and let Dr. Barrett force Daniel from the house, without giving him peace. The thou appalled her. To plunge his desolate soul into limbo would be a crime against God.

Yet how could she prevent it? She mustn't even consider what Daniel had asked. She mustn't.

She stood with a mournful sigh and crossed the room. Entering the bathroom, she ran a glass of water. What other way _was_ there, though? her mind probed. She'd been praying since morning, pleading, importuning; all to no avail.

And, by tomorrow, Dr. Barrett would be ready with his machine.

For a moment she had the wild urge to run downstairs and damage the machine. She shook that off, angry at herself for even thinking it. She had no right to stand in Dr. Barrett's way. He was an honest, conscientious man who had devoted his life to his work. That he was so the truth was incredible. It was not his fault that the answer he'd found was only partial. He didn't even believe in the existence of Daniel Belasco. Obviously, he could not feel responsi for persecuting him.

Florence put down the glass and turned from the sink. There has to be an answer, she thought; there _has_ to be. She started back into the bedroom.

She stopped with a gasp and looked toward the Spanish table.

The telephone was ringing.

It can't, she thought. It hasn't worked in more than thirty years.

She wouldn't answer it. She knew what it was.

It kept on ringing, the shrill sounds stabbing at her eardrums, at her brain.

She mustn't answer it. She wouldn't.

The telephone kept ringing.

"No," she said.

Ringing. Ringing. Ringing. Ringing.
With a sob, she lunged across the room and jerked up the receiver, dumping it on the table. She leaned against the edge of the table, suddenly weak, palms pressing on its surfac could scarcely breathe. She wondered dazedly if she were going to faint.
She heard a thin voice coming from the earpiece. She couldn't hear what it said--a single word repeated--but she knew that it was Daniel's voice.
"No," she mumbled.
The voice kept speaking the same word, over and over. She jerked up the receiver, spoke into it desperately. "No!"
"Please," said Daniel.
Florence closed her eyes. "No," she whispered.
"Please." His voice was pitiful.
"No, Daniel."
"Please."
"No. No."
"_Please_." She had never heard such anguish in a voice before. "_Please_."
"_No_." She could barely speak now. Tears were trickling down her cheeks. Her throat felt clogged.
"_Please_," he begged.

"No," she whispered. "No, no."
"_Please_." The voice of someone begging for his very existence. "_Please_." She was his only hope. "_Please_." Tomorrow he would be thrust into horror by Dr. Barrett. "_Please_." T was only the one way. "_Please_." He started crying. "_Please. Please_." The world was go were only the two of them. "_Please_." She had to help him. "_Please_." He was sobbing.
"_Please!_" Dear God, her heart was breaking! "_Please! Please! Please!_"
She hung up suddenly, a violent shudder racking through her body. All right! she thought.
It was the only way. Her spirit guides would help her and protect her; God would help her an protect her. It was the only way; the only way. She believed in Daniel, she believed in hersel There was only the one way; she could see that now with vivid clarity.
Moving to the bed on trembling legs, she sank to her knees beside it, bowed her head, and clasped her hands together tightly. Closing her eyes, she began to pray: "Dear God, reach o your hand and give me your protection. Help me, this night, to bring to your care the tortured soul of Daniel Belasco."
For five minutes she prayed without cease. Then, slowly, she rose and undid her robe.
Removing it, she laid it across the other bed. She shivered as she drew the flannel nightgow her head. She looked down at her body. Let this be the temple, then, she thought.
Drawing aside the bedclothes, she lay on her back. The room was almost dark, the bathroo door nearly shut. She closed her eyes and started breathing deeply. _Daniel_, she called in mind. _I give you, now, the love you never knew. I do this freely so that you will gain the strength to leave this house. With God's love and with mine, you shall rest, this night, in Paradise_.

She opened her eyes. "Daniel," she said, "your bride is Waiting."

There was a movement near the door. A figure drifted toward her.

"Daniel?"

"Yes, my love."

She held out her arms.

He crossed the room, and Florence felt the drawing from her body as he neared. She could just make out his features, gentle, frightened, filled with need for her. He lay beside her on th bed. She turned to face him. She could feel his breath, and pressing close, she gave her lips him.

His kiss was long and tender. "I love you," he whispered.

"And I love you."

She closed her eyes and turned onto her back again, feeling his weight shift onto her.

"With love," she murmured. "Please, with love."

"Florence," he said.

She opened her eyes.

In an instant, she lay petrified, heartbeat staggering as she gasped at what was lying on her.

It was the figure of a corpse, its face in an advanced state of decomposition. Livid, scaly flesh was crumbling from its bones, its rotted lips wreathed in a leering smile that show discolored jagged teeth, all of them decayed. Only the slanting yellow eyes were alive, regar her with demoniacal glee. A leaden bluish light enveloped its entire body, gases of putrefact bubbling around it.

A scream of horror flooded from her throat as the moldering figure plunged inside her.

11:43 P.M.

Fischer jerked up, gasping, at the sound of screaming in the next room.

For several moments he sat frozen, bound by dread. Then something drove him to his feet and carried him across the room. Flinging open his door, he lunged into the corridor and rus the door of Florence's room, twisted the knob, and pushed.

The door was locked.

"Oh, my God." He looked around in panic, the sound of Florence's mindless screams drainir him. He glanced at the door to the Barretts' room as it opened suddenly and Edith peered ou expression taut and stricken.

Lurching across the corridor, Fischer grabbed a heavy wooden chair and dragged it to the door. He started crashing it against the wood. The screaming broke off. He kept slamming th against the door. One of its legs snapped off. "Damn!" He battered at the door dementedly, s on the edge of vision, Barrett and Edith hurrying toward him.

Suddenly the jamb was splintered and the door flew open. Hurling the broken chair aside, Fischer reached inside and switched the light on, then rushed into the room.
The sight of Florence made him gag. He heard the sound of Edith being sick. "Dear God," Barrett muttered.
She was naked, lying on her back, her legs spread far apart, her eyes wide open, staring upward with a look of total shock.
Her body was bruised and bitten, scratched, gouged, and running with blood.
Fischer looked at her face again, the face of a woman who had just been driven mad. Her lips stirred feebly. Compelled, he leaned over to hear. At first there were only rattling noises in her throat. Then she whispered, "_Filled_." She stared at him with wide, unblinking eyes. "_Filled_."
He was unable not to ask. "With what?"
With hideous abruptness, she began to smile.

DECEMBER 24, 1970

7:19 A.M.
Fischer sat slumped in an armchair, staring at Florence. He hadn't closed his eyes all night. When Barrett's pills had finally put her to sleep, he'd dragged the heavy armchair to he bedside; and Barrett and Edith had gone back to their room, Barrett with the promise that he return in several hours to take over watching. He'd never returned. Fischer had not expected He knew how badly Barrett had been physically and mentally abused the last two days in He
He shivered as a chill ran through him. Sitting up, he rubbed his eyes and yawned, wondering what time it was. He could use some coffee. Straining to his feet, he trudged into bathroom, twisted the cold-water faucet, and cupped his right hand underneath the icy strea Bending over, he splashed the water into his face, hissing at the sting of it. He straightened and gazed at his reflection in the cabinet mirror. Water was dripping from his chin. He puffed breath and misted drops of water on the mirror surface. Reaching out, he slid a bath towel fr its rack and patted it against his face.
He went back into the bedroom and stood beside the bed, looking at Florence. She looked a peace; a beautiful woman, asleep. It had not been that way during the night. Despite the sle pills, she had dozed erratically, limbs twitching, whimpering at times as though in pain, trembling periodically with paroxysmal seizures. He had been tempted to wake her from wha terrors she had been experiencing. It had proven unnecessary. At unexpected intervals, she jolted awake on her own, eyes staring, face disfigured by a look of dread. Each time, he'd he her hand, trying not to wince when her grip became painful, her clutching fingers as white as bone. She'd never spoken. After a while her eyes had fallen shut, and in seconds she had g sleep again.

Fischer blinked, refocusing his eyes. Florence was awake and looking at him. Her face had no expression. It was as though she'd never seen him before.
"How are you?" he asked.
She made no reply, gazing at him fixedly, her eyes those of a doll, glasslike, unmoving.
"Florence?"
There was a crackling sound in her throat as she swallowed. Fischer rose and walked into the bathroom, returning with a glass of water. "Here." He held it out.
Florence didn't stir. Fischer held the glass awhile, then set it on the bedside table.

Florence's gaze shifted to the place where he had put it, then sprang back to his face.
"Can you speak?" he asked.
"Have you been here all night?"
Fischer nodded.
Her gaze shifted again, moving to the chair, then back again to probe at Fischer's eyes.
"There?" she asked.
"Yes."
She made a noise of cynical amusement. "_Stupid_." She ran an appraising gaze over his body. "You could have slept with me."
Fischer waited guardedly.
She pulled the covers down from her chest. "Who put on my nightgown?"
"I did."
Florence smiled with derision. "Fun?" she asked.
"After we cleaned you off."
Something flared in her eyes--a nova of awareness. Her body was convulsed by a wrenchin shudder. "Oh, my God," she whispered. Tears welled in her eyes. "He's inside me." She rea tremblingly for him.
Fischer took her hand and sat beside her on the bed. "We'll get rid of him."
She shook her head.
"We _will_." He squeezed her hand.
Florence pulled her hand away so fast he couldn't hold it. She began unbuttoning the front of her nightgown.
"What are you doing?"
Florence paid no attention. Breathing hard, she yanked aside the edges of her gown, exposing her breasts. Fischer winced at the sight of them. The teeth marks around her nippl looked purplish and infected. Florence clutched a hand around each breast, compressing ar them erect, their nipples hardening. "Look at them," she said.

Fischer grabbed her hands and forced them to her sides. In the instant that he did so, Florence lost rigidity and, with a faint groan, turned her head on the pillow. Fischer pulled the covers to her chin. "I'm taking you out of here this morning," he said.
"He lied to me." Her voice was strengthless. "He said it was the only way."
Fischer felt ill. "You still believe there's a Daniel--"
"Yes!" She turned back suddenly. "I know there is. I found the entry of his birth inside the chapel Bible." She saw his look of startlement. "He let me in to prove that he existed. He the one who always kept me out. He learned about my brother, picked it from my mind--just said. He knew I'd believe him, because the memory of my brother's death would make me b
She clutched at Fischer's hand again. "Oh, God, he's _inside_ me, Ben; I can't get rid of him Even as I'm speaking to you, I can feel him in there, waiting to take over."
She began to shake so violently that Fischer drew her up and put his arms around her.
"Shhh. It's going to be all right. I'll take you out of here this morning."
"He won't let me go."
"He can't stop you."
"Yes he can; he _can_."
"He can't stop me."
Florence jerked away from him and thrashed back, thumping hard against the headboard of the bed. "Who the fucking hell are you?" she snarled. "Maybe you were hot stuff when you w twelve, but now you're shit. You hear me? Shit!"
Fischer stared at her in silence.
A flickering in her eyes revealed the change, like the evanescent shimmer of sunlight across a cloud-darkened landscape. Instantly she was herself again; but not emerging from It was, instead, a sudden, brutal surfacing to self, with total memory of every vileness she'd been forced to utter.
"_Oh, God, please help me, Ben_."
Fischer held her tightly, sensing the congested turmoil in her mind and body. If only he could dig inside her like some psychic surgeon, rip away the cancerous mass, and fling it fro her. He couldn't, though; he didn't have the power or the will.
He was as much a victim of this house as she was.
Fischer drew back. "Get dressed. We'll leave."
Florence stared at him.
"Now."
She nodded; but it seemed the jerk of a marionette's head as the operator moved the string from overhead. Drawing aside the bedclothes, Florence rose and walked to the bureau. Fisc watched as she drew some clothes from its drawers and started for the bathroom.

"Florence--"
She turned to face him. Fischer braced himself. "You'd better dress in here."
The skin grew taut across her cheekbones. "I have to _piss_. Is that all right?"
"Stop it!" Fischer shouted.
Florence jerked so hard she dropped her clothes. She looked at him bewilderedly.
"Stop it," he repeated quietly.
Florence looked painfully embarrassed. "But I have to . . ." She couldn't finish.
Fischer stared at her sadly. What if she became possessed in there, did something harmful to herself?
He sighed. "Don't lock the door."
She nodded once and turned. Entering the bathroom, she closed the door. Fischer listened for the sound of the lock, relaxing gradually when it didn't come. Standing, he walked across room and picked up the clothes she'd dropped.
He looked around with relief as Florence opened the bathroom door and came out. Without word he handed her her clothes and turned away. He sat on the bed with his back to her. "K talking while you dress."
"All right." He heard the rustle of her nightgown as she took it off. He closed his eyes and yawned. "Did you sleep at all?" she asked.
"I'll sleep when you're out of here."
"You're going too, aren't you?"
"I'm not sure. I don't think I'm vulnerable as long as I'm shut off from the house, not fighting it. I might stay. I have no qualms about lifting a hundred thou from old man Deutsch' bank account. He won't miss it." He paused. "I'll give you half of it."
Florence didn't speak.
"Talk," he said.
"_Why talk?_"
The tone of her voice made him twist around. She was standing by the bureau, naked, smiling at him. "Take off _your_ clothes now," she said.
Fischer stood up quickly. "Fight it."
"Fight what?" she asked. "My love of cock?"
"Florence--"
"Strip. I want to wallow. Like a pig." She started toward him angrily. "Strip, you bastard. You've wanted to fuck my ass all week; now _do_ it!"
She seemed to think his sudden movement toward her indicated interest, and she ran to hin Fischer grabbed her wrists and jerked her to a halt. "Fight it, Florence."
"Fight what? My--?"
"_Fight_ it."
"Let me go, goddamnit!"

"_Fight_ it!' Fischer gouged his fingers into her wrists until she gasped in pain and rage.
"I want to fuck!" she screamed.
"_Fight_ it, Florence!"
"I want to _fuck_, I want to _fuck!_"
Releasing her left wrist, Fischer slapped her face as hard as possible. Her head snapped to the right, her expression one of shocked amazement.
When her head turned back, he saw that she'd been given back her mind. For several mom she stood trembling, gaping at him. Then she glanced down at her body, shamed. "Don't loo begged.
Fischer released her other wrist and turned away. "Dress," he said. "Forget your bags; I'll bring them later. Let's get out of here."
"All right."
God, I hope it is all right, he thought. He shuddered. _What if he was not allowed to take her from the house?_
7:48 A.M.

"More coffee?"
Lionel twitched, and Edith realized that he'd been half asleep, despite his open eyes.
"I'm sorry; did I startle you?"
"No, no." He shifted on the chair, grimacing; started reaching for the cup with his right hand, then did it with his left instead.
"You've got to have that thumb looked at, first thing."
"I will."
The great hall was without a sound again. Edith felt unreal. The words they'd spoken had seemed artificial. Eggs? No, thank you. Bacon? No. Chilly? Yes. I'll be glad to leave this plac Yes, so will I. Like dialogue from some inferior domestic drama.
Or was it a carry-over from the tension between them last night?
She stared at Lionel. He was drifting off again, his eyes unseeing, almost blank. He'd been working on the Reversor for more than an hour before they'd eaten, laboring without co while she dozed in a nearby easy chair. He'd said that it was almost ready now. She turned looked across the hall at it. Despite its imposing size, it was impossible to believe that it could conquer Hell House.
She looked back at the table. Everything about this morning had conspired to make her feel unreal, a character manipulated through some inexplicable role. Coming down the stairs, the seen the cat go running down the corridor toward the chapel--soundlessly, a fleeting, orange form. Then, while Lionel had been working on the Reversor, she'd heard a sound, and starting awake, had seen an old couple crossing the hall, carrying a coffeepot and covered t

Half asleep, she'd stared at them in silence, thinking them ghosts. Even when they'd set the on the table and begun collecting the supper dishes, she hadn't realized who they were. The rush, it had come to her, and smiling at her own deluding mind, she'd said, "Good morning." The old man grunted, and the woman nodded, mumbling something indistinct. In moments t were gone. Still groggy from sleep, Edith had begun to wonder if she'd really seen them. Sh drifted back into a shallow sleep, jolting awake with a gasp when Lionel had touched her sho She cleared her throat, and Lionel twitched again. "What time will we be out of here?" she asked.

Barrett tugged at his fob and pulled the watch from its pocket. Opening the cover, he gazed at its face. "I'd say early afternoon," he answered.

"How do you feel?"

"Stiff." His smile was tired. "But I'll mend."

They looked around as Fischer and Florence entered the hall, dressed for outdoors. Barrett eyed them questioningly as they approached the table. Edith looked at Florence. She was p gaze avoiding theirs.

"You have the car keys?" Fischer asked.

Barrett repressed a look of surprise. "Upstairs."

"Would you get them, please?"

Barrett winced. "Could _you?_ I really can't face those stairs again."

"Where are they?"

"In my overcoat pocket."

Fischer glanced aside. "You'd better go with me," he said to Florence.

"I'll be all right."

"Why don't you join us, Miss Tanner; have some coffee?" Barrett invited.

She was about to speak, then changed her mind, and nodding once, sat down. Edith poured cup of coffee and passed it across the table. Florence took it from her, murmuring, "Thank y Fischer looked uneasy. "Don't you think you'd better come along?"

"We'll keep an eye on her," said Barrett.

Fischer still hesitated.

"What Ben doesn't want to tell you," Florence said, "is that I was possessed by Daniel Belasco last night and could lose control of myself at any moment."

Barrett and Edith stared at her. Fischer could tell that Barrett didn't believe her, and the realization angered him. "_She's telling the truth_," he said. "I'd rather not leave her alon with you."

Barrett regarded Fischer in silence. Finally he turned to Florence. "You'd best go with him, then," he said.

Florence looked up pleadingly. "Couldn't I have a cup of coffee first?"

Fischer's eyes narrowed with suspicion.

"If anything happens, just take me outside."
"I'll buy you coffee in town."

"It's such a long way, Ben."
"_Florence--_"
"Please." She closed her eyes. "I'll be all right. I promise you." She sounded as though she were about to cry.
He stared at her, not knowing what to do.
Barrett spoke to break the painful silence. "There's really no need to stay," he said to Florence. "The house will be cleared by afternoon."
She looked up quickly. "How?"
Barrett's smile was awkward. "I'd intended to explain it to you--but, under the circumstances .
"Please. I have to know before I leave."
"There isn't time," said Fischer.
"Ben, I have to know." Her look was desperate. "I can't go until I do."
"Damn it--"
"_If I start to lose control, just take me out_," she said. She turned to Barrett pleadingly.
"Well . . ." His tone was dubious. "It's somewhat complicated."
"I have to know," was all she said. Fischer sat down gingerly near Florence. Why am I doing this? he wondered. He didn't believe that Barrett's machine would have the least effec Hell House. Why wasn't he dragging her out of here? It was her only hope.
"To begin with fundamentals," Barrett said, "all phenomena occur as events in nature--a nature the order of which is larger than that presented by current science, but nature, nonetheless. This is true of so-called psychic events as well, parapsychology being, in fact, more than an extension of biology."
Fischer kept his eyes on Florence. She had slipped in and out of possession so frequently before.
"Paranormal biology, then," Barrett said, "setting forth the premise that man overflows and is greater than the organism which he inhabits, as Doctor Carrel put it. In simplest terms the human body emits a form of energy--a psychic fluid, if you will. This energy surrounds th body with an unseen sheath; what has been called the 'aura.' It can be extruded beyond the of this aura, where it can create mechanical, chemical, and physical effects: percussions, oc movement of external objects, and the like--as we have seen repeatedly these past few day believe that when Belasco spoke of 'influences,' he may have been referring to this energy."
Fischer looked at Barrett, ambivalent emotion rising in him. The older man sounded so confident. Was it possible that all the beliefs of his life could be reduced to something one could probe at in a laboratory?

"All through the ages," Barrett continued, "evidence in proof of this premise has been forthcoming, each new level of human development bringing about its own particular proof. I Middle Ages, for example, much superstitious thought was directed toward what were called and witches. Accordingly, these things were manifested, created by this psychic energy, this unseen fluid, these 'influences.'
"Mediums have always produced phenomena indigenous to their beliefs." Fischer glanced a Florence, seeing that she'd tightened at these words. "This is certainly the case with Spiritualism. Mediums adhering to this faith create its own particular phenomenon--so-called spirit communication."
"Not _so-called_, Doctor." Florence's voice was strained.
"Let me continue, Miss Tanner," he said. "You may refute me later if you wish. By record, the only time religious exorcisms have an effect on haunted houses or possessions is when medium who causes the phenomena is highly religious, thus profoundly moved by the exorc more cases--including this house--gallons of holy water and hours of exorcism fail to alter anything, either because the medium involved is not religious or because more than one me contributed to the effect."
Fischer glanced at Florence. Her face was pale, lips pressed together.
"Another example of this biological mechanism," Barrett was saying, "was that of animal magnetism, which produced psychic phenomena equally as impressive as those of Spiritual entirely devoid of any religious characteristics.
"How does this mechanism function, though? What is its genesis? Reichenbach, the Austria chemist, in the years between 1845 and 1868 established the existence of such a physiolog radiation. His experiments consisted, first, of having sensitives observe magnets. What they were gleams of light at the poles, like flames of unequal length, the shorter at the positive pole. Observation of electromagnets brought about the same results as did observation of c

Finally, the same phenomenon was observed on the human body.
"Colonel De Rochas continued Reichenbach's experiments, discovering that these emanatio are blue at the positive pole, red at the negative. In 1912 Dr. Kilner, a member of the Londo Royal College of Physicians, published the results of four years of experimentation during w by use of the 'dycyanine' screen, the so-called human aura was made visible to anyone. Wh pole of a magnet was brought into proximity with this aura, a ray appeared, joining the pole t the nearest point of the body. Further, when the subject was exposed to an electrostatic cha the aura gradually disappeared, returning when the charge was dissipated.
"I oversimplify the progression of discovered facts, of course," he said, "but the end result is irrefutable; _the psychic emanation which all living beings discharge is a field of electromagnetic radiation_."

He looked around the table, disappointed at the flatness of their expressions. Didn't they realize what he was saying?

He had to smile then. There was no way they could realize the import of his words until he'd proved them.

"Electromagnetic radiation--EMR--is the answer, then," he said. "All living organisms emit this energy, its dynamo the mind. The electromagnetic field around the human body behave precisely as do all such fields--spiraling around its center of force, the electric and magnetic impulses acting at right angles to each other, and so on. Such a field _must_ impinge itself o its surroundings. In extremes of emotion, the field grows stronger, impressing itself on its environment with more force--a force which, if contained, _persists_ in that environment, undischarged, saturating it, disturbing organisms sensitive to it: psychics, dogs, cats--in brie establishing a 'haunted' atmosphere.

"Is it any wonder, then, that Hell House is the way it is? Consider the years of violently emotional, destructive--evil, if you will--radiations which have impregnated its interior. Consider the veritable _storehouse_ of noxious power this house became. Hell House is, in a giant battery, the toxic power of which must, inevitably, be tapped by those who enter it, either intentionally or involuntarily. By you, Miss Tanner. By you, Mr. Fischer. By my wife. By myself. All of us have been victimized by these poisonous accumulations-- you most of all, M Tanner, because you actively sought them out, unconsciously seeking to utilize them to prov personal interpretation of the haunting force."

"_That isn't true_."

"It _is_ true," Barrett countered. "It was true of those who entered here in 1931 and 1940. It is true of you."

"What about _you?_" demanded Fischer. "How do you know _your_ interpretation isn't wron

"Simply answered," Barrett said. "Shortly, my Reversor will permeate the house with a massive countercharge of electromagnetic radiation. This countercharge will oppose the pol the atmosphere, reverse and dissipate it. Just as the radiation of light negates mediumistic phenomena, so the radiation of my Reversor will negate the phenomena of Hell House."

Barrett leaned back in his chair; he had not been aware, until now, of leaning forward.

Florence sat in stricken silence. Edith felt a rush of pity for her. After what Lionel had said, how could anyone doubt that he was right?

"One question," Fischer said.

Barrett looked at him.

"If the aura can restore itself after an electromagnetic charge is turned off, why can't the power in this house?"

"Because human radiation has a living source. The radiation in this house is only _residue_. Once it's been dissipated, it cannot return."

"Doctor," Florence said.

"Yes?"
She seemed to brace herself. "Nothing you've said contradicts what I believe."
Barrett looked astounded. "You can't be serious."
"I am. Of course there's radiation--and, of course, it persists. Because its possessor survives after death. _Your radiation is the body it survives with_."
"Here we part company, Miss Tanner," Barrett said. "The residue I speak of has nothing whatever to do with the survival of personality. The spirit of Emeric Belasco does not prowl t house. Neither does that of his son or any of the so-called entities you have believed yourse contact with. There is one thing in this house, and one thing only--_mindless, directionless power_."
"Oh," she said. Her voice was calm. "There's nothing else to do, then, is there?"
Her movement caught them by surprise. With a fluid, twisting stand, she was on her feet and running toward the Reversor. The three sat frozen for a moment. Then, simultaneously, gasped and Fischer lurched up from his chair, knocking it over in his haste to rise. He charg from the table, dashing after Florence.

Before he'd gone halfway, she had the crowbar in her hands and was swinging it with all her might at the face of the Reversor. Barrett cried out, jarring to his feet, his face gone ashen. He jolted at the ringing sound of steel on steel, flinching as though the blow were striking him instead. "No!" he shouted.
Florence swung again, battering at the front of the machine. The glass face of a dial exploded underneath her blow. Barrett started from the table with a look of horror on his fac His right leg buckled under him, and with a startled gasp, he fell. Edith jumped up. "Lionel!"
Fischer had reached Florence by then. Clutching at her shoulder, he yanked her back from the Reversor. She whirled and swung the crowbar at his face, her expression one of manic r Fischer dodged, the crowbar missing his head by inches. Lunging in, he grabbed her right a wrestling for possession of the bar. Florence lurched back, snarling like a maddened animal bolt of shock numbed Fischer as she flung her arms up, breaking his grasp. _She was too s Blind to everything except the threat to his Reversor, Barrett didn't even glance at Edith as she helped him to his feet. Pulling free of her, he started hobbling rapidly across the floor without his cane. "Stop her!" he cried.
Fischer had grabbed at Florence's arms again. She heaved back, and the two of them crash against the front of the Reversor. Fischer felt her hot breath on his cheek, bubbly spittle dribbling from her mouth. She jerked her right arm free and swung at him. Fischer ducked, t crowbar smashing against the metal face. He started reaching for her arm again, but she sw fast for him. He threw his arms up, crying out as the crowbar struck him on the right wrist. Ragged, burning pain shot up his arm. He saw the next blow coming but could not avoid it. T crowbar smashed against his skull, and blinding pain exploded in his head. Eyes staring, he crumpled to his knees. Florence raised the bar to strike again.

Barrett was on her then, the strength of frenzy in his arms; with a single wrenching motion he had jerked the crowbar from her grasp. Florence spun around. Barrett's face had abruptly blank. Gasping, he was stumbling back from her, right hand clutching at his lower b Edith screamed and started forward as the crowbar slipped from Barrett's grasp and thumpe rug. He started falling.
Florence's sudden lunging movement made Edith freeze in her tracks. Florence snatched th crowbar up. Instead of turning back to the Reversor, though, she turned toward Edith and be advancing on her. "Now you," she said, "you lesbian bitch."
Edith gaped at her, as much unnerved by the words as by the sight of Florence stalking her, crowbar raised. "I'm going to smash your fucking skull in," Florence said. "I'm going to b it into jelly."
Edith shook her head, retreating. She glanced at Lionel desperately. He was writhing on the floor in pain. She started toward him, then jumped back, looking at Florence again, as, w savage howl, the medium broke into a run at her, brandishing the crowbar. Edith's breath cu She whirled and bolted toward the entry hall, her mind washed blank by panic. She heard th driving thud of shoes behind her, glanced across her shoulder. Florence was almost on her! sprang forward with a gasp, darting across the entry hall and up the stairs.
She knew the moment she'd reached the landing that she couldn't make their room; side vision showed her Florence only several yards behind. Impulsively she raced across the cor Florence's room and plunged inside, whirling to slam the door and lock it. A groan of horror t her lips back as she saw the broken lock. Too late. The door was surging in at her. She stun back and, losing balance, fell.
Florence stood across the room from her, panting, smiling. "What are you afraid of?" she asked. She tossed aside the crowbar carelessly. "I'm not going to hurt you."
Edith crouched on the floor, staring at her.
"I'm not going to hurt you, baby." Edith felt a spasm in her stomach muscles. The medium's voice was honeyed, almost purring.
Florence started to remove her coat. Edith tensed as she dropped it on the floor. Florence started to unbutton her sweater. Edith began to shake her head.
"Don't shake your head," said Florence. "You and I are going to have a lovely time."
"No." Edith started edging backward.
"_Yes_." Florence removed the sweater, dropped it. Starting across the room, she reached back to unhook her bra.
Oh, God, please don't! Edith kept shaking her head as Florence moved in on her. The bra was off now. Florence began unzipping her skirt, the smile fixed to her lips. Edith bumped ag a bed and caught her breath convulsively. She could retreat no farther. Cold and weak, she Florence drop her skirt, bend over to remove her panties. She stopped shaking her head. "C she pleaded.

Florence dropped to her knees, straddling Edith's legs. Sliding both hands underneath her breasts, she held them up in front of Edith's face; Edith winced at the purplish teeth marks o them. "Aren't they nice?" said Florence. "Aren't they delicious-looking? Don't you want them words drove a spear of terror into Edith's heart. She stared up frozenly as Florence fondled breasts in front of her. "Here, feel them," Florence said. She released her left breast, reache down, lifted Edith's hand.
The feel of the warm, yielding flesh against her fingers broke a dam in Edith's chest. A sob of anguish shook her. _No, I'm not that way!_ screamed her mind.
"Of course you are," said Florence, as though Edith had spoken. "We're both that way;
we've always been that way. Men are ugly, men are cruel. Only women can be trusted. Only be loved. Your own father tried to rape you, didn't he?"
She couldn't know! thought Edith, horrified. She jerked both hands against her chest and pressed them tightly to her body, jammed her eyes shut.
With an animal-like sound, Florence fell across her. Edith tried to push her off, but Florence was too heavy. Edith felt the medium's hands clamping on the back of her head, fo her face. Abruptly Florence's lips were crushed on hers, mouth open, tongue trying to force way inside her mouth. Edith tried to fight, but Florence was too strong. The room began to s around her, burgeoning with heat. A heavy mantle fell across her body. She felt numb, detac
She couldn't keep her lips together, and Florence's tongue plunged deep inside her mouth, at the tender roof. Curls of sensation flickered through her body. She felt one of Florence's hands wrap her fingers around the breast again. She couldn't pull the hand away. There was pounding in her ears. Heat poured across her.
The sound of Lionel's voice cut through the pounding. Edith jerked her head to one side, trying to see past Florence. The heated mantle vanished. Coldness rushed across her. She up, saw the twisted face of Florence looming overhead. Lionel called her name again. "In he she cried. Florence pulled away from her, looking at herself with sickened realization; she lu to her feet and ran into the bathroom. Edith struggled up and moved across the room uneve fell against Lionel as he ran in, clinging to him, eyes shut, face against his chest. She started crying helplessly.
9:01 A.M.
You'll be all right." Barrett patted Fischer's shoulder. "Just stay in bed awhile; don't move."
"How is she?" Fischer mumbled.
"Asleep. I gave her pills."
Fischer tried to sit up, fell back, gasping.
"_Don't move_," Barrett told him. "That was quite a blow you took."

"Have to get her out of here."
"I'll get her out."
Fischer looked at him suspiciously.
"I promise," Barrett said. "Now rest."
Edith was standing by the door. Barrett took her arm and led her into the corridor. "How is he?" she asked.
"Unless he has a more serious concussion than I think, he should come around."
"What about you?"
"Just a few more hours," Lionel said. Edith saw that he was holding his right arm against his chest as though it were broken. There was a stain of fresh blood on the thumb bandage. he'd wrenched the crowbar out of Florence's hands, he must have torn apart the edges of th
She was about to mention it, then gave it up, a sense of utter hopelessness oppressing her. Lionel opened the door to Florence's room, and they crossed to her bed. She was lying motionless beneath the covers. After Lionel had spoken to her for a long time, she'd emerge the bathroom, a towel wrapped around her. She hadn't spoken, hadn't met their gaze. Eyes like those of a repentant child, she had accepted the three pills, slipped beneath the bedclot and in moments closed her eyes and gone to sleep.

Barrett raised her left eyelid and looked at her staring eye. Edith averted her face. Then Lionel was taking her arm again; they crossed the room and went into the corridor. Moving t room, they went inside.
"Would you get me some water?" he asked.
Edith went into the bathroom and ran cold water into the glass. When she returned, Lionel was on his bed, propped against the headboard. "Thank you," he murmured as she handed glass. He had two codeines in his palm. He washed them down his throat. "I'm going to tele Deutsch's man for an ambulance," he said. Edith felt a momentary burst of hope. "Have Fisc Miss Tanner taken to the nearest hospital."
The hope was gone. Edith looked at him without expression.
"I'd like you to go with them," Lionel said.
"Not until you go."
"It would make me feel much better."
Edith shook her head. "Not without you."
He sighed. "Very well. It'll all be over by this afternoon, at any rate."
"Will it?"
"Edith--Barrett looked surprised--"have you lost your faith in me?"
"What about--?"
"--what happened just before?" He drew in a hitching breath. "Don't you see? It proves my point precisely."

"_How?_"
"Her attack on my Reversor was the ultimate tribute. She _knows_ I'm right. There was nothing else to do--her very words, if you recall--except to destroy my beliefs before they co destroy hers."
Barrett reached out his left hand and drew her onto the bed. "She's not possessed by Daniel Belasco," he told her. "She's not possessed by anyone--unless it's by her inner self, h true self, her _repressed_ self."
Like I was yesterday, she thought. She stared at Lionel hopelessly. She wanted to believe him, but it wasn't in her anymore.
"The medium is a most unstable personality," he said. "Any psychic worthy of the name invariably turns out to be a hysteric and/or somnambulist, a victim of divided consciousness. parallel between the mediumistic trance and the somnambulistic fit is absolute. Personalities and go, methods of expression are identical, as are psychological structures, the amnesia u awakening, the artificial quality of the alternate personalities.
"What we've witnessed this morning is that part of Miss Tanner's personality she's always kept hidden, even from herself--her patience turning into anger, her withdrawal into furious expression." He paused. "Her chasteness into wanton sexuality."
Edith declined her head. She couldn't look at him. Like me, she thought.
"It's all right," Barrett said.
"No." She shook her head.
"If there are . . . things to be discussed, we'll discuss them at home."
At home, she thought. Never had a phrase implied such impossibility to her.
"All right," she said. But it was someone else's voice.
"Good," said Barrett. "In addition to my work, then, some extra value has come of this week, some personal enlightenment." He smiled at her. "Have heart, my dear. Everything w out."
9:42 A.M.
Barrett opened his eyes, to find himself looking at Edith's sleeping face. He felt a twinge of worry. He hadn't meant to sleep.
Taking hold of his cane, he slipped his legs across the edge of the mattress and stood, wincing as he put his weight down. He winced again as he slipped his feet into shoes. Sittin the other bed, he crossed his left leg over his right, and worked the lace out of the shoe, usi the fingers of his left hand.
He set the foot down. That was some improvement. He did the same to his right shoe, then drew out his watch. It was getting close to ten. His expression grew alarmed. That couldn't b P.M., could it? In this damned, windowless hulk, there was no way to be certain.

He hated to wake Edith. She'd had so little sleep this week. Did he dare leave her, though? He stood irresolutely, staring at her. Had anything happened to them in their sleep? was an aspect of the EMR he had not investigated, but it did seem that one had to be consc order to be affected by it. No, that wasn't true; she'd walked in her sleep.

He decided to leave the door open, go downstairs as rapidly as possible, make the call, and come right back. If anything happened, surely he'd be aware of it.

He limped across the room and into the corridor, setting his teeth against the pain in his thumb. Despite his having taken codeine, it still throbbed unrelentingly. God knew what it loo like by now; he had no intention of checking. It would undoubtedly require minor surgery wh was over; he might even lose partial use of it. Never mind, he thought. The price was accept

He opened Fischer's door and looked inside the bedroom. Fischer hadn't stirred. Barrett hoped he'd remain asleep when they carried him out of here on a stretcher. He didn't belong never had. At least he was surviving once more.

Turning clumsily, he hobbled to Florence Tanner's room and looked inside. She was also immobile. Barrett gazed at her sympathetically. The poor woman had a lot to confront after s out of here. What would it be like to face the lie of her past existence? Was she up to it? Mo likely, she would slip back into pretension; it would be less difficult.

He turned from Florence's door and limped to the staircase. Well, it's been quite a week, all in all, he thought. He smiled involuntarily. That was, without a doubt, the understatement his life. Still, all was well. Thank God Miss Tanner had been blinded by her rage. A few wellp blows, and he would have been confronted by days, perhaps weeks, of work to put the Reversor into working condition. Everything would have been ruined. He shivered at the tho

What would they all do after they had left the house? he wondered as he descended the staircase haltingly, his left hand on the banister rail. It was an interesting speculation. Would Miss Tanner return to her church? _Could_ she return to it after this appalling insight into herself? What about Fischer? What would he do? With a hundred thousand dollars, he coul great deal. As for Edith and himself, the future was relatively clear. He avoided thinking of their personal problems yet to solve. That was for later.

At least they would all be out of Hell House. As the unofficial leader of the group, he felt some pride in that, although it was, perhaps, absurd for him to feel it. Still, the 1931 and 1940 groups had been virtually decimated. This time, four of them had entered Hell House, would be safely out by tonight.

He wondered what to do with the Reversor after today. Should he have it delivered to his laboratory at the college? That seemed most likely. What a delivery that would be; tantamou thought, to displaying the capsule that had taken the first astronaut into space. Perhaps, someday, the Reversor would occupy a place of honor in the Smithsonian Institution. He sm sardonically. And perhaps not. He was hardly deluding himself into thinking that the world of science would topple in submission before his accomplishment. No, there were still a good r years ahead before parapsychology was conceded its rightful place beside the other natural sciences.

He moved to the front doors and opened one. Daylight. He shut the door and hobbled to the telephone, picked up the receiver.
There was no answer. Barrett jiggled the cradle arm. A fine time for communication to be broken off. He waited, jiggled the cradle arm again. Come on, he thought. He couldn't possib Fischer and Miss Tanner out of here without help.
He was about to hang up when the receiver was lifted on the other end of the line. "Yes?" said Deutsch's man.
Barrett exhaled loudly with relief. "You had me worried there. This is Barrett. We need an ambulance."
Silence.
"Did you hear me?"
"Yes."
"Will you have it sent out right away, then? Mr. Fischer and Miss Tanner require immediate hospitalization."
There was no reply.
"Do you understand?"
"Yes."
The line was silent.
"Is something wrong?" Barrett asked.
The man drew in a sudden breath. "Oh, hell, this isn't fair to you," he said angrily.
"What isn't?"

The man hesitated.
"_What_ isn't?"
Another hesitation. Then the man said quickly, "Old man Deutsch died this morning."
"_Died?_"
"He had terminal cancer. Took too many pills to dull the pain. Accidentally killed himself."
Barrett felt a numbing pressure on his skull. What difference does it make? he heard his mind inquiring; but he knew. "Why didn't you tell us?" he asked.
"I was ordered not to."
By the son, thought Barrett. "Well . . ." His voice was faint. "What about--?"
"I was ordered to just--leave you stranded out there."
"And the money?" Barrett had to ask, even though he knew the answer.
"I don't know about that, but under the circumstances--" The man sighed. "Is there anything in writing?"
Barrett closed his eyes. "No."

"I see." The man's tone was flat. "Then that bastard son of his will doubtless--" He broke off. "Look, I apologize for not having called you, but my hands are tied. I have to go back to York City right away. You have the car there. I suggest you all leave. There's a hospital here Caribou Falls you can go to. I'll do what I can to . . ." His voice faded, and he made a sound of disgust. "Hell," he said. "I'll probably be out of a job myself. I can't stand that man. The father was bad enough, but--"

Barrett hung up as a wave of dark despair broke over him. No money, no provision for Edith, no retirement, no chance to rest. He leaned his forehead against the wall. "Oh, no," h murmured.

The tarn.

Barrett whirled with a gasp and looked around the entry hall. The words had leaped into his mind, unbidden. No, he thought. He clenched his teeth together tightly. No, he told the h He shook his head deliberately.

He started toward the great hall. "You don't win," he said. "I may not get that money, but you're not going to beat me; not you. I know your secret, and I'm going to destroy you." He h never felt such hatred in his life. He reached the archway and pointed at the Reversor with a of triumph. "There!" he shouted. "There it stands! Your conqueror!" He had to lean against th archway wall. He felt exhausted, racked by pain. It doesn't matter, he told himself. Whatever he felt was secondary now. He'd worry later about Fischer and Miss Tanner, worry afterwar Edith and himself. There was only one thing that mattered at this moment: his defeat of Hell and the victory of his work.

10:33 A.M.

She felt herself begin to rise from darkness. Daniel's voice cajoled her. _You don't have to sleep_, he said. She seemed to feel her veins and arteries compressing, tissues drawing body forcing out the darkness. There was burning pressure in her kidneys. She tried to hold back but was unable to. The pressure kept building. _Go on_, Daniel told her; _let it go_.

Florence groaned. She couldn't stop herself. She felt the gushing from her loins, and cried a in shame.

Suddenly she was awake. She pushed aside the bedclothes and stood, looking groggily at t patch of wetness on the sheet. He was so rooted in her, he controlled the very workings of h body now.

"Florence."

She jerked her head around and saw his face projected on the hanging silver lamp.

"Please," he said.

She stared at him. He started smiling. "Please." His tone was mocking.

"Stop it."

"Please," he said.

"_Stop_ it."

"Please." He bared his teeth in a derisive grin. "_Please_."
"Stop it, Daniel!"
"Please, please, please, please, please, please, pleasel"

Florence spun around and lurched for the bathroom. A cold hand grasped her ankle, and sh toppled to the floor. Daniel's icy presence flooded over her, his voice, demoniac, howling in h ears: "Please, please, please, please!" She couldn't make a sound; his presence seemed to away her breath. "Please, please, please!" He began to laugh with wild sadistic pleasure. He God! she thought in agony. "Help me, God!" railed his voice. _Deliver me!_ she pleaded. "De me, deliver me!" his voice impersonated. Florence pressed both hands across her ears. "_H God!_" she cried.
His presence vanished. Florence gasped in air convulsively. She struggled to her feet and started for the bathroom. "Leaving?" said his voice. She set her mind against its blandishme Stumbling into the bathroom, she ran cold water and splashed it on her face.
She straightened up and stared at her reflection. Her face was pallid, marked by dark scabbed scratches and discolored bruises. What she could see of her neck and upper chest scored by jagged lacerations. Leaning forward, she saw that her breasts looked inflamed, th marks almost black now.
She stiffened as the door swung shut, then saw the full reflection of her body in the mirror fastened to the door. She started to resist, but something cold snaked up her spine. S gasped; eyes opening wide.
In a moment she began to smile. She leaned back, eyes half-closing. Daniel was behind her She could feel his hardened organ sliding deep into her rectum. His hands were clutched ar breasts, kneading them. Florence leaned back as Edith slipped into the bathroom, falling to knees in front of Florence, darting her extended tongue to Florence's vagina. Florence's tong lolled out. She bucked against Daniel eagerly. This was what she wanted, what she was.
She twitched as though electric current surged through her. Suddenly she saw herself, halfc before the mirror, face slack with vacuous abandonment, the fingers of her right hand thrust into her body. With a sickened noise she jerked the fingers free. A harsh laugh raspec behind her, and she whirled. The bathroom was empty. I was watching, his voice spoke in h She flung open the door and ran into the bedroom, Daniel's laughter following. She bent to pick her robe up. Something jerked it from her grasp and flung it away. She moved after it. T robe kept flapping from her. Florence stopped. No use, she thought, despairing. "No use," p his voice. The robe flew up and fell across her head. She jerked it off and pulled it on her bo buttoning it hastily. He's _playing_ with me, she thought; making me do everything that's mo abhorrent to me.
"--most abhorrent to me," his voice parroted, mockingly falsetto. He giggled like a girl.
"Most abhorrent to me, most abhorrent to me."

Florence fell on her knees beside the bed and, resting both arms on the mattress edge, pressed her forehead to her tightly clasping hands. "Dear God, please help me; Red Cloud, spirit doctors, help me; I have been possessed. Let the fire of the Holy Spirit burn this sickne from my mind and body. Let the strength of God rush through me, let his might instill me witl power to resist.

"Let his God cock sink into my mouth," she said. "Let me drink his holy, burning jism. Let me--"

A wail of torment jerked back her lips. She drove the knuckle of a fisted hand into her mouth and bit until the pain had filled her mind. Daniel vanished. After several moments she withdrew the still-clenched fist and looked at it. Her teeth had broken the skin; blood was trickling on the back of her hand.

She looked around uncertainly. It seemed as though the flare of pain had cleared her mind, driving him away. She pushed down on the mattress, standing. Now, she thought, the chape was where the answer lay.

She ran across the room and jerked open the door. Hurrying into the hall, he turned toward the staircase. I'll reach it, she thought. He can't possess me every moment. If I keep on goin no matter what happens, I can get there.

She stopped, her heartbeat jolting. A figure blocked her way: a gaunt man dressed in ragged, filthy clothes; bones showing through his skin; long hair shaggy; face malformed by sickness; tiny, glowing eyes buried in dark-rimmed sockets; mouth distended, filled with thicl discolored teeth. Florence stared at him. It was one of Belasco's victims, she knew. He'd loo like this before he died.

The figure disappeared. Florence began descending the stairs. The acid coldness started up her spine again. She felt the gray defilement in her blood and fought it off, biting on her hanc until the pain had driven it away. Pain was the answer! Whenever Daniel tried to take contro she'd drive him off with pain, because it filled her mind and left no room for him!

She stopped, hitched back. Two figures sprawled across the steps below, a man and woma

The man was plunging a knife into the woman's throat. He started sawing at the jagged wou spouting, splashing on his twisted, gleeful face. He was cutting off the woman's head. Floren jammed her fist into her mouth and bit down, stiffening at the burst of pain. The man and wo vanished. She descended farther, wondering where the others were: Fischer, Edith, Barrett. didn't matter; they couldn't help.

As she crossed the entry hall, she caught sight of Barrett in the great hall, working on his machine. Fool, she thought. It wasn't going to work. He was full of shit, the stupid--

No! She ground her teeth into her hand again, eyes wide and staring. Let her bite her fingers to the bone before succumbing to Daniel's sway again. She wished she had a knife. thrust it far enough into her flesh to keep the pain there constantly. It was the answer: agony that blocked his contaminated soul from hers.

She started down the corridor. A wild-eyed man was hunched across a naked woman's bac
She was dead, a sash cord pulled around her neck, her face purplish, eyes bulging from the sockets. Florence sank her teeth into her hand. Blood was running down her lips now, drippi her throat. The figures vanished as she reached the chapel door. A man was crouched in fro it. His face was white, his expression drugged. He held a severed human hand to his lips, su on one of the fingers. She bit into her hand. The figure vanished. Florence fell against the do and pushed it in.
She stood wavering at the head of the center aisle. A maelstrom of power filled the air.
This was the nucleus, the core. She started down the aisle, then jerked back with a gasp as saw the cat lying in the puddle of blood. It had been cut in two.
She shook her head. She mustn't stop now. She was almost to the answer. She had beaten Daniel; she would beat the house now. She stepped across the cat, advancing on the altar.
God, the power was incredible! It radiated through her, pulsing, driving. Darkness flickered in her mind. She thrust her aching hand into her mouth again and bit. The darkness cleared a l and she moved against the power. It was like a living wall before her. She was almost to the now. Her eyes were staring, fixed. She'd win her battle yet. With God's help, she would-- Sudden weakness turned her limbs to stone. She fell against the altar heavily. The power was too strong! She looked up dumbly at the crucifix. It seemed to move. She stared at it in horror. It was moving toward her. No, she thought. She tried to back off, but she couldn't buc rooted to the spot as though by some gigantic magnet. _No!_ The crucifix was falling. It was to hit her!
Florence cried out as it struck her head and chest and knocked her backward violently. She crashed to the floor, the massive cross and figure crushing down on her, knocking out her br
The serpentine chill went lashing up her spine. She tried to scream but couldn't. Darkness fl through her.
The possession ended instantly.
Florence's eyes bulged, her face distorted by a look of agony. She couldn't breathe, the pain was so intense. She tried to push the crucifix away, but it wouldn't move. The pain of try made her gag. She lay immobile, groaning at the endless waves of agony that filled her. On she tried to push the crucifix. It moved a little, but the movement nearly made her faint. Her face was gray, dewed with cold sweat.
It took fifteen minutes to do. She almost fainted seven times before she'd finished, holding on to consciousness only with the most intense exertion of will. Finally she pushed a the heavy crucifix and tried to sit up, gasping at the agony of the attempt. Slowly, ashen lips pressed together, she struggled to her knees. Blood tarted running down her thighs.
The sight of the phallus made her vomit. Hunching over, she expelled the contents of her stomach on the floor, eyes glazed with pain. _He'd tricked her_. There was no answer here.

only wanted to commit this final profanation on her mind and body. Florence rubbed a palsie across her lips. No more, she thought. She looked around and saw the huge nail sticking fro crucifix's back; it had been pulled out from the wall. She dragged herself across the floor unt she'd reached the nail. Hovering above it, she began to saw the insides of her wrists across point, hissing at the pain. She began to sob. "No more," she said. "_No more_."

She slumped back. Blood was flowing from her wrists like water. She closed her eyes. He can't do anything more to me, she thought. Even if my soul is held in bondage in this house forever, I won't be his living puppet anymore.

She felt life draining from her. She was escaping. Daniel couldn't hurt her now. Feeling had begun to leave; pain was fading. God would forgive her self-destruction. It was what she to do. Her lips drew back in a surrendering smile.

He would understand.

Her eyes fluttered open. Were those footsteps? She tried to turn her head but couldn't.

The floor seemed to tremble. She tried to see. Was that a figure standing by her, looking dov She couldn't focus her eyes.

Suddenly it struck her. Horrified, she tried to push up, but was too weak. She had to let them know! Florence struggled fitfully to rise. Clouds of darkness were enveloping her. Ever felt numb. She turned her head and saw her blood running on the floorboards. Help me, Goo pleaded. _She had to let them know!_

Slowly, agonizingly, she reached out to shape the moving scarlet ribbons.

11:08 A.M.

Fischer jarred up, heartbeat pounding, and looked around in dread. His head was throbbing violently. He wanted to fall back on the pillow, but something kept him from it.

He dropped his legs across the mattress edge and stood. He began to reel, and pressed bo hands against his head, eyes closed, body rocking back and forth. He groaned, rememberin Barrett had given him pills. Damn fool! he thought. How long had he been unconscious?

He started for the door, moving like a drunken man, trying to maintain his balance. He moved unevenly into the corridor and started toward Florence's room. He entered and stopp wasn't in bed. His gaze jumped to the bathroom. Its door was open; there was no one there. turned and stumbled back into the corridor. What the hell was wrong with Barrett, anyway? H to move faster, but the impact inside his head was too painful. He stopped and leaned again wall, a billowing of nausea in his stomach. He blinked and shook his head. The pain grew w hell with it! he thought. He staggered forward willfully. He had to find her, get her out of here

He glanced into the Barretts' room in passing, jarred to a halt. He moved inside and looked around incredulously. Barrett wasn't there; he'd left his wife alone! Fischer clenched teeth in fury. _What the hell was going on?_ He moved across the room as quickly as he co dropped his hand on Edith's shoulder.

She jerked back from his touch, eyes open suddenly, gaping at him.
"Where's your husband?" Fischer asked.
She looked around in shock. "He isn't here?"
He watched dazedly as she stood. From the look on her face, he saw that she was taken aback by his appearance. "Never mind," he mumbled, heading for the corridor. Edith didn't s
She brushed past him, calling, "Lionel!"
She was halfway down the stairs before he'd reached the landing. "Don't go alone!" he cried. She paid no attention. Fischer tried to hurry down the steps but had to stagger to a ha clinging to the rail as pain drove spikes into his skull. He leaned against the banister, trembling. "Lionel!" he heard her calling as she ran across the entry hall. He heard an answe call below and opened his eyes. Where else? he thought bitterly. Barrett was so anxious to p his point, he was leaving his wife alone now, ignoring Florence. Stupid bastard!
Fischer hobbled down the stairs and walked across the entry hall, teeth set against the jolting pain. Entering the great hall, he saw Barrett and Edith standing by the Reversor. "Wh is she?" he demanded.
Barrett looked at him blankly.
"_Well?_"
"She's not in her room?"
"Would I ask if she was?" snarled Fischer.
Barrett started limping toward him, joined by Edith. From the look on her face, Fischer could tell she was upset with Barrett too. "But I listened," Barrett said; "I checked you awhile ago. And the pills I gave her--"
"To hell with your pills!" Fischer cut him off. "You think possession can be stopped with pills?"
"I don't believe--"
"Screw what you believe!" Fischer's head was pounding so hard now that he could barely see. "She's gone, that's all that matters!"
"We'll find her," Barrett said; but there was no assurance in his voice. He looked around uneasily. "We'll try the cellar first. She might--"
He stopped as Fischer clutched his head, his face distended by a look of agony. "You'd better sit," he said.

"Shut up!" Fischer shouted hoarsely. He hunched over, making retching noises.
"Fischer--" Barrett started forward.
Fischer stumbled to a chair and dropped down heavily. Barrett approached as fast as he could, followed by Edith. They stopped as Fischer jerked down his hands and looked at ther shock.
"What?" asked Barrett.

Fischer began to shiver.
"What is it?" Barrett's voice rose involuntarily. Fischer's look unnerved him.
"The chapel."
Edith's scream of horror pierced the air. She spun away and stumbled to the wall.
"_Oh, my dear God_," Barrett murmured.
Fischer walked unsteadily to the body and stared at it. Her eyes were open, looking upward, her face the hue of pale wax. His gaze shifted to her genitals. They were caked with blood, the outer tissues shredded.
He twitched as Barrett stopped beside him. "What _happened_ to her?" the older man whispered.
"She was killed," said Fischer venomously. "Murdered by this house." He tensed, expecting Barrett's contradiction, but there was none. "I don't see how she could have gotten up with a that sedative inside her," was all Barrett said, his tone one of guilt.
He saw that Fischer had turned to look at the crucifix lying nearby and did the same. Seeing the blood on its wooden phallus, he felt his stomach walls contract. "My God," he sai "Not here," Fischer muttered. He shouted suddenly, as if he'd gone berserk: "_There's no God in this fucking house!_"
Across the chapel, Edith jerked around to look at Fischer startledly. Barrett started to speak, then held it back. He drew in a trembling breath. The chapel smelled of gore. "We'd b get her out of here."
"I'll do it," Fischer said.
"You'll need some help."
"_I'll do it_."
Barrett shivered at the look on Fischer's face. "Very well."
Fischer crouched beside the body. Darkness pulsed before him, and he had to put down bot hands to support himself he felt them pressing into her blood. After a while his vision cleared and he looked at her face. _She tried so hard_, he thought. Reaching out, he closed her eye gently as he could.
"What's that?" Barrett asked.
Fischer glanced up, wincing at the pain the movement caused. Barrett was staring at the floor near Florence. He looked down. It was too gloomy to see. He heard Barrett fumble in h pockets, then the scratching of a match end on a striking surface. The flare of light made his eyes contract painfully.
She'd drawn a symbol on the floor, using a finger dipped in her blood. It was a crude circle with something scrawled inside it. Fischer looked at it intently, trying to decipher it. Abruptly he saw what it was. Barrett spoke at the same moment.
"It looks like the letter 'B.'"
11:47 A.M.

They stood in the doorway, watching Fischer's slowly moving form until it vanished in the mist. Then Barrett turned.
"All right," he said.
She followed him into the great hall. Barrett hobbled quickly to the Reversor, and she stopped to watch him, trying not to think of Florence. Barrett made a final check on the Reve then turned to look at her.
"It's ready," he said.
She wished, for his sake, she could experience the emotion he obviously felt. "I know this moment is important to you," she said.

"Important to science." He turned to the Reversor, set its timer, turned several knobs, then, after hesitating for a moment, threw the switch.
For several seconds Edith thought that nothing was happening. Then she heard a resonant hum rise to audibility inside the giant structure and began to feel a throbbing in the floor.
She stared at the Reversor. The hum was rising in pitch and volume, the vibration in the floor increasing; she could feel it running up her legs, into her body. _Power_, she thought--t only thing that could oppose the house. She didn't understand it, but feeling its heavy throb i her body, its reverberation starting to hurt her ears, she almost believed.
She started as, behind the Reversor's grillwork, tubes began to glow with an intense phosphorescence. Barrett backed off slowly. His fingers trembled as he drew out his pocket Exactly noon. Fittingly precise, he thought. He pushed the watch into his pocket and turned Edith. "We have to go."
Their coats were on the table by the front door; Barrett had brought them down earlier. Hastily he helped her on with hers. As she assisted him, she glanced toward the great hall. T noise of the Reversor was painful even here now. She could feel its pulsing in the floor bene her, hear the rattling of a vase nearby. "Quickly," Barrett said.
A moment later they had left the house and were hurrying along the gravel path, around the tarn, the sound of the Reversor fading behind them. As they crossed the bridge, Edith saw t Cadillac standing in the mist, and tightened at the thought of Florence being in it.
Barrett pulled open the back door, flinching as he saw that Fischer had the blanketcovered body on the seat with him, cradling its head and upper torso in his arms. "Couldn't we--" he started, breaking off as Fischer glared at him. He hesitated, then reshut the door. No poi setting Fischer off. He was close enough to the edge as it was.
"She's in there _with_ him?" Edith whispered.
"Yes."
Edith looked ill. "I can't sit in there with--" She couldn't finish.
"We'll sit in front."
"Can't we go back in the house?" she asked, fleetingly aware of the grotesqueness of her requesting to go back inside Hell House.

"Absolutely not. The radiation would kill us."
She stared at him. "All right," she finally said.
As they got into the front and closed the door, Barrett glanced into the rearview mirror. Fischer was bent over Florence's body, his chin resting on what must have been the top of h head. How badly had her death affected him? he wondered.
Remembering then, he turned to Edith. "Deutsch is dead," he told her.
Edith didn't respond. At last she nodded. "It doesn't matter."
Unexpectedly, Barrett felt a flare of anger. _Doesn't it?_ he thought. He turned away. Why brood about it, then? He'd done his best to provide for her. If she didn't care . . .
He willed away the anger. What else could she say? He straightened up, grimacing at the pain in his thumb. "Fischer?"
There was no reply. Barrett looked around. "Deutsch is dead," he said. "His son refuses to pay us."
"What's the difference?" Fischer mumbled. Barrett saw his fingers tightening on Florence Tanner's shoulder. He turned back to the front and, reaching into his overcoat pocket, withdr the ring of keys. Fingering through them, he found the ignition key and pushed it into its slot. He turned the key enough to activate the dial needles without starting the engine. There was enough fuel to run the engine for forty minutes so they could keep the interior warm. Damn, thought. He should have remembered to bring more blankets from the house, some brandy.
He leaned his head back, closed his eyes. Well, they'd have to endure it, that was all. Personally, he didn't care-- This moment was too engulfing for anything else in the world to overshadow it.
Behind those windowless walls some several hundred yards distant, Hell House was dying.
12:45 P.M.
Barrett snapped his watch cover shut. "It's done."
Edith's face was without expression. Barrett started feeling disappointment at her lack of response, then realized that she could not conceive of what had taken place inside the hous

Reaching across the seat, he patted her hand, then turned. "Fischer?"
Fischer was still slumped over Florence, holding her body against himself. He looked up slowly.
"Will you go back in with us?"
Fischer didn't speak.
"The house is clear."
"Is it?"
Barrett wanted to smile. He couldn't blame the man, of course. His claim _did_ sound preposterous after what had taken place this week. "I need you with me," he said.

"Why?"
"To verify that the house is clear."
"What if it isn't?"
"I guarantee it is." Barrett waited for Fischer's decision. When nothing happened, he said, "It will take only a few minutes."
Fischer stared at him in silence for a while before he edged away from Florence's body and, shifting carefully to a kneeling position on the floor, lowered her to the seat. He looked a her for several moments, then withdrew his arms and turned to the door.
They came together in front of the car. _Déjà vu_, thought Edith. It was as though time had been reversed and they were about to enter Hell House for the first time. Only the abse Florence prevented the illusion from being complete. She shivered, drawing up the collar of coat. She felt numb with cold. Lionel had run the engine and heater for brief periods of time during their wait, but minutes after he switched off the engine each time, the cold had return The walk to the house was eerily reminiscent of Monday's arrival: their shoes ringing on the concrete bridge; her glancing back to see the limousine being swallowed by the mist; the circling trudge around the tarn, its hideous odor in her nostrils; the crunch of gravel underne their shoes; the cold penetrating flesh; her feelings as the massive house loomed up in front them. It was no use. She couldn't believe that Lionel was right. Which meant that they were walking back into a trap. They'd gotten out somehow; three of them, anyway. Now, incredibl were returning. Even realizing that Lionel had to know the effect of his Reversor, it was impossible to comprehend the suicidal folly of their move.
The final yards along the gravel path. The approach up the wide porch steps; the click of shoes on concrete again. The double doors ahead of them. Edith shuddered. _No_, she tho won't go back inside.
Then Barrett had opened the door for her, and without a word she'd entered Hell House again.
They stopped, and Barrett shut the door. Edith saw that the vase had fallen to the floor and shattered.
Barrett looked at Fischer questioningly.
"I don't know," Fischer said.
Barrett tensed. "You have to open up." Was it possible that Fischer had no extrasensory perception left? The thought that he might have to bring another psychic all the way to Main before finding out was appalling to him.
Fischer moved away from them. He looked around uneasily. It did feel different. That could be a trick, though. He'd been fooled before. He didn't dare expose himself like that again.
Barrett watched him restively. Edith glanced at her husband and saw how impatient he was.
"Try, Mr. Fischer," he said abruptly. "I guarantee there'll be no trouble."
Fischer didn't look around. He walked across the entry hall. Amazingly, the atmosphere had changed. Even without opening up, he could sense that. Still, how _much_ had it cha much faith could he really have in Barrett? His theory had sounded good. But Barrett wasn't asking him to believe a theory. He was asking him to put his life at stake again.

He kept on walking. He was passing through the archway into the great hall now; he heard the Barretts' footsteps following. Entering the hall, he stopped and looked around. The floor littered with broken objects. Across from him, a tapestry hung askew on its wall. What had th Reversor _done?_ He wanted very much to know but was afraid to try to find out.
"_Well?_" asked Barrett. Fischer waved him off. I'll do it when I'm ready, he thought angrily.
He stood immobile, listening, waiting.
On impulse then, he dropped the barriers. Closing his eyes, he spread his arms, his hands, his fingers, drawing in whatever might be hovering in the atmosphere.
His eyes jerked open, and he looked around in bafflement.
There was nothing.

Distrust returned. He whirled and darted past them. Edith looked alarmed, but Barrett grabbed her arm, preventing her from panic. "He's startled because there's nothing to pick u told her.
Fischer ran into the entry hall. Nothing. He raced down the corridor to the chapel, shoved the door in violently. Nothing. He turned and ran to the steps, descending them with avid lea ignoring the pain in his head. Straight-arming through the pool doors, he raced to the steam pulled open its door, braced himself.
Nothing.
He turned in awe. "I don't believe it."
He sprinted back along the pool and out into the corridor. He ran into the wine cellar.
Nothing. He dashed back up the stairs, gasping for breath. The theater. Nothing. The ballroo Nothing. The billiard room. Nothing. He raced along the corridor with frenzied strides. The kitchen. Nothing. The dining hall. Nothing. He charged across the great hall, back into the en hall. Barrett and Edith were still there. Fischer rocked to a panting halt in front of them. He started to speak, then broke into a run for the stairs. Barrett felt a rush of exultation. "Done," he said. "It's _done_, Edith. _Done!_" He threw his arms around her, pulled her close. Her h was pounding. She still couldn't believe it. Yet Fischer was beside himself. She watched him leaping up the staircase, two steps at a time.
Fischer ran across the corridor to the Barretts' room. He plunged inside. Nothing!
Spinning with a dazzled cry, he ran into the corridor again, to Florence's room. Nothing! Alon the corridor to his room. Nothing! Over to Belasco's quarters. Nothing! God Almighty! _Nothi His head was pounding, but he didn't care. He raced along the corridor, flinging open doors the unused bedrooms. Nothing! Everywhere he went, nothing, absolutely nothing! Jubilation inside him. Barrett had done it!

Hell House was clear!
He had to sit. Staggering to the nearest chair, he dropped down limply. Hell House cleared. It was incredible. He thrust aside the knowledge that he'd have to alter everything h ever believed. It didn't matter. _Hell House had been cleared_, exorcised by that fantastic--v -down there. His laugh broke hoarsely. And he had called it a pile of junk. Jesus God, a pile _junk!_ Why hadn't Barrett kicked him in the teeth?
He slumped against the chair, eyes closed, regaining breath.
Reaction came abruptly. If shed lasted one more hour. Just another _hour!_ He felt a sudden, anguished rage at Barrett for having left her alone.
It wouldn't last. It was overpowered by the awe he felt for the physicist. Patiently, doggedly, Barrett had done his work, knowing that they'd thought him wrong. Yet he'd been all the time. Fischer shook his head in wonderment. It was a miracle. He inhaled deeply, hac smile. The air still stank.
But not with the reek of the dead.
2:01 P.M.
Fischer braked a little as the Cadillac moved into another pocket of impenetrable mist.
He'd decided to keep the car and sell it if he could, splitting the take with Barrett. Failing that, he'd drive the damn thing into a lake; but Deutsch would never see it again. He hoped t Barrett had some way of getting the Reversor out of Hell House before Deutsch could get hi on it. It had to be worth a small fortune.
Reaching forward, he turned on the windshield wipers, his eyes fixed on the road as he drove through the dark woods, trying to dovetail the pieces in his mind.
First of all, Barrett had been right. The power in the house had been a massive residue of electromagnetic radiation. Barrett had negated it, and it had vanished. Where did that leave Florence's beliefs? Were they totally invalidated now? Had she, as Barrett had claimed, crea her own haunting, unconsciously manipulating the energy in the house to prove her points? seemed to fit. It shook his own beliefs as well, but it fitted.
Still, why had her unconscious will chosen to effect a type of phenomena she'd never effected in her life? To convince Barrett, to whom physical phenomena were the only meani kind, the answer came immediately.
All right, there really had been a Daniel Belasco, he thought. He'd been bricked inside that wall alive by someone, probably his father. That much Florence had picked up psychica reading the house's energy like the memory bank of a computer. That Daniel Belasco was, t the haunting force had been her mistaken interpretation of those facts.

Why had she carried it to such suicidal extremes, though? The question baffled him. After a lifetime of intelligent mediumship, why had she literally killed herself to prove that she was right? Was that the kind of person she'd really been? Had her outward behavior been entirel deception? It seemed impossible. She'd functioned as a psychic for many years without incu harm; or inflicting it, as she apparently had on Barrett. Had the power of Hell House been so overwhelming that she simply hadn't been able to cope with it? Barrett would undoubtedly sa and it was true that, facing it that single time yesterday, he had almost been destroyed by its enormity. Still . . .

Fischer lit a cigarette and blew out smoke. He had to force himself back to the unassailable fact that the house was clear. Barrett had been right; there was no denying it. H theory made sense: shapeless power in the house requiring the focus of invading winds in o function. What had the house been like between 1940 and last Monday? he wondered. Silen Waiting for some new intelligence to enter? Undoubtedly--since Barrett was correct.

Correct.

He tried to fight away encroaching doubts. Damn it, he'd been in the housel He'd run from room to room, completely opened. There'd been nothing. Hell House had been clear. Why w stupid qualms assailing him, then?

Because it was all too simple, he realized abruptly.

What about the debacles of 1931 and 1940? He'd been in one of them and knew how incred complex the events had been. He thought about the list Barrett had. There must have been a hundred different phenomena itemized on it. This week's occurrences had been staggerin varied. It simply didn't make sense that it had all been radiation to be turned off like a lamp.

True, there was no logic to back up his misgiving, but he could not dispel it. There had been many "final answers" in the past, people swearing that they knew the secret of Hell House.

Florence had believed it of herself and had been lured, by that belief, to her destruction. Nov Barrett felt _he_ had the final answer. Granted that he had what seemed to be complete verification of his certainty. What if he was wrong, though? If there'd been any recurrent met at all to the house, it had been that at the moment when a person thought the final answer h been found, the house's final attack was launched.

Fischer shook his head. He didn't want to believe that. Logically, he _couldn't_ believe it. Barrett had been right. The house was clear.

Abruptly he recalled the bloody circle on the chapel floor, the "B" inside it. Belasco, obviously. Why had Florence done that? Had her thoughts been blinded by the imminence o crystallized?

No. It couldn't be Belasco. The house was clear. He'd felt it himself, for Christ's sake!

Barrett had been absolutely right. Electromagnetic radiation was the answer.

Why, then, was his foot pressing down harder and harder on the accelerator? Why was his heart beginning to pound? Why was there an icy prickling on the back of his neck? _Why dic this constantly increasing dread that he had to get back to the house before it was too late?_

2:17 P.M.

Barrett came out of the bathroom, wearing robe and slippers. He limped to Edith's bed and sat on the edge of it. She was lying down, the comforter pulled over her. "Feeling better?" sh asked.
"Marvelous."
"How's the thumb?"
"I'll have it checked as soon as we get home." He wouldn't tell her that he'd tried to unwind the bandage in the shower but had been forced to stop because he'd almost fainted pain.
"Home." Edith's smile was bemused. "I guess I still can't believe we're really going to see it again."
"We'll be there by tomorrow." Barrett made a face. "We'd be there by tonight if Deutsch Junior wasn't such a--"
"--son of a bitch," she provided.
Barrett smiled. "To put it mildly." The smile disappeared. "I'm afraid our security is gone, my dear."

"You're my security," she said. "Leaving this house with you by my side will be worth a million dollars to me." She took hold of his left hand. "Is it really over, Lionel? All of it?"
He nodded. "All of it."
"It's so hard to believe."
"I know." He squeezed her hand. "You don't mind if I say I told you so, do you?"
"I don't mind anything as long as I know it's over."
"It is."
"What a pity she had to die when the answer was so close."
"It _is_ a pity. I should have made her leave."
She put her other hand on his and pressed it reassuringly. "You did everything you could."
"I shouldn't have left her alone before."
"How could you have known she'd wake up?"
"I couldn't. It was incredible. Her subconscious was so intent on validating her delusion that her system actually rejected the sedation."
"The poor woman," Edith said.
"The poor, self-defrauded woman. Even to the final touch--scrawling, in her own blood, that circle with the 'B' inside it. She had to believe, even as she died, that she was right; that it was Belasco destroying her--the father or the son, I don't know which. She couldn't allow herself to believe it was her own mind doing it." He winced. "How pitiful an end it must have been; pain-racked, terrified--"
Seeing the look on Edith's face, he stopped. "I'm sorry."
"It's all right."

He forced a smile. "Well, Fischer should be back in an hour or so, and we can leave." He frowned. "Assuming he isn't detained when he brings in her body."
"Can't say I'll miss the old place," she said after a few moments.
Barrett laughed softly. "Nor can I. Although"--he thought about it for a moment--"it is my scene of--how shall I term it?--triumph?"
"Yes." She nodded. "It _is_ a triumph. I can't really comprehend what you've done, but I sense how terribly important it is."
"Well, if I do say so myself, it's going to give parapsychology rather a leg up into polite society."
Edith smiled.
"Because it's science," he said. "No mumbo-jumbo. Nothing the critics can pick at--though I'm sure they'll try. Not that I argue with them when they cavil at the usual approach to psych phenomena. Their resentment of the aura of trivial humbug which hovers over most of the p and its advocates is justifiable. By and large, _psi_ doesn't have an air of respectability. Therefore the critics ridicule it rather than risk being ridiculed themselves for examining it seriously. This is _a priori_ evaluation, unfortunately--one hundred percent unscientific. They continue to overlook the import of parapsychology, I'm afraid, until they're able--as Huxley pu it--'to sit down before fact as a little child--be prepared to give up every preconceived notion, follow humbly wherever and to whatsoever abysses nature leads.'"
He chuckled self-consciously. "End of discourse." Leaning over, he kissed her gently on the cheek. "The speechifier loves you," he said.
"Oh, Lionel." She slipped her arms around his back. "I love you, too. And I'm so proud of you."
She was asleep now. Barrett carefully disengaged his fingers from hers and stood. He smiled down at her. She deserved this sleep. She hadn't had a decent night's rest since they entered Hell House.
His smile broadened as he turned from the bed. Hell House was a misnomer now. From this day forth, it would be merely the Belasco house.
As he dressed with slow, contented movements, he wondered what would happen to the ho It ought to be a shrine to science. Deutsch would doubtless sell it to the highest bidder, thou He grunted with amusement. Not that he could imagine anyone wanting to own it.
He combed his hair, looking at his reflection in the wall mirror. His eye was caught by the rocking chair across the room, and he smiled again. All of that was over now, the endles little outputs of meaningless kinetics. No more winds or odors, no percussions; nothing.
He crossed the room and went into the corridor, heading for the stairs. He was glad that Fischer had insisted on taking Florence Tanner's body into town immediately. He knew the c would not have placed the body in the trunk, and it would have been terribly painful for Edith ride all the way to Caribou Falls with the body in the back seat. He hoped that Fischer didn't take too long in returning. He was working up quite an appetite; his first of the week. A celebration meal, he thought. Poor old Deutsch, it suddenly occurred to him; he'd never kno Perhaps it was kinder that way. Not that Deutsch had wanted--or deserved--kindness.

He descended the staircase slowly, eying the enormous entry hall. A museum, he thought. Really, something should be done with the house now that the terror had been exorcised.

He hobbled across the entry hall. He'd examined his body in the full-length bathroom mirror after taking his shower, imagining it was how a prizefighter's body looked after a particularly grueling bout--the purple-black contusions everywhere. The burned skin on his c was still contracting, too; he could feel the tautness of the scalded area pulling at the skin around it. The abrasion on his shin still hurt as well; and, as for his leg and thumb--Barrett ha to smile. The Olympics I'm not ready for, he thought.

He crossed the great hall, walking to the Reversor. Once again, he stared at the main dial in awe: 14,780. He'd never dreamed the reading could be so high. No wonder this place hac Everest of haunted houses. He shook his head almost admiringly. The house had been aptl

He turned and limped to the table, frowning as he visualized the necessary packing. He looked at the array of equipment. Maybe he wouldn't have to pack it, after all. If they put blankets in the limousine trunk for padding, the equipment could probably be wrapped in tow something. Maybe they should take a few _objets d'art_ as well, he thought, repressing a sn Deutsch would never miss them. He ran a finger over the top of the EMR recorder.

Its needle stirred.

Barrett twitched. He stared at the needle. It was motionless again. Odd, he thought. Touching the recorder must have activated the needle by static electricity. It wouldn't happen again.

The needle jumped across the dial, then fluttered back to zero.

Barrett felt a tic in his right cheek. What was happening? The recorder couldn't function on its own. EMR was convertible to measurable energy only in the presence of a psychic. H a dry laugh. Grotesque if I discover I'm a medium after all these years, he thought. He made scoffing noise. That was absurd. Besides, there was no radiation left in the house. He'd eliminated it.

The needle started moving. It did not jump or flutter. It inched across the dial as though recording a build-up of radiation. "No," Barrett said. His tone was irritated. This was ludicrou

The needle continued moving. Barrett stared at it as it passed the 100 mark, the 150 mark.

He shook his head. This was absurd. It couldn't record by itself. Moreover, there was nothin in the house to record. "No," he said again. There was more anger than dismay in his voice. simply could not be.

His head jerked up so suddenly that it hurt his neck. He watched the needle of the dynamometer begin to arc across its dial. This was _impossible_. His gaze leaped to the fac the thermometer. It was starting to record a drop in temperature. "_No_," he said. His face w pale with malice. This was nonsense, totally illogical.

He caught his breath as the camera clicked. He gaped at it and heard the film inside it being wound, heard the lens click shut again, He gasped again, muscles spasmed as the ra colored lights went on, turned off, went on again. "_No_." He shook his head unyieldingly. Th was not acceptable. It was a trick of some kind; it was fraudulent.
He started violently as one of the test tubes broke in half, falling from its rack to clatter on the tabletop. _This cannot be!_ he heard a voice protesting in his mind. Abruptly h remembered Fischer's single question. "No!" he snapped. He backed off from the table. It wa utterly impossible. Once dispelled, the radiation had no restorative power whatever.
He cried out as the rack of lights began to flicker rapidly. "No!" he raged. He would not believe it! The needles of his instruments were not all quivering across their dials. The thermometer was not recording a constant drop in temperature. The electric stove had not b glow. The galvanometers were not recording on their own. The camera wasn't taking photog tubes and vessels weren't breaking one by one. The EMR recorder needle hadn't passed th
It was all delusion. He was suffering some aberration of the senses. _This-could-not-behapp "Wrong!" he shouted, face distorted by fury. "Wrong, wrong, _wrong!_"
His mouth fell open as the EMR recorder started to expand. He stared at it in horror as it swelled as though its sides and top were made of rubber. _No_. He shook his head in disav was going mad. This was impossible. He would not accept it He would not-- He screamed as the recorder suddenly exploded, screamed again as metal splinters drove into his face and eyes. He dropped his cane and threw his hands across his face. Somethin across the table, and he jolted backward as the camera struck him on the legs. He lost his balance, fell, heard equipment crashing to the floor as though someone were flinging it. He t to see but couldn't, staggered blindly to his feet.

It struck him then, a crushing, arctic force that jerked him from his feet as though he were a toy. A cry of shocked bewilderment flooded from him as the glacial force propelled hi through the air and flung him violently against the front of the Reversor. Barrett felt his left arm snap. He shrieked in pain, dropping to the floor.
Again the unseen force grabbed hold of him and started dragging him across the hall. He couldn't break away from it. Trying in vain to scream for help, he bumped and slithered along floor. A massive table blocked his way. Sensing it, he flung his right arm up, crashed against edge, his bandaged thumb driven back against its wrist. His mouth jerked open in a stranglin of agony. Blood began to spout from the hand. Yanked across the tabletop and somersaulte onto the floor again, he caught an obscure glimpse of the thumb dangling from his hand by s of bone and skin.
He tried to fight against the power which hauled him brutally across the entry hall, but he was helpless in its grip, a plaything in the jaws of some invisible creature. Eyes staring sightlessly, face a blood-streaked mask of horror, he was dragged into the corridor feet first. His chest was filled with fiery pain as clutching hands crushed his heart. He couldn't breathe His arms and legs were going numb. His face began to darken, turning red, then purple. Vei distended on his neck; his eyes began to bulge. His mouth hung open, sucking at the air in v the savage force bounced him down the stairs and drove his broken body through the swing The tile floor rushed beneath him. He was hurtled into space.

The water crashed around him icily. The clutching force dragged him toward the bottom. Water poured into his throat. He started choking, struggled fitfully. The force would not relea him. Water gushed into his lungs. He doubled over, staring at the bottom as he strangled. Bl from his thumb was clouding everything. The power turned him slowly. He was staring upwa through a reddish haze. There was someone standing on the pool edge, looking down at hir The sound of his enfeebled thrashing faded. The figure blurred, began to disappear in shadows. Barrett settled to the bottom, eyes unseeing once again. Somewhere deep within of his mind a faint intelligence still flickered, crying out in anguish: _Edith!_

Then all was blackness, like a shroud enfolding him, as he descended into night.

2:46 P.M.

Edith's left hand jumped abruptly. Her wedding band had sheared in half and fallen to the bed. She snapped her eyelids back. The room was dark. "Lionel?"

The door was opened. The corridor was dark, too. Someone entered. "Lionel?" she said again.

"Yes."

She sat up groggily. "What happened?"

"Nothing to be concerned about. The generator just went out."

"Oh, no." She tried to see. It was too dark.

"It's not important," Lionel said. She heard his footsteps cross the room, felt his weight settle on the other side of the bed. She reached out nervously and felt his hand. "You're sure everything is all right?"

"Of course." The hand began to stroke her hair. "Don't be afraid. Let's take advantage of it."

"What?" She reached for him, but he was farther away than she'd thought.

"We haven't been together for a long time." Lionel's hand slid down her cheek. "And you're in need of it."

She made a questioning sound. His hand slid over to her left breast and began to squeeze it. "Lionel, don't," she said.

"Why not?" he asked. "Aren't I good enough for you?"

"What are you--?"

"Fischer's good enough," he interrupted. "Even Florence Tanner was good enough." His fingers tightened on her breast, hurting it. "_How about a little pussy for the old man now?_" Edith tried to pull away his hand. She felt her heartbeat quicken. "No," she murmured.

"Yes," he said. The hand moved down abruptly, shoving up her skirt to clutch between her legs. "_Yes, you lesbian bitch_."

The lights went on.
Edith screamed. The hand released her, pulling back. It was bloodless, severed at the wrist, floating up above her chest now, gamboling in the air before her stricken face, vein en dangling from it. Edith recoiled against the headboard. The hand dropped to her breast agai pinching her nipple between its thumb and index finger. She cried out shrilly, tried to knock i loose. The hand jumped forward like a leprous spider, clamping on her face, cold and smelli the grave. A crazed shriek flooded from her, and the gray hand flew back. Edith jerked her le up, kicking at it berserkly. The hand jumped up and started gesturing in the air, fingers wriggling wildly.
Suddenly it darted downward, vanishing into the bedclothes, and the comforter began to swell, ballooning quickly. Gasping, Edith flung herself across the mattress, springing to her feet. She lurched around the corner of the bed, fleeing for the door. The comforter flew upwa
In an instant, she was covered by a cloud of moths. Flailing at the surge of insects, she stum blindly across the room. The moths enveloped her completely, gray wings beating at her fac bodies fluttering in her hair. She tried to scream, but moths flew in her mouth; she spit them in horrified revulsion, pressed her lips together. Moths flew in her ears. Their dusty wings whipped frenziedly against her eyes. Both arms flung across her face, she crashed against t octagonal table and began to fall.
Before she hit the floor, the moths were gone. She landed hard and scrabbled to her knees. The table thudded down nearby, pages of Lionel's manuscript spilling across the rug in front her. The pages leaped into the air. She swung at them in mindless panic as they tore in shre before her eyes. The pieces shot into the air and fluttered downward like a rain of giant snowflakes. Edith backed away from them, pushing at the floor with hands and feet. A man l laugh. She looked around in terror. "Lionel," she muttered. "Lionel." She heard her own voic played back like a tape recording. "No," she pleaded. "No," her voice repeated. Edith whined heard the whine again. She started crying, heard an echoed crying in the air. With a despera lunge, she found her feet and dashed across the room. She jerked the door in, leaped back choking scream.
Florence stood in the doorway, naked, staring at her, dark blood running down her thighs and legs. Edith shrieked. Darkness swept across her. She began to fall.
She jerked erect as an electric current spasmed through her body. Darkness fled; she was acutely conscious, knowing even as she flung herself into the empty doorway that she hadn allowed to faint. She lunged into the corridor and headed for the stairs. The air was thick wit mist. She smelled the odor of the tarn. A figure blocked her way. Edith jolted to a stop. The woman wore a white gown. She was soaking wet, her dark hair plastered down across her g She was holding something in her arms. Edith stared at it in loathing; it was half-formed, monstrous. _Bastard Bog!_ a voice screamed in her mind. She backed off, a demented moa throat.

Something spun her, slammed against her back. To keep from falling, she was forced to run She wasn't headed for the stairs! She tried to stop herself and turn but couldn't control her limbs. She screamed as Florence rushed at her. She felt the cold arms clamp around her, a scream was cut off as the dead lips crushed on hers. She reached up, gagging, crazed with tried to pull the head away.

Florence vanished. Edith's yanking motion made her fall. She landed on her knees.

"Lionel!" she screamed. "Lionel!" roared a mocking voice. Cold wind rushed across her, whip her clothes and hair. She tried to stand. Something icy crashed against her neck. She screa teeth dug deep into her flesh. Her hands flew up, but there was nothing. Fetid spittle trickled down her skin. She felt the pitted indentations. "Lionel!" she screamed in anguish.

"Here!" he answered. Edith's head jerked up. He was running down the corridor toward her! She scrambled up and rushed toward him. She threw herself against him. Instantly she jerke staring at the man who held her. It was her father, with the slack expression of an imbecile o his face, his red-rimmed eyes regarding her with stupid glee, his mouth agape, his tongue protruding. He started pulling her against him, a sound of animal amusement rumbling in his He was naked, bloated. Edith wrenched away from him. She tried to run, but something sma against her side. She lost her balance and went floundering toward the banister that overloo the entry hall. She crashed against it, crying out in pain. Her father advanced on her, holding his enormous penis with both hands. She started clambering across the rail, to die below, es this horror.

Strong hands grabbed her. Edith whirled in horror. Lionel was holding her. She stared at him, refusing to believe. "Edith! It's me!" The sound of his familiar voice made her fall agains him, sobbing. "Take me out of here," she begged.

"Right away," he answered. Left arm fixed around her back, he ran her to the stairs. She looked at him. He had no cane, he wasn't limping. "No," she moaned. "It's quite all right," he said. He rushed her down the staircase. Edith tried to pull away from him. "It's me," he said. sobbed again. He wouldn't let her go. Hollow laughter rippled in the air. She looked around a saw the people grouped below, watching them elatedly. She turned to Lionel, but it wasn't L anymore. It was a monstrous caricature of him, every feature gross, exaggerated, his voice vicious mocking as he said, "It's me. It's me." "No!" she screamed. She wrestled with him helplessly. His grip was too strong. He wasn't even looking ahead. He was grinning at her as ran. Edith closed her eyes. Let it be quick! she pleaded.

The entry hall, the corridor. She felt herself rushed along the floor. She couldn't make a sound. The theater door flew open; she was thrust inside. She opened her eyes and saw a c naked people sitting in the velvet chairs, keening with amusement at her plight. She was hal up the steps. The bloated parody of Lionel bound her to a post. She looked out at the audience. They howled with fierce anticipation. Edith cried out as her clothes were ripped av The people cheered. It sounded muffled, from another world. Edith heard a coughing growl a turned her head. A crouching leopard stalked across the stage. She tried to scream, but not issued from her throat. The audience screamed. Edith closed her eyes. The leopard sprang. its huge teeth sinking deep into her head, its heated, blood-sour breath flooding across her f She felt its rear legs start to thrash berserkly, felt the talons ripping out her stomach. Black pain seared her, and she fell back, shrieking.

She was crumpled on the dusty stage. Heartbeat staggering, she sat up. The theater was empty. No. There was someone, sitting in the shadows of the last row, dressed in black. She to hear a deep voice resonating in her mind. _Welcome to my house_, it said.

She tried to stand. Her legs began to buckle, and she fell against a wall. She pushed away and staggered to the steps. Lionel stood in front of her. "It's me," he said. She cried out, agonized. Laughter boomed inside the theater. Edith stumbled to the door and pushed it ope Lionel was standing in the corridor. "It's me," he said.

She tried to make the entry hall but couldn't; her body was turned to the side. Lionel was waiting on the landing of the cellar stairs. "It's me!" he cried. The stairwell yawned before he Lionel was standing at the bottom, grinning up at her. "It's me!" he cried. Edith whimpered, clutching at the banister rail, half-pushed, half-descending on her own. Lionel was standing the metal doors.

"It's me!" he cried. The swinging doors flew open, crashed against the wall inside. Lionel was standing by the pool. "It's me!" he cried. The force impelled her toward him. Edith stagg forward, stopped beside the pool. She stared into the bloody water.

Lionel was floating just below the surface, staring up at her.

Madness took her then. She backed off, screaming, stumbling out into the corridor. A figure came leaping down the stairs and grabbed her by the arms. She fought it with dement strength, shrieks of frenzy flooding from her throat. The figure shouted at her, but she heard only her own voice. Something struck her on the jaw, and suddenly she was falling, screami endlessly, as she went plummeting into the depths.

3:31 P.M.

Edith stirred again. Her eyes fluttered open. For several moments she stared toward the front of the car. Then she turned in confusion, twitching as she saw him. She looked at him i questioning silence.

"I'm sorry I had to hit you," he said.

"That was you?"

He nodded.
Edith looked around abruptly. "Lionel."
"His body's in the trunk."
She started for the door, but Fischer restrained her. "You don't want to look at him." She continued struggling against his grip. "Don't," he said.
Edith fell back, averting her face. Fischer sat in silence, listening to her cry.
She turned to him abruptly. "Let's get out of here," she said.
He didn't move.

"What is it?"
"I'm not leaving."
Edith didn't understand.
"I'm going back inside."
"_Inside?_" She looked appalled. "You don't know what it's like in there."
"I have to--"
"You don't know what it's like!" she cut him off. "It killed my husband! It killed Florence Tanner! It would have killed me if you hadn't gotten back! No one has a chance in Fischer didn't argue.
"Aren't two deaths enough? Do you have to die too?"
"I don't plan to die."
She clutched his hand. "Don't leave me, please."
"I have to."
"_No_."
"I have to."
"Please don't do it!"
"Edith, I _have_ to."
"No! You don't! You _don't!_ There isn't any reason to go back inside!"
"Edith." Fischer took her hand in both of his and waited for her crying to abate. "Listen now."
She shook her head, eyes closing.
"I have to. For Florence. For your husband."
"They wouldn't want you to--"
"_I_ want it," Fischer interrupted. "I need it. If I leave Hell House now, I might as well crawl into my grave and die. I haven't done a thing all week. While Florence and your husba doing everything they could to solve the haunting--"
"They couldn't solve it, though! There isn't any way of solving it!"
"Maybe not." He paused. "I'm going to try, though." Edith glanced up quickly at him, then said nothing, silenced by his look. "I'm going to try," he said.

They were silent. Finally Fischer asked, "You drive, don't you?"
He saw a telltale flare of hope in her expression. "No," she said.
He smiled gently. "Yes, you do."
Edith's chin slumped forward on her chest. "You're going to die," she said. "Like Lionel. Like Florence."
Fischer drew in a slow breath.
"Then I will," he said.
Fischer crossed the bridge and trudged along the gravel path which ringed the tarn. He was alone now. For several moments the realization filled him with such dread that he almost tur and ran.
Edith had been crying when she left; she'd tried, in vain, to control it. Tears running down her cheeks, she'd turned the Cadillac and driven off into the mist. He had to go inside house now anyway. He couldn't walk to Caribou Falls in this cold.
The bottoms of his tennis shoes made crunching noises on the gravel as he walked. What w he going to do? he wondered. He had no idea. Had Florence accomplished anything? Had E had no way of knowing. He might be confronted with starting from the beginning all over aga
He began to shake, stiffening his back to fight it off. It didn't matter what he had to do. He was here; he'd do it. Edith would bring back food and leave it on the porch for him. H long it lasted didn't matter either. Only one thing counted at the moment.
As he continued walking, he became conscious of the medallion Florence had given him pressed against his chest. He'd told Edith he was doing this for Barrett too, but really it was all for Florence. She was the one he could have helped, the one he should have helped.
The house again, a mist-obscured escarpment up ahead. Fischer stopped and looked at it. I might have stood there for a thousand years. Was there an answer to its haunting? He didn' But if he couldn't discover it, then no one could: of that much he was certain.
He padded silently across the porch steps to the door. It was still ajar, the way he'd left it when he'd carried Barrett's body to the car. He hesitated for a long time, sensing that t walk inside would decide, finally and irrevocably, his fate.
"Hell." What fate did he have, anyway? He went inside and shut the door. Moving to the telephone, he picked up the receiver. The line was dead. What did you expect? he asked hi dumped the receiver on the table. He was cut off absolutely now. He turned and looked arou

As he crossed the entry hall, he had the feeling that the house was swallowing him alive.
6:29 P.M.
Fischer sat at the huge round table in the great hall, eating a sandwich and drinking a cup of coffee; Edith had brought two sacks of food and left again without a word. It's insane, Fischer was thinking. He'd thought it endlessly for the past hour.

The atmosphere of Hell House was completely flat.
He hadn't even had to open up to realize it. The awareness had developed quickly as he'd toured the house, first upstairs, all the bedrooms, used and unused. If there'd been any pres in the air, he would have sensed it. There was nothing. It was grotesque. What had killed Ba so violently, then? What had almost killed Edith? He'd felt that presence strongly as he'd rus down the cellar steps to rescue her before. Now it was gone; the house felt as clear as it had after the Reversor had been used. It wasn't any kind of trick, either; he was sure of that. Wh he'd opened up the first time yesterday, he'd known that there was something lurking in the He'd miscalculated its power and its cunning, but he'd known it was there.
Now it wasn't.
Fischer stared at the floor. One of Barrett's galvanometers was lying near his feet, its side cracked open, springs and coils protruding from the gash like polished entrails. His gaz shifted to the other equipment lying broken on the rug, shifted to the Reversor, and held on t huge dent on its face. Something devastating had struck this room, struck this equipment, st Barrett.
Where had it gone?
He sighed, and propping the soles of his tennis shoes against the table edge, leaned the chair back slightly. Now what? he thought. He'd come back imbued with fine dramatic resolu For what? He was no further along than he'd ever been. There wasn't even anything to work now.
He'd walked through every room on the first floor, stood for almost twenty minutes in the dining hall, looking at its wreckage: the massive table wedged against the fireplace screen, t giant sanctuary lamp battered on the floor, the overturned chairs, the debris of broken crock and glassware, the coffeepot and serving dish, the scattering of silverware, the dried food, th coffee stain, the sallow blots of sugar and cream. Staring at it all, he'd tried to calculate what had happened. Which one of the two had been correct? Had Florence caused the attack, as had claimed? Or had it been Daniel Belasco, as Florence had insisted?
No way of knowing. Fischer had walked through the kitchen, out through the west doorway and down the corridor to the ballroom. What had made the chandelier move? Electromagnet radiation, or the dead?
The chapel. Had Daniel Belasco possessed Florence?--or suicidal madness?
He'd gone into the garage, the theater, the cellar, walked along the pool, into the steam room. What had attacked Barrett there? Mindless power, or Belasco?
The wine cellar. He'd stood there for minutes, staring at the open section of wall.
Nothing there; a void.
Where was the power?
Fischer picked up the tape recorder and set it back on the table. Finding the extension cord, he plugged it in, surprised to discover that it still worked. He reversed the spool, then pressed the PLAY button.

"Hold it!" Barrett's voice said loudly. There were shuffling noises. He heard heavy breathing; was it his? Then Barrett said, "Miss Tanner coming out of trance. Premature retra causing brief systemic shock." After several moments of silence, the recorder was turned off Fischer reversed the tape farther, played it back. "Teleplasmic veil beginning to condense," said Barrett's voice. Silence. Fischer remembered the mistlike fabric which had c Florence's head and shoulders like a wet shroud. Why had she manifested physical phenom question still disturbed him. "Separate filament extending downward," Barrett's voice said.
Fischer reversed the spool and switched the recorder to PLAY again. "Medium's respiration hundred and ten," Barrett's voice was saying. "Dynamometer fourteen hundred and sixty. Te

-" He stopped as someone gasped; Edith, Fischer recalled. Momentary silence. Then Barret said, "Ozone present in the air."
Fischer stopped the spool, reversed it, let it run. What could he possibly hope to learn from reliving those moments? They hadn't added up to anything, except to confirm to Floren she believed, and to Barrett what he believed. He stopped the spool, began to play the tape
"Sitters: Doctor and Mrs. Lionel Barrett, Mr. Benjamin--" Fischer switched it off and ran the ta back farther still.
He stopped and played it, starting as the hysterical voice-- Florence's, yet so unlike hers--cried out, "--don't want to hurt you, but I must! I _must!_" A momentary silence. The vo near choking with venom as it said: "I warn you. _Get out of this house before I kill you all_."
Sudden banging sounds. Edith's frightened voice asking, "_What's that?_" Fischer stopped the spool, reversed the tape, and listened to the threatening voice again. Had it been the voi of Daniel Belasco? He listened to it five times, gleaning nothing from it. Barrett could have b right. It might have been Florence's subconscious creating the voice, the character, the threa
With a muffled curse, he reversed the tape again and played it back. "Leave house," said the imperious voice of Red Cloud. Had there ever been such an entity, or had it, too, been a segment of Florence's personality? Fischer shook his head. There was a grunting noise. "No said the voice, deep-pitched, but conceivably Florence's, forced to a lower register. "No goo Here too long. Not listen. Not understand. Too much sick inside." Fischer had to smile, altho it pained him. It was such a poor excuse for the voice of an Indian. "Limits," it was saying.
"Nations. Terms. Not know what that mean. Extremes and limits. Terminations and extremiti pause. "Not know."
"Shit," said Fischer, jabbing in the button which stopped the spool. He reversed it farther, switched it on. Silence. "Now, if you'd--" Barrett began. "Red Cloud Tanner woman g Florence interrupted in the deep voice. "Guide second medium on this side."
He listened to the entire sitting: the rumbling voice of the Indian; the description of the caveman entity; the "arrival" of "the young man"; the hysterical voice, threatening them;

fierce percussions; Barrett's voice describing the unexpected onset of physical phenomena. The second sitting: Florence's invocation and hymn; her sinking into trance--the lowpitched, wavering moans, the wheezing inhalations; Barrett's impersonal voice recording instrument readings; his description of the materialization; the rolling laugh; Edith's scream.

The tape moved soundlessly. Fischer reached out and switched off the recorder. _Zero_, he thought. Who had he been kidding, to come charging back in here like Don Quixote? What a

He stood. Well, he wasn't leaving. Not until something happened. Not until he started to pick up the threads. There had to be an answer somewhere. All right, he'd walk around the h again. He'd keep on ferreting in corners until he found that little mote of insight he was searching for. The house felt flat, but somewhere there was something still alive, something powerful enough to murder.

He was going to find it if it took a year.

As he moved across the great hall, he began to open up. There seemed no danger to it now There seemed no point to it, either. Still, he had to do something.

He had scarcely let the last of his defenses down when something pushed him. He was mov into the entry hall, and the unexpected shove almost made him fall. Staggering to one side, crossed his arms automatically, braced for resistance.

There was no more. Fischer scowled. He knew that he should open up again. Here was something tangible at last. Except that it had caught him by surprise. He didn't dare expose himself the way he had yesterday.

He stood hesitantly, sensing the presence hovering around him, wanting to confront it but afraid to.

Enraged at his weakness, he opened up.

Immediately something clutched his arm and flung him toward the south corridor. Fischer stumbled to a halt. He removed his crossed arms, which had, with instant selfprotection, cov his solar plexus. He had to stop this opening and closing like a goddamned frightened clam!

He opened the door inside himself enough to feel the presence squeezing in. Again he was impelled toward the corridor. It was as though invisible hands were plucking at his clothes, holding his hand, clutching at his arm. He moved along with it, amazed by the blandness of presence. This was no dark, destructive force. This was like some unseen maiden aunt hast to the kitchen for milk and cookies. Fischer almost felt inclined to smile at the feel of it--insistent, yes, demanding, but totally devoid of menace. He gasped at the sudden thought: Florence! She had sworn the answer lay in the chapel! A rush of joy burst through him. Flore helping him! He pushed in through the heavy door and went inside.

The chapel was oppressively still. Fischer looked around as though to see her. There was nothing.

The altar.

The words had flashed across his mind as clearly as though someone had spoken them alo
He moved quickly down the aisle, wincing as he stepped across the cat, then the fallen cruc
He reached the altar and looked at the open Bible. The page he saw was headed BIRTHS. " Myron Belasco was born at 2:00 A.M. on November 4, 1903." He felt a chilling disappointme wasn't it; it couldn't be.
He started as the pages of the Bible were flung over in a bunch. Now individual pages began to whirl by so fast he felt a breeze across his face. They stopped. He looked down, co tell which paragraph he was meant to see. He felt his hand being lifted, let it move to the pag His index finger settled on a line. He bent across the book to read it.
"_If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out_."
He stared at the words. It seemed as though Florence were standing beside him, anxious an impatient; but he didn't understand. The words made no sense to him.
"Florence--" he started.
He jerked his head up at the tearing sound behind the altar. A strip of wallpaper was hanging down, revealing the plaster wall behind it.
Fischer cried out as the medallion burned against his chest. Reaching frantically inside his shirt, he yanked it out and dropped it with a hiss of pain. It broke in pieces on the floor.
Fischer stared at it in dazed confusion. A wedge like the head of an arrow had fallen from th other parts. It seemed to be pointing at--
It came with an appalling rush. Like some native paralyzed to mindless terror by the roar of an approaching tidal wave. Fischer looked up dumbly.
In the next moment, the power had smashed against him violently, driving him backward. He screamed in horror as it flung him to the floor and covered him with crushing blackness. The no resisting it. Helplessly, he lay there as the cold force flooded through him, swelling every vein with dark contamination. _Now!_ a voice howled in his mind, triumphantly. And suddenl knew the answer, just as Florence Tanner had, and Barrett had, and knew that he was being because he was about to die.
He didn't move for a long time. His eyes did not blink. He looked like a dead man sprawled on the floor.
Then, very slowly, face without expression, he got up and drifted to the door. Pulling it open, he walked into the corridor and headed toward the entry hall. He walked to the front d opened it, and went outside. Crossing the porch, he descended the broad steps, reached th path, and started walking on it. He stared straight ahead as he walked to the edge of the tar stepped into the glutinous ooze. The water rose above his knees.
He seemed to hear a distant cry. He blinked, kept moving. Something crashed into the wate with him, grabbed his sweater, jerked him back. There was an acid wrenching in his vitals an gasped in pain. He tried to throw himself into the water. Someone tried to pull him back to sh Fischer groaned and pulled away. The cold hands grabbed him by the neck. He snarled and break away from them. His stomach muscles knotted, and he doubled over, falling to his kne water splashed across his face. He shook his head and tried to rise, to move into the tarn ag

The hands kept pulling at him. Looking up, he saw, as through a veil of gelatin, a white, distorted face. Its lips were moving, but he couldn't hear a sound. He stared up dazedly. He to die. He knew that clearly.
Belasco had told him so.
7:58 P.M.
For the past half-hour Fischer had been hunched in the corner of the seat, face as white as chalk, teeth chattering, arms crossed across his stomach, eyes unblinking for minutes at time, staring sightlessly ahead. His shaking had kept dislodging the blanket from his shoulde Edith had had to draw it around him repeatedly. Fischer had not responded to her attentions way. She might have been invisible to him.
It had taken her what seemed an endless amount of time to prevent him from walking into the tarn. Although his struggles had become progressively weaker, his obvious intention to d himself had persisted. Like a somnambulist, he had tried stubbornly to wrest himself away fr her. Nothing she'd said or done seemed to help. He hadn't spoken, was almost soundless in single-minded attempt at suicide. Pulling at his clothes, clutching at his hands and arms and hair, slapping his face, Edith had thwarted his efforts again and again. By the time his strugg had finally ended, she'd been as soaked and shivering as he.

She looked around, trying to see the gasoline gauge. She'd been running the motor and heater since she'd gotten him into the car; the Cadillac was warm now. She saw that there w still more than half a tank, and turned back. The temperature did not appear to have the slig effect on Fischer. His shivering continued unabated. Still, it was more than cold, she knew. S stared at his palsied features. Full circle; she could not avoid the thought.
The 1970 attempt on Hell House was one more item on the list of failures.
Fischer twitched convulsively and closed his eyes. His teeth stopped chattering; his body was immobile. As Edith watched in anxious silence, she saw faint streaks of color returning cheeks.
Several minutes later he opened his eyes and looked at her. She heard a dry, crackling sound in his throat as he swallowed. He reached out slowly toward her, and she took his ha was as cold as ice.
"Thank you," he murmured.
She couldn't speak.
"What time is it?"
Edith looked at her watch and saw that it had stopped. She twisted around to look at the dashboard. "Just past eight."
Fischer sank back with a feeble groan. "How did you get me here?"

He listened as she told him. When she was through, he asked, "Why did you come back again?"
"I didn't think you should be alone."
"In spite of what happened to you before?"
"I was going to try."
His fingers tightened on hers.
"What happened?" she asked.
"I was trapped."
"By what?"
"By _whom_."
She waited.
"Florence told us," Fischer said. "She _told_ us, but I didn't have the brains to see."
"What?"
"The 'B' inside the circle," Fischer answered. "Belasco. Alone."
"_Alone?_" She couldn't comprehend it.
"He created everything."
"How do you know?"
"He told me so," he said. "He let me know, because I was about to die.
"No wonder the secret was never found. There's never been anything like it in the history of haunted houses: a single personality so powerful that he could create what seemed to be complex multiple haunting; one entity appearing to be dozens, imposing endless physical ar effects on those who entered his house--utilizing his power like some soloist performing on a giant, hellish console."
The motor was off now; the car was getting cold. They should be getting into town, but sitting in the darkness, stunned, subdued, she couldn't stir herself as Fischer's voice droned
"I think he knew, from the second we entered, that Florence was the one to concentrate on. She was our weakest link; not because she had no strength, but because she was so willing vulnerable to him.
"When she sat on Monday night, he must have fed her various impressions, looking for one that would create a response in her. It was the young man that 'took' in her mind-- the one Florence came to identify as Daniel Belasco.
"At the same time, in order to use her against your husband, Belasco caused her to manifest physical phenomena. It served a multiple purpose. It verified your husband's belief was the first wedge in Florence's assurance; she knew she was a mental medium, and ever tried to convince herself that it was God's will, it always distressed her. She knew it was wro We both did.

"And, as a third effect, it prevented your husband from bringing another psychic into the house after I refused to sit for him." His eyes flinted. "Belasco keeping the group to a workab number.

"Then," he continued, "he started to evolve a situation of hostility between Florence and your husband. He knew that they disagreed on their beliefs, knew that, subconsciously. Flor would resent your husband's insistence on the physical examination, the intimation--howeve politely phrased-- that she was capable of fraud, even if it was involuntary. Belasco worked that resentment, worked on their differences of belief, built them up, then caused the polterg attack in the dining hall, using some of Florence's strength but mostly his own. Again, a mult purpose was served. First, it weakened Florence, made her doubt her motivations. Second, increased the animosity between her and your husband. Third, it further verified your husbar convictions. Fourth, it injured him, frightened him a little."

"He wasn't frightened," Edith said; but there was no conviction in her voice.

"He kept on working on Florence," Fischer said, as though she hadn't spoken, "draining her physically and mentally: the bites, the cat's attack--undermining her strength on the one han elaborating her misconception about Daniel on the other. When her confidence was flagging because of what your husband said, Belasco let her find the body--even staging an apparen resistance to her finding it, to make it more convincing.

"So she became persuaded that Daniel Belasco haunted the house. To guarantee the conviction, Belasco led her to the tarn in her sleep, let 'Daniel' rescue her, even gave her a fleeting glimpse of himself rushing from the tarn. She was positive then. She came to me an me what she thought--that Belasco controlled the haunting by manipulating every other entit the house. She was so close. _My God!_ Even fooled every step of the way, she almost had was why she was so certain. Because, in everything she said, there was only the thinnest w between her and the actual truth. If I'd helped her, she might have broken through, might ha Fischer stopped abruptly. For a long time he stared through the window. Finally he went on.

"It was a matter of timing," he said. "Belasco must have known that, sooner or later, Florence would come up with the right answer. So he concentrated on her even more, used about her brother's death, and tied it in to her obsession about Daniel Belasco. Her brother's grief became Daniel's grief, her brother's need"--Fischer clenched his teeth-- "became Danie His expression was one of hatred now. "He clinched it by finally letting her into the chapel. Admitting her to the very place she was positive possessed the secret of Hell House was his final stratagem, showing her the Bible entry made when his son was born. Belasco she'd believe it, because it was exactly what she was looking for--a final verification. There w no room left in her mind for doubt after that. There had been a Daniel Belasco, and his spirit needed her help. Combining the facts of his son's existence with her lasting sorrow for her brother's death, Belasco had convinced her."

Edith twitched as, unexpectedly, Fischer drove the edge of a fist against his palm. "And I sensed what that help was going to be. I knew it inside!" He turned his face away from her. " let it go. Let her do what she should never have done, let her destroy herself.

"From then on, she was lost," he went on bitterly. "There was no way I could have gotten her out of the house; I was a fool for thinking that I could. She was his . . . a puppet to be played with, tortured." Again, the sound of self-derision. "There I sat at the table while your husband explained his theory to us, knowing she was possessed, yet not even questioning suddenly, illogically--she was so quiet and attentive, on her best behavior. Because it wasn't listening at all; it was Belasco.
"He wanted to hear the details."
"Was it him that tried to break the Reversor, then?"
"Why should he break it? He knew it wasn't any danger to him."
"But you said the house was clear after Lionel used it."
"Another of Belasco's tricks."
"I can't believe--"
"He's still in that house, Edith," Fischer interrupted, pointing. "He murdered your husband, murdered Florence, almost murdered you and me--"
His laugh was cold with defeat. "His final jest. Even though we actually know his secret now, there's not a damn thing we can do about it."

8:36 P.M.
Fischer held back as they reached the house. Edith turned to face him. He was staring at the doors. "What is it?" she asked.
"I don't know if I can go back in."
She hesitated, finally said, "I have to have his things, Ben."
Fischer didn't respond.
"You said if you were closed off, Belasco couldn't touch you."
"I said a lot of things this week. Most of them wrong."
"Shall I go in, then?"
He was silent.
"Shall I?"
Stepping to the doors, he pushed the right one open. He looked inside for several moments, then turned to her. "I'll be as fast as I can," he said.
Fischer stepped inside the house. For a few minutes he stood motionless, anticipating. When nothing happened, he started across the entry hall, heading for the stairs. Again the atmosphere was flat. It did not assuage his fears this time. As he ascended the steps quickly wondered if Belasco was still in the chapel or moving about the house. He hoped that being off was enough defense. He wasn't even sure of that now. Entering the Barretts' room, he th their suitcases on the bed and opened them.

What had unnerved him as much as anything, he thought as he started packing, was the realization that Barrett had been wrong. The man had seemed so confident; everything he'd made so much sense. Still, what did that weigh against the fact that he'd failed?

Fischer moved quickly between bed, closet, and bureau, grabbing clothes and other persona belongings and tossing them into the two open suitcases. Belasco must have decided, from start, never to show himself, he thought. If no one ever saw him, they could never think him important a part of the haunting. If, instead, they observed a fantastic array of phenomena, a apparently disconnected, they would work on separate elements of those phenomena, neve realizing that he was the cause of all of them. Bastard, he thought. His features hardened, a with angry movements he began to cram things together in the suitcases so he could shut th

The only thing he couldn't understand was why Belasco-- so diabolically efficient when it came to plotting Florence's and Barrett's overthrow--had chosen such an inefficient way to fi him. Sending him away from the house could not have been fail-proof under any circumstan Belasco's power was unlimited, why had he chosen such an inept method?

Fischer stopped packing abruptly.

Unless that power was not unlimited any more.

Was it possible? He'd certainly been vulnerable to Belasco in the chapel. If there had ever been a time when Belasco should have been able to crush him, that had been the time despite that, the most he'd been able to do was direct him to commit suicide in the tarn. _Wh

Had Florence been right about him, too? Was his own power really so vast? He shook his he didn't make sense. It was ego-flattering, but unconvincing. Maybe when he was a boy, but n

More acceptable an idea was that Belasco hadn't been strong enough to destroy him after d Barrett and Florence.

Again, _why?_ With such power at his disposal as he'd manifested all week, why should he be weakened now? It couldn't be that the Reversor had worked. If it had, Belasco would be

What was it, then?

Edith stamped her feet on the porch, waiting for Fischer's return. The blanket she'd wrapped around herself was not keeping her warm; her clothes, still damp, were getting chil again. She looked into the entry hall. Would it hurt to step a few feet inside and get out of the worst of the cold?

She had to do it finally. Entering the house, she closed the door and stood beside it, looking toward the staircase.

It seemed as if they'd come into this house in another life. Monday seemed as distant in her mind as the time of Christ. That had been one reason she'd come back. Now that Lionel gone, nothing seemed important anymore.

She wondered how long it would take before the full impact of his death hit her. Maybe when she saw his body again.

She thrust aside the thought. Had it been only yesterday that she'd come down those stairs after Fischer? She shivered. She'd been such an easy prey for Belasco.
When she was examining Florence, it had been Belasco looking in at her, noting her embarrassment. Belasco had shown her the photos, made her drink the brandy, turned her possessing lesbian tendencies into a thoughtless counterdesire for Fischer; she winced at th memory. How weak she was; how easily Belasco had manipulated her.
She thrust aside that thought as well. Every thought about Belasco was an affront to Lionel's memory. She was almost sorry she'd come back, to discover that he'd been wrong i everything he'd said and done.
She grimaced with self-accusing guilt. How could his entire body of work have been for nothing? She felt herself tighten with anger against Fischer for destroying her faith in Lionel. What right had he to do that?
A rush of sudden anguish made her start across the entry hall. Ascending the stairs, she crossed the corridor. The two suitcases stood outside their room. She looked around, heard in Fischer's room, and moved there rapidly.
He started as she came in. "I told you--"
"I know what you told me," she interrupted. She had to get it out before he spoke. "I want to know why you're so sure my husband was wrong."
"I'm not."
The impetus of her anger carried her past the point of reaction. She began to speak again, then had to catch herself and backtrack. "What?"
"I'm wondering if he might have been partially right."
"I don't--"
"You recall what Florence said?"
"What?"
"She said, 'Can't you see that _both_ of us can be right?'"
"I don't understand."
"I'm wondering if Belasco's power is electromagnetic radiation, as she said," Fischer told her. "I'm wondering if he was weakened by the Reversor."
He scowled. "But why would he allow himself to be weakened? It doesn't make sense. Especially when he had a chance to wreck the Reversor."
Edith wouldn't listen to his objection. Eager to restore validity to Lionel's work, she said, "Maybe he _is_ weakened, though. You said he trapped you in the chapel. If he was st powerful, why would he have to do that? Why not attack you anywhere you were?"
Fischer didn't look convinced. He started pacing. "It might explain why he lured me there," he said. "If, in coming out after the Reversor had weakened him, he used up most of remaining energy to destroy your husband and attack you--" He broke off angrily. "No. It doe add up. If the Reversor worked at all, it would have dissipated all his power, not just part of it."

"Maybe it wasn't strong enough. Maybe his power was too great for even the Reversor to destroy it entirely."
"I doubt it," he said. "And that still wouldn't explain why he'd allow the Reversor to be used at all when he had a chance to destroy it _before_ it could be used."
"But Lionel believed in the Reversor," she persisted. "If Belasco had destroyed it before it could be used, wouldn't that be as much as an admission, to Lionel, that he was right?"
Fischer studied her face. Something was needling up inside him, something that had the same exhilarating sense of rightness he'd felt when Florence had told him her theory about Belasco. Seeing his expression, Edith hurried on, desperate to convince him that Lionel had right, even if only partially. "Wouldn't it be more satisfying to Belasco to let Lionel actually use the Reversor, _then_ destroy him?" she asked. "Because Lionel must have believed tha wrong when he died. Wouldn't that be what Belasco would want?"
The feeling was increasing steadily. Fischer's mind struggled to fit the pieces together. Could Belasco really have been so determined to destroy Barrett in just that way that he'd deliberately let himself be weakened? Only an egomaniac would--
It sounded like a groan that shuddered upward from his vitals.
"What?" she asked in alarm.
"Ego," he said.
He pointed at Edith without realizing it. "Ego," he repeated.
"What do you mean?"
"That's why he did it that way. You're right; it wouldn't have been satisfying to him any other way. But to let your husband actually use his Reversor, apparently dissipate the powe when your husband was at the peak of his fulfillment, to get him then." He nodded. "Yes. Or way could satisfy his ego.

"He had to let Florence know before she died that it was him alone. Ego. He must have told your husband, too. Ego. He let you know in the theater. Ego. He had to let me know. Ego. It enough to lure us to our destruction. He had to tell us, at the precise moment when he had u powerless, that it was him. Except that, by the time he got to me, most of his power was use and he couldn't destroy me. All he could do was direct me to destroy myself."
He looked suddenly excited. "_What if he can't leave the chapel now?_"
"But you said he made you go there."
"What if he didn't? What if it _was_ her? What if she _knew_ he was trapped in there?"
"But why would she lead you to destruction?"
Fischer looked distressed. "She wouldn't. Why _would_ she lead me there, then? It had to be for a reason."
He caught his breath. "The Bible entry." There was a throbbing in his system he had not experienced since he was a boy, the pulsing of force inside him, crying for release. "_If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out_." He paced restlessly, feeling himself near the edge of the precipice, the mist about to part in front of him, the truth about to appear. "_If thy right eye offend thee--_"

He couldn't get it; turned his mind away from it. What else had happened in the chapel? The torn wallpaper. What had that meant? The medallion--broken, like a spearhead pointing altar. And, on the altar, the open Bible. "God." His voice was trembling, eager. He was so cl so close. "_If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out_." Ego, the thought recurred. "_If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out_." _Ego_. He stopped, his inner senses heightening with awareness. He was almost there. Something; _something_. "_If thy right eye--_"

"The tape!" he cried.

He whirled and rushed for the doorway. Edith ran after him as he plunged into the corridor and over to the staircase. He was halfway down before she'd reached the landing, springing the steps with vaulting leaps. Edith descended as quickly as she could and ran across the e hall.

He was at the great-hall table, listening to the tape recorder. She bit her lip involuntarily as she heard Lionel's voice. "--causing brief systemic shock." Fischer made a grumbling sound and shook his head as he pressed the REVERSE button and turned the sp pressed the PLAY button again. "Dynamometer fourteen hundred and sixty," Lionel's voice s Fischer made an impatient sound and reversed the spool again, waited, pushed the button f position. Edith heard Florence's voice saying, "_Get out of this house before I kill you all_." Fischer snarled and punched the REVERSE button again. He switched to PLAY. "Here too l Florence's voice said deeply, supposedly the voice of her Indian guide. "Not listen. Not understand. Too much sick inside." There was a pause. Fischer leaned across the table ten unaware that he was doing so. "Limits," said the voice. "Nations. Terms. Not know what that Extremes and limits. Terminations and extremities."

Edith flinched as Fischer cried out with a savage glee. He reversed the tape and played it again. "Extremes and limits. Terminations and extremities." Fischer snatched up the tape re and held it high above his head in triumph. "She knew!" he shouted. "She knew! She knew!" the tape recorder across the room. Before it had crashed to the floor, he was running for the entry hall. "Come on!" he shouted.

Fischer sprinted across the entry hall and down the corridor, followed by Edith. With a howl like that of an attacking Indian, he flung open the chapel door and leaped inside. "Bela he roared. "I'm here again! Destroy me if you can!" Edith ran in beside him. "Come on!" he y "Both of us are here now! Finish us! Don't leave the job half done!"

Massive silence fell, and Edith heard how strangely Fischer breathed. "Come on," he mumbled to himself.

He shouted suddenly, "_Come on, you lousy bastard!_"

Edith's gaze leaped toward the altar. For a moment she could not believe her hearing. Then the sounds grew louder, clearer, unmistakable.
Approaching footsteps.
She drew back automatically, eyes fixed on the altar. The footsteps were louder now. She was unconscious of Fischer's hand restraining her. She gaped at the altar. The sounds were louder every second. The floor began to shake. It was as though an unseen giant were appr Edith whimpered, pulling constantly at Fischer's grip. The footsteps were almost deafening now. She tried to lift her hands to shield her ears but could lift only one. The chapel seemed shudder with the thundering noises coming closer, closer. She jerked back hard, her cry of p engulfed by the titanic, crashing footsteps. Closer; closer. We're going to die, she thought.

We're going to die!
She screamed as a violent explosion filled the chapel; closed her eyes involuntarily.
Deathly silence made her open them.
She lurched back, gasping. Fischer held her. "Don't be afraid." His voice was taut with excitement. "This is a special moment, Edith. No one's ever seen his nibs before; not unless were about to die, that is. Take a good look, Edith. Meet Emeric Belasco. '_The Roaring Gia Edith gaped at the figure.
Belasco was enormous; dressed in black, his features broad and white, framed by a jetblack beard. His teeth, bared in a savage grin, were those of a carnivore. His green eyes glowed with inner light. Edith had never seen such a malignant face in her life. Deep within the froze dread she felt, she wondered why they weren't being murdered at this very moment.
"Tell me something, Belasco," Fischer said. Edith didn't know whether to feel reassurance or terror at the brazen insult in his tone. "Why didn't you ever go outside? Why did you 'esch the sunlight,' as you put it? Didn't care for it?
"_Or was it better hiding in the shadows?_"
The figure started toward them. Released, Edith drew back quickly, horrified to see Fischer move forward.
"You walk with a labored tread, Belasco," Fischer said. "You dominate your movements at a cost, don't you?"
He shouted abruptly, fiercely, "Don't you, Belasco?"
Edith's mouth fell open.
Belasco had stopped moving. His features were ablaze with fury, but it seemed, somehow, a fury of frustration.
"Look at your lips, Belasco," Fischer said, still advancing. "Spastic pressure holds them together. Look at your hands. Spastic tension holds them fisted at your sides. Why is that, Belasco? Is it because you're a fraud?"
His mocking cackle rang out in the chapel. "Roaring Giant!" he shouted. "You? My ass! You bullshit artist! You sawed-off little freak!"

Edith caught her breath. Belasco was retreating! She rubbed a shaking hand across her eyes. And it was true.
He _did_ look smaller.
"Evil?" Fischer said. He moved at Belasco steadily, a look of ruthless animosity on his face. "You, you funny little bastard?"
He stiffened as a cry of anguished rage burst from the lips of the dwindling figure in black. For a moment Fischer couldn't react. Then the grin returned. "Oh, no," he said. He sta shaking his head. "Oh, no. You couldn't be _that_ small."
He started forward again. "Bastard?" The figure drew back farther. "_Bastard?_ _That_ disturbed you? Oh, Belasco. What a funny little man you really were. What a funny little crav bug of a ghost. You weren't a genius. You were a nut, a creep, a deviate, a slob, a loser. _A sawed-off little bastard in the bargain!_
"_BELASCO!_" He howled. "Your mother was a whore, a slut, a bitch! You were a bastard, Emeric! A funny little driedup bastard! Do you hear me, Evil Emeric? A bastard, _bastard_, BASTARD, _BASTARD!_"
Edith flung her hands across her ears to shut away the hideous wail that gorged the air. Fischer stumbled to a halt, his features washed of fury by the sound. He stared at the nebul figure behind the altar--cowering, rat-faced, beaten--and it seemed as though he heard Flore voice in his mind, whispering: _Perfect love casteth out fear_. And suddenly despite everyth he felt a sickened pity for the figure standing there before him.
"God help you, Belasco," he said.
The figure vanished. For a long time they could hear a screaming, as of someone falling down into a bottomless pit, the sound fading slowly, until the chapel was still.
Fischer moved behind the altar and looked at the section of wall revealed by the torn wallpaper.
He smiled. She'd shown him this too; if only he had known.
Leaning over, he pushed at the wall. It opened with a grating rumble.
A short staircase declined in front of him. He turned to Edith and extended his hand. She didn't speak. Moving across the chapel, she circled the altar and took his hand.
They descended the staircase. At the bottom was a heavy door. Fischer shouldered it open.

They stood in the doorway, looking at the mummified figure sitting upright on a large wooden armchair.
"They never found him because he was here," Fischer said.
They entered the small, dim-lit chamber and crossed to the chair. Despite the feeling Edith had that everything was over, she couldn't help cringing from the sight of Emeric Belas dark eyes glaring at them from death.

"Look." Fischer picked up a jug.
"What is it?"
"I'm not sure but--" Fischer ran his palms across the surface of the jug. The impressions came immediately. "Belasco set it down beside himself and made himself die of thirst," he to her. "It was his final achievement of will. In life, that is."
Edith averted her face from the eyes. She looked down, leaning forward suddenly. The chamber was so gloomy that she hadn't noticed before. "His legs," she said.
Fischer didn't speak. He set down the jug and knelt in front of Belasco's corpse. She saw his hands moving in the shadows; made a tiny sound of shock as he stood up with a leg in h hands.
"'_If thy right eye offend thee_,'" he said. "'Extremities.' She was giving us the answer, you see." He ran a hand over the artificial leg. "_He so despised his shortness that he had h legs surgically removed and wore these instead, to give him height_. That's why he chose to here--so no one would ever know. He had to be the Roaring Giant or nothing. There simply enough stature inside him to compensate for his shortness--_or_ his bastardy."
He turned abruptly and looked around. Setting down the leg, he crossed the floor and put his hands against the wall. "My God," he said.
"What is it?"
"Maybe he was a genius, after all." He walked around the chamber, touching all the walls, examining the ceiling and the door. "The final mystery solved," he said. "It wasn't that his po was so great that he could resist the Reversor." His tone was almost awed. "He must have k more than forty years ago, about the connection between electromagnetic radiation and surv after death.
"_The walls, door, and ceiling are sheathed with lead_."
9:12 P.M.
The two walked slowly down the steps, Edith carrying her suitcase, Fischer carrying Barrett's suitcase and his duffel bag.
"How does it feel?" she asked.
"What?"
"To be the one who conquered Hell House."
"I didn't conquer it," he said. "It took all of us."
Edith tried not to smile. She knew it was true, but wanted him to say it.
"Your husband's efforts weakened Belasco's power. Florence's efforts led us to the final answer. I just polished it off, that's all--and even that would have been impossible if you had saved my life.
"It had to be that way, I guess," he said. "Your husband's mentality helped, but wasn't enough by itself. Florence's spirituality helped, but wasn't enough by itself. It took one more element, which I provided--a willingness to face Belasco on his own terms, defeat him with h weaknesses."

He made a scoffing noise. "Then again, Belasco may have beaten himself, I suspect that's part of it, too. After all, he'd been waiting thirty years for more guests. Maybe he was so eag to utilize his power again that he overextended himself, made the first mistakes of his existe in this house."
He stopped at the door, and both of them turned. For a long time they stood quietly. Edith thought about returning to Manhattan and to life without Lionel. She couldn't visualize it, but for now a kind of inexplicable peace had taken hold of her. She had the remnants of his mar with her. She'd see to its publication, see to it that people in his field learned what he'd accomplished. After that she'd worry about herself.
Fischer looked around, extending tendrils of unconscious thought. As he did, he wondered, consciously, what lay ahead for him. Not that it mattered. Whatever it was, he had a chance face it now. It was bizarre that, in this house, where his horror had first begun, he should fee the returning stir of self-assurance.

He turned and smiled at Edith. "She isn't here," he said. "She just stayed long enough to help."
They took a final look around. Then, without another word, they went outside and moved into the mist. Fischer grunted, mumbled something.
"What?" she asked.
"Merry Christmas," he repeated softly.

Rise & Shine, Sleepyhead! (She wakes up from erotic dream to find it's reality)
bySvenskaflicka©

I was sleeping, and I had a dream. A nice, silly dream about Joey and me. We were walking eating wild raspberries off a bush, and talking about going abroad for our next vacation. The sunny, and we were far away from sneaking eyes. We laid down in the grass and started to around Joey and he rolled on top of me. He caressed me and nibbled on my earlobes. I mad

My clothes must have melted away, because suddenly I was naked, and Joey parted my leg opened my eyes and gazed into his. My eye-lids were heavy, and didn't want to open. My lim brain was too sleepy to understand why the meadow had suddenly disappeared, and instea
I was sleepy. I wanted to go back to bed; it was calling me to it...

But Joey was on top of me, his big, hard dick was inside of me, and the irritation I felt for him was forced out of me, when Joey gently poked in and out of me with his amazing dick. That went from smoking ember to burning flames, and I wrapped my legs around his waist, and h hands and kissed him.

He too was a little sleepy, I think. He held a slow pace which teased me and aroused me, bu the edge. I moved my hips along with his, put my hands on his ass and tried to make him m harder, but he just smiled and kissed me, and continued in his own speed.

Had he woke me up for this? Horny and frustrated, I went desperate. I held on to him and, u had got from 4 years of karate practise, pushed against the bed, rolled over, and got on top calling the shots around here!

Joey clearly enjoyed that too. He caressed my hips as I put his dick back inside and rode hi horse. I held myself up with one arm resting on Joey's chest, and put my free hand between my clit in quick little circles. I love the feeling of being stimulated both on my clit and in my pu makes the feelings so much more intense, and the orgasm twice as strong.

The sleepiness made it impossible for me to think, I was just a body now, a horny body that instincts to get to that itch within... I moaned and increase my speed when I felt my pussy cr then the feeling of relief came over me. I rubbed myself against Joey to make the feeling las the high waves sank back down, I was wide awake. Tired as hell, but awake. I could see tha coming as well, and decided to take him for a little extra ride.

I turned around and straddled him, facing away from him. In this position, it was hard to put me, and hard to keep it from falling out, but it also gave Joey the chance to see my butt bou his shaft, and I know that he really loves that. Some men drool when they see big boobs, oth hard-on for big, full, rounded asses. Joey was definitely an ass-man.

And he did like my manoeuvre. He moaned an "oh, yeah, baby!", and caressed my butt, hel upwards into me. I just sat there, squatting over him, and got fucked from underneath. I look shoulder and blinked at him. He held me still as he got up on his knees. He made me stand started pounding me like a jackhammer, quick and hard. All the time, he had a firm grip on m asscheeks. My second orgasm came almost immediately as I felt Joey's dick so deep inside Joey's moans joined my cries, and he gave me those three hard pushes that I know means stopped, stood still, panting, and then he pulled out, bent down, and kissed my butt.

-Good morning, honey! he said.

Rock Chick (A night to remember with Lydia the rock chick) byChris Cross©

Dante's was such a good club. Isn't it funny that it always seems to be the really good place down? Well, it's still there I suppose. It's got a different name now and you wouldn't recognis New owners, new decor, different music, different clubbers. Higher prices. But I'll always rem rock club where I met her that night. The night she showed me the time of my life. Lydia. Se chick.

I'd been living in Sheffield for two months, training with a multinational company that had a lo the city. I was living in a bed & breakfast paid for by the company and had enjoyed exploring life. A friend from work called John told me about a small rock club that had opened about a an old mill on the outskirts of the city. It was supposed to have a real good mix of music. Me and even some chart stuff thrown together in such a way that you just didn't want to leave th Moshing one minute, bopping the next. And rock chicks have always turned me on. Yeah, y well and good; short skirts, high heels, skimpy tops, - you wouldn't kick 'em out of bed, y'kno goth chicks. More mysterious. Black, dark purple and red clothing, lace, leather, PVC, fishne buckles, piercings, tattoos, eyeliner – attitude. Not just blonde sheep grazing their way acros dancefloor giggling inanely at anything and everything and blowing bloody whistles in time to 'drumbeat'. What can I say? Rock chicks do it for me.

John and I went to Dante's that Saturday. We caught the bus and with my not knowing the a got there I was pretty lost. It was worth it though – Dante's lived up to its reputation - good p fine music. We'd been there for over two hours (it was past 11.00pm) and I only came off the drinks or dispose of the one's I'd already drank. I was so caught up in the music that I'd almo about checking out the local talent. I'd noticed some really pretty and good looking girls (and huffermoose) but they were all already with someone, together in a group or busy dancing. J chatting with somebody he knew at this point, so I was dancing on my own.

Then she appeared. There were about twenty or so people dancing so I didn't see her comin later, but more on that in a while) she was just suddenly there as if she'd popped out of thin kind of appropriate, as the track playing at the time was by Faith No More – From out of Now not). Arms held up above her, eyes demurely looking down then darting up to meet mine an coloured lights. Her hips swayed and gyrated as she danced in front of me, just within arms More finished, seamlessly blending into another track, I can't remember which one. All my a girl in front – no. Where'd she gone? Ah. This girl behind me. I span around to face her agai movements. She was light on her feet, swaying and turning with ease and grace. As I turned stern expression broke into a dazzling smile.

Something went off in my head like a firework and my heart did what felt like a triple backflip danced our way through the track and then the DJ paused the music at the end of it to make announcement for someone. As the music stopped, so did she. She ran a hand through her and spiky on top and

"She danced in front of me, just within arms reach..."
***

looked up at me. I lent close to her and asked if she would like a drink. Eyes twinkling, she s (boom!) and said yes. As the music started up again we weaved our way round and past people to the edge of the dancefloor and across to the bar,

There the music was a little more distant and you could make yourself heard without having your arms like a pillock. I asked what she wanted and after catching the attention of one of t rustling the £10 note in my hand at him; ordered us two pints of cider. A girl who'll drink from always impresses me somehow. It just seems so unpretentious.

While waiting to be served I turned to look at her and found she'd been having a good look a Thankfully, she didn't seem to have decided she'd made a mistake of any kind and was look bright eyes in a kind of laid back manner. She just seemed to be reserved, a kind of inner ca sound like some kind of transcendental horse manure, but it's the best way I can find to desc across. I held out my hand and introduced myself. She smiled and said

"Lydia." holding out her hand to mine. Taking her hand (her skin felt incredibly soft) I lifted it bending forwards to kiss it. I know what you're probably thinking. You kissed her hand? Wha Austin bodice ripper? Well, no. But it always seems to surprise a girl and if she doesn't think and walk off on you there and then, she's usually a little taken aback, flattered and intereste laughed and I smiled back at her. Taking our drinks, we took a seat in a booth in a far corne little places where you could make out away from the crowds. However, we sat and talked, f about one another. Nothing too deep. The main thing was that she could hold a conversatio and happy to listen as well as talk. I checked her out as we chatted and drank.

Average height, cracking figure (I'd looked down her ample cleavage and watched her hips s dancing). Short, dark hair (I'd later notice the tips of her spikes were dyed a dark red) and a

Several piercings in each ear, pierced eyebrow and lip and a Celtic knot nose stud. Dark ma liner making her eyes really piercing. Black vest top. A pewter skull choker round her neck o dark ribbon; almost like a collar. Long cobweb pattern black fingerless gloves that came to h with lots of silver bangles and a red and black sweatband. Rings on all fingers. I couldn't see the table but remembered she was wearing a ragged lacy skirt that ended in tatters midway and black stripy tights and heavy treaded boots. Maybe New-Rocks. We were both about th through our drinks when Rage Against the Machine came on. Lydia grabbed my hand (adios looked at me excitedly.

"I love this track. C'mon!"

She downed what was left of her drink and stood up, pulling at my wrist. I knocked back my followed her onto the dancefloor, stifling a belch. The floor was busy, folk moshing away, he hands held together behind backs. We danced on through Bullet in the Head and then jump Pain (Lydia's' boobs bounced about in the vest top very pleasingly) then danced to Good Ch and Limp Bizkit. Lydia was attracting some attention and I became uneasy she'd find someo interesting than me - my dreams of getting her on her own later ending up in pieces like the glass I was treading on at the time. At one point a guy came over to her and throwing me a whispered (okay, to be heard; I guess he yelled) something in her ear. I held my breath and Lydia wrinkled up her nose at the guy. She swayed away from him and in front of me, lacing the back of my neck and then turning, rubbing her shoulders and bum against me. The guy (if looks could kill, I'd have been hamburger) and moved off through the crowd. I put my han stomach and guided her against me, a real hard on building in my pants.

Lydia turned to face me and lifted her chin up to speak. I turned my head to one side and lea slipping my hands onto her hips. Touch taboo hopefully now totally out of the window.

"I hope you don't mind. That guy's always pestering me. I'm not interested in him."

I leaned back so we could see each other's faces and smiled at her before moving my mout telling her that I didn't mind at all. I squeezed her waist for emphasis and moved back a little carry on dancing. Lydia smiled and began to dance again. The mix of music was great in Da on the dancefloor for the next thirty minutes solid. By then, hot and a little dehydrated I was another drink (yes, I know alcohol just dehydrates you even more, but an ice cold pint is alw looked a little done in too (perspiration glinted in her cleavage) and as I was thinking about a would like another drink she put a hand on my chest, asking me the very same thing. On the saw John and motioned to Lydia that I'd be just a minute. She nodded and headed off. John two women and a bloke he knew from work and grinned at me as I came over. He'd seen m wishing me luck we agreed to each make our own way back that night (hello taxi service) an

I went off to find Lydia.

Anticipations high now, I fretted briefly that Lydia my have done a runner or be getting off wi in the minute or so since I left her (I know, I know, but when you're that close to something s worry about it a lot, huh?). I was glad to see her tucking change into a pouch around her wa noticed before and picking up a pint glass in each hand. I hurried over to her and when I got what a girl like her was doing on her own in a place like this. Turning, she handed me my dri humorously

"Waiting for a guy like you!"

We clinked glasses (slopping cider onto the floor) and went to see if there were any seats fre booths. There weren't, so we stood around the area drinking and talking (as best we could), space to free up. Less than half a pint later we were sat down again. This was my fifth pint o
I was pleasantly relaxed and would be heading towards tipsy with whatever drink I had next.
about the same and we talked freely, shoulder to shoulder, arms and thighs touching. Her b turning me on and I was waiting for the right time to make a move.

Lydia surprised me by saving me the effort. Telling me it was great to find someone so easy didn't try and jump on top of her (yikes, close!) she asked if I'd like to go and get something t then go back to hers? She took a long swig of cider, draining her glass before setting it down and then looking deep into my eyes.

"I've got a settee you can sleep on."

Uh-huh! Soon, we were outside. It was July and the night was quite close, despite a light bre Lydia's nipples poke at the black cotton of her vest top as we walked. I didn't know this area told me there was a takeaway ten minutes walk from here and a short taxi ride would take u was in a part of Sheffield I'd never heard of, close to some big park, apparently. Fair enough

As Lydia said, we found the takeaway within minutes. It was a Chinese, so we ordered mixe crackers. It was almost one o'clock in the morning and the place was getting ready to shut, s prawn crackers thrown in for free (never look a gift horse in the mouth, eh?) being the last cu night. The fresh air was making me feel a little giddy and I wondered if Lydia felt the same. W flag down a taxi, saving us a short walk to their offices a couple of streets away and were so seat, supper steaming in a white plastic carrier bag to my right, Lydia sat to my left. The driv and I guess he either didn't speak very good English or he just didn't want to talk, as he said

other than 'ok' when Lydia gave him our destination.

I looked down at Lydia's cleavage, breasts swelling and contracting as she breathed in and her eyes, which were looking into mine. Oops. Caught out ogling her tits! Lydia gave me and kaboom smiles. Her eyes seemed a bit more heavily lidded than before. I hoped she wasn't yet. Far from it, it turned out. Bringing her lips so close to my left ear that they tickled it when (my cock began to stand to attention) she whispered

"I'm not wearing any knickers. I just thought you should know."

Hello! My heart beat a little quicker as what she'd said sank in. Lydia sat back with a small g face, looking quite pleased with herself and obviously waiting to gauge my reaction. I decide broke. Hell if tonight wasn't going to bring what I hoped for, it would be better to find out soo later. I put my right hand on her knee, leaned close and as I kissed her, slipped my hand up along her thigh. What I had thought were red & black stripy tights turned out to be hold-up st found bare flesh at her upper thigh. Continuing upwards, my finger tips nudged hot, yielding stirred slightly in her seat. Yep. No knickers.

My cock was straining against my black jeans as our lips parted and my hand withdrew from opened her eyes gave me that measured look; her smile somehow conveying relief, admirat all at the same time. Her right hand found my left and we laced fingers and squeezed hands glanced up at the rear view mirror. The cabbie didn't appear to be paying any attention. I gu snogging in the back of your ride is a part and parcel of a Friday or Saturday night for taxi dr

Then we were there. I paid the driver as Lydia got out with our food and then joined her on t the taxi drove off, Lydia fumbled in the pouch for her keys. I looked up at her digs. A big old building, in a row of six of the same. Wrought iron fencing with leafy trees planted in the fron the road was a wrought iron fence with a row of trees and an expanse of grass beyond them guessed. There was a panel to the right of the green painted door with six doorbells on it. Th looked like it made for pleasant accommodation. Lydia lightly trotted up the three broad ston front door. I was struck by how light she was on her feet in those boots. We were soon insid the front door shut.

Lydia's rooms were on the top floor. Bad 'cause you had to climb up two flights of stairs to g good, as she pointed out, because there were only her rooms at the top, so nobody above h
There were two flats below her, two on the floor below that and one underdwelling below tho the carpeted stairs. I could hear faint music coming form one flat we passed (probably the T all was quiet. Reaching the top floor, Lydia undid two locks on her door and stepped into her on a lamp by the door. I stepped in and closed the door behind me. Lydia moved to my right lamp. Keeping the lights down low, I thought.

We were in a large room; in the far left corner was a bed with neatly folded black sheets and and settee along the wall at its foot. Opposite (to my right along the wall we had just entered fridge freezer, cooker and worktop. In the opposite corner to the settee was a TV, video and storage unit. On the wall to my right, a window (no doubt overlooking the park) and to my lef full bookcase and two doors leading off from the room, both shut. The whole room was deco colours with several framed posters and prints on the walls (Escher and Dali).

Lydia was rattling about in cupboards under the worktop, producing plates and forks. She lo me a seat on the settee (you guessed it; it was black - with dark purple velvety cushions). I s as Lydia dished out supper and walked over offering me a plate and cutlery. Thanking her, I bustled about the room, turning on another lamp by her bed and lighting several large candl holders. Then she picked up her own plate, sat down next to me and was about to tuck in wh strike her.

"Sorry. Fancy a drink?"

I did and soon, Lydia was seated next to me with two of what must have been least quadrup with ice. We ate and chatted between mouthfuls. Lydia explained the two doors led to the ba should really be the bedroom. She thought it was a bit too small though and preferred to use room/kitchen as a bed-sit, keeping her bedroom as a spare room/study for her laptop and ot complimented her on the flat (it was pleasant – everything was neat and tidy, smelt of incens splash of green from a potted plant to brighten it up) I found out Lydia worked at Meadowhal branch of an electrical goods chain. I was a little surprised and wondered how she looked dr

We finished our noodles and turned to our drinks. I swilled the JD round my gums a little, ho away the noodles in anticipation of kissing her again soon. And more, of course. We joked a my arm slung casually over the back of the settee. Lydia had just told me I was mad, laughin particularly bad joke. Wiping at her eyes (and smudging her makeup a little) she looked up.
She looked at me. Then as it always does when things go just right - we came together and

After some gentle smooching I rested my hand on her thigh, resisted the urge to explore und instead opted to cup and fondle her breasts. As our tongues met and moved together in unis to rub at my crotch. I slipped mine inside her vest top, feeling the smooth texture of her bra a cushions of flesh it encased. As we petted I felt her nipples begin to swell and harden under and gently pinched and nudged them. Lydia sighed and planted a firm kiss smack on my lips slightly and whispered

"Have you got any condoms?"

Pleased at her directness I smiled and whipped out my wallet. Swiftly undoing a zip I pulled pack of three condoms with a small flourish and 'Ta-dah!' Lydia smiled and snatched the pac standing as I stuck my wallet back into my jeans.

I saw her move away and looked up to see her reach the bed with quick steps. Lydia tossed condoms next to the alarm clock on her bedside table and turned to face me. I watched with she flashed me another of those kaboom smiles and then hurriedly lifted up her vest top, mo head and throwing it on the floor. Reaching behind her back; the black bra followed next. Ly bounced free with nipples pointing and erect. She fumbled at her waist briefly and her skirt u her hips and slid to the floor. I felt a thrill of excitement when I could see no fuzzy triangle of below her pierced belly button. Shaved pussy, then! A new one for me. Bangles, sweatband Still wearing her long gloves, stripy stockings and boots, she sat on the bed and lay back. G parted her legs, feet on tip toe (or as close as she could get in those boots) with knees swin gently, brazenly flashing me her pussy. Looking at me challengingly, she simply said.

Without a word, I obliged. I was surprised by how fast things were moving but just decided to flow, which looked to be taking me exactly where I had been hoping to go for the past couple boots and socks came off first. I smiled up at Lydia, who now had her right thigh resting flat left leg still pointing up towards the ceiling, swinging side to side like a red and black pendulu down time to mutual pleasure. I had a good view of the delights awaiting me between Lydia' seemed completely devoid of any pubic hair, a narrow pink slit dividing the swell of her mou surprised not to see any piercing down there. My t-shirt and jeans were soon in a pile, leavir My cock was hard and straining against my pants. Lydia looked me up and down and said a

"M'mmm. Not bad."

I got my cock out, pulling down my pants and tensing so that it sprang free, energetically.

I'm no John Holmes but past girlfriends have commented approvingly on my cock. Sarah, th virginity to; was a couple of years older than me and had lost her virginity several partners a penetrated her for the first time, relishing the surprising tightness and heat of her body, she her eyebrows together and breathed in sharply. Concerned, I'd asked if she was alright, to w

"I'd be fine... if your cock wasn't so big."

That's good for your self confidence when you're starting out. Sarah had come to a gasping couldn't reach one, my cock not having yet adjusted to the sensation of a woman's body (it's your own hand; no matter how good your imagination is you can't improve on that feeling of tight, wet pussy). Ironic that. When you first start getting laid, you can't cum in a woman. It's doesn't feel good, it just feels so different at first that your cock doesn't seem to know what's tells you 'yeah, it feels good, but I don't know if it's as exciting as what I'm used to'. Just as y to get the knack of what you're doing (and used to the fact you're actually doing it!) – hello; p ejaculation!

Anyway, I digress. As I stood naked before her, Lydia stroked her left index finger up her pu That finger proceeded up her belly, stomach and between her boobs, fingernail rasping agai a faint pink line where it passed. Its journey ended by it dipping into her mouth, where her da briefly at it, before it emerged into the air and beckoned me over. I approached, my heart po chest and pulse throbbing at my temple and in my cock. I sat on the end of the bed and rolle side, lying to Lydia's left between her and the wall. We kissed again and as our tongues circ Lydia's soft hand slipped down to where it needed to be and encircled my cock. She squeez traced a fingernail up and down its sensitive underbelly, making me twitch in pleasure. She r my balls and gently began to squeeze and knead them, more and more firmly. I had been ru through her spiky hair and fondling her soft, large breasts. I stiffened a little, my excitement l replaced by concern at her grip on my balls as one of her rings pinched slightly at my skin.

Lydia noticed my tension and opened her hand, gently rubbing with the flat of her hand whe previously taken hold. With a leisurely kiss, she opened her eyes to look into mine.

"Don't worry. I won't pop 'em. But they feel pretty full to me. Think they need emptying befor down to business?"

I told her I was sure that they did. Laughing lightly and looking into my eyes so she could en Lydia began to wank me, very slowly. I winced in pleasure and stirred on the smooth, satin s eyes and lying back. I heard the bed creak as Lydia sat up, her hand pausing for a moment. my chest, facing away from me and pinning my arms with her legs. I looked up at her smoot skull and crossbones tattoo on her lower back. Then both her hands took hold of me and wo slowly five times, followed by five rapid strokes. I gasped and writhed as this was repeated. five quickly. And repeated. And repeated.

"You like that, huh?" Lydia chuckled. "You'll be begging to cum soon."

She wasn't wrong. After less than a minute of this exquisite torture I was gasping and writhin move my arms and instead thrusting and jerking my groin and legs. I wanted her to speed u be inside her body instead, to cum, to last longer; all at the same time. I was flooded with pl couldn't think straight at all. Her soft hands contrasted with the feel of the hard metal of her r my skin. The low tingle of my orgasm began to build after another minute or so, cutting throu my mind with a promise of certainty. God, this was going to be huge. I tried to arch my back couldn't move much because of her weight on my chest. The tingle grew. Lost in the momen moaned, begging her not to stop. Which was exactly what Lydia did!

Just as I felt that I was about to explode, her hands stopped dead. My muscles locked and I going to cum anyway, but the tingle began to fade, not quite blossoming into the fire of ecsta my head back onto the pillows and gasped, disappointed, Lydia hopped off the bed, her boo floor. My balls felt as though they were about to burst; a dull ache growing deep inside them to the fridge and opened it. I looked up to see her momentarily bathed in the light from the fr interior, her erect pink nipples almost silhouetted in profile. She grabbed something from ins quickly slamming the door shut and standing, reaching the bed again with quick, long stride jiggling wildly. The question I was about to ask faded from my mind. Lydia had a wicked grin can of Diet Coke in her hand.

Pulling open the can ('plink-fssshhhh') with one black painted fingernail, she briefly held it ag left breast, pushing it there and gasping aloud at the feel of cold metal against her skin, befo down at me.

"You'll never have felt anything like this."

With that, she rasped her tongue over the underbelly of my cock, lapping at its head. Then h gone. Lydia quickly took a swig from the can, plonked it onto the floor and lent forwards, taki cock. Suddenly I was inside her mouth, cold fizzy coke bubbling against my cock as her tong her cheeks hollowed as she sucked and swilled. It was only later I'd think 'how the hell did sh down on me with a mouthful of coke without spilling any of it? To this day, I don't know. But it and she was right; I had never felt anything like this before. With her head rocking back an hand squeezing my balls and shaft, I was soon moaning and gasping again. After a short wh become warm and lost most of its fizz. Lydia swallowed and slipped my cock out of her mou continued to work my shaft, smearing the leaking precum over the bulbous head of my cock her grip, while she reached down to the can and took another mouthful.

The cold liquid. Bubbles exploding and fizzing against my cock, her hot tongue circling arou
it. The teeth grazing gently, catching and dragging. Her squeezing, rubbing hand, caressing balls, coaxing and kneading. The liquid, sloshing sounds and enthusiastic noises from deep

It all became too much. I started to pant as the tingle returned. I silently prayed she wouldn't and forced my eyes to open so I could watch myself cum in her mouth. But with a slurp, Lyd a blow job. I watched her swallow the coke as her hand immediately went into overdrive inst pushing down on my cock so it pointed away from me and towards her, working back and fo
No, this time she wasn't going to stop. Oh, thank you Lydia, thank you-

"You'll never have felt anything like this..."
***

I cried out as my hips jerked up off the bed and a jet of cum shot from the tip of my cock, spl Lydia's chest, just below her collarbone. Her hand stopped moving, its grip relaxing so the c way out where she wanted it to go. Her eyes were closed, mouth open and panting in lust. T and landed lower, on her left breast, sliding down its curvature like rain off a waterproofed co hit her breast again. A third and fourth hit her stomach, sliding down towards her crotch. A fi landed on her forearm, standing out against the cobweb pattern gloves. I'd snarled in primal huge orgasm had taken me and now laid back on the bed, momentarily overcome, the dull a As my orgasm passed, her hand slowly moved again, milking the cum from me. When enou fingers to start to run off them and onto the sheets, she lifted her hands to her stomach, whe dribbling down her in viscous streams. Lydia smeared my cum up to her breasts and started her skin with circular motion.

"God, cum's so hot when it hits your skin." she moaned, squeezing her breasts together into cleavage. Lydia was obviously enjoying herself, and moved slowly and sensuously, her han neck down to her belly, pausing to squeeze her breasts (I noticed they were too large for he fully cup) and pinch and pull her nipples. Her skin shone and glistened in the light from the la wiping her hands down her ribs, to her hips and onto her thighs she paused to thoughtfully r from her fingers. Each ring was carefully placed in a pile just under the bed, and as each fin was stripped, Lydia licked at each one, tasting me on her. With all ten rings finally removed, at me.

"She moaned, squeezing her breasts together into an impressive cleavage..."
***

"Thought I was gonna be washed off the bed there for a moment."

I puffed out something in response, still a little breathless from having cum what felt like buc then watching Lydia's little display. Lydia laughed lightly as she noticed my cum on her glove of it smeared into the fabric at her wrists. She took them off too, letting them both fall to the f alongside her rings. Lydia breathed in deeply through her nose, running her hands up to her exhaling with a drawn out "H'aaaahhh" before pushing her shoulders back and stretching he her. Then she lay down on top of me with her knees between mine, legs bent back and feet ceiling. Her breasts and stomach felt sticky against my skin.

Smiling at me, she breathed in deeply the pollen aroma now coming from her skin, closing h and then looking into mine again. My hands found the swell of her bum and taking a soft but squeezed and smiled back. I rubbed her bum, squeezing and circling her buttocks and tracin her tattoo before lifting my hands to her shoulders and gently raking my nails down her back eyes and shivered a little, pressing against me. Cushioned against my chest, her breasts sw pressure impressively. I moved one hand up to the back of her head and pulled her face dow her moist lips. With my right hand I tickled and scratched at her bum, running along the crea buttocks where they met the tops of her thighs. Probing gently between her legs, the flesh th damp. Kissing her hungrily I did my best to arouse Lydia without steaming straight for her pu lightly ran my fingernails down the sides of her neck and the insides of her arms. Teased he backs of her thighs, all the time keeping her pressed tightly against me, either holding the ba or pulling her bum to me.

After I felt I'd teased the back of Lydia's body enough, I wrapped an arm around her shoulde bum to me and rolled over to my right. Lydia surprised me by emitting a high pitched, girly sc on top of her. As she giggled I kissed her forehead and temple, planting a kiss on the end of and then kissing her neck and shoulder. The giggling stopped as I licked around her nipples with my teeth. Her nipples were very round and small; given the size of her bust. There was taste which I did my best to ignore. Shuffling backwards I kissed and licked my way down to button, sticking my tongue into it briefly. Lydia's stomach twitched as I worked lower, her ski increasingly sensitive. Kneeling upright, I lifted up her right foot and undid the fastenings to r heavy boot. As the second one clumped to the floor I told her it was her turn to get naked. R to her thighs, I tugged her stockings down one at a time and threw them over the edge of the fingers over the impressions left in the soft flesh where the hold ups had gripped them. Bar h and pewter choker; Lydia was now naked too.

I lay down at the edge of the bed to her right, and we kissed again. The dark purple, almost was now more than a little smudged (reminds me of Brodie Dahl from 'The Distillers' when I now). Lydia's hands played with the back of my head and shoulders, and then one stole dow down on index and second finger. Those fingers rasped briefly in my pubic hair and then wra cock, which had hardly begun to stiffen again. With a couple of squeezes it had hardened a bemoaned aloud the fact I wasn't hard enough to do anything more yet (I started to worry tha let me down at this late stage!). In response, Lydia propped herself up on one elbow, breast on my arm and started kissing and sucking my left nipple, pushing my cock down towards th tugging the foreskin to and fro. This girl knew what she was doing, for as I relaxed and my c with her saliva I felt my cock stiffen in Lydia's grip, my heart pounding blood down to it. After seconds Lydia admonished

"Don't tell me that's not hard enough."

My cock sprang back erect as she released it. Reaching over she picked up the packet of co flap. My heart pounded even harder. This was it. I was going to find out what it was like to be Lydia took out a foil wrapped package and the folded sheet of instructions and whispered

"I like reading these, they turn me on."

With that she lay back, placed the condom on her belly and unfolded the sheet of paper, stu
I waited for a few seconds but Lydia still pretended to be engrossed. I couldn't quite believe unbelievable tease! I took the packet from her belly and tore open the foil, squeezing out the my finger and thumb. Dropping the empty packet I positioned the transparent pink cap over throbbing cock, paused to check I had the damn thing the right way up and then rolled it dow Thankfully it went on easily. Snapping it into position and squeezing the teat at the end I was There was no way I was going to let what she had created go to waste. Lydia was still 'readi instructions. I placed my right fingertips onto her bare mound and lightly doodled them aroun circles and figures of eight to get her attention. She still studied the piece of paper. I stopped fingers and looked at her, smiling patiently.

"Aw. That felt nice." She said petulantly.

Her eyes didn't leave the sheet of paper as she turned it over to look at the other side. I deci her game for a little while longer and then to get her attention. I ran my index finger over her another thirty seconds or so. She was incredibly smooth, with no stubble down there at all. I she waxed or shaved, but Lydia was smooth as a snooker ball, even around the folds of her breasts rise and fall as she lay back, 'reading' and made small circles at the top of her pussy pink flesh crease and stretch. Leaning forwards I planted a kiss on her pussy, just brushing i own. Then I traced down her labia with my fingers, pressing slightly to open up that tight rav lips parted a little and my fingers ran down a wet, pink trench. When I reached the bottom I t sensitive skin between her pussy and anus and then ran two fingers side by side back up its moist noise, her lips parted. Moisture shone in the low light. Lydia was really wet; despite he aloofness there was now no hiding the fact she felt turned on!

Hearing Lydia sigh, I located the nub of her clitoris and teased the skin around that area, ca actually making contact with it. Two could play at being a tease! Moving back down I nudge second fingers against her lips, finding her entrance and feeling the wetness drooling from it around quickly to open her up just a little more I pushed my forefingers into her soft, hot emb squelched as they circled rapidly in her ribbed tunnel, first in one direction, then in another. I forwards and turned my wrist, curling my fingers so they ran over the bump of her g-spot (wl call that bump inside a woman, and I haven't been able to quite locate it in every one I've ha found if you touch it, you get one hell of a reaction!), the tip of my second finger was just abl over it repeatedly. Lydia's hips jerked and she dropped the instructions, eyes closed in pleas pushing forwards against me. I slipped my fingers from her body and waited for her reaction open looking straight into mine

"Fuck me!"

I was eager to oblige and rolling on top of her, settled between her thighs. My cock was just to be and with no need for any awkward lining up I rammed it deep into her, gasping as I felt surround me. All pretence of play was now gone. There was only the lust and sex.

"I rammed it deep inside her..."
***

I broke into a fast, hard pace, glad to fulfill my aspirations to experience Lydia's body. Her sl felt to grasp me at all times, the sensation was constant and strong. (Under other circumstar would have cum in her really quickly.) Lydia's breasts jiggled up and down hard, bouncing b her body was rocked by my thrusts. Lydia groaned and lifted up her knees, grabbing one in pulling them as far up towards her as she could. I adjusted my balance for this new position even deeper into her, Lydia lost her grip on one knee, quickly snatching back at it and pullin further. Eyes closed, her head sank back into the pillow as she moaned.

"Harder! Fuck me harder!!"

I thrust into her as hard as I could, now more aware of fighting against bouncing back up fro order to be able to push hard back into her again than of the feel of her pussy around my co little like trying to fuck on a trampoline and I briefly considered suggesting we move to the flo deciding that there was no way I wanted something that felt this good to stop, even for some feel better.

Instead I lowered my weight so my belly clapped against hers with each thrust, pinning her t weight. Her legs crossed behind my back, pulling me into her with her heels. Braced better r her harder. My cock felt so hard I thought the skin might split and as I pumped in and out he and squelched, drenched now with her juices. Making a hungry noise, her lipstick smudged and we french-kissed, breathing hard through our noses. While kissing I could feel more ser tightly gripped my length. I was thrusting in balls deep and withdrawing almost entirely so I c full length into her each time. The bed creaked repeatedly. Each thrust almost carried the se penetration and I enjoyed the confidence of being able to fuck her without worrying about cu balls were all but drained by Lydia's earlier attentions.

Lydia broke her lips away from mine and they pulled back in a snarl from her gritted teeth as eyebrows drawn together and fingernails digging into my buttocks, her hands pulled me aga continued to thrust, my range of motion now limited. Lydia winced, panted through her nose then hissed urgently through her teeth

"Yes!"

Hands clutched at me as Lydia forcefully pulled me into her. I thrust as deeply as I could, pe my full length as Lydia's orgasm seized her. Her hips trembled and she hissed again, more

"Yes. Yyeesss."

Her whole body tensed; trembling and shaking for a few seconds more. Her thighs didn't cla was surprised at how quietly Lydia came. As her muscles relaxed, Lydia's eyebrows unknitte forward into an 'o' as she puffed out a long breath. I stayed inside her and kissed her poutin at her dark eyelids and long lashes. Those wonderful eyes stayed shut as Lydia wriggled un then another. Her head moved slowly as if drawing a small circle with her chin, before shaki twice as if to clear it. She opened her eyes to look at me and breathed

"Don't pull out. Fuck me again. I love to fuck."

To emphasis her words, she slowly started to gyrate her hips. Her pussy made smacking so around my cock. I matched Lydia's slow pace, circling my hips in the opposite direction to he the slow, luxurious feeling of being engulfed by her. We moved together in this slow dance f like a long time, accompanied by the creak of the bed, 'm'mmms' from Lydia and the fleshy r I still felt really hard and thought at this rate I'd be good to go for most of the night. Hell, this so hot it would be a crime not to shag her senseless!

Initial lust at least partially quenched, our next fuck was a slightly more civilised affair. I witho cock entirely from her body. Lydia moaned unhappily and then again in pleasure as I slipped did this three times, (I love that feeling of penetration, you feel like you've become a part of s else's body. -that you're joined together. And watching as a gaping pussy swallows you who as you slide inside. What a turn on!) Lydia planted her feet on the bed, so she could push fir my thrusts. Remaining inside her now, we found our rhythm once more. The pace was more breakneck at about a thrust per second. We'd been at it for a couple of minutes when Lydia

"Bite me."

I made a dumb sounding questioning noise.

"Bite me. It turns me on."

Now this was something new. I'd never had a girl want me to bite her before. I'd no problem wondered how hard and far to go? I decided to err on the side of caution and gently nipped l murmured happily and said

"Harder."

Fuck me harder, bite me harder – Lydia seemed to like things to the max! I obliged and sper experimenting until I was biting her as hard as she wanted. Which was very! I'd catch a roll o between my teeth and then suck hard at it, suck even harder and bite down hard at the sam not draw blood but could see angry red marks and bruising where I had worked.

All this turned Lydia on, all right. She moaned and panted, wincing in pleasure (pain? both?!

"Oh, fuck! Yeah!" And "Do me, baby, do me." over and over.

Her pussy was still lubricating nicely and I slid in and out of her easily as I bit and sucked. Ly orgasm hit her shortly after as I lifted myself up, arms straightening to work my muscles loos licked at her nipple as I rose and she groaned urgently. Encouraged, I gently bit at her breas spluttered and her nails raked down my back almost painfully. I returned to her breast, lickin her breathing became quicker and quicker. Resisting the urge to break into a fast, hard pace and out of her slowly and deliberately, so Lydia could feel every inch of me filling her up and massaging the walls of her pussy and rubbing against her swollen labia. Her nails raked dov

I rocked into her, making it feel sore. Lydia suddenly sucked in a deep breath, her face looke pain and she paused at the edge of ecstasy making an inarticulate

"Hnnnnghh!" sound which turned into a noise I can only capture as "Grrooarghhh!"

She dug her nails into my shoulders and her pussy fluttered around my cock, hips shaking a

We would screw again and again that night. My erection would die down every once in a wh cuddle, then Lydia would get me hard again; going down on me, rubbing my cock between h trying to make a sausage shape out of a lump of plasticine; and at one point lying at the end facing me with her knees in the air and masturbating herself to orgasm to turn me on. She w and purr

"You've kept it up!"

admiringly before we would fall on each other and rut again. What a girl! I finally came as Ly riding me slowly and deliberately, head tilted back and breasts thudding up and down. Wher about to cum she flicked her head back (in a motion that made me think she was used to ha some point) smiled that kaboom smile and maintained her steady rhythm.

"Come on, baby. Cum for me. Cum for me."

I came clutching at her thighs and bum, crying out her name. We never shared a mutual org can't count on one hand the number of orgasms we had between us.

"I came as Lydia was on top..."
***

The sun was coming up as we finally exhausted our passions, had a token clean up in the b down to sleep. I was not cast out to the far reaches of the settee and we slept under the bla (smeared in places where my cum had dried or I'd wiped Lydia's juices off my fingers) arms other with her head on my shoulder. Lydia was supposed to work that Sunday, but said she'

before the shop opened. Fulfilled and with a sore back from Lydia's clawing in her heights of friend at the gym would point at my back three days later in the changing rooms and loudly a have you been shagging Catwoman?") I drifted off to sleep.

I woke as Lydia's alarm went off at 9.30 in the morning and she stumbled out of bed to phon sunlight was filtering in through the curtains and I could hear birds twittering and singing in th across the road. After determining that I didn't have a monster hangover, I waited until Lydia work number and then snuck out of bed and up behind her. She explained to her staff that s today with my fingers slipping into her pussy and pinching at her nipples! Perhaps her falteri made her seem more convincing? Either way, we put my morning glory to good use as (afte a condom and put it on!) I took Lydia doggy style on the floor of her kitchenette.

We shared a shower after that and soaped each other down. This (of course!) led to more se Metre Condom Dash were an Olympic sport, I'd have a damn good chance at Gold!)This tim and from behind. Lydia clasped the edge of the sink basin as I thrust hard in and out of her, slapping against her buttocks. Turned on from the hot water, steam, running our hands over slippery bodies and watching ourselves in the large mirror (it looked a little bit like a dream s movie, y'know?– all soft focus fluffiness around the edges of the 'screen') we both came, alm Lydia gripped the taps so hard she twisted on the hot water tap as she came, pushing her bu shouting something incoherent. All that turned me on so much that I shot my load only secon recovered just enough to turn the tap off.

Minutes later I was sat on the settee with a dry bath towel wrapped around my waist while L on. She was naked under a short, black satin dressing gown that clung to her curves and sh sunlight as her breasts jiggled when she walked. I had another boner and really wanted to fu we hadn't explored the 'spare' room yet!) but we were out of condoms. Over a pot of tea with chatted for half an hour and I suddenly realised what it was that looked so different about he

The red colour in her hair had gone, washed away in the shower. Her short dark brown hair into spikes now and lay forward and flat. Her heavy makeup was removed, although her eye still sparkled wickedly. I guess they were like that all the time. Looking into her eyes it sudde that her eyebrow and lip piercings were gone. Lydia laughed and explained head office didn dyed hair and too many piercings, so she used clip-ons for her eyebrow and lip and only app colour to her hair when she went for a night out. Work guidelines would allow her nose pierc several discreet, studs to choose from) and she only had three rings through each ear, no ba of shrapnel.

I admitted to Lydia I'd been curious about how she looked dressed for work. Asking if I'd like

did) she smiled and walked over to the 'spare' room, pausing at the door to slip out of her dr shake her boobs at me with a laugh. She then went in and the door closed behind her. Ther curious about and unable to resist; I got up and quickly checked her black bra from the night wash-faded label I discovered Lydia was a 36D. I know, I know; sad. But it seemed too obvi by then way, just how big are those titties I've been fondling and sucking on all night?'

I marveled at how lucky I thought myself to be - Lydia was a girl of contrasts. Although I gue woman. She was twenty-two and had a great blend of maturity and playfulness. Her confide although she had what some might see as rough edges (drinking from a pint, tucking into a swearing like a trooper during sex) I just found that this made her all the more attractive. She well spoken and pleasant mannered. I hadn't heard her swear or curse other than when we' early hours of this morning and she otherwise talked softly and intelligently.

And if fucking seems like a hard word to use, well that's what it was. It wasn't 'making love' I something else more tender and caring; It wasn't just 'sex' it was far too lusting and wild for biting, scratching, swearing and the hard and fast way we took each other. No we fucked ea out, that's how I see it. So knowing that Lydia could be, well it sounds lame; but nice (she wa to stay the night, snuggled up to me so tightly, had made me tea and breakfast in the mornin brightly and pleasantly) and could also be forward, demanding and sexually aggressive whe just made her more and more fascinating to me.

The door opened again a few minutes later and I started as somebody else walked in from t hang on. It was Lydia. She'd brushed her hair, applied conservative amounts of eyeliner and wearing glasses. This gave more colour and almost a different shape to her face. A complet contrast between pale skin and dark makeup from the night before. She had a fine chain ne a white blouse, with only the top button undone and no cleavage on display. A Light grey ma skirt and jacket, barely black tights (they didn't look shiny enough to be stockings) and low h shoes. I must have been gaping because Lydia laughed as she walked over and sat alongsi

"Kinda different, huh?"

I doubted if even one of her work colleagues would have recognised her at Dante's last nigh golden metal frame of her glasses.

"These seem to make the most difference to folk. I only wear them to work for squinting at th tills and the stock control displays."

I chuckled and agreed that it was quite a transformation. Lydia told me she only looked "so for work, preferring to dress more like last night the rest of the time, but not quite as extreme

"I like to save the clip on piercings, wild tights and boots for nights out." she laughed.

I smiled, looking down at her sexy legs (dark mesh, whether it's tights or stockings, has alwa and glancing up to her chest. Sat to Lydia's left, I could see inside her blouse, between the b her ample chest was restrained by a white, lacy, bra. I betted many a customer and staff me same view, and wondered what those breasts would be like naked and to the touch. Fortuna myself, I knew first hand. Although I did wonder what it would be like rub them with baby oil, together and slip my cock between them.

Realising I was ogling her again and looking up; I saw Lydia was looking down at the towel I rising where my cock was stiffening again.

"Hell, have you got it up again?" she asked.

I shrugged and 'apologised' with a grin. Lydia's eyes sparkled behind her glasses.

"I guess we need to go shopping then. There's a corner shop down the road. I'll be five minu at the bulge under the towel.

"Make sure that doesn't go anywhere!"

Grabbing her keys and her money pouch from the night before, she winked at me and dashe letting the door close to behind her.

Five minutes later, she was back. I'd taken the dirty sheets off the bed and was now lying on my carefully nursed erection still present and correct. Lydia had a carrier bag in one hand th more than just a packet of condoms in it. Those she produced form her jacket pocket, tossin over to me. I caught the packet in my right hand as Lydia looked at my cock, actually licked

"Get one of those on!"

I opened the packet and removed a foil wrapper as Lydia set down the carrier bag and stoop something from it – a squeezy bottle of chocolate sauce and a loop of that plastic coated wa pinched together at the middle by a ring of cardboard. Taking off her glasses and putting the she undid the buttons on her blouse and tossing her head back a little, pulled it apart, reveal bra and magnificent cleavage. Kicking off her shoes she picked up her shopping and advanc head down and with a wicked grin. Like I said back at the start. Attitude. A bit of mystery. Ro for me.

Roommates (Brother & sister have to share a bed)
by_©

My relatives came to visit over the summer. My aunt and uncle on my mom's side, and my g father's side. Our house was full, with myself, my sister, and my parents already filling our th home before taking in more people. I loved having the relatives visit us, so it wasn't a proble meant that my sister had to share my room for a week.

That was going to prove very beneficial, as I was soon to discover. I'm eighteen, and my sis quite a year older than me. My mom got pregnant with me almost immediately after she was that people think we're twins. We get along pretty well, although sharing a room was going t adjustment.

After we had a big dinner, everyone went to their rooms. My aunt and uncle slept in my siste was slightly bigger than mine, and my grandparents took my parents' room, and my parents sofa in the living room. I went to the bathroom and then waited in my room for Brynn. She so closed the door.

When I saw her in her nightgown, I realized what a great body she had. I guess I never paid before, but she was very attractive. I wasn't prepared for the thoughts I was having. I wasn't anything sexual in particular, but we were going to be sleeping in the same bed. That made
I had to shift so that my boxers wouldn't tent.

She kind of smiled at me, a little uncomfortable probably. I was too, but I got under the cove as far as I could. She shut the light off and nervously got in next to me. She faced away from ass to brush against me for a brief moment. I couldn't stop myself from getting hard, even th want to. I had to face away from her so I wasn't poking her.

"You don't have to roll over," she said, glancing back at me. "I don't mind if you face me."

"Oh, I…uh, just getting comfortable," I answered.

For the next few minutes, I tried to think about something else other than my sister next to m erection wouldn't go down. Normally I didn't get hard thinking about my sister, which is not to fantasized about her. But if I ever got aroused thinking about her, it was because I allowed m

She rolled over and faced me, and noticed that I was still facing away from her.

"Are you embarrassed to be sleeping with me?" she asked.

I turned my head, but not my body. "Of course not."

"Then roll over. I can't talk to you with your back facing me."

By this time our eyes had adjusted to the dark, so she would definitely see my hard dick if I t what could I say?

"I…can't," I replied stupidly.

"Why not?"

I sighed. "Because when I get comfortable, like when I'm in bed, then…you know, I get…cor

I could hear her smile.

"Really?" she asked. "Are you hard?"

I nodded.

"It's okay, don't be embarrassed. Just face me so I can't see it under the covers."

I rolled over and faced her, making sure there was enough space between us so that I wasn wasn't easy, since we were in a bed made for one person.

"Now you're about to fall off the bed," Brynn said. "Don't worry about…touching me with it. I anything."

"But, it's embarrassing."

She giggled. "I promise not to do anything. Just scoot closer so you're not hanging over the

I moved a few inches closer to her, and misjudged the length of my dick. I jabbed her stoma her eyes go wide. She tried not to laugh, while I tried to shift myself so I wasn't touching her.
lay on my back and let my dick tent up through the covers, but that would be even more em

"Sorry," I said.

"That's okay. We're family, so I guess that stuff shouldn't bother us."

"That's easy for you to say," I said. "Your boobs aren't going around poking people."

She laughed. The other bedrooms were a ways down the hall, and there was a bathroom be room, so no one could hear us.

"I don't have enough room," she said, twisting her body. "The floor would be better than this.
have to sleep like this for a week."

"What are you saying? You want me to sleep on the floor?"

Brynn smiled, thinking for a moment. "Look, we're brother and sister, so let's just forget abou my boobs, and sleep normally."

"How do we do that?"

Brynn moved closer to me until we were an inch from touching, and only because I was still over the bed.

"Move closer," she said.

I complied, and scooted closer until our bodies touched. Her breasts against my chest made moment about my dick nesting firmly against her belly. She nuzzled into me.

"Hmm, this is much better," she said.

I didn't know what to say. We just stared at each other, while I enjoyed her warmth pressed dick twitched and jumped a few times, and her breathing was causing her breasts to move s

"Is this alright?" she asked.

"Yeah," I said.

Surprisingly, we both soon fell asleep. When I awoke, Brynn was facing away from me and against her. My hard dick was nestled between her ass cheeks. I glanced to my alarm clock one in my family would be up yet, but now I couldn't get back to sleep. I put my hand on Bry ground my dick into her ass gently.

She stirred and moved back against me. She was still asleep, but her body was responding carefully pulled her nightgown up, revealing her panties which I had my boxer-clad dick pres brave and pulled my boxers off, careful not to wake Brynn. I lay there naked, fully aroused, a nightgown up again.

I gently nudged my dick up into her ass again, pressing into her panties. After I was certain s waking up, I very slowly and carefully began to pull her panties down. I had not gone very fa waist, when she started to wake up.

I froze, hoping she wouldn't notice I was naked. She squirmed a bit, feeling something differ were pressed against each other. I think she knew what I had been doing.

"I need to get more comfortable," she said. "Do you mind?"

I shook my head, not sure what she meant. She pulled her nightgown over her head and tos She laid her head back down and went back to sleep, or at least looked like she had.

There we lay, me naked and her in just her panties. I lifted my head so I could see her breas kicked the covers off so they were exposed. She looked to be a C-cup, and I was glued to th The thought of her lying naked next to me, or at least mostly naked, made my really horny. I into her ass, and again, and I began humping her ass through her panties.

I didn't know how she could have slept through it, so she must have been pretending to be a since she didn't try to move away from me or object. But then I felt myself start to cum. I stop sensation would pass, but Brynn squeezed her ass cheeks around my shaft, and I couldn't s

I held her tightly against my body as I thrust myself into her ass. I figured if I was going to cu going to make sure it felt good. I pressed against her tightly, knowing if she wasn't awake fro would be when I soaked her panties. I squirted cum into her ass through her panties. I thrust hand found her breast while I grasped her body against me.

When I was finished, I didn't know what to do. I released my grip on her, and she didn't mov brief second that she was truly asleep, but then she slid off the bed and stood before me, he me. Without a word, she slipped out of her panties, dropped them next to her nightgown on back into bed without looking at me. She faced away from me and pushed her ass against m burying me between her ass cheeks.

I sensed that she eventually fell back asleep, but I was wide awake. We were both naked, a pressed into her naked ass. I couldn't believe what I had done, and that she had gone along have shed her panties simply because they were soiled, but she had very firmly pressed her me.

At about 8:00, my family started getting up. Brynn got up and stretched, giving me a wonder naked body. She glanced back at me and smiled, and then started dressing. I lay in bed unt then dressed. When I went downstairs to the kitchen, everyone was sitting around the table breakfast. I glanced at Brynn, who smiled knowingly at me.

That day, the family did various activities, like shopping and playing games. I avoided Brynn know how to act around her, so we didn't speak until that night when everyone was going to waited for her in my room, in just my boxers. When she came in, she shut the door and stoo time wearing panties and a sports bra.

"You kept your boxers on," she said. "I thought you would want to be more comfortable."

I didn't say anything. She started to strip before me, and when she was naked, I had only a s her nudity before she turned the lights off. She crawled into bed, and I shed my boxers befor thought we were going to assume the same position, but she was facing me this time. She w close, so that our faces were practically touching. Our bodies were also dangerously close.
brushed against my chest.

"Are you mad?" I finally asked.

She frowned. "Why would I be mad?"

"You know, about this morning."

She paused. "Let's not talk about it right now. Let's just lay here quietly, and not say anythin

I thought she meant we were to lay still, but in a few seconds I felt her fingers wrap around m jumped, not expecting her warm grip. She tugged lightly on my length, her hand exploring pe penis. I myself was a virgin, and she was the first girl I had seen naked this close.

I lightly touched her breasts, and she arched her back so I had better access to them. We pl other like this for a while until I wanted to feel her pussy. I ran my hand down her chest and I reached her lower belly. She shifted so I could reach her crotch, and I soon felt her neatly t traced her slit up and down, and bravely entered her with my finger.

Her gentle tugging on my dick soon turned into jacking me off. I didn't know if she wanted m distracted myself by playing with her pussy. She began to moan, and I began to feel up her fingered her.

She tensed suddenly and her body spasmed. I felt her pussy tighten and contract around m and her face contorted, and I realized she was having an orgasm. After she finished, she loo contentedly.

"Are you a virgin?" she asked suddenly.

I nodded. "What about you?"

She nodded too. "Do you want to…?"

"Do you?"

She thought for a moment and then nodded. I got on top of her and clumsily guided my dick hole. I thrust forward, and when I felt resistance I carefully pushed past. She gasped as I too virginity, and after I was buried all the way inside of her, I laid still on top of her. I could feel h heart beating through my chest. She held me tightly against her while she adjusted to the fe inside of her for the first time.

I started fucking her, slowly at first, and then faster until we had a rhythm going. I watched a tensed up once more, and she had another orgasm. I was amazed I was lasting this long, bu vaginal muscles grip my cock, I knew I wouldn't last much longer.

I started to pull out, but she held me inside of her.

"Cum in me," she said. "Cum in my pussy. It's alright."

I trusted her and resumed humping. Our eyes were locked together as I fucked her pussy ev could feel my dick throb and twitch inside of her. I grunted and released my semen into her, endlessly inside of her belly. When I finally finished, we just started at each other panting, m inside of her.

Brynn smiled. "That was much better than fucking my ass."

I smiled. "Yeah, for me too."

"Let's rest for a while, and then we can do it again."

We lay there beside each other, catching our breath and stroking each other. It was going to

|| namo tassa bhagavato arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa ||

suttantapiá¹-aka

saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• ye

sagÄ• thÄ• vaggapÄ• á¸·i

saá¹ƒgÄ• yanassa pucchÄ• vissajjanÄ•

__pucchÄ• --- _ paá¹-hamamahÄ• saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• le \Be I 1/ Ä• vuso dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• ha mahÄ• theravarÄ• porÄ• á¹‡asaá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• rÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ vinayapiá¹-akaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ suttantapiá¹-akaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yantÄ• dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaÃ±ca majjhimanikÄ• yaÃ±ca saá¹ƒgÄ kiá¹ƒnÄ• ma pÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paá¹-hamamahÄ• saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• le bhante dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakÄ• m porÄ• á¹‡atheravarÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ vinayapiá¹-akaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yitvÄ• tadanantaraá¹ƒ su saá¹ƒgÄ• yantÄ• dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaÃ±ca majjhimanikÄ• yaÃ±ca saá¹ƒgÄ• yitvÄ• tadanantar sattahi ca suttasatehi dvÄ• saá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• ca suttehi paá¹-imaá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ bhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• ras saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• yaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma pÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__pucchÄ• --- _ saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• ye \Be I 2/ ca Ä• vuso sagÄ• thÄ• vaggo nidÄ• navaggo k saá¸·Ä• yatanavaggo mahÄ• vaggoti paÃ±casaá¹ƒyuttappakaraá¹‡Ä• ni, tesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyuttappakaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ te saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paÃ±casu bhante saá¹ƒyuttappakaraá¹‡esu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ sagÄ• thÄ• vaggasaá¹ƒyuttappakaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__pucchÄ• --- _ sagÄ• thÄ• vaggepi \Be I 3/ Ä• vuso devatÄ• saá¹ƒyuttÄ• divasena ekÄ• d paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ kataraá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ te saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ekÄ• dasasu bhante saá¹ƒyuttesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ devatÄ• saá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ __pucchÄ• --- _ devatÄ• saá¹ƒyuttepi Ä• vuso naá¸·avaggÄ• dayo aá¹-á¹-ha vaggÄ• , ogha ekÄ• sÄ«ti suttÄ• ni, tesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ kataraá¹ƒ vaggaá¹ƒ kataraÃ±ca suttaá¹ƒ sagÄ• yiá __vissajjanÄ• --- _ aá¹-á¹-hasu bhante vaggesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ naá¸·avaggaá¹ƒ ekÄ• sÄ«ti paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ oghataraá¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

sÄ• dhu \Be I 4/ sÄ• dhu Ä• vuso, mayampi dÄ• ni tatoyeva paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya saá¹ƒgÄ«tipubb pucchanavissajjanakiccÄ• ni Ä• vahituá¹ƒ samÄ• rabhÄ• ra.

devatÄ• saá¹ƒyutta

oghataraá¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambud
kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá
devatÄ• abhikkantÄ• ya rattiyÄ• abhikkantavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• kevalakappaá¹ƒ jetavanaá¹ƒ obhÄ tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ aá¹-á kho sÄ• devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kathaá¹ƒ nu tvaá¹ƒ mÄ• risa oghamatarÄ«â€ tasmiá¹ƒ \Be I 5/ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``apatiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ khvÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso anÄ• yÅ«haá ti, evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

accentisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ accentisuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 8/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá
devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``accenti kÄ• lÄ• tarayanti rattiyo,

vayoguá¹‡Ä• anupubbaá¹ƒ jahanti,

etaá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ maraá¹‡e pekkhamÄ• no,

puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni kayirÄ• tha sukhÄ• vahÄ• nÄ«â€™â€™ ti ---

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``accenti kÄ• lÄ• tarayanti rattiyo,

vayoguá¹‡Ä• anupubbaá¹ƒ jahanti,

etaá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ maraá¹‡e pekkhamÄ• no,

lokÄ• misaá¹ƒ pajahe santipekkhoâ€™â€™ ti --- evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sattisutta

 __pucchÄ• --- _ sattisuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 10/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kis
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

 __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá
devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``sattiyÄ• viya omaá¹-á¹-ho, á¸• ayhamÄ• nova matthake.

kÄ• marÄ• gappahÄ• nÄ• ya, sato bhikkhu paribbajeâ€™â€™ ti ---

 tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

sattiyÄ• \Be I 11/ viya omaá¹-á¹-ho á¸• ayhamÄ• nova matthake.

sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hippahÄ• nÄ• ya, sato bhikkhu paribbajeti.

 evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sattiyÄ• viya omaá¹-á¹-ho, á¸• ayhamÄ• nova matthake.

kÄ• marÄ• gappahÄ• nÄ• ya, sato bhikkhu paribbaje --- sattiyÄ• \Be I 12/ viya omaá¹-á¹-ho, á¸• ayhamÄ• nova matthake, sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hippamÄ• nÄ• ya, sato bhikkhu paribbaje --- jaá¹-Ä• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ jaá¹-Ä• suttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá devatÄ• bhavagantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``anto jaá¹-Ä• bahijaá¹-Ä• , jaá¹-Ä• ya jaá¹-itÄ• pajÄ• .

taá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ gotama pucchÄ• mi, ko imaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-aye jaá¹-aâ€™â€™ nti ---

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

sÄ«le patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya naro sapaÃ±Ã±o, cittaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca bhÄ• vayaá¹ƒ.

Ä• tÄ• pÄ« nipako bhikkhu, so imaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-aye jaá¹-aá¹ƒ ||

yesaá¹ƒ \Be I 13/ rÄ• go ca doso ca, avijjÄ• ca virÄ• jitÄ• .

khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• arahanto, tesaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-itÄ• jaá¹-Ä• ti.

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sÄ«le \Be I 14/ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya naro sapaÃ±Ã±o, cittaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca bhÄ• vayaá¹ƒ.

Ä• tÄ• pÄ« nipako bhikkhu, so imaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-aye jaá¹-aá¹ƒ --- yesaá¹ƒ rÄ• go ca doso ca, avijjÄ• ca virÄ• jitÄ• .

khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• arahanto, tesaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-itÄ• jaá¹-Ä• --- yattha \Be I 15/ nÄ• maÃ±ca rÅ«paÃ±ca, asesaá¹ƒ uparujjhati.

paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ rÅ«pasaÃ±Ã±Ä• ca, etthesÄ• chijjate jaá¹-Ä• ||

accharÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ accharÄ• suttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismia

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si devaputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``accharÄ• gaá¹‡asaá¹…ghaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, pisÄ• ca gaá¹‡asevitaá¹ƒ.

vanantaá¹ƒ mohanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma, kathaá¹ƒ yÄ• trÄ• bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``ujuko nÄ• ma so maggo, abhayÄ• nÄ• ma sÄ• disÄ• ,

ratho akÅ«jano nÄ• ma, dhammacakkehi saá¹ƒyuto ||

hirÄ« \Be I 16/ tassa apÄ• lambo, satyassa parivÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

dhammÄ• haá¹ƒ sÄ• rathiá¹ƒ brÅ«mi, sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi purejavaá¹ƒ ||

yassa etÄ• disaá¹ƒ yÄ• naá¹ƒ, itthiyÄ• purisassa vÄ• .

á¹• 22sa ve etena yÄ• nena, nibbÄ• nasseva santikeâ€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

accharÄ• gaá¹‡asaá¹…ghuá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ \Be I 17/, pisÄ• cagaá¹‡asevitaá¹ƒ.

vanantaá¹ƒ mohanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma, kathaá¹ƒ yÄ• trÄ• bhavissati --- jarÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ jarÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Be I 19/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ devataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá
devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``kiá¹ƒ su yÄ• va jarÄ• sÄ• dhu, kiá¹ƒ su sÄ• dhu patiá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ su narÄ• naá¹ƒ ratanaá¹ƒ, kiá¹ƒ su corehi dÅ«haraâ€™â€™ nti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``sÄ«laá¹ƒ yÄ• va jarÄ• sÄ• dhu, saddhÄ• sÄ• dhu patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

paÃ±Ã±Ä• narÄ• naá¹ƒ ratanaá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ corehi dÅ«haraâ€™â€™ nti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ su yÄ• va jarÄ• sÄ• dhu.

kiá¹ƒ su sÄ• dhu patiá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ \Be I 20/ su narÄ• naá¹ƒ ratanaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ su corehi dÅ«haraá¹ƒ.

devaputtasaá¹ƒyutta

subrahmasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambud
kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kataÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. kÄ«diso ca tattha dhammap dhammassavanÄ• nisaá¹ƒso adhigato.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be I 21/ bhante subrahmadevaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita devaputto maraá¹‡abhayabhÄ«to bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca --- ``niccaá¹ƒ utrastamidaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ, niccaá¹ƒ ubbiggamidaá¹ƒ mano.

anuppannesu kicchesu, atho uppatitesu ca.

sace atthi anutrastaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ me akkhÄ• hi pucchitoâ€™â€™ ti ---

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ.

``nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra bojjÄ• tapasÄ• , nÄ• Ã±Ã±atrindriyasaá¹ƒvarÄ• .

nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra sabbanissaggÄ• , sotthiá¹ƒ passÄ• mi pÄ• á¹‡inaâ€™â€™ nti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. desanÄ• pariyosÄ• ne ca bhante subrahmas Ä• sane virajaá¹ƒ vÄ«tamalaá¹ƒ dhammacakkhuá¹ƒ udapÄ• di, ``yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci samudayadha nirodhadhammaâ€™â€™ nti.

niccaá¹ƒ \Be I 22/ utrastamidaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ, niccaá¹ƒ ubbiggamidaá¹ƒ mano.

anuppannesu kicchesu, atho uppatitesu ca.

sace atthi anutrasta, taá¹ƒ me akkhÄ• hi pucchito-hu --- nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra \Be I 23/ bojjÄ• tapasÄ• , nÄ• Ã±Ã±atrindriyasaá¹ƒvarÄ• .

nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra sabbanissaggÄ• , sotthiá¹ƒ passÄ• mi pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ --- rohitassasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ rohitassasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 24/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rohitassaá¹ƒ devaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá devaputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``yattha nu kho bhante na jÄ• yati na jÄ«yati na mÄ«ya upapajjati, sakkÄ• nu kho so bhante gamanena lokassa anto Ã±Ä• tuá¹ƒ vÄ• daá¹-á¹-huá¹ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yattha kho Ä• vuso na jÄ• yati na jÄ«yati na upapajjati, nÄ• haá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ gamanena lokassa antaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• teyyaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-heyyaá¹ƒ patte
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kosalasaá¹ƒyutta

daharasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ daharasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 26/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha

bhante pasenadi kosalo yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavatÄ ekamantaá¹ƒ nisinno kho bhante rÄ• jÄ• pasenadi kosalo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``bhav `anuttaraá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambodhiá¹ƒ abhisambuddhoâ€™ ti paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tas
``yaÃ±hi taá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• ja sammÄ• vadamÄ• novadeyya `anuttaraá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambodh 27/, mameva taá¹ƒ sammÄ• vadamÄ• no vadeyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bha tasmÄ• \Be I 29/ hi paá¹‡á¸• ito poso, sampassaá¹ƒ atthamattano.

bhujaá¹…gamaá¹ƒ pÄ• vakaÃ±ca, khattiyaÃ±ca yasassinaá¹ƒ.

bhikkhuÃ±ca sÄ«lasampannaá¹ƒ, sammadeva samÄ• care --- attarakkhitasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ attarakkhitasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kism
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒyeva pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• ra
bhante pasenadi kosalo bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``idha mayhaá¹ƒ bhante rahog
I 30/ evaá¹ƒ cetaso parivitakko udapÄ• dÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dikaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ avoca. b evametaá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• ja evametaá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• vibhajitvÄ• bhÄ• sit kÄ• yena \Be I 32/ saá¹ƒvaro sÄ• dhu, sÄ• dhu vÄ• cÄ• ya saá¹ƒvaro.

manasÄ• saá¹ƒvaro sÄ• dhu, sÄ• dhu, sabbattha saá¹ƒvaro.

sabbattha saá¹ƒvuto lajjÄ«, rakkhitoti pavuccati ||

appakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ appakasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒyeva pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• ra
bhante pasenadi kosalo bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``idha mayhaá¹ƒ bhante rahog evaá¹ƒ cetaso parivitakko udapÄ• di appakÄ• te sattÄ• lokasmiá¹ƒ, ye uá¸·Ä• re uá¸·Ä• re majjanti na ca pamajjanti, na ca kÄ• mesu gedhaá¹ƒ Ä• pajjantÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dikaá ca bhante ``evametaá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• ja evametaá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ

mallikÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mallikÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Be I 34/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒyeva pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante pasenadi kosalo mallikaá¹ƒ deviá¹ƒ etadavoca ``atthi nu kho te mallike kocaÃ±Ã±o a ti. tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ sabbÄ• disÄ• anuparigamma cetasÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bh

sabbÄ• \Be I 35/ disÄ• anuparigamma cetasÄ• , nevajjhagÄ• piyataramattanÄ• kvaci. ev paresaá¹ƒ, tasmÄ• na hiá¹ƒse paramattakÄ• mo --- sattajaá¹-ilasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 36/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena sattajaá kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante pasenadi kosalo acirapakkantesu sattasu ca jaá¹-ilesu sattasu ca nigaá¹‡á¹-hesu sa sattasu ca ekasÄ• á¹-akesu sattasu ca paribbÄ• jakesu yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kami, bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ«di, ekamantaá¹ƒ nisinno kho bhante rÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ye te bhante loke arahanto vÄ• arahattamaggaá¹ƒ vÄ• samÄ• aÃ±Ã±atarÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``dujjÄ• naá¹ƒ kho etaá¹ƒ mahÄ• r kÄ• mabhoginÄ• puttasambÄ• dhasayanaá¹ƒ ajjhÄ• vasantena kÄ• siá¹‡acandanaá¹ƒ pac mÄ• lÄ• gandhavilepanaá¹ƒ dhÄ• rayantena jÄ• tarÅ«parajataá¹ƒ sÄ• diyantena ``ime vÄ• arahattamaggaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sita na \Be I 40/ vaá¹‡á¹‡arÅ«pena naro sujÄ• no, na vissase ittaradassanena.

susaÃ±Ã±atÄ• naÃ±hi viyaÃ±janena, asaÃ±Ã±atÄ• lokamimaá¹ƒ caranti || patirÅ«pako mattikÄ• kuá¹‡á¸• alova, lohaá¸• á¸• hamÄ• sova suvaá¹‡á¹‡achanno.

caranti loke parivÄ• rachannÄ• , anto asuddhÄ• bahisobhamÄ• nÄ• -hÅ«Å«Ì†

paÃ±carÄ• jasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ paÃ±carÄ• jasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 41/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• r vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒyeva pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante pasenadi kosalo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kiá¹ƒ nu kho bhante kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ ag bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``manÄ• papariyantaá¹ƒ khvÄ• haá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• ja paÃ±casu kÄ• mag ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

idha \Be I 42/ bhante amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ rÄ• jÅ«naá¹ƒ paÃ±cahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehi samaá¹…gÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ paricÄ• rayamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ ayamantarÄ• kathÄ• udapÄ• diá¹ nti --- padumaá¹ƒ \Be I 43/ yathÄ• kokanadaá¹ƒ sugandhaá¹ƒ, pÄ• to siyÄ• phullamavÄ«tagand virocamÄ• naá¹ƒ, tapantamÄ• diccamivantalikkhe --- dutiyaaputtakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dutiyaaputtakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 44/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒyeva pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante pasenadi kosalo bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``idha bhante sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ s kÄ• laá¹…kato, tamahaá¹ƒ aputtakaá¹ƒ sÄ• pateyyaá¹ƒ rÄ• jantepuraá¹ƒ atiharitvÄ• Ä• gac evamÄ• dikaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ avoca. bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``evametaá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• ja, evame bhÅ«tapubbaá¹ƒ so mahÄ• rÄ• ja seá¹-á¹-hi gahapati taggarasikhiá¹ƒ nÄ• ma paccekasamb paá¹-ipÄ• desÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• tassa seá¹-á¹-hissa gahapatissa atÄ«taá¹ƒ vatth catÅ«hi gÄ• thÄ• hi bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

dhaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ \Be I 47/ dhanaá¹ƒ rajataá¹ƒ jÄ• tarÅ«paá¹ƒ, pariggahaá¹ƒ vÄ• pi yadatthi kiÃ

dÄ• sÄ• kammakarÄ• pessÄ• , ye cassa anujÄ«vino ||

sabbaá¹ƒ nÄ• dÄ• ya gantabbaá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ nikkhippagÄ• minaá¹ƒ.

yaÃ±ca karoti kÄ• yena, vÄ• cÄ• ya udacetasÄ• ||

taÃ±hi tassa sakaá¹ƒ hoti, taá¹ƒva Ä• dÄ• ya gacchati.

taá¹ƒvassa anugaá¹ƒ hoti, chÄ• yÄ• va anapÄ• yinÄ« ||

tasmÄ• kareyya kalyÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, nicayaá¹ƒ samparÄ• yikaá¹ƒ.

puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni paralokasmiá¹ƒ, patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• honti pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ --- mÄ• rasaá¹ƒyutta

tapokammasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tapokammasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 48/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• jinena kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ uruvelÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si.

``tapokammÄ• apakkamma, yena sujjhanti mÄ• á¹‡avÄ• .

asuddho maÃ±Ã±asi suddho, suddhimaggÄ• aparaddhoâ€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``anattasaá¹ƒhitaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• , yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±ci amaraá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ.

sabbaá¹ƒ natthÄ• vahaá¹ƒ hoti, phiyÄ• rittaá¹ƒva dhammani.

sÄ«laá¹ƒ samÄ• dhi paÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca, maggaá¹ƒ bodhÄ• ya bhÄ• vayaá¹ƒ.

pattosmi paramaá¹ƒ suddhiá¹ƒ, nihato tvamasi antakÄ• â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• jinena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

tapokammÄ• \Be I 49/ apakkamma, ye na sujjhanti mÄ• á¹‡avÄ• .

asuddho maÃ±Ã±asi suddho, suddhimaggÄ• aparaddho --- anatthasaá¹ƒhitaá¹ƒ \Be I 50/ utvÄ• , yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci amaraá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ.

sabbaá¹ƒ natthÄ• vahaá¹ƒ hoti, phiyÄ• rittaá¹ƒva dhammani.

hatthirÄ• javaá¹‡á¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ hatthirÄ• javaá¹‡á¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 51/ panÄ• vuso bhavagatÄ• jinena ka kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ uruvelÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• rakaá¹ƒyeva pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bh pÄ• pimÄ• bhagavato bhayaá¹ƒ chambhitattaá¹ƒ lomahaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ uppÄ• detukÄ• mo maha abhinimminitvÄ• yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kami.

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``saá¹ƒsaraá¹ƒ dÄ«ghamaddhÄ• naá¹ƒ, vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ katvÄ• subhÄ• subhaá¹ƒ.

á¹• 22alaá¹ƒ te tena pÄ• pima, nihato tvamasi antakÄ• â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• jinena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

saá¹ƒsaraá¹ƒ \Be I 52/ dÄ«ghamaddhÄ• naá¹ƒ, vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ katvÄ• subhÄ• subhaá¹ƒ, alaá¹ƒ te tena pÄ• pima, nihato tvamasi antaka --- bhikkhunÄ«saá¹ƒyutta

Ä• á¸·avikÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ idÄ• ni Ä• vuso bhikkhunÄ« saá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ pucchÄ• mi, yaá¹ƒ tassa bhaga sammÄ• sambuddhassa sÄ• vikÄ• hi therÄ«hi attano

ca \Be I 53/ buddhasÄ• sanassa ca yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ guá¹‡aá¹ƒ pakÄ• setvÄ• bhÄ• sitaá porÄ• á¹‡akehi mahÄ• kassapÄ• dÄ«hi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakehi theravarehi saá¹ƒgÄ«taá kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• á¸·avi bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• Ä• á¸·avikÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhayaá¹ƒ chambhita uppÄ• detukÄ• mo vivekamhÄ• cÄ• vetukÄ• mo Ä• á¸·avikaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• ya a ``natthi nissaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ loke, kiá¹ƒ vivekena kÄ• hasi.

bhuÃ±jassa kÄ• maratiyo, mÄ• hu pacchÄ• nutÄ• pinÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``atthi nissaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ loke, paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya me suphussitaá¹ƒ.

pamattabandhu pÄ• pima, na tvaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• si taá¹ƒ padaá¹ƒ.

sattisÅ«lÅ«pamÄ• kÄ• mÄ• , khandhÄ• saá¹ƒ adhikuá¹-á¹-anÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ kÄ• maratiá¹ƒ brÅ«si, arahi mayha sÄ• ahÅ«â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante Ä• á¸·avikÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

natthi \Be I 54/ nissaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ loke, kiá¹ƒ vivekena kÄ• hasi.

bhuÃ±jassu kÄ• maratiyo, mÄ• hu pacchÄ• nutÄ• pinÄ«-hu --- atthi \Be I 55/ nissaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ loke, paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya me suphussitaá¹ƒ.

pamattabandhu pÄ• pima, na tvaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• si taá¹ƒ padaá¹ƒ ||

sattisÅ«lÅ«pamÄ• kÄ• mÄ• , khandhÄ• saá¹ƒ adhikuá¹-á¹-anÄ• .

yaá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ kÄ• maratiá¹ƒ brÅ«si, arati mayha sÄ• ahu --- somÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ somÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Be I 56/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vat
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante andhavane mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• r bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• somÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhayaá¹ƒ chambhitattaá¹ƒ samÄ• dhimhÄ• cÄ• vetukÄ• mo somaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si.

``yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ isÄ«hi pattabbaá¹ƒ, á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ durabhisambhavaá¹ƒ.

na taá¹ƒ dvaá¹…gulapaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya, sakkÄ• pappotumitthiyÄ• â€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``itthibhÄ• vo kiá¹ƒ kayirÄ• , cittamhi susamÄ• hite.

Ã±Ä• á¹‡amhi vattamÄ• namhi, sammÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ vipassato.

yassa nÅ«na siyÄ• evaá¹ƒ, itthÄ• haá¹ƒ purisoti vÄ• .

kiÃ±ci vÄ• pana aÃ±Ã±asmi, taá¹ƒ mÄ• ro vattumarahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti || evaá¹ƒ kho bhante somÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• ariyasÄ• vikÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ \Be I 57/ taá¹ƒ isÄ«hi pattabbaá¹ƒ, á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ durabhisambhavaá¹ƒ.

na taá¹ƒ dvaá¹…gulapaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya, sakkÄ• pappotumitthiyÄ• --- itthi \Be I 58/ bhÄ• vo kiá¹ƒ kayirÄ• , cittamhi susamÄ• hite.

Ã±Ä• á¹‡amhi vatta mÄ• namhi, sammÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ vipassato ||

yassa nÅ«na siyÄ• evaá¹ƒ, itthÄ• haá¹ƒ purisoti vÄ• .

kiÃ±ci vÄ• pana aÃ±Ã±asmi, taá¹ƒ mÄ• ro vattumarahati ||

kisÄ• gotamÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 59/ kisÄ• gotamÄ«suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kism
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante andhavane mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• r bhikkhuniyÄ• theriyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• kisÄ• gotamiyÄ• bhikkhun lomahaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ uppÄ• detukÄ• mo samÄ• dhimhÄ• cÄ• vetukÄ• mo kisÄ• gotamiá¹ƒ bhik ``kiá¹ƒ nu tvaá¹ƒ mataputtÄ• va, ekamÄ• si rudammukhÄ«.

vanamajjhagatÄ• ekÄ• , purisaá¹ƒ nu gavesasÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

 tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

accantaá¹ƒ mataputtÄ• mhi, purisÄ• ekadantikÄ• .

na socÄ• mi na rodÄ• mi, na taá¹ƒ bhÄ• yÄ• mi Ä• vuso ||

sabbattha vihatÄ• nandÄ«, tamokkhandho padÄ• lito.

jetvÄ• na maccuno senaá¹ƒ, viharÄ• mi anÄ• savÄ• â€™â€™ ti || evaá¹ƒ kho bhante kisÄ• gotamiyÄ• bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ \Be I 60/ nu tvaá¹ƒ mataputtÄ• va, ekamÄ• si rudammukhÄ«.

 á¹• 22vanamajjhagatÄ• ekÄ• , purisaá¹ƒ nu gasesasi-hu --- accantaá¹ƒ mataputtÄ• mhi, purisÄ• etadantikÄ• .

na socÄ• mi na rodÄ• mi, na taá¹ƒ bhÄ• yÄ• mi Ä• vuso ||

sabbattha \Be I 61/ vihatÄ• nandÄ«, tamokkhandho padÄ• lito.

jetvÄ• na maccuno senaá¹ƒ, viharÄ• mi anÄ• savÄ• ||

uppalavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sutta

 __pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso porÄ• á¹‡ehi saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• ramahÄ• theravarehi saá¹ƒgÄ«ta kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

 __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante andhavane mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• m bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• uppalavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• lomahaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ uppÄ• detukÄ• mo samÄ• dhimhÄ• cÄ• vetukÄ• mo uppalavaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ``supupphitaggaá¹ƒ \Be I 62/ upagamma bhikkhuni, ekÄ• tuvaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hasi sÄ• lamÅ«le.

vaá¹‡á¹‡adhÄ• tu, bÄ• le na tvaá¹ƒ bhÄ• yasi dhuttakÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti.

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``sataá¹ƒ sahassÄ• nipi dhuttakÄ• naá¹ƒ, idhÄ• gatÄ• tÄ• disakÄ• bhaveyyuá¹ƒ.

lomaá¹ƒ na iÃ±jÄ• mi na santasÄ• mi,

na mÄ• ra bhÄ• yÄ• mi tamekikÄ• pi ||

esÄ• antaradhÄ• yÄ• mi, kucchiá¹ƒ vÄ• pavisÄ• mi te.

pakhumantarikÄ• yampi, tiá¹-á¹-hantiá¹ƒ maá¹ƒ na dakkhasi ||

cittasmiá¹ƒ vasÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• mhi, iddhipÄ• dÄ• subhÄ• vitÄ• .

sabbabandhanamuttÄ• mhi, na taá¹ƒ bhÄ• yÄ• mi Ä• vusoâ€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante uppalavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÄ• lÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 64/ cÄ• lÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante andhavane mÄ• raá¹ƒyeva pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• r ariyasÄ• vikÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• cÄ• laá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ upasaá¹.
tvaá¹ƒ bhikkhuni na rocesÄ«â€™â€™ ti. jÄ• tiá¹ƒ khvÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso na rocemÄ«â€™â€™ kiá¹ƒ nu jÄ• tiá¹ƒ na rocesi, jÄ• to kÄ• mÄ• ni bhuÃ±jati.

ko nu taá¹ƒ idamÄ• dapayi, jÄ• tiá¹ƒ mÄ• roca bhikkhunÄ«ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

jÄ• tassa maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti, jÄ• to dukkhÄ• ni phussati.

bandhaá¹ƒ vadhaá¹ƒ pariklesaá¹ƒ, tasmÄ• jÄ• tiá¹ƒ na rocaye ||

buddho dhammamadesesi, jÄ• tiyÄ• samatikkamaá¹ƒ.

sabbadukkhappahÄ• nÄ• ya, so maá¹ƒ sacce nivesayi ||

ye ca rÅ«pÅ«pagÄ• sattÄ• , ye ca arÅ«paá¹-á¹-hÄ• yino.

nirodhaá¹ƒ appajÄ• nantÄ• , Ä• gantÄ• ro punabbhavanti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante cÄ• lÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ \Be I 65/ nu jÄ• tiá¹ƒ na rocesi, jÄ• to kÄ• mÄ• ni bhuÃ±jati.

ko nu taá¹ƒ idamÄ• dapayi, jÄ• tiá¹ƒ mÄ• roca bhikkhunÄ« ||

jÄ• tassa \Be I 66/ maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti, jÄ• to dukkhÄ• ni phussati.

bandhaá¹ƒ vadhaá¹ƒ pariklesaá¹ƒ, tasmÄ• jÄ• tiá¹ƒ na rocaye ||

buddho dhammamadesesi, jÄ• tiyÄ• samatikkamaá¹ƒ,

sabbadukkhappahÄ• nÄ• ya, so maá¹ƒ sacce nivesayi ||

selÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 67/ selÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatth
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• raá¹ƒyeva pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbbha selA ariyasÄ• vikÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• selÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhayaá¹ƒ lomahaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ uppÄ• detukÄ• mo samÄ• dhimhÄ• cÄ• vetukÄ• mo selaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ kenidaá¹ƒ pakataá¹ƒ bimbaá¹ƒ, kvanu bimbassa kÄ• rako.

kvanu bimbaá¹ƒ samuppannaá¹ƒ, kvanu bimbaá¹ƒ nirujjhatÄ«ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

nayidaá¹ƒ attakataá¹ƒ bimbaá¹ƒ, nayidaá¹ƒ parakataá¹ƒ aghaá¹ƒ.

hetuá¹ƒ paá¹-icca sambhÅ«taá¹ƒ, hetubhaá¹…gÄ• nirujjhatÄ«ti ||

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante selÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kenidaá¹ƒ \Be I 68/ pakataá¹ƒ bimbaá¹ƒ, kvanu bimbassa kÄ• rako.

kvanu bimbaá¹ƒ samuppannaá¹ƒ, kvanu bimbaá¹ƒ nirujjhati-hu --- nayidaá¹ƒ attakataá¹ƒ bimbaá¹ƒ, nayidaá¹ƒ parakataá¹ƒ aghaá¹ƒ.

hetuá¹ƒ paá¹-icca sambhÅ«taá¹ƒ, hetubhaá¹…gÄ• nirujjhati ||

vajirÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 69/ porÄ• á¹‡akehi mahÄ• kassapÄ• dÄ«hi dhammasaá saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ vajirÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha vajirÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• purimanayeneva vajiraá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• y kenÄ• yaá¹ƒ \Be I 70/ pakato satto, kuvaá¹ƒ sattassa kÄ• rako, kuvaá¹ƒ satto samuppanno, kuvaá¹ƒ satto nirujjhatÄ«ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

kiá¹ƒ nu sattoti paccesi, mÄ• radiá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ nu te.

suddhasaá¹…khÄ• rapuÃ±joyaá¹ƒ, nayidha sattupalabbhati ||

yathÄ• hi aá¹…gasambhÄ• rÄ• , hoti saddo ratho iti.

evaá¹ƒ khandhesu santesu, hoti sattoti sammuti ||

dukkhameva hi sambhoti, dukkhaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hati veti ca,

nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra dukkhÄ• sambhoti, nÄ• Ã±Ã±aá¹ƒ dukkhÄ• nirujjhatÄ«ti || evaá¹ƒ kho bhante vajirÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kenÄ• yaá¹ƒ pakato satto, kuvaá¹ƒ sattassakÄ• rako.

kuvaá¹ƒ satto samuppanno, kuvaá¹ƒ satto nirujjhati-hu --- kiá¹ƒ \Be I 71/ nu sattoti paccesi, mÄ• ra diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ nu te.

suddhasaá¹…khÄ• rapuÃ±joyaá¹ƒ, nayidha sattupalabbhati ||

brahmasaá¹ƒyutta

gÄ• ravasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ brahmasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 72/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡ehi mahÄ• kassapatherÄ• d dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakatheravarehi dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ gÄ• ravasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kathaÅ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ uruvelÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante samuppannaá¹ƒ. bhagavÄ• bhante uruvelÄ• ya neraÃ±jarÄ• ya tÄ«re ajapÄ• lanigrodhamÅ«le paá¹-hamÄ• bhisambuddho. atha kho bhaga paá¹-isallÄ«nassa evaá¹ƒ cetaso parivitakko udapÄ• di ``dukkhaá¹ƒ kho agÄ• ravo viharati a khvÄ• haá¹ƒ samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ

atha kho bhante bhagavato etadahosi ``aparipuá¹‡á¹‡assa kho sÄ«lakkhandhassa pÄ• ripÅ samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ• ya viharey passÄ• mi sadevake loke samÄ• rake sabrahmake sassamaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡iyÄ• pajÄ• ya sÄ«lasampannataraá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ•

brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ \Be I 73/ vÄ• , yamahaá¹ƒ sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ• ya vihar aparipuá¹‡á¹‡assa kho samÄ• dhikkhandhassa.

aparipuá¹‡á¹‡assa kho paÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhassa.

aparipuá¹‡á¹‡assa kho vimuttikkhandhassa ||

aparipuá¹‡á¹‡assa kho vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanakkhandhassa pÄ• ripÅ«riyÄ• aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upaninissÄ• ya vihareyyaá¹ƒ. na kho par loke samÄ• rake sabrahmake sassamaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡iyÄ• pajÄ• ya sadevamanussÄ• ya vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanasampannataraá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ• ya vihareyyaá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒnÅ«nÄ• haá¹ƒ yvÄ• yaá¹ƒ dhammo mayÄ dhammaá¹ƒ sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ• ya vihareyyaâ€™â€™ nti. evaá¹ƒ kho bh parivitakkavasena uppannaá¹ƒ.

ye \Be I 75/ ca atÄ«tÄ• sambuddhÄ• , ye ca buddhÄ• anÄ• gatÄ• .

yo cetarahi sambuddho, bahÅ«naá¹ƒ sokanÄ• sano.

sabbe saddhammagaruno, vihaá¹ƒsu viharanti ca.

tathÄ• pi viharissanti, esÄ• buddhÄ• na dhammatÄ• ||

tasmÄ• hi attakÄ• mena, mahattamabhikaá¹…khatÄ• .

saddhammo garukÄ• tabbo, saraá¹ƒ buddhÄ• na sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ ||

aÃ±Ã±aratabrahmasutta

pucchÄ• - tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 76/ porÄ• á¹‡akehi mahÄ• kassapÄ• dÄ«hi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±atarabrahmasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ k __vissajjanÄ• --- _ brahmaloke bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ brahmÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasm bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. aÃ±Ã±atarassa bhante brahmuno evarÅ«paá¹ƒ pÄ• pakaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ so samaá¹‡o vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o vÄ• , yo idha Ä• gaccheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante ajjÄ• pi te Ä• vuso sÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi, yÄ• te diá¹-á¹-hi pure ahu.

passasi vÄ«tivattantaá¹ƒ, brahmaloke pabhassaranti.

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• mahÄ• moggallÄ• nattherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ ||

ajjÄ• pi \Be I 78/ te Ä• vuso sÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi, yÄ• te diá¹-á¹-hi pure ahu.

passasi vÄ«tivattanta, brahmaloke pabhassaraá¹ƒ-hu --- na me mÄ• risa sÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi, yÄ• me diá¹-á¹-hi pure ahu.

passÄ• mi vÄ«tivattantaá¹ƒ, brahmaloke pabhassaraá¹ƒ.

svÄ• haá¹ƒ ajja kathaá¹ƒ vajjaá¹ƒ, ahaá¹ƒ niccomhi sassato hu --- tevijjÄ• \Be I 79/ iddhipattÄ• ca, cetopariyÄ• ya kovidÄ• .

khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• arahanto, bahÅ« buddhassa sÄ• vakÄ• -hu --- aruá¹‡avatÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 80/ aruá¹‡avatÄ«suttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÅ«tapubba aruá¹‡avÄ• nÄ• ma. raÃ±Ã±o kho pana bhikkhave aruá¹‡avato aruá¹‡avatÄ« nÄ• ma rÄ• ja evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• aruá¹‡avatÄ« suttaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• rambhatha \Be I 83/ nikkamatha, yuÃ±jatha buddhasÄ• sane.

dhunÄ• tha maccuno senaá¹ƒ, naá¸·Ä• gÄ• raá¹ƒva kuÃ±jaro.

yo imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye, appamatto vihassati.

pahÄ• ya jÄ• ti saá¹ƒsÄ• raá¹ƒ, dukkhassantaá¹ƒ karissati-hu ---

brÄ• hmaá¹‡asaá¹ƒyutta

dhanaÃ±jÄ• nÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ brÄ• hmaá¹‡asaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 84/ Ä• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ c bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante bhÄ• radvÄ• jagottaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• radvÄ• jagotto bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• gÄ• thÄ• ya

``kiá¹ƒ su chetvÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ seti, kiá¹ƒ su chetvÄ• na socati.

kissassu ekadhammassa,

vadhaá¹ƒ rocesi gotamÄ• â€™â€™ ti ---

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``kodhaá¹ƒ chetvÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ seti.

kodhaá¹ƒ chetvÄ• na socati.

kodhassa visamÅ«lassa, madhuraggassa brÄ• hmaá¹‡a.

vadhaá¹ƒ ariyÄ• pasaá¹ƒsanti, taÃ±hi chetvÄ• na socatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kiá¹ƒ \Be I 86/ su chetvÄ• sukhaá¹ƒseti, kiá¹ƒ su chetvÄ• na socati.

kissassu ekadhammassa, vadhaá¹ƒ rocesi gotama --- __pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be I 87/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bhÄ• radvÄ• ja dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si, kÄ«vattakaÃ±ca atthaá¹ƒ s __vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bhÄ• radvÄ• jagotto bho gotama, abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama, seyyathÄ• pi bho gotama nikkujjitaá¹ƒ vÄ• ukkujje vÄ• vivareyya, mÅ«á¸·hassa vÄ• maggaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkheyya, andhakÄ• re vÄ• telapajjotaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• ni dakkhantÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye pasann pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bhÄ• radvÄ• jagotto brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavato san yÄ• citvÄ• acirÅ«pasampanno yÄ• va arahattaá¹ƒ sampÄ• desi.

akkosasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ akkosakabhÄ• radvÄ• jasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 88/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante akkosakabhÄ• radvÄ• jaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rab akkosakabhÄ• radvÄ• jo bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• asabbh bhagavantaá¹ƒ akkosati paribhÄ• sati. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±a nukho te Ä• gacchanti mittÄ• maccÄ• \Be I 89/ Ã±Ä• tisÄ• lohitÄ• atitiyoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

akkodhassa \Be I 91/ kuto kodho, dantassa samajÄ«vino.

sammadaÃ±Ã±Ä• vimuttassa,

upasantassa tÄ• dino ||

tasseva \Be I 92/ tena pÄ• piyo, yo kuddhaá¹ƒ paá¹-ikujjhati.

kuddhaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ikujjhanto,

saá¹…gÄ• maá¹ƒ jeti dujjayaá¹ƒ ||

ubhinnamatthaá¹ƒ carati,

attano ca parassa ca.

paraá¹ƒ saá¹…kupitaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• ,

yo sato upasammati ||

ubhinnaá¹ƒ tikicchantÄ• naá¹ƒ,

attano ca parassa ca.

janÄ• maÃ±Ã±anti bÄ• loti,

ye dhammassa akovidÄ• ||

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be I 93/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• akkosakabhÄ• dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si. kÄ«vattakaÃ±ca atthaá¹ƒ s __vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• akkosakabhÄ• radvÄ ``abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama, abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotamÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• imasm pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si. yÄ• va arahattÄ• ca pana mahantaá¹ƒ atthaá¹ƒ sampÄ• desi.

bahudhÄ«tarasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 95/ bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhe bahudhÄ«tarasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante aÃ±Ã±atarasmiá¹ƒ vanasaá¹‡á¸• e aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ bhÄ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. aÃ±Ã±ataro bhante bhÄ• radvÄ• jagotto brÄ• hm pariyesanto bhagavato santike imÄ• gÄ• thÄ• yo abhÄ• si.

``na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, balÄ«baddÄ• catuddasa.

ajjasaá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ na dissanti, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ«.

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, tilÄ• khettasmi pÄ• pakÄ• .

ekapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dupaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ca, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(peyyÄ• la)

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, paccÅ«samhi iá¹‡Ä• yikÄ• .

detha dethÄ• ti codenti, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, balÄ«baddÄ• catuddasa.

ajjasaá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ na dissanti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ«.

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, tilÄ• khettasmi pÄ• pakÄ• .

ekapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dupaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ca, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(peyyÄ• la)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, paccÅ«samhi iá¹‡Ä• yikÄ• .

detha dethÄ• ti codenti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ«ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

(1)

na \Be I 96/ hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, balÄ«baddÄ• catuddasa.

ajjasaá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ na dissanti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(2)

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, tilÄ• khettasmi pÄ• pakÄ• .

ekapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dupaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ca, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(3)

na \Be I 97/ hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, tucchakoá¹-á¹-hasmi mÅ«sikÄ• .

ussoá¸·hikÄ• ya naccanti, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(4)

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, santhÄ• ro sattamÄ• siko.

uppÄ• á¹-akehi saÃ±channo, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(5)

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, vidhavÄ• satta dhÄ«taro.

ekaputtÄ• duputtÄ• ca, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(6)

na \Be I 98/ hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, piá¹…galÄ• tilakÄ• hatÄ• .

sottaá¹ƒ pÄ• dena bodheti, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(7)

na hi nÅ«nimassa samaá¹‡assa, paccÅ«sami iá¹‡Ä• yikÄ• .

detha dethÄ• ti codenti, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o sukhÄ« ||

(1)

na \Be I 99/ hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, balÄ«baddÄ• catuddasa.

ajjasaá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ na dissanti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(2)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, tilÄ• khettasmi pÄ• pakÄ• .

ekapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dupaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ca, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(3)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, tucchakoá¹-á¹-hasmi mÅ«sikÄ• .

ussoá¸·hÄ«kÄ• ya naccanti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(4)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, santhÄ• ro sattamÄ• siko.

uppÄ• á¹-akehi saÃ±channo, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(5)

na \Be I 100/ hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, vidhavÄ• satta dhÄ«taro.

ekaputtÄ• duputtÄ• ca, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(6)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, piá¹…galÄ• tilakÄ• hatÄ• .

sottaá¹ƒ pÄ• dena bodheti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

(7)

na hi mayhaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a, paccÅ«samhi iá¹‡Ä• yikÄ• .

detha dethÄ• ti codenti, tenÄ• haá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• sukhÄ« ||

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be I 101/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• so bhÄ• radvÄ imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si. kÄ«va mahantaÄ atthaá¹ƒ sampÄ• desi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• so bhÄ• radvÄ• jago ``abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama, seyyathÄ• pi bhogotama, nikkujjita paá¹-icchannaá¹ƒ vÄ• vivareyya, mÅ«á¸·hassa vÄ• maggaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkheyya, andhakÄ• re cakkhumanto rÅ«pÄ• ni dukkhantÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• imasmi dhammavinaye pasa bhagavato ca santike ``labheyyÄ• haá¹ƒ bhoto gotamassa santike pabbajaá¹ƒ, labheyyaá¹ƒ evamÄ• dinÄ• pabbajjaá¹ƒ upasampadaá¹ƒ yÄ• citvÄ• acirÅ«pasampanno yÄ• va arahattÄ sampÄ• desi.

kasibhÄ• radvÄ• jasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 104/ ekÄ• dasamaá¹ƒ mahÄ• kassapÄ• dÄ«hi porÄ• á¹ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ kasibhÄ• radvÄ• jasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ magadhesu bhante dakkhiá¹‡Ä• girismiá¹ƒ ekanÄ• á¸·Ä• yaá¹ƒ brÄ• hm kasibhÄ• radvÄ• jaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. kasibhÄ• radvÄ• jo bhante gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si.

``kassako \Be I 105/ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• si, na ca passÄ• mi te kasiá¹ƒ. kassako pucchito brÅ«hi, taá¹ƒ kasiâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ --- ``saddhÄ• bÄ«jaá¹ƒ tapo vuá¹-á¹-hi, paÃ±Ã±Ä• me yuganaá¹…galaá¹ƒ.

hirÄ« Ä«sÄ• mano yottaá¹ƒ, sati me phÄ• lapÄ• canaá¹ƒ ||

kÄ• yagutto vacÄ«gutto, Ä• hÄ• re udare yato.

saccaá¹ƒ karomi niddÄ• naá¹ƒ, soraccaá¹ƒ me pamocanaá¹ƒ ||

vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ me dhuradhorayhaá¹ƒ, yogakkhemÄ• dhivÄ• hanaá¹ƒ.

gacchati anivattantaá¹ƒ, yattha gantvÄ• na socati ||

evamesÄ• kasÄ« kaá¹-á¹-hÄ• , sÄ• hoti amatapphalÄ• .

etaá¹ƒ kasiá¹ƒ kasitvÄ• na, sabbadukkhÄ• pamuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kassako \Be I 106/ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• si, na ca passÄ• mi te kasiá¹ƒ.

kassako pucchito brÅ«hi, kathaá¹ƒ jÄ• nemu taá¹ƒ kasiá¹ƒ ||

saddhÄ• \Be I 107/ bÄ«jaá¹ƒ tapo vuá¹-á¹-hi, paÃ±Ã±Ä• me yuganaá¹…galaá¹ƒ.

hirÄ« Ä«sÄ• mano yottaá¹ƒ, sati me phÄ• lapÄ• canaá¹ƒ ||

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be I 109/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• so kasibhÄ• r dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• kasibhÄ• radvÄ• jo b bho gotama, abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotamÄ• â€™â€™ tievamÄ• dinÄ• imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavin seyyathÄ• pi bho gotama ukkujjitaá¹ƒ vÄ• nikkujjeyya.

udayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ udayasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 110/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante udayaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita
brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``pakaá¹-á¹-hakoyaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o gotamo punappu
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ --- punappunaÃ±ceva vapanti bÄ«jaá¹ƒ, punappunaá¹ƒ vassati devarÄ• jÄ• .

punappunaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ kasanti kassakÄ• , punappunaá¹ƒ dhaÃ±Ã±amupeti raá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

punappunaá¹ƒ \Be I 111/ ceva vapanti bÄ«jaá¹ƒ, punappunaá¹ƒ vassati deva rÄ• jÄ• .

punappunaá¹ƒ khettaá¹ƒ kasanti kassakÄ• , punappunaá¹ƒ dhaÃ±Ã±amupeti raá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ punappunaá¹ƒ \Be I 112/ yÄ• cakÄ• yÄ• cayanti, punappunaá¹ƒ dÄ• napatÄ« dadanti.

punappunaá¹ƒ dÄ• napatÄ« daditvÄ• , punappunaá¹ƒ saggamupeti á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ || punappunaá¹ƒ khÄ«ranikÄ• duhanti, punappunaá¹ƒ vaccho upeti mÄ• taraá¹ƒ.

punappunaá¹ƒ kilamati phandati ca, punappunaá¹ƒ gabbhamupeti mando || punappunaá¹ƒ jÄ• yati mÄ«yati ca, punappunaá¹ƒ sivathikaá¹ƒ haranti.

maggaÃ±ca laddhÄ• apunabbhavÄ• ya, na punappunaá¹ƒ jÄ• yati bhÅ«ripaÃ±Ã±o-hu --- mÄ• tuposakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mÄ• tuposakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 113/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante mÄ• tuposakaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha b bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ahaÃ±hi bho gotama dhammena bhikkha bhikkhaá¹ƒ pariyesitvÄ• mÄ• tÄ• pitaro posemi, kaccÄ• haá¹ƒ bho gotama evaá¹ƒkÄ• rÄ« k tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``taggha tvaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a evaá¹ƒkÄ• rÄ« kiccakÄ• rÄ« h dhammena bhikkhaá¹ƒ pariyesati, dhammena bhikkhaá¹ƒ pariyesitvÄ• mÄ• tÄ• pitaro pose pasavatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitÄ• .

yo \Be I 114/ mÄ• taraá¹ƒ vÄ• pitaraá¹ƒ vÄ• , macco dhammena posati.

tÄ• ya naá¹ƒ pÄ• ricariyÄ• ya, mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«su paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• .

idheva naá¹ƒ pasaá¹ƒsanti, pecca sagge pamodati --- khomadussasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 115/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena brÄ• h khomadussasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante khomadusse nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame khomadus Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita, khomadussakÄ• bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ e samaá¹‡akÄ• , ke ca sabhÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ jÄ• nissantÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``nesÄ• sabhÄ• yattha na santi santo,

santo na te ye na vadanti dhammaá¹ƒ.

rÄ• gaÃ±ca dosaÃ±ca pahÄ• ya mohaá¹ƒ,

dhammaá¹ƒ vadantÄ• ca bhavanti santoâ€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

nesÄ• \Be I 116/ sabhÄ• yattha nasanti santo,

santo na te ye na vadanti dhammaá¹ƒ.

rÄ• gaÃ±ca dosaÃ±ca pahÄ• ya mohaá¹ƒ,

dhammaá¹ƒ vadantÄ• ca bhavanti santo --- vaá¹…gÄ«sasaá¹ƒyutta

Ä• nandasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vaá¹…gÄ«sasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 117/ panÄ• vuso catutthaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒá¹…gÄ«ta katthakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ vaá¹…gÄ«sattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmatÄ• bhante vaá
gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si ---

``kÄ• marÄ• gena á¸• ayhÄ• mi, cittaá¹ƒ me pariá¸• ayhati.

sÄ• dhu nibbÄ• panaá¹ƒ brÅ«hi, anukampÄ• ya gotamÄ• â€™â€™ ti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya vipariyesÄ• , cittaá¹ƒ te pariá¸• ayhati.

nimittaá¹ƒ parivajjehi, subhaá¹ƒ rÄ• gÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitaá¹ƒ.

saá¹…khÄ• re parato passa, dukkhato mÄ• ca attato.

nibbÄ• pehi mahÄ• rÄ• gaá¹ƒ, mÄ• á¸• ayhittho punappunaá¹ƒ.

asubhÄ• ya cittaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vehi, ekaggaá¹ƒ susamÄ• hitaá¹ƒ.

sati kÄ• yagatÄ• tyatthu, nibbidÄ• bahulo bhava.

animittaÃ±ca bhÄ• vehi, mÄ• nÄ• nusayamujjaha.

tato mÄ• nÄ• bhisamayÄ• , upasanto carissasÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• kÄ• marÄ• gena \Be I 118/ á¸• ayhÄ• mi, cittaá¹ƒ me pariá¸• ayhati.

sÄ• dhu nibbÄ• panaá¹ƒ brÅ«hi, anukampÄ• ya gotama --- saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya \Be I 119/ vipariyesÄ• , cittaá¹ƒ te pariá¸• ayhati.

nimittaá¹ƒ parivajjehi, subhaá¹ƒ rÄ• gÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitaá¹ƒ ||

saá¹…khÄ• re paratopassa, dukkhato mÄ• ca attato.

nibbÄ• pehi mahÄ• rÄ• gaá¹ƒ, mÄ• á¸• ayhittho punappunaá¹ƒ ||

asubhÄ• ya cittaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vehi, ekaggaá¹ƒ susamÄ• hitaá¹ƒ.

sati kÄ• yagatÄ• tyatthu, nibbidÄ• bahulo bhava ||

animittaÃ±ca \Be I 120/ bhÄ• vehi, mÄ• nÄ• nusayamujjaha.

tato mÄ• nÄ• bhisamayÄ• , upasanto carissasi ||

vaá¹…gÄ«sasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattha Ä• vuso dvÄ• dasamaá¹ƒ vaá¹…gÄ«sasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kena kathaÃ±

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• vaá¹…gÄ«sattherena acira araha vimuttisukhapaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedinÄ• ---

``kÄ• veyyamattÄ• vicarimha pubbe, gÄ• mÄ• gÄ• maá¹ƒ purÄ• puraá¹ƒ, athaddasÄ• ma sambuddhaá¹ƒ, saddhÄ• no upapajjatha.

so me dhamma madesesi, khandhÄ• yatana dhÄ• tuyo.

tassÄ• haá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• na, pabbajiá¹ƒ anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ.

bahunnaá¹ƒ vata atthÄ• ya, bodhiá¹ƒ ajjhagamÄ• muni.

bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«nÄ«naÃ±ca, ye niyÄ• magataddasÄ• .

svÄ• gataá¹ƒ \Be I 121/ vata me Ä• si, mama buddhassa santike.

tisso vijjÄ• anuppattÄ• , kataá¹ƒ buddhassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ.

pubbe nivÄ• saá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• mi, dibbacakkhuá¹ƒ visodhitaá¹ƒ.

tevijjo iddhipattomhi, cetopariyÄ• ya kovido ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante udÄ• navasena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kÄ• veyya \Be I 124/ mattÄ• vicarimha pubbe. gÄ• mÄ• gÄ• maá¹ƒpurÄ• puraá¹ƒ,

athaddasÄ• ma sambuddhaá¹ƒ, saddhÄ• no upapajjatha ||

so \Be I 125/ me dhammamadesesi, khandhÄ• yatana dhÄ• tuyo.

tassÄ• haá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• na, pabbajiá¹ƒ anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ ||

bahunnaá¹ƒ vata atthÄ• ya, bodhiá¹ƒ ajjhagamÄ• muni.

bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ bhikkhunÄ« naÃ±ca, ye niyÄ• magataddasÄ• ||

svÄ• gataá¹ƒ vata me Ä• si, mama buddhassa santike.

tasso vijjÄ• anuppattÄ• , kataá¹ƒ buddhassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ ||

pubbenivÄ• saá¹ƒ \Be I 126/ jÄ• nÄ• mi. dibbacakkhu visodhitaá¹ƒ.

tevijjo iddhipattomhi, cetopariyÄ• yakovido ||

vanasaá¹ƒyutta

Ä• nandasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vanasaá¹ƒyutte panÄ• vuso paÃ±camaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ Ä• nandasuttaá Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante aÃ±Ã±atarasmiá¹ƒ vanasaá¹‡á¸• e aciraparinibbute bh Ä• nandaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha tasmiá¹ƒ vanasaá¹‡á¸• e adhivatthÄ• ya devatÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä aciraparinibbute bhagavati ativelaá¹ƒ gihisaÃ±Ã±attibahulo viharati, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthus

``rukkhamÅ«lagahanaá¹ƒ pasakkiya, nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ hadayasmiá¹ƒ opiya.

jhÄ• ya gotama mÄ• pamÄ• do,

kiá¹ƒ te biá¸·ibiá¸·ikÄ• karissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ \Be I 127/ kho bhante vanasaá¹‡á¸• e adhivatthÄ• ya devatÄ• ya Ä• yasmato Ä• na atthakÄ• mÄ• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

rukkhamÅ«la \Be I 128/ gahanaá¹ƒ pasakkiya, nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ hadayasmiá¹ƒ opiya.

jhÄ• ya gotama mÄ• pamÄ• do, kiá¹ƒ te biá¸·ibiá¸·ikÄ• karissati-hu --- yakkhasaá¹ƒyutta

indakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ yakkhasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 129/ panÄ• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ inc kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante indakÅ«á¹-e pabbate indakassa yakkhassa bhavane Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. indako bhante yakkho attavÄ• do bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitv ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ na jÄ«vanti vadanti buddhÄ• , kathaá¹ƒ nvayaá¹ƒ vindatimaá¹ƒ sarÄ«raá¹ƒ.

kutassa aá¹-á¹-hÄ«yakapiá¹‡á¸• amebhi,

kathaá¹ƒ nvayaá¹ƒ sajjati gabbharasmiâ€™â€™ nti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ kalalaá¹ƒ hoti, kalalÄ• hoti abbudaá¹ƒ, abbudÄ• jÄ• yate pesi, pesi nibbattatÄ« ghano.

ghanÄ• pasÄ• khÄ• jÄ• yanti, kesÄ• lomÄ• nakhÄ• pica.

yaÃ±cassa bhuÃ±jatÄ« mÄ• tÄ• , annaá¹ƒ pÄ• naÃ±ca bhojanaá¹ƒ.

tena so tattha yÄ• peti, mÄ• tukucchigatonaroâ€™â€™ ti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• á¸·avakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 132/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena yakkha Ä• á¸·avakasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ Ä• á¸·aviyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• á¸·avakassa yakkhassa bhavane Ä• á¸·avaka bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• á¸·avako bhante yakkho bhagavantaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si --- kiá¹ƒ sÅ«dhavittaá¹ƒ purisassa seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, kiá¹ƒ su suciá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sukhamÄ• vahÄ• ti.

kiá¹ƒ su have sÄ• dutaraá¹ƒ rasÄ• naá¹ƒ,

kathaá¹ƒ jÄ«viá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• mÄ• hu seá¹-á¹-hanti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

saddhÄ«ca vittaá¹ƒ purisassa seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, dhammo suciá¹‡á¹‡o sukhamÄ• vahÄ• ti.

saccaá¹ƒ have sÄ• dutaraá¹ƒ rasÄ• naá¹ƒ,

paÃ±Ã±Ä• jÄ«viá¹ƒ jÄ«vitamÄ• hu seá¹-á¹-hanti ||

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

na \Be I 134/ khvÄ• haá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ Ä• vuso nikkhamissÄ• mi, yaá¹ƒ te karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ

paÃ±haá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ samaá¹‡a pucchissÄ• mi, sace me na byÄ• karissasi, cittaá¹ƒ vÄ• te khip te phÄ• lessÄ• mi, pÄ• desu vÄ• gahetvÄ• pÄ• ragaá¹…gÄ• ya khipissÄ• mi --- kiá¹ƒ \Be I 135/ sÅ«kha vittaá¹ƒ purisassa seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, kiá¹ƒ su suciá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ sukhamÄ•

kiá¹ƒ su have sÄ• dubharaá¹ƒ rasÄ• naá¹ƒ, kathaá¹ƒ jÄ«viá¹ƒ jÄ«vitamÄ• hu seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ saddhÄ«dha vittaá¹ƒ purisassa seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, dhammo suciá¹‡á¹‡o sukhamÄ• vahÄ• ti.

saccaá¹ƒ have sÄ• dutaraá¹ƒ rasÄ• naá¹ƒ, paÃ±Ã±Ä• jÄ«viá¹ƒ jÄ«vitamÄ• hu seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒsu \Be I 136/ tarati oghaá¹ƒ, kathaá¹ƒsu tarati aá¹‡á¹‡avaá¹ƒ.

kathaá¹ƒsu dukkha macceti, kathaá¹ƒsu parisujjhati ||

saddhÄ• ya tarati oghaá¹ƒ, appamÄ• dena aá¹‡á¹‡avaá¹ƒ.

vÄ«riyena dukkha macceti, paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya parisujjhati --- kathaá¹ƒsu \Be I 137/ labhate paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, kathaá¹ƒsu vindate dhanaá¹ƒ.

kathaá¹ƒsu kittiá¹ƒ pappoti, kathaá¹ƒ mittÄ• ni ganthati.

asmÄ• lokÄ• paraá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ, kathaá¹ƒ pecca na socati --- saddahÄ• no arahataá¹ƒ, dhammaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• napattiyÄ• .

sussÅ«saá¹ƒ labhate paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, appamatto vicakkhaá¹‡o.

patirÅ«pakÄ• rÄ« dhuravÄ• , uá¹-á¹-hÄ• tÄ• vindate dhanaá¹ƒ.

saccena \Be I 138/ kittiá¹ƒ pappoti, dadaá¹ƒ mittÄ• ni ganthati.

asmÄ• lokÄ• paraá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ pecca na socati.

yassete caturo dhammÄ• , saddhassa gharamesino.

saccaá¹ƒ dhammo dhiti cÄ• go, sa ve peccana socati --- sakkasaá¹ƒyutta

vatapadasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sakkasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 139/ panÄ• vuso vatapadasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kat
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha sakkassa bhikk pubbe manussabhÅ«tassa satta vatapadÄ• ni samattÄ• ni samÄ• dinnÄ• ni ahesuá¹ƒ, yesa sakkattaá¹ƒ ajjhagÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sakkassa \Be I 141/ bhikkhave devÄ• namindassa pubbe manussabhÅ«tassa imÄ• ni satta samÄ• dinnÄ• ni ahesuá¹ƒ.

mÄ• tÄ• pettibharaá¹ƒ jantuá¹ƒ, kule jeá¹-á¹-hÄ• pacÄ• yinaá¹ƒ.

saá¹‡haá¹ƒ sakhilasambhÄ• saá¹ƒ, pesuá¹‡eyyappahÄ• yinaá¹ƒ.

maccheravinaye yuttaá¹ƒ, saccaá¹ƒ kodhÄ• bhibhuá¹ƒ naraá¹ƒ.

taá¹ƒ ve devÄ• tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsÄ• , Ä• hu ``sappurisoâ€™â€™ iti ||

daliddasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ daliddasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÅ«tapubbaá¹ƒ bhikkhave aÃ±Ã±ataro puriso ima manussadaliddo \Be I 142/ ahosi manussakapaá¹‡o manussavarÄ• ko, so tathÄ• gatappave samÄ• diyi, sÄ«laá¹ƒ, sutaá¹ƒ, cÄ• gaá¹ƒ, paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ samÄ• diyÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• di

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yassa \Be I 144/ saddhÄ• tathÄ• gate, acalÄ• suppatiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

sÄ«laÃ±ca yassa kalyÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, ariyakantaá¹ƒ pasaá¹ƒsitaá¹ƒ ||

yajamÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ yajamÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kisn
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be I 145/ bhante sakkaá¹ƒ devÄ• namindaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bh devÄ• namindo bhagavantaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si ---

``yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ.

karotaá¹ƒ opadhikaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, kattha dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ---

``cattÄ• ro ca paá¹-ipannÄ• , cattÄ• roca phale á¹-hitÄ• .

esa saá¹…gho ujubhÅ«to, paÃ±Ã±Ä• sÄ«lasamÄ• hito.

yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ.

karotaá¹ƒ opadhikaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, saá¹…ghe dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaá¹ƒâ€™â€™ nti ||

evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be I 146/ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ, karotaá¹ƒ opadhitaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, kattha dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaá¹ƒ --- cattÄ• ro ca paá¹-ipannÄ• , cattÄ• ro ca phale á¹-hitÄ• .

esa saá¹…gho ujubhÅ«to, paÃ±Ã±Ä• sÄ«lasamÄ• hito.

yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ.

karotaá¹ƒ opadhikaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, saá¹…ghe dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaá¹ƒ --- gahaá¹-á¹-havandanÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ gahaá¹-á¹-havandanÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Be I 147/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÅ«tapubba devÄ• namindo mÄ• taliá¹ƒ saá¹…gÄ• hakaá¹ƒ Ä• mantesÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bh taá¹ƒ \Be I 148/ namassanti tevijjÄ• , sabbe bhummÄ• ca khattiyÄ• .

cattÄ• ro ca mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• , tidasÄ• ca yasassino.

athako nÄ• ma so yakkho, yaá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ sakka namassasi --- ahaÃ±ca \Be I 149/ sÄ«lasampanne, cirarattasamÄ• hite.

sammÄ• pabbajite vande, brahmacariyaparÄ• yane ||

ye gahaá¹-á¹-hÄ• puÃ±Ã±akarÄ• , sÄ«lavanto upÄ• sakÄ• .

dhammena dÄ• raá¹ƒ posenti, te namassÄ• mi mÄ• tali ||

nidÄ• navaggapÄ• á¸·i nidÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutta

paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 151/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena nidÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ kattha taá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante paÃ±casate janapadavÄ• sino bhikkhÅ« Ä• rab paÃ±casatÄ• bhante janapadavÄ• sino bhikkhÅ« sabbe ugghÄ• á¹-itaÃ±Ã±uno dhutaá¹…g
yuttayogÄ• vipassakÄ• saá¹‡haá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ paccayÄ• kÄ• radhammad bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ parivÄ• retvÄ• nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu. tasmiá¹ƒ vatth ``paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• daá¹ƒ vo bhikkhave desessÄ• mi, taá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tha sÄ• dhukaá¹ƒ ma bhÄ• sissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

katamo \Be I 152/ ca bhikkhave paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• do. avijjÄ• paccayÄ• bhikkhave saá¹…
saá¹…khÄ• rapaccayÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ (peyyÄ• la) jÄ• tipaccayÄ• jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupÄ• sÄ• sambhavanti, evametassa kevalassa dukkhandha vuccati bhikkhave paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• do.

avijjÄ• ya tveva asesavirÄ• ganirodho saá¹…khÄ• ranirodho (peyyÄ• la) jÄ• tinirodhÄ• jarÄ sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupÄ• yÄ• sÄ• nirujjhanti, evametassa kevalassa dukkhakkh vibhaá¹…gasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 154/ dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ vibhaá¹…gasuttaá¹ƒ bhag
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante paÃ±casate janapadavÄ• sino vipaÃ±citaÃ±Ã±u bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. paÃ±casatÄ• bhante janapadavÄ• sikÄ• bhikkhÅ« vipaÃ±citaÃ±Ã±uno dhuta yuttayogÄ• vissakÄ• saá¹‡haá¹ƒ sukhumaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±atapaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ paccayÄ• kÄ patthayamÄ• nÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ parivÄ• retvÄ• nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu. tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``pa bhikkhave dedessÄ• mi vibhajissÄ• mi, taá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tha sÄ• dhukaá¹ƒ manasikarotha, bh
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paÃ±caverabhayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ paÃ±caverabhayasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 156/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikaá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
ariyasÄ• vakassa paÃ±ca bhayÄ• ni verÄ• ni vÅ«pasantÄ• ni honti, catÅ«hi ca sotÄ• pattiya ariyo cassa Ã±Ä• yo paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sudiá¹-á¹-ho hoti suppaá¹-ividdho, so Ä• kaá¹…khamÄ• n byÄ• kareyya khÄ«á¹‡anirayomi khÄ«á¹‡atiracchÄ• nayoni khÄ«á¹‡apettivisayo khÄ«á¹‡Ä• sotÄ• pannohamasmi avinipÄ• tadhammo niyato sambodhiparÄ• yanoâ€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ kh __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vusotattha \Be I 157/ bhagavatÄ• ariyasÄ• vakassa paÃ±can verÄ• naá¹ƒ vÅ«pasantatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``katamÄ• ni \Be I 158/ paÃ±ca bhayÄ• ni verÄ• ni vÅ«pasantÄ• ni hon pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ« pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tapaccayÄ• diá¹-á¹-hadhammikampi bhayaá¹ƒ veraá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ veraá¹ƒ pasavati, cetasikampi dukkhaá¹ƒ domanassaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedayati. pÄ• á¹-iviratassa evaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ veraá¹ƒ vÅ«pasantaá¹ƒ hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ ariyasÄ• vakassa paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ bhayÄ• naá¹ƒ verÄ• naá¹ƒ vÅ«pasantatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 159/ tattha bhagavatÄ• ariyasÄ• vakassa catÅ«hi samannÄ• gatatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ katamehi catÅ«hi sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gehi samannÄ• gato hoti. idha gaha aveccappasÄ• dena samannÄ• gato hoti ``itipiso bhagavÄ• arahaá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambuddho lokavidÅ« anuttaropurisadammasÄ• rathi satthÄ• devamanussÄ• naá¹ƒ buddho bhagavÄ• â tattha bhagavatÄ• ariyasÄ• vakassa catÅ«hi sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gehi samannÄ• gatatÄ• pak __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 161/ tattha bhagavatÄ• ariyasÄ• vakena ariyassa sudiá¹-á¹-hatÄ• suppaá¹-ividdhatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ katamo cassa ariyo Ã±Ä• yo paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sudiá¹-á¹-ho hoti suppaá¹-ivi ariyasÄ• vako paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• daÃ±Ã±eva sÄ• dhukaá¹ƒ yoniso manasi karoti ``iti imas imasmiá¹ƒ asati idaá¹ƒ na hoti, imassuppÄ• dÄ• idaá¹ƒ uppajjati, imassa nirodhÄ• idaá¹ƒ n avijjÄ• paccayÄ• (peyyÄ• la) evametassa kevalassa dukkhakkhandhassa nirodho hotÄ«â€™ bhagavatÄ• tattha ariyasÄ• vakena ariyassa Ã±Ä• yassa paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sudiá¹-á¹-hatÄ• su

yato \Be I 162/ kho gahapati ariyasÄ• vakassa imÄ• ni paÃ±ca bhayÄ• ni verÄ• ni vÅ«pasa catÅ«hi sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gehi samannÄ• gato hoti. ayaÃ±cassa ariyo Ã±Ä• yo paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya suppaá¹-ividdho ---

dukkhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dukkhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 163/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dukkhassa bh atthaá¹…gamaÃ±ca desessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 164/ tattha bhagavatÄ• dukkhasamudayo pakÄ• s __vissajjanÄ• --- _ katamo ca bhikkhave dukkhassa samudayo. cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ« cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹…gati phasso, phassapaccayÄ• vedanÄ• , veda kho bhikkhave dukkhassa samudayo. sotaÃ±ca paá¹-icca sadde ca uppajjati sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• ghÄ• naÃ±ca paá¹-icca gandhe ca ... pe ... jivhaÃ±ca paá¹-icca rase ca ... pe ... kÄ• yaÃ±ca phoá¹-á¹-habbe ca ... pe ... manaÃ±ca paá¹-icca dhamme ca uppajjati manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá saá¹…gati phasso, phassapaccayÄ• vedanÄ• , vedanÄ• paccayÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• . ayaá¹ƒ kho evaá¹ƒkho bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• dukkhassa samudayo pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 165/ tattha bhagavatÄ• dukkhassa atthaá¹…gamo __vissajjanÄ• --- _ katamo ca bhikkhave dukkhassa atthaá¹…gamo. cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca

cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹…gati phasso, phassapaccayÄ• vedanÄ• , veda tassÄ• yeva taá¹‡hÄ• ya asesavirÄ• ganirodhÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nanirodho upÄ• dÄ• nanirodhÄ• jÄ• tinirodho, jÄ• tinirodhÄ• jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupÄ• yÄ• sÄ kevalassa dukkhakkhandhassa nirodho hotÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• d pakÄ• sito.

puttamaá¹ƒsÅ«pamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ puttamaá¹ƒsÅ«pamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 166/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule adhunÄ• pabbajite bhikkhÅ« Ä• rab bhagavato ca bhante bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa ca mahÄ• lÄ• bhasakkÄ• ro udapÄ• di, ekacce acirapabbajitÄ• kulaputtÄ• Ä• hÄ• raá¹ƒ apaccavekkhitvÄ• paribhuÃ±jiá¹ƒsu. tasmiá¹ƒ bha ``cattÄ• rome bhikkhave Ä• hÄ• rÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ á¹-hitiyÄ• sambhave katame cattÄ• ro kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• ro Ä• hÄ• ro oá¸·Ä• riko vÄ• sukhumo vÄ• phasso dutiyo r viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ catutthaâ€™â€™ nti evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 168/ tattha kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• rassa Ä• hÄ• rassa daá¹
pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave dve jÄ• yampatikÄ• parittaá¹ƒ sambalaá¹ƒ Ä• d paá¹-ipajjeyyuá¹ƒ. tesamassa ekaputtako piyo manÄ• poti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bha kabaá¸·Ä«kÄ• rassa Ä• hÄ• rassa daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• kÄ• ro pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 172/ tattha bhagavatÄ• phassÄ• hÄ• rassa daá¹-á __vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave gÄ• vÄ« niccammÄ• kuá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ ce nissÄ• ya kuá¹-á¹-anissitÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• , te naá¹ƒ khÄ• deyyuá¹ƒ. rukkhaá¹ƒ ce nissÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-heyya tiá¹-á¹-heyya. Ä• kÄ• saá¹ƒ ce nissÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-heyya, ye Ä• kÄ• sanissitÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• , te evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• phassassa Ä• hÄ• rassa daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• kÄ• ro evameva \Be I 173/ khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhikkhave phassÄ• hÄ• ro daá¹-á¹-habboti vadÄ• mi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 174/ tattha bhagavatÄ• manosaÃ±cetanÄ• hÄ• ra
pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave aá¹…gÄ• rakÄ• su sÄ• dhikaporisÄ• puá¹‡á¹‡ vÄ«taccikÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ«tadhÅ«mÄ• naá¹ƒ. atha puriso Ä• gaccheyya jÄ«vitukÄ• mo amaritu dukkhappaá¹-ikÅ«loti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• manosaÃ±cetanÄ• hÄ• ras vitthÄ• rena pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 176/ tattha bhagavatÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• hÄ• rassa
pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave coraá¹ƒ Ä• gucÄ• riá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• raÃ±Ã±o das devacoro Ä• gucÄ• rÄ«, imassa yaá¹ƒ icchasi, taá¹ƒ daá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ paá¹‡ehÄ«â€™â€™ ti e bhagavatÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• hÄ• rassa daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• kÄ• ro pakÄ• sito.

susimaparibbÄ• jakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 179/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena susim kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ susimaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.
yÄ• vatako bhikkhÅ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ ahosi kathÄ• sallÄ• po, taá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ bhagavato Ä• roce ``pubbe kho susima dhammaá¹-á¹-hitiÃ±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, pacchÄ• nibbÄ• ne Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™
bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 184/ tattha bhagavÄ• Ä• yasmato susimattherass anuyogavasena paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• uttari dhammadesanaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ•

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ jÄ• tipaccayÄ• jarÄ• maraá¹‡anti susima passasÄ«ti. evaá¹ƒ bhante. b susima passasÄ«ti. evaá¹ƒ bhanteti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• tattha Ä• yasmato su sampatiarahattapattassa uttaripi anuyogavasena paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• vitthÄ• tassa \Be I 186/ me bhante bhagavÄ• accayaá¹ƒ accayato paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tu Ä• yatiá¹ƒsa

abhisamayasaá¹ƒyutta

nakhasikhÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ abhisamayasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 187/ panÄ• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ ma
katamaá¹ƒ nu kho bahutaraá¹ƒ, yo vÄ• yaá¹ƒ mayÄ• paritto nakhasikhÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹ƒsuÄ• mahÄ• pathavÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

dhÄ• tusaá¹ƒyutta

caá¹…kamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dhÄ• tusaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 189/ panÄ• vuso caá¹…kamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ•
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dhÄ• tusova bhikk samenti, hÄ«nÄ• dhimuttikÄ• hÄ«nÄ• dhimuttikehi saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsandanti samenti, kalyÄ kalyÄ• á¹‡Ä• dhimuttikehi saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsandanti samentÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bh assaddhasaá¹ƒsandanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ assaddhasaá¹ƒsandanasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 192/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• katth
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dhÄ• tusova b saá¹ƒsandanti samenti, assaddhÄ• assaddhehi saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsandanti samenti, ahirikÄ• saá¹ƒsandanti samenti, anottappino. appassutÄ• . kusÄ«tÄ• . muá¹-á¹-hassatino. duppaÃ±Ã saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsandanti samentÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

anamataggasaá¹ƒyutta

pathavÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anamataggasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 194/ Ä• vuso dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ patha Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``anamataggoy
pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹ƒy saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ. seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave puriso imaá¹ƒ mahÄ• pathaviá¹ƒ kolaá¹-á¹-himattaá mattikÄ• guá¸·ikaá¹ƒ karitvÄ• nikkhipeyya `ayaá¹ƒ me piyÄ• , tassa me pitu ayaá¹ƒ pitÄ• â€ bhikkhave tassa purisassa pitupitaro assu. athÄ• yaá¹ƒ mahÄ• pathavÄ« parikkhayaá¹ƒ par taá¹ƒ kissahetu, anamataggoyaá¹ƒ bhikkhave saá¹ƒsÄ• ro, pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá¹ƒ sandhÄ• vataá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒâ€™â€™ evan evaá¹ƒ \Be I 195/ dÄ«gharattaá¹ƒ vo bhikkhave dukkhaá¹ƒ paccanubhÅ«taá¹ƒ tibbaá¹ƒ pac paccanubhÅ«taá¹ƒ kaá¹-asÄ« vaá¸• á¸• hitÄ• .

alameva \Be I 196/ sabbasaá¹…khÄ• resu nibbindituá¹ƒ, alaá¹ƒ virajjituá¹ƒ, alaá¹ƒ vimuccituá¹ƒ,

assusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso tatiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ assusuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha ka
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahuleyeva bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``taá¹ƒ kiá katamaá¹ƒ nu kho bahutaraá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ vÄ• vo iminÄ• dÄ«ghena addhunÄ• sandhÄ• vataá amanÄ• pasampayogÄ• manÄ• pavippayogÄ• kandantÄ• naá¹ƒ rodantÄ• naá¹ƒ assu pas catÅ«su mahÄ• samuddesu udakaâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sÄ• sapasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 198/ chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ sÄ• sapasuttaá¹ƒ b
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita
bhikkhu bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kÄ«vadÄ«gho nu kho bhante kappoâ€™â€™ ti. tasmiá ``dÄ«gho kho bhikkhu kappo, so na sukaro saá¹…khÄ• tuá¹ƒ ettakÄ• ni vassÄ• ni itivÄ• , (p vassasatasahassÄ• ni itivÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

gaá¹…gÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso ... pe ... \Be I 200/ sammÄ• sambuddhena anamataggasaá¹ƒy kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kÄ«vabahukÄ• \Be I 201/ nu kho bho gotama kappÄ• abbhatÄ«tÄ• atikkantÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasm ``bahukÄ• kho brÄ• hmaá¹‡a kappÄ• abbhatÄ«tÄ• atikkantÄ• , te na sukarÄ• saá¹…khÄ vÄ• `ettakÄ• ni kappasatÄ• niâ€™ iti vÄ• `ettakÄ• ni kappasahassÄ• niâ€™ itivÄ• `ettakÄ iti vÄ• â€™â€™ ti eva mÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

puggalasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ puggalasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 203/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbl __vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``anamataggoyaá¹ƒ

pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹ƒy saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ. ekapuggalassa bhikkhave kappaá¹ƒ sandhÄ• vato saá¹ƒsarato siyÄ• evaá aá¹-á¹-hipuÃ±jo aá¹-á¹-hirÄ• si, yathÄ• yaá¹ƒ vepullo pabbato. sace saá¹ƒhÄ• rako assa, sa vinassetyÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

duggatasutta, sukhitasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 204/ duggatasuttaÃ±ca sukhitasuttaÃ±ca bhagavatÄ• k

kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``anamataggoy
pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹ƒy saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ. yaá¹ƒ bhikkhave passeyyÄ• tha duggataá¹ƒ durÅ«petaá¹ƒ, niá¹-á¹-hamettha evarÅ«paá¹ƒ paccanubhÅ«taá¹ƒ iminÄ• dÄ«ghena addhunÄ• â€™ ti, yaá¹ƒ bhikkhave pass susajjitaá¹ƒ, niá¹-á¹-hamettha \Be I 205/ gantabbaá¹ƒ, ``amhehipi paccanubhÅ«taá¹ƒ iminÄ• dÄ«ghena

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

tiá¹ƒsamattasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tiá¹ƒsamattasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 206/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• r
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante tiá¹ƒsamatte pÄ• veyyake bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``ana saá¹ƒsÄ• ro, pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹ sandhÄ• vataá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ. taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, katamaá¹ƒ nu kho ba iminÄ• dÄ«ghena addhunÄ• sandhÄ• vataá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ sÄ«sacchinnÄ• naá¹ƒ lohita yaá¹ƒ vÄ• catÅ«su mahÄ• samuddesu udakaâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhavagatÄ• bhÄ

mÄ• tusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mÄ• tusuttÄ• dÄ«ni \Be I 209/ panÄ• vuso chasuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• katth
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``anamataggoy
pubbÄ• koá¹-i na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹ƒy saá¹ƒsarataá¹ƒ. na so bhikkhave satto sulabharÅ«po, yo na mÄ• tÄ• bhÅ«tapubbo iminÄ• d pitÄ• bhÅ«tapubbo. yo na bhÄ• tÄ• bhÅ«tapubbo. yo na bhaginibhÅ«tapubbo. yo na puttabh dhÄ«tÄ• bhÅ«tapubbo \Be I 210/ iminÄ• dÄ«ghena addhunÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• b kassapasaá¹ƒyutta

candÅ«pamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kassapasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 211/ panÄ• vuso candÅ«pamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavat
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``candÅ«pamÄ upasaá¹…kamatha apakasseva kÄ• yaá¹ƒ apakassa cittaá¹ƒ niccanavakÄ• kulesu appagal puriso jarudapÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• olokeyya pabbatavisamaá¹ƒ vÄ• nadÄ«viduggaá¹ƒ vÄ• apaka cittaá¹ƒ. evameva kho bhikkhave candÅ«pamÄ• kulÄ• ni upasaá¹…kamatha apakasseva k niccanavakÄ• kulesu appagabbhÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

taá¹ƒ \Be I 213/ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, kathaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• bhikkhu arahati kulÄ• ni up __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 214/ tattha bhagavatÄ• parisuddhÄ• parisuddha d bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• do dinno.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, kathaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa bhikkhuno ap dhammadesanÄ• hoti, kathaá¹ƒ rÅ«passa bhikkhuno parisuddhÄ• dhammadesanÄ• \Be I evamÄ• dinÄ• parisuddhÄ• parisuddhadhammadesanÄ• vitthÄ• rato dassetvÄ• ``kassape ovadissÄ• mi yo vÄ• panassa kassapasadiso, ovaditehi ca pana vo tathattÄ• ya paá¹-ipajjit kho bhante bhagavato bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• do dinno.

yo \Be I 216/ hi koci bhikkhave bhikkhu evaá¹ƒcitto paresaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ deseti ``aho vata suá¹‡eyyuá¹ƒ, sutvÄ• ca pana dhammaá¹ƒ pasÄ«deyyuá¹ƒ, pasannÄ• ca me pasannÄ• kÅ

svÄ• kkhÄ• to bhagavatÄ• dhammo sandiá¹-á¹-hiko akÄ• liko ehi passiko opaneyyiko pacc viÃ±Ã±Å«hi ---

kassapena \Be I 217/ vÄ• hi vo bhikkhave ovadissÄ• mi yo vÄ• panassa kassapasadiso, o tathattÄ• ya paá¹-ipajjitabbaá¹ƒ ---

kulÅ«pakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 218/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena kassap kulÅ«pakasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ ma kathaá¹ƒ rÅ«po bhikkhu arahati kulÅ«pako hotuá¹ƒ, kathaá¹ƒ rÅ«po bhikkhu na arahati kulÅ
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kassapena \Be I 222/ vÄ• hi vo bhikkhave ovadissÄ• mi yo vÄ• panassa kassapasadiso, o
tathattÄ• ya paá¹-ipajjitabbaá¹ƒ.

dutiya ovÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthevÄ• vuso \Be I 223/ bhagavatÄ• dutiya ovÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kena
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• mahÄ• kassapena saddhiá¹ƒ ``ovada
kassapa bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ dhammiá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ, ahaá¹ƒ vÄ• kassapa bhikkhÅ« ovadeyyaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ dhammiá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ kareyyaá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bha yassa \Be I 224/ kassaci bhante saddhÄ• natthi kusalesu dhammesu, hirÄ« natthi. ottappa natthi. paÃ±Ã±Ä• natthi kusalesu dhammesu.

tatiya ovÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthevÄ• vuso \Be I 227/ bhagavatÄ• tatiyaovÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kena s
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• yeva mahÄ• kassapena saddhiá¹ƒ ``ov
kassapa bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ dhammiá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ, ahaá¹ƒ vÄ• kassapa bhikkhÅ« ovadeyyaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ kareyyaá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bha dubbacÄ• \Be I 228/ kho bhante etarahi bhikkhÅ« dovacassakaraá¹‡ehi dhammehi saman appadakkhiá¹‡aggÄ• hino anusÄ• saniá¹ƒ --- saddhammappatirÅ«pakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthevÄ• vuso \Be I 231/ bhagavatÄ• pariyosÄ• naá¹ƒ saddhammappatir
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒyeva mahÄ• kassapaá¹ƒ Ä• rab bhante mahÄ• kassapo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadevoca ``ko nu kho bhante hetu ko paccayo, yen sikkhÄ• padÄ• ni ahesuá¹ƒ, bahutarÄ• ca bhikkhÅ« aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya saá¹‡á¹-hahiá¹ƒsu. ko par yenetarahi bahutarÄ• ni ceva sakkhÄ• padÄ• ni appatarÄ• ca bhikkhÅ« aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya saá¹‡á bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``evaÃ±cetaá¹ƒ kassapa hoti sattesu hÄ• yamÄ• nesu saddhamme an bahutarÄ• niceva sikkhÄ• padÄ• ni \Be I 232/ honti, appatarÄ• ca bhikkhÅ« aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sa
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasaá¹ƒyutta

mÄ«á¸·hakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso ... pe ... \Be I 235/ sammÄ• sambuddhena lÄ• bhasakkÄ• raá¹ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ mÄ«á¸·hakasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dÄ• ruá¹‡o bh lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko pharuso antarÄ• yiko anuttarassa yogakkhemassa adhigamÄ• ya. s mÄ«á¸·hakÄ• gÅ«thÄ• dÄ« gÅ«thapÅ«rÄ• puá¹‡á¹‡Ä• gÅ«thassa, purato cassa mahÄ• g mÄ«á¸·hakÄ• atimaÃ±Ã±eyya ``ahamhi gÅ«thÄ• dÄ« gÅ«thapÅ«rÄ• puá¹‡á¹‡Ä• gÅ«thas mahÄ• gÅ«thapuÃ±joâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

taá¹ƒ \Be I 237/ hi tassa bhikkhave moghapurisassa hoti dÄ«gharattaá¹ƒ ahitÄ• ya dukkhÄ• evaá¹ƒ dÄ• ruá¹‡o kho bhikkhave lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko.

tasmÄ• tiha \Be I 238/ bhikkhave evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ, ``uppannaá¹ƒ lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasi
ca no uppanno lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko cittaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• dÄ• ya á¹-hassabhÄ«â€™â€™ ti, ev sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ.

ekaputtakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattho Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakehi saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ e kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbhaá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dÄ• ruá¹‡o bh
lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko kaá¹-uko pharuso antarÄ• yiko anuttarassa yogakkhemassa adhigam upÄ• sikÄ• ekaputtakaá¹ƒ piyaá¹ƒ manÄ• paá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ sammÄ• Ä• yÄ• camÄ• nÄ• \Be I bhavÄ• hi, yÄ• diso citto ca gahapati hatthako ca Ä• á¸·avakoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bh esÄ• \Be I 240/ bhikkhave tulÄ• etaá¹ƒ pamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ mama sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• sakÄ gahapati hatthako ca Ä• á¸·avako.

sace kho tvaá¹ƒ tÄ• ta agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajasi, tÄ• diso tÄ• ta bhavÄ• hi, y sÄ• riputtamoggallÄ• nÄ• .

mÄ• ca kho tvaá¹ƒ tÄ• ta sekhaá¹ƒ appattamÄ• nasaá¹ƒ lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko anupÄ• p evaá¹ƒ \Be I 241/ dÄ• ruá¹‡o bhikkhave lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko kaá¹-uko pharuso antarÄ• y yogakkhemassa adhigamÄ• ya.

ekavÄ«tusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be I 242/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• yakehi saá¹
bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``dÄ• ruá¹
lÄ• bhasakkÄ• rasiloko kaá¹-uko pharuso antarÄ• yiko anuttarassa yogakkhemassa adhigan upÄ• sikÄ• ekaá¹ƒ dhÄ«taraá¹ƒ piyaá¹ƒ manÄ• paá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ sammÄ• Ä• yÄ• camÄ• nÄ• bhavÄ• hi, yÄ• disÄ• khujjuttarÄ• ca upÄ• sikÄ• veá¸·ukaá¹‡á¸• akiyÄ• ca nandamÄ• tÄ• etaá¹ƒ pamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ mama sÄ• vikÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• sikÄ• naá¹ƒ, yadidaá¹ƒ khujjuttarÄ• ca veá¸·ukaá¹‡á¸• akiyÄ• ca nandamÄ• tÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bh sace \Be I 243/ kho tvaá¹ƒ ayye agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajasi, bhÄ• disÄ• ayye ca bhikkhunÄ« uppalavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ca --- tasmÄ• tiha \Be I 244/ bhikkhave evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ.

rÄ• hulasaá¹ƒyutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ rÄ• hulasaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 245/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ rÄ• hulaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sit rÄ• hulo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ• dhu me bhante bhagavÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena dhammaá bhagavato dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• eko vÅ«pakaá¹-á¹-ho appamatto Ä• tÄ• pÄ« pahitatto vihare bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi rÄ• hula, cakkhuniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ, dukkhaá¹ƒ vÄ• taá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• ti. dukkhaá¹ƒ bhante. yaá¹ƒ panÄ vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammaá¹ƒ, kallaá¹ƒ nu taá¹ƒ samanupassituá¹ƒ `etaá¹ƒ mama, eso hamasm hetaá¹ƒ bhanteâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

lakkhaá¹‡asaá¹ƒyutta

aá¹-á¹-hisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ lakkhaá¹‡asaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 247/ panÄ• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hisuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante lakkhaá¹‡o bhagavatÄ• sammukhe Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mah 248/ ``idhÄ• yasmÄ• mahÄ• moggallÄ• no gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto aÃ±Ã±atara pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• si, ko nu kho Ä• vuso moggallÄ• na hetu, ko paccayo sitassa pÄ• tukammÄ• y bhante mahÄ• moggallÄ• no ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto adc aá¹-á¹-hikasaá¹…khalikaá¹ƒ vehÄ• saá¹ƒ gacchantiá¹ƒâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• rocesi.
``cakkhubhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharanti, Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave nÄ• ma sÄ• vako evarÅ«paá¹ƒ Ã±assati vÄ• dakkhati vÄ• sakkhiá¹ƒ vÄ• karissatÄ«â€™â
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

á¹• 21acchariyaá¹ƒ \Be I 250/ vata bho, abbhutaá¹ƒ vata bho.

evarÅ«popi nÄ• ma satto bhavissati ||

piá¹‡á¸• asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 251/ jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena lakkhaá¹ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• asuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante lakkhaá¹‡o bhaggavato sammukhe Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ ``idhÄ• yasmÄ• mahÄ• moggallÄ• no gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto aÃ±Ã±atarasmiá \Be I 252/, ko nukho Ä• vuso moggallÄ• nahetu, ko paccayo sitassa pÄ• tukammÄ• yÄ• â€™ mahÄ• moggallÄ• no ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto addasaá¹ƒ gacchantaá¹ƒ, tamenaá¹ƒ gijjhÄ• pi kÄ• kÄ• pi kulalÄ• pi anupatitvÄ• anupatitvÄ• vitacche sudaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-assaraá¹ƒ karotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vat vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharanti, Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharar evarÅ«paá¹ƒ Ã±assati vÄ• dakkhati vÄ• sakkhiá¹ƒ vÄ• karissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ

asilomasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be I 255/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakehi mah asilomasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante lakkhaá¹‡o bhagavato sammukhe Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• etadavoca ``ko nu kho Ä• vuso moggallÄ• na hetu, ko paccayo sitassa pÄ• tukammÄ• yÄ• â mahÄ• moggallÄ• natthero ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto adda gacchantaá¹ƒâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ cakkhubh viharanti, Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharanti. (peyyÄ• la) eso bhikkhav rÄ• jagahe sÅ«kariko ahosÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sÅ«cilomasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be I 258/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• sÅ«cilomasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca b __vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattheva bhante rÄ• jagahe Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• yasma Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante lakkhaá¹‡o bhagavato sammukhe tatheva avoc

Ä• yasmÄ• \Be I 259/ ca bhante mahÄ• moggallÄ• no tatheva Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante v vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharanti, Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharan satto imasmiá¹ƒyeva rÄ• jagahe sÅ«to ahosÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ

pÄ• pabhikkhusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be I 261/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• pÄ• pabhikkhusuttÄ• dÄ«ni paÃ±casuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ v bhÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca mahÄ• bhÄ• sitÄ• ni. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante lakkhaá¹‡o bhagavato sammukhe pubbe vuttanayeneva Ä
mahÄ• moggallÄ• no ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso gijjhakÅ«á¹-Ä• pabbatÄ• orohanto addasaá¹ƒ gacchantaá¹ƒ. addasaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ vehÄ• saá¹ƒ gacchantiá¹ƒ. addasaá¹ƒ sikkhamÄ• na gacchantiá¹ƒ. addasaá¹ƒ sÄ• maá¹‡eraá¹ƒ vehÄ• saá¹ƒ gacchantaá¹ƒ. addasaá¹ƒ sÄ• maá gacchantiá¹ƒ. tassÄ• saá¹…ghÄ• á¹-ipi Ä• dittÄ• sampajjalitÄ• sajotibhÅ«tÄ• , pattopi Ä• d sajotibhÅ«to, kÄ• yabandhanampi Ä• dittaá¹ƒ sampajjalitaá¹ƒ sajotibhÅ«taá¹ƒ \Be I 262/, kÄ sampajjalito sajotibhÅ«to, sÄ• sudaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-assaraá¹ƒ karotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``cakkhubhÅ«tÄ• vata bhikkhave sÄ• vakÄ• viharanti Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÅ«tÄ• vat viharanti. (peyyÄ• la). eso bhikkhave bhikkhu kassapassasammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vaca bhikkhave bhikkhunÄ« kassapassa sammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vacane pÄ• pabhikkhunÄ« sikkhamÄ• nÄ• kassapassa sammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vacane pÄ• pasikkhamÄ• nÄ• a kassapassasammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vacane pÄ• pasÄ• maá¹‡ero ahosi. esÄ• bhikkha sammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vacane pÄ• pasÄ• maá¹‡erÄ« ahosÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• din opammasaá¹ƒyutta

nakhasikhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ opammasaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 264/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• h nakhasikhasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ ma katamaá¹ƒ nu kho bahutaraá¹ƒ, yo cÄ• yaá¹ƒ mayÄ• paritto \Be I 265/ nakhasikhÄ• yaá¹ƒ p cÄ• yaá¹ƒ mahÄ• pathavÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, katamaá¹ƒ nu kho bahutaraá¹ƒ.

tasmÄ• tiha \Be I 266/ bhikkhave evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ.

Ä• á¹‡isutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• therehi sa bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÅ«tapu dasÄ• rahÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• nako nÄ• ma mudiá¹…go ahosi, tassa dasÄ• rahÄ• Ä• nake ghaá¹-i odahiá¹ƒsu, ahu kho so bhikkhave samayo yaá¹ƒ Ä• nakassa mudiá¹…gassa porÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ antaradhÄ• yi \Be I 267/, Ä• á¹‡isaá¹…ghÄ• á¹-ova avasissÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bh bhikkhusaá¹ƒyutta

navasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bhikkhusaá¹ƒyutte \Be I 269/ Ä• vuso bhagavatÄ• navasuttaá¹ƒ kattha ka
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha b bhante navo bhikkhu pacchÄ• bhattaá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tapaá¹-ikkanto vihÄ• raá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ saá¹…kasÄ• yabhi, na bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ veyyÄ• vaccaá¹ƒ karoti cÄ«varakÄ• rasamaye tasmi kho tumhe bhikkhave etassa bhikkhuno ujjhÄ• yitthÄ• eso kho bhikkhave bhikkhu catunnaá Ä• bhicetasikÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhamma sukhavihÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ nikÄ• malÄ• bhÄ« akicchal
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ahampi \Be I 270/ kho bhante sakaá¹ƒ kiccaá¹ƒ karomi, eso \Be I 271/ kho bhikkhave bhikkhu catunnaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• bhicetasikÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ nikÄ• malÄ• bhÄ« akicchalÄ• bhÄ« akasiralÄ• bhÄ nayidaá¹ƒ sithilamÄ• rabbha, nayidaá¹ƒ appena thÄ• masÄ• .

nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ adhigantabbaá¹ƒ, sabbadukkhappamocanaá¹ƒ.

ayaÃ±ca daharo bhikkhu, ayamuttamapuriso.

dhÄ• reti antimaá¹ƒ dehaá¹ƒ, jetvÄ• mÄ• raá¹ƒ savÄ• hiniá¹ƒ --- khandhavaggasaá¹ƒyuttapÄ• á¸·i

saá¹ƒgÄ• yanassa pucchÄ• vissajjanÄ•

nakulapitusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 1/ bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhen paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ nakulapitusuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bhaggesu bhante susumÄ• ragire bhesakaá¸·Ä• vane migadÄ• ye naku Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. nakulapitÄ• bhante gahapati bhagavantaá¹ƒ ``ahamasmi bhante jiá mahallako addhagato vayoanuppatto Ä• turakÄ• yo abhikkhaá¹‡Ä• taá¹…ko, aniccadassÄ• bhagavato manobhÄ• vanÄ«yÄ• naÃ±ca bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ, ovadatu maá¹ƒ bhante bhagavÄ• bhagavÄ• , yaá¹ƒ mamassa dÄ«gharattaá¹ƒ hitÄ• ya sukhÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhan gahapati, evametaá¹ƒ gahapati, Ä• turo hÄ• yaá¹ƒ gahapati kÄ• yo aá¹‡á¸• abhÅ«to pariyon imaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ pariharanto muhuttampi Ä• rogyaá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• neyya, kimaÃ±Ã±atra bÄ• evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ `Ä• turakÄ• yassa me sato cittaá¹ƒ anÄ• turaá¹ƒ bhavissatÄ«â€™ ti. sikkhitabbaâ€™â€™ nti. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

tasmÄ• tiha \Be II 3/ te gahapati evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ taÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 4/ bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• ren vibhattaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena desitaá¹ƒ ``kathaÃ±ca gah hoti Ä• turacitto ca. idha gahapati assutavÄ• puthujjano ariyÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« ariyadha

ariyadhamme avinÄ«to, sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ adassÄ• vÄ« sappurisadhammassa akovido sapp attato samanupassati rÅ«pavantaá¹ƒ vÄ• attÄ• naá¹ƒ, attani vÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ, rÅ«pasmiá¹ƒ v rÅ«paá¹ƒ mama rÅ«paâ€™â€™ nti pariyuá¹-á¹-haá¹-á¹-hÄ• yÄ« hoti. tassa ``ahaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá pariyuá¹-á¹-haá¹-á¹-hÄ• yino taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡amati aÃ±Ã±athÄ• hoti. tassa rÅ«pavipariá¹‡Ä• maÃ±Ã±athÄ• bhÄ• vÄ• uppajjanti sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupÄ• y Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• vitthÄ• rena vibhattaá¹ƒ.

aniccasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 9/ Ä• vuso dutiyavagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• h paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ aniccasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±c __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ bhik aniccÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• aniccÄ• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• aniccÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ. evaá ariyasÄ• vako rÅ«pasmimpi nibbindati, vedanÄ• yapi nibbindati, saÃ±Ã±Ä• yapi nibbindati, s nibbindati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asmimpi nibbindati, nibbindaá¹ƒ virajjati, virÄ• gÄ• vimuccati, vimu `vimuttaâ€™ miti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sita

dukkhaanattasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dukkhaanattasuttÄ• ni \Be II 10/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• bhÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ vedanÄ• dukkhÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• dukkhÄ• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dukkhÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ duk anattÄ• , vedanÄ• anattÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• anattÄ• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• anattÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá bhikkhave sutavÄ• ariyasÄ• vako rÅ«pasmimpi nibbindati, vedanÄ• yapi nibbindati, saÃ±Ã± saá¹…khÄ• resupi nibbindati, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asmimpi nibbindati, nibbindaá¹ƒ virajjati, virÄ• gÄ vimuttasmiá¹ƒ `vimuttaâ€™ miti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti, khÄ«á¹‡Ä• jÄ• ti, vusitaá¹ƒ brahmacariy karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ, nÄ• paraá¹ƒ itthattÄ• yÄ• ti pajÄ• nÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ kho bhante b

bhÄ• rasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bhÄ• rasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 11/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÄ• raÃ desessÄ• mi bhÄ• rahÄ• raÃ±ca bhÄ• rÄ• dÄ• naÃ±ca bhÄ• ranikkhepanaÃ±ca, taá¹ƒ suá¹ `paÃ±cupÄ• dÄ• nakkhandhÄ• â€™ tissa vacanÄ«yaá¹ƒ. katame paÃ±ca, rÅ«pupÄ• dÄ• na

saÃ±Ã±upÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho saá¹…khÄ• rupÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• r bhÄ• roâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

bhÄ• rÄ• \Be II 13/ have paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• , bhÄ• rahÄ• ro ca puggalo.

bhÄ• rÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ dukhaá¹ƒ loke, bhÄ• ranikkhepanaá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ.

nikkhipitvÄ• garuá¹ƒ bhÄ• raá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhÄ• raá¹ƒ anÄ• diya.

samÅ«laá¹ƒ taá¹‡hamabbuyha, nicchÄ• to parinibbuto ||

natumhÄ• kasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ na tumhÄ• kasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ka __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhu Ä• rabbha ``yaá¹ƒ bhik taá¹ƒ pajahatha, taá¹ƒ vo pahÄ«naá¹ƒ hitÄ• ya sukhÄ• yabhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• d anattalakkhaá¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anattalakkhaá¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 15/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asiyaá¹ƒ bhante isipatane migadÄ• ye paÃ±cavaggiye bhikk bhikkhave anattÄ• , rÅ«paÃ±ca hidaá¹ƒ bhikkhave attÄ• abhavissa, nayidaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ Ä• labbhetha ca rÅ«pe evaá¹ƒ me rÅ«paá¹ƒ hotu, evaá¹ƒ me rÅ«paá¹ƒ mÄ• ahosÄ«â€™â€™
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yamakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ theravagge panÄ• vuso tatiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ yamakasuttaá¹ƒ kattha k vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ yamakattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmato bhante yamakatthera diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ uppannaá¹ƒ hoti ``tathÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savo bhikkhu kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• ucchijjati vinassati, na hoti paraá¹ƒmaraá¹‡Ä• a vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi Ä• vuso yamaka, rÅ«paá¹ƒ niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ v bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 18/ tattha Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammase yamakattherassa paá¹-ividdhasaccassa diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa anuyogavattajhÄ• panavase dhammadesanaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• rena desesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi Ä• vuso yamaka, rÅ«paá¹ƒ `tathÄ• gatoâ€™ ti s hetaá¹ƒ Ä• vusoâ€™. vedanaá¹ƒ. saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ. saá¹…khÄ• re. viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ `tathÄ• ga hetaá¹ƒ Ä• vusoâ€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammasenÄ• anuyogavattajhÄ• panavasena paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• uttari dhammadesanaá¹

taá¹ƒ \Be II 20/ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi Ä• vuso yamaka, rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanaá¹ƒ, saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, saá `tathÄ• gatoâ€™ ti samanupassasi --- vakkalisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 22/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena khandh theravagge paÃ±camaá¹ƒ vakkalisuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kat __vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ vakkaliá¹ƒ theraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• vakkalithero Ä• bÄ• dhiko dukkhito bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• no bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``cirapaá¹-i bhagavantaá¹ƒ dassanÄ• ya upasaá¹…kamitukÄ• mo, natthi ca me kÄ• yasmiá¹ƒ tÄ• vatikÄ bhagavantaá¹ƒ dassanÄ• ya upasaá¹…kameyyaâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ iminÄ• pÅ«tikÄ• yena diá¹-á¹-hena, yo kho vakkali dhammaá¹ƒ passati, so maá¹ƒ passati, y dhammaá¹ƒ passati. dhammaÃ±hi vakkali passanto maá¹ƒ passati, maá¹ƒ passanto dhamm maÃ±Ã±asi vakkali \Be II 23/, rÅ«paá¹ƒ niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• di

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

``ahaá¹ƒ \Be II 26/ vakkali, kiá¹ƒ te iminÄ• pÅ«tikÄ• yena diá¹-á¹-henaâ€™â€™ ---

``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi vakkali, rÅ«paá¹ƒ niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ --- aniccaá¹ƒ bhante.

``yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ, dukkhaá¹ƒ vÄ• taá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ --- dukkhaá¹ƒ bhante.

yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammaá¹ƒ, kallaá¹ƒ nu taá¹ƒ samanupas esohamasmi, eso me attÄ• â€™â€™ --- __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 27/ punapi bhagavÄ• bhikkhÅ« pesetvÄ• Ä• yas paggahavacanaá¹ƒ Ä• rocÄ• pesi. sopi kathaá¹ƒ attano pavattiá¹ƒ bhagavato paccÄ• rocÄ• abhisamparÄ• yo ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ suá¹‡Ä• vuso tvaá¹ƒ vakkali bhagavato vacanaá¹ƒ dvinnaÃ±ca devatÄ• rattiá¹ƒ dve devatÄ• yo abhikkantÄ• ya rattiyÄ• abhikkantavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• kevalakappaá¹ƒ gijj
yena

bhagavÄ• \Be II 28/ tenupasaá¹…kamiá¹ƒsu, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsu, ekamantaá¹ƒ á¹-hitÄ• kho Ä• vuso ekÄ• devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavo vimokkhÄ• ya cetetÄ«â€™ ti. aparÄ• devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca `so hi nÅ«na bha vimuccissatÄ«â€™ ti. bhagavÄ• ca taá¹ƒ Ä• vuso vakkali evamÄ• ha `mÄ• bhÄ• yi vakkali apÄ• pakaá¹ƒ te maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavissati, apÄ• pikÄ• kÄ• lakiriyÄ• â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kho bha bhikkhÅ« pesetvÄ• Ä• yasmato vakkalittherassa paggahavacanaá¹ƒ Ä• rocÄ• pesi. sopi bh mama vacanena bhagavato pÄ• de sirasÄ• vandatha ``vakkali bhante bhikkhu Ä• bÄ• dhik so bhagavato pÄ• de sirasÄ• vandatÄ«â€™â€™ ti, evaÃ±ca vadetha ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ kaá¹…khÄ• mi, yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhanti navicikicchÄ• mi, yadaniccaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vip natthi me tattha chando vÄ• rÄ• go vÄ• pemaá¹ƒvÄ• ti na vicikicchÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti eva pavattiá¹ƒ paccÄ• rocÄ• pesi. so hi bhante Ä• yasmÄ• acirapakkantesu tesu bhikkhÅ«su sa vedanaá¹ƒ vikkhambhetvÄ• mÅ«lakammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ• ya sampajÄ• no arahatta evaá¹ƒ kho bhante tassa Ä• yasmato abhisamparÄ• yo ahosi.

assajisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ assajisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 33/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ assajiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä Ä• bÄ• dhiko dukkhito bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• no bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``pubbe khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bh passambhetvÄ• kÄ• yasaá¹…khÄ• re viharÄ• mi, sohaá¹ƒ samÄ• dhiá¹ƒ nappaá¹-ilabhÄ• r samÄ• dhiá¹ƒ appaá¹-ilabhato evaá¹ƒ hoti no cassÄ• haá¹ƒ parihÄ• yÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti. ta ``ye te assaji samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• samÄ• dhisÄ• rakÄ• samÄ• dhisÄ• maÃ±Ã±Ä• , te appaá¹-ilabhataá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ hoti `no cassu mayaá¹ƒ parihÄ• yÄ• mÄ• â€™ ti. taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ ma niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

khemakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ khemakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 36/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ v
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule there bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmat bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sambahulÄ• bhante therÄ• bhikkhÅ« Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ dÄ• sakaá¹ƒ pesetvÄ• khemakaá¹ƒ Ä• bÄ• dhikaá¹ƒ dukkhitaá¹ƒ bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• naá¹ƒ gelaÃ±Ã±akÄ• raá¹‡aÃ±ca 37/, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``paÃ±cime Ä• vuso upÄ• dÄ• nakkhandhÄ• vuttÄ• bha rÅ«pupÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho vedanupÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho saÃ±Ã±upÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho saá viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡upÄ• dÄ• nakkhandho, imesu khvÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso paÃ±casu upÄ• dÄ• nakk attaniyaá¹ƒ vÄ• samanupassÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• khem __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 40/ tattha Ä• yasmÄ• khemako uttari dhammades vitthÄ• rena therÄ• naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ desesi. kÄ«diso ca nesaá¹ƒ dhammadesakadham dhammadesanÄ• ya Ä• nisaá¹ƒso adhigato.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ catutthe bhante vÄ• re Ä• yasmÄ• khemako ``alaá¹ƒ Ä• vuso dÄ• saka sandhÄ• vanikÄ• ya, Ä• harÄ• vuso daá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ, ahameva therÄ• naá¹ƒ santikaá¹ƒ gamis daá¹‡á¸• amolubbha Ä• yasmÄ• khemako yena therÄ• bhikkhÅ« tenupasaá¹…kami, upasa pucchito ``nakhvÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso rÅ«paá¹ƒ asmÄ«ti vadÄ• mi, napi aÃ±Ã±atra rÅ«pÄ• asm Ä• vuso vedanaá¹ƒ asmÄ«ti vadÄ• mi, napi aÃ±Ã±atra vedanÄ• asmÄ«ti vadÄ• mÄ«â€™â khemako uttaripi dhammadesanaá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hetvÄ• vitthÄ• rena desesi. imasmiÃ±ca p veyyÄ• karaá¹‡asmiá¹ƒ bhaÃ±Ã±amÄ• ne saá¹-á¹-himattÄ• naá¹ƒ therÄ• naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«na cittÄ• ni vimucciá¹ƒsu Ä• yasmatoca khemakassa. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante tesaá¹ƒ therÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammadesakadhammappaá¹-iggÄ• hakÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• bhisamayo ahosi.

channasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ channasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 44/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ channattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ channatthero Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ovadatu maá¹ƒ Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nan Ä• nando, karotu me Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando dhammiá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ, yathÄ• haá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``sammukhÄ• me taá¹ƒ Ä• vuso channa bhagavato sutaá¹ƒ, sammukh kaccÄ• nagottaá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ ovadantassa, dvayanissito khvÄ• yaá¹ƒ kaccÄ• na loko yebh natthitaÃ±ca, lokasamudayaá¹ƒ kho kaccÄ• na yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sammappaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya pa hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸ ovadatu \Be II 46/ maá¹ƒ Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando, anusÄ• satu maá¹ƒ Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando.

pupphasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso ... pe ... \Be II 47/ sammÄ• sambuddhena khandhavaggasaá¹ƒ pupphasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``nÄ• haá¹ƒ bhi lokova mayÄ• vivadati, na bhikkhave dhammavÄ• dÄ« \Be II 48/ kenaci lokasmiá¹ƒ vivadat sammataá¹ƒ loke paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• naá¹ƒ, ahampitaá¹ƒ ``natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadÄ• mi, yaá¹ƒ bh loke paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• naá¹ƒ, ahampitaá¹ƒ ``atthÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• d nÄ• haá¹ƒ bhikkhave lokena vivadÄ• mi.

na bhikkhave dhammavÄ• dÄ« kenaci lokasmiá¹ƒ vivadati.

pheá¹‡apiá¹‡á¸• Å«pamasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 51/ Ä• vuso pheá¹‡apiá¹‡á¸• Å«pamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ•

kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ayujjhÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante gaá¹…gÄ• ya nadiyÄ• tÄ«re sambahule bhikkhA bhikkhave ayaá¹ƒ gaá¹…gÄ• nadÄ« mahantaá¹ƒ pheá¹‡apiá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ Ä• vaheyya, tamen nijjhÄ• yeyya yoniso upaparikkheyya, tassa taá¹ƒ passato nijjhÄ• yato yoniso upaparikkhato khÄ• yeyya, tucchakaÃ±Ã±eva khÄ• yeyya, asÄ• rakaÃ±Ã±eva khÄ• yeyya, kiá¹ƒ siyÄ• bh evameva kho bhikkhave yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±ci rÅ«paá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ ajjhattaá¹ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ vÄ• sukhumaá¹ƒ vÄ• hÄ«naá¹ƒ vÄ• paá¹‡Ä«taá¹ƒ vÄ• yaá¹ƒ dÅ«re santik nijjhÄ• yati yoniso upaparikkhati, tassa taá¹ƒ passato nijjhÄ• yato yoniso upaparikkhato ritta khÄ• yati, tucchakaÃ±Ã±eva khÄ• yati, asÄ• rakaÃ±Ã±eva khÄ• yati, kiÃ±hi siyÄ• bhikkhav
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

pheá¹‡apiá¹‡á¸• Å«pamaá¹ƒ \Be II 54/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, vedanÄ• pubbuá¸·upamÄ• .

marÄ«cikÅ«pamÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• kadalÅ«pamÄ• .

mÄ• yÅ«pamaÃ±ca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, desitÄ• diccabandhunÄ• .

yathÄ• yathÄ• nijjhÄ• yati, yoniso upaparikkhati.

rittakaá¹ƒ tucchakaá¹ƒ hoti, yo naá¹ƒ passati yoniso ||

imaÃ±ca \Be II 55/ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha, bhÅ«ripaÃ±Ã±ena desitaá¹ƒ.

pahÄ• naá¹ƒ tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ, rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatha chaá¸• á¸• itaá¹ƒ ||

Ä• yu usmÄ• ca viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, yadÄ• kÄ• yaá¹ƒ jahantimaá¹ƒ.

apaviddho tadÄ• seti, parabhattaá¹ƒ acetanaá¹ƒ ||

etÄ• disÄ• yaá¹ƒ santÄ• no, mÄ• yÄ• yaá¹ƒ bÄ• lalÄ• pinÄ«.

vadhako esa akkhÄ• to, sÄ• ro ettha na vijjati ||

evaá¹ƒ khandhe avekkheyya, bhikkhu Ä• raddhavÄ«riyo.

divÄ• vÄ• yadi vÄ• rattiá¹ƒ, sampajÄ• no paá¹-issato ||

jaheyya sabbasaá¹ƒyogaá¹ƒ, kareyya saraá¹‡attano.

careyyÄ• dittasÄ«sova, patthayaá¹ƒ accutaá¹ƒ padaá¹ƒ ||

dutiyadhammakatikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva Ä• vuso dhammakathikavagge dutiyadhammakathikasuttaá¹ƒ bha
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita
bhikkhu bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``dhammakathiko dhammakathikoti bhante vuccati, kittÄ• dhammakathiko hoti, kittÄ• vatÄ• dhammÄ• nudhammappaá¹-ipanno hoti, kittÄ• vatÄ• diá¹ hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``rÅ«passa ce bhikkhu nibbidÄ• ya virÄ• gÄ deseti, `dhammakathiko bhikkhÅ«â€™ ti alaá¹ƒ vacanÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bh

sÄ«lavantasutta, sutavantasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 57/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ•
sÄ«lavantasuttaÃ±ca sutavantasuttaÃ±ca kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ker __vissajjanÄ• --- _ bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 58/ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• koá¹-á¹-h Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante sÄ• yanhasamayaá¹ƒ paá¹-isallÄ• nÄ• vuá¹-á¹-hito yenÄ• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputto tenupasaá¹.

Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ sÄ• riputtaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ«lavatÄ• vuso sÄ• riputta bhikkhunÄ• katam manasikÄ• tabbÄ• . sutÄ• vatÄ• vuso sÄ• riputta bhikkhunÄ• katame dhammÄ• yoniso ma bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``sÄ«lavatÄ• vuso koá¹-á¹-hika bhikkhunÄ• , sutÄ• vatÄ• vuso koá¹-á¹-paÃ±cupÄ• dÄ• nakkhandhÄ• aniccato dukkhato rogato gaá¹‡á¸• ato sallato aghato Ä• bÄ• suÃ±Ã±ato anattato yoniso manasikÄ• tabbÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

rÄ• dhasaá¹ƒyutta

sattasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ rÄ• dhasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 61/ panÄ• vuso dutiyaá¹ƒ sattasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavat
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ rÄ• dhattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bh rÄ• dhatthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``satto sattoti bhante vuccati, kittÄ• vatÄ• nu kho b vuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``rÅ«pe kho rÄ• dha yo chando yo rÄ• g tatra satto tatra visatto, tasmÄ• sattoti vuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bh

diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyutta

soattÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 63/ panÄ• vuso tatiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ soattÄ•
kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``kismiá¹ƒ nu kh upÄ• dÄ• ya kiá¹ƒ abhinivissa evaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hi uppajjati so attÄ• so loko so pecca bhaviss sassato aviparia¹‡Ä• madhammoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá

natthidinnasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 65/ Ä• vuso paÃ±camaá¹ƒ natthidinnasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``kismiá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya kiá¹ƒ abhinivissa evaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hi uppajjati natthi dinnaá¹ƒ, natthi yiá¹-á¹- hutaá¹ƒ, natthi sukatadukkaá¹-Ä• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti evam bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

okkantasaá¹ƒyutta

cakkhusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ okkantasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 66/ panÄ• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ cakkhusuttaá¹ƒ bh Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 67/ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``cakk aniccaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• mi aÃ±Ã±athÄ• bhÄ• vi. sotaá¹ƒ. ghÄ• naá¹ƒ. jivhaá¹ƒ. kÄ• yo. mano aÃ±Ã±athÄ• bhÄ• vÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sÄ• riputtasaá¹ƒyutta

sucimukhÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sÄ• riputtasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 68/ panÄ• vuso dasamaá¹ƒ sucimukhÄ«suttaá kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sucimukhiá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jikaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmat dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sucimukhÄ« bhante paribbÄ• jikÄ• Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ s nu kho samaá¹‡a adhomukho bhuÃ±jasÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``na k bhuÃ±jÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• paá¹-ikkhipitvÄ• ``ye hi keci bhagini samaá¹‡abrÅ tiracchÄ• navijjÄ• ya micchÄ• jÄ«vena jÄ«vikaá¹ƒ kappenti, ime vuccanti bhagini samaá¹‡al bhuÃ±jantÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• pa kiá¹ƒ \Be II 69/ nu kho samaá¹‡a adho mukho bhuÃ±jasi.

na khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagini adhomukho bhuÃ±jÄ• mi.

tena hi samaá¹‡a ubbhamukho bhuÃ±jasi.

na khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagini ubbhamukho bhuÃ±jÄ• mi.

saá¸·Ä• yatanavaggasaá¹ƒyuttapÄ• á¸·i ajjhattÄ• niccasutta, bÄ• hirasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 73/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena saá¸·Ä paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ ajjhattÄ• niccasuttaÃ±ca catutthaá¹ƒ bÄ• hirÄ• niccasuttaÃ±ca kattha kaá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``cakkhuá¹ƒ bh yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ tadanattÄ• , yadanattÄ• taá¹ƒ `netaá¹ƒ ma attÄ• â€™ ti evametaá¹ƒ yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ sammappaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya daá¹-á¹-habbaâ€™â€™ bhikkhave aniccÄ• . yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ tadanattÄ• , yadanattÄ nesohamasmi, na meso attÄ• â€™â€™ ti ca evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sabbavagga

Ä• dittasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be II 74/ sabbavagge chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ Ä• dittasuttaá¹ƒ bhaga Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ gayÄ• yaá¹ƒ \Be II 75/ bhante gayÄ• sÄ«se purÄ• á¹‡ajaá¹-ilaá¹ƒ bhikk ``sabbaá¹ƒ bhikkhave Ä• dittaá¹ƒ, kiÃ±ca bhikkhave sabbaá¹ƒ Ä• dittaá¹ƒ. cakkhu bhikkhav Ä• dittÄ• , cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• dittaá¹ƒ, cakkhusamphasso Ä• ditto, yampidaá¹ƒ ca uppajjati, vedayitaá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• dukkhaá¹ƒ vÄ• adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒvÄ• , tampi Ä• dit rÄ• gagginÄ• dosagginÄ• mohagginÄ• Ä• dittaá¹ƒ, jÄ• tiyÄ• jarÄ• ya maraá¹‡ena sokehi domanassehi upÄ• yÄ• sehi Ä• dittanti vadÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• migajÄ• lavagga

paá¹-hama migajÄ• lasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ migajÄ• lavagge \Be II 76/ Ä• vuso paá¹-hamamigajÄ• lasuttaá¹ƒ bhagava kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 77/ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ migajÄ• lattheraá¹ƒ Ä Ä• yasmÄ• bhante migajÄ• latthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ekavihÄ• rÄ« ekavihÄ• rÄ« kittÄ• vatÄ• nukho bhante ekavihÄ• rÄ« hoti, kittÄ• vatÄ• ca pana sadutiyavihÄ• rÄ« hotÄ«â vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``santi kho migajÄ• la cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyÄ• rÅ«pÄ• iá¹-á¹-hÄ• kantÄ• manÄ•
kÄ• mÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitÄ• rajanÄ«yÄ• , taÃ±ce bhikkhu abhinandati abhivadati ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹ abhinandato abhivadato ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hato uppajjati nandÄ«, nandiyÄ• sati sÄ• rÄ• go saá¹ƒyogo hoti, nandisaá¹ƒyojanasaá¹ƒyutto kho migajÄ• la bhikkhu sadutiyavihÄ• rÄ«ti vuc
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paá¹-hama chaphassÄ• yatanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 79/ navamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-hamachaphassÄ• yata
kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``yo hi koci vikkhave phassÄ• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ samudayaÃ±ca atthaá¹…gamaÃ±ca assÄ• daÃ±ca Ä• dÄ«navaÃ±c nappajÄ• nÄ• ti, avusitaá¹ƒ tena brahmacariyaá¹ƒ, Ä• rakÄ• so imasmÄ• dhammavinayÄ•
bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ahaá¹ƒ \Be II 80/ hi bhante channaá¹ƒ phassÄ• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ samudayaÃ±ca atthaá¹…ga Ä• dÄ«navaÃ±ca nissaraá¹‡aÃ±ca yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ nappajÄ• nÄ• mi.

cakkhuá¹ƒ \Be II 81/ etaá¹ƒ mama, esohamasmi, eso me attÄ• ti samanupassasi.

no hetaá¹ƒ bhante.

ettha ca te bhikkhu cakkhu netaá¹ƒ mama, nesohamasmi, na meso attÄ• ti evametaá¹ƒ yat sammappaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sudiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ bhavissati, esevanto dukkhassa.

gilÄ• navagga

paá¹-hama gilÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ gilÄ• navagge \Be II 82/ panÄ• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ gilÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ bhaga
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ gilÄ• naá¹ƒ dukkhitaá¹ƒ bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. aÃ±Ã±ataro bhante bhikkhu gilÄ• bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• no bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``nakhvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante sÄ«lavisuddhatthaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ paá¹-vacanaá¹ƒ sÄ• dhukÄ• raá¹ƒ datvÄ• ``rÄ• gavirÄ• gattho hi bhikkhu mayÄ• dhammo desit bhikkhu, cakkhu niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• ti. aniccaá¹ƒ bhante. yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ du sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• ti, dukkhaá¹ƒ bhanteâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

na \Be II 84/ me bhante khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ.

sÄ• dhu \Be II 85/ kho tvaá¹ƒ bhikkhu rÄ• gavirÄ• gatthaá¹ƒ mayÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ

channavagga

puá¹‡á¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ channavagge \Be II 87/ panÄ• vuso paÃ±camaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ puá¹‡á kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡attheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante puá¹‡á¹‡atthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ• dhu me bhante bhagavÄ• saá¹ƒkh yamahaá¹ƒ bhagavato dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• eko vÅ«pakaá¹-á¹-ho appamatto Ä• tÄ• pÄ« pah tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``santi kho puá¹‡á¹‡a cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• rÅ«pÄ• iá¹-á¹-hÄ• kantÄ
kÄ• mÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitÄ• rajanÄ«yÄ• , taÃ±ce bhikkhu abhinandati abhivadati ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-abhinandato abhivadato ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hato uppajjati nandÄ«, nandÄ« samudayo dukkh vadÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 89/ bhagavÄ• Ä• yasmato puá¹‡á¹‡attherassa saá¹ kathaÃ±ca naá¹ƒ paá¹-ipucchi, kathaÃ±ca so bhagavato Ä• rocesi, kathaÃ±cassÄ• yasmato abhisamparÄ• yo ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavÄ• Ä• yasmato puá¹‡á¹‡attherassa saá¹ƒkh ``iminÄ• tvaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡a mayÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena ovÄ• dena ovadito katamasmiá¹ƒ janapad taá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡attheraá¹ƒ paá¹-ipucchi. so ca bhante Ä• yasmÄ• ``atthi bha janapado, tatthÄ• haá¹ƒ viharissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavato Ä• rocesi. so sunÄ• parante janapade vasitvÄ• teneva antaravassena tisso vijjÄ• sacchÄ• kÄ• si. teneva parinibbÄ• yi. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante tassa Ä• yasmato abhisamparÄ• yo ahosi.

santi \Be II 92/ kho tassa bhagavato sÄ• vakÄ• kÄ• yena ca jÄ«vitena ca aá¹-á¹-Ä«yamÄ• jigucchamÄ• nÄ• satthahÄ• rakaá¹ƒ pariyesanti.

sakkhissasi kho tvaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡a iminÄ• damÅ«pasamena samannÄ• gato sunÄ• parasa

saá¸·avagga

mÄ• lukyaputtasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 93/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena saá¸·a mÄ• lukyaputtasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sita

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 94/ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mÄ• lukyaputtatthera bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante mÄ• lukyaputtatthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ• dhu saá¹ƒkhittena dhammaá¹ƒ desetu, yamahaá¹ƒ bhagavato dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• eko vÅ«paka pahitatto vihareyyaâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``ettha dÄ• ni mÄ• lukyaputta kiá¹ƒ vakkhÄ• mÄ• tiâ€™â€™ Ä• dinÄ• theraá¹ƒ apasÄ• detvÄ• ceva ussÄ• detvÄ• ca ``taá¹ƒ te cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• rÅ«pÄ• adiá¹-á¹-hÄ• adiá¹-á¹-hapubbÄ• , na ca passasi, na ca te h tattha chando vÄ• rÄ• go vÄ• evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ \Be II 97/ ca kho panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• ovÄ• de saá¹ƒkhitte mÄ• lukyaputtatthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ avoca kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• anuÃ±Ã±Ä• si.
mÄ• lukyaputtattherassa dhammÄ• bhisamayo ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ kho bhante ovÄ• de bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena bhÄ• site Ä• mÄ• lukyaputtatthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``imassa khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante bhagavatÄ• vitthÄ• rena atthaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mi.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• muá¹-á¹-hÄ• , piyaá¹ƒ nimittaá¹ƒ manasi karoto.

sÄ• rattacitto vedeti, taÃ±ca ajjhosa tiá¹-á¹-hati ||

tassa vaá¸• á¸• hanti vedanÄ• , anekÄ• rÅ«pasambhavÄ• .

abhijjhÄ• ca vihesÄ• ca, cittamassÅ«pahaÃ±Ã±ati.

evaá¹ƒ Ä• cinato dukkhaá¹ƒ, Ä• rÄ• nibbÄ• na vuccati.

peyyÄ• la

na so rajjati dhammesu, dhammaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• paá¹-issato.

virattacitto vedeti, taÃ±ca nÄ• jjhosa tiá¹-á¹-hati ||

yathÄ• ssa jÄ• nato dhammaá¹ƒ, sevato cÄ• pi vedanaá¹ƒ.

khÄ«yati nopacÄ«yati, evaá¹ƒ so caratÄ« sato.

evaá¹ƒ apacinato dukkhaá¹ƒ, santike nibbÄ• na vuccatÄ«ti ||

imassa khvÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena bhÄ• sitassa evaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• rena at bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``sÄ• dhu sÄ• dhu mÄ• lukyaputta, sÄ• dhu kho tvaá¹ƒ mÄ• lukyaputt bhÄ• sitassa vitthÄ• rena atthaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti sÄ• dhukÄ• raá¹ƒ datvÄ• --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• sati muá¹-á¹-ho, piyaá¹ƒ nimittaá¹ƒ manasi karoto.

sÄ• rattacitto vedeti, taÃ±ca ajjhosa tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ---

Ä• dinÄ•

therassa vacanaá¹ƒ samanuÃ±Ã±Ä• si. so ca bhante Ä• yasmÄ• mÄ• lukyaputtatthero ek Ä• tÄ• pÄ« pahitatto \Be II 98/ viharanto nacirasseva yassatthÄ• ya kulaputtÄ• sammadeva pabbajanti, tadanuttaraá¹ƒ brahmacariyapariyosÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme sayaá¹ƒ abh upasampajja vihÄ• si, ``khÄ«á¹‡Ä• jÄ• ti, vusitaá¹ƒ brahmacariyaá¹ƒ, kataá¹ƒ karaá¹‡Ä«ya itthattÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti abbhaÃ±Ã±Ä• si. aÃ±Ã±ataroca panÄ• yasmÄ• mÄ• lukyaputto a bhante tassa Ä• yasmato abhisamparÄ• yo ahosi.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Be II 100/ disvÄ• sati muá¹-á¹-hÄ• , piyaá¹ƒ nimittaá¹ƒ manasi karoto.

sÄ• rattacitto vedeti, taÃ±ca ajjhosa tiá¹-á¹-hati ||

pamÄ• davihÄ• rÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 101/ Ä• vuso catutthaá¹ƒ pamÄ• davihÄ• rÄ«suttaá¹ƒ bhag Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``pamÄ• davih desessÄ• mi appamÄ• davihÄ• riÃ±ca, taá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tha. kathaÃ±ca bhikkhave pamÄ• dav asaá¹ƒvutassa bhikkhave viharato cittaá¹ƒ byÄ• siÃ±cati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyesu rÅ«pesu, tas pÄ• mojjaá¹ƒ na hoti, pÄ• mojje asati pÄ«ti na hoti, pÄ«tiyÄ• passaddhi na hoti, passaddhiy hoti, dukkhino cittaá¹ƒ na samÄ• dhiyati, asamÄ• hi te citte dhammÄ• na pÄ• tubhavanti, d apÄ• tubhÄ• vÄ• pamÄ• davihÄ• rÄ«tveva saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• di

lokakÄ• maguá¹‡avagga

rÄ• hulovÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ lokakÄ• maguá¹‡avagge \Be II 104/ Ä• vuso aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ rÄ• hulovÄ• kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒyeva bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ rÄ• hulaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ``ta rÄ• hula, cakkhu niccaá¹ƒ vÄ• aniccaá¹ƒ vÄ• ti. aniccaá¹ƒ bhante. yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ, d sukhaá¹ƒvÄ• ti. dukkhaá¹ƒ bhante. yaá¹ƒ panÄ• niccaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• madhamm samanupassituá¹ƒ `etaá¹ƒ mama, esohamasmi, eso me attÄ• â€™ ti. no hetaá¹ƒ bhanteâ€™
bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒnÅ«nÄ• haá¹ƒ \Be II 105/ rÄ• hulaá¹ƒ uttariá¹ƒ Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khaye vineyyaá¹ƒ.

gaá¹‡hÄ• hi rÄ• hula nisÄ«danaá¹ƒ.

gahapativagga

bhÄ• radvÄ• jasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ gahapativagge \Be II 107/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• haka saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ bhÄ• radvÄ• jasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ udenaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• piá¹‡á¸• olabhÄ• radvÄ• jattherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• bhante udeno Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ pi etadavoca ``ko nu kho bho bhÄ• radvÄ• ja hetu ko paccayo, yenime daharÄ• bhikkhÅ« sus yobbanena samannÄ• gatÄ• paá¹-hamena vayasÄ• anikÄ«á¸·itÄ• vino kÄ• mesu yÄ• vajÄ parisuddhaá¹ƒ brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, addhÄ• naÃ±ca Ä• pÄ• dentÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹

etaá¹ƒ \Be II 108/ mahÄ• rÄ• ja tena bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• bhikkhave mÄ• tumattÄ«su mÄ• tucittaá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hapetha. bhaganimattÄ«su bhaginicitta dhÄ«tumattÄ«su dhÄ«tucittaá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hapethÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante Ä• y bhÄ• radvÄ• jattherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

verahaccÄ• nisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 112/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ verahaccÄ• nisuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena k __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kÄ• maá¹‡á¸• Ä• yaá¹ƒ bhante verahaccÄ• nigottaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡iá¹ƒ udÄ• yittherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. verahaccÄ• nÄ«gottÄ• bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä« Ä• yasmantaá ``kismiá¹ƒ nu kho bhante sati arahanto sukhadukkhaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apenti, kismiá¹ƒ asati araha paÃ±Ã±apentÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``cakkhusmiá¹ƒ kho bhagini sati \Be II 1 sukhadukkhaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apenti, cakkhusmiá¹ƒ asati arahanto sukhadukkhaá¹ƒ na paÃ±Ã±a bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• udÄ• yittherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

devadahavagga

khaá¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ devadahavagge \Be II 115/ Ä• vuso khaá¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante devadahe nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame sambahule bh bhikkhave, suladdhaá¹ƒ vo bhikkhave, khaá¹‡o vo paá¹-iladdho brahmacariyavÄ• sÄ• yÄ• â bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

samuddavagga

bÄ• á¸·isikopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ samuddavagge \Be II 117/ panÄ• vuso tatiyaá¹ƒ bÄ• á¸·isikopamasuttaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be II 118/ bhante jÄ«vakambavane sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä bhikkhave bÄ• á¸·isiko Ä• misagatabaá¸·isaá¹ƒ gambhÄ«re udakarahade pakkhipeyyÄ• â€™
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• dittapariyÄ• yasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ saá¸·Ä• yatanavaggasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 120/ samuddavagge panÄ• vuso pc dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• therehi saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ Ä• dittapariyÄ• yasut
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sambahule bhante bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``Ä• dittapariyÄ• yaá¹ƒ vo bhikk desessÄ• mi, taá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tha. katamo ca bhikkhave Ä• dittapariyÄ• yo dhammapariyÄ• y ayosalÄ• kÄ• ya Ä• dittÄ• ya sampajjalitÄ• ya sajotibhÅ«tÄ• ya cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ sampalima cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyesu rÅ«pesu anubyaÃ±janaso nimittaggÄ• hoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dinÄ• bhagav

Ä• sÄ«visavagga

paá¹-hamadÄ• rukkhandhopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ Ä• sÄ«visavagge \Be II 126/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• ha saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-hamadÄ• rukkhandhopamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ bhante gaá¹…gÄ• ya nadiyÄ• tÄ«re sambahule bhikkhÅ tumhe bhikkhave amhaá¹ƒ mahantaá¹ƒ dÄ• rukkhandhaá¹ƒ gaá¹…gÄ• ya nadiyÄ• sotena v bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitÄ• .

upacÄ• ravacanaá¹ƒ

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 129/ tattha bhagavatÄ• orimatÄ«rÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ up vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ orimaá¹ƒ tÄ«ranti kho bhikkhu channetaá¹ƒ ajjhattikÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• yatanÄ pÄ• rimaá¹ƒ tÄ«ranti kho bhikkhu channetaá¹ƒ bÄ• hirÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• yatanÄ• naá¹ƒ adhivacan kho bhikkhu nandirÄ• gassetaá¹ƒ adhivacanaá¹ƒ. thale ussÄ• doti kho bhikkhu asmimÄ• na evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha orimatÄ«rÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ upacÄ• ravacanÄ• naá¹ƒ
pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ \Be II 131/ kho pana Ä• vuso sutte bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• site vises kathaÃ±ca paá¹-iladdho.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ bhante sutte bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• site visesato nandassa gopÄ upasampadÄ• ca yÄ• va arahattÄ• ca visesato attho adhigato.

labheyyÄ• haá¹ƒ \Be II 132/ bhante bhagavato santike pabbajjaá¹ƒ, labheyyaá¹ƒ upasampa tena hi tvaá¹ƒ nanda sÄ• mikÄ• naá¹ƒ gÄ• vo niyyÄ• tehi.

gamissanti \Be II 133/ bhante gÄ• vo vacchagiddhiniyo.

kiá¹ƒsukopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 134/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒsukopamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthu
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ k
Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. aÃ±Ã±ataro bhante kÄ• rako bhikkhu cattÄ• ro khÄ• á¹‡Ä• save bh Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanavisuddhaá¹ƒ pucchitvÄ• asantuá¹-á¹-ho tesaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ paÃ±hÄ bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kami. upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kittÄ• vatÄ• dassanaá¹ƒ suvisuddhaá¹ƒ hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhu adiá¹-á¹-hapubbo assa, so yenaÃ±Ã±ataro puriso kiá¹ƒsukassa dassÄ• vÄ« tenupasaá¹…ka bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

chappÄ• á¹‡akopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 140/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ chappÄ• á¹‡akopamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ± __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesuyeva bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``seyyathÄ• pi, bh pakkagatto saravanaá¹ƒ paviseyyÄ• â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 141/ tattha bhagavatÄ• asaá¹ƒvaro vitthÄ• rena v __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±ca bhikkhave asaá¹ƒvaro hoti, idha bhikkhave bhikkhu cakkhun piyarÅ«pe rÅ«pe adhimuccati, appiyarÅ«pe rÅ«pe byÄ• pajjati, anupaá¹-á¹-hitakÄ• yassati c parittacetaso. taÃ±ca cetovimuttiá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• vimuttiá¹ƒ yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ nappajÄ• nÄ• t pÄ• pakÄ• akusalÄ• dhammÄ• aparisesÄ• nirujjhantÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagava vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• desito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 143/ tattha bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒvaro vibhajitvÄ• vitt __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±ca bhikkhave saá¹ƒvaro hoti, idha bhikkhave bhikkhu cakkhunÄ piyarÅ«pe rÅ«pe nÄ• dhimuccati, appiyarÅ«pe rÅ«pe na byÄ• pajjatÄ«ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• \Be tattha saá¹ƒvaro vibhajitvÄ• vitthÄ• rena desito.

vedanÄ• saá¹ƒyutta

daá¹-á¹-habbasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 147/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena vedan daá¹-á¹-habbasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me sambahule bhikk bhikkhave vedanÄ• . katamÄ• tisso, sukhÄ• vedanÄ• dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• adukkhamasukh vedanÄ• dukkhato daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• , dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• sallato daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• , adukkham daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sukhÄ• \Be II 148/ bhikkhave vedanÄ• dukkhato daá¹-á¹-habbÄ• .

yo sukhaá¹ƒ dukkhato addasa, dukkhamaddakkhi sallato.

adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ santaá¹ƒ, addakkhinaá¹ƒ aniccato ||

sa ve sammaddaso bhikkhu, parijÄ• nÄ• ti vedanÄ• .

so vedanÄ• pariÃ±Ã±Ä• ya, diá¹-á¹-he dhamme anÄ• savo.

kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• dhammaá¹-á¹-ho, saá¹…khyaá¹ƒ nopeti vedagÅ« ||

sallasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 149/ Ä• vuso chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sallasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• katt
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me sambahule bhikk bhikkhave puthujjano sukhampi vedanaá¹ƒ vedayati, dukkhampi vedanaá¹ƒ vedayati, adukk vedayati. sutavÄ• bhikkhave ariyasÄ• vako sukhampi vedanaá¹ƒ vedayati, dukkhampi veda adukkhamasukhampi vedanaá¹ƒ vedayati. tatra bhikkhave ko viseso, ko adhippayÄ• so, kiá sutavato ariyabhÄ• vakassa assutavatÄ• puthujjanenÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagav

jambukhÄ• dakasaá¹ƒyutta

nibbÄ• napaÃ±hÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ jambukhÄ• dakasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 154/ Ä• vuso paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• napa Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ magadhesu bhante nÄ• lakagÄ• make jambukhÄ• dakaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• ja
sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. jambukhÄ• dako bhante paribbÄ• sÄ• riputtaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ nibbÄ• nanti Ä• vuso sÄ• riputta vuccati, katamaá¹ nibbÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yo \Be II 155/ kho Ä• vuso rÄ• gakk mohakkhayo, idaá¹ƒ vuccati nibbÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputta
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

dhammavÄ• dÄ«paÃ±hÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 157/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ dhammavÄ• dÄ«paÃ±hÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthus
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ magadhesuyeva bhante nÄ• lakagÄ• me jambukhÄ• dakaá¹ƒ paribbÄ•
sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. jambukhÄ• dako bhante paribbÄ• sÄ• riputtaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ke nu kho Ä• vuso sÄ• riputta loke dhammavÄ• dino, ke loke sup sugatÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``ye kho Ä• vuso rÄ• gappahÄ• nÄ• ya dosappahÄ• nÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ desenti, mohappahÄ• nÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ desenti. te loke evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ke \Be II 158/ loke suppaá¹-ipannÄ• .

ke loke sugatÄ• .

dukkarapaÃ±hÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 161/ porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• haka mahÄ• thereh saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ dukkarapaÃ±hÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ker __vissajjanÄ• --- _ magadhesuyeva nÄ• lakagÄ• me jambukhÄ• dakaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ

sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. jambukhÄ• dako bhante paribbÄ• sÄ• riputtaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kiá¹ƒ nu kho Ä• vuso sÄ• riputta imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye dukk bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``pabbajjÄ• kho Ä• vuso imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye dukkarÄ• â€™â€™ sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

moggallÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutta

sakkasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ moggallÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 163/ Ä• vuso dasamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ sa Ä• rabbha kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ devesu bhante tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsesu sakkaá¹ƒ devÄ• namindaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha buddhasaraá¹‡agamanaá¹ƒ hoti, buddhasaraá¹‡agamanahetu kho devÄ• naminda \Be II 16
kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjantÄ«â€™â€™ Ä• yasmatÄ• mahÄ• moggallÄ• nattherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cittasaá¹ƒyutta

nigaá¹‡á¹-hanÄ• á¹-aputtasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cittasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 168/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• haka aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-hanÄ• á¹-aputtasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ macchikÄ• saá¹‡á¸• e bhante nigaá¹‡á¹-haá¹ƒ nÄ• á¹-aputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabl bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. nigaá¹‡á¹-ho bhante nÄ• á¹-aputto cittaá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ etadavoca ``saddahas samaá¹‡assa gotamassa atthi avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi, atthi vitakkavicÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ ni bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``na khvÄ• haá¹ƒ ettha bhante bhagavato saddhÄ• ya gacchÄ• mi, atth samÄ• dhi, atthi vitakkavicÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ nirodhoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• cittena gahapatin

idaá¹ƒ \Be II 169/ bhavanto passantu.

yÄ• va ujuko cÄ• yaá¹ƒ citto gahapati.

``ahaá¹ƒ \Be II 170/ kho bhante yÄ• vadeva Ä• kaá¹…khÄ• mi, vivicceva kÄ• mehi vivicca a savitakkaá¹ƒ savicÄ• raá¹ƒ vivekajaá¹ƒ pÄ«tisukhaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampaj

idaá¹ƒ \Be II 171/ bhavanto passantu.

acelakassapasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 172/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ acelakassapasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena k __vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattheva bhante macchikÄ• saá¹‡á¸• e acelaá¹ƒ kassapaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. acelo bhante kassapo cittaá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ etadavoca ``imehi pana te gahapat vassehi atthi koci uttarimanussadhammo alamariyaÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanaviseso adhigato phÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``gihinopi siyÄ• bhante ahaÃ±hi bhante yÄ• vadeva Ä• kaá¹.

vivicca akusalehi dhammehi savitakkaá¹ƒ savicÄ• raá¹ƒ vivekajaá¹ƒ pÄ«tisukhaá¹ƒ paá¹-ha upasampajja viharÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• cittena gahapatinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

gÄ• maá¹‡isaá¹ƒyutta

caá¹‡á¸• asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 175/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena gÄ• m paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ caá¹‡á¸• asuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 176/ bhante caá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ gÄ• maá¹‡iá¹ƒ Ä• rabb caá¹‡á¸• o bhante gÄ• maá¹‡i bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ko nu kho bhante hetu ko paccay caá¹‡á¸• o caá¹‡á¸• otveva saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gacchati. ko pana bhante hetu ko paccayo, yena n soratotveva saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``idha gÄ• n appahÄ«no hoti, rÄ• gassa appahÄ«nattÄ• pare kopenti, parehi kopiyamÄ• no kopaá¹ƒ pÄ• saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

khettÅ«pamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 178/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ khettÅ«pamasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ nÄ• á¸·andÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante pÄ• vÄ• rikambavane asibandhakaputtaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. asibandhakaputto bhante gÄ• maá¹‡i bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``nanu bhante sabbapÄ• á¹‡abhÅ«tahitÄ• nukampÄ« viharatÄ«ti. evaá¹ƒ gÄ• maá¹‡i tathÄ• gato sabbapÄ viharatÄ«ti. atha kiÃ±carahi bhante bhagavÄ• ekaccÄ• naá¹ƒ sakkaccaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ des \Be II 179/ sakkaccaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ desetÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``te taÃ±Ã±evettha paá¹-ipucchissÄ• mi, yathÄ• te khameyya, tathÄ• naá¹ƒ byÄ• kareyyÄ• sÄ«

bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

saá¹…khadhamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 183/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• haka mahÄ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ saá¹…khadhamasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vattl
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ nÄ• á¸·andÄ• yaá¹ƒyeva bhante pÄ• vÄ• rikambavane asibandhakaput nigaá¹‡á¹-hasÄ• vakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. bhagavÄ• bhante asibandhakaputtaá¹ƒ g nigaá¹‡á¹-hasÄ• vakaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kathaá¹ƒ nu kho gÄ• maá¹‡i nigaá¹‡á¹-ho nÄ• á¹-apu desetÄ«â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante nigaá¹‡á¹-ho nÄ• á¹-aputto sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ dhamr pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atipÄ• teti, sabbo so Ä• pÄ• yiko nerayiko. (peyyÄ• la) yaá¹ƒbahulaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒba tena nÄ«yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yaá¹ƒbahulaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒbahulaÃ±c tena nÄ«yati, evaá¹ƒ sante na koci Ä• pÄ• yiko nerayiko bhavissati, yathÄ• nigaá¹‡á¹-hassa vacanaâ€™â€™ nti evaá¹ƒ kho bhagavatÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ bahulavÄ• da

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 185/ tattha bhagavatÄ• yaá¹ƒbahulavÄ• de doso __vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi gÄ• maá¹‡i, yo so puriso pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ« ra samayÄ• samayaá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya katamo bahutaro samayo yaá¹ƒ vÄ• so pÄ• á¹‡amatipÄ• nÄ• tipÄ• tetÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• asibandhakaá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-hanÄ gÄ• maá¹‡iá¹ƒ pucchitvÄ• pucchitvÄ• yaá¹ƒbahulavÄ• de doso pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 188/ tattha bhagavatÄ• anekaá¹ƒsa vipÄ• kakam doso pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha gÄ• maá¹‡i ekacco satthÄ• evaá¹ƒvÄ• dÄ« hoti evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hi y pÄ• á¹‡amatipÄ• teti, sabbo so Ä• pÄ• yiko nerayikoti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagava kammavipÄ• kassa ekaá¹ƒsavipÄ• kavÄ• de doso vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 189/ tattha bhagavatÄ• yathÄ• dhammasÄ• sane __vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha \Be II 190/ pana gÄ• maá¹‡i tathÄ• gato loke uppajjati arahaá¹ƒ sa

vijjÄ• caraá¹‡asampanno sugato lokavidÅ« anuttaropurisa dammasÄ• rathi satthÄ• devama so anekapariyÄ• yena pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• taá¹ƒ garahati vigarahati. ``pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ• viran evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha yathÄ• dhammasÄ• sane guá¹‡o vitthÄ• retvÄ• p bhadrakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 193/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ bhadrakasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ mallesu bhante uruvelakappenÄ• ma mallÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame bhadrakaá¹ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. bhadrako bhante gÄ• maá¹‡i bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ• dhu me bhante samudayaÃ±ca atthaá¹…gamaÃ±ca desetÅ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``ah atÄ«tamaddhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha dukkhassa samudayaÃ±ca atthaá¹…gamaÃ±ca deseyyaá atÄ«tamaddhÄ• naâ€™ nti. tatra te siyÄ• kaá¹…khÄ• siyÄ• vimatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• d

sÄ• dhu \Be II 194/ me bhante bhagavÄ• dukkhassa

samudayaÃ±ca atthaá¹…gamaÃ±ca desetu ---

``taá¹ƒ \Be II 195/ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi gÄ• maá¹‡i, atthi uruvelakappe manussÄ• â€™â€™ --- rÄ• siyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 199/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena gÄ• m dvÄ• dasamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ rÄ• siyasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusm

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ mallesu bhante uruvelakappenÄ• ma mallÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame rÄ• siyaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. rÄ• siyo bhante gÄ• maá¹‡i bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadadoca \B `samaá¹‡o gotamo sabbaá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ garahati, sabbaá¹ƒ tamassiá¹ƒ lÅ«khajÄ«viá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒ upakkosatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. ye te bhante evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `samaá¹‡o gotamo sabbaá¹ƒ tapaá tapassiá¹ƒ lÅ«khajÄ«viá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒsena upavadati upakkosatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. kacci te bhante b na ca bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhÅ«tena abbhÄ• cikkhanti, dhammassa cÄ• nudhammaá¹ƒ byÄ• ka vatthusmiá¹ƒ ye te gÄ• maá¹‡i evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu ``samaá¹‡o gotamo sabbaá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ gara lÅ«khajÄ«viá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒsena upavadati upakkosatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ•

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 202/ tattha bhagavatÄ• garahitabbÄ• garahitabbÄ
vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tayo kho me gÄ• maá¹‡i kÄ• mabhogino santo saá¹ƒvijjamÄ• nÄ• loka gÄ• maá¹‡i ekacco kÄ• mabhogÄ« adhammena \Be II 203/ bhoge pariyesati sÄ• hasena, a sÄ• hasena na attÄ• naá¹ƒ sukheti na pÄ«á¹‡eti, na saá¹ƒvibhajati na puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni karotÄ« tattha bhagavatÄ• garahitabbÄ• garahitabbÄ• kÄ• mabhogino vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pak

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 207/ tattha bhagavatÄ• garahitabbÄ• garahitabbÄ
vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tayo me gÄ• maá¹‡i tapassino lÅ«khajÄ«vino santo saá¹ƒvijjamÄ• nÄ• idha gÄ• maá¹‡Ä« ekacco tapassÄ« lÅ«khajÄ«vÄ« saddhÄ• agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ adhigaccheyyaá¹ƒ, appeva nÄ• ma uttarimanussadhammÄ• alamar sacchikareyyaâ€™â€™ nti, so attÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• tÄ• peti paritÄ• peti, kusalaÃ±ca dhammaá¹ƒ manussadhammÄ• alamariyaÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanavisesaá¹ƒ na sacchikarotÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ garahitabbÄ• garahitabbÄ• tapassino lÅ«khajÄ«vino vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

abyÄ• katasaá¹ƒyutta

khemÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ abyÄ• katasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 209/ panÄ• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ khemÄ• suttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. kathaÃ±ca taá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• pi puna bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ antarÄ• ca bhante sÄ• vatthiá¹ƒ antarÄ• ca sÄ• ketaá¹ƒ toraá¹‡avatth rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha khemÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. rÄ• yena khemÄ• bhikkhunÄ« tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekamar nisinno kho bhante rÄ• jÄ• pasenadikosalo khemaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kiá¹ƒ nukh paraá¹ƒmaraá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``abyÄ• kataá¹ƒ kho etaá¹ƒ m tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• khemÄ• ya bhikkhuniyÄ• bhÄ• aparena samayena raÃ±Ã±Ä• pasenadikosalena puá¹-á¹-hena evameva puna bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ \Be II 211/ panayye nahoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• .

kutÅ«halasÄ• lÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 215/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ kutÅ«halasÄ• lÄ• suttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vat

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante vacchagottaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ•
bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``purimÄ• ni bho gotama divasÄ• sambahulÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• nÄ• titthiyÄ• naá¹ƒ samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakÄ• sannisinnÄ• naá¹ƒ sannipatitÄ• naá¹ƒ ayamantarakathÄ• udapÄ• dÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``alaÃ±hi te vaccha kaá¹…khituá¹ƒ, alaá¹ƒ vicikicchituá¹ƒ. kaá¹…khanÄ á¹-hÄ• ne vicikicchÄ• uppannÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• vaggasaá¹ƒyuttapÄ• á¸·i avijjÄ• vagga

upaá¸• á¸• hasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• vaggasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 219/ panÄ• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammas dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ upaá¸• á¸• hasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante sakkare nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante Ä• nandatthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``upaá¸• á¸• ha yadidaá¹ƒ kalyÄ• á¹‡amittatÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡asahÄ• yatÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡asampavaá¹…katÄ• â€™ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``mÄ• hevaá¹ƒ Ä• nanda, mÄ• hevaá¹ƒ Ä• nanda, sakalamevidaá¹ƒ Ä• nand kalyÄ• á¹‡amittatÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡asahÄ• yatÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡asampavaá¹…katÄ• â€™â€™ ti ev mamaá¹ƒ \Be II 220/ hi Ä• nanda kalyÄ• á¹‡amittaá¹ƒ Ä• gamma jÄ• tidhammÄ• sattÄ• jÄ

bojjhaá¹…gasaá¹ƒyutta

kuá¹‡á¸• aliyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bojjhaá¹…gasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 221/ panÄ• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasa chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ kuá¹‡á¸• aliyasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• kete bhante aÃ±janavane migadÄ• ye kuá¹‡á¸• aliyaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• ja
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. kuá¹‡á¸• aliyo bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``aha

Ä• rÄ• manissayÄ« parisÄ• vacaro, tassa mayhaá¹ƒ bho gotama pacchÄ• bhattaá¹ƒ bhuttap Ä• rÄ• mena Ä• rÄ• maá¹ƒ uyyÄ• nena uyyÄ• naá¹ƒ anucaá¹…kamÄ• mi anuvicarÄ• mi, so samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡e itivÄ• dappamokkhÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaÃ±ceva kathaá¹ƒ kathante upÄ• ra pana gotamo kimÄ• nisaá¹ƒso viharatÄ«â€™â€™ ti etaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ avoca. tasmiá¹ƒ bhar ``vijjÄ• vimuttiphalÄ• nisaá¹ƒso \Be II 222/ kho kuá¹‡á¸• aliya tathÄ• gato viharatÄ«â€™â€™
bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paá¹-hama gilÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 224/ bhagavvatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambudd dutiye gilÄ• navagge paá¹-hamagilÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmi
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante pippaliguhÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• kassapa bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante mahÄ• kassapatthero pippaliguhÄ• yaá¹ƒ viharati Ä• bÄ• bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• no. atha kho bhante bhagavÄ• sÄ• yanhasamayaá¹ƒ paá¹-isallÄ• nÄ• vuá¹-mahÄ• kassapo tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• paÃ±Ã±atte Ä• sane nisÄ«di, nisaj mahÄ• kassapaá¹ƒ \Be II 225/ etadavoca --- ``kacci te kassapa khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci yÄ• vedanÄ• paá¹-ikkamanti no abhikkamanti, paá¹-ikkamosÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no abhikk khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ na yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, bÄ• á¸·hÄ• me dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• abhikkamanti no p paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no paá¹-ikkamoâ€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``sattime kassapa sammadakkhÄ• tÄ• bhÄ• vitÄ• bahulÄ«katÄ• abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sambodhÄ• ya nibbÄ• nÄ•
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

udÄ• yisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 227/ Ä• vuso tatiye udÄ• yivagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammas dasamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ udÄ• yisuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sumbhesu bhante setakenÄ• ma sumbhÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame Ä• yasmanta bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante udÄ• yitthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``accha bhante, yÄ• va bahukataÃ±ca me bhante bhagavati pemaÃ±ca gÄ• ravo ca hirÄ« ca ottapp vacanaá¹ƒ avoca. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``sÄ• dhu sÄ• dhu udÄ• yi eso hi te udÄ• y te bhÄ• vito bahulÄ«kato, tathÄ• tathÄ• viharantaá¹ƒ tathattÄ• ya upanessati, yathÄ• tvaá vusitaá¹ƒ brahmacariyaá¹ƒ, kataá¹ƒ karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ, nÄ• paraá¹ƒ itthattÄ• yÄ• â€™ ti pajÄ• evaá¹ƒ kho bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutta

satisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 230/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhamma dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ satisuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ kÄ• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• __vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante ambapÄ• livane sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ` vihareyya sampajÄ• no ayaá¹ƒ vo amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ anusÄ• sanÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• b

sÄ• lasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 232/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ sÄ• lasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante sÄ• lÄ• yanÄ• ma kesalÄ• naá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡agÄ• m ``ye te bhikkhave bhikkhÅ« navÄ• acirapabbajitÄ• adhunÄ• gatÄ• imaá¹ƒ dhammavinayaa catunnaá¹ƒ satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• vanÄ• ya samÄ• dapetabbÄ• nivesetabbÄ• pa
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sakuá¹‡agghisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 234/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ sakuá¹‡agghisuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ•

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``bhÅ«tapubba lÄ• paá¹ƒ sakuá¹‡aá¹ƒ sahasÄ• ajjhappattÄ• aggahesi. atha kho bhikkhave lÄ• po sakuá¹‡ hariyamÄ• no evaá¹ƒ paridevasi mayamevamha alakkhikÄ• , mayaá¹ƒ appapuÃ±Ã±Ä• , ye paravisaye, sacejja mayaá¹ƒ gocare careyyÄ• ma sake pettike visaye, na myÄ• haá¹ƒ saku yadidaá¹ƒ yuddhÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mayamevamha \Be II 235/ alakkhikÄ• , mayaá¹ƒ appapuÃ±Ã±Ä• .

ko pana te lÄ• pa gocaro sako pettiko visayo.

yadidaá¹ƒ naá¹…galakaá¹-á¹-hakaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ leá¸• á¸• uá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ.

ehi \Be II 236/ kho dÄ• ni me sakuá¹‡agghi, ehi kho dÄ• ni me sakuá¹‡agghi, (dÄ• ruguá¸·oviya vinivattitvÄ• tasseva leá¸• á¸• ussa antare paccupÄ• di. aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ•

evaÃ±hi taá¹ƒ bhikkhave hoti yo agocare carati paravisaye.

tasmÄ• tiha \Be II 237/ bhikkhave mÄ• agocare carittha paravisaye.

gocare bhikkhave caratha sake pettike visaye.

gocare bhikkhave carataá¹ƒ sake pettike visaye na lacchati mÄ• ro otÄ• raá¹ƒ, na lacchati r

bhikkhunupassayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 238/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ bhikkhunupassayasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha b bhante Ä• nando yÄ• vattako ahosi bhikkhunÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ kathÄ• sallÄ• po taá¹ƒ sabbaá tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``evametaá¹ƒ Ä• nanda, evametaá¹ƒ Ä• nanda, yohi koci Ä• r bhikkhunÄ« vÄ• catÅ«su satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nesu suppatiá¹-á¹-hitacitto viharati, tassetaá¹ƒ pÄ uá¸·Ä• raá¹ƒ pubbenÄ• paraá¹ƒ visesaá¹ƒ saÃ±jÄ• nissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bha

cundasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 242/ Ä• vuso dutiye nÄ• landavagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhamr tatiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ cundasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthu
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒyeva Ä• nandattheraá¹ƒ Ä• rabl bhante Ä• nandatthero cundena samaá¹‡uddesena saddhiá¹ƒ yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹.
bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ«di. ekamantaá¹ƒ nisinno kho bhante Ä• etadavoca ``ayaá¹ƒ bhante cundo samaá¹‡uddeso evamÄ• ha `Ä• yasmÄ• bhante sÄ• ripu pattacÄ«varaâ€™ nti. api ca me bhante madhurakajÄ• to viya kÄ• yo, disÄ• pi me na pakkh nappaá¹-ibhanti `Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputto parinibbutoâ€™ ti sutvÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bha nu kho te Ä• nanda sÄ• riputto sÄ«lakkhandhaá¹ƒ vÄ• Ä• dÄ• ya parinibbuto, samÄ• dhikk paÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhaá¹ƒvÄ• , vimuttikkhandhaá¹ƒvÄ• , vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanakkhandhaá ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ayaá¹ƒ \Be II 243/ bhante cundosamaá¹‡uddeso evamÄ• ha.

tasmÄ• tihÄ• nanda \Be II 245/ attadÄ«pÄ• viharatha attasaraá¹‡Ä• anaÃ±Ã±asaraá¹‡Ä• dhammasaraá¹‡Ä• anaÃ±Ã±asaraá¹‡Ä• .

bÄ• hiyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 246/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ bÄ• hiyasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si bÄ• hiyo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sÄ• dhu me bhante bhagavÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena dhamma bhagavato dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• eko vÅ«pakaá¹-á¹-ho appamatto Ä• tÄ• pÄ« pahitatto vihare bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``tasmÄ• tiha tvaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiya Ä• dimeva visodhehi kusalesu dhammes dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ, sÄ«laÃ±ca suvisuddhaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hica ujukÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ•

sÄ«laá¹-á¹-hitivagga

ciraá¹-á¹-hitisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 248/ Ä• vuso tatiye sÄ«laá¹-á¹-hitivagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• therehi dutiyaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ ciraá¹-á¹-hitisuttaá¹ƒ kattha vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ pÄ• á¹-aliputte bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ bhaddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasma dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante bhaddo sÄ• yanhasama yenÄ• yasmÄ• Ä• nando tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nand Ä• nanda hetu ko paccayo, yena tathÄ• gate parinibbute saddhammo na ciraá¹-á¹-hitiko hot hetu ko paccayo, yena tathÄ• gate parinibbute saddhammo ciraá¹-á¹-hitiko hotÄ«â€™â€™ t vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``sÄ• dhu sÄ• dhu Ä• vuso bhadda, bhaddako kho te Ä• vuso bhadda ummaá Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

bhaddako \Be II 249/ te Ä• vuso bhadda ummaá¹…go.

``catunnaá¹ƒ \Be II 250/ kho Ä• vuso satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ abhÄ• vitattÄ• abahulÄ«ka parinibbute saddhammo na ciraá¹-á¹-hitiko hotÄ«â€™â€™ --- sirivaá¸• á¸• hasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tassÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa pÄ• vacanasa mahÄ• vaggapÄ• á¸·iyÄ• satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutte sÄ«laá¹-á¹-hitivagge navamaá¹ƒ siri kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sirivaá¸• á¸• haá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasma dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sirivaá¸• á¸• ho bhante gahapati Ä• bÄ• dhik bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• no. athakho bhante Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando yenasirivaá¸• á¸• hassa gahapatis tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• paÃ±Ã±atte Ä• sane nisÄ«di \Be II 251/. nisajja kho sirivaá¸• á¸• haá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kacci te gahapati khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci yÄ• pa vedanÄ• paá¹-ikkamanti no abhikkamanti, paá¹-ikkamosÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no abhikka khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, na yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, bÄ• á¸·hÄ• me dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• abhikkamanti no abhikkamosÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no paá¹-ikkamoâ€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmi evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ `kÄ• ye kÄ• yÄ• nupassÄ« viharissÄ• mi Ä• tÄ• pÄ« sampajÄ• no sa domanassaá¹ƒ. vedanÄ• su. citte. dhammesu dhammÄ• nupassÄ« viharissÄ• mi Ä• tÄ• pÄ abhijjhÄ• domanassaâ€™ nti. evaÃ±hi te gahapati sikkhitabbaâ€™â€™ nti. evaá¹ƒ kho Ä• dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

iddhipÄ• dasaá¹ƒyutta

moggallÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ iddhipÄ• dasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 254/ Ä• vuso catutthaá¹ƒ moggallÄ• nasuttaá
kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sa heá¹-á¹-hÄ• migÄ• ramÄ• tupÄ• sÄ• de viharanti uddhatÄ• unnaá¸·Ä• capalÄ• mukharÄ•
muá¹-á¹-hassatino asampajÄ• nÄ• asamÄ• hitÄ• bhantacittÄ• pÄ• katindriyÄ• . tasmiá¹ƒ b Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• moggallÄ• naá¹ƒ te bhikkhÅ« saá¹ƒvejetvÄ• ``kiá¹ƒ nu tumhe bhikk lomahaá¹-á¹-hajÄ• tÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ á¹-hitÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• acchariyaá¹ƒ \Be II 256/ vata bho, abbhutaá¹ƒ vata bho.

nivÄ• taÃ±ca vata.

ayaÃ±ca migÄ• ramÄ• tupÄ• sÄ• do gambhÄ«ranemo.

tumheva \Be II 257/ kho bhikkhave saá¹ƒvejetukÄ• mena moggallÄ• nena bhikkhunÄ• pÄ• migÄ• ramÄ• tupÄ• sÄ• do saá¹…kampito sampakampito sampadhÄ• lito.

taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, katamesaá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• vitattÄ• bahulÄ«k evaá¹ƒ mahiddhiko evaá¹ƒ mahÄ• nubhÄ• vo.

anuruddhasaá¹ƒyutta

bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anuruddhasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 259/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ bÄ• á¸·haginÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ke __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• a bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sambahulÄ• bhante bhikkhÅ« Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ anuruddhaá¹ƒ Ä• bÄ• dhikaá¹ bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• naá¹ƒ etadavocuá¹ƒ ``katamenÄ• yasmato anuruddhassa vihÄ• rena viharat dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• cittaá¹ƒ na pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante va me Ä• vuso satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nesu suppatiá¹-á¹-hitacittassa viharato uppannÄ• sÄ• rÄ«rikÄ• na pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmatÄ• anuruddhatthere

Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutta

mahÄ• kappinasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 261/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá sattamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ mahÄ• kappinasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kat __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``passatha no t bhikkhuno kÄ• yassa iÃ±jitattaá¹ƒ vÄ• phanditabbaá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bha

icchÄ• naá¹…galasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 263/ Ä• vuso dutiyavagge paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ icchÄ• naá¹…gala kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ icchÄ• naá¹…gale bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``sace kho b paribbÄ• jakÄ• evaá¹ƒ puccheyyuá¹ƒ `katame nÄ• vuso vihÄ• rena samaá¹‡o gotamo vass vihÄ• sÄ«â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ puá¹-á¹-hÄ• tumhe bhikkhave tesaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±atitthiyÄ• naá¹ƒ parib byÄ• kareyyÄ• tha Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nassatisamÄ• dhinÄ• kho Ä• vuso bhagavÄ• vassÄ• vÄ• s

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sotÄ• pattisaá¹ƒyutta

cakkavattirÄ• jasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sotÄ• pattisaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 266/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ cakkavattirÄ• jasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``kiÃ±cÄ• pi bh cakkavattÄ« catunnaá¹ƒ dÄ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ issariyÄ• dhipaccaá¹ƒ rajjaá¹ƒ kÄ• retvÄ• kÄ• yass sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjati devÄ• naá¹ƒ tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsÄ• naá¹ƒ sahabyataá¹ƒ, so t accharÄ• saá¹…ghaparivuto dibbehi ca paÃ±cahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehi samappito samaá¹…gÄ« dhammehi asamannÄ• gato, atha kho so aparimuttova nirayÄ• , aparimutto tiracchÄ• nayon pettivisayÄ• , aparimutto apÄ• yaduggativinipÄ• tÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhag

dÄ«ghÄ• vu upÄ• sakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 268/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ dÄ«ghÄ• vuupÄ• sakasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be II 269/ bhante dÄ«ghÄ• vuá¹ƒ upÄ• sakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante dÄ«ghÄ• vuá¹ƒ upÄ• sakaá¹ƒ Ä• bÄ• dhikaá¹ƒ dukkhitaá¹ƒ bÄ• á¸·hagilÄ• naá¹ƒ eta khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• paá¹-ikkamanti no abhikk paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no abhikkamoâ€™â€™ ti. na me bhante khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, na yÄ• panÄ«yaá abhikkamanti no paá¹-ikkamanti, abhikkamosÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati no paá¹-ikkamoti. tasm ``tasmÄ• tiha te dÄ«ghÄ• vu evaá¹ƒ sikkhitabbaá¹ƒ buddhe aveccappasÄ• dena samannÄ•
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yÄ• nimÄ• ni \Be II 271/ bhante bhagavatÄ• cattÄ• ri sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gÄ• ni desitÄ• ni, sa mayi --- tasmÄ• tiha tvaá¹ƒ dÄ«ghÄ• vu imesu catÅ«su sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gesu patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya cha uttari bhÄ• veyyÄ• si --- mÄ• \Be II 272/ tvaá¹ƒ tÄ• ta dÄ«ghÄ• vu evaá¹ƒ manasÄ• kÄ• si.

iá¹…gha tvaá¹ƒ tÄ• ta dÄ«ghÄ• vu yadeva te bhagavÄ• Ä• ha, tadeva tvaá¹ƒ sÄ• dhukaá¹ paá¹‡á¸• ito \Be II 273/ bhikkhave dÄ«ghÄ• vu upÄ• sako.

paccapÄ• di dhammassÄ• nudhammaá¹ƒ.

na \Be II 274/ ca maá¹ƒ dhammÄ• dhikaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ viheá¹-hesi.

dÄ«ghÄ• vu bhikkhave upÄ• sako paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ orambhÄ• giyÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá parinibbÄ• yÄ« anÄ• vattidhammo tasmÄ• lokÄ• .

veá¸·udvÄ• reyyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena sotÄ• pattisaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ veá¸·udvÄ• reyyasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kat __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante veá¸·udvÄ• re nÄ• ma kosalÄ• naá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡a gA brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatike Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

veá¸·udvÄ• reyyakÄ• \Be II 275/ bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadav evaá¹ƒkÄ• mÄ• evaá¹ƒchandÄ• evaá¹ƒadhippÄ• yÄ• puttasambÄ• dhasayanaá¹ƒ ajjhÄ• v jÄ• tarÅ«parajataá¹ƒ sÄ• diyeyyÄ• ma, kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• sugatiá¹ƒ sa upapajjeyyÄ• ma, tesaá¹ƒ no bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒkÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒadhippÄ• yÄ• naá¹ƒ tathÄ• dammaá¹ƒ desetu, yathÄ• mayaá¹ƒ puttasambÄ• dhasa
... kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjeyyÄ• mÄ• â€ vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``attÅ«panÄ• yikaá¹ƒ vo gahapatayo dhammapariyÄ• yaá¹ƒ desessÄ• mi, taá¹ manasi karotha, bhÄ• sissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

saraá¹‡Ä• nivagga

paá¹-hama mahÄ• nÄ• masutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 280/ Ä• vuso tatiye saraá¹‡Ä• nivagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• therehi paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-hamamahÄ• nÄ•
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu \Be II 281/ bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me mahÄ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mahÄ• nÄ• mo bhante sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``idaá¹ƒ bh phÄ«taÃ±ca bÄ• hujaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ Ä• kiá¹‡á¹‡amanussaá¹ƒ sambÄ• dhabyÅ«haá¹ƒ, so khvÄ• payirupÄ• sitvÄ• manobhÄ• vanÄ«ye vÄ• bhikkhÅ« sÄ• yanhasamayaá¹ƒ kapilavatthuá¹ƒ samÄ• gacchÄ• mi, bhantenapi assena samÄ• gacchÄ• mi, bhantenapi rathena samÄ• gac samÄ• gacchÄ• mi, bhantenapi purisena samÄ• gacchÄ• mi, tassa mayhaá¹ƒ bhante tasmi bhagavantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha sati, mussati dhammaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha sati, mussati saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ Ä mayhaá¹ƒ bhante evaá¹ƒ hoti imamhi cÄ• haá¹ƒ samaye kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyaá¹ƒ, kÄ• mayha abhisamparÄ• yoâ€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``mÄ• bhÄ• yi mahÄ• nÄ• ma, apÄ• pakaá¹ƒ te maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavissati apÄ• pikÄ• kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ•

dutiya saraá¹‡Ä• nisakkasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 284/ Ä• vuso dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ• therehi paÃ±ca dutiyasaraá¹‡Ä• nisakkasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me mahÄ• nÄ• maá¹

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• nÄ• mo bhante sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``idha bhante saraá¹‡Ä• ni sakko k byÄ• kato `sotÄ• panno avinipÄ• tadhammo niyato sambodhiparÄ• yaá¹‡oâ€™ ti. tatra suda saá¹…gamma samÄ• gamma ujjhÄ• yanti khÄ«yanti vipÄ• centi `acchariyaá¹ƒ vata bho, abh

bho \Be II 285/, ettha dÄ• ni ko na sotÄ• panno bhavissati, yatra hi nÄ• ma saraá¹‡Ä• ni sa bhagavatÄ• byÄ• kato `sotÄ• panno avinipÄ• tadhammo niyato sambodhiparÄ• yaá¹‡oâ€™ aparipÅ«rakÄ• rÄ« ahosÄ«â€™â€™ ti tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yo so mahÄ• nÄ• ma buddhaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gato, dhammaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gato, saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gato gaccheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paá¹-hama anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 289/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaanÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vat
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikaá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• yasmÄ• bhbhante sÄ• riputtatthero Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena pacchÄ• samaá¹‡e anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikassa gahapatissa nivesanaá¹ƒ tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• p nisajja kho Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputto anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikaá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• bÄ• dhikaá¹ƒ du etadavoca ``kacci te gahapati khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kacci yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci dukkhÄ• veda abhikkamanti, paá¹-ikkamosÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati, no abhikkamoâ€™â€™ ti, na me bha yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, bÄ• á¸·hÄ• me dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• abhikkamanti, no paá¹-ikkamanti, abhi no paá¹-ikkamoti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yathÄ• rÅ«pena kho gahapati buddhe ap assutavÄ• puthujjano kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• apÄ• yaá¹ƒ duggatiá¹ƒ vinip tathÄ• rÅ«po te buddhe appasÄ• do natthi, atthi ca kho te gahapati buddhe aveccappasÄ• d arahaá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambuddho ... pe ... bhagavÄ• â€™ ti taÃ±ca pana te buddhe aveccapp samanupassato á¹-hÄ• naso vedanÄ• paá¹-ippassambheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

yassa \Be II 293/ saddhÄ• tathÄ• gate, acalÄ• suppatiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

sÄ«laÃ±ca yassa kalyÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, ariyakantaá¹ƒ pasaá¹ƒsitaá¹ƒ ||

saá¹…ghe pasÄ• do yassatthi, ujubhÅ«taÃ±ca dassanaá¹ƒ.

adaliddoti taá¹ƒ Ä• hu, amoghaá¹ƒ tassa jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ ||

tasmÄ• saddhaÃ±ca sÄ«laÃ±ca, pasÄ• daá¹ƒ dhammadassanaá¹ƒ.

anuyuÃ±jetha medhÄ• vÄ«, saraá¹ƒ buddhÄ• nasÄ• sanaá¹ƒ ||

puÃ±Ã±Ä• bhisandavagga

mahÄ• nÄ• masutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva Ä• vuso puÃ±Ã±Ä• bhisandavaggo porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ mahÄ• nÄ• masuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthu __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu \Be II 294/ bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ mahÄ• nÄ• maá¹ƒ sakka

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• nÄ• mo bhante sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kittÄ• vatÄ• nu kho bhante upÄ• bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yato kho mahÄ• nÄ• ma buddhaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gato hoti, dhammaá saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gato hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kittÄ• vatÄ• nu kho bhante upÄ• sako hoti.

kÄ• á¸·igodhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 297/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ kÄ• á¸·igodhasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ kÄ• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bhÄ __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kÄ• á¸·igodhaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma sÄ• kiyÄ• niá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha `` samannÄ• gatÄ• ariyasÄ• vikÄ• sotÄ• pannÄ• hoti avinipÄ• tadhammÄ• niyatÄ• sambo

evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

lÄ• bhÄ• \Be II 300/ te godhe, suladdhaá¹ƒ te godhe, sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ tayÄ• godhe ---

á¹• !4 nandiyasakkasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena sotÄ• pattisaá¹ƒyu dasamaá¹ƒ nandiyasakkasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ kathaÃ±ca

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ nigrodhÄ• rÄ• me nandiyaá¹ƒ sakk bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. nandiyo bhante sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``yasseva nu kho bhante ari sotÄ• pattiyaá¹…gÄ• ni sabbena sabbaá¹ƒ sabbathÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ natthi, sveva nu kho bhant pamÄ• davihÄ• rÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ ``yassa kho nandiya cattÄ• r sabbenasabbaá¹ƒ sabbathÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ natthi, tamahaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiro puthujjanapakkhe á¹-hit
evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

saccasaá¹ƒyutta

tiracchÄ• nakathÄ• sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ saccasaá¹ƒyutte \Be II 304/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• ya saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ tiracchÄ• nakathÄ• suttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha mÄ• bhikkhav tiracchÄ• nakathaá¹ƒ katheyyÄ• tha. seyyathidaá¹ƒ, rÄ• jakathaá¹ƒ corakathaá¹ƒ mahÄ• m bhayakathaá¹ƒ yuddhakathaá¹ƒ annakathaá¹ƒ pÄ• nakathaá¹ƒ vatthakathaá¹ƒ sayanakath

bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

idaá¹ƒ \Be II 305/ dukkhanti katheyyÄ• tha.

tasmÄ• tiha \Be II 306/ bhikkhave idaá¹ƒ dukkhanti yogo karaá¹‡Ä«yo ... pe ... ayaá¹ƒ dukk paá¹-ipadÄ• ti yogo karaá¹‡Ä«yo.

dhammacakkapavattanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva Ä• vuso dhammacakkappavattanavagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhamma paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ dhammacakkapavattanasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asiyaá¹ƒ bhante isipatane migadÄ• ye paÃ±cavaggiye bhik bhikkhave antÄ• pabbajitena nasevitabbÄ• . katame dve, yo cÄ• yaá¹ƒ kÄ• mesu kÄ• masu pothujjaniko anariyo anatthasaá¹ƒhito, yo cÄ• yaá¹ƒ attakilamathÄ• nuyogo \Be II 307/ dukk anatthasaá¹ƒhito, ete kho bhikkhave ubho ante anupagamma majjhimÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• tathÄ abhisambuddhÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• savakkhayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 308/ Ä• vuso koá¹-igÄ• mavagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammas paÃ±camaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ Ä• savakkhayasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``jÄ• natohaá¹ƒ Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khayaá¹ƒ vadÄ• mi, no ajÄ• nato apassato. kiÃ±ca bhikkhave jÄ• nato pass idaá¹ƒ dukkhanti bhikkhave jÄ• nato passato Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khayo hoti, ayaá¹ƒ dukkhasam dukkhanirodhoti, ayaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhagÄ• minÄ«paá¹-ipadÄ• ti jÄ• nato passato Ä• savÄ• bhikkhave jÄ• nato evaá¹ƒ passato Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khayo hoti. tasmÄ• tiha bhikkhave ``idaá karaá¹‡Ä«yo, ayaá¹ƒ dukkhasamudayoti, ayaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhoti, ayaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhagÄ karaá¹‡Ä«yoâ€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ kho bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sÄ«sapÄ• vanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 309/ Ä• vuso sÄ«sapÄ• vanavagge porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhamm paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ«taá¹ƒ sÄ«sapÄ• vanasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha __vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 310/ bhante sÄ«sapÄ• vane sambahule bhikkhÅ« .

maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, katamaá¹ƒ nukho bahutaraá¹ƒ yÄ• ni vÄ• mayÄ• parittÄ• ni sÄ«s gahitÄ• ni yadidaá¹ƒ upari sÄ«sapÄ• vaneâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sita

paÃ±cagatipeyyÄ• lavagga

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattheva \Be II 312/ Ä• vuso porÄ• á¹‡akehi dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakamahÄ
saá¹ƒgÄ«to paÃ±cagatipeyyÄ• lavagge, bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaÃ±ca bh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ

katamaá¹ƒ nu kho bahutaraá¹ƒ, yo vÄ• yaá¹ƒ mayÄ• paritto nakhasikhÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹ƒsu Ä• mahÄ• pathavÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavatÄ• bhÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ ke \Be II 315/ Ä• vuso sikkhanti.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sekkhÄ• ca bhante puthujjanakalyÄ• á¹‡akÄ• ca sikkhanti.

__pucchÄ• --- _ ke \Be II 316/ Ä• vuso sikkhitasikkhÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ arahanto bhante sikkhitasikkhÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kattha Ä• vuso á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sikkhÄ• kÄ• mesu bhante á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ ke Ä• vuso dhÄ• renti.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ yesaá¹ƒ bhante vattati te dhÄ• renti.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kassa \Be II 317/ Ä• vuso vacanaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bhagavato bhante vacanaá¹ƒ arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kena Ä• vuso Ä• bhataá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paramparÄ• ya bhante Ä• bhataá¹ƒ.

Sadhana !

For those who want to seriously practice kriyas, it is time to formulate a specific sadhana. Sadhana means "endeavoring to obtain a particular result." The result kriyabans seek is accelerated spiritual evolution. Sadhana becomes a powerful method to achieve this result. There are three important aspects of sadhana: choice, commitment and aspiration.

The first stage of sadhana is to choose a practice. Even the most simple sadhana will be challenging to the newcomer. Consider the sadhana of lighting a candle every night, then immediately blowing it out. Nothing more or nothing less. Do this for ninety days. You will observe the mind coming up with every reason why you shouldn't do it and every excuse why you missed a few (or many) nights. Yet by accepting it as a sadhana, you make a choice to do it and it becomes a spiritual practice.

The second aspect of sadhana relates to regularity -- doing something at periodic intervals. This typically would be at the same time in the same place everyday. Yet it doesn't have to be everyday; it could be every other day or every Tuesday and Thursday, as long as it is regular. Doing practice irregularly is not sadhana. Once the schedule is selected, the challenge of sadhana is to stick with it -- not to miss the appointed time. This is the first measure of commitment. The second measure is to make a commitment for a specific period of time; that is, choose do the practice for thirty days, sixty days, ninety days, or even 108 days. Notice the level of your success, then take a break. Decide upon another practice (or the same one) and make another commitment.

Yet choice and regularity are not the only aspects of sadhana. If they were, simply dressing every day would be a sadhana. We choose what clothes to wear and we do it. Dressing could be a sadhana, yet it is just a mechanical action done every day. Thus, the final key to a successful sadhana is conscious intention. This is where the power is generated, and more still, when the intention becomes an aspiration.

When I first started my sadhana, I chose a simple action, that of the yogic practice of "neti", the washing of the nostrils with water. I had been doing yoga for many years but never as a sadhana. I had even been doing kriya practice for about a year, but never as a sadhana. I chose "neti" because every morning I took a shower in a typically mechanical way. Since I was immersed in streams of water, it became a convenient place and time to remember to do "neti". Besides, snorting water is one good way to shock the mechanism awake. For this to be a sadhana, however -- rather than just another cleansing action like washing behind the ears -- intention was necessary. The one I chose, the one I still employ in all the practices of my sadhana today, is represented by the simple statement: "This is all I have to do to evolve spiritually." Other variations included: "This is the only practice I must do to spiritually grow." "This is the only act that I need to do to develop as a spiritual being." With those words not only was an intention created around the practice, but an aspiration. For one moment each day, I became consciously aware of having a spiritual goal, of being a spiritual being.

Consider once again the candle exercise cited above. Initially, it will challenge the mind and the ego. The spiritual "you" may even win the battle, but to keep it from becoming mechanical, an intention is required. Try this variation. Light the candle. Say, "This is all I have to do for the benefit of self, other, and the world." Then blow out the candle. Doing no other practice than this will begin a transformation process that will alter your life. To add even more power behind it, consider this statement, "This is all I have to do to remember who I am; I remember this for the benefit of Self, Other, and the World."

One immediate result of sadhana is the remembrance of "who we are" rather than "what we are" during the brief moments the sadhana takes. Repetitively remembering our inner essence nature is at the heart of all spiritual growth. One day we will remember our spiritual essence in every moment. That is the realized state.

So start with a simple sadhana to build your confidence. Add another sadhana in addition to this one. Expand a sadhana to include many practices including yoga or other bodily movement, chanting or inner mantra, and kriya practice.

Copyright 1994, Alan Verdegraal, "Tantra: The Magazine", P.O.Box 108, Torreon, NM 87061, Issue #8, p22-23.

Transcribed with permission of the author.

----------[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.A 1991]----------A COMPLETE CATALOGUE
OFSAKYA LAM 'BRAS LITERATURE SERIEScompiled byLama Choedak T. Yuthokprivate
Chisholm, Canberra, ACT 2905, AustraliaThis documents appears as an appendix to a thes Yuthokentitled "The Origin of Lam'dre Tradition in India", Oct.1990, South & West AsiaCente
Asian Studies, Australian National University, Canberra ACT2601NOTE: Originally this docu MsWord 3 file using "ANUIndian" font tohandle diacritical marks.Lamdre represents one of t non-canonical literatures of SakyaTibetan Buddhism. It generally covers esoteric teaching ofMahŒnuttara-yoga-tantra and Hevajra Tantra. The Lamdre literature is not onlythe grea evidence of the tradition but the greatest gift of itsmasters. While exact dates of the Indian not easy to determine,the preservation of their teachings in notes, manuscripts and stories h primary sources for the study of this 1400 year old tradition.The Lamdre texts are meditation practical manuals used by hundreds ofecclesiastics and lay practitioners of the Sakya traditi asacred and secret path which past great masters have trodden. Those who arefortunate e of Lamdre texts would treat them as most valuablething and they are taken wherever they m texts are known as"non-detachable" ['bral spaõs] for practitioners. Works on Lamdre contai history, hagiographies of the lineage masters, instructions onesoteric meditation practices o SŒdhana, numerous commentaries onHevajra Tantra, and related liturgies on rites and ritu Tantra.Traditionally these texts are only accessible to the faithful and fortunateinitiates, who allowed to practise the meanings of these texts.A brief account of the origin of the selective of Lamdre workswritten by scholars and Yogins during a period that spanned from the 7th to
C. E. will be useful. Generally the entire Lamdre literature canbe divided into six main divisi Expositons on Hevajra Tantra [góuõ b§ad].2. Classical Lamdre Manuscripts [lam 'bras glegs Hagiography of the Lineage Masters [bla ma brgyud pa'i rnam thar].4. Treatises on Commo [lam 'bras tshogs b§ad].5. Manuals on Uncommon Lamdre Teachings [lam 'bras slob b§ad].
Initiation Rites, Maº¶ala Rituals and Hevajra SŒdhana[dbaõ daõ dkyil chog sgrub thabs sk the expositions written by Lamdre masters and the like, there arenumerous Indian expositio rnam 'grel on Hevajra Tantra in theTibetan Buddhist canon. They are used and consulted w theLamdre tradition. The classical Lamdre manuscripts are pre-15th centuryscriptures extra expositions and oral instructions which arecompiled and edited, and named after the colour cloth excluding"Lamdre Blue Annals" [lam 'bras pod sõon]. Prior to 13th century, notes on t teachings were passed down from master to disciple and werecirculated in manuscript form when carving and production ofxylographic blocks began in Tibet, selected works were com inthe collected works of the five founding masters of Sakya [sa skya goõ ma lõa].Beside Vir Indian authors, the earliest Lamdre authors were sachen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158) and bsod nams rtse mo(1142-1182) and rje btsun grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216),whose wo their collected works [bka' 'bum]. This was then followed by saskya paº ¶i ta kun dga' rgyal r

(1182-1251/52) and his nephew 'gro mgonchos rgyal 'phags pa blo gros rgyal mtshan (1235
Lamdreare also found in their collected works. In spite of the inclusion of theLamdre works Masters in their collected works, the Lamdre literaturedid not become known until the emerg editions of extractedLamdre work(s) wrapped in different coloured clothes. The hagiographi lineage masters cover one third of the entire Lamdre literature. Thereare many works on La 'bums of Sakya masters which are notincluded in this edition. The success story of Sakyapa the13th to the 16th century and the glorification of individual scholars and Yoginshave led to compilation and creation of "Collected Works" [bka' 'bum].However the nature of the content being secret and esoteric didnot allow its disclosure through compilation and printing. There aself-imposed restriction on the disclosure of Tantric instructions in almostevery tradition. F óaõ ston chos 'bar advised Sachen not to writeor even talk to anyone about Lamdre practic years, and only afterthe lapse of time, did Sachen began to teach and write on Lamdre. Ou commentaries, which were in fact commentaries to the same root text [góuõrtsa ba rdo rje ts
'bras g–ags ma, being the last one of all andespecially because of its conciseness, was com with some notes andthey sealed and locked in a wooden trunk. Although it was originally kn ma," a name derived from the wooden trunk, its actual name is g–ags masince it was given dbaõ phyug dpal, not to be confused withg–ags s–iõ po rgyal mtshan, a disciple of tshogs sg Accordingto Ngorchen, since Jetsun Drakpa Gyaltshan located, selected, compiled andwrap instructions on Lamdre in a yellow cloth, it becameknown as "Lamdre Yellow Annals" [lam
As a matter ofinterest we can see here that within one generation, this work had receivedthr names much to the confusion of the historians of Lamdreliterature. One can imagine how th identification of theeleven commentaries would have arisen. Another important Lamdre auth rgyal po,who as a close disciple of Sapan, wrote " góuõ g§ad dmar ma "on the basis of instr Sapan which later became known as "LamdreRed Annals" [lam 'bras pod dmar]. In his introd reiterates that lam'bras g–ags ma was primarily used as a reference by Sapan when giving t Based on these two works, the first systematic and comprehensiveLamdre treatise, "Lamdr
'bras pod nag], was written by blama dam pa bsod nams rgyal msthan (1312-1375), who als firstedition of the collected works of the five masters as a tribute at the funeralobservance of deceased teacher dpal ldan seõ ge. His treatise was so namedbecause it was wrapped in cloth. Beside these, there werenumber of works on Lamdre written by some disciples of Dro fivemasters which are not listed in this edition.The 16th century saw the emergence of a gala scholars and masters.In spite of the aforementioned Lamdre works named after the differen volumes, other works found in the collected works of numerous masters mayhave been carv is no evidence of Lamdre being printed. Inthis edition of Sakya Lamdre Literature Series (S will noticethat the works are divided into lam 'bras slob b§ad and lam 'bras tshogs b§ad.Prio century, there was neither any literature which distinguishedbetween the two lineages nor a their existence. This system oftwo lineages has been developed from a practice of mus che rgyalmtshan (1388-1469), who gave pithy instructions to bdag chen blo gros rgyalmtshan (1 private. It was restricted to small number of selecteddisciples, and was seldom given, as it v guide advancedindividuals who were making experiential progress [myoõ khrid] on the basis experiential advice [man õag]. The common lineage, however,allowed a larger group of stud annually in Ngor monastery inTibet, and bore the name tshogs b§ad. Dagchen Lodro Gyalts alsowritten numerous works, is regarded as the first promulgator of both lineages.Subseque and grand-disciples, who followed the two distinctlineages, made a vast liturgical contributio development of thelineages. An obvious difference between the two is the language and sty rather than the contents. Lobshey manuals are straight forwardinstructions written in the wa language of Upper Tsang, whileTshogshey manuals use rather classical and scholastic Tibe numerousquotes from Sètras and Tantras.ðor chen dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1547), a p wrote somescholastic treatises on Three Visions and Three Tantras. His works simplifiedth later Lamdre masters, who made a habit of reading it inteaching sessions, so that it became Lamdre Tshogshey manual ofSakya and Ngor monasteries. Perhaps his works were widely first introduction to Lamdre work was his "Beautiful Ornament of ThreeVisions" [snaõ gsum r 1970. Later 'jam mgon a mes óabs õag dbaõkun dga' bsod nams (1537-1601) and paº chen (1572-1651)works were and are still used as alternative or supplementary to the formerman tradition.The uncommon Lamdre lineage was transmitted through rdo riõ pa kun spaõs pa ch sgo rum kun dga' legs pa and from both of them to Tsharchen.It remained solely as oral tea dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug(1524-1568) and maõ thos klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-15 andmoon-like disciples of tshar chen blo gsal rgya mtsho (1502-1567). These twoeminent m on the basis of instruction heard from Tsharchen, andwrote two complete sets of Lamdre Lo which were later endorsed byTsharchen. Most of these works remained as manuscripts [gz 1904'jam mgon blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914) courageously arranged and sponsored thetas xylographic blocks of seventeen volume Lamdre Lobshey(including all the biographies) in sp from others who fearedthat the printing and disclosure of the secret teachings might displeas protectors. Ignoring their opposition, he wrote a synthesis of the twoLamdre Lobshey manu the doubts of contradiction between the twoworks raised by other scholars. Without his tirel noble exampleof sponsoring, editing and publishing many important Sakya works e.g. sgrub including lam 'bras slob b§ad, this edition of the completecollection of Lamdre (31 Volumes) materialized. Prior to thisthey were not published together since the uncommon texts were indirectlycensored from printing.This catalogue is based on the collection of legitimate works Lamdretradition written by many lineage Gurus of both traditions from Virèpa to HisEminenc Rinpoche. They are a gradual accumulation of workscompiled, edited and re-edited by nume Naturally there are Lamdrebibliographies and lists of received teachings [gsan yig] of early prominentmasters which do not contain the latter works. Notwithstanding this, we do notse guide us how to distinguish between the authors or works ofthe two traditions. The classific follow chronological order norare there technical reasons to indicate how the works were dis theconcept of slob b§ad tradition came into being after Dagchen Lodro Gyaltshan,then all w should be tshogs b§ad and post Dagchen LodroGyaltshan works should be slob b§ad. But be the case.For instance, while most works of Drakpa Gyaltshan are listed in the slob b§ad, are listed in tshogs b§ad. Similarly the lam 'bras g–ags maand other ten commentaries whic of all works listed in thiscatalogue were and are not used for either of the Lamdre teaching situation.Separate teaching and oral transmission sessions [luõ rgyun] on thesecommentarie outside of Lamdre sessions if the commentarial lineagesand transmissions were extant. It is include the elevencommentaries in the collection of Lamdre works since they were the firste subject. Eminent Lamdre scholars such as Ngawang Choedak'sworks should not necessari b§ad division as he has been arecipient and promulgator of both traditions. The free usage workspractised in both traditions is evidence of the impartiality of his works. Hehas been a g of both traditions.The emergence of this thirty one volume Sakya Lamdre Literature Series is new phenomenon in the history of Lamdre texts. We may hope thatthis edition can be enlar the near future. It amalgamatestshogs b§ad, slob b§ad, the eleven commentaries by Sache manyother works related to Lamdre. It was edited by His Holiness Sakya Trizin forits public by Sakya Centre, Dehra Dun in 1983. His Holinessexplains the model of his edition in the p bibiography. It ispublished in the traditional folio style [dpe gzugs] or loose leafs whichrequir years of painstaking calligraphy work by many dedicated monksof Sakya Centre. Thanks ar monks, including Venerable MigmarTseten, for their dedication in making such a publication sakeof convenience in locating the references, I have amended the title numberswhich are r sequence. The folio numbers are given without specifyingside a or side b since odd and eve them. Translation of theessential part of the Tibetan titles are provided together with theirtransliterations. Volumes are marked alphabetically; hence the first volume ismarked 'p Volume One. Future editors of Lamdre texts need to considercollecting more works on Lam sources e.g. bka' 'bums, which arenot included in this edition, and to develop a systematic th ofclassification arrangements between the two traditions and different works.# # #Vol. 1 Ka

b§ad]Title No. 1. ff. 1 - 13.Hagiography of Virèpa.bla ma 'phags bod kyi lo rgyus las rnal 'byo
phyugs bir wa pa'i lo rgyus .Author: grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 2. ff 14 - 17 of Drogmi Lotsawa.bla ma bod kyi lo rgyus bla chen 'brog mi lo tsŒ ba'i lo rgyus.Author: gra mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 3. ff. 18 - 31.Hagiography of Sachen Kunga Nyingpo [sa chen rnam thar].Author: grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 4. ff. 32 - 34.Hagiography of [bsod nams rtse mo'i rnam thar].Author: grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 5. A ff.
56.Hagiography of Drakpa Gyaltshan [rje btsun rin po che'i rnam par thar pa].Author: sbal st mtshan (?).Title No. 6 (A). ff. 57 - 63 (B) ff. 64 - 75.Versified Hagiography of Sakya Paº¶ita [
paº gyi rnam thar].Author: yar kluõ pa grags pa rgyal mtshan (?).Title No. 7. ff. 77 - 112.Hag Sakya Paº¶ita [sa paº gyi rnam thar].Author: rin chen dpal (?).Title No. 8. ff. 113 - 133.Hagio Sakya Paº¶ita [rnam thar gsuõ sgros ma].Author: 'phags pa blo gros rgal mtshan (1235-128
ff. 134 - 289.Path of the Fortunate Aeon: A Hagiography of Sakya Paº¶ita.rnam thar skal pa lam.Author: rin spuõ õag dbaõ 'jig rten dbaõ phyug grags pa (In 1255).Title No. 10. ff. 290 -

338.Hagiography of Dharma King Choegyal Phakpa (1235-1280).bla ma dam pa chos kyi rg par thar pa.Author: ye §es rgyal mtshan (In 1283).Title No. 11. ff. 338 - 340.Hagiography of Kunga Pal [bla ma tshogs sgom rin po che'i rnam thar].Author:Title No. 12. ff. 341 - 344.Hag Nyenchen Sonam Tenpa.–en chen bsod nam bstan pa'i rnam thar.Title No. 13. ff. 345 - 361 of Rinchen Senge.§aõs kyi bla ma chos rje rin chen seõ ge'i rnam thar raõ gis mdzad pa.Au ge.Title No. 14. ff. 362 - 367.Hagiography of Zhang Konchok Pal (1240-1302) [óaõ dkon mc thar].Author: dge sloõ dpal ldan tshul khrims (1333-1389).Title No. 15. ff. 367 - 374.Hagiogr
Gyalwa Drakphukpa (1277-1350) [rgyal ba brag phug pa'i rnam thar].Author: dpal ldan blo g (1315-1358).Title No. 16. ff. 374 - 385.Hagiography of Hermit Lodro Tenpa (1315-1358) [ri l gros brtan pa'i rnam thar].Author: dge sloõ dpal ldan tshul khrims (1333-1389).Title No. 17. f 406.Hagiography of Lama Dampa Sonam Gyaltshan.bla ma dam pa bsod nams rgyal mtsha dge sloõ dpal ldan tshul khrims (1333-1389).Title No. 18. ff. 406 - 412.Hagiography of Lama Tshultrim.bla ma dam pa dpal ldan tshul khrims gyi rnam thar.Author: dkon mchog rgyal mts (1388-1469).Title No. 19. ff. 413 - 431.Hagiography of MahŒsiddha Buddha êr´ (1339-1419
dddha §r´s rnam thar].Author: õor chen kun dga' bzaõ po (1382-1456).Title No. 20. ff. 432 - Hagiography of Ngorchen Kunga Sangpo.[õor chen gyi rnam thar mdor bsdus].Author: dkon (1388-1469).Title No. 21. ff. 475 - 585.Ocean of Collected Elegant Sayings: A Hagiography Sangpo.[rnam thar legs b§ad chu bo 'dus pa'i rgya mtsho].Author: dge sloõ dpal ldan don gr
ff. 586 - 627.Wondrous Ocean: A Hagiography of Muchen (1388-1469).[mus chen gyi rnam
mtsho].Author: bsod nams seõ ge (1429-1489).# # #Vol. 2 Kha [slob b§ad]Title No. 23. ff. 1 Garland: A Hagiography of Muchen.[mus chen gi rnam thar õo mtshar phreõ ba].Author: bda mtshan (1444-1479).Title No. 24. ff. 35 - 151.Garland of Utpala Flowers: A Hagiography of D Gyaltshan (1444-1479).[bdag chen blo gros rgyal mtshan gyi rnam thar ut pa la'i do §al].Aut blo gsal rgya mtsho (1502-1567).Title No. 25. ff. 153 - 247.A hagiography of Doringpa Kunp (1449-1524).[rje btsun kun spaõ pa chen po'i rnam thar õo mtshar dad pa'i spu loõ].Author:
gsal rgya mtsho (1502-1567).Title No. 26. ff. 249 - 397.A Treasure of Jewel: A Hagiography Lekpa (1477-1544 or 1489-1556).[rje btsun sgo rum pa'i ram thar yid bóin chu gter].Author:
mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug (1524-1568).Title No. 27. ff. 399 - 638.Solar Radiance of of the D Hagiography of Tsharchen (1502-1566).[tshar chen rdo rje 'chaõ gi rnam thar bstan pa'i –i 'c ba lõa pa (Vth Dalai Lama).# # #Vol. 3 Ga (slob b§ad)Title No. 28. ff. 1 - 250.Wondrous Ker Auto-Hagiography of the Great Abbot (1524-1568).[bla ma rin po che mkhan chen pa'i rnam ma].Author: 'jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug (1524-1568).Title No. 29. ff. 251 - 394.A Great Abbot Shonu Lodro (1527-1599).[mkhan chen góon nu blo gros rnam thar]Author: bda mtshan (1444-1479).Title No. 30. ff. 395 - 625.Auto-Hagiography [raõ gi rnam thar yul sna ts rtsi myoõ ba'i gtamdu byas pa zol zog rdzun gis ma bslad pa sgeg ma'i me loõ].Author: bdag grosrgyal mtshan (1444-1479).# # #Vol. 4 õa (slob b§ad)Title No. 31. ff. 1 - 123.A Hagiograp Dondrup Gyaltshan (1527-1587).[rje btsun rdo rje 'chaõ mai tri don grub rgyal mtshan].Autho rgya mtsho (?).Title No. 32. ff. 125 - 151.Reservoir of Faith: A Hagiography of Jetsun Dingm

(1526-1577).[rje btsun sdiõs ma chen po'i rnam thar byin brlab kyi chu gter].Author: bdaõ ph (1559-1636).Title No. 33. ff. 153 - 335.A Hagiography of Great Abbot Sonam Choephel (152 chen bsod nams chos 'phel gyi rnam thar].Author: dkon mchog rdo rje (?).Title No. 34. ff. 33 Hagiography of Ngawang Choedak (1572-1641) [mkhan chen õag dbaõ chos grags kyi rnar ba bsod nams rgyal mtshan (?).Title No. 35. ff. 389 - 497.A Hagiography of Wangchuk Rabt [dbaõ phyug rab brtan gyi rnam thar].Author: rgyal ba lõa pa (Vth Dalai Lama).Title No. 36. f 701.A Hagiography of Kagyurwa Chenpo Sonam Chogdhen (1603-1659).[mgon po bsod`na thar].Author: rgyal ba lõa pa (Vth Dalai Lama).# # #Vol. 5 Ca (slob b§ad)Title No. 37. ff. 1 - 1 Hagiography of Shalu Rinchen Sonam Chogdrup (1602-1681).[rin chen bsod nams mchog g thar].Author: rgyal ba lõa pa (Vth Dalai Lama).Title No. 38. ff. 111 - 449.An Auto-Hagiograph (1633-1703).[lce btsun õag gi dbaõ phyug mkhyen rab byams pa'i raõ rnam].Author: lce btsu pa (1633-1703).Title No. 39. ff. 451 - 626.An Auto-Hagiography (1654-1728) [rmor chen un kyi rnam thar].Author: rmor chen kun dga' lhun grub (?).# # #Vol. 6 Cha (slob b§ad)Title No.
300.Hagiography of Nesarpa [gnas gsar pa chen po 'jam mgon bla ma thams cad mkhyenpa gyi rnam thar õo mtshar rab 'byams].# # #Vol. 7 Ja (slob b§ad)Title No. 42. ff. 1 - 147A Hagi Thartse Khuwon Jampa Namkha Chime (1765-1820).[thar rtse khu dbon byams pa nam mk thar].Author: Byams pa kun dga' bstan pa'i rgyal mtshan (1829-1870).Title No. 43. ff. 148 - 3 Hagiography of Jampa Kunga Tenzin (1776-1862).[byams pa kun dga' btsan 'dzin gyi rnam kun dga' bstan pa'i rgyal mtshan (1829-1870).Title No. 44. ff. 346 -523A Hagiography of Nal Sangpo (1789-1864).[rnal 'byor 'jam dpal bzaõ po'i rnam thar].Author: Byams pa kun dga' bs mtshan (1829-1870).Title No. 45. ff. 524 - 678A Hagiography of Jampa Kunga Tenpay Gyal
(1829-1870).[byams pa kun dga' bstan pa'i rgal mtshan gyi rnam thar].Author: 'jam dbyaõs b
(1847-1914).# # #Vol. 8 –a (slob b§ad)'Title No. 46. ff. 1 -235A Hagiography of Jamyang Kh (1820-1892) [jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtsedbaõ po kun dga' bstan pa'i rgyal mtshan dpal bzaõ bsdus].Author: koõ sprul õag dbaõ yon tan rgya mtsho (1813-1899).Title No. 47. ff. 237 - 33 of Jamyang Loter Wangpo (1847-1914).[jam dbyaõs blo gter dbaõ po'i rnam par thar pa].Au gtan blo gros (1868-1931).Title No. 48. ff. 337 - 387A Hagiography of Ga Ngawang Lekpa (1 rdo rje 'chaõ sga ston õag dbaõ kun dga' legs pa'i 'byuõ gnas kyi rnam thar].Author: sde góu dga' bstan pa'i rgyal mtshan (1885-).Title No. 49. ff. 389 - 414A Hagiography of Khenc Rinpoche Ngawang Lodro Shenphen Nyingpo (1876-1952).[rje btsun bla ma dpal e wam kh dbaõ blo gros góan phans–iõ po'i rnam thar].Author: tre hor gdoõ thog sprul sku.Title No. 50
Commentary on Fifty Verses of Guru Devotion.[b§es b–en dam pa bsten par byed pa'i thabs
'grel pa].Author: tshar chen blo gsam rgya mtsho (1502-1566).# # #Vol. 9 Ta (slob b§ad)Titl
1 - 760Solar Radiance: An Extensive Commentary on Hevajra Tantra.[rgyud kyi rgyal po dpa cher 'grel pa –i ma'i 'od zer].Author: bla ma dam pa bsod nams rgyal mtshan (1312-1375).# (slob b§ad)Title No. 52. ff. 1 - 325Garland of Precious Diamond: A Commentary on Root Ta tshig 'grel dag ldan bsrubs skyes rdo rje rin po che'i phreõ ba].Author: õag dbaõ chos grags Supplemented by blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 53. ff. 327 - 581Sun's Rays: An Ex

Hevajra SŒdhana.[dpal kye rdo rje'i rnam b§ad –i ma'i 'od zer].Author: Tshar chen blo gsal (1502-1566).# # #Vol. 11 Da (slob b§ad)Title No. 54. ff. 1 - 8Bibliography of Lamdre Works .
rin po che lam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa'i don gsal bar byed pa glegs bam gyi dkar chag].Author mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 55.ff. 9 345The Yellow Annals: An Exposition on Root Vajra V rdo rje tshig rkaõ gtsos pod ser góuõ b§ad].Author: grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title
- 386The Instruction on Inconceivable According to Ko alipa.[tog rtse pa'i bsam mi khyab pa õag].Author: Ko alipa.Title No. 57. ff. 387 - 399Simultaneously Born Accomplishment of ÅDo bhi he ru kas mdzad pa'i lhan cig skyes grub].Author: ÅDombi Heruka.Title No. 58. ff. 399 - 4 Front of a Stupa of NŒgŒrjuna.[slob dpon klu sgrub kyi mdzad pa'i mchod rten druõ thob].C
rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 59. ff. 406 - 419MahŒmudrŒ Without Letters Accordin VŒgi§varak´rti.[slob dpon õag dbaõ grags pas mdzad pa'i phyag rgya chen po yi ge med pa pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216)Title No. 60. ff. 419 - 443The Nine Profound Methods by Saro pad ma ba dzras mdzad pa'i bskyed rim zab pa'i tshul dgus bryan pa].Compiled by grags pa (1147-1216).Title No. 61. ff. 445 - 456The Complete Path of Psychic Fire by K¨·ºŒcŒrin.[sl spyod pas mdzad pa'i gtum mo lam rdzogs].Compiled by grags pa rgay mtshan (1147-1216 457 - 460The Instruction on Straightening the Crooked by Uci Œmara.[nag po u tsi a 'chi b pa yon po sroõ ba'i gdams õag].Compiled by grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 6 479Complete Path of Mudra by Indrabhèti.[slob dpon in¶a bhu tis mdzad`pa'i phyag rgya'i la by grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 64. ff. 481 - 580A Brief Edition of this Transm
'di –id daõ mdor bsdus su sbyar ba].Author: gragspa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 65.
(This is also found in Vol. 1, Title No. 1)Hagioraphy of Indian Gurus [bla ma brgyud pa rgya rgyus].Author: grags pa rgyal mtshan (1147-1216).Title No. 66. ff. 594 - 599 (This is also fou Title 2)Hagiography of Tibetan Gurus [bla ma brgyud pa bod kyi lo rgyus].Author: grags pa r (1147-1216).# # #Vol. 12 Na. (slob b§ad)Title No. 67. ff. 1 - 446For the Sons: An Exposition [lam 'bras góuõ b§ad sras don ma].Edited by phul chuõ ba (*This text should ideally be edite 27-29.)Title No. 68. ff. 447 - 476An Outlined Synthesis of Vajra Verses.[rd rje tshig rkaõ gi b daõ sa bcad kyi bkral ba].Author:Title No. 69. ff. 477 - 615Technical Key: Teaching Guide A the Uncommon Ngor Lamdre Lobshe Tradition.[gsuõ õag rin po che lam 'bras bu bcas pa õo pa slob b§adkyi 'chad thabs gsaõ chen mdzod brgya 'byed pa'i legs d§ad 'phrul gyi lde'umig gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).# # #Vol. 13 Pa.(slob b§ad)Title No. 70. ff. 1 - 469Miscelleneous
According to the Bibliography of Minor Red Annals.[lam 'bras pu sti dmar chuõ dkar chag lta tshar du dõar ba tshaõs 'grigs].Author: mus chen dkon mchog rgyal mtshan (1388-1469).Tit
- 609Initiation Rites on the Six-Limbed of Body Maº¶ala Path Initiation According toHevajra Lineage, Clear Mirror of Initiating Rites, Blessing of Pathof the Profound Guru Yoga. (dpal ky õag lugs kyi mõon rtogs yanlag drug pa lus dkyil lam dus kyi dbaõ chog, dbaõ bskur ba'i cho meloõ, lam zab mo rnal 'byor gyi byin rlabs –ams len).Author: mus chen dkon mchog rgyal r (1388-1469).# # #Vol. 14 Pha (slob b§ad)Title No. 72. ff. 1 - 225Flourish of the Great Secret Lamdre History.[gsuõ õag rin po che lam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa'i khog phub kyi rnam b§ad la tshul gyi zin bris gsaõ chen btsan pa rgyas byed (lam 'bras slobb§ad khog phub).Author: 'jar brtse dbaõ phyug (1524 - 1568).Title No. 73. ff. 227 - 234Nejar ma: A Lineage Guru Prayer õag rin po che lam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa'i bla ma brgyud pa la gsol ba 'debs pa gnas sbyar r phug pa.Title No. 74. ff. 235 - 247Kunzang Wangshi ma: A Prayer to the Gurus of the Three Lineages ofLamdre with Prayer to Realize the Graduated Path of Lamdre. (gsuõ õag rin po

'dus kyi bla ma la gsol ba 'debs a lam rim smon lam daõ bcaspa).Author: jam dbyaõs mkhye (1524-1568).Title No. 75. ff. 248 - 251Namdak ma: A Prayer to The Lineage Gurus of Lamdr she'i brgyud 'debs].Author: õor chen kun dga' bzaõ po (1382-1456).Title No. 76. ff. 253 - 344 Unmistaken Tradition of Kha'u Drak Dzongpa: The Path of Three Visions.[snaõ ba gsum du bris kha'u brag rdzoõ pa'i bóed pa ma nor ba].Author: jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug
No. 77. ff. 345 - 433The Path of Three Tantras: The Practice of Old Monk Khyentse.[rgyud g lam gyi zin bris kha'u brag rdzoõ pa'i khyad chos banrgan mkhyen brtse'i –ams len].Author:
brtse dbaõ phyug (1524-1568).Title No. 78. ff. 435 - 503The Unmistaken Tradition of Kha'u Notes on Outer Generation Stage Practice.(phyi bskyed rim gyi zin bris kha'u brag rdzoõ pa' ba).Author: jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug (1524-1568).Title No. 79. ff. 505 - 517The Tradition of Kha'u Drak Dzongpa: Notes on Inner Generation Stage Practice.(naõ bskyed ri brag rdzoõ pa'i bóed pa ma nor ba).Author: jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug (1524-15 519 - 553The Unmistaken Tradition of Kha'u Drak Dzongpa: Notes on Dream Yoga Etc.(rm kha'u brag rdzoõ pa'i bóed pa ma nor ba).Author: jam dbyaõs mkhyen brtse dbaõ phyug (15
81. 555 - 619Three Practical Ritual of Lamdre [bs–en pa gsum gi lag len gsuõ õag be'u bum rgya mtsho (1523 -1594).# # #Vol. 15 Ba (slob b§ad)Title No. 82. ff. 1 - 12Prayer to the Line
Lobshey Tradition.[slob b§ad brgyud 'debs lam rim daõ bcas pa].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsh (1523-1594).Title No. 83. ff. 13 - 29Prayer to the Lineage Gurus of Three Tantras (dges mdz brgyud 'debs).Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 84. ff. 31 - 151The Three gsum khrid yig zla ba bdud rtsi'i thig phreõ].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title N 153 - 240The Instruction on Path of Mantra [sõags lam gyi khrid yig –i góon gsar pa'i thig ph klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 86. ff. 241 - 255Outer Generation Stage [phyi bs rim].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 87. ff. 257 - 274Inner Generation St bskyed rim].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 88. ff. 275 - 315Vase Initiati dbaõ].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 89. ff. 317 - 359Secret Initiation [g khrid yig].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 90. ff. 361 - 378Transcendenta rab ye §es kyi dbaõ].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 91. ff. 379 - 404The Initiation [dbaõ bói pa''ikhrid].Author: klu sgrub rgya mtsho (1523-1594).Title No. 92. ff. 405 - 646Dispelling Doubts of Darkness: A Synthesis of Two Instruction Manuals.[khrid kyi Zuõ bo som –i mun sel].Author: blo gter dbaõ po (1847 - 1914).Title No. 93. ff. 647 - 648Supplemen to Lineage Gurus [rgyud b§ad brgyud 'debs kyi kha skoõ].# # #Vol. 16 Ma (slob b§ad)Title N 121Wondrous Vision: The Black Annals of Lineage Gurus.[lam 'bras pod nag bla ma brgyud mtshar snaõ ba].Author: bla ma dam pa bsod nam rgyal mtshan (1312-1375).Title No. 95. ff

Exposition of Treasure of Instructions [góuõ b§ad man õag gter mdzod].Author: bla ma dam mtshan (1312 - 1375).Title No. 96. ff. 451 - 543Illucidating the Hidden Meanings [sbas` don gsal].Author: bla ma dam pa bsod nam rgyal mtshan (1312 - 1375).Title No. 97. ff. 545 - 597 Realization of Glorious Hevajra [kye rdor mõon rtogs].Author: bla ma dam pa bsod nam rgya 1375).Title No. 98. ff. 598 - 605Initiation Rites of the Body Maº¶ala. [lus dkyil dbaõ chog].Au ma dam pa bsod nam rgyal mtshan (1312 - 1375).Title No. 99. ff. 606 - 614Guru Yoga [bla r §es].Author: bla ma dam pa bsod nam rgyal mtshan (1312 - 1375).# # #Vol. 17 Tsa (slob b§ ff. 1 - 417The Essential Moon's Rays of Generation Stage: An Exegesis of Hevajra SŒdhan sgrub thabs rgya cher b§ad pa bkyed rim gnad kyi zla zer].Author: õor chen kun dga' bzaõ p (1382-1456).Title No. 101. ff. 419 - 640Illucidating the Pith Instructions: An Exegesis of Heva
SŒdhana.[kye rdor man õag lugs kyi bskyed rim rnam b§ad man õag gsal byed].Author: go (1429-1489).# # #Vol 18 Tsha (slob b§ad)Title No. 102. ff. 1 - 27Illucidating the Meaning of S don gsal ba].Author: bdag chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 103. ff. 27 - 32E
the Hidden Path [lam sbas b§ad].Author: bdag chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title 58Non-Differentiation of Samsara and NirvŒna ['khor 'das dbyer med].Author: bdag chen bl
(1444-1495).Title No. 105. ff. 58 - 65Essential Visualization [dmigs gnad].Author: õag dbaõ c (1572-1651).Title No. 106. ff. 65 - 92Explanation of Vajra and Bell [rdor dril rnam b§ad].Auth chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 107. ff. 92 - 113Method of Blessing Nectar rtsi ril bu sgrub pa].Author: bdag chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 108. ff. 1 115Method of Repelling Malediction Through A· a (Mantra) [a· a'i byad zlog].Author: bdag ch mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 109. ff. 115 - 242Essential Notes From Shalu Khenchen and L mkho'i zin bris ówa lu mkhan chen gsuõ daõ klu sgrub gsuõ skor).Editor: mgon po bsod nam (1603-1659).Title No. 110. ff. 243 - 274Beautiful Ornament of Six-Limbed Clear Realization yan lag drug pa'i mdzes rgyan).Author: õor chen dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1557).Title No 292Beautiful Ornament of Body Maº¶ala [lus dkyi mdzes rgyan].Author: õor chen dkon mcho (1497-1557).Title No. 112. ff. 293 - 364Beautiful Ornament of Great River of Initiation [dbaõ mdzes`rgyan].Author: õor chen dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1557).Title No. 113. ff. 365 - 37
Benefdiction Verses [bstod pa bkra §is].Author: Saroruha.Title No. 114. ff. 375 - 398Beautifu
Torma Rites [gtor chog mdzes rgyan].Author: õor chen dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1557).T
399 - 476A Synthesis of Instructions on Initiation Rites [dbaõ chog man õag gi s–iõ po].Auth dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 116. ff. 477 - 536Initiation Rites of Path Initiation [lam dbaõ bs chog].Author: bdag chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 117. ff. 537 - 626A Gu Illucidating the River of Hevajra Initiation.[dpal kye rdo rje'i dbaõ gi chu bo'i gsal byed kyi lha thabs].Author: tshar chen blo gsal rgya mtsho (1502-1566).# # #Vol. 19 Dza (slob b§ad)Title
1 - 39Clear Unmistaken Path: A SŒdhana of VajranairŒtmyŒ.[rje btsun rdo rje bdag med r lam gsal].Author: õag dbaõ kun dga' bsod nams (1537-1601).Title No. 119. ff. 41 - 117A Ma VajranairŒtmyŒ.[rje btsun rdo rje bdag med ma'i dkyil chog gsal byed phrin las kun khyab].
kun dga' bsod nams (1537-1601).Title No. 120. ff. 119 - 135Notes on SŒdhana.[sgrub thab

yig].Author: õor chen dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1557).Title No. 121. ff. 137 - 223Rites of Initiation in the VajranairŒtmyŒ Maº¶ala.[bdag med ma'i dkyil 'khor du dbaõ bskur ba'i cho gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 122. ff. 225 - 415Rites of Imparting Bodhisattva Vows Ac Exceptional Lineages.(brgyud pa'i khyad par g–is ldan sems bskyed kyi cho ga dam pa'i bóe bso).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 123. ff. 417 - 445Blessings of Prote Interdependent Origination [rten 'grel bsruõ ba'i byin rlabs].Author: 'jam dbyaõs mkhyen brts
No. 124. ff. 447 - 481Blessing and Dharani of Vajravidarani [rnam 'joms gzuõs daõ byin rlab sloõ braõ ti.Title No. 125. ff. 483 - 529The Shower of Siddhis: A Guru Pèja [bla mchod dõos
'bebs].Author: byams pa kun dga' bstan pa'i rgyal mtshan (1829-1870).Title No. 126. ff. 531
Practice of Outer Profound Guru Yoga.[lam zab mo phyi ma'i –ams len §in tu bsdus pa byin rtsol].Title No. 127. ff. 569 - 619Annals on Guru ratnasambhava [bla ma rin 'byuõ be'u bum].
Wa (slob b§ad)Title No. 128. ff. 1 - 17Profound Guru Yoga [lam zab mo bla ma'i rnal 'byor].A chen blo gros rgyal mtshan (1444-1495).Title No. 129. ff. 18 - 35The Melody of Essential Me Expereinces: A Commentary on Prayer of Graduated Path.(lam rim smon lam rnam b§ad th mo).Author: byam pa bstan 'dzin s–an grags.Title No. 130. ff. 37 - 60A Short Guru Pèja on P Yoga [lam zab bla mchod –uõ bsdus].Author: blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 131. ff.
Mirror: ASynthesis of View [lta s–iõ nor bu'i me loõ].Author: byam pa bstan 'dzin s–an grags.
ff. 105 - 191Refutation of Errors: A Commentary Elucidating the Meanings of Tantric Pledge rnam b§ad 'grel pa 'khrul spoõ gi dgoõ pa rab tu gsal ba).Author: bdag chen blo gros rgyal m (1444-1495).Title No. 133. ff. 193 - 225The Profound Stages of the Path of Enlightenment c Channels, Yantra andBlazing and Blissful Heat of Caºdal´ Yoga . [rtsa rluõ 'phrul 'khor zab la sgrub pa'i rim pa bklags chog ma daõ gtum mo'i bde drod rab 'bar ma].Author: §ar bla ma m dpal ldan.Title No. 134. ff. 257 - 262Prayer to the Lineage Gurus of Last Eight-fold Paths.[la ma brgyad kyi brgyud pa'i gsol 'debs].Author: õor chen kun dga' bzaõ po (1382-1456).Title N
- 287Clear And Auspicious Crystal Mirror: The Instruction on Inconceivable by Ko alipa[tog r khyab pa'i khrid yig bkra §is dwaõs §el me loõ].Author: koõ sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1
136. ff. 287 - 301Auspicious Medicial Extract: The Instruction on Simultaneously BornAccom ÅDombi Heruka.[¶om bhi he ru ka'i lhan cig skyes grub kyi khrid yig bkra §is gi waµ sman bo sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1899).Title No. 137. ff. 301 - 333Auspicious Heap of White M Instruction on Nine Profounf Methods by Saroruha.(pad ma ba dzra'i zab pa'i tshul dgu'i khri yuõs dkar goõ bu).Author: koõ sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1899).Title No. 138. ff. 333 - 3 White Conch Swirling in the Right: The Instruction on Path of Mudra by Indrabhèti.(in dra bh rgya'i lam gyi khrid yig bkra §is duõ dkar gyas 'khyil).Author: koõ sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1899).Title No. 139. ff. 350 - 367Heap of Auspicious Vermillion: The Instruction on Co Caº¶al´ by K¨·ºŒcŒrin.(nag po pa'i gtum mo lam rdzogs kyi khrid yig bkra §is li khri'i thig le) sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1813-1899).Title No. 140. ff. 367 - 374Essence of Auspicious Yogu Instruction on Straightening the Crooked by Utsi Œmara.(nag po utsi a 'chi ba med pa'i yon khrid yig).Author: koõ sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1899).Title No. 141. ff. 374 - 397The G

Auspicious Wood Apple: The Instruction Received in froint of aStupa by NŒgŒrjuna .['phag mchod rten druõ thob kyi khridyig].Author: koõ sprul blo gros mtha' yas (1833-1899).Title No
- 415The Sprouts of the Auspicious Durwa Grass: The Instruction onMahŒmudra WithoutLe [õag dbaõ grags pa'i phyag rgya chen po yi ge med pa'ikhrid yig]Author: koõ sprul blo gros r
(1833-1899).Title No. 143. ff. 417 - 512The Golden Garland of Lineage Chronicles of Comm Lamdre.(gsuõ õag rin po che nlam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa õor lugs thun min slob b§ad daõthu tha dad kyi smin grol yan lad daõ bacs pa'i rgyud yig gsergyi phreõ ba byin zab 'od brgya 'ba blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).# # #Vol. óa 21 (Tshogs b§ad)Title No. 144. ff. 1 - 314Ocean Elegant Sayings: A Lamdre History [gsuõ õag rin po she'i byonthsul khog phub daõ bacs pa legs b§ad 'dus pa'i rgya mtsho].Author: 'jam mgon a mes óabs õag dbaõ kun dga' bsod nam
No. 145. ff. 315 - 350The Precious Ornament of Illucidating the Three First Modes.{tshul daõ –uõ õu'i õag gis ston par byed pa'i legs par b§ad patshul gsum gsal bar byed pa'i rin po che' rgyan].Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1547).Title No. 146. ff. 351 - 427Beautiful Orna Tree of Tantric êastra.[rgyud kyi mõon par rtogs pa'i don –uõ õu'i õag gis gtan la 'bebs par b che'i rgyan].Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1547).Title No. 147. ff. 429 - 575Fundame Classes of Tantra [rgyud sde spyi'i rnam par góag pa].Author: bsod nam rtse mo (1142-1182
22Title No. 148. ff. 1 - 227mõon rtogs ljon §iõ. (The Tree of Realization).Author: grags pa rg (1147-1216).Title No. 149. ff. 279 - 625Ornament of the Superior Master's Thought : Elegan Illucidatesthe Abhisamaya of The Tantra.[rgyud kyi mõon par rtogs pa'i gsal byed legs par b dgoõ rgyan].Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-1547).# # #Vol. 'A 23Title No. 150. ff. 1 - 8
the Lineage Gurus of Lamdre [gsuõ õag rin po che'i brgyud 'debs].Authors: õor chen kunga and dkon mchog lhun grub (1487-1547).Title No. 151. ff. 9 - 79êr´ Hevajra, The King of Tant rdo rje óes bya ba'i rgyud kyi rgyal po].Translators: 'bogmi lo tsŒ ba (992-1074) and Gayadh
(970-1090).Title No. 152. ff. 81 - 553Ornament of the Secret Vajradhara's Thought : A Sub-C Commentary"dag ldan" on The Two Part Hevajra Tantra .(dpal kye rdo rje'i rtsa ba'i rgyud br rnam par b§ad pa ma dagpar 'joms pa'i 'grel pa dag ldan óes` bya ba'i mchan gyi ikka gsaõ pa'i dgoõ rgyan).Author: blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 153. ff. 555 - 588The Gratifi Readers: A Versified Eulogical Hagiography of LamdreMasters. [gsuõ õag lam 'bras`bu daõ zab mo byuõ tshul gyi yige don g–er dga' ba bskyed byed].Author: 'jam mgon a mes óabs õa nams (1537-1601).# # #Vol. Ya 24Title No. 154. ff. 1 - 52Garland Of Jewels: Abbatial Succe Glorious Ngor Evam Monastery.(dpal e vaµ chos ldan gyi gdan rabs nor bu'i phreõ ba).Auth rgyas phun tshogs (1493-).Title No. 155. ff. 35 - 73Pleasant Grove of The Intelligent: An to Understand the Meaning ofAll the Commentaries (11) on Root Vajra Verses.[gsuõ õag rin daõ bcas pa'i rtsa ba rdo rje tshi rkaõ gidon 'grel khog phub rnam 'grel ma lus pa bde lag tu pa blo gsalyid bde 'byuõ ba'i dga' tshal].Author: 'jam mgon a mes óabs õag dbaõ kun dga' bs (1537-1601).Title No. 156. ff. 75 - 269Beautiful Ornament of Three Visions: Instructions on t Preliminaries of Lamdre.(lam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa'i gdams õag gi góuõ §iõ rgyas pa góuõ ji ba'i lam gyi sõon 'gro'i khrid yig snaõ gsum mdzes par byed pa'i rgyan).Author: dkon mchog

(1487-1547).Title No. 157. ff. 271 - 493Beautiful Ornament of Three Tantras: Instuctions on Lamdre.(lam 'bras bu daõ bcas pa'i gdams õag gi góuõ §iõ rgyas pa góuõ ji lta ba bóinbkri b gói'i khrid yig rgyud gsum mdzes par byed pa'i rgyan)Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1487-1
158. ff. 495 - 651Bestower of the Wish-Fufilling Blessings: Supplement of the Abbatial Succ Evam Monastery .[e vaµ pa'i gdan rabs rin chen phreõ mdzes kyi kha skoõrtogs brjod byin b ster].Author:# # #Vol. Ra 25Title No. 159. ff. 1 - 149Treasure of Siddhis: Instructions on Lam õag rin po che'i khrid yig dõos grub 'byuõ ba'i gter).Author: dge sloõ saõs rgya rin chen (1453-1523).Title No. 160. ff. 151 - 196Blossoming of the Lotus Grove: A Lamdre History.(g che'i byuõ tshu daõ khog phub kyi zin bris gsuõ õag bstan pa'ipad tshal bóad pa).Author: õa (1572-1651).Title No. 161. ff. 197 - 217Nectar of The Heedful Talks: A Commentary on the [rdo rjetheg pa'i bslab bya dam tshig gi tshogs rnam par b§ad pa'i zin bris lam gyi rtsaba bag bdud rtsi).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 162. ff. 219 - 281Essential Ele of Three Visions: Instructions on the Preliminaries of Lamdre(gsuõ õag sõon 'gro'i khrid rim po'i legs b§ad).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 163. ff. 289 - 399Essenti Sayings of Three Tantras: Instructions on the Actual Path of Lamdre.(gsuõ õag dõos gói'i kh s–iõ po'i legs b§ad).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 164. ff. 401 - 483Es Sayings on Outer Generation stage.(phyi bskyed rim rnam par b§ad pa blo gsal bde 'jug mk s–iõ po'i legs b§ad).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 165. ff. 485 - 545Lig the Great Secret Doctrine: An Exposition on Outer GenerationStage of Hevajra. (dpal kye rd kyi phyi bskyed pa'i rim pa'irnam par b§ad pa'i zin bris gsaõ chen bstan pa'i 'od phreõ).Auth chos grags (1572-1651).Title No. 166. ff. 547 - 569A Concise Exposition (I) on the Profound Maº¶ala.(zab mo lus dkyil gyi rnam b§ad zin bris –uõ õus rnam gsal).Author: õag dbaõ chos
(1572-1651).Title No. 167. ff. 571 - 577A Concise Exposition (II) on the Profound Body Maº¶
lus dkyil gyi rnam b§ad zin bris –uõ õus rnam gsal).Author: õag dbaõ chos grags (1572-165 LaTitle No. 168. ff. 1 - 65Accomplishment of Secret Path: Rites of Initiating Disciples in the ProfoundBody Maº¶ala of êr´ Hevajra.[dpal kye rdo rje'i zab mo lus kyi dkyil 'khor du slob ma ba'i cho gagrub pa'i gsaõ lam].Author: blo gter dbaõ po (1847-1914).Title No. 169. ff. 67 - 68
Supplement to Path Initiation [lam dbaõ zur bkol].Title No. 170. ff. 69 - 144Melody of Pleasin Victorious Ones: A Commentary on the Versified Prayer ofGraduated Path of Lamdre by Ts of Dharma. [tshar chenchos kyi rgyal pos mdzad pa'i gsuõ õag lam rim smon lam gyi rnam b pa'i rol mo].Author: gzim 'og bstan 'dzin s–an grags.Title No. 171. ff. 145 - 203Drops of Nect Testament of Guru Ma–junŒtha.['jam mgon bla ma'i óal luõ bdud rtsi thig pa].Author: sde gó dga' rgyal mtshan.Title No. 172. ff. 205 - 286Great Melodious Drum of the Devas: A Dessert Identification of Alaya andDifferentiation Between Consciousness and Wisdom.(kun dói õos ye §es 'byed tshul bstan pa legs b§ad lha yi rõa chen).Author: sde góuõ sprul sku kun dga' mtshan.Title No. 173. ff. 287 - 323Nectar For the Beginners: A Guide to Conduct Basic Heva Retreat.(kye'i rdo rje'i gói bs–en bya tshul gsar bu'i bdud rtsi).Author: õag dbaõ legs grub.Tit
174. ff. 325 - 393Destroyer of Evil Troops: Land Taming Rites of êr´ Hevajra Yoga.(dpal kye

'byor la brten pa'i sa chog bdud dpuõ tshar gcod).Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1487-1547
ff. 395 - 433Clear Mirror: Practical Rites of Burnt Offerings of the Four-fold Activities of êr´ Hevajra.(dpal kye rdo rje'i sbyin sreg gi cho ga lag len gsal ba'i me loõ daõ las bói'i sbyin sre nam mkha' dpal bzaõ.Title No. 176. ff. 425 - 431A Prayer to Realize the Graduated Path of I rgyud la skye ba'i smon lam].Author: nam mkha' dpal bzaõ.Title No. 177. ff. 433 - 467Chario the Sun of Siddhis: A Prayer of the Graduated Path of Lamdre.(gsuõ õag lam rim gyi smon l byed 'dren pa'i §iõ rta).Title No. 178. ff. 469 - 482Kernel of Siddhis: Rite of Offering Gaºacak Hevajra .(dpal kye rdo rje'i tshogs 'khor gyi cho ga dõos grub s–e ma).Author: mkhyen rab b grub.Tile No. 179. ff. 483 - 521Ocean of Wealth: A Brief Rituals of Consecration According t
.[dpal kye rdo rje'i rnal 'byor la brten pa'i rab gnas mdor bsdus pa dpal 'byorrgya mtsho grub bcud len].Author: õag dbaõ legs grub.Title No. 180. ff. 523 - 619Liturgical Texts According to Consecration Ritual of Ocean of Wealth.(rab gnas dpal 'byor rgya mtsho mar grags pa'i lag l gyi rim pamtho ris legs byas kyi rdziõ riõ].Author: õag dbaõ blo gros s–iõ po góan phan mtha
No. 181. ff. 621 - 624Supplement to the Two Texts .(Title No 179 and 180) [de g–is la mkho
#Vol. êa 27Title No. 182. ff. 1 - 189Commentary on Vajra Verses Requested by Shujay Ng
Kunga Nyingpo.(góuõ rdo rje'i tshig rkaõ gi 'grel pa rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyub dpal sa skya p byas dõos grub kyis óus pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).Title No. 183. ff.
395Commentary on Vajra Verses Requested by Lokya Wangchuk Drak to Sachen KungaNy rkaõ gi 'grel pa rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyug dpalsa skya pa chen po la klog skya dbaõ phyug g pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).Title No. 184. ff. 397 - 529Commentary on Requested by Changchub Sempa Dawa Gyaltshan to SachenKunga Nyingpo.[góuõ rdo rje'i rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyugdpal sa skya pa chen po la byaõ chub sems dpa' zla ba rgyal mtsh pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).# # #Vol. Sa 28Title No. 185. ff. 1 - 148Co Vajra Verses Requested by Bende Shinjema to Sachen Kunga Nyingpo.(góuõ rdo rje'i tshig
'byor gyi dbaõ phyug dpal sa skya pachen po la ben de g§in rje mas óus pa).Author: sa che (1092-1158).Title No. 186.ff. 149 - 491Commentary on Vajra Verses Requested by Khampa Kunga Nyingpo.(góuõ rdo rje'i tshig rkaõ gi 'grel pa rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyug dpal sa skya p kham pa sga theõ gis óus pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).# # #Vol. Ha 29
ff. 1 - 159Commentary on Vajra Verses Written by Sachen Kunga Nyingpo for Machik Shang tshig rkaõ gi 'grel pa rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyug dpal sa skya pachen pos yum ma gcig óaõ m pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).Title No. 188. ff. 161 - 295Commentary o Requested by Jomo Hahuma to Sachen Kunga Nyingpo.[góuõ rdo rje'i tshig rkaõ gi 'grel pa phyug dpal sa skya pachen po la jo mo 'a 'u mas óus pa].Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (
No. 189. ff. 297 - 496Commentary on Vajra Verses Requested by Jodhen Denbuma to Sac rdo rje'i tshig rkaõ gi 'grel pa rnal 'byor gyi dbaõ phyug dpal sa skya pachen po la jo gdan lda pa).Author: sa chen kun dga' s–iõ po (1092-1158).# # #Vol. A 30 (Red Annals)Title No. 190.
295Commentary on Vajra Verses on the Basis of the Teachings of Guru Ma–junŒtha.(góuõ
'grel pa 'jam mgon bla ma'i gsuõ sgros ma).Author: dmar chos kyi rgyal po (Sakya Paº¶ita's

No. 191. ff. 297 - 303Essence of the Profound Meanings: A Synopsis of Lamdre Tecahings.
che'i khrid yig bsdus pa gsol 'debs zab don s–iõ po].Author: dkon mchog lhun grub (1497-15
192. ff. 305 - 314Essence of Nectar: The Essential Meanings of the View "Non-Differentiatio Nirvana".['khor 'das dbyer med kyi lta ba'i gnad rnams legs par b§ad pa bdud rsti'i –iõ khu].A
No. 193. ff. 315 - 430Jewel Mirror of Profound Meanings: A Guide to Teach Uncommon Lam rin po che slob b§ad 'chad thabs mdor bsdus zab don nor bu'i me loõ).Author: bco brgyad kl rgya mtsho (1932-Title No. 194. ff. 431 - 446Wondrous Technical Key: A Complete Bibliogra Profound Dharma Articlesof Common and Uncommon Lamdre Teachings. [thun moõ ba tsh
b§ad zab mo'i chos skor cha lag daõ bcas pa'i dkar chag õo mtshar 'phrulgyi lde'u mig).Edito õag dbaõ kun dga' (1945-).# # #Vol. Evam 31 (Blue Annals)Title No. 195. ff. 1 - 14Illu Torch of Lamdre: Synopsis of Uncommon Lamdre.(gsuõ õag rin po che am 'bras bu daõ bca õag bstan pa gsalba'i –i ma'i 'od zer óes bya ba las bsdus don gsuõ õag gsal byed sgron me legs grub.Title No. 196. ff. 15 - 95Illuminating Torch of Enlightenment Thought: Instructions Preliminary Three Visions.(snaõ gsum gyi khrid yig byaõ chub sems –id gsal ba'i sgron me).
legs grub.Title No. 197. ff. 97 - 151Illuminating Torch of the Wisdom of Initiation: Instructions onNon-Differentiation of Samsara and Nirvana of Three Tantras.(gyud gsum 'khor 'das dbye dbaõ gi ye §es gsal ba'i sgron me).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 198. ff. 153 - 179Illu Torch of Pure Vision: Instructions on Outer and Inner Generation Stage.(phyi naõ bskyed rin snaõ gsal ba'i sgron me).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 199 ff. 181 - 204Illuminating To Blissful Heat: Instructions on Self-Blessings.(raõ byin rlabs kyi khrid yig bde drod gsal ba'i sg me).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 200. ff. 205 - 223Illuminating Torch of the Supreme Messenger .[pho –a lam mchog gsal ba'i sgron me].Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 201 233Illuminating Torch of Bliss-Void: Instructions on Maº¶ala Cakra.(dkyil 'khor 'khor lo'i khrid stoõ gsal ba'i sgron me).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 202. ff. 235 - 240Illuminating To Becoming rainbow Body: Instructions on Vajra Waves.(rdo rje'i rba rlabs kyi khrid yig 'ja' lus ba'i sgron me).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 203. ff. 241 - 249Illuminating Torch of Te Sources.(bstan bcos daõ luõ gi skabs gsal ba 'brel bsgrigs gsal ba'i sgron me).Author: kun d grub.Title No. 204. ff. 251 - 335Vital Essence of Great Bliss: Instructions on Precious Lamdr rin po che'i khrid yig bde chen bcud kyi s–iõ po).Author: kun dga' legs grub.Title No. 205. ff.
463Mine of Siddhis: Instructions on Precious Lamdre.(gsuõ õag rin po che'i khrid yig dõos g gter).Author: dge sloõ saõs rgyas rin chen (1453-1524).Title No. 206. ff. 465-659Moon's Ray Exposition on Generation and Completion Stage of êr´ Hevajra.(dpal kye rdo rje'i bskyed rdz ões don gsal byed zla ba'i 'od `zer).Author: dge sloõ dkon mchog dpal ldan.Title No. 207. ff.
661-673Refuting the Evil Talks: Clear Answers to the Questions of Brahmacakra.(dri ba tsha lan gsal bar bstan pa smra ba õan 'joms).Author:# # #Aoki, B., Study on Early Tibetan Chron Regarding Discrepancies of Datesand their Adjustments, The Japan Society for the Promo
Tokyo,1955.# # #Bell, Charles, The Religion of Tibet, Oxford, 1931.# # #Bhattacharya, Bene
Introduction to Buddhist Esoterism, Oxford UniversityPress, London, 1932.# # #Blofield, Joh

Mysticism of Tibet, E. P. Dutton and Co., New York,1970.# # #Chandra, Prof. Dr. L., The Bl
(Tibetan Text), Indian Academy of IndianCulture, New Delhi, 1974.# # #Chandra, Prof. Dr. L
Works of Sum-pa mkhan -po Vol. I, InternationalAcademy of Indian Culture, New Delhi, 197
Prof. Dr. L., Pad ma dkar po's Tibetan Chronicle, New Delhi, 1968.# # #Chattopadhyaya, A.
Tibet, Life and Works of D´paµkara êr´j–Œna,Indian Studies Past And Present, Calcutta, 19
Prof. Dr. L., Catalogue of Kanjur and Tanjur, Vol. I Texts (IndianTitles in Tanjur, Indo-Tibeta
Calcutta, 1972.# # #Chandra, Prof. Dr. L., TŒranŒtha's History of Buddhism, Indian Institut Study, Simla, 1970.# # #Choedak, N., The Blossoming of the Lotus Grove, gsuõ õag rin po daõ khog phubs kyi zin bris gsuõ õag bstan pa'i pad tshal bóad pa, SakyaLamdre Literature 1983, Vol. V.# # #Csoma, de Koros, A., Enumeration of Historical and Grammatical Works
In Tibet, JASB, 1938.# # #Dargay, Eva, M., The Rise of Esoteric Buddhism in Tibet, Motilal
Banarasidas,Delhi, 1977.# # #Das, S. C., Indian Pandits in the Land of Snow, Calcutta, 196
#Das, S. C., History of Rise, Progress, and Downfall of Buddhism in India,Calcutta, 1908.#
C., A Tibetan-English Dictionary with Sanskrit Synonyms, CompactEdition, Tokyo, 1983.# #
B., An Introduction to Tantric Buddhism, (Reprint) Shambala,Berkely, 1974.# # #Dasgupta, Religious Cults as Background of Bengali Literature,University Press, Calcutta, 1950.# # #D
S., (Hindi trans.) The Biography of Eighty Four Saints,Bibliotheca-Indo- Tibetica [4], Central Higher Tibetan Studies,Varanasi, 1979.# # #Dowman, Keith, The Power-Places of Central T Pilgrim's Guide,Routledge and Kegan Paul, London, 1988.# # #Dowman, Keith, Masters of Lives and Legends of theMahŒsiddhas, Inner Traditions International, Vermount, 1988.#
mKhyen-brtse's Guide to the Holy Places of Central Tibet, SerieOrientale Roma XVI, Instuto Medio Ed Estremo Oriente, Rome,1958.# # #Gyaltshan, Drakpa, J., Royal Genealogy of T rgyal rabs, TheComplete Works of The Great Masters of the Sa skyapa Sect of TibetanBud Tokyo, 1968, Vol. IV.# # #Gyaltshan, Drakpa, Hagiography of Indian Gurus, bla ma rgya gar rgyus,The Complete Works of The Great Masters of the Sa skyapa Sect of TibetanBuddhis 1968, Vol. III.# # #Gyaltshan, Sonam, L. D., Wondrous Vision, bla ma brgyud pa'i rnam par mtshar snaõ ba, Sakya Lamdre Literature Series, Dehra Dun, 1983, Vo. XVI.# # #Hakaju, Complete Catalogue of the Tibetan Buddhist Canons, TohokuImperial University, Japan, 19
Tsang Nyon, The Life of Marpa The Translator, Praj–Œ Press, Boulder,1982.# # #Joshi, La
The Buddhistic Culture Of India, Ph. D. Thesis,Gorakhpur University (1964/2508), First Editi
Banarasidass, NewDelhi, 1967.# # #Kuznetsov, B. I., (Translit.) rgyal rabs gsal ba'i me loõ Mirror ofRoyal Genealogies), Laiden, Netherlands, 1966.# # #Moray, M. S., History of Buddh
Saraswati Pustak Bhandar,Ahmedabad, 1985.# # #Obermiller, E. Dr. (Trans.) History of Bu
Bu-ston, 2 Parts,Heidelberg, 1931-2.# # #Rinpoche, Chogay, T., History of Sakya Tradition
Press, Bristol, 1983.# # #Rinpoche, Dhongthog, T., History of the Sakya Tradition, New Delh
#Robinson, James, B., The Eighty Four Siddhas, Ph.D. Thesis, The University ofWisconsin-
#Robinson, James, B, Buddha's Lions, Dharma Publishing, 1979.# # #Roerich, George N., Annals, Two Volumes, Royal Asiatic Societyof Bengal, Calcutta, 1949.# # #Sangpo, Khetsu

Dictionary of Tibet and Tibetan Buddhism, Vo. XThe Sa-skya-pa Tradition, Part One, Library and Archives,Dharamasala, 1979.# # #Sankalia, H. D., The University of NŒlandŒ, Orient Delhi, 1972.# # #Shakabpa, Tsepon, T. W., Tibet: A Political History, Yale University, 1967,#
#Sinha, Bindeshwari Prasad, Dynastic History of Magadha, Abhinav Publications,New Dell
#Snellgrove, D. L, (Trans.) The Hevajra Tantra, A Critical Study, OxfordUniversity Press, Lo
#Snellgrove, D. L, Indo-Tibetan Budhism, Indian Buddhists and Their TibetanSuccessors, Publications, London, 1987.# # #Sonam, Kunga, A., Treasure of Jewels: A History of the 'K prince-abbots of sa-skya, 'dzam gliõ byaõ phyogs kyi thub pa'i rgyal tshab chen podpal ldar gduõ rabs rin po che ji ltar byon pa'i tshul gyi rnampar thar pa õo mtshar rin po che'i baõ m
'dod kun 'byuõ, TibetanBonpo Monastic Centre, Dolanji, P.O. Ochghat (via Solan), H.P., 19
Kunga, A, Ocean of Collected Elegant sayings: A Lamdre History, gsuõ õagrin po che'i byo
daõ bcas pa legs b§ad 'dus pa'i rgya mtsho,Sakya Lamdre Literature Series, Dehra Dun, 1
#Suzuki, Dr. Daisetz, T., The Tibetan Tripi aka, Catalogue and Index, Tokyo1962.# # #TŒr
Collected Works of TŒranŒtha, jo naõ tŒ ra nŒ tha'i bka' 'bum,Vol. XVI, sman rtsis §es rig
Delhi, 1985.# # #TŒranŒtha, Five Historical Works of TŒranŒtha, Tibetan Nyingmapa M
Distt. Lohit, Arunachal pradesh, 1974.# # #Templeman, David, (Trans.) TŒranŒtha's bka' b SevenInstruction Lineages, Library of Tibetan Works and Archives, 1983.# # #Templeman, TŒranŒtha's Life of K¨·ºŒcŒrya / KŒnha, Library ofTibetan Works and Archives, Dharam
#Thaye, Jamgon, K. L., A Treasury of Instructions And Techniques For SpiritualRealization
Vol. IV.# # #Trengwa, P. T., chos 'byuõ mkhas pa'i dga' ston, The Feast For Scholars,Repri rigs dpe skrun khaõ, Peking, 1986.# # #Tucci, Giuseppe, (Trans.) deb ther dmar po gsar ma Chronicles by bsodnams grags pa, Instituto Italiano Per II, Medio Estremo Orienter, Roma,
#Tucci, Giuseppe, (Trans.), Rin-Chen-Bzaõ-Po And the Renaissance of Buddhism inTibet
Millenium, êata-Pi aka Series, Indo-Asian Literatures, Vol.348, Aditya Prakashan, New Delh
#Tibetan Painted Scrolls, 2 Volumes, La libreria Della Stato, Rome, 1949.# # #Yuthok, Lam
1990. "The Origin of Lam'dre Tradition in India", BAthesis submitted in Oct.1990 to South &
Faculty of AsianStudies, Australian National University, Canberra ACT 2601# # #Vidyabhus
History of the Medieval School of Indian Logic, OrientalBooks Reprint Corporation, New De
#Virèpa, The Vajra Verses, sde dge bstan 'gyur, Vol. Shi. Title No. 2284.# # #Vostrikov, Ar
Tibetan Historical Literature, Trans. from the Russianby Harish Chandra Gupta, Soviet Indo Calcutta, 1970.# # #Ui, Hakaju, Prof., A Complete Catalogue of the Tibetan Buddhist Canon Edition), Tohoku Imperial University, Japan, 1934.# # #Wangchuk, Jamyang K., The Flouri
Secret Doctrine, Sakya LamdreLiterature Series, Dehra Dun, 1983, Vol. XIV.# # #Watters, T
Chwang's Travels in India, 629-645 A.D., Edited byT.W. Rhys Davids and S. W. Bushell, Re
1941.----------end of file

ÉÍÍÍ

be between human and super-human, mortal and immortal. At the level of everyday experience, it is admitted, all is not well in the world. There has to be a transcendence, a rising above or a getting beyond this state of affairs of the mundane world. The Buddhist looks upon life in the world as not being totally satisfactory. Both areas of life of man, the psycho- and the physical, suffer on account of this deficiency. Some part of it, particularly the physical, like decay, disease and death, is natural and hereditary by virtue of our being caught up in the recurring life process or sams*ƒ*ra.

Psychopathic disturbances, on the other hand, like greed, hatred and jealousy, are products of maladjustment and miscalculation by man, through ignorance and deception (avidy*ƒ* and moha). The totality of this unsatisfactory nature of life is what is termed in Buddhism as dukkha and the Buddhist, in his highest and perfect religious pursuit, seeks salvation therefrom (na vo dukkh*ƒ* pamutti attthi Ud.51; dukkh*ƒ* atthi pamocanam S.I.62; dukkhassa nissaranam pa¤¤*ƒ*yissati S.II.10). From loka or lokiya, the world or the worldly, he seeks transcendence to the lokuttara which shares not of the nature of the world. Whether such transcendence results in a perpetual state of factual existence, to the extent of being real in terms of time and space, or it is only a logical assumption in contrast to what is being rejected, is to be examined in detail elsewhere. At any rate, we may here safely conclude that the Buddhist therefore has no problem in his own religious context in subscribing to the general definition of salvation as `the saving of the soul', which to him would mean no more and no less than the liberation or emancipation of the individual being from the `turmoil of the life process' or sams*ƒ*ra in which he is caught up. Coming next to the idea of `the deliverance from sin,' it has already been indicated that the Buddhist seeks deliverance from the unsatisfactory nature of the world which, more precisely speaking, pertains to the life of man than to the physical world outside. It is man's submission to this conflict which is termed dukkha. In fact, the Buddha himself declares that his entire mission consists of clarifying the real nature of this unsatisfactory position of man in the world which is essentially the connotation of the term dukkha and of prescribing for the termination of this dukkha referred to as nirodha (Pubbe c'ƒham bhikkhave etarahi ca dukkha¤c'eva pa¤¤ƒpemi dukkhassa ca nirodham. M.I.140). From the point of view of the Buddhist, man is in this plight through his own seeking, or rather because of his non-seeking of a release therefrom. It is this seeking of what is antithetical to the mundane that liberates the bodhisatta [Siddhƒrtha Gautama] in his attainment of Buddhahood, and elevates him from man to super-man. Subject to birth, disease and death, he seeks release from them. In the Buddhist sense, this release or salvation from what is characteristic of human and worldly existence, converges on the transcendental here in this very existence. The word transcendental has certainly to be conceded to the Buddhist, together with the right to determine what it connotes. Since this state does not gravitate towards the earthly and is thus not moored to it, it is very precisely described in Buddhism as a state untraceable here and therefore much less in a world beyond. Much confusion with regard to Buddhism, particularly with regard to Nirvana which is its ultimate goal has arisen out of this inability to view it in terms of Buddhist values.

It is as a result of the discriminative consciousness of man which is referred to as vi¤¤ƒna getting loaded with too many mundane or worldly leanings that the life process both here and now as well as in the future existences to come gets charged with vitality or produces the life continuum which the Buddhists refer to as bhava or becoming. It is this process which renders the individual being in time-space dimension. Hence in the formula of Causal Genesis or Paticcasamuppƒda (Sk. pratŒtyasamutpƒda) we find the statement bhavapaccayƒ jƒti which means `becoming produces birth.' The very traceability of the individual is on account of this density and opacity which his consciousness acquires in the process. Consequently it is possible to point out and say that his mind has these propensities, that it leans on this or that (idam nissitam v¤¤ƒnan'ti). It is the very fuel on which life, with all its manifestations, glows. On the other hand, the scope of salvation in Buddhism is to bring about a de-conditioning of the mind or an ultimate reduction of the activity of the discriminative consciousness. Hence in Nirvana the process of this fuel generation ceases and the very basis of becoming (bhava), and not of the being, is totally destroyed. For Nirvana in Buddhism neither equates with nor is dependent on physical death.

In consequence of this, an inquiry with regard to what happens to a being who has attained Nirvana, after his death, in relation to the process of becoming this or that, is an unwarranted question. A predication with regard to his identity even in this very life is an untenable position. His mind being totally de-conditioned and being completely free from leanings of any sort, no identity whatsoever can be established of him, now or for the future. Sams*ƒ*ra-wise (i.e. life-process wise) he has ceased to be. This position with regard to the emancipated being, the one who has attained the state of Nirvana is clearly enunciated in the Buddhist texts. It stands well defended as the logical outcome of Buddhist thinking. The Alagadd–pama Sutta of the Majjhima Nikaya (M.I.p.140) expresses this very clearly. Its importance as a vital piece of information for the correct understanding of the scope of salvation in Buddhism, eschatologically, cannot be overrated. But lamentably, the Pali Text Society translation of this passage has completely missed this point and produced in its place something which does not consistently fit into the logic of the Buddhist theory of salvation. For the purpose of clarification, the original text in Pali together with the P.T.S translation and the suggested new rendering is added here.

Evam vimuttacittam kho bhikkhave bhikkhum sa-Ind*ƒ* dev*ƒ* sa-Brahmak*ƒ* sa-Paj*ƒ*patik*ƒ* anvesam n*ƒ*dhigacchanti - idam nissitam tath*ƒ*gatassa vi¤¤*ƒ*nan'ti. Tam kissa hetu. Ditthev*ƒ*ham bhikkhave dhamme tath*ƒ*gatam ananuvejjo ti vad*ƒ*mi (M.I.p.140).

P.T.S. Translation :

Monks, when a monk's mind is freed thus, the devas with Indra, Brahma and Paj*ƒ*pati, do not succeed in their search if they think : `This is the discriminative consciousness attached to a Tathƒgata.' What is the reason for this ? I, monks, say here and now that a Tathƒgata is untraceable.

Suggested translation :

Monks, devas with Indra, Brahma and Prajƒpati, tracking down a monk whose mind is freed, i.e. a monk who is emancipated, would not discover the discriminative consciousness of such a one (Tathƒgata) to be leaning on this or that (idam nissitam.) What is the reason for this ? I, monks, say that a Tathƒgata is untraceable even in this very life.

This same curiosity to track down the consciousness of the emancipated being after his death, is recorded in the story of Godhika in the Samyutta Nikaya (S.I.p.122). The Buddha declares that Godhika having attained the state of Nirvana passed away with a consciousness that finds no foothold : appatitthitena ca bhikkhave vi¤¤ƒnena godhiko kulaputto parinibbuto.

As against this, the goal in terms of Christian concepts is given as `admission to eternal bliss.' Here again, concept-wise and vocabulary-wise, the Buddhists would appear to be somewhat different from the Christians. Considering the fleeting and transitory nature of worldly phenomena which is consequently labeled as unsatisfactory, transcendence from it must logically bring about its antithesis, namely a non-transitory nature. But the bliss of Nirvana in Buddhism consists primarily of this elimination of transitoriness. Thus Nirvana is described as being non-birth (ajƒta), non-decay (ajara) and non-death (amata), i.e. free from features which are characteristic of samsƒra or the round of worldly existence. To be in this mortal frame of man and be assured that there would be no more subjection to these travails is truly the bliss of Nirvana. Even where they manifest themselves in the life of a liberated disciple during the remaining days of his life, it is as though they matter not to him any more and count for nothing in his life. That is why it is possible for him to say, with calm and composure-`I yearn not for life, I long not for death.' This was said by none other than the great disciple Sariputta (See Theragatha vv.1002-3). In this state one sees the consummation of the religious life in Buddhism. A liberated Buddhist disciple is a jŒvan mukta in the true sense of the word. His release is not eschatological. This alone, and not more nor less, is true Buddhist salvation. It is the transcendence of the true Buddhist disciple. The Buddhists have not the need like their fellow-religionists in Jainism, Sankhya, Yoga and Vedanta, to think of a videha mukti beyond this, to be looked upon as final liberation.

At this stage one is compelled to observe that it would be difficult to find in Buddhism, with regard to the notion of salvation, a parallel to the above mentioned Christian idea of `admission to eternal bliss.' In this context one cannot afford to lose sight of the basic divergences in the definition of life, the explanation of its origin and its ultimate goal in the two systems. To insist on a uniformity here is far from desirable and to assume the existence of such a uniformity is far from the truth. One has to point out that even the assumed relationship of the liberated tathƒgata in Buddhism with the Absolute in the Upanishads is only a forced one. Of the many words used to refer to the state of Nirvana, amata or non-death or deathless is the direct outcome of the earlier concept of ajƒta or non-birth. Primarily Nirvana is the state which signifies the cessation of the process of being born again. Some of the Pali phrases which signify this are khŒnƒ jƒti [birth is terminated] and nƒparam itthattƒyƒti pajƒnƒti [comprehends that there is no more of being such and such] as at M.I.138. Thus the idea of deathless as an attribute of Nirvana is a derivative and negative concept, coming in the wake of 'no more rebirth'. Reference to Nirvana as `the realm of the Eternal', while one appears to be making use of Pali sources belonging to the Theravada tradition, has to be judged as a gross distortion (The God of Buddha by Jamshed Fozdar pp.23,24).

Lastly, let us take note of the crowning phrase of the more or less Christian definition of salvation viz. `wrought for man by the atonement of Christ.' The approximating likeness of this concept in Buddhism is seen in the Bodhisattva doctrine of the Mahayanic schools where the magnanimity of the saviour in the person of the bodhisattva works out the moral, social and spiritual emancipation of man. Acts of sacrifice and surrender of what is personally beneficial in the interests of the multitude marks out the bodhisattva as one who is dedicated to work for the salvation of suffering humanity. Texts like the Sukhƒ vatŒvy–ha S–tra and the SaddharmapundarŒka S–tra (Ch.24 entitled Samantamukhaparivarta) deal with this role of the bodhisattva in great detail.

It is on such a religio-philosophical basis as described so far that the Buddhists structure their salvation machinery. The goal of their salvation is Nirvana which is the complete cessation of the worldly life process as it is discernible to man (compare such uses in Pali as `acchijji vattam : terminated the process of revolving in samsara' and `chinnam vattam na vattati : the wheel is destroyed, it rolls not again' at Ud.p.75. Note the imagery of the wheel rolling on. Also `ettƒ vatƒ vattam vattati itthattam pa¤¤ƒ panƒ ya : So long will the wheel roll on establishing a state of thusness' at D.II.63f. It is this process of the wheel of life rolling on which is termed samsara, and stands in marked contrast to Nirvana which is the cessation of that process. The travails thereof are known as dukkha and transcendence or release from them is what is implied by the term moksa.

In Buddhism, the discovery of both the malady as well as the remedy for it was made by the Buddha himself at a human level of analysis and inference and through a diligent application to the perfection of wisdom via a process of personal self-culture and self-development. This is why the Buddha ultimately declared that as far as salvation is concerned man is without the external refuge of a Divine Being (attƒ no loko anabhissaro M.II.68). Another very popular Pali term used for the concept of salvation in Buddhism is vimutti (Sk. vimukti) which also etymologically means release. Having looked upon this release from the trumoil of life or the cessation thereof as the real salvation of man, the Buddha in his profound but simple thesis of the Four Noble Truths, prescribed in his Truth of the Way or magga sacca a path leading to its attainment. It is the path that leads man from grief to happiness, from death to immortality, from worldliness to transcendence. In the process of winning this salvation according to the tradition of Theravada Buddhism the role or the Buddha begins and ends at the level of indicating what this path is. The Buddha is in fact called the proclaimer of the way, hitherto undeclared : anakkhƒtassa maggassa akkhƒtƒ (M.III.8). The striving for the successful attainment of it is entirely the work of each individual. `Each individual must make an effort by himself. The Buddhas only indicate the way : `Tumhehi kiccam ƒtappam akkhƒtƒro tathƒgatƒ (Dhammapada.v.276).

In marked contrast to the salvation process in most theistic religions which invoke qualities of heart like faith and devotion (sraddhƒ and bhakti), the Buddhists stress on the role of the individual towards this same attainment which requires the development of the human personality in a different direction. First and foremost, it requires initiative and effort, the first steps in putting oneself on gear, as it were. This attempt at making a sustained effort or application of viriya (viriyam ƒrabhati) is in fact, one of the ten perfections (viriya pƒramŒ) which in the tradition of the Theravada a bodhisattva is required to develop towards the attainment of his Buddhahood. Of this too, the initiative or getting into stride (arabbha dhƒtu) comes to be specially commented upon as a vigorous and vital aspect of personality. This, together with resolve or determination (adhitthƒna) which is another of the ten perfections, invokes the qualities of the heart with a different stress. Development of the Buddhist path to salvation on the other hand is predominantly weighted on the side of qualities of the head. Decisive mental alertness (sati or Skt. smrti) is an early requirement for the development of a meaningful concentration (samƒdhi) of mind. All these are invariably found to be prerequisites for the acquisition of the very vital tool for the salvation process, which is none other than the penetrative wisdom or pa¤¤ƒ (Skt. praj¤ƒ) which is the crown jewel of Buddhist salvation yet serving only as a means to an end and not an end in itself.

As far as the Buddhist concept of salvation is concerned, it is to be observed that this transcendence from the world is the result of comprehending the true nature of the world and consequently of coming to proper relations with it. The forces that bind man to it, in rather inevitably painful ways, are to be personally comprehended in order to be able to reduce their gravitation towards the earthly. This involves both an individual and inward adjustment as well as adjustments with social implications. There is no denying the fact that the former is more basic and primary while the social implications are more derivative. While this is necessarily so, it does not reduce the ethical richness of the religious system. Starting with the religiously primary consideration of self-adjustment with the goal of salvation in mind, we have to focus attention on two major items which relate to this. The degree of involvement of man in the affairs of the world being the basic core of the phenomenon of his unhappiness in life or dukkha, the remedial measures towards its elimination or reduction require that man studies, in the first instance, the reason for this involvement. At the same time he has also to investigate and find out for himself why this involvement brings about unhappiness. This latter leads to an exhaustive analysis of the true nature of the world or worldly phenomena.

It would be profitable at this stage to indicate that as far as the early phase of Buddhism known as the Theravada is concerned the search for reality is no more than the desire to comprehend the real and true nature (yathabhucca) of the world in which we are and with which we are constantly in communication. It is to be categorically stated that this is not a search for a Reality beyond this life or beyond this world. Nor does the attempt of the Buddhist to grasp the real and true nature of the world lead to the assumption, as with some of the other Indian philosophies, that the empirical world is no more than mƒyƒ or a mind-made illusion. The world does exist on its own tempo. In the Buddhist analysis and scrutiny it becomes evident that the world, including man therein, is essentially subject to the law of change (viparinƒmadhamma). Known also as the law of impermanence or anicca, this basic character necessarily generates in the mind of the worlding states of conflict, tension and frustration, on account of his own inability to cope with these changes which, though by no means welcome are characteristic of the world in which he lives. Of the three signata or characteristics which mark the life of man in the world, it is this changing, transitory nature, its anicca characteristic which in its wake brings along the other two, namely unsatisfactoriness or dukkha and substancelessness or anatta (soullessness).

Such a world view or an awareness of the true characteristics of the world must put the Buddhist disciple who is endowed with a degree of self-awareness in a position of guarded activity. The over-enlargement of the ego with an associated assertion of I and mine has then necessarily to be kept at a minimum. Speaking in Buddhist terms, derivative notions of greed and hatred (lobha and dosa) which start spiraling around the assertion of I and mine, are set in motion by likes and dislikes (piya and appiya), in terms of man's desire to possess or reject (abhijjhƒ and vyƒpƒda). A true Buddhist disciple is called upon to start his religious life with a regulation of this process. The impact of this psycho-ethical correction in ultimate terms of salvation, is comparable to the two sides of a coin. The result of this ethical correction is concurrently active in the two areas, individual and social. A disciple who is in quest of his salvation is thus seen to be gradually working towards the reduction and eradication of these pernicious traits of mind, namely greed and hatred. In their place, there develops in the mind of the disciple love and charity, a desire to give and share instead of a greed to selfishly possess as well as a desire to love, tolerate and accommodate rather than hate, reject and repel. Salvation-wise, these virtues are individually elevating and ennobling, and socially exhilarating and leading to productive growth. They form the very bases from which a man's right to his life and property comes to be vindicated.

The survey which I have just concluded was undertaken with a view to indicate the intellectual basis on which the Buddhist formula of salvation operates. However, it is to be appreciated that the socio-intellectual changes which come upon the individual at this stage are, from the point of view of the Buddhist, absolved from the charge of `being purely theoretical'. With the Buddhists, all activities have their origin at the level of the mind (Manopubbangamƒ dhammƒ Dhp.1). Correctness or otherwise, propriety or impropriety, of all action committed by man is determined in terms of the intellectual activity, or in other words, decision making undertaken by the doer (manasƒ ce pasannena.....manasƒ ce padutthena bhƒsati vƒ karoti vƒ Dhp.1 & 2). Even before an act is rendered in physical terms through word or deed, it already registers at the mind level its impact on the doer. Human activity lends itself to evaluation with greater ease at the level of physical expression. Their social desirability or viciousness is felt unmistakably at this level. In Buddhism, this gauging of human activity is attempted from both ends. In the Ambalatthika Rƒhulovƒda Sutta of the Majjhima Nikaya, the Buddha in his admonitions to Rahula, uses the yardstick of results of action to determine their approvability. `That which is detrimental to one's own well-being, or to the well-being of the other or of both, should unhesitatingly be given up as being bad', says the Buddha (See MLS.II.89f).

In counselling the Kalamas. on the other hand. the Buddha advises them to determine the nature of their motivation to activity (as having its origin in greed, hatred or delusion) and to regulate their activity to be of non-pernicious motivation, free from greed, hatred and delusion.

It would now be easy to indicate and clarify that the Buddhist way to salvation is founded on this theoretical basis and on this intellectual analysis. The Buddha who was concerned with the unsatisfactoriness (or dukkha) of the world in which man was caught up and for which he was earnestly searching a way out, until he himself attained the stage of enlightenment or Buddhahood, thus transcending this worldliness, and prescribed a way (magga or patipadƒ) for the salvation of man.

This is the fourth of the Four Noble Truths propounded by the Buddha. Designated as the Noble Eightfold Path (ariya atthangika magga) it covers a very vast expanse of human development, both individual and social. It starts with a basic intellectual grasp of the human situation, upholding that such a corrected vision about life alone could regulate it, harnessing its resources for its own redemption. This is termed samm*ƒ* ditthi or corrected vision, man's vision about life and the world. Working with an efficient intellectual quantum, provided both from within and without (parato ca ghoso yoniso ca manasik*ƒ*ro M.I.294) man is able judge for himself the ill-effects of his own actions. First and foremost, he learns to cultivate the Buddhist attitude to life, the non-permissibility of a staggering ego (sakk*ƒ*yaditthi), a position which is most desirable salvation- wise, to the individual. Psychologically, this elimination of the basis of individuation or personal assertion, brings in a whole series of changes in social values. This brings in a direct relationship of man to man in terms of friendship, totally non-discriminative. This is maitrŒ or loving kindness. This universal love which is the result of the obliteration of the ego is not restricted even by considerations of human and animal. Life in the universe, both great and small, comes within its range. So does friend and foe, those near and far, those seen and unseen (Ye keci p*ƒ*nabh£tatthi tas*ƒ* v*ƒ* th*ƒ*var*ƒ* v*ƒ* anavases*ƒ* dŒhg*ƒ* v*ƒ* ye mahant*ƒ* v*ƒ* majjhim*ƒ*rassak*ƒ*nukath–l*ƒ* ditth*ƒ* v*ƒ* ye va additth*ƒ* ye ca d–re vasanti avid–re bh–t*ƒ* v*ƒ* sambhavesŒ v*ƒ* sabbe satt*ƒ* bhavantu sukhitatt*ƒ*. Sn.vv.164-7) Consequent to this corrected (samm*ƒ*) vision about life, everything else that follows in the noble eightfold way necessarily acquire the tone of correctness. Thoughts which spring from such a basis are invariably wholesome thoughts (samm*ƒ* sankappa :item no 2). As these manifest themselves in action they give rise to inoffensive, fruitful speech (samm*ƒ* v*ƒ*c*ƒ* :item no 3) and justifiable forms of activity (samm*ƒ* kammanta : item no 4). Up to this stage, while the individual is being cultured in terms of his thought, word and deed, society is at the same tine benefiting from the non-corrosiveness of individual action. This being the graduation of the individual on the path of salvation as we have already indicated above, we witness a twofold benefit in two distinct spheres.

While gradual spiritual ascendance on the path of salvation is assured to the individual on the one hand, we also find him fitting himself to life in the world with great ease and with even greater harmony. Conflict and tension as far as each individual is concerned, thereby necessarily step out of the way. On the other hand, society is not harassed by erring individuals. The composition of society would witness a greater percentage of such persons of corrected vision and regulated action. Item no 5 of this code for salvation, namely samm*ƒ* *ƒ*jiva or corrected livelihood grooms the life style of an individual in society in such a way as to make society completely safe for living. The term *ƒ*jiva implies the means whereby one makes a living. At the minimum, man must find the food and clothing for himself and his dependents. But he must earn his bread, himself. But this wherewithal for living which in Buddhist contexts is referred to as bhoga has to be acquired by just and fair means : dhammikehi dhammaladdhehi bhogehi (A.II.67). One has to toil for it (b*ƒ*h*ƒ* balapariciteh i. ibid.) and earn it with the sweat of one's brow (sed*ƒ*vakkhittehi. ibid.). Thus in terms of Buddhist values, while it is accepted that life is dear to every one (sabbesam jŒvitam piyam : Dhp.v.130), it has to be nurtured and kept going by fair and honourable means. These social safeguards, built into the Buddhist scheme of salvation, enhances its relevance in a highly competitive commercialized society, where money values and material turnover, and those alone, seem to topple down other considerations.

Viewing the Buddhist concept of salvation from yet another angle, we find the process leading to it built upon three ascending terraces. This is referred to as the training via the threefold-culture or tisso sikkh*ƒ*. Here too, in the final ascent is perfection of wisdom or attainment of undistorted vision about oneself. In the Eightfold way discussed earlier the perfection of right concentration (samm*ƒ* sam*ƒ*dhi or item no. 8) brings about perfected wisdom or samm*ƒ* ¤*ƒ*na. This is what precedes salvation or release (vimutti). The threefold culture of sikkh*ƒ* too, has wisdom (pa¤¤ƒ) as its final state preceding release (samm*ƒ* ¤*ƒ*nassa samm*ƒ* vimutti pahoti. D.II.217). While the second stage of this training geared towards salvation, isolates the individual, more or less, to a transcendent plane, from his involvement with the mundane, its basis or sŒla deals essentially with the correction of man in relation to the social environment. This, in other words, is no doubt the moral uplift of man. As far as this code of sŒla is concerned, there is a difference in scope and content between that of monk and layman. Geared towards the attainment of the goal of salvation, worked out through a gradual process of up-lifting, a Buddhist disciple rids himself of obnoxious patterns of behaviour through word and deed and cultivates positive traits of character which contribute to the healthy growth of social harmony and concord. The Buddhist charter for this is the `code of five precepts' or pa¤casŒla. Abstaining from the destruction of life both human and animal, he develops boundless love for all life, working for their weal and welfare. This indeed is the first moral precept of the Buddhist layman. Abstaining from stealing, he cultivates the manifold aspects of honesty, preventing the alienation of any one from his legitimate possessions. A special precept safeguards the privacy of his domestic life, the safety and security of the females of his household. Honesty of word and deed is guaranteed and safeguarded by the fourth precept relating to speech. This protects and upholds societal interconnectedness founded on honesty and trustworthiness. Finally, there is included the fifth precept of abstinence from drugs and alcoholic drinks for the sake of greater sanity and sound judgement among men.

Thus, it may be said that from whatever angle one looks upon the Buddhist path to salvation, it becomes abundantly clear that it is geared towards and invariably results in character formation or reformation of character which the Buddhists refer to as a `developed or cultured self' (bh*ƒ*vitatta). The real standing of such a person is indeed both within the society and outside it, with its individual and social dimensions.

Ven Professor Dhammavihari
Vajira¤ƒna Dharmƒyatanaya Maharagama,
Sri Lanka

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP or the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU orANU Soc.Sci.WWW Server at http://coombs.anu.edu.a document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given inthe coombspapers top level I files][This version: 22 March 1994]----------HEART TO HEART: ZEN AND RELIGION: THE ROOTS AND THE SHAPE.An un-dated teisho, most likely delivered to an audience in the mid- or late 1980s, made available to SydneyZen Center in a xeroxed form.
addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues.Therefore, it should analysed in a mindful way.All copyrights to this document belong to Father Ama Genunken Centre, Madras, India----------Heart to Heart:Zen and religion: the roots and the shape.by Ama SAMY S.J. RoshiBodhi Zen Centre originally comes from the religion of Mahayana Buddhism. But thespirit and practise of Zen institutional religion. The heartof Zen, is indeed religious, and the heart of religion is Zen.
Whatrelationship is there between Buddhism and Zen, between Christ ianityand Zen, and be Zen ?The roots of Zen are in ancient India. Indian Mahayana sutras andphilosophy being at origin. Particularly the'indwelling of everything in everything else', of the Avatamsara Sutra( Buddhism), and the Heart Sutra's 'form is no other thanemptiness, and emptiness no other very heart ofZen. The 'heart to heart' transmission of Zen can be traced back toIndian origin seen in Kukai's response to Saicho's requestfor Kukai's Indian manuscripts. The straight-ba ofzazen is yogic in origin as well. Chinese Taoism gave to Zen anappreciation of, and identi nature.The Japanese contribution was the systematization of the Zen practiceand the additi discipline and aesthetics via the Zen arts.As regards the koan practice, 'who am ?' Is the we ofRamana Maharishi which goes back to the upanishads. Who am i? What isthe real? Wher quest of the ancient Indianseekers for salvation-enlightenment. It was, however, theheart-re Asia which formed the heart of Zen,Zen is sometimes identified with the discipline, or the ritu aesthetics, all of which is distortion of authentic Zen. Zen isprimarily and fundamentally a wa salvation, or of enlightenment-compassion which bursts forth in Linchi's realisation of the co individual as the "absolute" subject & master, or better, thetrue person of the way, and which in the greatcompassion of the bodhisattva "Four Great Vows". Zen as is known todayby mos 'Japanese-made' body and form. There are also Chinese,Korean and Vietmanese forms of ignored in theunderstanding and transmission of Zen. Being rooted in thesetraditions and di vital, but these are not withoutambiguity and darkness. The letter kills, the spirit gives life.Sp Zen spirit, cannot live apart from the letter. It isabove all in the truly enlightened, authentic p the letterbecomes spirit, and the spirit becomes life-giving word. He or she isthe 'ferryman' b worlds.The main point made in the essays is - that Zen must be practisedsimply as Zen, whi and koan practice, and thatChristians can practice Zen wholeheartedly, can lose themselves new life. Standing in the in-between of Buddhism andChristianity, one can come to quite a n depth. Inthis journey, a Christ ian is not a Christ ian, a Buddhist not aBuddhist: then, the Bu truly a Buddhist and the Christ iantruly a Christian. As one Christian practitioner put it nicely, am a Buddhist, my mother hates me: when I am a Buddha, sheadores me". 'Putting on'the r 'putting-on' theheart-mind of Buddha. From heart to heart.Heart: hsin or shin, can mean min soul. Yamada Ko-unRoshi used to translate it as heart-mind: in Zen literature it wasusually t mind, and Zen in the West tended towards thephilosophical, intuitive, wilful, mindless, a-pers freedomaspects. Zen, as Mahayana Buddhism, is the heart-mind of wisdom -compassion: s heart, discerning heart, heartliberated, transformed, enlightened, compassionate. This 'hear of the human and cosmos and god. Heart is presence andmystery: knowing as well as unkn freedom: time andeternity: beauty, truth and goodness: joy, peace, sorrow andcompassion.

heart to heart. From heart-mind toheart-mind is the transmission. Mu_shin to mu-shin: empt heart of no-heart.How many heart-minds are there? Standing nowhere how do you let yourh
? Middle of the night, the moon is laughing - doyou hear
?----------end of file

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP and/or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or ANU Soc.Sci.WWW Se at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[This version: 9 June 1994]

HEART TO HEART: ZEN AND RELIGION: THE ROOTS AND THE SHAPE.

An un-dated teisho, most likely delivered to an Enlish speaking, Christian audience in the mid- or late 1980s, made available to Sydney Zen Center in a xeroxed form.

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Father Ama Genunken SAMY S.J., Bodhi Zen Centre, Madras, India

Heart to Heart:
Zen and religion: the roots and the shape.

by Ama SAMY S.J. Roshi
Bodhi Zen Centre, Madras, India

Zen originally comes from the religion of Mahayana Buddhism. But the spirit and practise of Zen go beyond institutional religion. The heart of Zen, is indeed religious, and the heart of religion is Zen. What relationship is there between Buddhism and Zen, between Christianity and Zen, and between religion and Zen?

The roots of Zen are in ancient India. Indian Mahayana sutras and philosophy being at the source and origin. Particularly the 'indwelling of everything in everything else', of the Avatamsara Sutra (Hua Yen Buddhism), and the Heart Sutra's 'form is no other than emptiness, and emptiness no other than form', are the very heart of Zen. The 'heart to heart' transmission of Zen can be traced back to Indian origins, as can be seen in Kukai's response to Saicho's request for Kukai's Indian manuscripts. The straight-backed lotus sitting of zazen is yogic in origin as well. Chinese Taoism gave to Zen an appreciation of, and identification with, nature.

The Japanese contribution was the systematization of the Zen practice and the addition to it of discipline and aesthetics via the Zen arts. As regards the koan practice, 'who am I?' Is the well known inquiry of Ramana Maharishi which goes back to the Upanishads. Who am i? What is the real? Where do I go? Such is the quest of the ancient Indian seekers for salvation-enlightenment. It was, however, the heart-response of East Asia which formed the heart of Zen, Zen is sometimes identified with the discipline, or the rituals, or the aesthetics, all of which is distortion of authentic Zen. Zen is primarily and fundamentally a way of salvation, or of enlightenment-compassion which bursts forth in Linchi's realisation of the concrete human individual as the "absolute" subject & master, or better, the true person of the way, and which is actualised in the great compassion of the bodhisattva "Four Great Vows". Zen as is known today by most, has a 'Japanese-made' body and form. There are also Chinese, Korean and Vietmanese forms of Zen and these cannot be ignored in the understanding and transmission of Zen. Being rooted in these traditions and discipline is vital, but these are not without ambiguity and darkness. The letter kills, the spirit gives life. Spirit, even Zen spirit, cannot live apart from the letter. It is above all in the truly enlightened, authentic person that the letter becomes spirit, and the spirit becomes life-giving word. He or she is the 'ferryman' between the worlds.

The main point made in the essays is -- that Zen must be practised simply as Zen, which means, zazen and koan practice, and that Christians can practice Zen wholeheartedly, can lose themselves into Zen and find new life. Standing in the in-between of Buddhism and Christianity, one can come to quite a new perspective and depth. In this journey, a Christian is not a Christian, a Buddhist not a Buddhist: then, the Buddhist is truly a Buddhist and the Christian truly a Christian. As one Christian practitioner put it nicely, -- "when I am a Buddhist, my mother hates me: when I am a Buddha, she adores me". 'Putting on'the mind of Christ ; 'putting-on' the heart-mind of Buddha. From heart to heart.

Heart: hsin or shin, can mean mind, heart, self, soul. Yamada Ko-un Roshi used to translate it as heart-mind: in Zen literature it was usually translated as mind, and Zen in the West tended towards the philosophical, intuitive, wilful, mindless, a-personal, freedom aspects. Zen, as Mahayana Buddhism, is the heart-mind of wisdom -- compassion: suffering heart, seeking heart, discerning heart, heart liberated, transformed, enlightened, compassionate. This 'heart' is the unity of the human and cosmos and god. Heart is presence and mystery: knowing as well as unknowing: grace and freedom: time and eternity: beauty, truth and goodness: joy, peace, sorrow and compassion. The journey is from heart to heart. From heart-mind to heart-mind is the transmission. Mu_shin to mu-shin: empty heart to empty heart of no-heart.

How many heart-minds are there? Standing nowhere how do you let your heart-mind come forth ? Middle of the night, the moon is laughing -- do you hear?

[end of file].

BuddhNetBBS (02) 660-3518
Buddha Dhamma Meditation Assoc Inc
PO Box K1020 Haymarket NSW 2000

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or ANU Soc.Sci.WWW Server at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html]

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX files]

[This version: 22 March 1994]

HEART TO HEART: ZEN AND RELIGION: THE ROOTS AND THE SHAPE.

An un-dated teisho, most likely delivered to an Enlish speaking, Christian audience in the mid- or late 1980s, made available to Sydney Zen Center in a xeroxed form.

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Father Ama Genunken SAMY S.J., Bodhi Zen Centre, Madras, India

---
Heart to Heart:
Zen and religion: the roots and the shape.

by Ama SAMY S.J. Roshi
Bodhi Zen Centre, Madras, India

Zen originally comes from the religion of Mahayana Buddhism. But the spirit and practise of Zen go beyond institutional religion. The heart of Zen, is indeed religious, and the heart of religion is Zen. What relationship is there between Buddhism and Zen, between Christ ianity and Zen, and between religion and Zen ?

The roots of Zen are in ancient India. Indian Mahayana sutras and philosophy being at the source and origin. Particularly the 'indwelling of everything in everything else', of the Avatamsara Sutra (Hua Yen Buddhism), and the Heart Sutra's 'form is no other than emptiness, and emptiness no other than form', are the very heart of Zen. The 'heart to heart' transmission of Zen can be traced back to Indian origins, as can be seen in Kukai's response to Saicho's request for Kukai's Indian manuscripts. The straight-backed lotus sitting of zazen is yogic in origin as well. Chinese Taoism gave to Zen an appreciation of, and identification with, nature.

The Japanese contribution was the systematization of the Zen practice and the addition to it of discipline and aesthetics via the Zen arts. As regards the koan practice, 'who am ?' Is the well known inquiry of Ramana Maharishi which goes back to the upanishads. Who am i? What is the real? Where do I go? Such is the quest of the ancient Indian seekers for salvation-enlightenment. It was, however, the heart-response of East Asia which formed the heart of Zen, Zen is sometimes identified with the discipline, or the rituals, or the aesthetics, all of which is distortion of authentic Zen. Zen is primarily and fundamentally a way of salvation, or of enlightenment-compassion which bursts forth in Linchi's realisation of the concrete human individual as the "absolute" subject & master, or better, the true person of the way, and which is actualised in the great compassion of the bodhisattva "Four Great Vows". Zen as is known today by most, has a 'Japanese-made' body and form. There are also Chinese, Korean and Vietmanese forms of Zen and these cannot be ignored in the understanding and transmission of Zen. Being rooted in these traditions and discipline is vital, but these are not without ambiguity and darkness. The letter kills, the spirit gives life. Spirit, even Zen spirit, cannot live apart from the letter. It is above all in the truly enlightened, authentic person that the letter becomes spirit, and the spirit becomes life-giving word. He or she is the 'ferryman' between the worlds.

The main point made in the essays is - that Zen must be practised simply as Zen, which means, zazen and koan practice, and that Christians can practice Zen wholeheartedly, can lose themselves into Zen and find new life. Standing in the in-between of Buddhism and Christianity, one can come to quite a new perspective and depth. In this journey, a Christ ian is not a Christ ian, a Buddhist not a Buddhist: then, the Buddhist is truly a Buddhist and the Christ ian truly a Christian. As one Christian practitioner put it nicely, - "when I am a Buddhist, my mother hates me: when I am a Buddha, she adores me". 'Putting on'the mind of Christ ; 'putting-on' the heart-mind of Buddha. From heart to heart.

Heart: hsin or shin, can mean mind, heart, self, soul. Yamada Ko-un Roshi used to translate it as heart-mind: in Zen literature it was usually translated as mind, and Zen in the West tended towards the philosophical, intuitive, wilful, mindless, a-personal, freedom aspects. Zen, as Mahayana Buddhism, is the heart-mind of wisdom - compassion: suffering heart, seeking heart, discerning heart, heart liberated, transformed, enlightened, compassionate. This 'heart' is the unity of the human and cosmos and god. Heart is presence and mystery: knowing as well as unknowing: grace and freedom: time and eternity: beauty, truth and goodness: joy, peace, sorrow and compassion. The journey is from heart to heart. From heart-mind to heart-mind is the transmission. Mu_shin to mu-shin: empty heart to empty heart of no-heart.

How many heart-minds are there? Standing nowhere how do you let your heart-mind come forth ? Middle of the night, the moon is laughing - do you hear ?

---

end of file

[This article appeared in //Gassho// vol 1 no 4 (May/Jun 1994).]

FOR THE AWAKENING OF ALL:
The Sarvodaya Shramadana Movement in Sri Lanka

by Joanna Macy

The Sarvodaya movement started in Sri Lanka, where in 1958, a Buddhist high school teacher named A.T. Ariyaratne took a handful of his students and started work camps in the poorest of outcaste villages. From that inconspicuous beginning grew a movement which has spread to over 5000 towns and villages and is now, as the largest non-governmental organization in the country, offering an alternative to the Western industrial model of development.

Ariyaratne, inspired by Gandhian thought, adopted the name Sarvodaya for the movement. However, as a devout and learned Buddhist, he recast the notion in terms of the Buddhadharma, translating it as the "awakening of all." That is what the Buddha did under the Bo Tree: he woke up. And that is the movement's definition of what development is: not necessarily the transfer of technology or foreign aid schemes or steel mills or nuclear plants, but a "waking up" on every level -- personal, spiritual, cultural, economic. A wholistic view of social change results, one which is deeply inspired by Buddhist teachings. Because of its extraordinary record in winning popular participation on the grassroots level, Sarvodaya has attracted the attention of development experts worldwide.

Sri Lanka is a beautiful country with very beautiful people who are beset with the crushing problems endemic now to Third World societies -- inflation, joblessness, deforestation, growing poverty, and hunger. In the Sarvodaya experience, Buddhism serves as a resource for social change. It is used to define what development is in terms that are meaningful to the people, and it offers community organizing strategies that release their energies and commitment.

Sarvodaya means "everybody waking up" -- waking up to the degenerate condition of our village, waking up to work together and harness our energy, waking up to our capacity for compassion and joy and responsibility. The Four Noble Truths are even expressed in these terms, painted with illustrations on the walls of village centers: there is a decadent village, there is a cause for its misery, there is a hope for its regeneration, and there is a path. It is not expressed abstractly, but very concretely in terms of repaired roads, de-silted irrigation canals, nutrition programs, and schools. The Eightfold Path is even expressed architecturally. The movement's headquarters near Colombo is built on an octagonal plan around a large central courtyard with open prayer hall. The building on each side is named after an aspect of the path. The volunteers' hostel, for example, is in Right Action; the accounting office is in Right Mindfulness.

Most important of all, perhaps, is the notion and practice of "shramadana." Shramadana is how we wake up. The word means the sharing (//dana//) of human energy (//shrama//). The movement's full name, Sarvodaya Shramadana Sangamaya, literally means "the movement of everybody waking up by working together." Note the skillful means at work here in the use of the word //dana//. Generosity is the pre-eminent Buddhist virtue -- in no other tradition is it accorded so central a position; but over the centuries //dana// had come to mean alms to the monks, the material support of the Buddhist Order. What the movement has done is to reclaim the original scope of //dana// and to present it, not just as alms-giving, but the gift of one's time, energy, skills, goods, and information to the community. So people "wake up" by giving.

I am convinced that a chief strength of the movement lies in the fact that it asks people what they can give rather than what they want to get -- and provides them the opportunity to offer that in the shramadana camps. These are collective work projects which a village chooses and undertakes, such as cutting an access road, digging latrines, roofing the pre-school. In that context even the poorest families are expected to contribute, not only their labor but also food for the collective meal, and songs and ideas in the meetings. This is empowering to people. Even if it is only a betel leaf or matchbook of rice you can give, you walk differently on the earth as a bestower.

Another Buddhist teaching that is skillfully drawn upon is the four Brahma abodes, or as the subsequently became known, the four abodes of the Buddha: //metta//, //karuna//, //muditha//, and //upekkha//, or lovingkindness, compassion, joy in the joy of others, and equanimity. In the sutra in which this teaching appears, the Buddha is approached by someone who asks, "How can we enter Brahma's abode?" This was the goal of the Vedic people of his time and, up until then it was a question of the ritual sacrifices one performed and the ritual cleanliness one maintained. But the Buddha answered, "You can enter Brahma's abode right now; it is fourfold: just practice //metta//, //karuna//, //muditha//, and //upekkha// and you are in it."

The Sarvodaya movement takes these abodes very seriously and very engagingly as means and measures of being awake. They are translated, not just by clergy but by the lay adults and children into day-to-day behavior in social enterprises in the village. //Metta// is the loving respect for all beings that gets you off your duff and liberates you from self-involvement. Compassion is being out there, digging or dancing, to improve the common lot. //Muditha// is the pleasure you find in being of service, and equanimity keeps you going in spite of criticism and setbacks. These abodes are on the lips of every village organizer and painted on the walls of village centers. Every meeting, whether it is a village gathering or a committee on latrines, begins with two minutes of silence for //metta// meditation, extending loving thoughts to all beings.

Learning Love and Compassion

The primary dictum of the Judeo-Christian tradition is to love your neighbor as yourself, but we are never told how to do it. It is not always easy to love people. It might be easy to love people in general, but how do you love somebody you do not even like? The Buddhist tradition, with its high regard for means, for technique, teaches how to do this. These teaching can be enablers and motivators to skillful personal and social change. Qualities like love and compassion are not just abstract virtues that are the property of saints and adepts. There are concrete ways by which anyone can experience these qualities in themselves. As the Buddha said, "//Ehipassiko//," come and see. You don't have to be a Buddhist;

come and see for yourself in your own experience.

In our workshops on despair and empowerment, we draw upon these teachings of the four abodes. There is a meditation practice for developing the quality of //metta// or lovingkindness, the first abode, which involves focusing on someone mentally and experiencing your desire that this person will be free from fear, from greed, free from sorrow and the causes of suffering. Taking a moment to internally identify with your desire that another be free from suffering changes the whole ambiance of a conflicting relationship. It gives endurance and patience, and it releases our tremendous capacity for love.

The second abode, compassion, means to identify with the suffering of others, to experience their pain as your own. We are often reluctant to experience pain because we think we will fall apart, or we do not want to look at a problem unless we know the solution. Buddhism teaches that the first step is simply to experience the pain -- we won't fall apart -- and the ability to respond creatively and skillfully will arise naturally out of this openness. There is an exercise adapted from the Mahayana tradition that I share with people that we have found to be enormously helpful in this regard. It involves visualizing the suffering of the world coming in with the breath, passing through the nose, throat, lungs, and heart, and then out through the bottom of the heart back into the world. You simply permit yourself to experience the pain, allowing it to pass through the heart and then letting it go. This is a very effective tool in opening to the compassion that inheres in us.

The third abode, joy in the joy of others, is a quality we tend to overlook. It is the flip side of compassion, and to the extent that you can experience the suffering of another as your own, you can also experience the joy and power and gifts of another as your own. The synergy that is inherent in dependent co-arising is made available through taking joy in the joy of others. The courage of Martin Luther King Jr. or the endurance of Gandhi is not just Martin Luther King's or Gandhi's, but is ours too, by virtue of //anatman//, by virtue of the fact that we do not exist as separate beings but interpenetrate with all. We can draw on this imaginatively by seeing that the good done by beings, past or present, enters into this reality structure in which we exist, and constitutes an ever-present resource. Anyone with whom we come in contact -- family, friends, the person next to you at the check-out counter -- all have goodness and capacities that we can open to and share in. Looking at things this way helps release us from the envy and competitiveness which are such energy drains.

The fourth abode, //upekkha//, is usually translated as equanimity or impartiality, but those terms seem rather weak. As with the others, //upekkha// springs from the Jewel Net of Indra, the co-arising web in which we take being. This is an image from the //Avatamsaka Sutra//, in which reality is likened to a multi-dimensional net with each knot a jewel reflecting every other jewel. As we regard another, we can let our consciousness sink within us like a stone, below the level of word and deed, to that deeper level of interdependent relationship. In each moment it arises in new forms, but the substratum of dynamic ordered unfolding of reality persists and sustains, and in it we can rest. Out of it we cannot fall. Below the separate "I's" that come like froth on the sea, that net is where we are, and in it we find the great peace.

The sense of deep trust and peace in the intertwining web of reality permits us to take risks, because we know we can never be separated from it. No stupidity or failure can sever us from it. Imprisonment, even death, cannot sever us from it. I am certain that our Vietnamese Buddhist sisters and brothers, who have worked so long for peace in their homeland in the face of violent repression, have been sustained and empowered by the deep peace of knowing that in the co-arising nature of things nothing that happens can sever them from the reality of that great peace, or from us.

The Dharma of Social Change

Sarvodaya has taught me much about how spiritual teachings can inspire and guide people -- Buddhist and non-Buddhist -- in social action. Also, we can see in Sarvodaya that as well as empowering individuals in the work of social change, the Dharma gives direction to the change itself. The Buddha's teachings on economic sharing, political participation, right livelihood, and so forth, offer guidelines for building a sane, equitable, ecological, and nonviolent society. In reclaiming these teachings, Sarvodaya is creating a "social gospel" form of Buddhism.

Some fellow scholars of Buddhism, whom I had consulted, considered Sarvodaya's reinterpretation of doctrine -- such as in its version of the Four Noble Truths -- to be a new-fangled adulteration of Buddhism, lacking doctrinal respectability. To present release from suffering in terms of irrigation, literacy, and marketing cooperatives appears to them to trivialize the Dharma. When I asked very learned Buddhist monks in Sri Lanka what they thought of this recasting of the Four Noble Truths, I did so with te expectation that they, too, would see it as a corruption of the purity of the Buddha's teachings. Instead, almost invariably, they seemed surprised that a Buddhist would ask such a question -- and gave an answer that was like a slight rap on the knuckles: "But it is the same teaching, don't you see? Whether you put it on the psycho-spiritual plane or on the socio-economic plane, there is suffering and there is cessation of suffering." In other words, you are not diluting or distorting the Noble Truths by applying them to conditions of physical misery or social conflict. Their truth lies in the contingent nature of suffering, however you view it. Because it has a cause, it can cease. Because it co-dependently arises, it can be overcome.

On Sarvodaya charts and murals the Four Noble Truths are illustrated with wheels of causation featuring the interrelationship of disease, greed, and apathy, or between nutrition, literacy, //metta//, and self-reliance, for example. They reveal another way in which the notion of dependent co-arising is empowering to social action, because there is not one single cause you have to seek out and attack -- be it malarial mosquitoes or local interest rates. Everything is so interrelated that whatever you do, whether you decide to organize a pre-school, a community kitchen, or a craft cooperative, each is equally valid. Each endeavor toward human well-being pulls a prop out from under the house of suffering.

I find that very applicable to social change here in North America. Whatever our contribution, it is of great value; we need not feel torn between responses to different aspects of the global crisis: "Oh, should I go out and try to protect the whales, or should I go march for disarmament at the U.N.?" If you simply stick with trying to stop the strip-mining, you're helping to save the whales, because it is all interwoven. And that is important to know if we are to stay sane and collected in our work, and if we are to respect and support each other. It helps us be more effective with other people, to assume that we are already working together.

By the same token, we become more effective by also assuming that we are all aware of the suffering and would like to stop it. When you intuit that everyone -- to some extent, at least, and on some level of consciousness -- feels pain for what is happening to our world, it changes your style. Your strategy and tactics become different. For example, our style in the anti-nuclear and peace movements has been largely predicated on the assumption that people do not know and do not care. So we come on to them with more and more terrifying information and an accusatory tone: "There are 50,000 nuclear missiles on hair-trigger alert -- don't you realize where your tax dollars are going? Or how fast you would incinerate?" But when your point of departure is one of pre-existing interconnection -- that is, when you assume that people hurt and care -- the approach is different. It is one of opening -- providing an opportunity, perhaps by just asking a question, that allows people to open to what they know in the depths of their being and have feared to acknowledge. What people need most to hear is not our information, but what is inside them already.

In the last analysis, what we are and what brought us into being is the Jewel Net of Indra. Co-arising and inseparable, we can never fall out of the web of our reality/home. Opening to its presence and resilience, we can now trust. Moving beyond ego fears, we can risk; we can act. Act, as the Buddha said, "//bahujana hitaya bahujana sukhaya//" -- for the sake of all beings and for their happiness.

* * * * *

JOANNA MACY teaches at the California Institute of Integral Studies in San Francisco and is author of //World As Lover, World As Self//, //Dharma and Development// and //Despair and Personal Power in the Nuclear Age//. This article is reprinted, with the author's permission, as it appeared in //Karuna: A Journal of Buddhist Meditation// (Summer/Fall 1988). A revised and expanded version appears in //The Path of Compassion// (Berkeley: Parallax Press, 1985, 1988).

* * * * *

[Since this article was published in 1988, Sri Lanka's political situation has shifted dramatically. In 1989 President Premadasa came to power after a series of political assassinations. The political climate under his rule severely inhibited the ability of humanitarian aid organizations (in particular, Sarvodaya) to carry out their work. In 1993 Premadasa was assassinated. Since then, Sarvodaya has regained its place as Sri Lanka's largest and most effective force for poverty alleviation in Sri Lanka. In 1993 Ariyaratne received the Niwano Peace Prize from the Japanese government, in recognition for his work. --GASSHO]

==========

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT

TITLE OF WORK: For the Awakening of All: The Sarvodaya Shramadana Movement in Sri Lanka
FILENAME: SARVODAY.ZIP
AUTHOR: Joanna Macy
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: n/a
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: //Gassho//, POB 4951, Berkeley CA 94704
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Joanna Macy
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1988
DATE OF DHARMANET PUBLICATION: May 1994
ORIGIN SITE: BODY DHARMA * Berkeley CA 510/836-4717 DharmaNet (96:101/33.0)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

==========

ÉÍÍÍ

words does not make it unreal - quite the reverse. Mindfulness is the reality which gives rise to words - the words that follow are simply pale shadows of reality. So, it is important to understand that everything that follows here is an analogy. It is not going to make perfect sense. Please don't sit around scratching your head and trying to figure it all out. In fact, the meditational technique called Vipassana (insight) that was introduced by the Buddha about twenty-five centuries ago is a set of mental activities specifically aimed at experiencing a state of uninterrupted Mindfulness or Sati.

When you first become aware of something there is a fleeting instant of pure awareness just before you conceptualize he thing, before you identify it. That is a stage of Mindfulness (Sati). Ordinarily, this stage is very short. It is that flashing split second just before you focus your eyes on the thing, just before you focus your mind on the thing, just before you objectify it, clamp down on it mentally and segregate it from the rest of existence. It takes place just before ,you start thinking about it - before that little 'yak, yak' machine inside your skull says, "Oh, it's a dog." That flowing, soft-focused moment of pure awareness is Mindfulness (Sati). In that brief flashing mind-moment you experience a thing as an un-thing. You experience a softly flowing moment of pure experience that is interlocked with the rest of reality, not separate from it. Mindfulness is very much like what you see with your peripheral vision as opposed to the hard focus of normal or central vision. Yet this moment of soft, unfocused, awareness contains a very deep sort of knowing that is lost as soon as you focus your mind and objectify the object into a thing. In the process of ordinary perception, the Mindfulness (Sati) step is so fleeting as to be unobservable. We have developed the habit of squandering our attention on all the remaining steps, focusing on the perception, cognizing the perception, labeling it, and most of all, getting involved in a long string of symbolic thought about it. That original moment of Mindfulness just gets lost in the shuffle. It is the purpose of the above mentioned Vipassana (or insight) meditation to train us to prolong that moment of awareness.

When this Mindfulness (Sati) is prolonged by using proper techniques, you find that this experience is profound and it changes your whole view of the universe. This state of perception has to be learned, however, and it takes regular practice. Once you learn the technique, you will find that Mindfulness has a number of interesting characteristics.

THE CHARACTERISTICS OF MINDFULNESS (SATI)

Mindfulness (Sati) is mirror-thought. It reflects only what is presently happening and in exactly the way it is happening. There are no biases.

Mindfulness (Sati) is non-judgmental observation. It is that ability of the mind to observe without criticism. With this ability, one sees things without condemnation or judgment. One is surprised by nothing. One simply takes a balanced interest in things exactly as they are in their natural states. One does not decide and does not judge. One just observes.

It is psychologically impossible for us to objectively observe what is going on within us if we do not at the same time accept the occurrence of our various states of mind. This is especially true with unpleasant states of mind. In order to observe our own fear, we must accept the fact that we are afraid. We can't examine our own depression without accepting i fully. The same is true for irritation and agitation, frustration and all those other uncomfortable emotional states. You can't examine something fully if you are busy rejecting the existence of it. Whatever experience we may be having, Mindfulness just accepts it. It is simply another of life's occurrences, just another thing to be aware of. No pride, no shame, nothing personal at stake - what is there, is there.

Mindfulness (Sati) is an impartial watchfulness. It does not take sides. It does not get hung up in what is perceived. It just perceives. Mindfulness does not get infatuated with the good stuff. It does not try to sidestep the bad stuff. There is no clinging to the pleasant, no fleeing from the unpleasant. Mindfulness sees all experiences as equal, all thoughts as equal, all feelings as equal. Nothing is suppressed. Nothing is repressed. Mindfulness does not play favourites.

Mindfulness (Sati) is nonconceptual awareness. Another English term for Sati is 'bare attention.' It is not thinking. It does not get involved with thought or concepts. It does not get hung up on ideas or opinions or memories. It just looks. Mindfulness registers experiences, but it does not compare them. It just observes everything as if they were occurring for the first time. It is not analysis which is based on reflection and memory. It is, rather, the direct and immediate experience of whatever is happening, without the medium of thought. It comes BEFORE thought in the perceptual process.

Mindfulness (Sati) is present-time awareness. It takes place in the here and now. It is the observance of what is happening right now, in the present moment. It stays forever in the present, surging perpetually on the crest of the ongoing wave of passing time. If you are remembering your second-grade teacher, that is memory. When you then become aware that you are remembering your second-grade teacher, that is Mindfulness. If you then conceptualize the process and say to yourself, "Oh, I am remembering", that is thinking.

Mindfulness (Sati) is non-egoistic alertness. It takes place without reference to self. With Mindfulness one sees all phenomena without references to concepts like "me", "my" or "mine". For example, suppose there is a pain in your left leg. Ordinary consciousness would say, "I have a pain." Using Mindfulness, one would simply note the sensation as a sensation. One would not tack on that extra concept "I". Mindfulness stops one from adding anything to perception, or subtracting anything from it. One does not enhance anything. One does not emphasize anything. One just observes what is there - without distortion.

Mindfulness (Sati) is goal-less awareness. In Mindfulness, one does not strain for results. One does not try to accomplish anything. When one is mindful, one experiences reality in the present moment in whatever form it takes. There is nothing to be achieved. There is only observation.

Mindfulness (Sati) is awareness of change. It is observing the passing flow of experience. It is watching things as they are changing. It is seeing the birth, growth, and maturity of all phenomena. It is watching phenomena decay and die. Mindfulness is watching things moment by moment, continuously. It is observing all phenomena - physical, mental or emotional - whatever is presently taking place in the mind. One just sits back and watches the show. Mindfulness is the observance of the basic nature of each passing phenomena. It is watching the thing arising and passing away. It is seeing how the thing makes us feel and how we react to it. It is observing how it affects others. In Mindfulness, one is an unbiased observer whose sole job is to keep track of the constantly passing show of the universe within. Please note that last point. In Mindfulness, one watches the universe within. The meditator who is developing Mindfulness (Sati) is not concerned with the external universe. It is there, but in meditation, one's field of study is one's own experience, one's thoughts, one's feelings, and one's perceptions. In meditation, one is one's own laboratory. The universe within has an enormous fund of information containing the reflection of the external world and much more. An examination of this material leads to total freedom.

Mindfulness (Sati) is participatory observation. The meditator is both participant and observer at one and the same time. If one watches one's emotions or physical sensations, one is feeling them at that very same moment. Mindfulness is not an intellectual awareness. It is just awareness. The Mirror-thought metaphor breaks down here. Mindfulness is objective, but it is not cold or unfeeling. It is the wakeful experience of life, an alert participation in the ongoing process of living.

Mindfulness is an extremely difficult concept to define in words - not because it is complex, but because it is too simple and open. The same problem crops up in every area of human experience. The most basic concept is always the most difficult to pin down. Look at a dictionary and you will see a clear example. Long words generally have concise definitions, but for short basic words like "the", "is" or "but", definitions can be a page long. And in physics, the most difficult functions to describe are the most basic - those that deal with the most fundamental realities of quantum mechanics. Mindfulness is a pre-symbolic function. You can play with word symbols all day long and you will never pin it down completely. We can never fully express what it is. However, we can say what it does.

THREE FUNDAMENTAL ACTIVITIES

There are three fundamental activities of Mindfulness (Sati). We can use these activities as functional definitions of the term: (1) Mindfulness reminds us what we are supposed to be doing; (2) it sees things as they really are; and (3) it sees the deep nature of all phenomena. Let's examine these definitions in greater detail.

Mindfulness (Sati) reminds you what you are supposed to be doing. In meditation, you put your attention on one item. When your mind wanders from this focus, it is Mindfulness that reminds you that your mind is wandering and what you are supposed to be doing. It is Mindfulness that brings your mind back to the object of meditation. All of this occurs instantaneously and without internal dialogue. Meditation is not thinking. Repeated practice in meditation establishes this function as a mental habit which then carries over into the rest of your life. You should be paying bare attention to occurrences all the time, day in, day out, whether formally sitting in meditation or not. This is a very lofty ideal towards which those who meditate may be working for a period of years or even decades. Our habit of getting stuck in thought is years old, and that habit will hang on in the most tenacious manner. The only way out is to be equally persistent in the cultivation of constant Mindfulness (Sati). When Mindfulness is present, you will notice when you become stuck in your thought patterns. It is that very noticing which allows you to back out of the thought process and free yourself from it. Mindfulness then returns your attention to its proper focus. If you are meditating at that moment, then your focus will be the formal object of meditation. If you are not in formal meditation, it will be just a pure application of bare attention itself, just a pure noticing of whatever comes up without getting involved - "Ah, this comes up... and now this, and now this... and now this."

Mindfulness (Sati) is at one and the same time both bare attention itself and the function of reminding us to pay bare attention if we have ceased to do so. Bare attention is noticing. It re-establishes itself simply by noticing that it has not been present. As soon as you are noticing that you have not been noticing, then by definition you are noticing and then again you are back to paying bare attention. Well, that all sounds very involved, but there is nothing complex about it. It is just the words. It is just a thing you will learn to do by feel, the way you play baseball. Mindfulness creates its own distinct feeling in consciousness. It has a flavour - a light, clear, energetic flavour. Conscious thought is heavy by comparison, ponderous and picky. But here again, these are just words. Your own practice will show you the difference. Then you will probably come up with your own words and the words used here will become superfluous. Remember, practice is the thing.

Mindfulness (Sati) sees things as they really are. It adds nothing to perception and it subtracts nothing. It distorts nothing. It is bare attention and just looks at whatever comes up. Conscious thought loves to paste things over our experience, to load us down with concepts and ideas, to immerse us in a churning vortex of plans and worries, fears and fantasies. When mindful, you don't play that game. You just notice exactly what arises in the mind, then you notice the next thing. "Ah, this... and this... and now this." It is really very simple.

Mindfulness (Sati) sees the true nature of all phenomena. Mindfulness and only Mindfulness can perceive the three prime characteristics that Buddhism teaches are the deepest truth of existence. In Pali these three are called Anicca (impermanence), Dukkha (unsatisfactoriness), and Anatta (selflessness - the absence of a permanent, unchanging, entity that we call soul or self). These truths, by the way, are not presented in Buddhist teaching as dogmas subject to blind faith. The Buddhists feel that these truths are universal and self-evident to anyone who cares to investigate in a proper way. Mindfulness is that method of investigation. Mindfulness alone has the power to reveal the deepest level of reality available to human observation. At this level of inspection, one sees the following: (a) All conditioned things are inherently transitory; (b) every worldly thing is, in the end, unsatisfying; and (c) there are really no entities that are unchanging or permanent, only processes.

Mindfulness works like an electron microscope. That is, it operates on so fine a level that one can actually see directly those realities which are at best theoretical constructs to the conscious thought process. Mindfulness actually sees the impermanent character of every perception. It sees the transitory and passing nature of everything that is perceived. It also sees the inherently unsatisfactory nature of all conditioned things. It sees that there is no sense grabbing onto any of these passing shows. Peace and happiness just cannot be found that way. And finally, Mindfulness sees the inherent selflessness of all phenomena. It sees the way we have arbitrarily selected a certain bundle of perceptions, chopped them off from the rest of the surging flow of experience and then conceptualized them as separate, enduring, entities. Mindfulness actually sees these things. It does not think about them, it sees them directly.

When it is fully developed, Mindfulness sees these three attributes of existence directly, instantaneously, and without the intervening medium of conscious thought. In fact, even the attributes which we just covered are inherently arbitrary. They don't really exist as separate items. They are purely the result of our struggle to take this fundamentally simple process called Mindfulness and express it in the cumbersome and inherently unsuitable thought symbols of the conscious level. Mindfulness is a PROCESS, but it does not take place in steps. It is a wholistic process that occurs as a unit: you notice your own lack of Mindfulness; and that noticing itself is a result of Mindfulness; and Mindfulness is bare attention; and bare attention is noticing things exactly as they are without distortion; and the way they are is Anicca, Dukkha, and Anatta (impermanent, unsatisfactory, and self-less). It all takes place in a flash-bang. This does not mean, however, that you will instantly attain liberation (freedom from all human weaknesses) as a result of your first moment of Mindfulness. Learning to integrate this material into your conscious life is another whole process. And learning to prolong this state of Mindfulness is still another. They are joyous processes, however, and they are well worth the effort.

MINDFULNESS (SATI) AND INSIGHT (VIPASSANA) MEDITATION

Mindfulness is the center of Vipassana meditation and the key to the whole process. It is both the goal of this meditation and the means to that end. You reach Mindfulness by being ever more mindful. One other Pali word that is translated into English as Mindfulness is Appamada, which means non-negligence or an absence of madness. One who attends constantly to what is really going on in one's mind achieves the state of ultimate sanity.

The Pali term 'Sati' also bears the connotation of remembering. It is not memory in the sense of ideas and pictures from the past, but rather clear, direct, wordless knowing of what is and what is not, of what is correct and what is incorrect, of what we are doing and how we should go about it. Mindfulness (Sati) reminds the meditator to apply his attention to the proper object at the proper time and to exert precisely the amount of energy needed to do that job. When this energy is properly applied, the meditator stays constantly in a state of calmness and alertness. As long as this condition is maintained, those mind-states called 'hindrances' or 'psychic irritants' cannot arise - there is no greed, no hatred, no lust or laziness. But we are all human and we all goof. Most of us are very human and we goof repeatedly. Despite honest effort, the meditator lets his Mindfulness slip now and then and he finds himself stuck in some nasty, but normal, human failure. It is Mindfulness that notices that change. And it is Mindfulness that reminds him to apply the energy required to pull himself out of the soup. These slips happen over and over, but their frequency decreases with practice. Once Mindfulness has pushed these mental defilements aside, more wholesome states of mind can take their place. Hatred makes way for loving kindness, lust is replaced by detachment. It is Mindfulness which notices this change, too, and which reminds the Vipassana meditator to maintain that extra little mental sharpness needed to keep these more desirable states of mind. Mindfulness makes possible the growth of wisdom and compassion. Without Mindfulness they cannot develop to full maturity.

Deeply buried in the mind, there lies a mental mechanism which accepts what the mind perceives as beautiful and pleasant experiences and rejects those experiences which are perceived as ugly and painful. This mechanism gives rise to those states of mind which we are training ourselves to avoid - things like greed, lust, hatred, aversion, and jealousy. We choose to avoid these hindrances, not because they are evil in the normal sense of the word, but because they are compulsive; because they take the mind over and capture the attention completely; because they keep going round and round in tight little circles of thought; and because they seal us off from living reality.

These hamperings cannot arise when Mindfulness is present. Mindfulness is attention to present time reality, and therefore, directly antithetical to the dazed state of mind which characterizes the impediments. As meditators, it is only when we let our Mindfulness slip that the deep mechanisms of our minds take over - grasping, clinging and rejecting. Then resistance emerges and obscures our awareness. We do not notice that the change is taking place - we are too busy with a thought of revenge, or greed, whatever it may be. While an untrained person will continue inn this state indefinitely, a trained meditator will soon realize what is happening. It is Mindfulness that notices the change. It is Mindfulness that remembers the training received and that focuses our attention so that the confusion fades away. And it is Mindfulness that then attempts to maintain itself indefinitely so that the resistance cannot arise again. Thus, Mindfulness is the specific antidote for hindrances. It is both the cure and the preventive measure.

Fully developed Mindfulness (Sati) is a state of total non-attachment and utter absence of clinging to anything in the world. If we can maintain this state, no other means or device is needed to keep ourselves free of obstructions, to achieve liberation from our human weaknesses. Mindfulness is non-superficial awareness. It sees things deeply, down below the level of concepts and opinions. This sort of deep observation leads to total certainty, a complete absence of confusion. It manifests itself primarily as a constant and unwavering attention which never flags an which never turns away.

This pure and unstained investigative awareness not only holds the fetters at bay, it lays bare their very mechanism and destroys them. Mindfulness neutralizes defilements in the mind. The result is a mind which remains unstained and invulnerable, completely unaffected by the ups and downs of life.

[California Buddhist Vihara Society, 4797 Myrtle Drive, Concord CA 94521]

< End of File ***)

ÿWPCŠ
ûÿ2BWZ-CG Times0cpi (10pt)#|TÆXTÏ¾¦
PìE3UXPþþþþþþÿþÿÿÿþÿÿþÿÿÿÿÿÿÿþÿþÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿEpson LQ-1050/4MPEPLQ1050.WRSX
PìE3U• ñü æ• XP^øÐûÿ2ÇÿÿCÿÿZSÿÿ-ÿÿ¯#|xEpson LQ-550EPLQ550.PRSÛx Œ
@É‡Ï7åˆX@«ZRoman 10cpiRoman 17cpiûÿ2Xù[ÿÿÿÿKÓUSUKÓÐ
÷• 3Ø'Ë6À&StandardÐ6Â&Ë6À&Current Windows FormRSXTÏ¾¦^ø°°°°÷ Ð",Ýÿÿêÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ

xÀÀt ØØ
xÀÀt
ØhÀ]ÀnasÄÄ

Ô
• Y• ´-ÔÁxÁ1. KÀ]ÀyÀ]ÀnupassanÀ]À satipaØ
xÀÀt
ØØ
xÀÀt
ØhÀ]Àna = recollecting the physical body.
Ô
• Yv´-ÔÁxÁ2. VedanÀ]ÀnupassanÀ]À satipaØ
xÀÀt
ØØ
xÀÀt ØhÀ]Àna = recollecting vedanÀ]À.
Ô
• Y_´-ÔÁxÁ3. CittÀ]ÀnupassanÀ]À satipaØ
xÀÀt
ØØ
xÀÀt
ØhÀ]Àna = recollecting the Citta.
Ô
• YH´-ÔÁxÁ4. DhammÀ]ÀnupassanÀ]À satipaØ
xÀÀt
ØØ
xÀÀt
ØhÀ]Àna = recollecting Dhamma.

Ô
• Y

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

THE DHAMMAPADA

A COLLECTION OF VERSES

BEING ONE OF THE CANONICAL BOOKS OF THE BUDDHISTS

TRANSLATED FROM PALI

BY

F. MAX MULLER

Oxford, the Clarendon Press

[1881]

{partially scanned, (re)proofread, and formatted by Christopher M. Weimer, March 2002}

Vol. X Part I of The Sacred Books of the East

translated by various Oriental scholars and edited by F. Max Muller

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CONTENTS.

PAGE
INTRODUCTION TO THE DHAMMAPADA ix-lv

DHAMMAPADA.
CHAPTER 1. The Twin Verses 3
" 2. On Earnestness 9
" 3. Thought 12
" 4. Flowers 16
" 5. The Fool 20
" 6. The Wise Man (Pandita) 23
" 7. The Venerable (Arhat) 27
" 8. The Thousands 31
" 9. Evil 34
" 10. Punishment 36

" 11. Old Age 41
" 12. Self 45
" 13. The World 47
" 14. The Buddha (the Awakened) 49
" 15. Happiness 53
" 16. Pleasure 56
" 17. Anger 58
" 18. Impurity 60
" 19. The Just 64
" 20. The Way 67
" 21. Miscellaneous 70
" 22. The Downward Course 74
" 23. The Elephant 77
" 24. Thirst 80
" 25. The Bhikshu (Mendicant) 85
" 26. The Brahmana (Arhat) 89
Index 97

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE DHAMMAPADA.

THE DHAMMAPADA, A CANONICAL BOOK.

THE Dhammapada forms part of the Pali Buddhist canon, though its exact place varies ac authorities, and we have not as yet a sufficient number of complete MSS. of the Tipitaka to h the question[1].

Those who divide that canon into three Pitakas or baskets, the Vinaya-pitaka, Sutta-pitaka Abhidhamma-pitaka, assign the Dhammapada to the Sutta-pitaka. That Pitaka consists of fiv Digha-nikaya, the Magghima-nikaya, the Samyutta-nikaya, the Anguttara-nikaya, and the Kh fifth, or Khuddaka-nikaya, comprehends the following works: 1. Khuddaka-patha; 2. DHAMM Itivuttaka; 5. Sutta-nipata; 6. Vimanavatthu; 7. Petavatthu; 8. Theragatha; 9. Therigatha; 10.
Niddesa; 12. Patisambhida; 13. Apadana; 14. Buddhavamsa; 15. Kariya-pitaka.

According to another division[2], however, the whole Buddhist canon consists of five Nikay
Digha-nikaya, the Magghima-nikaya, the Samyutta-nikaya, the Anguttara-nikaya, and the fift
Khuddaka-nikaya, which Khuddaka-nikaya is then made to comprehend the whole of the Vin
Abhidhamma (metaphysics), together with the fifteen books beginning with the Khuddaka-pa

The order of these fifteen books varies, and even, as it would seem, their number. The Dig

[1. see Feer, Journal Asiatique, 1871, p. 263. There is now at least one complete MS. of the Phayre MS., at the India Office, and Professor Forchhammer has just published a most usef collected in Burma, the largest collection hitherto known.

2. See Childers, s. v. Nikaya, and extracts from Buddhaghosa's commentary on the Brahma

p. x admits twelve books only, and assigns them all to the Abhidhamma, while the Magghim fifteen books, and assign them to the Sutta-pitaka. The order of the fifteen books is: 1. Gatal Mahaniddesa [11]; 3. Kullaniddesa [11]; 4. Patisambhidamagga [12]; 5. Sutta-nipata [5]; 6. D
Udana [3]; 8. Itivuttaka [4]; 9. Vimanavatthu [6]; 10. Petavatthu [7]; 11. Theragatha [8]; 12. T
13. Kariya-pitaka [15]; 14. Apadana [13]; 15. Buddhavamsa [14][1].

The Khuddaka-patha is left out in the second list, and the number is brought to fifteen by c into Maha-niddesa and Kulla-niddesa.

There is a commentary on the Dhammapada in Pali, and supposed to be written by Buddh half of the fifth century A.D. In explaining the verses of the Dhammapada, the commentator nearly every verse a parable to illustrate its meaning, which is likewise believed to have bee Buddha in his intercourse with his disciples, or in preaching to the multitudes that came to h

DATE OF THE DHAMMAPADA.

The only means of fixing the date of the Dhammapada is trying to ascertain the date of the of which it forms a part, or the date of Buddhaghosa, who wrote a commentary on it. This, h means easy, and the evidence on which we have to rely is such that we must not be surpris accustomed to test historical and chronological evidence

[1. The figures within brackets refer to the other list of books in the Khuddaka-nikiya. See als xxviii>.

2. M. Leon Feer in the Journal Asiatique, 1871, p. 266, mentions another commentary of a n character, equally ascribed to Buddhaghosa. and having the title Vivara Bra Dhammapada, Dhammapada devoile. Professor Forchhammer in his 'List of Manuscripts,' 1879-80, mentio in connection with the Dhammapada: Dhammapada-Nissayo; Dh. P. Atthakatha by Buddhag Nissayo. 3 vols., containing a complete translation of the commentary; Dh. P. Vatthu. Of prin quotes: Kayanupassanakyam, a work based on the Garavaggo, Mandalay, 1876 (390 pages Dhammapada-desanakyam, printed in 'British Burma News.']

p. xi in Greece and Rome, decline to be convinced by it. As a general rule, I quite agree that too sceptical in assigning a date to ancient books, particularly if we intend to use them as do tracing the history of human thought. To the initiated, I mean to those who have themselves mines of ancient Oriental literature, such extreme scepticism may often seem unscientific an They are more or less aware of hundreds of arguments, each by itself, it may be, of small w combined proving irresistible. They are conscious, too, of having been constantly on the lool and, as all has gone on smoothly, they feel sure that, in the main, they are on the right road. always useful to be as incredulous as possible, particularly against oneself, and to have befo critics who will not yield one inch beyond what they are forced to yield by the strongest press

The age of our MSS. of the canonical books, either in Pali or Sanskrit, is of no help to us. A MSS. are comparatively modern, and one who has probably handled more Indian MSS. than Burnell, has lately expressed his conviction that 'no MS. written one thousand years ago is n India, and that it is almost impossible to find one written five hundred years ago, for most MS to be of that date are merely copies of old MSS. the dates of which are repeated by the copy

Nor is the language, whether Sanskrit or Pali, a safe guide for fixing dates. Both languages written to our own time, and though there are some characteristic marks to distinguish more ancient Buddhist Sanskrit and Pali, this branch of critical scholarship requires to be cultivate extensively and accurately before true scholars would venture to fix the date of a Sanskrit or the strength of linguistic evidence alone[2].

[1. Indian Antiquary, 1880, p. 233.

2. See some important remarks on this subject in Fausboll's Introduction to Sutta-nipita, <pa

p. xii

The Buddhists themselves have no difficulty in assigning a date to their sacred canon. The that canon itself that it was settled at the First Council, or immediately after the death of Bud believe that it was afterwards handed down by means of oral tradition, or actually written do order of Kasyapa, the president of the First Council[1]. Buddhaghosa, a learned and in some critical scholar, living in the beginning of the fifth century A.D., asserts that the canon which before him, was the same as that fixed by the First Council[2].

Several European students have adopted the same opinion, and, so far as I know, no argu advanced showing the impossibility of the native view, that some collection of Buddha's doc immediately after his death at Ragagaha, and that it was finally settled at what is called the or the Council of Vesali. But what is not impossible is not therefore true, nor can anything be appealing to later witnesses, such as, for instance, Hiouen Thsang, who travelled through In century, and wrote down anything that he could learn, little concerned whether one stateme other or not[3]. He says that the Tipitaka was written down on palm leaves by Kasyapa at th Council. But what can be the weight of such a witness, living more than a thousand years af compared with that, for instance, of the Mahavamsa, which dates from the fifth century of ou

[1. Bigandet, Life of Gaudama (Rangoon, 1866), p. 350; but also p. 120 note.

2. See Childers, s.v. Tipitaka. There is a curious passage in Buddhaghosa's account of the one may ask,' he says, 'Is there or is there not in this first Paragika anything to be taken awa reply, There is nothing in the words of the Blessed Buddha that can be taken away, for the B even a single syllable in vain, yet in the words of disciples and devatas there are things whic omitted, and these the elders who made the recension, did omit. On the other hand, addition necessary, and accordingly, whenever it was necessary to add anything, they added it. If it b the additions referred to? I reply, Only sentences necessary to connect the text, as 'at that ti that time,' 'and so forth.'

3. Pelerins Bouddhistes, vol. i. p. 158.]

p. xiii tells us in the account of Mahinda's missionary journey to Ceylon (241/318), that the s to spend three years in learning the Tipitaka by heart from the mouth of a teacher[1]? No me of any books or MSS., when it would have been most natural to do so[2]. At a later time, dur King Vattagamani[3] (88-76 B.C.), the same chronicle, the Mahavamsa, tells us that 'the pro priests had theretofore orally (mukhapathena) perpetuated the Pali of the Pitakattaya and its (commentary), but that at this period the priests, foreseeing the perdition of the people asse order that the religion might endure for ages, recorded the same in books (potthakesu likhap

No one has yet questioned the dates of the Dipavamsa, about 400 A.D., or of the first part Mahavamsa, between 459-477 A.D., and though no doubt there is an interval of nearly 600 composition of the Mahavamsa and the recorded writing down of the Buddhist canon under must remember that the Ceylonese chronicles were confessedly founded on an older Atthak monasteries of the island, and representing an unbroken line of local tradition.

My own argument therefore, so long as the question was only whether we could assign a the Pali Buddhist canon, has always been this. We have the commentaries on the Pali cano Sinhalese into Pali, or actually composed, it may be, by Buddhaghosa. Buddhaghosa confe various

[1. Mahavamsa, p. 37; Dipavamsa VII, 28-31; Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. xviii.

2. Bigandet, Life of Gaudama, p. 351.

3. Dr. E. Muller (Indian Antiquary, Nov. 1880, p. 270) has discovered inscriptions in Ceylon, Devanapiya Maharaga Gamini Tissa, whom he identifes with Vattagamani.

4. The same account is given in the Dipavamsa XX, 20, and in the Sarasangraha, as quoted Legends, p. 192. As throwing light on the completeness of the Buddhist canon at the time of it should be mentioned that, according to the commentary on the Mahavamsa (Turnour, p. li Dhammarukikas established itself at the Abhayavihara, which had been constructed by Vatt of the grounds of their secession was their refusing to acknowledge the Parivara (thus I read Pariwana) as part of the Vinaya-pitaka. According to the Dipavamsa (VII, 42) Mahinda knew

p. xiv MSS., and gives various readings, just as any modern scholar might do. This was in th fifth century A.D., and there is nothing improbable, though I would say no more, in supposing MSS., consulted by Buddhaghosa, dated from the first century B.C., when Vattagamani orde to be reduced to writing.

There is one other event with reference to the existence of the sacred canon in Ceylon, re Mahavamsa, between the time of Buddhaghosa and Vattagamani, viz. the translation of the the language of Ceylon, during the reign of Buddhadasa, 339-368 A.D. If MSS. of that ancie existed, they would, no doubt, be very useful for detrmining the exact state of the Pali origina time[1]. But even without them there seems no reason to doubt that Buddhaghosa had befo Pali canon, and that these were in the main the same as those written down at the time of V

BUDDHAGHOSA'S AGE.

The whole of this argument, however, rested on the supposition that Buddhaghosa's date the fifth century A.D. was beyond the reach of reasonable doubt. 'His age,' I had ventured to Preface to Buddhaghosha's Parables (1870), 'can be fixed with greater accuracy than most history of India.' But soon after, one of our most celebrated Pali scholars, the great Russian Professor Joh. Minayeff, expressed in the Melanges Asiatiques (13/25 April, 1871) the grave Buddhaghosa's age, and thus threw the whole Buddhist chronology, so far as it had then be or nearly all scholars, back into chaos. He gave as his chief reason that Buddhaghosa was n the contemporary of Mahanama, the

[1. A note is added, stating that several portions of the other two divisions also of the Pitakat translated into the Sinhalese language, and that these alone are consulted by the priests, wh unacquainted with Pali. On the other hand, it is stated that the Sinhalese text of the Atthakat longer. See Spence Hardy, Legends, p. xxv, and p. 69.]

p. xv author of the Mahavamsa, but of another Mahanama, the king of Ceylon.

Professor Minayeff is undoubtedly right in this, but I am not aware that I, or anybody else, questioned so palpable a fact. There are two Mahanamas; one, the king who reigned from 4 other, the supposed author of the Mahavamsa, the uncle and protector of King Dhatusena, 4
I had written, 'was the nephew of the historian Mahanama, and owed the throne to the prote
Dhatusena was in fact the restorer of a national dynasty, and after having defeated the forei Damilo dynasty) "he restored the religion which had been set aside by the foreigners"' (Maha his many pious acts it is particularly mentioned that he gave a thousand, and ordered the Di promulgated. As Mahanama was the uncle of Dhatusena, who reigned from 459-477, he ma trustworthy witness with regard to events that occurred between 410 and 432. Now the litera Buddhaghosa in Ceylon falls in that period[1].'

These facts being admitted, it is surely not too great a stretch of probability to suppose, as a man whose nephew was king in 459-477, might have been alive in 410-432, that is to say, contemporary of Buddhaghosa. I did not commit myself to any further theories. The questior the uncle of Dhatusena, was really the author of the Mahavamsa, the question whether he w of the 37th chapter of that work, or broke off his chronicle in the middle of that chapter, I did having no new materials to bring forward beyond those on which Turnour and those who foll their conclusions, and which I had discussed in my History of Sanskrit Literature (1859), p. 2 was, 'It is difficult to determine whether the 38th as well as the (whole of the) 37th chapter ca pen of Mahanama, for

[1. 'Ungefahr 50 Jahre alter als Mahanama ist Buddhaghosha,' see Westergaard, Uber Budd

p. xvi the Mahavamsa was afterwards continued by different writers, even to the middle of th But, taking into account all the circumstances of the case, it is most probable that Mahanam history to his own time, to the death of Dhatusena, 477 A.D.'

What I meant by 'all the circumstances of the case' might easily be understood by any one Turnour's Preface to the Mahavamsa. Turnour himself thought at first that Mahanama's shar ended with the year 301 A.D., and that the rest of the work, called the Sulu Wanse, was com writers[1]. Dharmakirti is mentioned by name as having continued the work to the reign of Pr 1266). But Turnour afterwards changed his mind[2]. Considering that the account of Mahase of the Seven Kings, terminates in the middle of a chapter, at verse 48, while the whole chap Sattaragiko, 'the chapter of the Seven Kings,' he naturally supposed that the whole of that ch to the end of the reign of his nephew Dhatusena, might be the work of Mahanama, unless th proofs to the contrary. Such proofs, beyond the tradition of writers of the MSS., have not, as adduced[3].

But even if it could be proved that Mahanama's own pen did not go beyond the 48th verse chapter, the historical trustworthiness of the concluding portion of that chapter, containing th Buddhaghosa's literary activity, nay, even of the 38th chapter, would be little affected thereb both the Mahavamsa and the somewhat earlier Dipavamsa were founded on the Sinhalese commentaries and chronicles preserved in the Mahavihara at Anuradhapura. We also know demolished by Mahasena, and deserted by nearly all its inmates for the space of nine years for the space of nine months

[1. Introduction, p. ii. The Kulavamsa is mentioned with the Mahavamsa, both as the works o Professor Forchhammer in his List of Pali MSS.

2. Introduction, p. xci.

3. See Rhys Davids, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1875, p. 196.]

p. xvii (p. 237). We can well understand therefore why the older history, the Dipavamsa, sho death of Mahasena (died 302 A.D.), and why in the Mahavamsa too there should have been But we must not forget that, during Mahanama's life, the Mahavihara at Anuradhapura was r kind of chronicle, called the Dipavamsa, whether it be a general name of any 'chronicle of th our Dipavamsa, or, it may be, even of our Mahavamsa, was ordered to be published or pron under Dhatusena, the nephew and protege of Mahanama. Therefore, even if we do not insis authorship of Mahanama, we may certainly maintain that historical entries had been made in Anuradhapura during Dhatusena's reign, and probably under the personal auspices of Maha find afterwards, in the second half of the 37th chapter of his Mahavamsa, an account of even happened between the destruction of the Mahavihara and the reign of Dhatusena, and amon important an event as the arrival of Buddhaghosa from Magadha and his translation of the S into the language of Magadha, we may well suppose that they rest on the authority of native written not long after the events, and that therefore, 'under all the circumstances of the case Buddhaghosa can be fixed with greater accuracy than most dates in the literary history of In

There is one difficulty still remaining with regard to the date of the historian Mahanama wh perplexed Turnour's mind, and has certainly proved a stumbling-block to myself. Turnour tho author of the commentary on the Mahavamsa, the Vamsatthappakasini, was the same as th Mahavamsa, viz. Mahanama. The date of that commentary, however, as we know now, mus it speaks of a schism which took place in the year 601 A.D., during the reign of Agrabodhi (a Dhatapatisso). Turnour[1] looked

[1. Introduction, p. liii.]

p. xviii upon that passage as a later interpolation, because he thought the evidence for the id author and the commentator of the Mahavamsa too strong to be set aside. He trusted chiefly commentary, and if that passage had been correctly rendered, the conclusion which be drew be resisted. We read in the Mahavamsa (p. 254):

'Certain members of the Moriyan dynasty, dreading the power of the (usurper) Subho, the settled in various parts of the country, concealing themselves. Among them there was a cert proprietor Dhatusena, who had established himself at Nandivapi. His son named Dhata, who Ambiliyago, had two sons, Dhatusena and Silatissabodhi, of unexceptional descent. Their m

(Mahanama), devoted to the cause of religion, continued to reside (at Anuradhapura) in his s character, at the edifice built by the minister Dighasandana. The youth Dhatusena became a fraternity, and on a certain day, while he was chaunting at the foot of a tree, a shower of rain Naga, seeing him there, encircled him in his folds, and covered him and his book with his ho an image of Maha Mahinda to be made, and conveying it to the edifice (Ambamalaka) in wh had been burnt, in order that be might celebrate a great festival there, and that he might also contents of the Dipavamsa, distributing a thousand pieces, he caused it to be read aloud[1].

If we compare with this extract from the Mahavamsa a passage from the commentary as t we can well understand how he arrived at the conclusion that it was written by the same per Mahavamsa.

Turnour translates (p. liv):

'Upon these data by me, the thera, who had, with due

[1. Mr. Turnour added a note in which he states that Dipavamsa is here meant for Mahavam brought down to this period, or only to the end of the reign of Mahasena, to which alone the
there is no means of ascertaining (p. 257).]

p. xix solemnity, been invested with the dignified title of Mahanama, resident at the parivena minister Dighasandana, endowed with the capacity requisite to record the narrative comprise in due order, rejecting only the dialect in which the Singhalese Atthakatha are written, but re import and following their arrangement, the history, entitled the Palapadoruvamsa (Padyapa compiled. As even in times when the despotism of the ruler of the land, and the horrors arisi inclemencies of the seasons, and when panics of epidemics and other visitations prevailed, all injury; and moreover, as it serves to perpetuate the fame of the Buddhas, their disciples, Buddhas of old, it is also worthy of bearing the title of Vamsatthappakasini.'

As the evidence of these two passages in support of the identity of the author and the com Mahavamsa seemed to me very startling, I requested Mr. Rhys Davids to copy for me the pa commentary. The passage runs as follows:

Ya ettavata mahavamsatthanusarakusalena Dighasanda-senapatina karapita-mahaparive garuhi gahitanamadheyyena therena pubba-Sihala-bhasitaya Sihalatthakathaya bhasantara eva gahetva tantinayanurupena katassa imassa Padyapada-nuvamsassa atthavannana ma araddha, padesissariya-dubbutthibhaya-rogabhayadi-vividha-antaraya-yuttakale pi anantara upagata, sa buddha-buddhasavaka-pakkekabuddhadinam porananam kikkam pubbavamsa

Vamsatthappakasini nama ti dharetabba. . . . Padyapadanuvamsa-vannana Vamsatthappak

Mr. Rhys Davids translates this:

'The commentary on this Padyapadanuvamsa, which (latter work) was made (in the same and retaining the sense, but rejecting the dialect, of the Sinhalese commentary formerly exp Sinhalese tongue) by the elder who bore the name of Mahanama, which he had p. xx receiv who resided at the Mahaparivena built by the minister Dighasanda, and who was well able t sense of the Mahavamsa--(this commentary) which was undertaken by me out of devotion t which (though thus undertaken) at a time full of danger of various kinds--such as the danger the danger from drought, and the danger from the government of the province--has been sa conclusion--this (commentary), since it makes known the meaning of the history of old, the r ancients, of the Buddhas, of their disciples, and of the Pakkeka Buddhas, should bear the na Vamsatthappakasini. . . .

'End of the Vamsatthappakasini, the commentary on the Padyapadanuvamsa.'

This shows clearly that Turnour made a mistake in translating this exceedingly involved, y intelligible, passage, and that so far from proving that the author of the commentary was the the author of the text[1], it proves the very contrary. Nay, I feel bound to add, that we might r as the commentator must have lived later than 601 A.D., the fact that he too breaks off at ve 37, seems to show that at his time also the Mahavamsa did not extend as yet beyond that v the fact that with the restoration of the Mahavihara of Anuradhapura an interest in historical in Ceylon, would clearly show that we may trust the date of Buddhaghosa, as fixed by the se 37th chapter of the Mahavamsa, at all events till stronger evidence is brought forward agains

Now I am not aware of any such evidence[2]. On the contrary, making allowance for a diff or twenty years, all the evidence which we can gain from other quarters tends to confirm, the

[1. Dr. Oldenberg informs me that the commentator quotes various readings in the text of th

2. The passage, quoted by Professor Minayeff from the Sasanavamsa, would assign to Bud 930-543 = 387 A.D., which can easily be reconciled with his accepted date. If he is called th Siripala, we ought to know who that Siripala is.]

p. xxi Buddhaghosa[1]. I therefore feel no hesitation in here reprinting that story, as we find i Mahavamsa, not free from legendary ingredients, it is true, yet resting, I believe, on a sound historical fact.

'A Brahman youth, born in the neighbourhood of the terrace of the great Bo-tree (in Magad in the "vigga" (knowledge) and "sippa" (art), who had achieved the knowledge of the three V great aptitude in attaining acquirements; indefatigable as a schismatic disputant, and himsel wanderer over Gambudipa, established himself, in the character of a disputant, in a certain in the habit of rehearsing, by night and by day with clasped hands, a discourse which he had in all its component parts, and sustained throughout in the same lofty strain. A certain Maha becoming acquainted with him there, and (saying to himself), "This individual is a person of knowledge, it will be worthy (of me) to convert him;" enquired, "Who is this who is braying lik Brahman replied to him, "Thou canst define, then, the meaning conveyed in the bray of asse rejoining, "I can define it;" he (the Brahman) exhibited the extent of the knowledge he posse criticised each of his propositions, and pointed out in what respect they were fallacious. He thus refuted, said, "Well, then, descend to thy own creed;" and he propounded to him a pass Abhidhamma (of the Pitakattaya). He (the Brahman) could not divine the signification of that enquired, "Whose manta is this?"--"It is Buddha's manta." On his exclaiming, "Impart it to me replied, "Enter the sacerdotal order." He who was desirous of acquiring the knowledge of the subsequently coming to this conviction, "This is the sole road" (to salvation), became a conv faith. As he was as profound in his eloquence (ghosa) as Buddha himself, they conferred on of Buddhaghosa (the

[1. See Bigandet, Life of Gaudama. pp. 351, 381.

2. On this vihara, its foundation and character, see Oldenberg, Vinaya, vol. i. p. liii; Hiouen-t
p. 487 seq.]

p. xxii voice of Buddha); and throughout the world he became as renowned as Buddha. Hav Gambudipa) composed an original work called Nanodaya (Rise of Knowledge), he, at the sa chapter called Atthasalini, on the Dhammasangani (one of the commentaries on the Abhidha

'Revata Thera then observing that he was desirous of undertaking the compilation of a ge the Pitakattaya, thus addressed him: "The text alone of the Pitakattaya has been preserved Atthakatha are not extant here, nor is there any version to be found of the schisms (vada) co Sinhalese Atthakatha are genuine. They were composed in the Sinhalese language by the i wise Mahinda, who had previously consulted the discourses (kathamagga) of Buddha, authe convocations, and the dissertations and arguments of Sariputta and others, and they are ext Sinhalese. Preparing for this, and studying the same, translate them according to the rules o the Magadhas. It will be an act conducive to the welfare of the whole world."

'Having been thus advised, this eminently wise personage rejoicing therein, departed from visited this island in the reign of this monarch (i.e. Mahanama, 410-432). On reaching the M Anuradhapura), he entered the Mahapadhana hall, the most splendid of the apartments in th listened to the Sinhalese Atthakatha, and the Theravada, from the beginning to the end, pro Thera Sanghapala; and became thoroughly convinced that they conveyed the true meaning Lord of Dhamma. Thereupon paying reverential respect to the priesthood, he thus petitioned translating the Atthakatha; give me access to all your books." The priesthood, for the purpos qualifications, gave only two gathas, saying, "Hence prove thy qualification; having satisfied this point, we will then let thee have all our books." From these (taking these gatha for his te xxiii consulting the Pitakattaya, together with the Atthakatha, and condensing them into an a composed the work called the Visuddhimagga. Thereupon, having assembled the priesthoo thorough knowledge of the doctrines of Buddha, at the Bo-tree, he commenced to read out t composed. The devatas, in order that they might make his (Buddhaghosa's) gifts of wisdom rendered that book invisible. He, however, for a second and third time recomposed it. When of producing his book for the third time, for the purpose of propounding it, the devatas restor two copies also. The assembled priests then read out the three books simultaneously. In tho there was no variation whatever from the orthodox Theravadas in passages, in words, or in Thereupon, the priesthood rejoicing, again and again fervently shouted forth, saying, "Most Metteya (Buddha) himself," and made over to him the books in which the Pitakattaya were r with the Atthakatha. Taking up his residence in the secluded Ganthakara-vihara (at Anuradh translated, according to the grammatical rules of the Magadhas, which is the root of all langu of the Sinhalese Atthakatha (into Pali). This proved an achievement of the utmost conseque whatever their language.

'All the Theras and Akariyas held this compilation in the same estimation as the text (of the Thereafter, the objects of his mission having been fulfilled, he returned to Gambudipa, to wo Bo-tree (at Uruvelaya, or Uruvilva, in Magadha).'

Here[1] we have a simple account of Buddhaghosa[2] and [1. Mahavamsa, p. 250, translated by Turnour.

2. The Burmese entertain the highest respect for Buddhaghosa. Bishop Bigandet, in his Life Gaudama (Rangoon, 1866), writes: 'It is perhaps as well to mention here an epoch which ha famous in the history of Budhism in Burma. I allude to the voyage which a Religious of Thato Budhagosa, made to Ceylon, in the year of religion 943 = 400 A.D. The object of this voyage copy of the scriptures. He succeeded in his undertaking. He made use of the Burmese, or ra characters, in transcribing the manuscripts, which were written with the characters of Magat lay much stress upon that voyage, and always carefully note down the year it took place. In Budhagosa that the people living on the shores of the Gulf of Martaban owe the possession scriptures. From Thaton, the collection made by Budhagosa was transferred to Pagan, six h years after it had been imported from Ceylon.' See ibid. p. 392.]

p. xxiv his literary labours written by a man, himself a priest, and who may well have known during his stay in Ceylon. It is true that the statement of his writing the same book three time a single various reading, partakes a little of the miraculous; but we find similar legends mixe accounts of translations of other sacred books, and we cannot contend that writers who beli legends are therefore altogether unworthy to be believed as historical witnesses.

But although the date which we can assign to Buddhaghosa's translation of the commenta Tipitaka proves the existence of that canon, not only for the beginning or the fifth century of likewise, though it may be, with less stringency, for the first century before our era, the time Vattagamani, the question whether Buddhaghosa was merely a compiler and translator of o more particularly of the commentaries brought to Ceylon by Mahinda (241 B.C.), or whether his own[1], requires to be more carefully examined. The Buddhists themselves have no diffic They consider the Atthakathas or commentaries as old as the canon itself. To us, such a su improbable, yet it has never been proved to be impossible. The Mahavamsa tells us that Ma Asoka, who had become a priest, learnt the whole of the Buddhist canon, as it then was, in t 37)[2]; and that at the end of the Third Council he was despatched to Ceylon, in order to est religion of Buddha (p. 71). The king of Ceylon, Devanampiya Tissa, was converted, and Buc dominant

[1. He had written the Nanodaya, and the Atthasalini, a commentary on the Dhamma-sanga Ceylon. Cf. Mahavamsa, p. 251.

2. He learnt the five Nikayas, and the seven sections (of the Abhidhamma); the two Vibhang the Parivara and the Khandhaka. See Dipavamsa VII, 42.]

p. xxv religion of the island, The Tipitaka and the Atthakatha, such as they had been collecte
the Third Council in 242 B.C., were brought to Ceylon by Mahinda, who promulgated them c Pali, the Atthakatha in Sinhalese, together with an additional Atthakatha of his own. It does n Mahinda knew the whole of that enormous literature by heart, for, as he was supported by a they may well have divided the different sections among them, following the example of Ana First Council. The same applies to their disciples also. But the fact of their transmitting the sa literature by oral tradition[1] was evidently quite familiar to the author of the Mahavamsa. Fo to describe the reign of Vattagamani (88-76 B.C.) he simply says: 'The profoundly wise pries orally perpetuated the Pali Pitakattaya and its Atthakatha (commentaries). At this period thes foreseeing the perdition of the people (from the perversions of the true doctrines), assemble that the religion might endure for ages, wrote the same in books.' No valid objection has yet our accepting Buddhaghosa's Atthakathas as a translation and new redaction of the Atthaka reduced to writing under Vattagamani[2], and these again as a translation of the old Atthaka Ceylon by Mahinda[3]. There is prima facie evidence in favour of the truth of historical event such works as the Dipavamsa and the Mahavamsa so far back at least as Mahinda, becaus events were recorded in the monasteries of Ceylon long before Mahanama's time. Beyond M legendary history, and must be ready to surrender every name and every date as soon as re been produced, but not till then.

I cannot, therefore, see any reason why we should not treat the verses of the Dhammapad utterances of Buddha, at least as what were believed by the

[1. On the importance of oral tradition in the history of Sanskrit literature see the writer's Anc Sanskrit Literature, 1859, pp. 497-524.

2. Mahavamsa, p. 207; Dipavamsa XX, 20.

3. Mahavamsa, p. 251.]

p. xxvi members of the Council under Asoka, in 242 B.C., to have been the utterances of the religion; nor can I see that Professor Minayeff has shaken the date of Buddhaghosa and the of the Ceylonese tradition, that he was the translator and editor of commentaries which had island for many centuries; whether from the time of Vattagamani or from the time of Mahinda

DATE OF THE BUDDHIST CANON.

We now return to the question of the date of the Buddhist canon, which, as yet, we have o
the first century before Christ, when it was reduced to writing in Ceylon under King Vattagam is, how far beyond that date we may trace its existence in a collected form, or in the form of Pitakas or baskets. There may be, and we shall see that there is, some doubt as to the age now incorporated in the Tipitaka. We are told, for instance, that some doubt attached to the Kariya-pitaka; the Apadana, and the Buddhavamsa[1], and there is another book of the Abh Kathavatthu, which was reported to be the work of Tissa Moggaliputta, the president of the T
Childers, s.v., stated that it was composed by the apostle Moggaliputtatissa, and delivered b

Third Mahasangiti. The same scholar, however, withdrew this opinion on p. 507 of his valua where he says: 'It is a source of great regret to me that in my article on Kathavatthuppakara inadvertently followed James D'Alwis in the stupendous blunder of his assertion that the Kat by Moggaliputtatissa at the Third Convocation. The Kathavatthu is one of the Abhidhamma Buddhaghosa as having been rehearsed at the First Convocation, immediately after Gotama passage in Mahavamsa upon which D'Alwis rests his assertion is as follows, Kathavatthupp paravadappamaddanam abhasi Tissatthero ka tasmim sangitimandale, which simply means Convocation-assembly

[1. See Childers, s.v. Nikaya.]

p. xxvii the Thera Tissa also recited (Buddha's) heresy-crushing Kathavatthuppakarana.'

This mistake, for I quite agree with Childers that it was a mistake, becomes however less at first sight it would appear, when we read the account given in the Dipavamsa. Here the im conveyed that Moggaliputta was the author of the Kathavatthu, and that he recited it for the Third Council. 'Wise Moggaliputta,' we read[1], 'the destroyer of the schismatic doctrines, fir the Theravada, and held the Third Council. Having destroyed the different (heretical) doctrin many shameless people, and restored splendour to the (true) faith, he proclaimed (pakasayi called) Kathavatthu.' And again: 'They all were sectarians[2], opposed to the Theravada; an annihilate them and to make his own doctrine resplendent, the Thera set forth (desesi) the t to the Abhidhamma, which is called Kathavatthu[3].'

At present, however, we are not concerned with these smaller questions. We treat the can divided into three parts, and containing the books which still exist in MSS., and we want to fi time such a collection was made. The following is a short abstract of the Tipitaka, chiefly tak Childers' Pali Dictionary:

I. Vinaya-pitaka.

Vibhanga[4].
Vol. I, beginning with Paragika, or sins involving expulsion.
Vol. II, beginning with Pakittiya, or sins involving penance.

Khandhaka.
Vol. I, Mahavagga, the large section.

Vol. II, Kullavagga, the small section.

Parivarapatha, an appendix and later resume (25 chapters). See p. xiii, n. 4; p. xxiv, n. 2.

[1. Dipavamsa VII, 40.

2. Dipavamsa VII, 55.

3. Dr. Oldenberg, in his Introduction to the Vinaya-pitaka, p. xxxii.

4. Oldenberg, Vinaya-pitaka I, p. xvi, treats it as an extended reading of Patimokkha.]

p. xxviii

II. Sutta-pitaka.

Digha-nikaya, collection of long suttas (34 suttas)[1]. Magghima-nikaya, collection of midc suttas). Samyutta-nikaya, collection of joined suttas. Anguttara-nikaya[2], miscellaneous su divisions the length of which increases by one. Khuddaka-nikaya[3], the collection of short s consisting of-- Khuddakapatha, the small texts[4]. Dhammapada, law verses (423)[5]. Ud suttas). Itivuttaka, stories referring to sayings of Buddha. Suttanipata 70 suttas[6]. Vimana stories of Vimanas, celestial palaces. Petavatthu, stories of Pretas, departed spirits. Therag of monks. Therigatha, stanzas of nuns. Gataka, former births (550 tales)[7]. Niddesa, expl certain suttas by Sariputta.

[1. The Mahaparinibbana-sutta, ed. by Childers, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, transla Suttas by Rhys Dayids (). Sept Suttas Palis, par Grimblot, Paris, l876.

2. The first four are sometimes called the Four Nikayas, the five together the five Nikayas. T the Dharma, as settled at the First and Second Councils, described in the Kullavagga (Older

3. Sometimes Khuddaka-nikaya stands for the whole Vinaya and Abhidhamma- pitaka, with here given of Khuddaka-nikaya. In the commentary on the Brahmagala-sutta it is said that th professors rehearsed the text of the Gataka, Maha and Kulla Niddesa, Patisambhidamagga Dhammapada, Udana, Itivuttaka, Vimana, and Petavatthu, Thera and Theri Gatha, and calle and made it a canonical text, forming part of the Abhidhamma; while the Magghimanikaya p with the addition of the Kariyapitaka, Apadana, and Buddhavamsa, the whole of this Khudda in the Suttapitaka. See Childers, s.v. Nikaya;. See also <page x>.

4. Published by Childers, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, 1869.

5. Published by Fausboll, 1855.

6. Thirty translated by Sir Coomara Swamy; the whole by Fausboll, in Sacred Books of the E

7. Published by Fausboll, translated by Rhys Davids.]

p. xxix

Patisambhidamagga, the road of discrimination, and intuitive insight. Apadana[1], legend Buddhavamsa[1], story of twenty-four preceding Buddhas and of Gotama. Kariyapitaka[1], l Buddha's meritorious actions[2].III. Abhidhamma-pitaka.

Dhammasangani, numeration of conditions of life[3]. Vibhanga, disquisitions (18). Kathav book of subjects for discussion (1000 suttas). Puggalapannatti or pannatti, declaration on p personality. Dhatukatha, account of dhatus or elements. Yamaka, pairs (ten divisions). Pa book of causes. Taking this collection as a whole we may lay it down as self-evident that th collected form, cannot be older than any of the events related therein.

There are two important facts for determining the age of the Pali canon, which, as Dr. Olde been the first to show, should take precedence of all other arguments, viz.

1. That in the Tipitaka, as we now have it, no mention is made of the so-called Third Coun place at Pataliputta, under King Asoka, about 242 B.C.

2. That in the Tipitaka, as we now have it, the First Council of Ragagaha (477 B.C.) and th of Vesali (377 B.C.) are both mentioned.

From these two facts it may safely be concluded that the Buddhist canon, as handed down closed

[1. Buddhaghosa does not say whether these were recited at the First Council.

2. Partly translated by Gogerly, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Ceylon, 1852.

3. Cf. Gogerly, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Ceylon. 1848, p. 7.

4. See Oldenberg's Vinaya-pitaka, Introduction. p. xxv. The kings Agatasatru (485-453 B.C.) B.C.), and Munda (437-429 B.C.) are all mentioned in the Tipitaka. See Oldenberg, Zeitschr XXXIV. pp. 752, 753.]

p. xxx after the Second and before, or possibly at, the Third Council. Nay, the fact that the d the two Councils stands at the very end of the Kullavagga may be taken, as Dr. Oldenberg r indication that it was one of the latest literary contributions which obtained canonical authori great bulk of the canon may probably claim a date anterior to the Second Council.

This fact, namely, that the collection of the canon, as a whole, must have preceded the Se rests on an argument which does great credit to the ingenuity of Dr. Oldenberg. The Second convoked to consider the ten deviations[1] from the strict discipline of the earliest times. Tha had been laid down first in the Patimokkha rules, then in the commentary now included in th in the Mahavagga and Kullavagga. The rules as to what was allowed or forbidden to a Bhikk minute[2], and they were so firmly established that no one could have ventured either to tak anything to them as they stood in the sacred code. In that code itself a distinction is made be offences which were from the first visited with punishment (paragika and pakittiya) and those and crimes which were put down as punishable at a later time (dukkata and thullakkaya). W code was considered as closed, and if any doubt arose as to the criminality of certain acts, i settled at once by an appeal to the Vinaya-pitaka. Now it so happens that, with one exceptio deviations that had to be considered at the Second Council, are not provided for in the Vinay quite agree with Dr. Oldenberg's argument that, if they had been mentioned in the Vinaya-pi Council would have been objectless. A mere appeal to chapter and verse in the existing Pita silenced all dissent. On the other side, if it had been possible to add anything to the canon, a existed, the ten, or nine, deviations might have been condemned

[1. Oldenberg, Introduction, p. xxix.

2. Oldenberg, loc. cit. p. xx.]

p. xxxi by a few additional paragraphs of the canon, without convoking a new Council.

I think we may be nearly certain, therefore, that we possess the principal portion of the Vin it existed before the Council of Vesali.

So far I quite agree with Dr. Oldenberg. But if he proceeds to argue[1] that certain portions must have been finally settled before even the First Council took place, or was believed to h I do not think his arguments conclusive. He contends that in the Parinibbana-sutta, which tel days of Buddha's life, of his death, the cremation of his body, and the distribution of his relic Subhadda's revolt, it would have been impossible to leave out all mention of the First Counc Council had then been known. It is true, no doubt, that Subhadda's disloyalty was the chief c Council, but there was no necessity to mention that Council. On the contrary, it seems to me the Parinibbana-sutta would have been broken if, besides telling of the last days of Buddha, a full description of the Council. The very title, the Sutta of the Great Decease, would have b inappropriate, if so important a subject as the first Sangiti had been mixed up with it. Howev we may trust to such general arguments, is best shown by the fact that in some very early C of the Hinayana text of the Mahaparinibbana-sutta the story is actually carried on to the Firs (Nos. 552 and 119) mentioning the rehearsal under Kasyapa, while the third (No. 118) simpl Tiptaka was then collected[2].

[1. Loc. cit. pp. xxvi-xxviii.

2. There are several Chinese translations of Sutras on the subject of the Mahaparinirvana. T Mahayana school: 1. Mahaparinirvana-sutra, translated by Dharmaraksha, about 414-423 A 424-453 (Nos. 113, 114). 2. Translation by Fa-hian and Buddhabhadra, about 415 A.D.; less 3. Translation (vaipulya) by Dharmaraksha I, i.e. Ku Fa-hu, about 261-308 A.D. (No. 116). T Hinayana school: 1. Mahiparinirvana-sutra. translated by Po-fa-tsu, about 290-306 A.D. (No Translation under the Eastern Tsin dynasty, 317-42O A.D. (No. 119). 3. Translation by Fa-h (No. 118).]

p. xxxii

We must be satisfied therefore, so far as I can see at present, with fixing the date, and the of a Buddhist canon at the time of the Second Council, 377 B.C. That some works were add that many of the treatises included in the canon existed before that Council, can hardly be d second chapter of the Dhammapada, for instance, is called the Appamada-vagga, and if the tells us that at the time when Asoka was converted by Nigrodha, that Buddhist priest explain Appamada-vagga, we can hardly doubt that there existed then a collection (vagga) of verses as we now possess in the Dhammapada and in the Samyutta-nikaya[1].

With regard to the Vinaya, I should even feel inclined to admit, with Dr. Oldenberg, that it r existed in a more or less settled form before that time. What I doubt is whether such terms a or Tipitaka, the three baskets, i.e. the canon, existed at that early time. They have not been yet, in any of the canonical books; and if the Dipavamsa (IV, 32) uses the word 'Tipitaka,' wh the First Council, this is due to its transferring new terms to older times. If Dr. Oldenberg spe Dvi-pitaka[2] as the name of the canon before the third basket, that of the Abhidhamma, was seems to me an impossible name, because at the time when the Abhidhamma was not yet r of the canon, the word pitaka had probably no existence as a technical term[3].

We must always, I think, distinguish between the three portions of the canon, called the ba Suttas, the

[1. Feer, Revue Critique, 1870, No. 24, p. 377.

2. Introduction. pp. x, xii.

3. Dr. Oldenberg informs me that pitaka occurs in the Kankisuttanta in the Magghima Nikaya fol. the), but applied to the Veda. He also refers to the tipitakakaryas mentioned in the Weste inscriptions as compared with the Pankanekayaka in the square Asoka character inscription Bharhut, pl. lvi, No. 52). In the Sutrakrid-anga of the Gainas, too, the term pidagam occurs ( 77 a). He admils, however, that pitaka or tipitaka, as the technical name of the Buddhist can been met with in that canon itself, and defends Dvipitaka only as a convenient term.]

p. xxxiii basket of Vinaya, and the basket of Abhidhamma, and the three subjects of Dhamm and Abhidhamma, treated in these baskets. The subjects existed and were taught long befo were definitely arranged. Dhamma had originally a much wider meaning than Sutta-pitaka. I whole teaching of Buddha; and even when it refers more particularly to the Sutta-pitaka, we Dhamma there taught deals largely with Vinaya and Abhidhamma doctrines. Even the fact th Council, according to the description given in the Kullavagga, the Vinaya and Dhamma only though proving the absence at that time of the Abhidhamma, as a separate Pitaka, by no me subject of the Abhidhamma having been taught under the head of Dhamma. In the Mahakar doctrine of Buddha is divided into Dharma and Vinaya; the Abhidharma is not mentioned. Bu of all the twelve Dharmapravakanani[1], the 1. Sutra; 2. Geya; 3. Vyakarana; 4. Gatha; 5. Ud Avadana; 8. Itivrittaka; 9. Gataka; 10. Vaipulya; 11. Adbhutadharma; 12. Upadesa; some of decidedly metaphysical.

To my mind nothing shows so well the historical character both of the Kullavagga and of B Introduction to his commentary on the Digha-nikaya, as that the former, in its account of the should know only of the Vinaya, as rehearsed by Upali, and the Dhamma, as rehearsed by A later Buddhaghosa, in his account of the First Council[2], divides the Dhamma into two parts the second part, the Abhidhamma, was rehearsed after the first part, the Dhamma. Between Kullavagga and the time of Buddhaghosa the Abhidhamma must have assumed its recognis Vinaya and Sutta. It must be left to further researches to determine, if possible,

[1. See Academy, August 28, 1880, Division of Buddhist Scriptures.

2. Oldenberg, Introduction, p. xii; Turnour, Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vi, p. 510

p. xxxiv the time when the name of pitaka was first used, and when Tipitaka was accepted a whole canon.

Whenever we see such traces of growth, we feel that we are on historical ground, and in t
Oldenberg's researches into the growth of the Vinaya, previous to the Second Council, dese credit. He shows, in opposition to other scholars, that the earliest elements of Vinaya must b the short Patimokkha rules, which were afterwards supplemented by explanations, by glosse and in that form answered for some time every practical purpose. Then followed a new gene satisfied, as it would seem, with these brief rules and comments, wished to know the occasi rules had been originally promulgated. What we now call the Vibhanga, i.e. the first and sec the Vinaya-pitaka, is a collection of the stories, illustrating the origin of each rule, of the rules themselves (the Patimokkha), and of the glosses and comments on these rules.

The third and fourth books, the Mahavagga and Kullavagga, are looked upon as possibly date. They treat, in a similar manner as the Vibhanga, on the rules not included in that collec a general picture of the outward life of the monks. While the Vibhanga deals chiefly with the so-called paragika, sanghadisesa, and pakittiya offences, the Khandhaka, i.e. the Mahavagg treats of the so-called dukkata and thullakkaya crimes. The arrangement is the same, story, succeeding each other in regular sequence. If we follow the guidance of the Vinaya-pitaka, w to distinguish the following steps in the growth of Buddhism before the Second Council of Ve

Teaching of Buddha and his disciples (543/477 A.D. Buddha's death). Collection of Patim code). Comment and glosses on these rules. Stories in illustration of these rules (vibhanga Kullavagga (Khandhaka).p. xxxv

Council of Vesali for the repression of ten abuses (443/377 A.D.) Description of First and in Kullavagga. The Kulavagga ascribes the settlement of the canon to the First Council, an claim a revision of that canon for the Second Council. The Dipavamsa claims a revision of th Arhats for the Second Council.

CHRONOLOGY.

In order to bring the Council of Vesali in connection with the chronology of the world, we m Buddhist historians for another century. One hundred and eighteen years after the Council o the anointment of King Asoka, during whose reign a Third Council, under the presidency of T took place at Pataliputta, the new capital adopted by that king, instead of Ragagaha and Ves is chiefly known to us through the writings of the southern Buddhists (Dipavamsa, Mahavam who belong to the school of Moggaliputta (Theravada or Vibhaggavada), which ruled suprem while Upagupta, the chief authority of the northern Buddhists, is altogether ignored in the Pa

Now it is well known that Asoka was the grandson of Kandagutta, and Kandagutta the con Alexander the Great. Here we see land, and I may refer to my History of Sanskrit Literature, 1859, for the process by which the storm-tossed ship of Indian chronology has been landed real historical chronology. We are told by the monks of the Mahavihara in Ceylon that Asoka according to their computation, 146 + 18 years before the accession of Dutthagamani, 161 B that between his coronation and his father's death four years had elapsed (329 B.C.); that hi Bindusara had reigned twenty-eight years[1] (357-329 B.C.), and Bindusara's father, Kanda

[1. Mahavamsa, p. 21.]

p. xxxvi twenty-four years (381-357). As we know that Kandagutta, whom the Ceylonese pla king of India after Alexander's conquest, it follows that Ceylonese chronology is wrong by m century. For reasons stated in my History of Sanskrit Literature, I fix the exact fault in Ceylon chronology as sixty-six years, assigning to Kandagutta the dates 315-291, instead of 381-35 291-263 for Bindusara, 259 for Asoka's abhisheka; 259 + 118 = 377 for the Council of Vesal
477 for Buddha's death, instead of 543 B.C.[1]

These dates are, of course, approximate only, and they depend on one or two points on w differ. But, with that reservation, I see no ground whatever for modifying the chronological sy put forward more than twenty years ago. Professor Westergaard and Professor Kern, who h different dates for the death of Buddha, do not really differ from me in principle, but only in th of one or the other alternative, which I readily admit as possible, but not as more certain than Professor Westergaard[2], for instance, fixes Buddha's death at 368 (370), instead of 477. T difference, but it is so in appearance only.

Following Justinus, who says that Sandrokyptos[3] had conquered the empire of India at th
Seleucus laid the foundations of his own greatness, I had accepted 315[4], half-way betwee

Porus and the taking of Babylon by Seleucus, as the probable beginning

[1. According to Bigandet, Life of Gaudama, p. 361, the era of Buddha's death was introduce the conclusion of the First Council, and began in the year 46 of the older Eetzana era (p. 12) Rhys Davids, Num. Orient. vi, p. 38. In the Karanda-vyuha, p. 96, a date is given as 300 afte
'tritiye varshasate gate mama parinirvritasya.' In the Asoka-avadana we read, mama nirvritin satavarshagata Upagupto nama bhikshur utpatsyati.

2. Uber Buddha's Todesjahr (1860), 1862.

3. The Greek name Sandrokyptus shows that the Pali corruption Kandagutta was not yet the the king.

4. Mr. Rhys Davids accepts 315 B.C. as the date when, after the murder of king Nanda, Kan the vacant throne, though he had begun to count his reign seven or eight years before. Bud

p. xxxvii of Kandragupta's reign. Westergaard prefers 320 as a more likely date for Kandragu places the death of the last Nanda and the beginning of Asoka's royal pretensions 268. Here difference between him and me of five years, which depends chiefly on the view we take as Seleucus really laid what Justinus calls the foundation of his future greatness. Secondly, We actually adopts the idea, at which I only hinted as possible, that the southern Buddhists mad of one, and two Councils out of one. Trusting in the tradition that 118 years elapsed between and the Council under Asoka (at Pataliputra), and that the Council took place in the king's te the case with the imaginary Kalasoka's Council), he gets 268 - 10 = 258 as the date of the C 370 as the date of Buddha's death[1].

The two points on which Westergaard differs from me, seem to me questions which shoul mind in dealing with early Buddhist history, but which, for the present at least, admit of no de solution.

The same remark seems to me to apply to the calculations of another eminent Sanskrit sc Kern[2]. He lays great stress on the general untrustworthiness of Indian chronology, and I ar differ from him on that point. He then places the beginning of Kandragupta's reign in 322 B.C
twenty-four years to him and twenty-eight to his son Bindusara, he places the beginning of A 270. Asoka's inscriptions would fall about 258. As Asoka reigned thirty-six or thirty-seven ye would fall in 234 or 233 B.C. Like Westergaard, Professor Kern too eliminates Kalasoka, as chronological Asoka, and the Council of Vaisali, and therefore places Buddha's death, accor northern tradition, 100 or 110 years before Dharmasoka, i.e. 270 + 100 or + 110 = 370 or 38

according to the southern

[1. Westergaard. loc. cit. p. 128.

2. Jaartelling der Zuidelijke Buddhisten, 1873.

3. See Professor Kern's remark in Indian Antiquary, 1874, p. 79.]

p. xxxviii tradition, that 118 years elapsed between Asoka's accession and Buddha's death, would seem originally to have retained 270 + 118[1] = 388 B.C. as Buddha's Nirvana, a date Kern holds, happens to coincide with the date assigned to the death of Mahavira, the founde religion.

Here we see again that the moot point is the beginning of Kandragupta's reign in accordar information supplied by Greek historians. Professor Kern places it in 322, Westergaard in 32 315. That difference once granted, Dr. Kern's reasoning is the same as my own. According t which we follow, Buddha's death took place 100, 110, 118, or 228 years before Asoka. Henc Westergaard arrives at 368 or 370 B.C., Professor Kern at 370 (380) or 388 B.C., I myself a one of these dates is liable to certain objections, and if I prefer my own date, 477 B. C., it is because it seems to me liable to neither more nor less reservations than those of Professor Professor Kern, and because, so long as we always remember the grounds of our differenc beginning of Kandragupta's reign, and the additional century, every one of these dates furni hypothesis to work on, until we can arrive at greater certainty in the ancient chronology of In all dates beyond Kandragupta are as yet purely tentative, resting far more on a chronologica actual tradition; and though I do not doubt the historical chatacter of the Council of Vaisali, I the date assigned to it, on the authority of the Dipavamsa and Mahavamsa, as, for the prese only.

[1. When Professor Kern states that the Mahavamsa (p. 22) places the Third Council 218 ye death, this is not so. Asoka's abhisheka takes place in that year. The prophecy that a calami their religion, 118 years after the Second Council (Mahavamsa, p. 28), does not refer to the Kandasoka's accession, 477 - 218 = 259 B.C.]

p. xxxix

B.C.
557. Buddha born.
552. Bimbisara born.

537-485. Bimbisara, 5 years younger than Buddha, was 15 when crowned, 30 or 31 whe

485-453. Agatasatru (4 × 8 years).
477. Buddha's death (485 - 8 = 477).
477. COUNCIL AT RAGAGRIHA under Kasyapa, Ananda, and Upali.
453-437. Udayibhadra (2 × 8 years).
437-429. { Anuruddhaka (8 years).
Munda (at Pataliputra).
429-405. Nagadasaka (3 × 8 years).
405-387. Sisunaga (at Vaisali).
387-359. Kalasoka.
377. COUNCIL AT VAISALI, under Yasas and Revata, a disciple of Ananda (259 + 118 =
359-337. Ten sons of Kalasoka (22 years).
337-315. Nine Nandas (22 years); the last, Dhanananda, killed by Kanakya.
315-291. Kandragupta (477 - 162 = 315; 3 × 8 years)[1].
291-263. Bindusara.
263-259. Asoka, sub-king at Uggayini, as pretender--his brothers killed.
259. Asoka anointed at Pataliputra (477 - 218 = 259).
256. Asoka converted by Nigrodha (D. V. VI, 18).
256-253. Building of Viharas, Sthupas, &c.
255. Conversion of Tishya (M. V. p. 34).
253. Ordination of Mahendra (born 477 - 204 = 273).
251. Tishya and Sumitra die (D. V. VII, 32).
242. COUNCIL AT PATALIPUTRA (259 - 17 = 242; 477 - 236 = 271), under Tishya Mau 241; D.V. VII, 37).
241. Mahendra to Ceylon.
222. Asoka died (259 - 37 = 222).
193. Mahendra died (D. V. XVII, 93).
161. Dutthagamani.
88-76. Vattagamani, canon reduced to writing.
A.D.
400. Dipavamsa.
420. Buddhaghosha, Pali commentaries.
459-477. Mahavamsa.

[1. Westergaard, 320-296; Kern, 322-298.]

p. xl

Though the preceding table, embodying in the main the results at which I arrived in my His Sanskrit Literature, still represents what I hold to be true or most probable with respect to Ind chronology, previous to the beginning of our era, yet I suppose I may be expected to say he the two latest attempts to fix the date of Buddha's death; the one by Mr. Rhys Davids in the Orientalia, Part VI, 1877, the other by Dr. Buhler in the Indian Antiquary, 1877 and 1878[1]. to whom we owe so much for the elucidation of the history of Buddha's religion, accepts We the beginning of Kandragupta's reign, 320 B.C., instead of 322 (Kern), 315 (myself); and as to Bindusara 25 years instead of 28 (Mahavamsa, p. 21), he arrives at 268 as the year of As coronation[2]. He admits that the argument derived from the mention of the five foreign kings Asoka's inscriptions, dated the twelfth year of his reign, is too precarious to enable us to fix t Asoka's reign more definitely, and though, in a general way, that inscription confirms the dat nearly all scholars to Asoka in the middle of the third century B.C., yet there is nothing in it th might not have written in 247 quite as well as in 258-261. What chiefly distinguishes Mr. Rhy chronology from that of his predecessors is the shortness of the period between Asoka's con Buddha's death. On the strength of an examination of the list of kings and the list of the so-c patriarchs, he reduces the traditional 218 years to 140 or 150, and thus arrives at 412 B.C. a beginning of the Buddhist era.

In this, however, I cannot follow him, but have to follow Dr. Buhler. As soon as I saw Dr. B essay on the Three New Edicts of Asoka, I naturally felt delighted at the unexpected confirm furnished of the date which I had assigned to Buddha's death, 477 B.C. And though I am qu

[1. Three New Edicts of Asoka, Bombay, 1877; Second Notice, Bombay, 1878.

2. Mr. Rhys Davids on p. 50 assigns the 35 years of Bindusara rightly to the Puranas, the 38 Ceylon Chronicles.]

p. xli danger of unexpected confirmations of one's own views, yet, after carefully weighing th raised by Mr. Rhys Davids and Professor Pischel against Dr. Buhler's arguments, I cannot th shaken Dr. Buhler's position. I fully admit the difficulties in the phraseology of these inscriptio ask, Who could have written these inscriptions, if not Asoka? And how, if written by Asoka, c they contain mean anything but 256 years after Buddha's Nirvana? These points, however, masterly a manner by Dr. Buhler in his 'Second Notice,' that I should be afraid of weakening adding anything of my own, and must refer my readers to his 'Second Notice.' Allowing that owing to the doubtful readings of MSS., and the constant neglect of odd months, we must al interpretation of Buddhist chronology, Asoka is the only king we know of who could have spo thirty-fourth year since the beginning of his reign and since his conversion to Buddhism. And year, say the very last of his reign (212 B.C.), 256 after the departure of the Master, we have that as early as Asoka's time, Buddha was believed to have died about 477 B.C. Whether th been accurately copied and rightly read is, however, a more serious question, and the doubt Oldenberg (Mahavagga, p. xxxviii) make a new collation of the originals absolutely indispens can definitely accept Dr. Buhler's interpretation.

I cannot share Dr. Buhler's opinion[1] as to the entire worthlessness of the Gaina chronolo the date of Buddha's death. If the Svetambara Gainas place the death of Mahavira 470 befo 56 B.C. + 470 = 526 B.C.,and the Digambaras 605, i.e. 78 A.D. deducted from 605 = 527 B. confirms Dr. Buhler's and Dr. Jacobi's brilliant discovery that Mahavira was the same as Nig who died at Pava during Buddha's lifetime[2]. Most likely 527 is too early a date, while anoth

[1. Three Edicts. p. 21; Second Notice. pp. 9, 10.

2. See Jacobi, Kalpa-sutra of Bhadrabahu, and Oldenberg, Zeitschrift der D.M.G., XXXIV, p

p. xlii tradition fixing Mahavira's death 155 years before Kandragupta[1], 470 B.C., is too late both show that the distance between Asoka (259-222 B.C.), the grandson of Kandragupta (3 contemporaries of Buddha was by the Gainas also believed to be one of two rather than one

When I saw that the date of Buddha's death, 477 B.C., which in my History of Ancient San (1859) I had myself tried to support by such arguments as were then accessible, had receive support by the discovery of the inscriptions of Sahasram, Rupnath, and Bairat, due to Gener had himself always been an advocate of the date 477 B.C., and through their careful deciph Buhler, I lost no time in testing that date once more by the Dipavamsa, that Ceylonese chron become accessible through Dr. Oldenberg's edition and translation[2]. And here I am able to having read Dr. Buhler's Second Notice, I arrived, though by a somewhat different way, at n conclusions as those so well worked out by Dr. Buhler in his restoration of the Episcopal Su (theravali) of the Buddhists, and therefore feel convinced that, making all such allowances a requires, we know now as much of early Buddhist chronology as could be known at the time 242 B.C.

Taking the date of Buddha's death 477 B.C. for granted, I found that Upali, who rehearsed
First Council, 477 B.C., had been in orders sixty years in the twenty-fourth year of Agatasatr
B.C., which was the sixteenth year A.B. He must therefore[3] have been born in 541 B.C., a i.e. thirty years A.D., at the age of 94. This is said to have been the sixth year of Udayi, and
- 6 = 447 B.C.

In the year 461 B.C. Dasaka received orders from Upali, who was then 80 years of age; ar been

[1. Oldenberg, loc. cit. p. 750.

2. The Dipavamsa, an ancient Buddhist historical record. London, 1879.

3. Assuming twenty to be the minimum age at which a man could be ordained.]

p. xliii in orders forty-five years (Dipavamsa IV, 41), he ordained Saunaka. This would give u B.C., while the tenth year of Nagadasa, 429 - 10, would give us 419 A.D. Later on the Dipav an interval of forty years between the ordinations of Dasaka and Saunaka, which would brin Saunaka's ordination to 421 B.C., instead of 419 or 416 B.C. Here there is a fault which mus died 461 - 64 = 397 A.D., which is called the eighth year of Sisunaga, and so it is 405 - 8 = 3

When Saunaka had been in orders forty years, i.e. 416 - 40 = 376, Kalasoka is said to hav over ten years, i.e. 387 - 11 = 376 A.D., and in that year Saunaka ordained Siggava. He die
A.D., which is called the sixth year of the Ten, while in reality it is the ninth, 359 - 6 = 353 A.
however, we take 419 as the year of Saunaka's ordination, his death would fall 419 - 66 = 35

Siggava, when he had been in orders sixty-four years, ordained Tishya Maudgaliputra. Th 312 B.C. is called more than two years after Kandragupta's accession, and so it very nearly Siggava died when he had been in orders seventy-six years, i.e. 376 - 76 = 300 A.D. This fourteenth year of Kandragupta, which it very nearly is, 315 - 14 = 301.

When Tishya had been in orders sixty[1] years, he ordained Mahendra, 312 - 60 = 252 B.C years after Asoka's coronation, 259 - 6 = 253, and so it very nearly is. He died 312 - 80 = 23 called the twenty-sixth year of Asoka, and so it very nearly is.

[1. I take 60 (80), as given in Dipavamsa V, 95, 107, instead of 66 (86), given in Dipavamsa

p. xliv

BUDDHIST PATRIARCHS.

{not all of the formatting could be reproduced in this table; all cells with three number are joi brace on the right in the original}

Birth. Ordination. Ordination of successor. Death. Age. Patriarchate.
Upali (Generally 20 years before ordination.) 527 461 447 94 30 (60)
Dasaka 461 416
419
421 397 84 50
45 42 40 Saunaka " 416
419
421 376
379
381 350
353 86 44 (47)
(40)
Siggava " 376½ 312½ 300½ 96 50 (52)
(64)
Tishya " 312½ 253 233 100 68
(60)
Mahendra 273 253 " 193 80 40
282 (284)

If we test the dates of this table by the length of time assigned to each patriarchate, we fin ruled thirty years, from Buddha's death, 477 to 447; Dasaka fifty years. To Saunaka forty-fou assigned, instead of forty-seven, owing to a fault pointed out before; and to Siggava fifty-two fifty-five[1] instead of fifty. Tishya's patriarchate is said to have lasted sixty-eight years, whic with previous statements.

Lastly, the years of the death of the six patriarchs, as fixed according to the reigns of the k
Magadha, agree extremely well.

Upali died in the sixth year of Udayi, i.e. 453 - 6 = 447 B.C.

Dasaka died in the eighth year of Sisunaga, i.e. 405 - 8 = 397 B.C.

Saunaka died in the sixth year of the Ten, i.e. 359 - 6 = 353 B.C., showing again the differ years.

[1. The combined patriarchates of Saunaka and Siggava are given as 99 by the Dipavamsa.

Siggava died in the fourteenth year of Kandragupta, i.e. 315 - 14 = 301 B.C.

Tishya died in the twenty-sixth or twenty-seventh year of Asoka, i.e. 259 - 27 = 233 B.C.

This general and more than general agreement between dates taken from the history of th history of the patriarchs leaves on my mind a decided impression of a tradition which, thoug historical, in our sense of the word, represents at all events the result of such enquiries as c into the past ages of Buddhism at the time of Asoka. There are difficulties in that tradition wh certainly have been avoided, if the whole chronology had been simply made up: but there is method too perceptible throughout, which warns us that we must not mistake a smooth chro history.

THE TITLE OF DHAMMAPADA.

The title of Dhammapada has been interpreted in various ways. It is an ambiguous word, a accepted as such by the Buddhists themselves. Dhamma has many meanings. Under one a particularly the religion taught by Buddha, the law which every Buddhist should accept and c another aspect dhamma is virtue, or the realisation of the law.

Pada also has many meanings. In the Abhidhanapadipika it is explained by place, protecti word, thing, portion, foot, footstep.

Hence dhammapada may mean 'footstep of religion,' and thus the title was first rendered b that he used the plural instead of the singular, and called it 'The Footsteps of Religion,' while still more freely called it 'The Paths of Religion.' It may be quite true, as pointed out by Child pada by itself never means path. But it means footstep, and the footstep towards a thing is n what we call the path to a thing. Thus we read, verse 21, 'appamado amatapadam,' earnestn the path that leads to immortality. p. xlvi Again, 'pamado makkuno padam' can hardly mean thoughtlessness is the path of death, is the path that leads to death. The commentator, too, it here by amatasya adhigamupaya, the means of obtaining immortality, i.e. Nirvana, or simp even by maggo, the way. If we compare verses 92 and 93 of our text, and verses 254 and 2 is used synonymously with gati, going. In the same manner dhammapada would mean the f of virtue, i.e. the path that leads to virtue, and supply a very appropriate title for a collection o precepts. In verses 44 and 45 'path of virtue' seems to be the most appropriate meaning for it is hardly possible to assign any other meaning to it in the following verse (Kundasutta, v. 6

Yo dhammapade sudesite
Magge givati sannato satima,
Anavagga-padani sevamano
Tatiyam bhikkhum ahu maggagivim,

'He who lives restrained and attentive in the way that has been well pointed out, in the path cultivating blameless words, such a Bhikkhu they call a Maggagivi (living in the way).'

I therefore think that 'Path of Virtue,' or 'Footstep of the Law,' was the idea most prominent of those who originally framed the title of this collection of verses. It seems to me that Buddh took the same view, for the verse which D'Alwis[2] quotes from the introduction of Buddhagh

Sampatta-saddhammapado sattha dhammapadam subham Desesi,and which he translates the very depths (lit. bottom) of Saddhamma, preached this holy Dhammapada,'--lends itself another translation, viz. 'The Teacher who had gained a firm

[1. Cf. Dhammapada, v. 285, nibbanam sugatena desitam.

2. Buddhist Nirvana, p. 62.]

p. xlvii footing in the Good Law, showed (preached) the holy Path of the Law.'

Gogerly, again, who may generally be taken as a faithful representative of the tradition of t still preserved in Ceylon, translates the title by the 'Footsteps of Religion,' so that there can b doubt that the priests of that island accept Dhammapada in the sense of 'Vestiges of Religio different point of view, 'The Path of Virtue.'

M. L. Feer[1] takes a slightly different view, and assigning to pada the meaning of foot or b translates Dhammapada by Loi fondamentale, or Base de la Religion.

But it cannot be denied that the title of Dhammapada was very soon understood in a differ namely, as 'Sentences of Religion.' Pada means certainly a foot of a verse, a verse, or a line dhammapadam actually occurs in the sense of a 'religious sentence.' Thus we read in verse recite a hundred Gathas made up of senseless words, one dhammapadam, i.e. one single v is better, which if a man hears, he becomes quiet.' But here we see at once the difficulty of t title of 'dhammapadam' by 'religious sentences.' Dhammapadam means one law verse, or w Professor Fausboll, who in his excellent edition of the Dhammapada translated that title by 'a verses on religion,' appeals to such passages as verses 44 and 102 in support of his interpr verse 42 dhammapadam sudesitam, even if it does not mean the path of the law, could neve bene enarratos,' but only versum legis bene enarratum, as Dr. Fausboll himself renders eka verse 102, by unus legis versus. Buddhaghosa, too, when he speaks of many law verses us instance[2], 'Be it known that the Gatha consists of the Dhammapadani, Theragatha, Therig unmixed (detached) Gatha not comprehended in any of the above-named Suttanta.'

[1. Revue Critique, 1870, p. 378.

2. D'Alwis, Pali Grammar, p. 61.]

p. xlviii

The only way in which Dhammapada could be defended in the sense of 'Collection of Vers be if we took it for an aggregate compound. But such aggregate compounds, in Sanskrit at l with numerals only; for instance, tribhuvanam, the three worlds; katuryugam, the four ages[1 therefore be possible in Pali, too, to form such compounds as dasapadam, a collection of te consisting of ten padas, a decamerone, but it would in no wise follow that we could in that la such a compound as Dhammapadam, in order to express a collection of law verses[2]. Mr. B the Chinese seem to have taken Dhammapada in the sense of 'stanzas of law,' 'law texts,' o

It should be remembered, also, that the idea of representing life, and particularly the life of faithful, as a path of duty or virtue leading to deliverance, (in Sanskrit dharmapatha,) is very

Buddhists. The four great truths of their religion[4] consist in the recognition of the following
1. that there is suffering; 2. that there is a cause of that suffering; 3. that such cause can be that there is a way of deliverance, viz. the doctrine of Buddha. This way is the ashtanga-mar way[5], taught by Buddha, and leading to Nirvana[6]. The faithful advances on that road, pac

[1. See M. M.'s Sanskrit Grammar, § 519.

2. Mr. D'Alwis' arguments (Buddhist Nirvana, pp. 63-67) in support of this view, viz. the dhar collective term, do not seem to me to strengthen my own conjecture.

3. Dhammapada from Chinese, p. 4.

4. Spence Hardy, Manual, p. 496.

5. Burnouf, Lotus, p. 520, 'Ajoutons, pour terminer ce que nous trouvons a dire sur le mot m commentaire qu'on en donne d'ailleurs, que suivant une definition rapportee par Turnour, le sous-division que l'on nomme patipada, en sanscrit pratipad. Le magga, dit Tumour, est la v Nibbana, la patipada, litteralement "la marche pas a pas, ou le degre," est la vie de rectitude suivre, quand on marche dans la voie du magga.'

6. See Spence Hardy, Manual, p. 496. Should not katurvidha-dharmapada, mentioned on p.
'the fourfold path of the Law?' It can hardly be the fourfold word of the Law.]

p. xlix step by step, and it is therefore called patipada, lit. the step by step.

If we make allowance for these ambiguities, inherent in the name of Dhammapada, we ma the Buddhists themselves play with the word pada (see v. 45). Thus we read in Mr. Beal's tr Chinese version of the Pratimoksha[1]:

'Let all those who desire such birth,
Who now are living in the world,
Guard and preselve these Precepts, as feet.'

TRANSLATION.

In translating the verses of the Dhammapada, I have followed the edition of the Pali text, p 1855 by Dr. Fausboll, and I have derived great advantage from his Latin translation, his note copious extracts from Buddhaghosa's commentary. I have also consulted translations, eithe Dhammapada, or of portions of it, by Burnouf, Gogerly[2], Upham, Weber, and others. Thou that in many places my translation differs from those of my predecessors, I can only claim fo of a very humble gleaner in this field of Pali literature. The greatest credit is due to Dr. Fausb editio princeps of the Dhammapada will mark for ever an important epoch in the history of P and though later critics have been able to point out some mistakes, both in his text and in his the value of their labours is not to be compared with that of the work accomplished single-ha eminent Danish scholar.

In revising my translation, first published in 1870[3], for [1. Catena, p. 207.

2. Several of the chapters have been translated by Mr. Gogerly, and have appeared in The I 1840. (Spence Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 169.)

3. Buddhaghosha's Parables, translated from Burmese by Captain T. Rogers, R. E. With an containing Buddha's Dhammapada, translated from Pali by F. Max Muller. London, 1870.]

p. l the Sacred Books of the East, I have been able to avail myself of 'Notes on Dhammapad Childers in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (May, 1871), and of valuable hints as to t certain words and verses scattered about in the Pali Dictionary of that much regretted schola carefully weighed the remarks of Mr. James D'Alwis in his 'Buddhist Nirvana, a review of Ma Dhammapada' (Colombo, 1871), and accepted some of his suggestions. Some very succes of verses by Mr. Rhys Davids in his ('Buddhism,' and a French translation, too, of the Dhamm by Fernand Hu[1], have been consulted with advantage.

It was hoped for a time that much assistance for a more accurate understanding of this wo derived from a Chinese translation of the Dhammapada[2], of which Mr. S. Beal published a in 1878. But this hope has not been entirely fulfilled. It was, no doubt, a discovery of great in Mr. Beal announced that the text of the Dhammapada was not restricted to the southern Bu similar collections existed in the north, and had been translated into Chinese. It was equally Schiefner proved the existence of the same work in the sacred canon of the Tibetans. But as Chinese nor a Tibetan translation of the Pali Dhammapada has been rendered accessible to these translations into English or German, and what we have received instead, cannot make hoped for.

The state of the case is this. There are, as Mr. Beal informs us, four principal copies of wh called Dhammapada in Chinese, the first dating from the Wu dynasty, about the beginning o A.D. This translation, called Fa-kheu-king, is the work of a

[1. Le Dhammapada avec introduction et notes par Fernand Hu, suivi du Sutra en 42 articles Tibetain, par Leon Feer. Paris, 1878.

2. Texts from the Buddhist Canon, commonly known as Dhammapada, translated from the C London, 1878.]

p. li Shaman Wei-ki-lan and others. Its title means 'the Sutra of Law verses,' kheu being exp a verse, a word which we shall meet with again in the Tibetan title, Gathasangraha. In the pr translator states that the Shamans in after ages copied from the canonical scriptures various four lines and some of six, and attached to each set of verses a title, according to the subjec explained. This work of extracting and collecting is ascribed to Tsun-ke-Fa-kieou, i.e. Arya-D author of the Samyuktabhidharma-sastra and other works, and the uncle of Vasumitra. If this patriarch who took a prominent part in the Council under Kanishka, Dharmatrata's collection the first century B.C.; but this is, as yet, very doubtful.

In the preface to the Fa-kheu-king we are told that the original, which consisted of 500 ver brought from India by Wai-ki-lan in 223 A.D., and that it was translated into Chinese with the Indian called Tsiang-sin. After the translation was finished, thirteen sections were added, ma whole to 752 verses, 14,580 words, and 39 chapters[1].

If the Chinese translation is compared with the Pali text, it appears that the two agree from the 35th chapter (with the exception of the 33rd), so far as their subjects are concerned, thou has in these chapters 79 verses more than the Pali. But the Chinese translation has eight ad in the beginning (viz. On Intemperance, Inciting to Wisdom; The Sravaka, Simple Faith, Obs Reflection, Loving-kindness, Conversation), and four at the end (viz. Nirvana, Birth and Dea Religion, and Good Fortune), and one between the 24th and 25th chapter of the Pali text (vi Seivice), all of which are absent in our Pali texts. This, the most ancient

[1. Beal, Dhammapada, p. 30. The real number of verses, however, is 760. In the Pali text, t verses more than stated in the Index; see M.M., Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. ix, note; Beal note.]

p. lii Chinese translation of Dharmatrata's work, has not been rendered into English by Mr. B assures us that it is a faithful reproduction of the original. The book which he has chosen for the Fa-kheu-pi-u, i.e. parables connected with the Dhammapada, and translated into Chines the western Tsin dynasty (A.D. 265-313). These parables are meant to illustrate the teachin like the parables of Buddhaghosa, but they are not the same parables, nor do they illustrate

A third Chinese version is called Kuh-yan-king, i.e. the Sutra of the Dawn (avadana?), con volumes. Its author was Dharmatrata, its translator Ku-fo-nien (Buddhasmriti), about 410 A.D work is said to have been broght from India by a Shaman Sanghabhadanga of Kipin (Cabul)
a much more extensive work in 33 chapters, the last being, as in the Pali text, on the Brahm

A fourth translation dates from the Sung dynasty (800 or 900 A.D.), and in it, too, the autho text is ascribed to Arya-Dharmatrata.

A Tibetan translation of a Dhammapada was discovered by Schiefner in the 28th volume o collection called Udanavarga. It contains 33 chapters, and more than 1000 verses, of which only can be traced in the Pali text. The same collection is found also in the Tangur, vol. 71 o foll. 1-53, followed by a commentary, the Udanavarga-vivarana by the Akarya Pragnavarma Schiefner's intention of publishing a translation of it (Melanges Asiatiques, tom. viii. p. 560) h frustrated by his death. All that he gives us in his last paper is the Tibetan text with translatio another shorter collection, the Gathasangraha by Vasubandhu, equally published in the 72n Sutras in the Tangur, and accompanied by a commentary.

p. liii

SPELLING OF BUDDHIST TERMS.

I had on a former occasion[1] pleaded so strongly in favour of retaining, as much as possib
Sanskrit forms of Pali Buddhist terms, that I feel bound to confess openly that I hold this opin or, at all events, that I see it is hopeless to expect that Pali scholars will accept my proposal.
arguments were these: 'Most of the technical terms employed by Buddhist writers come from eyes of the philologist the various forms which they have assumed in Pali, in Burmese, in Ti in Mongolian, are only so many corruptions of the same original forms. Everything, therefore in favour of retaining the Sanskrit forms throughout, and of writing, for instance, Nirvana inst Pali Nibbana, the Burmese Niban or Nepbhan, the Siamese Niruphan, the Chinese Nipan. T that writers on Buddhism will ever arrive at a uniform and generally intelligible phraseology s their agreeing to use throughout the Sanskrit terms in their original form, instead of the vario disguises and disfigurements which they present in Ceylon, Burmah, Siam, Tibet, China, an

I fully admitted that many Buddhist words have assumed such a strongly marked local or r in the different countries and in the different languages in which the religion of Buddha has f home, that to translate them back into Sanskrit might seem as affected, nay, prove in certain misleading, as if, in speaking of priests and kings, we were to speak of presbyters and cynin which I meant mainly to be guided was to use the Sanskrit forms as much as possible; in fac except where it seemed affected to do so. I therefore wrote Buddhaghosha instead of the Pa because the name of that famous theologian, 'the Voice of Buddha,' seemed to lose its signi

[1. Introduction to Buddhaghosha's Parables, 1870. p. l.]

p. liv into Buddhaghosa. But I was well aware what may be said on the other side. The name 'Voice of Buddha,' was given him after he had been converted from Brahmanism to Buddhis him by people to whom the Pali word ghosa conveyed the same meaning as ghosha does to retained the Pali Dhammapada instead of Dharmapada, simply because, as the title of a Pa so familiar that to speak of it as Dharmapada seemed like speaking of another work. We are of Samanas instead of Sramanas, for even in the days of Alexander's conquest, the Sanskri assumed the prakritized or vulgar form which we find in Pali, and which alone could have be later Greek writers (first by Alexander Polyhistor, 80-60 B.C.) by {Greek: samanaioi}[1]. As a the Pali form Samana has so entirely supplanted that of Sramana that, even in the Dhamma an etymology of Samana as derived from sam, 'to be quiet,' and not from sram, 'to toil.' But i Samanas, we ought also to speak of Bahmanas instead of Brahmanas, for this word had be at so early a time, that in the Dhammapada it is derived from a root vah, 'to remove, to sepa cleanse[2].'

I still believe that it would be best if writers on Buddhist literature and religion were to adop throughout as the lingua franca. For an accurate understanding of the original meaning of m technical terms of Buddhism a knowledge of their Sanskrit form is indispensable; and nothin much would be gained, if, even in the treating of southern Buddhism, we were to [1. See Lassen, Indische Alterthumskunde, vol. ii. p. 700, note. That Lassen is right in taking Sarmanai}, mentioned by Megasthenes, for Brahmanic, not for Buddhist ascetics, might be p dress. Dresses made of the bark of trees are not strictly Buddhistic.

2. See Dhammapada, v. 388; Bastian. Volker des ostlichen Asien, vol iii. p. 412: 'Ein buddhi erklarte mir, dass die Brahmanen ihren Namen fuhrten, als Leute, die ihre Sunden abgespul Lalita-Vistara, p. 551, line 1; p. 553, line 7.]

p. lv speak of the town of Sravasti instead of Savatthi in Pali, Sevet in Sinhalese; of Tripitaka baskets,' instead of Tipitaka in Pali, Tunpitaka in Sinhalese; of Arthakatha, 'commentary,' ins Atthakatha in Pali, Atuwava in Sinhalese; and therefore also of Dharmapada, 'the path of vir Dhammapada.

But inclinations are stronger than arguments. Pali scholars prefer their Pali terms, and I ca them for it. Mr. D'Alwis (Buddhist Nirvana, p. 68) says: 'It will be seen how very difficult it is t the rule rigidly. We are, therefore, inclined to believe that in translating Pali works, at least, n inconvenience may not be felt by the retention of the forms of the language in which the Buc were originally delivered.' For the sake of uniformity, therefore, I have given up my former pl Pali forms when I quote from Pali, but I still prefer the Sanskrit forms, not only when I quote Buddhist books, but also when I have to speak of Buddhism in general. I speak of Nirvana, c rather than of Nibbana, dhamma, and bhikkhu, when discussing the meaning of these words reference to southern Buddhism; but when treating of the literature and religion of the Thera must so far yield to the arguments of Pali scholars as to admit that it is but fair to use their la speaking of their opinions.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

DHAMMAPADA.

CHAPTER I.

THE TWIN-VERSES.

1. All that we are is the result of what we have thought: it is founded on our thoughts, it is n our thoughts. If a man speaks or acts with an evil thought, pain follows him, as the wheel fol the ox that draws the carriage.

[1. Dharma, though clear in its meaning, is difficult to translate. It has different meanings in c systems of philosophy, and its peculiar application in the phraseology of Buddhism has been by Burnouf, Introduction a l'Histoire du Buddhisme, p. 41 seq. He writes: 'Je traduis ordinaire par condition, d'autres fois par lois, mais aucune de ces traductions n'est parfaitement comp entendre par dharma ce qui fait qu'une chose est ce qu'elle est, ce qui constitue sa nature p bien montre Lassen, a l'occasion de la celebre formule, "Ye dharma hetuprabhava."' Etymol for-ma expresses the same general idea which was expressed by dhar-ma. See also Burnou Loi, p. 524. Fausboll translates: 'Naturae a mente principium ducunt,' which shows that he ri dharma in the Buddhist sense. Gogerly (see Spence Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 28) tran action,' which, if not wrong, is at all events wrongly expressed; while Professor Weber's rend Pflichten aus dem Herz folgern,' is quite inadmissible. D'Alwis (Buddhist Nirwana, p. 70 seq.
commentary, proposes to give a more technical interpretation of this verse, viz. 'Mind is the its faculties. Mind is the chief (of all its faculties). The very mind is made up of those (facultie speaks or acts with a polluted mind, then affliction follows him as the wheel follows the feet o (the bullock).' To me this technical acceptation seems not applicable here, where we have to simplest moral precepts, and not with psychological niceties of Buddhist philosophy. It shoul however, that Childers, who first (s.v. dhamma) approved of my translation, seems afterward his opinion. On p. 120 of his excellent Pali Dictionary he said: 'Three of the five khandhas, vi sanna, and sankhara, are collectively termed dhamma (plur.), "mental faculties," and in the f Dhammapada the commentator takes the word dhamma to mean those three faculties. But appears forced and unnatural, and I look upon Dr. Max Muller's translation, "All that we are i what we have thought," as the best possible rendering of the spirit of the phrase mano pubb on p. 577 the same scholar writes: 'Of the four mental khandhas the superiority of vinnana is asserted in the first verse of Dhammapada, "The mental faculties (vedana, sanna, and sank by Mind," they are governed by Mind, they are made up of Mind." That this is the true meani am now convinced; see D'Alwis, Nirwana, pp. 70-75.' I do not deny that this may have been interpretation, at all events since the days of Buddhaghosa, but the very legend quoted by B illustration of this verse shows that its simpler and purely moral interpretation was likewise s tradition, and I therefore adhere to my original translation.]

p. 4

2. All that we are is the result of what we have thought: it is founded on our thoughts, it is our thoughts. If a man speaks or acts with a pure thought, happiness follows him, like a shad leaves him.

3. 'He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me,'--in those who harbour suc will never cease.

4. 'He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me,'--in those who do not harb hatred will cease.

[2. See Beal, Dhammapada, p. 169.

3. On akkokkhi, see Kakkayana VI, 4, 17. D'Alwis, Pali Grammar, p. 38 note, 'When akkokkh it is derived from krus, not from krudh.' See Senart, Kakkayana, I. c.]

p. 5

5. For hatred does not cease by hatred at any time: hatred ceases by love, this is an old ru

6. The world does not know that we must all come to an end here;--but those who know it, cease at once.

7. He who lives looking for pleasures only, his senses uncontrolled, immoderate in his food weak, Mara (the tempter) will certainly overthrow him, as the wind throws down a weak tree.

8. He who lives without looking for pleasures, his senses well controlled, moderate in his f and strong, him Mara will certainly not overthrow, any more than the wind throws down a roc

9. He who wishes to put on the yellow dress without having cleansed himself from sin, wh temperance and truth, is unworthy of the yellow dress.

[6. Pare is explained by 'fools,' but it has that meaning by implication only. It is {Greek: oi po Vinaya, ed. Oldenberg, vol. i., p. 5, l. 4. Yamamase, a 1 pers. plur. imp. Atm., but really a Le Fausboll, Five Gatakas, p. 38.

7. Mara must be taken in the Buddhist sense of 'tempter,' or 'evil spirit.' See Burnouf, Introdu
'Mara est le demon de l'amour, du peche et de la mort; c'est le tentateur et l'ennemi de Budd definite meaning of virya, see Burnouf, Lotus, p. 548.

In the Buddhistical Sanskrit, kusida, 'idle,' is the exact counterpart of the Pali kusita; see Bur
p. 548. On the change of Sanskrit d into Pali t, see Kuhn, Beitrage zur Pali Grammatik, p. 40 Studien, XIII, p. 135.

9. The dark yellow dress, the Kasava or Kashaya, is the distinctive garment of the Buddhist Vishnu-sutra LXIII, 36. The play on the words anikkasavo kasavam, or in Sanskrit anishkash cannot be rendered in English. Kashaya means 'impurity,' nish-kashaya, 'free from impurity,' 'not free from impurity,' while kashaya is the name of the yellowish Buddhist garment. The p favourite one, for, as Fausboll shows, it occurs also in the Mahabharata, XII, 568:

Anishkashaye kashayam ihartham iti viddhi tam, Dharmadhvaganam mundanam vrittyartham iti me matih.

'Know that this yellow-coloured garment on a man who is not free from impurity, serves only or cupidity; my opinion is, that it is meant to supply the means of living to those shavelings, w their virtue or the dharma like a flag.'

(I read vrittyartham, according to the Bombay edition, instead of kritartham, the reading of th edition.)

On the exact colour of the dress, see Bishop Bigandet, The Life or Legend or Gaudama, the Burmese, Rangoon, 1866, p. 504. Cf. Gataka, vol. ii. p. 198.]

p. 6

10. But he who has cleansed himself from sin, is well grounded in all virtues, and regards and truth, he is indeed worthy of the yellow dress.

11. They who imagine truth in untruth, and see untruth in truth, never arrive at truth, but fo desires.

12. They who know truth in truth, and untruth in untruth, arrive at truth, and follow true des

13. As rain breaks through an ill-thatched house, passion will break through an unreflectin

14. As rain does not break through a well-thatched house, passion will not break through a mind.

15. The evil-doer mourns in this world, and he

[10. With regard to sila, 'virtue,' see Burnouf, Lotus, p. 547.

11, 12. Sara, which I have translated by 'truth,' has many meanings in Sanskrit. It means the then essence or reality; in a metaphysical sense, the highest reality; in a moral sense, truth. impossible in a translation to do more than indicate the meaning of such words, and in order them fully, we must know not only their definition, but their history. See Beal, Dhammapada,

13. See Beal, Dhammapada, p. 65.

15. Kilittha is klishta, a participle of klis. It means literally, what is spoilt. The abstract noun k 'evil or sin,' is contantly employed in Budddist works; see Burnouf, Lotus, p. 443.]

p. 7

mourns in the next; he mourns in both. He mourns and suffers when he sees the evil of his c

16. The virtuous man delights in this world, and he delights in the next; he delights in both and rejoices, when he sees the purity of his own work.

17. The evil-doer suffers in this world, and he suffers in the next; he suffers in both. He suf thinks of the evil he has done; he suffers more when going on the evil path.

18. The virtuous man is happy in this world, and he is happy in the next; he is happy in bo when he thinks of the good he has done; he is still more happy when going on the good pat

19. The thoughtless man, even if he can recite a large portion (of the law), but is not a doe no share in the priesthood, but is like a cowherd counting the cows of others.

[16. Like klishta in the preceding verse, visuddhi in the present has a technical meaning. On Buddhaghosa's most famous works is called Visuddhi-magga. See Burnouf, Lotus, p. 844; E

17, 18. 'The evil path and the good path' are technical expressions for the descending and a worlds through which all beings have to travel upward or downward, according to their deed Life of Gaudama, p. 5, note 4, and p. 449; Burnouf, Introduction, p. 599; Lotus, p. 865, l. 7; I translates 'heaven and hell,' which comes to the same; cf. vv. , .

19. In taking sahitam in the sense of samhitam or samhita, I follow the commentator who sa Buddhavakanass' etam namam, but I cannot find another passage where the Tipitaka, or an called Sahita. Samhita in has a different meaning. The fact that some followers of Buddha w learn short portions only of the sacred writings by heart, and to repeat them, while others ha larger collection, is shown by the story of Kakkhupala, p. 3. of Mahakala, p. 26, &c. See Chil sahita.]

20. The follower of the law, even if he can recite only a small portion (of the law), but, havi passion and hatred and foolishness, possesses true knowledge and serenity of mind, he, ca this world or that to come, has indeed a share in the priesthood.

[20. Samanna, which I have rendered by 'priesthood,' expresses all that belongs to, or const Samana or Sramana, this being the Buddhist name corresponding to the Brahmana, or pries Hindus. Buddha himself is frequently called the Good Samana. Fausboll takes the abstract w corresponding to the Sanskrit samanya, 'community,' but Weber has well shown that it ough representing sramanya. He might have quoted the Samanna-phala-sutta, of which Burnouf l interesting details in his Lotus, p. 449 seq. Fausboll also, in his notes on v. 332, rightly expla samannata by sramanyata. See Childers, s.v. samanna.

Anupadiyano, which I have translated by 'caring for nothing,' has a technical meaning. It is th the fourth Nidana, the so-called Upadana, which Koppen has well explained by Anhanglichk world, loving the world.' Koppen, Die Religion des Buddha, p. 610. Cf. .]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER II.

ON EARNESTNESS[1].

21. Earnestness is the path of immortality (Nirvana), thoughtlessness the path of death. Th earnest do not die, those who are thoughtless are as if dead already.

22. Those who are advanced in earnestness, having understood this clearly, delight in ear rejoice in the knowledge of the Ariyas (the elect).

23. These wise people, meditative, steady, always possessed of strong powers, attain to N highest happiness.

[1. There is nothing in the tenth section of the Dhammapada, as translated by Beal, correspo verses of this chapter.

21. Apramada, which Fausboll translates by 'vigilantia,' Gogerly by 'religion,' Childers by 'dili expresses literally the absence of that giddiness or thoughtlessness which characterizes the worldly people. It is the first entering into oneself, and hence all virtues are said to have thei apramada. (Ye keki kusala dhamma sabbe te appamadamulaka.) I have translated it by 'ear 'reflection.' 'Immortality,' amrita, is explained by Buddhaghosa as Nirvana. Amrita is used, no synonym of Nirvana, but this very fact shows how many different conceptions entered from t the Nirvana of the Buddhists. See Childers, s.v. nibbana, p. 269.

This verse, as recited to Asoka; occurs in the Dipavamsa VI, 53, and in the Mahavamsa, p.
Sanatsugatiya, translated by Telang, Sacred Books of the East, vol. viii. p. 138.

22. The Ariyas, the noble or elect, are those who have entered on the path that leads to Nirv
p. 396. Their knowledge and general status is minutely described; see Koppen, p. 436.

23. Childers, s.v. nibbana, thinks that nibbana here and in many other places means Arhatsh

p. 10

24. If an earnest person has roused himself, if he is not forgetful, if his deeds are pure, if h consideration, if he restrains himself, and lives according to law,--then his glory will increase

25. By rousing himself, by earnestness, by restraint and control, the wise man may make f island which no flood can overwhelm.

26. Fools follow after vanity, men of evil wisdom. The wise man keeps earnestness as his

27. Follow not after vanity, nor after the enjoyment of love and lust! He who is earnest and obtains ample joy.

28. When the learned man drives away vanity by earnestness, he, the wise, climbing the t wisdom, looks down upon the fools, serene he looks upon the toiling crowd, as one that star looks down upon them that stand upon the plain.

29. Earnest among the thoughtless, awake among the sleepers, the wise man advances li behind the hack.

30. By earnestness did Maghavan (Indra) rise to the lordship of the gods. People praise ea thoughtlessness is always blamed.

31. A Bhikshu (mendicant) who delights in earnestness, who looks with fear on thoughtles

[25. Childers explains this island again as the state of an Arhat (arahatta-phalam).

28. Cf. Childers, Dictionary, Preface, p. xiv. See Vinaya, ed. Oldenberg, vol. i. p. 5, s.f.

31. Instead of saham, which Dr. Fausboll translates by 'vincens,' Dr. Weber by 'conquering,' to read dahan, 'burning,' which was evidently the reading adopted by Buddhaghosa. Mr. R. C requested to see whether the MS. at the India Office gives saham or daham, writes that the clear as possible in that MS. The fetters are meant for the senses. See .]

p. 11

moves about like fire, burning all his fetters, small or large.

32. A Bhikshu (mendicant) who delights in reflection, who looks with fear on thoughtlessne away (from his perfect state)--he is close upon Nirvana.

[1. See Childers, Notes, p. 5.]

p. 12

CHAPTER III.

THOUGHT.

33. As a fletcher makes straight his arrow, a wise man makes straight his trembling and ur which is difficult to guard, difficult to hold back.

34. As a fish taken from his watery home and thrown on dry ground, our thought trembles to escape the dominion of Mara (the tempter).

35. It is good to tame the mind, which is difficult to hold in and flighty, rushing wherever it l tamed mind brings happiness.

36. Let the wise man guard his thoughts, for they are difficult to perceive, very artful, and t wherever they list: thoughts well guarded bring happiness.

37. Those who bridle their mind which travels far, moves about alone, is without a body, a chamber (of the heart), will be free from the bonds of Mara (the tempter).

38. If a man's thoughts are unsteady, if he does not know the true law, if his peace of minc his knowledge will never be perfect.

39. If a man's thoughts are not dissipated, if [33. Cf. Gataka, vol. i. p. 400.

34. On Mara, see .

35-39. Cf. Gataka, vol. i. pp. 312, 400.

39. Fausboll traces anavassuta, 'dissipated,' back to the Sanskrit root syai, 'to become rigid; participle of that root would be sita, not syuta. Professor Weber suggests that anavassuta st Sanskrit anavasruta, which he translates unbefleckt, 'unspotted.' If avasruta were the right w taken in the sense of 'not fallen off, not fallen away,' but it could not mean 'unspotted;' cf. dh 'susruvat, 'our firmness ran away.' I have little doubt, however, that avassuta represents the avasruta, and is derived from the root sru, here used in its technical sense, peculiar to the B literature, and so well explained by Burnouf in his Appendix XIV (Lotus, p. 820). He shows th Hemakandra and the Gina-alankara, asravakshaya, Pali asavasamkhaya is counted as the six of these intellectual powers are mentioned, instead of five. The Chinese translate the ter Chinese fashion by 'stillationis finis,' but Burnouf claims for it the definite sense of destructio or vices. He quotes from the Lalita-vistara (Adhyaya XXII, ed. Rajendra Lal Mittra, p. 448) th by Buddha when he arrived at his complete Buddhahood:--

Sushka asrava na punah sravanti,

'The vices are dried up, they will not flow again;'
and he shows that the Pali Dictionary, the Abhidhanappadipika, explains asava simply by ka of the senses.' In the Mahaparinibbana-sutta, three classes of asava are distinguished, the k bhavasava, and the aviggasava. See also Burnouf, Lotus, p. 665; Childers, s.v. asavo.

That sru means 'to run,' and is in fact a merely dialectic variety of sru, has been proved by B Boehtlingk thinks the substitution of s for s is a mistake. Asrava therefore, or asrava, meant running out towards objects of the senses' (cf. sanga, alara, &c.), and had nothing to do with running, a sore,' Atharva-veda I, 2, 4. This conception of the original purport of a + sru or ava confirmed by a statement of Colebrooke's, who, when treating of the Gainas, writes (Miscella 382); 'Asrava is that which directs the embodied spirit (asravayati purusham) towards extern the occupation and employment (vritti or pravritti) of the senses or organs on sensible object means of the senses it, affects the embodied spirit with the sentiment of taction, colour, sme Or it is the association or connection of body with right and wrong deeds. It comprises all the they (asravayanti) pervade, influence, and attend the doer, following him or attaching to him misdirection (mithya-pravritti) of the organs, for it is vain, a cause of disappointment, renderi of sense and sensible objects subservient to fruition. Samvara is that which stops (samvrino the foregoing, or closes up the door or passage to it, and consists in self-command or restra internal and external, embracing all means of self-control and subjection of the senses, calm them.'

For a full account of the asravas, see Lalita-vistara, ed. Calc. pp. 445 and 552, where Kshina as a name of Buddha. Asrava occurs in Apastamba's Dharma-sutras II, 5, 9, where the com objects of the senses, by which the soul is made to run out. It is better, however, to take asra as the act of running out, the affections, appetites, passions.]

p. 13

his mind is not perplexed, if he has ceased to think of good or evil, then there is no fear for h is watchful.

p. 14

40. Knowing that this body is (fragile) like a jar, and making this thought firm like a fortress should attack Mara (the tempter) with the weapon of knowledge, one should watch him whe never rest.

41. Before long, alas! this body will lie on the earth, despised, without understanding, like a log.

42. Whatever a hater may do to a hater, or [40. Anivesana has no doubt a technical meaning, and may signify, one who has left his hou friends, to become a monk. A monk shall not return to his home, but travel about; he shall be 'homeless,' anagara, 'houseless.' But I doubt whether this can be the meaning of anivesana sentence, let him be an anchorite, would come in too abruptly. I translate it therefore in a mo sense, let him not return or turn away from the battle, let him watch Mara, even after he is va him keep up a constant fight against the adversary, without being attached to anything or an

p. 15

an enemy to an enemy, a wrongly-directed mind will do us greater mischief.

43. Not a mother, not a father will do so much, nor any other relative; a well-directed mind greater service.

[43. See Beal, Dhammapada, p. 73.]

p. 16

CHAPTER IV.

FLOWERS[1].

44. Who shall overcome this earth, and the world of Yama (the lord of the departed), and t gods? Who shall find out the plainly shown path of virtue, as a clever man finds out the (righ

45. The disciple will overcome the earth, and the world of Yama, and the world of the gods will find out the plainly shown path of virtue, as a clever man finds out the (right) flower.

[1. See Beal, Dhammapada, p. 75.

44, 45. If I differ from the translation of Fausboll and Weber, it is because the commentary ta verbs, vigessati and pakessati, to mean in the end the same thing, i.e. sakkhi-karissati, 'he w
I have not ventured to take vigessate for viganissati, though it should be remembered that th the earth and of the worlds below and above, as here alluded to, is meant to be achieved by knowledge. Pakessati, 'he will gather' (cf. vi-ki, Indische Spruche, 4560), means also, like 'to English, 'he will perceive or understand,' and the dhammapada, or 'path of virtue,' is distinctl Buddhaghosa as consisting of the thirty-seven states or stations which lead to Bodhi. (See B 430; Hardy, Manual, p. 497.) Dhammapada might, no doubt, mean also 'a law-verse,' and su and this double meaning may be intentional here as elsewhere. Buddha himself is called Ma Marga-desika (cf. Lal. Vist. p. 551). There is a curions similarity between these verses and v and 9939 of the Santi-parva:

Pushpaniva vikinvantam anyatragatamanasam,
Anavapteshu kameshu mrityur abhyeti manavam.

'Death approaches man like one who is gathering flowers, and whose mind is turned elsewh desires have been fulfilled.'

Suptam vyaghram mahaugho va mrityur adaya gakkhati, Sankinvanakam evainam kamanam avitriptikam.

'As a stream (carries off) a sleeping tiger, death carries off this man who is gathering flower not satiated in his pleasures.'

This last verse, particularly, seems to me clearly a translation from Pali, and the kam of sank as if put in metri causa.]

p. 17

46. He who knows that this body is like froth, and has learnt that it is as unsubstantial as a break the flower-pointed arrow of Mara, and never see the king of death.

47. Death carries off a man who is gathering flowers and whose mind is distracted, as a flo sleeping village.

48. Death subdues a man who is gathering flowers, and whose mind is distracted, before h his pleasures.

49. As the bee collects nectar and departs without injuring the flower, or its colour or scent sage dwell in his village.

50. Not the perversities of others, not their sins

[46. The flower-arrows of Mara, the tempter, are borrowed from Kama, the Hindu god of love expression see Lalita-vistara, ed. Calc. p. 40, l. 20, mayamarikisadrisa vidyutphenopamas k account of this parallel passage that I prefer to translate mariki by 'mirage,' and not by 'sunb Fausboll, or by 'solar atom,' as Weber proposes. The expression, 'he will never see the king supposed to mean Arhatship by Childers, s.v. nibbana, p. 270.

47. See Thiessen, Die Legende von Kisagotami, p. 9.

48. Antaka, 'death,' is given as an explanation of Mara in the Amarakosha and Abhidhanapp Fausboll, p. 210).

49. See Beal, Catena, p. 159, where vv. 49 and 50 are ascribed to Wessabhu, i.e. Visvabhu und der Thor, p. 134.]

p. 18

of commission or omission, but his own misdeeds and negligences should a sage take notic

51. Like a beautiful flower, full of colour, but without scent, are the fine but fruitless words does not act accordingly.

52. But, like a beautiful flower, full of colour and full of scent, are the fine and fruitful words who acts accordingly.

53. As many kinds of wreaths can be made from a heap of flowers, so many good things mortal when once he is born.

54. The scent of flowers does not travel against the wind, nor (that of) sandal-wood, or of Mallika flowers; but the odour of good people travels even against the wind; a good man per

55. Sandal-wood or Tagara, a lotus-flower, or a Vassiki, among these sorts of perfumes, t virtue is unsurpassed.

56. Mean is the scent that comes from Tagara and sandal-wood;--the perfume of those wh rises up to the gods as the highest.

57. Of the people who possess these virtues, who live without thoughtlessness, and who a

[51. , 'For they say, and do not.'

54. Tagara, a plant from which a scented powder is made. Mallaka or mallika, according to B vessel. Hence tagaramallika was supposed to mean a bottle holding aromatic powder, or oil Mallika, however, is given by Dr. Eitel (Handbook of Chinese Buddhism) as the name of a flo Casturi (musk) on account of its rich odour, and Dr. Morris informs me that he has found ma name of jasmine. See also Childers, s.v.; Notes, p. 6 ; and Beal, Dhammapada, p. 76.]

p. 19

through true knowledge, Mara, the tempter, never finds the way.

58., 59. As on a heap of rubbish cast upon the highway the lily will grow full of sweet perfu delight, thus the disciple of the truly enlightened Buddha shines forth by his knowledge amo like rubbish, among the people that walk in darkness.

[58, 59. Cf. Beal, Dhammapada, p. 76.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

p. 20

CHAPTER V.

THE FOOL.

60. Long is the night to him who is awake; long is a mile to him who is tired; long is life to t who do not know the true law.

61. If a traveller does not meet with one who is his better, or his equal, let him firmly keep solitary journey; there is no companionship with a fool.

62. 'These sons belong to me, and this wealth belongs to me,' with such thoughts a fool is himself does not belong to himself; how much less sons and wealth?

63. The fool who knows his foolishness, is wise at least so far. But a fool who thinks himse called a fool indeed.

64. If a fool be associated with a wise man even all his life, he will perceive the truth as litt spoon perceives the taste of soup.

65. If an intelligent man be associated for one minute only with a wise man, he will soon p truth, as the tongue perceives the taste of soup.

66. Fools of little understanding have themselves

[60. 'Life,' samsara, is the constant revolution of birth and death which goes on for ever until of the true law or the true doctrine of Buddha enables a man to free himself from samsara, a Nirvana. See Buddhaghosha's Parables, Parable XIX, p. 134.

61. Cf. .

63. Cf. Beal, Dhammapada, p. 77.

65. Cf. Beal, Dhammapada, p. 78.]

p. 21

for their greatest enemies, for they do evil deeds which must bear bitter fruits.

67. That deed is not well done of which a man must repent, and the reward of which he re with a tearful face.

68. No, that deed is well done of which a man does not repent, and the reward of which he and cheerfully.

69. As long as the evil deed done does not bear fruit, the fool thinks it is like honey; but wh ripens, then the fool suffers grief.

70. Let a fool month after month eat his food (like an ascetic) with the tip of a blade of Kus he is not worth the sixteenth particle of those who have well weighed the law.

71. An evil deed, like newly-drawn milk, does not turn (suddenly); smouldering, like fire co it follows the fool.

[67. See Beal, l.c. p. 78.

69. Taken from the Samyutta-nikaya, where, however, we read thananhi instead of madhuv Rendus, 1871, p. 64.

70. The commentator clearly takes sankhata in the sense of sankhyata, 'reckoned,' for he ex natadhamma, tulitadhamma. The eating with the tip of Kusa grass has reference to the fasti Brahmans, but disapproved of, except as a moderate discipline, by the followers of Buddha.
interrupt the continuity of the other verses which treat of the reward of evil deeds, or of the s ripening of every sinful act. See Childers, s.v. sankhato.

71. I am not at all certain of the simile, unless mukkati, as applied to milk, can be used in the changing or turning sour. In Manu IV, 172, where a similar sentence occurs, the commentat doubtful: Nadharmas karito loke sadyah phalati gaur iva, 'for an evil act committed in the wo fruit at once, like a cow;' or 'like the earth (in due season);' or 'like milk.' See Childers, Notes

p. 22

72. And when the evil deed, after it has become known, brings sorrow to the fool, then it d bright lot, nay, it cleaves his head.

73. Let the fool wish for a false reputation, for precedence among the Bhikshus, for lordshi convents, for worship among other people!

74. 'May both the layman and he who has left the world think that this is done by me; may to me in everything which is to be done or is not to be done,' thus is the mind of the fool, and and pride increase.

75. 'One is the road that leads to wealth, another the road that leads to Nirvana;' if the Bhi disciple of Buddha, has learnt this, he will not yearn for honour, he will strive after separatio world.

[72. I take nattam for gnapitam, the causative of gnatam, for which in Sanskrit, too, we have i, gnaptam. This gnaptam, 'made known, revealed,' stands in opppsition to the khanna, 'cove preceding verse. Sukkamsa, which Fausboll explains by suklamsa, has probably a more tec meaning. Childers traces nattam to the Vedic gnatram, 'knowledge.' Fausboll refers to Gatal v. 118.

75. Viveka, which in Sanskrit means chiefly understanding, has with the Buddhists the more of separation, whether separation from the world and retirement to the solitude of the forest or separalion from idle thoughts (kitta-viveka), or the highest separation and freedom (Nirvar

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER VI.

THE WISE MAN (PANDITA).

76. If you see an intelligent man who tells you where true treasures are to be found, who s be avoided, and administers reproofs, follow that wise man; it will be better, not worse, for th him.

77. Let him admonish, let him teach, let him forbid what is improper!--he will be beloved of the bad he will be hated.

78. Do not have evil-doers for friends, do not have low people for friends: have virtuous pe friends, have for friends the best of men.

79. He who drinks in the law lives happily with a serene mind: the sage rejoices always in preached by the elect (Ariyas).

80. Well-makers lead the water (wherever they like); fletchers bend the arrow; carpenters wood; wise people fashion themselves.

[78. It is hardly possible to take mitte kalyane in the technical sense of kalyana-mitra, 'ein ge Rath,' a spiritual guide. Burnouf (Introd. p. 284) shows that in the technical sense kalyana-m spread in the Buddhist world.

79. Ariya, 'elect, venerable,' is explained by the commentator as referring to Buddha and oth

80. See verses and , the latter being a mere repetition of our verse. The nettikas, to judge fr commentary and from the general purport of the verse, are not simply water-carriers, but bu and aqueducts, who force the water to go where it would not go by itself. The Chinese trans pilot manages his ship.' See Beal, l.c. p. 79.]

p. 24

81. As a solid rock is not shaken by the wind, wise people falter not amidst blame and prai

82. Wise people, after they have listened to the laws, become serene, like a deep, smooth

83. Good people walk on whatever befall, the good do not prattle, longing for pleasure; wh happiness or sorrow wise people never appear elated or depressed.

84. If, whether for his own sake, or for the sake of others, a man wishes neither for a son, wealth, nor for lordship, and if he does not wish for his own success by unfair means, then h and virtuous.

85. Few are there among men who arrive at the other shore (become Arhats); the other pe down the shore.

[83. The first line is very doubtful. I have adopted, in my translation, a suggestion of Mr. Chil writes, 'I think it will be necessary to take sabbattha in the sense of "everywhere," or "under condition;" pankakhandadibhedesu, sabbadhammesu, says Buddhaghosha. I do not think w means the word vigahanti to be a synonym of vaganti. I would rather take the whole sentenc gloss upon the word vaganti:--vagantiti arahattananena apakaddhanta khandaragam vigaha ridding themselves of lust by the wisdom which Arhatship confers, they cast it away.' I am in the line means 'the righteous walk on (unmoved) in all the conditions of life.' Ninda, pasamsa are four of the eight lokadhammas, or earthly conditions; the remaining lokadhammas are la ayasa.

In , passata, 'by a man who sees,' means 'by a man who sees clearly or truly.' In the same m mean, not simply 'to walk,' but 'to walk properly,' or may be used synonymously with pravrag

85. 'The other shore' is meant for Nirvana, 'this shore' for common life. On reaching Nirvana death is overcome. The commentator supplies taritva, 'having crossed,' in order to explain th makkudheyyam. Possibly param essanti should here be taken as one word, in the sense of

p. 25

86. But those who, when the law has been well preached to them, follow the law, will pass dominion of death, however difficult to overcome.

87., 88. A wise man should leave the dark state (of ordinary life), and follow the bright stat Bhikshu). After going from his home to a homeless state, he should in his retirement look for there seemed to be no enjoyment. Leaving all pleasures behind, and calling nothing his own should purge himself from all the troubles of the mind.

89. Those whose mind is well grounded in the (seven) elements of knowledge, who withou

[87, 88. Dark and bright are meant for bad and good; cf. , and . Leaving one's home is the sa mendicant, without a home or family, an anagara, or anchorite. A man in that state of viveka (see , note), sees, that where before there seemed to be no pleasure there real pleasure is t vice versa. A similar idea is expressed in . See Burnouf, Lotus, p. 474, where he speaks of ' satisfaction, ne de la distinction.'

The five troubles or evils of the mind are passion, anger, ignorance, arrogance, pride; see B
pp. 360, 443. As to pariyodapeyya, see , and Lotus, pp. 523, 528; as to akinkano, see Maha

89. The elements of knowledge are the seven Sambodhvangas, on which see Burnouf, Lotu explains them as the thirty-seven Bodhipakkhiya-dhamma. Khinasava, which I have translat frailties have been conquered,' may also be taken in a more metaphysical sense, as explain
The same applies to the other terms occurring in this verse, such as adana, anupadaya, &c.
inclined to take asava in this passage, and in the other passages where it occurs, as the Pal of asraya. But asraya, in Buddhist phraseology, means rather the five organs of sense with and these are kept distinct from the asavas, 'the inclinations, the appetites, passions, or vice commentary on the Abhidharma, when speaking of the Yogakaras, says, 'En reunissant ens (asr ya), les choses recues (asrita) et les supports (alambana), qui sont chacun composes d dix-huit termes qu'on appelle "Dhatus" ou contenants. La collection des six receptacles, ce s de la vue, de l'ouie, de l'odorat, du gout, du toucher, et le "manas" (ou l'organe du coeur), qu dernier. La collection des six choses recues, c'est la connaissance produite par la vue et pa jusqu'au "manas" inclusivement. La collection des six supports, ce sont la forme et les autre sensibles jusqu'au "Dharma" (la loi ou l'etre) inclusivement.' See Burnouf, Introduction, p. 44

Parinibbuta is again a technical term, the Sanskrit parinivrita meaning 'freed from all worldly vimukta. See Burnouf, Introduction, p. 590. See Childers, s.v. nibbana, p. 270, and Notes or and D'Alwis, Buddhist Nirvana, p. 75.]

p. 26

to anything, rejoice in freedom from attachment, whose appetites have been conquered, and light, are free (even) in this world.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

p. 27

CHAPTER VII.

THE VENERABLE (ARHAT).

90. There is no suffering for him who has finished his journey, and abandoned grief, who h on all sides, and thrown off all fetters.

91. They depart with their thoughts well-collected, they are not happy in their abode; like s left their lake, they leave their house and home.

92. Men who have no riches, who live on recognised food, who have perceived void and u (Nirvana), their path is difficult to understand, like that of birds in the air.

[91. Satimanto, Sanskrit smrimantah, 'possessed of memory,' but here used in the technical first of the Bodhyangas. See Burnouf, Introduction, p. 797. Clough translates it by 'intense th this is the original meaning of smar, even in Sanskrit. See Lectures on the Science of Langu 332.

Uyyunganti, which Buddhaghosa explains by 'they exert themselves,' seems to me to signify depart,' i.e. they leave their family, and embrace an ascetic life. See note to . See also Rhys Mahaparinibbana-sutta, Sacred Books of the East, vol. xi. <page 22>.

92. Sunnato and animitto are adjectives belonging to vimokho, one of the many names of Ni to Childers, s.v. nibbana, p, 270, Arhatship; see Burnouf, Introduction, pp. 442, 462, on suny expression sunyatanimittapranihitam occurs in L'enfant egare, 5 a, l. 4. Nimitta is cause in th sense, i.e, what causes existence. The commentator explains it chiefly in a moral sense: Ra animittam, tehi ka vimuttan ti animitto vimokho, i.e. owing to the absence of passion and oth without causation; because freed from these causes, therefore it is called freedom without c Childers, Pali Dictionary, p. 270, col. 2, line 1.

The simile is intended to compare the ways of those who have obtained spiritual freedom to birds, it being difficult to understand how the birds move on without putting their feet on anyt least, is the explanation of the commentator; The same metaphor occurs Mahabh. XII, 6763 'leaving no more trace of existence than a bird in the air.']

p. 28

93. He whose appetites are stilled, who is not absorbed in enjoyment, who has perceived unconditioned freedom (Nirvana), his path is difficult to understand, like that of birds in the a

94. The gods even envy him whose senses, like horses well broken in by the driver, have is free from pride, and free from appetites.

95. Such a one who does his duty is tolerant like the earth, like Indra's bolt; he is like a lak mud; no new births are in store for him.

96. His thought is quiet, quiet are his word and deed, when he has obtained freedom by tr he has thus become a quiet man.

[95. Without the hints given by the commentator, we should probably take the three similes their natural sense, as illustrating the imperturbable state of an Arahanta, or venerable perso always represented as an emblem of patience; the bolt of Indra, if taken in its technical sens of a gate, might likewise suggest the idea of firmness; while the lake is a constant represent serenity and purity. The commentator, however, suggests that what is meant is, that the ear are cast on it, does not feel pleasure, nor the bolt of Indra displeasure, although less savour thrown upon it; and that in like manner a wise person is indifferent to honour and dishonour.

96. That this very natural threefold division, thought, word, and deed, the trividha-dvara or th of the Buddhists (Hardy, Manual, p. 494), was not peculiar to the Buddhists or unknown to th been proved against Dr. Weber by Professor Koppen in his 'Religion des Buddha,' I, p. 445.
called attention to Manu XII, 4-8; and he might have added Mahabh. XII, 4059, 6512, 6549, &c. Dr. Weber has himself afterwards brought forward a passage from the Atharva-veda, VI manasa yak ka vaka uparima), which, however, has a different meaning. A better one was c Taitt. Ar. X, 1, 12 (yan me manasa, vaka, karmana va dushkritam kritam). Similar expressior to exist in the Zend-avesta, and among the Manichaeans (Lassen, Indische Alterthumskund also Boehtlingk's Dictionary, s.v. kaya, and Childers, s.v. kayo). There was no ground, there supposing that this formula had found its way into the Christian liturgy from Persia, for, as Pr remarks (Journal of Philology, vol. vii, p. 215), Greek writers, such as Plato, employ very sim expressions, e.g. Protag. p. 348, 30, {Greek: pros apan ergon kai logon kai dianohma}. In fa between words and deeds occurs in almost every writer, from Homer downwards; and the fu between thoughts and words is clearly implied even in such expressions as, 'they say in thei idea of sin committed by thought was not a new idea, even to the Jews, may be seen from , foolishness is sin.' In the Apastamba-sutras, lately edited by Professor Buhler, we find the ex yatkinka manasa vaka kakshusha va sankalpayan dhyayaty ahabhivipasyati va tathaiva tad
'they say that whatever a Brahman intending with his mind, voice, or eye, thinks, says, or loo be.' This is clearly a very different division, and it is the same which is intended in the passa Atharva-veda, quoted above. In the mischief done by the eye, we have, perhaps, the first inc evil eye. (Mahabh. XII, 3417. See Dhammapada, .)

On the technical meaning of tadi, see Childers, s.v. D'Alwis (p. 78) has evidently received th interpretation, but has not understood it. Madrisa also is used very much like tadrisa, and fro venerable person, in Sanskrit marsha.]

p. 29

97. The man who is free from credulity, but knows the uncreated, who has cut all ties, rem temptations, renounced all desires, he is the greatest of men.

p. 30

98. In a hamlet or in a forest, in the deep water or on the dry land, wherever venerable per dwell, that place is delightful.

99. Forests are delightful; where the world finds no delight, there the passionless will find d they look not for pleasures.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER VIII.

THE THOUSANDS.

100. Even though a speech be a thousand (of words), but made up of senseless words, or better, which if a man hears, he becomes quiet.

101. Even though a Gatha (poem) be a thousand (of words), but made up of senseless wo Gatha is better, which if a man hears, he becomes quiet.

102. Though a man recite a hundred Gathas made up of senseless words, one word of the
if a man hears, he becomes quiet.

103. If one man conquer in battle a thousand times thousand men, and if another conquer greatest of conquerors.

104., 105. One's own self conquered is better than all other people; not even a god, a Gan with Brahman could change into defeat the [100. This Sahasravarga, or Chapter of the Thousands, is quoted by that name in the Mahav Melanges Asiatiques, VI, p. 583): Tesham Bhagavan gatilanam Dharmapadeshu sahasrava api vakanam anarthapadasamhitanam, ekarthavati sreya yam srutva upasamyati. Sahasram anarthapadasamhitanam, ekarthavati sreya yam srutva upasamyati.' (MS. R. A. S. Lond.) H decidedly more original and perfect.

104. Gitam, according to the commentator, stands for gito (lingavipallaso, i.e. viparyasa); se Journal Asiatique, 1880, p. 500.

The Devas (gods), Gandharvas (fairies), and other fanciful beings of the Brahmanic religion, Nagas, Sarpas, Garudas, &c., were allowed to continue in the traditional language of the pe embraced Buddhism. See the pertinent remarks of Burnouf, Introduction, pp. 134 seq., 184. tempter, see v. 7. Sastram Aiyar, On the Gaina Religion, p. xx, says: 'Moreover as it is decla Vedas that all the gods worshipped by the various Hindu sects, viz. Siva, Brahma, Vishnu, G Subramaniyan, and others, were devoted adherents of the above-mentioned Tirthankaras, t not consider them as unworthy of their worship; but as they are servants of Arugan, they co deities of their system, and accordingly perform certain pugas in honour of them, and worsh case is more doubtful with orthodox Buddhists. 'Orthodox Buddhists,' as Mr. D'Alwis writes (p. 55), 'do not consider the worship of the Devas as being sanctioned by him who disclaime all the Devas any power over man's soul. Yet the Buddhists are everywhere idol-worshipper acknowledges the existence of some of the Hindu deities, and from the various friendly offic Devas are said to have rendered to Gotama, Buddhists evince a respect for their idols.' See Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. 162.]

p. 32

victory of a man who has vanquished himself, and always lives under restraint.

106. If a man for a hundred years sacrifice month after month with a thousand, and if he b pay homage to a man whose soul is grounded (in true knowledge), better is that homage tha hundred years.

107. If a man for a hundred years worship Agni (fire) in the forest, and if he but for one mo homage to a man whose soul is grounded (in true knowledge), better is that homage than sa years.

108. Whatever a man sacrifice in this world as an offering or as an oblation for a whole yea gain merit, the whole of it is not worth a quarter (a farthing); reverence shown to the righteou

p. 33

109. He who always greets and constantly reveres the aged, four things will increase to hi beauty, happiness, power.

110. But he who lives a hundred years, vicious and unrestrained, a life of one day is better virtuous and reflecting.

111. And he who lives a hundred years, ignorant and unrestrained, a life of one day is bett wise and reflecting.

112. And he who lives a hundred years, idle and weak, a life of one day is better if a man l firm strength.

113. And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing beginning and end, a life of one day is sees beginning and end.

114. And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing the immortal place, a life of one day is sees the immortal place.

115. And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing the highest law, a life of one day is bet sees the highest law.

[109. Dr. Fausboll, in a most important note, called attention to the fact that the same verse, variations, occurs in Manu. We there read, II, 121:

Abhivadanasilasya nityam vriddhopasevinah,
Katvari sampravardhante ayur vidya yaso balam.

Here the four things are, life, knowledge, glory, power.

In the Apastamba-sutras, I, 2, 5, 15, the reward promised for the same virtue is svargam ayu long life.' It seems, therefore, as if the original idea of this verse came from the Brahmans, a afterwards adopted by the Buddhists. How largely it spread is shown by Dr. Fausboll from th Researches, XX, p. 259, where the same verse of the Dhammapada is mentioned as being Buddhists of Siam.

112. On kusito, see note to .]

Chapter IX.

Evil.

116. If a man would hasten towards the good, he should keep his thought away from evil; is good slothfully, his mind delights in evil.

117. If a man commits a sin, let him not do it again; let him not delight in sin: pain is the ou evil.

118. If a man does what is good, let him do it again; let him delight in it: happiness is the o good.

119. Even an evil-doer sees happiness as long as his evil deed has not ripened; but when ripened, then does the evil-doer see evil.

120. Even a good man sees evil days, as long as his good deed has not ripened; but wher ripened, then does the good man see happy days.

121. Let no man think lightly of evil, saying in his heart, It will not come nigh unto me. Ever falling of water-drops a water-pot is filled; the fool becomes full of evil, even if he gather it litt little.

122. Let no man think lightly of good, saying in his heart, It will not come nigh unto me. Ev falling of water-drops a water-pot is filled; the wise man becomes full of good, even if he gat by little.

123. Let a man avoid evil deeds, as a merchant, if he has few companions and carries mu avoids a dangerous road; as a man who loves life avoids poison.

124. He who has no wound on his hand, may touch poison with his hand; poison does not wound; nor is there evil for one who does not commit evil.

125. If a man offend a harmless, pure, and innocent person, the evil falls back upon that fo dust thrown up against the wind.

126. Some people are born again; evil-doers go to hell; righteous people go to heaven; tho from all worldly desires attain Nirvana.

127. Not in the sky, not in the midst of the sea, not if we enter into the clefts of the mounta there known a spot in the whole world where death could not overcome (the mortal).

128. Not in the sky, not in the midst of the sea, not if we enter into the clefts of the mounta there known a spot in the whole world where death could not overcome (the mortal).

[125. Cf. ; Indische Spruche, 1582; Kathasaritsagara, 49, 222.

126. For a description of hell and its long, yet not endless sufferings, see Buddhaghosha's P
The pleasures of heaven, too, are frequently described in these Parables and elsewhere. Bu these pleasures of heaven, before he was born for the last time. It is probably when good ar equally balanced, that men are born again as human beings; this, at least, is the opinion of t Chintamani, ed. H. Bower, Introd. p. xv.

127. Cf. , 'For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed;' and .]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER X.

PUNISHMENT.

129. All men tremble at punishment, all men fear death; remember that you are like unto th kill, nor cause slaughter.

130. All men tremble at punishment, all men love life; remember that thou art like unto the kill, nor cause slaughter.

131. He who seeking his own happiness punishes or kills beings who also long for happin happiness after death.

[129. One feels tempted, no doubt, to take upama in the sense of 'the nearest (der Nachste) and to translate, 'having made oneself one's neighbour,' i.e. loving one's neighbour as onese upamam, with a short a, is the correct accusative of upama, we must translate, 'having mad likeness, the image of others, having placed oneself in the place of others.' This is an expres occurs frequently in Sanskrit; cf. Hitopadesa I, 11:

Prana yathatmano 'bhishta bhutanam api te tatha,
Atmaupamyena bhuteshu dayam kurvanti sadhavah.

'As life is dear to oneself, it is dear also to other living beings: by comparing oneself with oth people bestow pity on all beings.'

See also Hit. I, 12; Ram. V, 23, 5, atmanam upamam kritva sveshu dareshu ramyatam, 'mak i.e. putting oneself in the position of other people, it is right to love none but one's own wife.'
Fausboll has called attention to similar passages in the Mahabharata, XIII, 5569 seq.

130. Cf. .

131. Dr. Fausboll points out the striking similarity between this verse and two verses occurri the Mahabharata:--

Manu V, 45:

Yo 'himsakani bhutani hinasty atmasukhekkhaya,
Sa givams ka mritas kaiva na kvakit sukham edhate.

Mahabharata XIII, 5568:

Ahimsakani bhutani dandena vinihanti yah,
Atmanah sukham ikkhan sa pretya naiva sukhi bhavet.

If it were not for ahimsakani, in which Manu and the Mahabharata agree, I should say that t were Sanskrit modifications of the Pali original. The verse in the Mahabharata presupposes Dhammapada.]

p. 37

132. He who seeking his own happiness does not punish or kill beings who also long for h happiness after death.

133. Do not speak harshly to anybody; those who are spoken to will answer thee in the sa speech is painful, blows for blows will touch thee.

134. If, like a shattered metal plate (gong), thou utter not, then thou hast reached Nirvana; not known to thee.

135. As a cowherd with his staff drives his cows into the stable, so do Age and Death drive men.

136. A fool does not know when he commits his evil deeds: but the wicked man burns by h burnt by fire.

137. He who inflicts pain on innocent and harmless persons, will soon come to one of thes [133. See Mahabharata XII, 4056.

134. See Childers, s.v. nibbana, p. 270, and s.v. kamso; D'Alwis, Buddhist Nirvana, p. 35.

136. The metaphor of 'burning' for 'suffering' is very common in Buddhist literature. Everythi everything suffers, was one of the first experiences of Buddha himself. See .]

p. 38

138. He will have cruel suffering, loss, injury of the body, heavy affliction, or loss of mind,

139. Or a misfortune coming from the king, or a fearful accusation, or loss of relations, or c treasures,

140. Or lightning-fire will burn his houses; and when his body is destroyed, the fool will go

141. Not nakedness, not platted hair, not dirt, not fasting, or lying on the earth, not rubbing

[138. 'Cruel suffering' is explained by sisaroga, 'headache,' &c. 'Loss' is taken for loss of mo of the body' is held to be the cutting off of the arm, and other limbs. 'Heavy afflictions' are, ag various kinds of diseases.

139. Upasarga means 'accident, misfortune.' Dr. Fausboll translates ragato va upassaggam defectionem;' Dr. Weber by 'Bestrafung vom Konig;' Beal by 'some governmental difficulty.' A Sanskrit abhyakhyanam, is a heavy accusation for high treason, or similar offences. Beal tra false accusation.' The 'destruction of pleasures or treasures' is explained by gold being char

(see Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. 98; Thiessen, Kisagotami, p. 6), pearls to cotton seed, co and by men and cattle becoming blind, lame, &c.

141. Cf. Hibbert Lectures, p. 355. Dr. Fausboll has pointed out that the same or avery simila a legend taken from the Divyavadana, and translated by Burnouf (Introduction, p. 313 seq.)
the verse: 'Ce n'est ni la coutume de marcher nu, ni les cheveux nattes, ni l'usage d'argile, n diverses especes d'aliments, ni l'habitude de coucher sur la terre nue, ni la poussiere, ni la r l'attention a fuir l'abri d'un toit, qui sont capables de dissiper le trouble dans lequel nous jette desirs non-satisfaits; mais qu'un homme, maitre de ses sens, calme, recueilli, chaste, evitan a aucune creature, accomplisse la Loi, et il sera, quoique pare d'ornements, un Brahmane, u Religieux.' See also .

Walking naked and the other things mentioned in our verse are outward signs of a saintly life Buddha rejects because they do not calm the passions. Nakedness he seems to have reject too, if we may judge from the Sumagadha-avadana: 'A number of naked friars were assemb daughter of Anatha-pindika. She called ber daughter-in-law, Sumagadha, and said, "Go and respectable persons." Sumagadha, expecting to see some of the saints, like Sariputra, Mau others, ran out full of joy. But when she saw these friars with their hair like pigeon wings, cov nothing but dirt, offensive, and looking like demons, she became sad. "Why are you sad?" s mother-in-law. Sumagadha replied, "O mother, if these are saints, what must sinners be like

Burnouf (Introduction, p. 312) supposed that the Gainas only, and not the Buddhists, allowe the Gainas, too, do not allow it universally. They are divided into two parties, the Svetambar Digambaras. The Svetambaras, clad in white, are the followers of Parsvanatha, and wear cl Digambaras, i.e. sky-clad, disrobed, are followers of Mahavira, resident chiefly in Southern I they, too, wear clothing, but not when eating. See Sastram Aiyar, p. xxi.

The gata, or the hair platted and gathered up in a knot, was a sign of a Saiva ascetic. The si is one of the postures assumed by ascetics. Clough explains ukkutika as 'the act of sitting o Wilson gives for utkatukasana, 'sitting on the hams.' See Fausboll, note on verse 140.]

p. 39

not sitting motionless, can purify a mortal who has not overcome desires.

142. He who, though dressed in fine apparel, exercises tranquillity, is quiet, subdued, restr and has ceased to find fault with all other beings, he indeed is a Brahmana, an ascetic (sran (bhikshu).

143. Is there in this world any man so restrained by humility that he does not mind reproof well-trained horse the whip?

144. Like a well-trained horse when touched by [142. As to dandanidhana, see Mahabh. XII, 6559, and .

143, 144. I am very doubtful as to the real meaning of these verses. If their object is to show punishment should be borne, my translation would be right, though alpabodhati in the sense strange.]

p. 40

the whip, be ye active and lively, and by faith, by virtue, by energy, by meditation, by discern law you will overcome this great pain (of reproof), perfect in knowledge and in behaviour, an forgetful.

145. Well-makers lead the water (wherever they like); fletchers bend the arrow; carpenters wood; good people fashion themselves.

[145. The same as . According to Fausboll and Subhuti we ought to render the verses by, 'W found on earth so restrained by shame that he never provokes reproof, as a good horse the s.v. appabodhati.]

p. 41

CHAPTER XI.

OLD AGE.

146. How is there laughter, how is there joy, as this world is always burning? Why do you ye who are surrounded by darkness?

147. Look at this dressed-up lump, covered with wounds, joined together, sickly, full of ma which has no strength, no hold!

148. This body is wasted, full of sickness, and frail; this heap of corruption breaks to piece indeed ends in death.

[148. Dr. Fausboll informs me that Childers proposed the emendation maranantam hi givitar extract from a letter, addressed by Childers to Dr. Fausboll, will be read with interest:--'As re 148, I have no doubt whatever. I quite agree with you that the idea (mors est vita ejus) is a p noble one, but the question is, Is the idea there? I think not. Maranam tamhi givitam is not P a Pali construction, and years ago even it grated on my ear as a harsh phrase. The reading texts is nothing; your MSS. of Dhammapada are very bad ones, and it is merely the vicious of bad MSS., like kammamtam for kammantam. But the comment sets the question at rest a maranantam by maranapariyosanam, which is exactly the same. I see there is one serious c all your MSS. seem to have tamhi, and not tam hi; but are you sure it is so? There was a Dh India Office Library, and I had a great hunt for it a few days ago, but to my deep disappointm missing. I do not agree with you that the sentence "All Life is bounded by Death," is trivial: it but half the noblest passages in poetry are truisms, and unless I greatly mistake, this very pa found in many other literatures.'

Dr. Fausboll adds:--

'I have still the same doubt as before, because of all my MSS. reading maranam tamhi. I do readings of the London MSS. The explanation of the commentary does not settle the questio be considered an explanation of my reading as of the reading which Childers proposed.--V.

p. 42

149. Those white bones, like gourds thrown away in the autumn, what pleasure is there in

150. After a stronghold has been made of the bones, it is covered with flesh and blood, an it old age and death, pride and deceit.

151. The brilliant chariots of kings are destroyed, the body also approaches destruction, bu good people never approaches destruction,--thus do the good say to the good.

152. A man who has learnt little, grows old like an ox; his flesh grows, but his knowledge d

153., 154. Looking for the maker of this tabernacle, I shall have to run through a course of so long as I do not find (him); and painful is birth again and again. But now, maker of the tab hast been seen; thou shalt not make up

[149. In the Rudrayanavadana of the Divyavadana this verse appears as,

Yanimany apariddhani vikshiptani diso disah,
Kapotavarnany asthini tani drishtvaiha ka ratih.

See Schiefner, Mel. Asiat. VIII, p. 589; Gataka, vol. i. p. 322.

150. The expression mamsalohitalepanam is curiously like the expression used in Manu VI, mamsasonitalepanam, and in several passages of the Mahabharata, XII, 12462, 12053, as Fausboll.

153, 154. These two verses are famous among Buddhists, for they are the words which the supposed to have uttered at the moment he attained to Buddhahood. (See Spence Hardy, M According to the Lalita-vistara, however, the words uttered on that solemn occasion were th note to . In the commentary on the Brahmagala this verse is called the first speech of Buddh being the words in the Mabaparinibbana-sutta, 'Life is subject to age; strive in earnest.' The the Mahaparinibbana-sutta, Chap. IV, 2, Katunnam dhammanam ananubodha appativedha sandhavitam samsaritam maman k' eva tumhakan ka, answer to the anticipation expressed

The exact rendering of this verse has been much discussed, chiefly by Mr. D'Alwis in the Att cxxviii, and again in his Buddhist Nirvana, p. 78; also by Childers, Notes on Dhammapada, p Dictionary. Gogerly translated: 'Through various transmigrations I must travel, if I do not disc builder whom I seek.' Spence Hardy: 'Through many different births I have run (to me not ha seeking the architect of the desire-resembling house.' Fausboll: 'Multiplices generationis rev percurreram, non inveniens, domus (corporis) fabricatorem quaerens.' And again (p. 322): 'M generationum revolutio mihi subeunda esset, nisi invenissem domus fabricatorem.' Childers the revolution of countless births, seeking the architect of this dwelling and finding him not.' 'Through transmigrations of numerous births have I run, not discovering, (though) seeking th All depends on how we take sandhavissam, which Fausboll takes as a conditional, Childers as an aorist, because the sense imperatively requires an aorist. In either case, the dropping and the doubling of the s are, however, irregular. Sandhavissam is the regular form of the fu I translate it, qualifying, however, the future, by the participle present anibbisan, i.e. not findi taking it in the sense of, if or so long as I do not find the true cause of existence. I had forme translated anibbisan, as not resting (anirvisan), but the commentator seems to authorise the finding (avindanto, alabhanto), and in that case all the material difficulties of the verse seem disappear.

'The maker of the tabernacle' is explained as a poetical expression for the cause of new birt according to the views of Buddha's followers, whatever his own views may have been. Budd the representative of worldly temptations, the father of worldly desires, and as desires (tamh of upadana and bhava, the cause of gati, or 'birth,' the destruction of desires and the conque nearly the same thing, though expressed differently in the philosophical and legendary langu Buddhists. Tamha, 'thirst' or 'desire,' is mentioned as serving in the army of Mara. (Lotus, p.

p. 43

this tabernacle again. All thy rafters are broken, thy ridge-pole is sundered; the mind, approa Eternal (visankhara, nirvana), has attained to the extinction of all desires.

p. 44

155. Men who have not observed proper discipline, and have not gained treasure in their y old herons in a lake without fish.

156. Men who have not observed proper discipline, and have not gained treasure in their y broken bows, sighing after the past.

[155. On ghayanti, i.e. kshayanti, see Dr. Bollensen's learned remarks, Zeitschrift der Deuts Gesellschaft, XVIII, 834, and Boehtlingk-Roth, s.v. ksha.]

p. 45

CHAPTER XII.

SELF.

157. If a man hold himself dear, let him watch himself carefully; during one at least out of t watches a wise man should be watchful.

158. Let each man direct himself first to what is proper, then let him teach others; thus a w not suffer.

159. If a man make himself as he teaches others to be, then, being himself well subdued, (others); one's own self is indeed difficult to subdue.

160. Self is the lord of self, who else could be the lord? With self well subdued, a man find as few can find.

161. The evil done by oneself, self-begotten, self-bred, crushes the foolish, as a diamond precious stone.

162. He whose wickedness is very great brings himself down to that state where his enem as a creeper does with the tree which it surrounds.

163. Bad deeds, and deeds hurtful to ourselves, are easy to do; what is beneficial and goo difficult to do.

[157. The three watches of the night are meant for the three stages of life. Cf. , 'And what I s say unto all, Watch.'

158. Cf. Gataka, vol. ii. p. 441.

161. The Chinese translation renders vagiram by 'steel drill.']

p. 46

164. The foolish man who scorns the rule of the venerable (Arahat), of the elect (Ariya), of and follows false doctrine, he bears fruit to his own destruction, like the fruits of the Katthaka

165. By oneself the evil is done, by oneself one suffers; by oneself evil is left undone, by o purified. Purity and impurity belong to oneself, no one can purify another.

166. Let no one forget his own duty for the sake of another's, however great; let a man, aft discerned his own duty, be always attentive to his duty.

[164. The reed either dies after it has borne fruit, or is cut down for the sake of its fruit.

Ditthi, literally 'view,' is used even by itself like the Greek 'hairesis,' in the sense of heresy (s Burnouf, Lotus, p. 444). In other places a distinction is made between mikkhaditthi (vv. ,) ar (). If arahatam ariyanam are used in their technical sense, we should translate 'the reverend being the highest degree of the four orders of Ariras, viz. Srotaapanna, Sakadagamin, Anag note to .

166. Attha, lit. 'object,' must here be taken in a moral sense, as 'duty' rather than as 'advanta rendered it by 'spiritual good.' The story which Buddhaghosa tells of the Thera Attadattha giv origin of some of his parables, which seem to have been invented to suit the text of the Dha than vice versa. A similar case occurs in the commentary to verse 227.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER XIII.

THE WORLD.

167. Do not follow the evil law! Do not live on in thoughtlessness! Do not follow false doctr friend of the world.

168. Rouse thyself! do not be idle! Follow the law of virtue! The virtuous rests in bliss in thi in the next.

169. Follow the law of virtue; do not follow that of sin. The virtuous rests in bliss in this wor the next.

170. Look upon the world as a bubble, look upon it as a mirage: the king of death does no looks down upon the world.

171. Come, look at this glittering world, like unto a royal chariot; the foolish are immersed i the wise do not touch it.

172. He who formerly was reckless and afterwards became sober, brightens up this world.
freed from clouds.

173. He whose evil deeds are covered by good deeds, brightens up this world, like the mo clouds.

174. This world is dark, few only can see here; a few only go to heaven, like birds escaped

175. The swans go on the path of the sun, they go through the ether by means of their mir

[168, 169. See Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 65.

170. See .

175. Hamsa may be meant for the bird, whether flamingo, or swan, or ibis (see Hardy, Manu may also, I believe, be taken in the sense of saint. As to iddhi, 'magical power,' i.e. riddhi, se Lotus, p. 310; Spence Hardy, Manual, pp. 498, 504; Legends, pp. 55, 177; and note to .]

p. 48

power; the wise are led out of this world, when they have conquered Mara and his train.

176. If a man has transgressed one law, and speaks lies, and scoffs at another world, ther will not do.

177. The uncharitable do not go to the world of the gods; fools only do not praise liberality rejoices in liberality, and through it becomes blessed in the other world.

178. Better than sovereignty over the earth, better than going to heaven, better than lordsh worlds, is the reward of the first step in holiness.

[178. Sotapatti, the technical term for the first step in thr path that leads to Nirvana. There ar steps, or stages, and on entering each, a man receives a new title:--

(1) The Srotaapanna, lit. he who has got into the stream. A man may have seven more birth the other shore, i.e. Nirvana.

(2) Sakridagamin, lit. he who comes back once, so called because, after having entered this born only once more among men or gods. Childers shows that this involves really two more deva world, the other in the world of men: Burnouf says the same, Introduction, p. 293.

(3) Anagamin, lit. he who does not come back, so called because, after this stage, a man ca in a lower world; but can only be born into a Brahman world, before he reaches Nirvana.

(4) Arhat, the venerable, the perfect, who has reached the highest stage that can be reache Nirvana is perceived (sukkhavipassana, Lotus, p. 849). See Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 2
Introduction, p. 209; Koppen, p. 398; D'Alwis, Attanugaluvansa, p. cxxiv; Feer, Sutra en 42 a

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER XIV.

THE BUDDHA (THE AWAKENED).

179. He whose conquest is not conquered again, into whose conquest no one in this worl track can you lead him, the Awakened, the Omniscient, the trackless?

180. He whom no desire with its snares and poisons can lead astray, by what track can yo Awakened, the Omniscient, the trackless?

181. Even the gods envy those who are awakened and not forgetful, who are given to med wise, and who delight in the repose of retirement (from the world).

182. Difficult (to obtain) is the conception of men, difficult is the life of mortals, difficult is th hearing of the True Law, difficult is the birth of the Awakened (the attainment of Buddhahood

[179, 180. Buddha, the Awakened, is to be taken as an appellative rather than as the proper

(see v. 183). It means, anybody who has arrived at complete knowledge. Anantagokaram I t possessed of unlimited knowledge. Apadam, which Dr. Fausboll takes as an epithet of Budd 'non investigabilis,' is translated 'trackless,' in order to show the play on the word pada; see s.v. The commentator says: 'The man who is possessed of even a single one of such condit ye may lead forward; but the Buddha has not even one condition or basis of renewed existe what track will you lead this unconditioned Buddha?' Cf. Dhp. vv. , ; and Gataka, vol. i. pp. 7

182. Mr. Beal (Dhammapada, p. 110) states that this verse occurs in the Sutra of the Forty-t

p. 50

183. Not to commit any sin, to do good, and to purify one's mind, that is the teaching of (al Awakened.

184. The Awakened call patience the highest penance, long-suffering the highest Nirvana; anchorite (pravragita) who strikes others, he is not an ascetic (sramana) who insults others.

185. Not to blame, not to strike, to live restrained under the law, to be moderate in eating, sit alone, and to dwell on the highest thoughts,--this is the teaching of the Awakened.

[183. This verse is again one of the most solemn verses among the Buddhists. According to ought to follow the famous Arya stanza, 'Ye dhamma' (Lotus, p. 522), and serve as its comp this may be the case in Tibet, it was not so originally. The same verse (ascribed to Kanakam end of the Chinese translation of the Pratimoksha. (Beal, J. R. A. S. XIX, p. 473; Catena, p.
Tibetan translation of the Gathasangraha, v. 14 (Schiefner, Mel. Asiat. I VIII, pp. 568, 586; a Korosi, As. Res. XX, p. 79). Burnouf has fully discussed the metre and meaning of our verse his 'Lotus.' He prefers sakittaparidamanam, which Csoma translated by 'the mind must be b subjection' (svakittaparidamanam), and the late Dr. Mill by 'proprii intellectus subjugatio.' Bu of the Mahapadhana-sutta gave likewise sakittapariyodapanam, and this is no doubt the cor D'Alwis, Attanugaluvansa, p. cxxix.) We found pariyodappeya in , in the sense of purging on troubles of thought. From the same verb, (pari) ava + dai, we may derive the name Avadana originally a pure and virtuous act, an {Greek: aridteia}, afterwards a sacred story, and possib hearing of which purifies the mind. See Boehtlingk-Roth, s.v. avadana.

184. Childers, following the commentator, translates, 'Patience, which is long-suffering, is th devotion, the Buddhas declare that Nirvana is the best (of things).'

185. Cf. Suttanipata, . Patimokkhe, 'under the law,' i.e. according to the law, the law which le or 'freedom.' Pratimoksha is the title of the oldest collection of the moral laws of the Buddhis Introduction, p. 300; Bigandet, The Life of Gaudama, p. 439; Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 162 common both to the Southem and the Northem Buddhists, patimokkhe in our passage may Professor Weber suggests, as the title of that very collection. The commentator explains it b and patimokkhasila. Sayanasam might stand for sayanasanam, see Mahabh. XII, 6684; but it is intended for sayanasanam; see also Mahabh. XII, 9978, sayyasane. Fausboll now reads patthan.

187. There is a curious similarity between this verse and verse 6503 (9919) of the Santiparv

Yak ka kamasukham loke, yak ka divyam mahat sukham, Trishnakshayasukhasyaite narhatah shodasim kalam.

'And whatever delight of love there is on earth, and whatever is the great delight in heaven, worth the sixteenth part of the pleasure which springs from the destruction of all desires.' Th 186, 187 are ascribed to king Mandhatri shortly before his death (Mel. Asiat. VIII, p. 471; see vol. ii. p. 113).]

p. 51

186. There is no satisfying lusts, even by a shower of gold pieces; he who knows that lusts taste and cause pain, he is wise;

187. Even in heavenly pleasures he finds no satisfaction, the disciple who is fully awakene in the destruction of all desires.

188. Men, driven by fear, go to many a refuge, to mountains and forests, to groves and sa

189. But that is not a safe refuge, that is not the best refuge; a man is not delivered from a after having gone to that refuge.

190. He who takes refuge with Buddha, the Law,

[188-192. These verses occur in Sanskrit in the Pratiharyasutra, translated by Burnouf, Intro 162-189; see p. 186. Burnouf translates rukkhaketyani by 'arbres consacres;' properly, sacre near a tree. See also Gataka vol. i. p. 97.

190. Budda, Dharma, and Sangha are called the Trisarana (cf. Burnouf, Introd. p. 630). The are the four statements that there is pain in this world, that the source of pain is desire, that be annihilated, that there is a way (shown by Buddha) by which the annihilation of all desires achieved, and freedom be obtained. That way consists of eight parts. (See Burnouf, Introduc eightfold way forms the subject of Chapter XVIII. (See also Feer, Journal As. 1870, p. 418, a German Workshop, 2nd ed. vol. i. p. 251 seq.)]

p. 52

and the Church; he who, with clear understanding, sees the four holy truths:--

191. Viz. pain, the origin of pain, the destruction of pain, and the eightfold holy way that lea quieting of pain;--

192. That is the safe refuge, that is the best refuge; having gone to that refuge, a man is d all pain.

193. A supernatural person (a Buddha) is not easily found, he is not born everywhere. Wh is born, that race prospers.

194. Happy is the arising of the awakened, happy is the teaching of the True Law, happy i church, happy is the devotion of those who are at peace.

195., 196. He who pays homage to those who deserve homage, whether the awakened (B disciples, those who have overcome the host (of evils), and crossed the flood of sorrow, he such as have found deliverance and know no fear, his merit can never be measured by anyl

p. 53

CHAPTER XV.

HAPPINESS.

197. Let us live happily then, not hating those who hate us! among men who hate us let us hatred!

198. Let us live happily then, free from ailments among the ailing! among men who are aili free from ailments!

199. Let us live happily then, free from greed among the greedy! among men who are gree from greed!

200. Let us live happily then, though we call nothing our own! We shall be like the bright g happiness!

201. Victory breeds hatred, for the conquered is unhappy. He who has given up both victo the contented, is happy.

[198. The ailment here meant is moral rather than physical. Cf. Mahabh. XII, 9924, sampras 9925, yo 'sau pranantiko rogas tam trishnam tyagatah sukham.

200. The words placed in the mouth of the king of Videha, while his residence Mithila was in curiously like our verse; cf. Mahabh. XII, 9917,

Susukham vata givami yasya me nasti kinkana,
Mithilayam pradiptayam na me dahyati kinkana.

'I live happily, indeed, for I have nothing; while Mithila is in flames, nothing of mine is burnin Muir, Religious sentiments, p. 106.

The abhassara, i.e. abhasvara, 'the bright gods,' are frequently mentioned. Cf. Burnouf, Intro

201. This verse is ascribed to Buddha, when he heard of the defeat of Agatasatru by Praser the Northern or Sanskrit and in the Southern or Pali texts, i.e. in the Avadana-sataka, in the Samyutta-nikaya. See Feer, Comptes Rendus, 1871, p. 44. and Journal As. 1880, p. 509. In the Sanskrit version is--

Gayo vairam prasavati, duhkham sete paragitah Upasantah sukham sete hitva gayaparagayam.]

p. 54

202. There is no fire like passion; there is no losing throw like hatred; there is no pain like t there is no happiness higher than rest.

203. Hunger is the worst of diseases, the body the greatest of pains; if one knows this truly

Nirvana, the highest happiness.

[202. I take kali in the sense of an unlucky die which makes a player lose his game. A real s wanted here, as in , where, for the same reason, I translate graha by 'shark,' not by 'captivita Fausboll proposes. The same scholar translates kali in our verse by 'peccatum.' If there is a translating kali in Pali by 'unlucky die,' I should still prefer to take it in the sense of the age o depravity, or the demon of depravity. To judge from Abhidhanappadipika, 1106, kali was use loss at game, a losing throw, and occurs in that sense again in . The Chinese translation has distress (poison) worse than hate.' A similar verse occurs Mahabh. Santip. 175, v. 35.

'Body' for khandha is a free translation, but it is difficult to find any other rendering. The Chin translation also has 'body.' According to the Buddhists each sentient being consists of five k (skandha), or aggregates, the organized body (rupakhandha) with its four internal capacities (vedana), perception (sangna), conception (samskara), knowledge (vignana). See Burnouf, Lotus, p. 335.

203. Samskara is the fourth of the five khandhas, but the commentator takes it here, as well five khandhas together, in which case we can only translate it by 'body.' See also . Childers 'organic life'. (Notes on Dhammapada, p. 1). There is, however, another samskara, that whic inimediately upon avidya, 'ignorance,' as the second of the nidanas, or 'causes of existence, might be called the greatest pain, considering that it is the cause of birth, which is the cause Samskara seems sometimes to have a different and less techninal meaning, being used in t conceptions, plans, desires, as, for instance, in , where sankharanam khayam is used much Again, in his comment on verse 75, Buddhaghosa says, upadhiviveko sankharasanganikam upadhiviveko ka nirupadhinam puggalanam visankharagatanam.

For a similar sentiment, see Stanislas Julien, Les Avadanas, vol. i. p. 40, 'Le corps est la plu source de souffrance,' &c. I should say that the khandhas in verse 202 and the sankharas in nearly, if not quite, synonymous. I should prefer to read gigakkha-parama as a compound. C written in one MS., digakkha (Sk. gighatsa), means not only 'hunger,' but 'appetite; desire.']

p. 55

204. Health is the greatest of gifts, contentedness the best riches; trust is the best of relati Nirvana the highest happiness.

205. He who has tasted the sweetness of solitude and tranquillity, is free from fear and fre while he tastes the sweetness of drinking in the law.

206. The sight of the elect (Arya) is good, to live with them is always happiness; if a man c fools, he will be truly happy.

207. He who walks in the company of fools suffers a long way; company with fools, as with always painful; company with the wise is pleasure, like meeting with kinsfolk.

208. Therefore, one ought to follow the wise, the intelligent, the learned, the much endurin the elect; one ought to follow a good and wise man, as the moon follows the path of the star

[204. Childers translates, 'the best kinsman is a man you can trust.'

205. Cf. .

208. I should like to read sukho ka dhirasamvaso.]

CHAPTER XVI.

PLEASURE.

209. He who gives himself to vanity, and does not give himself to meditation, forgetting the life) and grasping at pleasure, will in time envy him who has exerted himself in meditation.

210. Let no man ever look for what is pleasant, or what is unpleasant. Not to see what is p and it is pain to see what is unpleasant.

211. Let, therefore, no man love anything; loss of the beloved is evil. Those who love noth nothing, have no fetters.

212. From pleasure comes grief, from pleasure comes fear; he who is free from pleasure k nor fear.

213. From affection comes grief, from affection comes fear; he who is free from affection k grief nor fear.

214. From lust comes grief, from lust comes fear; he who is free from lust knows neither g

215. From love comes grief, from love comes fear; he who is free from love knows neither

216. From greed comes grief, from greed comes fear; he who is free from greed knows ne

217. He who possesses virtue and intelligence,

[214. See Beal, Catena, p. 200.]

p. 57

who is just, speaks the truth, and does what is his own business, him the world will hold dea

218. He in whom a desire for the Ineffable (Nirvana) has sprung up, who is satisfied in his thoughts are not bewildered by love, he is called urdhvamsrotas (carried upwards by the str

219. Kinsmen, friends, and lovers salute a man who has been long away, and returns safe

220. In like manner his good works receive him who has done good, and has gone from th other;--as kinsmen receive a friend on his return.

[218. Urdhvamsrotas or uddhamsoto is the technical name for one who has reached the wo (Aviha), and is proceeding to that of the Akanishthas (Akanittha). This is the last stage befor the formless world, the Arupadhatu. (See Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. 123; Burnouf, Introd Originally urdhvamsrotas may have been used in a less technical sense, meaning one who stream, and is not carried away by the vulgar passions of the world.]

p. 58

CHAPTER XVII.

ANGER.

221. Let a man leave anger, let him forsake pride, let him overcome all bondage! No suffe man who is not attached to name and form, and who calls nothing his own.

222. He who holds back rising anger like a rolling chariot, him I call a real driver; other pec holding the reins.

223. Let a man overcome anger by love, let him overcome evil by good; let him overcome liberality, the liar by truth!

224. Speak the truth, do not yield to anger; give, if thou art asked for little; by these three s wilt go near the gods.

225. The sages who injure nobody, and who always control their body, they will go to the u (Nirvana), where, if they have gone, they will suffer no more.

226. Those who are ever watchful, who study day and night, and who strive after Nirvana, will come to an end.

227. This is an old saying, O Atula, this is not only of to-day: 'They blame him who sits sile

[221. 'Name and form' or 'mind and body' is the translation of nama-rupa, the ninth of the Bu Cf. Burnouf, Introduction, p. 501; see also Gogerly, Lecture on Buddhism, and Bigandet, Th p. 454.

223. Mahabh. XII, 3550, asadhum sadhuna gayet. Cf. Ten Gatakas, ed. Fausboll, p. 5.

227. It appears from the commentary that poranam and aggatanam are neuters, referring to formerly and what happens to-day, and that they are not to be taken as adjectives referring t commentator must have read atula instead of atulam, and he explains it as the name of a pu addressed by that name. This may be so (see note to); but atula may also be taken in the s incomparable (Mahabh. XIII, 1937), and in that case we ought to supply, with Professor Web as 'saw' or 'saying.']

p. 59

they blame him who speaks much, they also blame him who says little; there is no one on ea blamed.'

228. There never was, there never will be, nor is there now, a man who is always blamed, always praised.

229., 230. But he whom those who discriminate praise continually day after day, as withou rich in knowledge and virtue, who would dare to blame him, like a coin made of gold from th
the gods praise him, he is praised even by Brahman.

231. Beware of bodily anger, and control thy body! Leave the sins of the body, and with th virtue!

232. Beware of the anger of the tongue, and control thy tongue! Leave the sins of the tong virtue with thy tongue!

233. Beware of the anger of the mind, and control thy mind! Leave the sins of the mind, ar with thy mind!

234. The wise who control their body, who control their tongue, the wise who control their well controlled.

[230. The Brahman worlds are higher that the Deva worlds as the Brahman is higher than a Manual, p. 25; Burnouf, Introduction, pp. 134, 184.]

p. 60

CHAPTER XVIII.

IMPURITY.

235. Thou art now like a sear leaf, the messengers of death (Yama) have come near to th the door of thy departure, and thou hast no provision for thy journey.

236. Make thyself an island, work hard, be wise! When thy impurities are blown away, and guilt, thou wilt enter into the heavenly world of the elect (Ariya).

237. Thy life has come to an end, thou art come near to death (Yama), there is no resting-the road, and thou hast no provision for thy journey.

238. Make thyself an island, work hard, be wise! When thy impurities are blown away, and guilt, thou wilt not enter again into birth and decay.

239. Let a wise man blow off the impurities of his self, as a smith blows off the impurities o by one, little by little, and from time to time.

240. As the impurity which springs from the iron,

[235. Uyyoga seems to mean departure. See Buddhaghosa's commentary on verse 152, p.
Gatakas, p. 35.

236. 'An island,' for a drowning man to save himself; (see verse 25.) Dipankara is the name former Buddhas, and it is also used as an appellative of the Buddha, but is always derived fr lamp.'

239. This verse is the foundation of the thirty-fourth section of the Sutra of the forty-two sect
Beal, Catena, p. 201; .]

p. 61

when it springs from it, destroys it; thus do a transgressor's own works lead him to the evil p

241. The taint of prayers is non-repetition; the taint of houses, non- repair; the taint of the l sloth; the taint of a watchman, thoughtlessness.

242. Bad conduct is the taint of woman, greediness the taint of a benefactor; tainted are al this world and in the next.

243. But there is a taint worse than all taints,--ignorance is the greatest taint. O mendicant that taint, and become taintless!

244. Life is easy to live for a man who is without shame, a crow hero, a mischief-maker, ar bold, and wretched fellow.

245. But life is hard to live for a modest man, who always looks for what is pure, who is dis quiet, spotless, and intelligent.

246. He who destroys life, who speaks untruth, who in this world takes what is not given h another man's wife;

247. And the man who gives himself to drinking intoxicating liquors, he, even in this world, own root.

248. O man, know this, that the unrestrained are in a bad state; take care that greediness bring thee to grief for a long time!

[244. Pakkhandin is identified by Dr. Fausboll with praskandin, one who jumps forward, insu Buddhaghosa explains it, one who meddles with other people's business, an interloper. At a term of reproach, and, as it would seem, of theological reproach.

246. On the five principal commandments which are recapitulated in verses 246 and 247, se Parables, p. 153.

248. Cf. Mahabharata XII, 4055, yesham vrittis ka samyata. See also .]

p. 62

249. The world gives according to their faith or according to their pleasure: if a man frets a and the drink given to others, he will find no rest either by day or by night.

250. He in whom that feeling is destroyed, and taken out with the very root, finds rest by d night.

251. There is no fire like passion, there is no shark like hatred, there is no snare like folly, no torrent like greed.

252. The fault of others is easily perceived, but that of oneself is difficult to perceive; a ma his neighbour's faults like chaff, but his own fault he hides, as a cheat hides the bad die from

253. If a man looks after the faults of others, and is always inclined to be offended, his ow will grow, and he is far from the destruction of passions.

254. There is no path through the air, a man is not a Samana by outward acts. The world

[249. This verse has evidently regard to the feelings of the Bhikshus or mendicants who rec little, and who are exhorted not to be envious if others receive more than they themselves. S Parables illustrate this feeling.

251. Dr. Fausboll translates gaho by 'captivitas,' Dr. Weber by 'fetter.' I take it in the same se in Manu VI, 78; and Buddhaghosa does the same, though he assigns to graha a more gene anything that seizes, whether an evil spirit (yakkha), a serpent (agagara), or a crocodile (kur

Greed or thirst is represented as a river in Lalita-vistara, ed. Calc. p. 482, trishna-nadi tivega me gnanasuryena, 'the wild river of thirst is dried up by the sun of my knowledge.'

252. See Childers, Notes, p. 7; .

253. As to asava, 'appetite, passion,' see note to .

254. I have translated this verse very freely, and not in accordance with Buddhaghosa's com
Fausboll proposed to translate, 'No one who is outside the Buddhist community can walk thr only a Samana;' and the same view is taken by Professor Weber, though he arrives at it by a construction. Now it is perfectly true that the idea of magical powers (riddhi) which enable sa through the air, &c., occurs in the Dhammapada, see , note. But the Dhammapada may con verses, and in that case our verse might be an early protest on the part of Buddha against th miraculous powers. We know how Buddha himself protested against his disciples being call vulgar miracles. 'I command my disciples not to work miracles,' he said, 'but to hide their goo show their sins' (Burnouf, Introd. p. 170). It would be in harmony with this sentiment if we tra verse as I have done. As to bahira, I should take it in the sense of 'external,' as opposed to a 'internal;' and the meaning would be, 'a Samana is not a Samana by outward acts, but by his translates (p. 85): 'There is no footprint in the air; there is not a Samana out of the pale of th community.'

Prapanka, which I have here translated by 'vanity,' seems to include the whole host of huma where it is explained by tamhaditthimanapapanka; in our verse by tamhadisu papankesu: cf.
564, analayam nishprapankam anutpadam asambhavam (dharmakakram). As to Tathagata Burnouf, Introd. p. 75.]

p. 63

delights in vanity, the Tathagatas (the Buddhas) are free from vanity.

255. There is no path through the air, a man is not a Samana by outward acts. No creature the awakened (Buddha) are never shaken.

[255. Sankhara for samskara; cf. note to . Creature does not, as Mr. D'Alwis (p. 69) suppose Christian conception of creation.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and sacred-texts.com

p. 64

CHAPTER XIX.

THE JUST.

256., 257. A man is not just if he carries a matter by violence; no, he who distinguishes bo wrong, who is learned and leads others, not by violence, but by law and equity, and who is g and intelligent, he is called just.

258. A man is not learned because he talks much; he who is patient, free from hatred and learned.

259. A man is not a supporter of the law because he talks much; even if a man has learnt the law bodily, he is a supporter of the law, a man who never neglects the law.

260. A man is not an elder because his head is grey; his age may be ripe, but he is called

261. He in whom there is truth, virtue, love, restraint, moderation, he who is free from impu wise, he is called an elder.

262. An envious, greedy, dishonest man does not become respectable by means of much beauty of his complexion.

263. He in whom all this is destroyed, and taken out with the very root, he, when freed fro wise, is called respectable.

[259. Buddhaghosa here takes law (dhamma) in the sense of the four great truths, see note kayena passati mean, 'he observes the law in his acts?' Hardly, if we compare expressions vipassato, .]

p. 65

264. Not by tonsure does an undisciplined man who speaks falsehood become a Samana who is still held captive by desire and greediness?

265. He who always quiets the evil, whether small or large, he is called a Samana (a quiet has quieted all evil.

266. A man is not a mendicant (Bhikshu) simply because he asks others for alms; he who is a Bhikshu, not he who only begs.

267. He who is above good and evil, who is chaste, who with knowledge passes through t is called a Bhikshu.

268., 269. A man is not a Muni because he observes silence (mona, i.e. mauna), if he is fo

[265. This is a curious etymology, because it shows that at the time when this verse was wri meaning of sramana had been forgotten. Sramana meant originally, in the language br the B performed hard penances, from sram, 'to work hard,' &c. When it became the name of the B language had changed, and sramana was pronounced samana. Now there is another Sansk which in Pali becomes likewise sam, and from this root sam, 'to quiet,' and not from sram, 'to popular etymology of the day and the writer of our verse derive the title of the Buddhist pries original form sramana became known to the Greeks as {Greek: Sarmanai}, that of samana a the former through Megasthenes, the latter through Bardesanes, 80-60 B.C. (See Lassen, In Alterthumskunde, II, 700.) The Chinese Shamen and the Tungusian Shamen come from the latter has sometimes been doubted. See Schott, Uber die doppelte Bedeutung des Wortes S Philosophical Transactions of the Berlin Academy, 1842, p. 463 seq.

266-270. The etymologies here given of the ordinary titles of the followers of Buddha are ent and are curious only as showing how the people who spoke Pali had lost the etymological co language. A Bhikshu is a beggar, i.e. a Buddhist friar who bas left his family and lives entirel Muni is a sage, hence Sakya-muni, a name of Gautama. Muni comes from man, 'to think,' an mauna, 'silence.' Ariya, again, is the general name of those who embrace a religious life. It m 'respectable, noble.' In verse 270 it seems as if the writer wished to guard against deriving a 'enemy.' See note to .]

p. 66

and ignorant; but the wise who, taking the balance, chooses the good and avoids evil, he is Muni thereby; he who in this world weighs both sides is called a Muni.

270. A man is not an elect (Ariya) because he injures living creatures; because he has pity creatures, therefore is a man called Ariya.

271., 272. Not only by discipline and vows, not only by much learning, not by entering into by sleeping alone, do I earn the happiness of release which no worldling can know. Bhikshu as long as thou hast not attained the extinction of desires.

[272. See Childers, Notes, p. 7.]

p. 67

CHAPTER XX.

THE WAY.

273. The best of ways is the eightfold; the best of truths the four words; the best of virtues passionlessness; the best of men he who has eyes to see.

274. This is the way, there is no other that leads to the purifying of intelligence. Go on this Everything else is the deceit of Mara (the tempter).

275. If you go on this way, you will make an end of pain! The way was preached by me, w the removal of the thorns (in the flesh).

276. You yourself must make an effort. The Tathagatas (Buddhas) are only preachers. Th enter the way are freed from the bondage of Mara.

277. 'All created things perish,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive in pain; this purity.

[273. The eightfold or eight-membered way is the technical term for the way by which Nirvar Burnouf, Lotus, p. 519.) This very way constitutes the fourth of the Four Truths, or the four w viz. Duhkha, 'pain ;' Samudaya, 'origin;' Nirodha, 'destruction;' Marga, 'road.' (Lotus, p. 517.) . For another explanation of the Marga, or 'way,' see Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p. 280.

274. The last line may mean, 'this way is the confusion of Mara,' i.e. the discomfiture of Mara

275. The salyas, 'arrows or thorns,' are the sokasalya, 'the arrows of grief.' Buddha himself i mahasalya-harta, 'the great remover of thorns.' (Lalita-vistara, p. 550; Mahabh. XII, 5616.)

277. See .]

p. 68

278. 'All created things are grief and pain,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive the way that leads to purity.

279. 'All forms are unreal,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive in pain; this is th to purity.

280. He who does not rouse himself when it is time to rise, who, though young and strong whose will and thought are weak, that lazy and idle man will never find the way to knowledg

281. Watching his speech, well restrained in mind, let a man never commit any wrong with man but keep these three roads of action clear, and he will achieve the way which is taught

282. Through zeal knowledge is gotten, through lack of zeal knowledge is lost; let a man w double path of gain and loss thus place himself that knowledge may grow.

283. Cut down the whole forest (of lust), not a tree only! Danger comes out of the forest (o you have cut down both the forest (of lust) and its undergrowth, then, Bhikshus, you will be r and free!

[278. See .

279. Dhamma is here explained, like sankhara, as the five khandha, i.e. as what constitutes

281. Cf. Beal, Catena, p. 159.

282. Bhuri was rightly translated 'intelligentia' by Dr. Fausboll. Dr. Weber renders it by 'Gede commentator distinctly explains it as 'vast knowledge,' and in the technical sense the word o and before medha, in the Lalita-vistara, p. 541.

283. A pun, vana meaning both 'lust' and 'forest.' See some mistaken remarks on this verse Nirvana, p. 86, and some good remarks in Childers, Notes, p. 7.]

p. 69

284. So long as the love of man towards women, even the smallest, is not destroyed, so lo bondage, as the calf that drinks milk is to its mother.

285. Cut out the love of self, like an autumn lotus, with thy hand! Cherish the road of peac been shown by Sugata (Buddha).

286. 'Here I shall dwell in the rain, here in winter and summer,' thus the fool meditates, an think of his death.

287. Death comes and carries off that man, praised for his children and flocks, his mind di flood carries off a sleeping village.

288. Sons are no help, nor a father, nor relations; there is no help from kinsfolk for one wh seized.

289. A wise and good man who knows the meaning of this, should quickly clear the way th

[285. Cf. Gataka, vol. i. p. 183.

286. Antaraya, according to the commentator, givitantaraya, i.e. interitus, death. In Sanskrit, used in the sense of 'vanished' or 'perished.'

287. See notes to , Thiessen, Kisagotami, p. 11, and Mahabh. XII, 9944, 6540.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER XXI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

290. If by leaving a small pleasure one sees a great pleasure, let a wise man leave the sm look to the great.

291. He who, by causing pain to others, wishes to obtain pleasure for himself, he, entangl of hatred, will never be free from hatred.

292. What ought to be done is neglected, what ought not to be done is done; the desires o thoughtless people are always increasing.

293. But they whose whole watchfulness is always directed to their body, who do not follo to be done, and who steadfastly do what ought to be done, the desires of such watchful and come to an end.

294. A true Brahmana goes scatheless, though he have killed father and mother, and two though he has destroyed a kingdom with all its subjects.

295. A true Brahmana goes scatheless, though he have killed father and mother, and two eminent man besides.

[292. Cf. Beal, Catena, p. 264.

294, 295. These two verses are either meant to show that a truly holy man who, by accident crimes is guiltless, or they refer to some particular event in Buddha's history. The commenta startled that he explains them allegorically. Mr. D'Alwis is very indignant that I should have s capable of pardoning patricide. 'Can it be believed,' he writes, 'that a Teacher, who held life, of the minutest insect, nay, even a living tree, in such high estimation as to prevent its wanto has declared that the murder of a Brahmana, to whom he accorded reverence, along with hi blameless?' D'Alwis, Nirvana, p. 88. Though something might be said in reply, considering th king Agatasatru, the patron of Buddha, and stories such as that quoted by the commentator (Beal, l.c. p. 150), or in Der Weise und der Thor, p. 306, still these two verses are startling, a aware that Buddha has himself drawn the conclusion, which has been drawn by others, viz. reached the highest Sambodhi, and are in fact no longer themselves, are outside the domai and beyond the reach of guilt. Verses like and admit of a different explanation. Still our vers miscellaneous extracts, might possibly have been taken from a work in which such an opinio I find that Mr. Childers, no mean admirer of Buddha, was not shocked by my explanation. 'In says, 'this verse is intended to express in a forcible manner the Buddhist doctrine that the Ar commit a serious sin.' However, we have met before wilh far-fetched puns in these verses, a impossible that the native commentators were right after all in seeing some puns or riddles i D'Alwis, following the commentary, explains mother as lust, father as pride, the two valiant k heretical systems, and the realm as sensual pleasure, while veyyaggha is taken by him for a wilh the tigers of obstruction against final beatitude. Some confirmation of this interpretation by a passage in the third book of the Lankavatara-sutra, as quoted by Mr. Beal in his transla Dhammapada, Introduction, p. 5. Here a stanza is quoted as having been recited by Buddha similar startling utterance which he had made to Mahamati:

'Lust, or carnal desire, this is the Mother,
Ignorance, this is the Father,
The highest point of knowledge, this is Buddha,
All the klesas, these are the Rahats,
The five skandhas, these are the Priests;
To commit the five unpardonable sins
Is to destroy these five
And yet not suffer the pains of hell.'

The Lankavatara-sutra was translated into Chinese by Bodhiruki (508-511); when it was wri See also Gataka, vol. ii. p. 263.]

p. 71

296. The disciples of Gotama (Buddha) are always well awake, and their thoughts day and set on Buddha.

297. The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are law.

298. The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are church.

299. The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are their body.

p. 72

300. The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their mind day and night always compassion.

301. The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their mind day and night always meditation.

302. It is hard to leave the world (to become a friar), it is hard to enjoy the world; hard is th monastery, painful are the houses; painful it is to dwell with equals (to share everything in co itinerant mendicant is beset with pain. Therefore let no man be an itinerant mendicant and h beset with pain.

303. Whatever place a faithful, virtuous, celebrated, and wealthy man chooses, there he is

304. Good people shine from afar, like the snowy

[302. This verse is difficult, and I give my translation as tentative only. Childers (Notes, p. 11 remove the difficulties, and I have been chiefly guided by the interpretation put on the verse translator; Beal, Dhammapada, p. 137.]

mountains; bad people are not seen, like arrows shot by night.

305. He alone who, without ceasing, practises the duty of sitting alone and sleeping alone himself, will rejoice in the destruction of all desires alone, as if living in a forest.

[305. I have translated this verse so as to bring it into something like harmony with the prece Vanante, according to a pun pointed out before (), means both 'in the end of a forest,' and 'in desires.']

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CHAPTER XXII.

THE DOWNWARD COURSE.

306. He who says what is not, goes to hell; he also who, having done a thing, says I have After death both are equal, they are men with evil deeds in the next world.

307. Many men whose shoulders are covered with the yellow gown are ill-conditioned and evil-doers by their evil deeds go to hell.

308. Better it would be to swallow a heated iron ball, like flaring fire, than that a bad unrest fellow should live on the charity of the land.

309. Four things does a wreckless man gain who covets his neighbour's wife,--a bad reput uncomfortable bed, thirdly, punishment, and lastly, hell.

[306. I translate niraya, 'the exit, the downward course, the evil path,' by 'hell,' because the r assigned to that ancient mythological name by Christian writers comes so near to the Buddh that it is difficult not to believe in some actual contact between these two streams of thought

Mahabh. XII, 7176. Cf. Gataka, vol. ii. p. 416; .

307, 308. These two verses are said to be taken frorn the Vinaya-pitaka I, 4, 1; D'Alwis, Nirv

308. The charity of the land, i.e. the alms given, from a sense of religious duty, to every mer asks for it.

309, 310. The four things rnentioned in verse 309 seem to be repeated in verse 310. Theref
'bad fame,' is the same in both: gati papika must be niraya; danda must be ninda, and rati th the anikamaseyyam. Buddhaghosa takes the same view of the meaning of anikamaseyya, i seyyam alabhitva, anikkhitam parittakam eva kalam seyyam labhati, 'not obtaining the rest a obtains it, as he does not wish it, for a short time only.']

p. 75

310. There is bad reputation, and the evil way (to hell), there is the short pleasure of the fr the arms of the frightened, and the king imposes heavy punishment; therefore let no man thi neighbour's wife.

311. As a grass-blade, if badly grasped, cuts the arm, badly-practised asceticism leads to

312. An act carelessly performed, a broken vow, and hesitating obedience to discipline, al great reward.

313. If anything is to be done, let a man do it, let him attack it vigorously! A careless pilgrin scatters the dust of his passions more widely.

314. An evil deed is better left undone, for a man repents of it afterwards; a good deed is b for having done it, one does not repent.

315. Like a well-guarded frontier fort, with defences within and without, so let a man guard moment should escape, for they who allow the right moment to pass, suffer pain when they

316. They who are ashamed of what they ought not to be ashamed of, and are not asham to be ashamed of, such men, embracing false doctrines enter the evil path.

317. They who fear when they ought not to fear, and fear not when they ought to fear, suc false doctrines, enter the evil path.

[313. As to raga meaning 'dust' and 'passion,' see Buddhaghosha's Parables, pp. 65, 66.]

p. 76

318. They who forbid when there is nothing to be forbidden, and forbid not when there is s forbidden, such men, embracing false doctrines, enter the evil path.

319. They who know what is forbidden as forbidden, and what is not forbidden as not forbi embracing the true doctrine, enter the good path.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

p. 77

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE ELEPHANT.

320. Silently shall I endure abuse as the elephant in battle endures the arrow sent from the world is ill-natured.

321. They lead a tamed elephant to battle, the king mounts a tamed elephant; the tamed is men, he who silently endures abuse.

322. Mules are good, if tamed, and noble Sindhu horses, and elephants with large tusks; b himself is better still.

323. For with these animals does no man reach the untrodden country (Nirvana), where a tamed animal, viz. on his own well-tamed self.

324. The elephant called Dhanapalaka, his temples running with sap, and difficult to hold, morsel when bound; the elephant longs for the elephant grove.

[320. The elephant is with the Buddhists the emblem of endurance and self-restraint. Thus E called Naga, 'the Elephant' (Lal. Vist. p. 553), or Mahanaga, 'the great Elephant' (Lal. Vist. p one passage (Lal. Vist. p. 554) the reason of this name is given, by stating that Buddha was 'well-tamed,' like an elephant. He descended from heaven in the form of an elephant to be b

Cf. Manu VI, 47, ativadams titiksheta.

323. I read, as suggested by Dr. Fausboll, yath' attana sudantena danto dantena gakkhati' ( Office MS. reads na hi etehi thanehi gakkheya agatam disam, yath' attanam sudantena dan to thanehi instead of yanehi, see .]

p. 78

325. If a man becomes fat and a great eater, if he is sleepy and rolls himself about, that fo fed on wash, is born again and again.

326. This mind of mine went formerly wandering about as it liked, as it listed, as it pleased now hold it in thoroughly, as the rider who holds the hook holds in the furious elephant.

327. Be not thoughtless, watch your thoughts! Draw yourself out of the evil way, like an ele mud.

328. If a man find a prudent companion who walks with him, is wise, and lives soberly, he him, overcoming all dangers, happy, but considerate.

329. If a man find no prudent companion who walks with him, is wise, and lives soberly, le like a king who has left his conquered country behind,--like an elephant in the forest.

330. It is better to live alone, there is no companionship with a fool; let a man walk alone, l commit no sin, with few wishes, like an elephant in the forest.

[326. Yoniso, i.e. yonisah, is rendered by Dr. Fausboll 'sapientia,' and this is the meaning as by many Buddhist authorities. But the reference to Hemakandra (ed. Boehtlingk and Rieu, p that it meant 'origin,' or 'cause.' Yoniso occurs frequently as a mere adverb, meaning 'thorou (Dhammapada, p. 359), and yoniso manasikara (Dhammapada, p. 110) means 'taking to he thoroughly,' or, what is nearly the same, 'wisely.' In the Lalita-vistara, p. 41, the commentato mistaken yonisah, changing it to ye 'niso, and explaining it by yamnisam, whereas M. Fouca translated it by 'depuis l'origine.' Professor Weber suspected in yonisah a double entendre, l would show that our author is innocent of it. In Lalita-vistara, p. 544, l. 4, ayonisa occurs in th error.

328, 329. Cf. .]

p. 79

331. If an occasion arises, friends are pleasant; enjoyment is pleasant, whatever be the ca is pleasant in the hour of death; the giving up of all grief is pleasant.

332. Pleasant in the world is the state of a mother, pleasant the state of a father, pleasant a Samana, pleasant the state of a Brahmana.

333. Pleasant is virtue lasting to old age, pleasant is a faith firmly rooted; pleasant is attain intelligence, pleasant is avoiding of sins.

[332. The commentator throughout takes these words, like matteyyata, &c., to signify, not th mother, or maternity, but reverence shown to a mother.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

p. 80

CHAPTER XXIV.

THIRST.

334. The thirst of a thoughtless man grows like a creeper; he runs from life to life, like a m fruit in the forest.

335. Whomsoever this fierce thirst overcomes, full of poison, in this world, his sufferings in the abounding Birana grass.

336. He who overcomes this fierce thirst, difficult to be conquered in this world, sufferings him, like water-drops from a lotus leaf.

337. This salutary word I tell you, 'Do ye, as many as are here assembled, dig up the root who wants the sweet-scented Usira root must dig up the Birana grass, that Mara (the tempte again and again, as the stream crushes the reeds.'

338. As a tree, even though it has been cut down, is firm so long as its root is safe, and gr thus, unless the feeders of thirst are destroyed, the pain (of life) will return again and again.

339. He whose thirst running towards pleasure is exceeding strong in the thirty-six channe [334. This is explained by a story in the Chinese translation. Beal, Dhammapada, p. 148.

335. Birana grass is the Andropogon muricatum, and the scented root of it is called Usira (cf

338. On Anusaya, i.e. Anusaya (Anlage), see Wassiljew, Der Buddhismus, p. 240 seq.

339. The thirty-six channels, or passions, which are divided by the commentator into eightee eighteen internal, are explained by Burnouf (Lotus, p. 649), from a gloss of the Gina-alankar precise des affections dont un Buddha acte independant, affections qui sont au nombre de c fourni par la glose d'un livre appartenant aux Buddhistes de Ceylan,' &c. Subhuti gives the r manapassavana; cf. Childers, Notes, p. 12.

Vaha, which Dr. Fausboll translates by 'equi,' may be vaha, 'undae.' Cf. .]

p. 81

waves will carry away that misguided man, viz. his desires which are set on passion.

340. The channels run everywhere, the creeper (of passion) stands sprouting; if you see th springing up, cut its root by means of knowledge.

341. A creature's pleasures are extravagant and luxurious; sunk in lust and looking for plea undergo (again and again) birth and decay.

342. Men, driven on by thirst, run about like a snared hare; held in fetters and bonds, they for a long time, again and again.

343. Men, driven on by thirst, run about like a snared hare; let therefore the mendicant driv by striving after passionlessness for himself.

344. He who having got rid of the forest (of lust) (i.e. after having reached Nirvana) gives h to forest-life (i.e. to lust), and who, when removed from the forest (i.e. from lust), runs to the (i.e. to lust), look at that man! though free, he runs into bondage.

[344. This verse seems again full of puns, all connected with the twofold meaning of vana, 'f
By replacing 'forest' by 'lust,' we may translate: 'He who, when free from lust, gives himself u who, when removed from lust runs into lust, look at that man,' &c. Nibbana, 'though with a sl intended to remind the hearer of Nibbana. The right reading is nibbanatho; see Childers, No

p. 82

345. Wise people do not call that a strong fetter which is made of iron, wood, or hemp; far care for precious stones and rings, for sons and a wife.

346. That fetter wise people call strong which drags down, yields, but is difficult to undo; a cut this at last, people leave the world, free from cares, and leaving desires and pleasures b

347. Those who are slaves to passions, run down with the stream (of desires), as a spider which he has made himself; when they have cut this, at last, wise people leave the world fre leaving all affection behind.

348. Give up what is before, give up what is behind, give up what is in the middle, when th other shore of existence; if thy mind is altogether free, thou wilt not again enter into birth and

349. If a man is tossed about by doubts, full of strong passions, and yearning only for wha his thirst will grow more and more, and he will indeed make his fetters strong.

350. If a man delights in quieting doubts, and, always reflecting, dwells on what is not delig

[345. Apekha, apeksha, 'care;' see Manu VI, 41, 49; ; and Gataka, vol. ii. p. 140.

346. Paribbag, i.e. parivrag ; see Manu VI, 41.

347. The commentator explains the simile of the spider as follows: 'As a spider, after having thread-web, sits in the middle, and after killing with a violent rush a butterfly or a fly which ha its circle, drinks its juice, returns, and sits again in the same place, in the same manner crea given to passions, depraved by hatred, and maddened by wrath, run along the stream of thi made themselves, and cannot cross it,' &c.]

p. 83

(the impurity of the body, &c.), he certainly will remove, nay, he will cut the fetter of Mara.

351. He who has reached the consummation, who does not tremble, who is without thirst a has broken all the thorns of life: this will be his last body.

352. He who is without thirst and without affection, who understands the words and their in who knows the order of letters (those which are before and which are after), he has receivec is called the great sage, the great man.

353. 'I have conquered all, I know all, in all conditions of life I am free from taint; I have left and through the destruction of thirst I am free; having learnt myself, whom shall I teach?'

354. The gift of the law exceeds all gifts; the sweetness of the law exceeds all sweetness; the law exceeds all delights; the extinction of thirst overcomes all pain.

355. Pleasures destroy the foolish, if they look not for the other shore; the foolish by his th pleasures destroys himself, as if he were his own enemy.

[352. As to nirutti, and its technical meaning among the Buddhists, see Burnouf, Lotus, p. 84 translates 'niruttis vocabulorum peritus,' which may be right, if we take nirutti in the sense of of the Scriptures. See note to . Could not sannipata mean samhita or sannikarsha? Sannipa Sakala-pratisakhya, but with a different meaning.

353. Cf. .

354. The dhammadana, or 'gift of the law,' is the technical term for instruction in the Buddhis Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. 160, where the story of the Sakkadevaraga is told, and where our verse is given.]

p. 84

356. The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by passion: therefore a gift b passionless brings great reward.

357. The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by hatred: therefore a gift be do not hate brings great reward.

358. The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by vanity: therefore a gift be are free from vanity brings great reward.

359. The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by lust: therefore a gift besto are free from lust brings great reward.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE BHIKSHU (MENDICANT).

360. Restraint in the eye is good, good is restraint in the ear, in the nose restraint is good, restraint in the tongue.

361. In the body restraint is good, good is restraint in speech, in thought restraint is good, restraint in all things. A Bhikshu, restrained in all things, is freed from all pain.

362. He who controls his hand, he who controls his feet, he who controls his speech, he w controlled, he who delights inwardly, who is collected, who is solitary and content, him they c

363. The Bhikshu who controls his mouth, who speaks wisely and calmly, who teaches the his word is sweet.

364. He who dwells in the law, delights in the law, meditates on the law, follows the law, th will never fall away from the true law.

365. Let him not despise what he has received,

[363. On artha and dharma, see Stanislas Julien, Les Avadanas, I, 217, note; 'Les quatre co
1° la connaissance du sens (artha); 2° la connaissance de la Loi (dharma); 3&deg explications (niroukti); 4° la connaissance de l'intelligence (pratibhana).'

364. The expression dhammaramo, 'having his garden or delight (Lustgarten) in the law,' is Brahmanic expression ekarama, i.e. nirdvandva (Mahabh. XIII, 1930). Cf. ; .]

p. 86

nor ever envy others: a mendicant who envies others does not obtain peace of mind.

366. A Bhikshu who, though he receives little, does not despise what he has received, eve praise him, if his life is pure, and if he is not slothful.

367. He who never identifies himself with name and form, and does not grieve over what i indeed is called a Bhikshu.

368. The Bhikshu who acts with kindness, who is calm in the doctrine of Buddha, will reac (Nirvana), cessation of natural desires, and happiness.

369. O Bhikshu, empty this boat! if emptied, it will go quickly; having cut off passion and h wilt go to Nirvana.

370. Cut off the five (senses), leave the five, rise above the five. A Bhikshu, who has esca five fetters, he is called Oghatinna, 'saved from the flood.'

371. Meditate, O Bhikshu, and be not heedless! Do not direct thy thought to what gives pl mayest not for thy heedlessness have to swallow the iron ball (in hell), and that thou mayest burning, 'This is pain.'

[367. Namarupa is here used again in its technical sense of mind and body, neither of which the Buddhists atman, or 'self.' Asat, 'what is not,' may therefore mean the same as namarup it in the sense of what is no more, as, for instance, the beauty or youth of the body, the vigo &c.

368. See Childers, Notes, p. 11.

371. The swallowing of hot iron balls is considered as a punishment in hell; see . Professor V perceived the right meaning of bhavassu, which can only be bhavayasva, but I doubt wheth rendering is right, for who would swallow an iron ball by accident?]

p. 87

372. Without knowledge there is no meditation, without meditation there is no knowledge:
knowledge and meditation is near unto Nirvana.

373. A Bhikshu who has entered his empty house, and whose mind is tranquil, feels a mor when he sees the law clearly.

374. As soon as he has considered the origin and destruction of the elements (khandha) c finds happiness and joy which belong to those who know the immortal (Nirvana).

375. And this is the beginning here for a wise Bhikshu: watchfulness over the senses, con restraint under the law; keep noble friends whose life is pure, and who are not slothful.

376. Let him live in charity, let him be perfect in his duties; then in the fulness of delight he an end of suffering.

377. As the Vassika plant sheds its withered flowers, men should shed passion and hatred

378. The Bhikshu whose body and tongue and mind are quieted, who is collected, and has of the world, he is called quiet.

379. Rouse thyself by thyself, examine thyself by thyself, thus self-protected and attentive happily, O Bhikshu!

380. For self is the lord of self, self is the refuge of self; therefore curb thyself as the merch a good horse.

[372. Cf. Beal, Catena, p. 247.

375. Cf. .]

p. 88

381. The Bhikshu, full of delight, who is calm in the doctrine of Buddha will reach the quiet (Nirvana), cessation of natural desires, and happiness.

382. He who, even as a young Bhikshu, applies himself to the doctrine of Buddha, brighte like the moon when free from clouds.

[381. See . D'Alwis translates, 'dissolution of the sankharas (elements of existence).']

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE BRAHMANA (ARHAT).

383. Stop the stream valiantly, drive away the desires, O Brahmana! When you have unde destruction of all that was made, you will understand that which was not made.

384. If the Brahmana has reached the other shore in both laws (in restraint and contempla vanish from him who has obtained knowledge.

385. He for whom there is neither this nor that shore, nor both, him, the fearless and unsh indeed a Brahmana.

386. He who is thoughtful, blameless, settled, dutiful, without passions, and who has attai end, him I call indeed a Brahmana.

387. The sun is bright by day, the moon shines by night, the warrior is bright in his armour is bright in his meditation; but Buddha, the Awakened, is bright with splendour day and nigh

388. Because a man is rid of evil, therefore he is called Brahmana; because he walks quie is called Samana; because he has sent away his own impurities, therefore he is called Prav pilgrim).

[385. The exact meaning of the two shores is not quite clear, and the commentator who take of internal and external organs of sense can hardly be right. See .

388. These would-be etytmologies are again interesting as showing the decline of the etyml spoken language of India at the time when such etymologies became possible. In order to d vah, it must have been pronounced bahmano; vah, 'to remove,' occurs frequently in the Bud Cf. Lal. Vist. p. 551, l. 1; 553, l. 7. See note to .]

p. 90

389. No one should attack a Brahmana, but no Brahmana (if attacked) should let himself f aggressor! Woe to him who strikes a Brahmana, more woe to him who flies at his aggressor

390. It advantages a Brahmana not a little if he holds his mind back from the pleasures of wish to injure has vanished, pain will cease.

391. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who does not offend by body, word, or thought, and is three points.

392. After a man has once understood the law as taught by the Well-awakened (Buddha), carefully, as the Brahmana worships the sacrificial fire.

393. A man does not become a Brahmana by his platted hair, by his family, or by birth; in truth and righteousness, he is blessed, he is a Brahmana.

394. What is the use of platted hair, O fool! what of the raiment of goat-skins? Within thee ravening, but the outside thou makest clean.

395. The man who wears dirty raiments, who is [390. I am afraid I have taken too much liberty with this verse. Dr. Fausboll translates, 'Non paulo melius, quando retentio fit mentis a jucundis.'

393. Fausboll proposes to read gakka (gatya). 'Both' in the first edition of my translation was
'birth.'

394. I have not copied the language of the Bible more than I was justified in. The words are gahanam, bahiram parimaggasi, 'interna est abyssus, externum mundas.' Cf. Gataka, vol. i.

395. The expression Kisan dhamanisanthatam is the Sanskrit krisam dhamanisantatam, the which in the Mahabharata has been pointed out by Boehtlingk, s.v. dhamani. It looks more li like a Buddhist phrase.]

p. 91

emaciated and covered with veins, who lives alone in the forest, and meditates, him I call in

396. I do not call a man a Brahmana because of his origin or of his mother. He is indeed a is wealthy: but the poor, who is free from all attachments, him I call indeed a Brahmana.

397. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who has cut all fetters, who never trembles, is indepen unshackled.

398. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who has cut the strap and the thong, the chain with all it, who has burst the bar, and is awakened.

399. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who, though he has committed no offence, endures re stripes, who has endurance for his force, and strength for his army.

400. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who is free from anger, dutiful, virtuous, without appeti subdued, and has received his last body.

[396. From verse 396 to the first half of verse 423, the text of the Dhammapada agrees with Vasishtha-Bharadvagasutra. These verses are translated by D'Alwis in his Nirvana, pp. 113- Fausboll, Suttanipata, .

The text contains puns on kinkana, which means 'wealth,' but also 'attachment;' cf. Childers,

398. D'Alwis points out a double entendre in these words. Nandhi may be either the strap th drum, or enmity; varatta may be either a thong or attachment; sandana either chain or scept either due order or all its concomitants; paligha either bar or ignorance.

399. The exact meaning of balanika is difficult to find. Does it mean, possessed of a strong a force, or leading a force?]

p. 92

401. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who does not cling to pleasures, like water on a lotus le mustard seed on the point of a needle.

402. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who, even here, knows the end of his suffering, has pu and is unshackled.

403. Him I call indeed a Brahmana whose knowledge is deep, who possesses wisdom, wh and the wrong, and has attained the highest end.

404. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who keeps aloof both from laymen and from mendican houses, and has but few desires.

405. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who finds no fault with other beings, whether feeble or not kill nor cause slaughter.

406. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who is tolerant with the intolerant, mild with fault-finders from passion among the passionate.

407. Him I call indeed a Brahmana from whom anger and hatred, pride and envy have dro from the point of a needle.

408. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who utters true speech, instructive and free from harsh offend no one.

409. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who takes nothing in the world that is not given him, be short, small or large, good or bad.

410. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who fosters no desires for this world or for the next, ha inclinations, and is unshackled.

[405. On tasa and thavara, see Childers, s.v., and D'Alwis, Nirvana, p. 115. On danda, 'the r Lectures, p. 355, note.]

p. 93

411. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who has no interests, and when he has understood (th say How, how? and who has reached the depth of the Immortal.

412. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who in this world is above good and evil, above the bo from grief from sin, and from impurity.

413. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who is bright like the moon, pure, serene, undisturbed, gaiety is extinct.

414. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who has traversed this miry road; the impassable worl who has gone through, and reached the other shore, is thoughtful, guileless, free from doub attachment, and content.

415. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who in this world, leaving all desires, travels about with in whom all concupiscence is extinct.

416. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who, leaving all longings, travels about without a home covetousness is extinct.

417. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who, after leaving all bondage to men, has risen above

[411. Akathankathi is explained by Buddhaghosa as meaning, 'free from doubt or hesitation.
kathankatha in the sense of 'doubt' (verse 414). In the Kavyadarsa, III, 17, the commentator by katharahitam, nirvivadam, which would mean, 'without a katha, a speech, a story without unconditionally.' From our passage, however, it seems as if kathankatha was a noun derive kathankathayati, 'to say How, how?' so that neither the first nor the second element had any kath, 'to relate;' and in that case akatham, too, ought to be taken in the sense of 'without a W

412. See . The distinction between good and evil vanishes when a man has retired from the ceased to act, longing only for deliverance.]

p. 94

bondage to the gods, and is free from all and every bondage.

418. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who has left what gives pleasure and what gives pain, free from all germs (of renewed life), the hero who has conquered all the worlds.

419. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who knows the destruction and the return of beings ev free from bondage, welfaring (Sugata), and awakened (Buddha).

[418. Upadhi, if not used in a technical sense, is best translated by 'passions or affections.' T
there are four upadhis or substrata, viz. the kandhas, kama, 'desire,' kilesa, 'sin,' and kamma Brahmana may be called nirupadhi, as being free from desire, misery, and work and its cons yet of the kandhas, which end through death only. The commentator explains nirupadhi by n from sin.' See Childers, s.v. nibbana, p. 268 a.

419. Sugata is one of those many words in Buddhist literature which it is almost impossible t because they have been taken in so many acceptations by the Buddhists themselves. Suga
'one who has fared well,' sugati means 'happiness and blessedness.' It is wrong to translate 'welcome,' for that in Sanskrit is svagata; and we cannot accept Dr. Eitel's staternent (Handb that sugata stands incorrectly for svagata. Sugata is one of the not very numerous technical for which hitherto we know of no antecedents in earlier Brahmanism. It may have been usec
'happy and blessed,' but it never became a title, while in Buddhism it has become, not only a almost a proper name of Buddha. The same applies to tathagata, lit. 'thus come,' but used in much like tathavidha, in the sense of talis, while in Buddhism it means a Buddha. There are interpretations of the word, and many reasons are given why Buddhas should be called Tath Introduction, p. 75, &c.) Boehtlingk s.v. supposed that, because Buddha had so many predic the sake of brevity, called 'such a one as he really is.' I think we may go a step further. Anoth tadrisa, meaning talis, becomes in Pali, under the form of tadi, a name of Buddha's disciples of Buddha himself. If applied to Buddha's disciples, it may have meant originally 'such as he fellows; but when applied to Buddha himself, it can only mean 'such a one,' i.e. 'so great a m Sanskrit marsha is probably the Pali mariso, which stands for madiso, Sk. madrisa, 'like me, when a superior addresses others as his equals, and afterwards changed into a mere title o

p. 95

420. Him I call indeed a Brahmana whose path the gods do not know, nor spirits (Gandha passions are extinct, and who is an Arhat (venerable).

421. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who calls nothing his own, whether it be before, behinc is poor, and free from the love of the world.

422. Him I call indeed a Brahmana, the manly, the noble, the hero, the great sage, the con impassible, the accomplished, the awakened.

423. Him I call indeed a Brahmana who knows his former abodes, who sees heaven and h end of births, is perfect in knowledge, a sage, and whose perfections are all perfect.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

THE SUTTA-NIPATA

A COLLECTION OF DISCOURSES

BEING ONE OF THE CANONICAL BOOKS OF THE BUDDHISTS

TRANSLATED FROM PALI

BY

V. FAUSBOLL

Oxford, the Clarendon Press

[1881]

{scanned, proofread, and formatted by Christopher M. Weimer, March 2002}

Vol. X Part II of The Sacred Books of the East

translated by various Oriental scholars and edited by F. Max Muller

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

CONTENTS.

PAGE
INTRODUCTION TO SUTTA-NIPATA xi

I. URAGAVAGGA 1
1. Uragasutta 1
2. Dhaniyasutta 3
3. Khaggavisanasutta 6
4. Kasibharadvagasutta 11
5. Kundasutta 15
6. Parabhavasutta 17

7. Vasalasutta 20
8. Mettasutta 24
9. Hemavatasutta 25
10. Alavakasutta 29
11. Vigayasutta 32
12. Munisutta 33

II. KULAVAGGA 37
1. Ratanasutta 37
2. Amagandhasutta 40
3. Hirisutta 42
4. Mahamangalasutta 43
5. Sukilomasutta 45
6. Dhammakariyasutta or Kapilasutta 46
7. Brahmanadhammikasutta 47
8. Navasutta 52
9. Kimsilasutta 54
10. Utthanasutta 55
11. Rahulasutta 55
12. Vangisasutta 51
13. Sammaparibbaganiyasutta 60
14. Dhammikasutta 62

III. MAHAVAGGA 67
1. Pabbaggasutta 67
2. Padhanasutta 69
3. Subhasitasutta 72
4. Sundarikabharadvagasutta 74
5. Maghasutta 80
6. Sabhiyasutta 85
7. Selasutta 96
8. Sallasutta 106
9. Vasetthasutta 108
10. Kokaliyasutta 118
11. Nalakasutta 124
12. Dvayatanupassanasutta 131

IV. ATTHAKAVAGGA 146

1. Kamasutta 146
2. Guhatthakasutta 147
3. Dutthatthakasutta 148
4. Suddhatthakasutta 150
5. Paramatthakasutta 152
6. Garasutta 154
7. Tissametteyyasutta 156
8. Pasurasutta 157
9. Magandiyasutta 159
10. Purabhedasutta 162
11. Kalahavivadasutta 164
12. Kulaviyuhasutta 167
13. Mahaviyuhasutta 171
14. Tuvatakasutta 174
15. Attadandasutta 177
16. Sariputtasutta 180

V. PARAYANAVAGGA 184
1. Vatthugatha 184
2. Agitamanavapukkha 190
3. Tissametteyyamanavapukkha 191
4. Punnakamanavapukkha 192
5. Mettagumanavapukkha 193
6. Dhotakamanavapukkha 196
7. Upasivamanavapukkha 197
8. Nandamanavapukkha 199
9. Hemakamanavapukkha 201
10. Todeyyamanavapukkha 202
11. Kappamanavapukkha 203
12. Gatukannimanavapukkha 204
13. Bhadravudhamanavapukkha 205
14. Udayamanavapukkha 206
15. Posalamanavapukkha 207
16. Mogharagamanavapukkha 208
17. Pingiyamanavapukkha 209

Index 215

EXPLANATION OF WORDS
the meaning of which is not always given in the translation.

Agivika, one belonging to a sect of naked ascetics.
Arahat, a holy man, a saint.
Ariya, noble.
Bhagavat, worshipful; blessed, a name of a Buddha.
Bhikkhu, a mendicant.
Brahman, the supreme god of the Hindus.
Brahmana, a sage.
Buddha, enlightened, a name of certain holy men who have freed themselves from exister Samana Gotama.
Dhamma, tenet, doctrine, custom, law, religion, virtue, thing.
Gahattha, Gihin, a householder.
Gotama, a name of the last Buddha.
Gatila, an ascetic wearing clotted hair.
Gina, a conqueror, a name of a Buddha.
Isi, a sage.
Khattiya, a warrior, a prince.
Kandala, an outcast.
Mara, a name of the king of death, the devil.
Muni, a thinker, a sage.
Naga, an eminent man; sinless?
Namuki = Mara.
Nibbana, extinction, the state of bliss of the Buddhist.
Nigantha, a naked ascetic.
Pabbagga, leaving the world, embracing ascetic life, taking the robe.
Pabbagita, an ascetic, having taken the robe.
Paribbaga, Paribbagaka, a wandering mendicant.
Sakka = Sakya, belonging to the Sakya tribe.
Sakyamuni, the Sakya sage, a name of Buddha.

Samana, an ascetic.
Samkhara, all compound things, the material world.
Samsara, revolution, transmigration.
Savaka, a hearer, a follower, a disciple of Buddha, including both laity and clergy.
Sekha, a novice, student.
Sudda, a man of the servile caste.
Sugata, happy, a name of a Buddha.
Thera, an elder, a senior priest.
Titthiya, an ascetic adhering to a certain system of philosophy.
Upadhi, the elements of the world.
Upasaka, a follower, a lay devotee.
Upasampada, priest's orders.
Vessa, Vessika, a man of the third caste.
Yakkha, a giant, a malignant spirit.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE SUTTA-NIPATA.

THE Collection of Discourses, Sutta-Nipata, which I have here translated[1], is very remar can be no doubt that it contains some remnants of Primitive Buddhism. I consider the greate Mahavagga, and nearly the whole of the Atthakavagga as very old. I have arrived at this con reasons, first from the language, and secondly from the contents.

1. We not only find here what we meet with in other Pali poetry, the fuller Vedic forms of n in the plural, as avitatamhase, panditase, dhammase, sitase, upatthitase, pavadiyase, &c., a asmase, sikkhissamase; the shorter Vedic plurals and the instrumental singular of nouns, as lakkhana for vinikkhayani, lakkhanani, manta, parinna, vinaya, labhakamya for mantaya, &c.
as vippahatave, sampayatave, unnametave; contracted (or sometimes old) forms, as santya sammukka, titthya, thiyo, parihirati for santiya, gatiya, sammutiya, titthiya, itthiyo, parihariyat side of protracted forms, such as atumanam; but also some unusual (sometimes old) forms apukkhasi, sagghasi[2] = sakkhissasi, sussam = sunissami (Sansk. sroshyami), pava and pa = paveseyya, parikissati = parikilissati, vineyya, vikeyya, nikkheyya, pappuyya, = vinayitva, & disva (S. drishtva), atisitva = atikkamitva, anuvikka = anuviditva, paribbasana = vasamana, a = pasanena, vakibhi, katubbhi, rattamahabhi, ise (vocative), suvami = sami, maga = miga,

[1. Sir M. Coomara Swamy's translation of part of the book has been a great help to me. I ho publish the Pali text.

2. C reads pagghasi.]

tumo = so, parovara = paravara, bhunahu = bhutihanaka, upaya, amagandha, dhona, vyapp vevikkha, visenibhuta, visenikatva, patiseniyanti. Sometimes we meet also with difficult and constructions, and very condensed expressions. All this proves, I think, that these parts of th older than the Suttas in which the language is not only fluent, but of which some verses are melodious.

2. In the contents of the Suttanipata we have, I think, an important contribution to the right understanding of Primitive Buddhism, for we see here a picture not of life in monasteries, bu hermits in its first stage. We have before us not the systematizing of the later Buddhist churc first germs of a system, the fundamental ideas of which come out with sufficient clearness. F Atthakavagga especially it is evident where Buddha takes his stand in opposition to Philosop darsana).

Indian society at the time of Buddha had two large and distinguished religious sects, Sama Brahmanas. This is apparent from several passages where they are mentioned together; for Oldenberg, II, p. 295; Grimblot, Sept Suttas Palis, p. ix, 8 &c., 118 &c., 158 &c., 306 &c., 309
p. 392; Suttanipata; vv. 99, 129, 189, 440, 529, 859, 1078; Sabhiyasutta, at the beginning; th of Asoka; Mahabhashya, II, 4, 9 (fol. 398 a); Lalita Vistara, pp. 309, l. 10, 318, l. 18, 320, l. 2

lastly, Megasthenes (Schwanbeck, p. 45), {Greek: duo genh figodofwn, wn tous men Braxm Sarmanas}.

Famous teachers arose and gathered around them flocks of disciples. As such are mentio
Makkhali-Gosala, Agita-Kesakarnbali, Pakudha-Kakkayana, Sangaya-Belatthiputta, and Nig Suttanipata, p. 86; Mahaparinibbanasutta, ed. Childers, p. 58; Vinaya II, p. 111; Grimblot, Se
p. 114, &c.; Milindapanha, ed. Trenckner, p. 4. Besides these there is Bavari (Suttanipata, p disciples Agita, Tissametteyya, Punnaka, Mettagu, Dhotaka, Upasiva, Nanda,

[1. Cf. Indian Antiquary, 1880, p. 158.]

Hemaka, Todeyya, Kappa, Gatukannin, Bhadravudha, Udaya, Posala, Mogharagan (Pingiya 98), and, Kankin, Tarukkha, Pokkharasati, Ganussoni, Vasettha, and Bharadvaga, p. 109.

We learn that there were four kinds of Samanas, viz. Maggaginas, Maggadesakas (or Mag Maggagghayins), Maggagivins, and Maggadusins, vv. 83-88. Among these Samanas disput a number of philosophical systems were formed, and at the time of Buddha there were as m them, v. 538. These systems are generally designated by ditthi, vv. 54, 151, 786, 837, 851, ditthigata, vv. 834, 836, 913; or by ditthasuta, v. 778; or by dittha, suta, and muta, vv. 793, 8 by dittha, suta, silavata[1], and muta, vv. 790, 797-798, 836, 887, 1080. The doctrines them ditthinivesa, v. 785; or nivesana, vv. 209, 470, 801, 846; or vinikkhaya, vv. 838, 866, 887, 89 entertains any of them, is called nivissavadin, vv. 910, 913.

What is said of the Samanas seems mostly to hold good about the Brahmanas also. They disputatious, vadasila, v. 381, &c., p. 109; and three kinds of them are mentioned, viz. Titthi and Niganthas, vv. 380, 891-892. In contradistinction to the Samanas the Brahmanas are de vv. 594, 1019; they are Padakas, Veyyakaranas, and perfect in Gappa, Nighandu, Ketubha, p. 98. They are called friends of the hymns, v. 139; well versed in the hymns, v. 976; and the hymn is Savitti[2], vv. 568, 456. They worship and make offerings to the fire, pp. 74, 20. In Brahmanadhammikasutta the ancient and just Brahmanas are described in opposition to the

[1. I am not sure whether silavata is to be understood as one notion or two. It is generally wr word, but at p. 109 Vasettha says, when one is virtuous and endowed with works, he is a Br silava ka hoti vatasampanno ka ettavata kho brahmano hoti. Silavata, I presume, refers chie Brahmanas.

2. From v. 456 we see that Buddha has rightly read vareniyam as the metre requires; but I m mention that the Commentator understands by Savitti the Buddhistic formula: Buddham sara saranam gakkhami, Samgham saranam gakkhami, which, like Savitti, contains twenty-four s

Brahmanas, who slay innocent cows and have acquired wealth through the favour of the kin 302[1].

All these disputants hold fast to their own prejudiced views, v. 910. They say that purity co philosophical views, from tradition, and from virtuous works, and in many other ways, v. 107 is no bliss excepting by following their opinions, vv. 889, 891, 892.

Buddha himself has, it is true, sprung from the Samanas: he is called Samana Gotama, p. a sun in the midst of the Samanas, v. 550; and intercourse with Samanas is said to be the h 265. But Buddha has overcome all their systems, v. 538; there is nothing which has not bee thought by him, and nothing which has not been understood by him, v. 1121. All the disputat not overcome him in understanding, v. 380; and he asserts that no one is purified and saved by virtuous works, vv. 1079, 839. Sanctification, in fact, does not come from another, vv. 773 can be attained only by going into the yoke with Buddha, v. 834; by believing in him and in th Saints, vv. 183, 185, 370, 1142; on the whole, by being what Buddha is.

What then is Buddha?

First he is a Visionary, in the good sense of the word; his knowledge is intuitive. 'Seeing m says, 'in the philosophical views, without adopting any of them, searching for truth, I saw inw 837, 207. And again, 'He, a conqueror unconquered, saw the Dhamma visibly, without any t instruction,' vv. 934, 1052, 1065. He teaches an instantaneous, an immediate religious life, v is called kakkhumat, endowed with an eye, clearly-seeing, vv. 160, 405, 540, 562, 596, 956, 1127; samantakakkhu, the all-seeing, vv. 1062, 1068; and as such he has become an eye to sees the subtle meaning of things, vv. 376, 175; he is, in one word, Sambuddha, the perfect 177, 555, 596, 992; and by knowledge he is delivered, vv. 1106,

[1. Besides the religious Brahmanas some secular Brahmanas are mentioned, p. 11.]

727, 733. Existence is avigga, ignorance, v. 729; vigga, knowledge, is the extinction of the w

Secondly, he is an Ascetic, a Muni[1], one that forsakes othe world and wanders from the houseless state, vv. 273, 375, 1003; because from house-life arises defilement, v. 206. An a prejudiced ideas, v. 802; he has shaken off every philosophical view, v. 787; he does not en v. 887; he is not pleased nor displeased with anything, v. 813; he is indifferent to learning, v. not cling to good and evil, vv. 520, 547, 790; he has cut off all passion and all desire, vv. 2, 7 916; he is free from marks, v. 847; and possessionless, akinkana, vv. 175, 454, 490, 620, 10 1069, 1114. He is equable, v. 855; under all circumstances the same, v. 952; still as the dee calm, vv. 459, 861. He has reached peace, vv. 837, 845, 919; he knows that bliss consists i has gone to immortal peace, the unchangeable state of Nibbana, v. 203. And how is this sta the destruction of consciousness, vv. 734-735. And how does consciousness cease? By the sensation, vv. 1109-1110; by being without breathing, vv. 1089-1090[2].

1. What then is sin according to Buddha?

Subjectively sin is desire, in all its various forms, vv. 923, 1103; viz. desire tor existence ge vv. 776, 1059, 1067, and especially for name and form, i.e. individual existence, vv. 354, 109 man is led by desire he will be whirled about in existence, v. 740; for as long as there is birth be death, v. 742. Existence is called the stream of death, v. 354; the realm of Mara, vv. 164, continually go to samsara with birth and death, are the ignorant, v. 729.

[1. Buddha is sometimes styled the great Isi, vv. 1060, 1082; sometimes a Muni, vv. 164, 70 Brahmana, v. 1064; sometimes a Bhikkhu, vv. 411, 415; and all these appellations are used 283, 284, 1064, 1056, 843, 844, 911, 912, 946, 220. Ascetic life is praised throughout the bo the Uraga-, Muni-, Rahula-, Sammaparibbaganiya-, Dhammika-, Nalaka-, Purabheda-, Tuva Sariputta-suttas.

2. This system ends, it will be seen from this, like other ascetic systems, in mysticism.]

p. xvi

But desire originates in the body, vv. 270, 1099; sin lies objectively in embodiment or matt consequently the human body is looked upon as a contemptible thing. See Vigayasutta, p. 3

2. And what is bliss?

Subjectively, it is emancipation from desire by means of the peace that Buddha preaches, 1069, 1084, 1108, 838-839.

Objectively, it is emancipation from body and matter. One must destroy the elements of ex vv. 373, 546, 1050, 1056; and leave the body behind, that one may not come to exist again, 761. The ignorant only create upadhi, v. 1050, and go again and again to samsara, v. 729. T enter time, kappa, vv. 521, 535, 860; they look upon the world as void, v. 1118; hold that the really existing, v. 1069; and those whose minds are disgusted with a future existence, the wi destroyed their seeds (of existence), go out like a lamp, vv. 234, 353-354. As a flame, blown violence of the wind, goes out, and cannot be reckoned (as existing), even so a Muni, delive body, disappears, and cannot be reckoned (as existing), v. 1073. For him who has disappea form; that by which they say he is, exists for him no longer, v. 1075.

'Exert thyself, then, O Dhotaka,'--so said Bhagavat,--'being wise and thoughtful in this worl having listened to my utterance, learn his own extinction,' v. 1061.

Tena h' atappam karohi,--Dhotaka 'ti Bhagava,-- idh' eva nipako sato ito sutvana nigghosam
sikkhe nibbanam attano.

With this short sketch of the contents of the Suttanipata for a guide, I trust it will be easy to understand even the more obscure parts of the book.

V. FAUSBOLL.

COPENHAGEN,
Sept. 13, 1880.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

I. URAGAVAGGA.

1. URAGASUTTA.

The Bhikkhu who discards all human passions is compared to a snake that casts his skin.-- in Fr. Spiegel's Anecdota Palica. 1. He who restrains his anger when it has arisen, as (they (restrain) the poison of the snake spreading (in the body), that Bhikkhu leaves this and the fu
a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (1)

2. He who has cut off passion entirely, as (they cut off) the lotus-flower growing in a lake, a
(into the water), that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old wor
(2)

3. He who has cut off desire entirely, the flowing, the quickly running, after drying it up, tha leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (3)

4. He who has destroyed arrogance entirely, as the flood (destroys) a very frail bridge of re
Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (4)

5. He who has not found any essence in the existences, like one that looks for flowers on t Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (5)

p. 2

6. He in whose breast there are no feelings of anger, who has thus overcome reiterated ex
Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (6)

7. He whose doubts are scattered, cut off entirely inwardly, that Bhikkhu leaves this and th shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (7)

8. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, who overcame all this (world of)
Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (8)

9. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, having seen that all this in the w false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin.

10. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from covetousness, all this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn (10)

11. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from passion, (seei this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn ou

12. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from hatred, (seein is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out sk

13. He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from folly, (seeing) is false, that Bhikkhu leaves his and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out ski

p. 3

14. He to whom there are no affections whatsoever, whose sins are extirpated from the ro leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin. (14)

15. He to whom there are no (sins) whatsoever originating in fear, which are the causes of this shore, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out

16. He to whom there are no (sins) whatsoever originating in desire, which are the causes to existence, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn o

17. He who, having left the five obstacles, is free from suffering, has overcome doubt, and pain, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore. as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin.

Uragasutta is ended.

2. DHANIYASUTTA.

A dialogue between the rich herdsman Dhaniya and Buddha, the one rejoicing in his worldl other in his religious belief.--This beautiful dialogue calls to mind the parable in the . 1. 'I ha
(my) rice, I have milked (my cows),'--so said the herdsman Dhaniya,--'I am living together wi near the banks of the Mahi (river), (my) house is covered, the fire is kindled: therefore, if tho
O sky!' (18)

2. 'I am free from anger, free from stubbornness,'--so said Bhagavat,--'I am abiding for one banks of the Mahi (river), my house

p. 4

is uncovered, the fire (of passions) is extinguished: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (19)

3. 'Gad-flies are not to be found (with me),'--so said the herdsman Dhaniya,--'in meadows grass the cows are roaming, and they can endure rain when it comes: therefore, if thou like, (20)

4. '(By me) is made a well-constructed raft,'--so said Bhagavat,--'I have passed over (to Ni reached the further bank, having overcome the torrent (of passions); there is no (further) use therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (21)

5. 'My wife is obedient, not wanton,'--so said the herdsman Dhaniya,--'for a long time she l together (with me), she is winning, and I hear nothing wicked of her: therefore, if thou like, ra (22)

6. 'My mind is obedient, delivered (from all worldliness),'--so said Bhagavat,--'it has for a lo been highly cultivated and well-subdued, there is no longer anything wicked in me: therefore rain, O sky!' (23)

7. 'I support myself by my own earnings,'--so said the herdsman Dhaniya,--'and my childre me, healthy; I hear nothing wicked of them: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (24)

8. 'I am no one's servant,'--so said Bhagavat,--'with what I have gained I wander about in a there is no need (for me) to serve: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (25)

9. 'I have cows, I have calves,'-- so said the herdsman Dhaniya;--'I have cows in calf and h have also a bull as lord over the cows: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (26)

p. 5

10. 'I have no cows, I have no calves,'--so said Bhagavat,--'I have no cows in calf and no h have no bull as a lord over the cows: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky! (27)

11. 'The stakes are driven in, and cannot be shaken,'--so said the herdsman Dhaniya,--'the of munga grass, new and well-made, the cows will not be able to break them: therefore, if th sky!' (28)

12. 'Having, like a bull, rent the bonds; having, like an elephant, broken through the galukk shall not again enter into a womb: therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (29)

Then at once a shower poured down, filling both sea and land. Hearing the sky raining, Dh

13. 'No small gain indeed (has accrued) to us since we have seen Bhagavat; we take refu who art) endowed with the eye (of wisdom); be thou our master, O great Muni!' (30)

14. 'Both my wife and myself are obedient; (if) we lead a holy life before Sugata, we shall and death, and put an end to pain.' (31)

15. 'He who has sons has delight in sons,'--so said the wicked Mara,--'he who has cows h in cows; for upadhi (substance) is the delight of man, but he who has no upadhi has no delig

16. 'He who has sons has care with (his) sons,'--so said Bhagavat,--'he who has cows has
(his) cows; for upadhi (is the cause of) people's cares, but he who has no upadhi has no car

Dhaniyasutta is ended.

p. 6

3. KHAGGA VISANASUTTA.

Family life and intercourse with others should be avoided, for society has all vices in its trai
one should leave the corrupted state of society and lead a solitary life. 1. Having laid aside against all beings, and not hurting any of them, let no one wish for a son, much less for a co wander alone like a rhinoceros[1]. (34)

2. In him who has intercourse (with others) affections arise, (and then) the pain which follo considering the misery that originates in affection let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (35

3. He who has compassion on his friends and confidential (companions) loses (his own) a fettered mind; seeing this danger in friendship let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (36)

4. Just as a large bamboo tree (with its branches) entangled (in each other, such is) the ca children and wife; (but) like the shoot of a bamboo not clinging (to anything) let one wander a rhinoceros[2]. (37)

5. As a beast unbound in the forest goes feeding at pleasure, so let the wise man, conside own will, wander alone like a rhinoceros. (38)

6. There is (a constant) calling in the midst of company, both when sitting, standing, walkin away; (but) let one, looking (only) for freedom from desire and for following his own will, wan
a rhinoceros. (39)

7. There is sport and amusement in the midst of

[1. Comp .

2. Comp. .]

company, and for children there is great affection; (although) disliking separation from his de one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (40)

8. He who is at home in (all) the four regions and is not hostile (to any one), being content that, overcoming (all) dangers fearlessly, let him wander alone like a rhinoceros. (41)

9. Discontented are some pabbagitas (ascetics), also some gahatthas (householders) dwe one, caring little about other people's children, wander alone like a rhinoceros. (42)

10. Removing the marks of a gihin (a householder) like a Kovilara tree whose leaves are fa after cutting off heroically the ties of a gihin, wander alone like a rhinoceros. (43)

11. If one acquires a clever companion, an associate righteous and wise, let him, overcom wander about with him glad and, thoughtful[1]. (44)

12. If one does not acquire a clever companion, an associate righteous and wise, then as
(his) conquered kingdom, let him wander alone like a rhinoceros[2]. (45)

13. Surely we ought to praise the good luck of having companions, the best (and such as a ought to be sought for; not having acquired such friends let one, enjoying (only) allowable th alone like a rhinoceros[3]. (46)

14. Seeing bright golden (bracelets), well-wrought by the goldsmith, striking (against each there are) two on one arm, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (47)

[1. Comp. .

2. Comp. .

3. Comp. .]

p. 8

15. Thus (if I join myself) with another I shall swear or scold; considering this danger in fut wander alone like a rhinoceros. (48)

16. The sensual pleasures indeed, which are various, sweet, and charming, under their dif agitate the mind; seeing the misery (originating) in sensual pleasures, let one wander alone rhinoceros. (49)

17. These (pleasures are) to me calamities, boils, misfortunes, diseases, sharp pains, and this danger (originating) in sensual pleasures, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (50)

18. Both cold and heat, hunger and thirst, wind and a burning sun, and gad-flies and snak overcome all these things, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros[1]. (51)

19. As the elephant, the strong, the spotted, the large, after leaving the herd walks at plea forest, even so let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (52)

20. For him who delights in intercourse (with others, even) that is inconvenient which tend deliverance; reflecting on the words of (Buddha) the kinsman of the Adikka family, let one w rhinoceros. (53)

21. The harshness of the (philosophical) views I have overcome, I have acquired self-com attained to the way (leading to perfection), I am in possession of knowledge, and not to be l speaking, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (54)

22. Without covetousness, without deceit, without

[1. Comp. Gataka I p. 93.]

p. 9

craving, without detraction, having got rid of passions and folly, being free from desire in all t
let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (55)

23. Let one avoid a wicked companion who teaches what is useless and has gone into wh not cultivate (the society of) one who is devoted (to and) lost in sensual pleasures, let one w like a rhinoceros. (56)

24. Let one cultivate (the society of) a friend who is learned and keeps the Dhamma, who wise; knowing the meaning (of things and) subduing his doubts, let one wander alone like a

25. Not adorning himself, not looking out for sport, amusement, and the delight of pleasure (on the contrary) being loath of a life of dressing, speaking the truth, let one wander alone lik
rhinoceros. (58)

26. Having left son and wife, father and mother, wealth, and corn, and relatives, the differe desire, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (59)

27. 'This is a tie, in this there is little happiness, little enjoyment, but more of pain, this is a fish-hook,' so having understood, let a thoughtful man wander alone like a rhinoceros. (60)

28: Having torn the ties, having broken the net as a fish in the water, being like a fire not re the burnt place, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (61)

29. With downcast eyes, and not prying[1], with his senses guarded, with his mind protecte

[1. Na ka padalolo ti ekassa dutiyo dvinnam tatiyo ti evam ganamaggham pavisitukamataya abhavanto dighakarika-anavatthakarikavirato va. Commentator.]

p. 10

passion, not burning (with lust), let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (62)

30. Removing the characteristics of a gihin (householder), like a Parikhatta tree whose lea clothed in a yellow robe after wandering away (from his house), let one wander alone like a

31. Not being greedy of sweet things, not being unsteady, not supporting others, going beg to house, having a mind which is not fettered to any household, let one wander alone like a r

32. Having left the five obstacles of the mind, having dispelled all sin, being independent, h the sin of desire, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (65)

33. Having thrown behind (himself bodily) pleasure and pain, and previously (mental) joy a having acquired equanimity, tranquillity, purity, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (66)

34. Strenuous for obtaining the supreme good (i.e. Nibbana), with a mind free from attachn in idleness, being firm, endowed with bodily and mental strength, let one wander alone like a

35. Not abandoning seclusion and meditation, always wandering in (accordance with) the misery in the existences, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros[2]. (68)

36. Wishing for the destruction of desire (i.e. Nibbana), being careful, no fool, learned, stre considerate, restrained, energetic, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (69)

[1. Dhammesu nikkam anudhammakari.

2. Comp. .]

p. 11

37. Like a lion not trembling at noises, like the wind not caught in a net, like a lotus not sta water, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (70)

38. As a lion strong by his teeth, after overcoming (all animals), wanders victorious as the animals, and haunts distant dwelling-places[1], (even so) let one wander alone like a rhinoce

39. Cultivating in (due) time kindness, equanimity, compassion, deliverance, and rejoicing unobstructed by the whole world, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros. (72)

40. Having abandoned both passion and hatred and folly, having rent the ties, not tremblin life, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros[2]. (73)

41. They cultivate (the society of others) and serve them for the sake of advantage; friends motive are now difficult to get, men know their own profit and are impure; (therefore) let one like a rhinoceros. (74)

Khaggavisanasutta is ended.

4. KASIBHARADVAGASUTTA.

The Brahmana Kasibharadvaga reproaches Gotama with idleness, but the latter convinces also works, and so the Brahmana is converted, and finally becomes a saint. Compare Sp. H Buddhism, p. 214; . So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt in Magadha at Dakkhinagiri in the Bramana village Ekanala. A Bramana Kasibharadvaga's five hundred

[1. Pantaniti durani senasananiti vasatitthanani. Commentator.

2. Comp. .]

p. 12

ploughs were tied (to the yokes) in the sowing season. Then Bhagavat, in the morning, havi raiment and taken his bowl and robes, went to the place where the Bramana Kasibharadvag on). At that time the Bramana Kasibharadvaga's distribution of food took place. Then Bhaga place where the distribution of food took place, and having gone there, he stood apart. The Kasibharadvaga saw Bhagavat standing there to get alms, and having seen him, he said thi

'I, O Samana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat; thou also, O Sa plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, thou shouldst eat.'

'I also, O Bramana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat,' so said B

'Yet we do not see the yoke, or the plough, or the ploughshare, or the goad, or the oxen of Gotama.'

And then the venerable Gotama spoke in this way:

'I also, O Bramana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat,' so said B

Then the Bramana Kasibharadvaga addressed Bhagavat in a stanza:

1. 'Thou professest to be a ploughman, and yet we do not see thy ploughing; asked about tell us (of it), that we may know thy ploughing.' (75)

2. Bhagavat answered: 'Faith is the seed, penance the rain, understanding my yoke and p pole of the plough, mind the tie, thoughtfulness my ploughshare and goad. (76)

3. 'I am guarded in respect of the body, I am guarded in respect of speech, temperate in food; I make truth to cut away (weeds), tenderne deliverance. (77)

4. 'Exertion is my beast of burden; carrying (me) to Nibbana he goes without turning back where having gone one does not grieve. (78)

5. 'So this ploughing is ploughed, it bears the fruit of immortality; having ploughed this plou freed from all pain.' (79)

Then the Bramana Kasibharadvaga, having poured rice-milk into a golden bowl, offered it saying, 'Let the venerable Bhagavat eat of the rice-milk; the venerable is a ploughman, for th Gotama ploughs a ploughing that bears the fruit of immortality.'

6. Bhagavat said: 'What is acquired by reciting stanzas is not to be eaten by me; this is, O the Dhamma of those that see rightly; Buddha rejects what is acquired by reciting stanzas, t (of Buddhas) as long as the Dhamma exists. (80)

7. 'One who is an accomplished great Isi, whose passions are destroyed and whose misbe thou shouldst serve with other food and drink, for this is the field for one who looks for good (81)

'To whom then, O Gotama, shall I give this rice-milk?' so said Kasibharadvaga.

'I do not see, O Bramana, in the world (of men)

[1. Annena ka kevalinam mahesim
Khinasavam kukkukkavupasantam
Annena panena upatthahassu, Khettam hi tam punnapekhassa hoti.
Cf. .]

p. 14

and gods and Maras and Brahmans, amongst beings comprising gods and men, and Saman this rice-milk when eaten can be properly digested with the exception of Tathagata, or a disc Tathagata. Therefore, O Bramana, thou shalt throw this rice-milk in (a place where there is) cast it into water with no worms: so said Bhagavat.

Then the Bramana Kasibharadvaga threw the rice-milk into some water with no worms. Th thrown into the water splashed, hissed, smoked in volumes; for as a ploughshare that has g day when thrown into the water splashes, hisses, and smokes in volumes, even so the rice-into the water splashed, hissed, and smoked in volumes.

Then the Bramana Kasibharadvaga alarmed and terrified went up to Bhagavat, and after h fallen with his head at Bhagavat's feet, he said this to Bhagavat:

'It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises wi overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, o lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable G ways the Dhamma (has been) illustrated. I take refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the D Assembly of Bhikkhus; I wish to receive the pabbagga, I wish to receive the upasampada (th orders) from the venerable Gotama,' so said Kasibharadvaga.

Then the Bramana Kasibharadvaga received the

p. 15

pabbagga from Bhagavat, and he received also the upasampada; and the venerable Bharad received the upasampada, leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, lived a a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possessed himself o perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander, away fro to houseless state. 'Birth had been destroyed, a religious life had been led, what was to be d done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the vener became one of the arahats (saints).

Kasibharadvagasutta is ended.

5. KUNDASUTTA.

Buddha describes the four different kinds of Samanas to Kunda, the smith. 1. 'I ask the Mu understanding,'--so said Kunda, the smith,--'Buddha, the lord of the Dhamma, who is free fro of bipeds, the most excellent of charioteers, how many (kinds of) Samanas are there in the w that?' (82)

2. 'There are four (kinds of) Samanas, (there is) not a fifth, O Kunda,'--so said Bhagavat,-- reveal to thee, being asked in person; (they are) Maggaginas and Maggadesakas, Maggagiv (83)

3. 'Whom do the Buddhas call a Maggagina?'--so said Kunda, the smith,--'How is a Magga unequalled? Being asked, describe to me a Maggagivin, and reveal to me a Maggadusin.' (8

p. 16

4. Bhagavat said: 'He who has overcome doubt, is without pain, delights in Nibbana, is free leader of the world of men and gods, such a one the Buddhas call a maggagina (that is, vict (85)

5. 'He who in this world having known the best (i.e. Nibbana) as the best, expounds and ex Dhamma, him, the doubt-cutting Muni, without desire, the second of the Bhikkhus they call a is, teaching the way). (86)

6. 'He who lives in the way that has so well been taught in the Dhammapada, and is restra cultivating blameless words, him the third of the Bhikshus they call a maggagivin (that is, livi way[1]). (87)

7. 'He who although counterfeiting the virtuous is forward, disgraces families, is impudent, unrestrained, a babbler, walking in disguise, such a one is a maggadusin (that is, defiling the

8. 'He who has penetrated these (four Samanas), who is a householder, possessed of kno the venerable ones, wise, having known that they all are such,--having seen so, his faith is r could he make the undepraved equal to the depraved and the pure equal to the impure?' (89

Kundasutta is ended.

[1. Yo Dhammapade sudesite
Magge givati sannato satima
Anavaggapadani sevamano
Tatiyam bhikkhunam ahu maggagivim.

2. Comp. Gataka II, p. 281.]

p. 17

6. PARABHAVASUTTA.

A dialogue between a deity and Buddha on the things by which a man loses and those by w world.--Text by Grimblot, in Journal Asiatique, t. xviii (1871), p. 237; translation by L. Feer, in Asiatique, t. xviii (1871), p. 309, and by Gogerly, reprinted in Journal Asiatique, t. xx (1872), it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then w gone, a certain deity of a beautiful appearance, having illuminated the whole Getavana, wen and having approached and saluted him, he stood apart, and standing apart that deity addre stanzas:

1. 'We ask (thee), Gotama, about a man that suffers loss; having come to ask, Bhagavat, the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (90)

2. Bhagavat: 'The winner is easily known, easily known (is also) the loser: he who loves Dh winner, he who hates Dhamma is the loser.' (91)

3. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the first loser; tell (us) the second, O Bhagavat, wh

cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (92)

4. Bhagavat: 'Wicked men are dear to him, he does not do anything that is dear to the goo the Dhamma of the wicked,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (93)

5. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the second loser; tell us the third, O Bhagavat, wha
cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (94)

6. Bhagavat: 'The man who is drowsy, fond of society and without energy, lazy, given to a cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (95)

p. 18

7. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the third loser; tell us the fourth, O Bhagavat, what
cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (96)

8. Bhagavat: 'He who being rich does not support mother or father who are old or past the
the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (97)

9. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the fourth loser; tell us the fifth, O Bhagavat, what i
cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (98)

10. Bhagavat: 'He who by falsehood deceives either a Bramana or a Samana or any other
the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (99)

11. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the fifth loser; tell us the sixth, O Bhagavat, what i
cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (100)

12. Bhagavat: 'The man who is possessed of much property, who has gold and food, (and his sweet things,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (101)

13. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the sixth loser; tell us the seventh, O Bhagavat, w
cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (102)

14. Bhagavat: 'The man who proud of his birth, of his wealth, and of his family, despises h relatives,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (103)

15. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the seventh loser; tell us the eighth, O Bhagavat,

cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (104)

16. Bhagavat: 'The man who given to women, to strong drink, and to dice, wastes whateve gained,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (105)

p. 19

17. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the eighth loser; tell us the ninth, O Bhagavat, wh cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (106)

18. Bhagavat: 'He who, not satisfied with his own wife, is seen with harlots and the wives o is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (107)

19. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the ninth loser; tell us the tenth, O Bhagavat, wha cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (108)

20. Bhagavat: 'The man who, past his youth, brings home a woman with breasts like the ti for jealousy of her cannot sleep,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (109)

21. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the tenth loser; tell us the eleventh, O Bhagavat, w cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (110)

22. Bhagavat: 'He who places in supremacy a woman given to drink and squandering, or a kind,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (111)

23. Deity: 'We know this to be so, this is the eleventh loser; tell us the twelfth, O Bhagavat cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (112)

24. Bhagavat: 'He who has little property, (but) great desire, is born in a Khattiya family an the kingdom in this world,--that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man).' (113)

25. Having taken into consideration these losses in the world, the wise, venerable man, wh insight, cultivates the happy world (of the gods).' (114)

Parabhavasutta is ended.

p. 20

7. VASALASUTTA.

The Bramana Aggikabharadvaga is converted by Buddha, after hearing his definition of an by the story of Matanga, told in the Matangagataka. Comp. Sp. Hardy, The Legends and Th Buddhists, p. 49.--Text and translation in Alwis's Buddhist Nirvana, p. 119. So it was heard time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then Bhagavat raiment in the morning, and having taken his bowl and his robes, entered Savatthi for alms. in the house of the Bramana Aggikabharadvaga the fire was blazing, the offering brought fo going for alms from house to house in Savatthi went to the house of the Bramana Aggikabh Aggikabharadvaga saw Bhagavat coming at a distance, and seeing him he said this: 'Stay t (stay) there, O Samanaka (i.e. wretched Samana); (stay) there, O Vasalaka (i.e. outcast)!'

This having been said, Bhagavat replied to the Bramana Aggikabharadvaga: 'Dost thou kn outcast, or the things that make an outcast?'

'No, O venerable Gotama, I do not know an outcast, or the things that make an outcast; le Gotama teach me this so well that I may know an outcast, or the things that make an outcas

'Listen then, O Bramana, attend carefully, I will tell (thee).'

'Even so, O venerable one,' so the Bramana Aggikabharadvaga replied to Bhagavat.

p. 21

Then Bhagavat said this:

1. 'The man who is angry and bears hatred, who is wicked and hypocritical, who has embr who is deceitful, let one know him as an outcast. (115)

2. 'Whosoever in this world harms living beings, whether once or twice born, and in whom compassion for living beings, let one know him as an outcast. (116)

3. 'Whosoever destroys or lays siege to villages and towns, and is known as an enemy, le an outcast. (117)

4. 'Be it in the village or in the wood, whosoever appropriates by theft what is the property

what has not been given, let one know him as an outcast. (118)

5. 'Whosoever, having really contracted a debt, runs away when called upon (to pay), sayi debt (that I owe) thee," let one know him as an outcast. (119)

6. 'Whosoever for love of a trifle having killed a man going along the road, takes the trifle, him as an outcast. (120)

7. 'The man who for his own sake or for that of others or for the sake of wealth speaks fals as a witness, let one know him as an outcast. (121)

8. 'Whosoever is seen with the wives of relatives or of friends either by force or with their c one know him as an outcast. (122)

9. 'Whosoever being rich does not support mother or father when old and past their youth, as an outcast. (123)

10. 'Whosoever strikes or by words annoys mother

p. 22

or father, brother, sister, or mother-in-law, let one know him as an outcast. (124)

11. 'Whosoever, being asked about what is good, teaches what is bad and advises (anoth (something from him), let one know him as an outcast. (125)

12. 'Whosoever, having committed a bad deed, hopes (saying), "Let no one know me" (as is) a dissembler, let one know him as an outcast. (126)

13. 'Whosoever, having gone to another's house and partaken of his good food, does not i when he comes, let one know him as an outcast. (127)

14. 'Whosoever by falsehood deceives either a Brahmana or a Samana or any other menc as an outcast. (128)

15. 'Whosoever by words annoys either a Brahmana or a Samana when meal-time has co anything), let one know him as an outcast. (129)

16. 'Whosoever enveloped in ignorance in this world predicts what is not (to take place), c trifle, let one know him as an outcast. (130)

17. 'Whosoever exalts himself and despises others, being mean by his pride, let one know
(131)

18. 'Whosoever is a provoker and is avaricious, has sinful desires, is envious, wicked, sha fearless of sinning, let one know him as an outcast. (132)

19. 'Whosoever reviles Buddha or his disciple, be he a wandering mendicant (paribbaga) o (gahattha), let one know him as an outcast. (133)

p. 23

20. 'Whosoever without being a saint (arahat) pretends to be a saint, (and is) a thief in all t including that of Brahman, he is indeed the lowest outcast; (all) these who have been descri are indeed called outcasts. (134)

21. 'Not by birth does one become an outcast, not by birth does one become a Bramana; b an outcast, by deeds one becomes a Bramana. (135)

22. 'Know ye this in the way that this example of mine (shows): There was a Kandala of th well known as Matanga. (136)

23. 'This Matanga reached the highest fame, such as was very difficult to obtain, and man
Bramanas went to serve him. (137)

24. 'He having mounted the vehicle of the gods, (and entered) the high road (that is) free f having abandoned sensual desires, went to the Brahma world. (138)

25. 'His birth did not prevent him from being re-born in the Brahma world; (on the other ha
Bramanas, born in the family of preceptors, friends of the hymns (of the Vedas), (139)

26. 'But they are continually caught in sinful deeds, and are to be blamed in this world, whi coming (world) hell (awaits them); birth does not save them from hell nor from blame. (140)

27. '(Therefore) not by birth does one become an outcast, not by birth does one become a one becomes an outcast, by deeds one becomes a Bramana.' (141)

This having been said, the Bramana Aggikabharadvaga answered Bhagavat as follows:

'Excellent, O venerable Gotama! Excellent, O

p. 24

venerable Gotama! As one, O venerable Gotama, raises what has been overthrown, or reve hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma take refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the Dhamma and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus.
Gotama accept me as an upasaka (a follower, me) who henceforth for all my life have taken Vasalasutta is ended.

8. METTASUTTA.

A peaceful mind and goodwill towards all beings are praised.--Text by Grimblot in Journal A (1871), p. 250, and by Childers in Khuddaka Patha, p. 15; translation (?) by Gogerly in the C 1839, p. 211, by Childers in Kh. Patha and by L. Feer in Journal Asiatique, t. xviii (1871), p.
Whatever is to be done by one who is skilful in seeking (what is) good, having attained that t
(of Nibbana):--Let him be able and upright and conscientious and of soft speech, gentle, not

2. And contented and easily supported and having few cares, unburdened and with his se not arrogant, without (showing) greediness (when going his round) in families. (143)

3. And let him not do anything mean for which others who are wise might reprove (him); m happy and secure, may they be happy-minded. (144)

p. 25

4. Whatever living beings there are, either feeble or strong, all either long or great, middleshort, small or large, (145)

5. Either seen or which are not seen, and which live far (or) near, either born or seeking bi creatures be happy-minded. (146)

6. Let no one deceive another, let him not despise (another) in any place, let him not out o resentment wish harm to another. (147)

7. As a mother at the risk of her life watches over her own child, her only child, so also let cultivate a boundless (friendly) mind towards all beings. (148)

8. And let him cultivate goodwill towards all the world, a boundless (friendly) mind, above a across, unobstructed, without hatred, without enmity. (149)

9. Standing, walking or sitting or lying, as long as he be awake, let him devote himself to th
(way of) living they say is the best in this world. (150)

10. He who, not having embraced (philosophical) views, is virtuous, endowed with (perfect subduing greediness for sensual pleasures, will never again go to a mother's womb. (151)

Mettasutta is ended.

9. HEMAVATASUTTA.

A dialogue between two Yakkhas on the qualities of Buddha. They go to Buddha, and after questions answered they, together with ten hundred Yakkhas, become the followers of Budd the fifteenth, a fast day; a lovely

p. 26

night has come,'--so said the Yakkha Satagira,--'let us (go and) see the renowned Master G

2. 'Is the mind of such a one well disposed towards all beings?'--so said the Yakkha Hema thoughts restrained as to things wished for or not wished for?' (153)

3. 'His mind is well disposed towards all beings, (the mind) of such a one,'--so said the Yak
Satagira,--'and his thoughts are restrained as to things wished for or not wished for.' (154)

4. 'Does he not take what has not been given (to him)?'--so said the Yakkha Hemavata,--'i self-controlled (in his behaviour) to living beings? is he far from (a state of) carelessness? do abandon meditation?' (155)

5. 'He does not take what has not been given (to him),'--so said the Yakkha Satagira,--'and self-controlled (in his behaviour) to living beings, and he is far from (a state of) carelessness not abandon meditation.' (156)

6. 'Does he not speak falsely?'--so said the Yakkha Hemavata,--'is he not harsh-spoken? d slander? does he not talk nonsense?' (157)

7. 'He does not speak falsely,'--so said the Yakkha Satagira,--'he is not harsh-spoken, he d slander, with judgment he utters what is good sense.' (158)

8. 'Is he not given to sensual pleasures?'--so said the Yakkha Hemavata,--'is his mind und overcome folly? does he see clearly in (all) things (dhammas)?' (159)

9. 'He is not given to sensual pleasures,'--so said the Yakkha Satagira,--'and his mind is u

he has overcome all folly; Buddha sees clearly in (all) things.' (160)

10. 'Is he endowed with knowledge?'--so said the Yakkha Hemavata,--'is his conduct pure been destroyed? is there no new birth (for him)?' (161)

11. 'He is endowed with knowledge,'--so said the Yakkha Satagira,--'and his conduct is pu passions have been destroyed; there is no new birth for him. (162)

12. 'The mind of the Muni is accomplished in deed and word; Gotama, who is accomplishe and conduct, let us (go and) see. (163)

13. 'Come, let us (go and) see Gotama, who has legs like an antelope, who is thin, who is little food, not covetous, the Muni who is meditating in the forest. (164)

14. 'Having gone to him who is a lion amongst those that wander alone and does not look pleasures, let us ask about the (means of) deliverance from the snares of death. (165)

15. 'Let us ask Gotama, the preacher, the expounder, who has penetrated all things, Budd hatred and fear.' (166)

16. 'In what has the world originated?'--so said the Yakkha Hemavata,--'with what is the w what is the world afflicted, after having grasped at what?' (167)

17. 'In six the world has originated, O Hemavata,'--so said Bhagavat,--'with six it is intimate world is afflicted, after having grasped at six.' (168)

18. Hemavata said: 'What is the grasping by which the world is afflicted? Asked about salvation, tell (me) how one is released from pain?

p. 28

19. Bhagavat said: 'Five pleasures of sense are said to be in the world, with (the pleasure the sixth; having divested oneself of desire for these, one is thus released from pain. (170)

20. 'This salvation of the world has been told to you truly, this I tell you: thus one is release pain.' (171)

21. Hemavata said: 'Who in this world crosses the stream (of existence)? who in this world who does not sink into the deep, where there is no footing and no support?' (172)

22. Bhagavat said: 'He who is always endowed with virtue, possessed of understanding, w reflecting within himself, and thoughtful, crosses the stream that is difficult to cross. (173)

23. 'He who is disgusted with sensual pleasures, who has overcome all bonds and destroy does not sink into the deep.' (174)

24. Hemavata said: 'He who is endowed with a profound understanding, seeing what is su nothing, not clinging to sensual pleasures, behold him who is in every respect liberated, the walking in the divine path. (175)

25. 'He who has got a great name, sees what is subtile, imparts understanding; and does abode of sensual pleasures, behold him, the all-knowing, the wise, the great Isi, walking in t (176)

26. 'A good sight indeed (has met) us to-day, a good daybreak, a beautiful rising, (for) we perfectly enlightened (sambuddham), who has crossed the stream, and is free from passion

27. 'These ten hundred Yakkhas, possessed of supernatural power and of fame, they all ta thou art our incomparable Master. (178)

28. 'We will wander about from village to village, from mountain to mountain, worshipping t enlightened and the perfection of the Dhamma[1].' (179)

Hemavatasutta is ended.

10. ALAVAKASUTTA.

The Yakkha Alavaka first threatens Buddha, then puts some questions to him which Buddh Alavaka is converted. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Alavi, in the realm of the Yakkha Alavaka. Then the Yakkha the place where Bhagavat dwelt, and having gone there he said this to Bhagavat:

'Come out, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out.

'Enter, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat entered.

A second time the Yakkha Alavaka said this to Bhagavat: 'Come out, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out.

'Enter, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat entered.

A third time the Yakkha Alavaka said this Bhagavat: 'Come out, O Samana!'

' Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out.

'Enter, O Samana!'

[1. Dhammassa ka sudhammatam.]

p. 30

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat entered.

A fourth time the Yakkha Alavaka said this to Bhagavat: 'Come out, O Samana!'

'I shall not come out to thee, O friend, do what thou pleasest.'

'I shall ask thee a question, O Samana, if thou canst not answer it, I will either scatter thy t cleave thy heart, or take thee by thy feet and throw thee over to the other shore of the Gang

'I do not see, O friend, any one in this world nor in the world of gods, Maras, Brahmans, ar beings comprising gods, men, Samanas, and Brahmanas, who can either scatter my though take me by the feet and throw me over to the other shore of the Ganga; however, O friend, a pleasest.'

Then the Yakkha Alavaka addressed Bhagavat in stanzas:

1. 'What in this world is the best property for a man? what, being well done, conveys happ indeed the sweetest of sweet things? how lived do they call life the best?' (180)

2. Bhagavat said: 'Faith is in this world the best property for a man; Dhamma, well observe happiness; truth indeed is the sweetest of things; and that life they call the best which is live understanding.' (181)

3. Alavaka said: 'How does one cross the stream (of existence)? how does one cross the s conquer pain? how is one purified?' (182)

4. Bhagavat said: 'By faith one crosses the stream, by zeal the sea, by exertion one conqu understanding one is purified.' (183)

p. 31

5. Alavaka said: 'How does one obtain understanding? how does one acquire wealth? how how does one bind friends (to himself)? how does one not grieve passing away from this wo (184)

6. Bhagavat said: 'He who believes in the Dhamma of the venerable ones as to the acquis will obtain understanding from his desire to hear, being zealous and discerning. (185)

7. 'He who does what is proper, who takes the yoke (upon him and) exerts himself, will ac truth he will obtain fame, and being charitable he will bind friends (to himself). (186)

8. 'He who is faithful and leads the life of a householder, and possesses the following four (virtues), truth, justice (dhamma), firmness, and liberality,--such a one indeed does not griev away. (187)

9. 'Pray, ask also other Samanas and Brahmanas far and wide, whether there is found in t greater than truth, self-restraint, liberality, and forbearance.' (188)

10. Alavaka said: 'Why should I now ask Samanas and Brahmanas far and wide? I now kn good. (189)

11. 'For my good Buddha came to live at Alavi; now I know where (i.e. on whom bestowed great fruit. (190)

12. 'I will wander about from village to village, from town to town, worshipping the perfectly (sambuddha) and the perfection of the Dhamma.' (191)

Alavakasutta is ended.

p. 32

11. VIGAYASUTTA.

A reflection on the worthlessness of the human body; a follower of Buddha only sees the bo and consequently goes to Nibbana.--Comp. Gataka I, p. 146. 1. If either walking or standin lying, any one contracts (or) stretches (his body, then) this is the motion of the body. (192)

2. The body which is put together with bones and sinews, plastered with membrane and fl with skin, is not seen as it really is. (193)

3. It is filled with the intestines, the stomach, the lump of the liver, the abdomen, the heart, the kidneys, the spleen. (194)

4. With mucus, saliva, perspiration, lymph, blood, the fluid that lubricates the joints, bile, ar
(195)

5. Then in nine streams impurity flows always from it; from the eye the eye-excrement, fro ear-excrement, (196)

6. Mucus from the nose, through the mouth it ejects at one time bile and (at other times) it and from (all) the body come sweat and dirt. (197)

7. Then its hollow head is filled with the brain. A fool led by ignorance thinks it a fine thing.

8. And when it lies dead, swollen and livid, discarded in the cemetery, relatives do not care
(199)

9. Dogs eat it and jackals, wolves and worms; crows and vultures eat it, and what other liv
there are. (200)

10. The Bhikkhu possessed of understanding in this world, having listened to Buddha's wo certainly knows it (i.e. the body) thoroughly, for he sees it as it really is. (201)

11. "As this (living body is) so is that (dead one), as this is so that (will be[1]); let one put a desire for the body, both as to its interior and as to its exterior." (202)

12. Such a Bhikkhu who has turned away from desire and attachment, and is possessed o this world, has (already) gone to the immortal peace, the unchangeable state of Nibbana. (2

13. This (body) with two feet is cherished (although) impure, ill-smelling, filled with various stench, and trickling here and there. (204)

14. He who with such a body thinks to exalt himself or despises others--what else (is this) (205)

Vigayasutta is ended.

12. MUNISUTTA.

Definition of a Muni. 1. From acquaintanceship arises fear, from house-life arises defileme houseless state, freedom from acquaintanceship--this is indeed the view of a Muni. (206)

2. Whosoever, after cutting down the (sin that has) arisen, does not let (it again) take root give way to it while springing up towards him, him

[1. Yatha idam tatha etam Yatha etam tatha idam.]

p. 34

the solitarily wandering they call a Muni; such a great Isi has seen the state of peace[1]. (20

3. Having considered the causes (of sin, and) killed the seed, let him not give way to desir a Muni who sees the end of birth and destruction (i.e. Nibbana), after leaving reasoning beh enter the number (of living beings)[2]. (208)

4. He who has penetrated all the resting-places[3] (of the mind, and) does not wish for any a Muni indeed, free from covetousness and free from greediness, does not gather up (restin has reached the other shore. (209)

5. The man who has overcome everything, who knows everything, who is possessed of a undefiled in all things (dhamma), abandoning everything, liberated in the destruction of desir Nibbana), him the wise style a Muni[4]. (210)

6. The man who has the strength of understanding, is endowed with virtue and (holy) work delights in meditation, is thoughtful, free from ties, free from harshness (akhila), and free fro him the wise style a Muni. (211)

7. The Muni that wanders solitarily, the zealous,

[1. Yo gatam ukkhigga na ropayeyya
Gayantam assa nanuppavekkhe
Tam ahu ekam muninam karantam,
Addakkhi so santipadam mahesi.

2. Samkhaya vatthuni pamaya bigam
Sineham assa nanuppavekkhe,
Sa ve muni gatikhayantadassi
Takkam pahaya na upeti samkham.

3. Nivesanani. Comp. Dutthaka, v. 6.

4. Comp. .]

p. 35

that is not shaken by blame and praise, like a lion not trembling at noises, like the wind not c
net, like a lotus not soiled by water, leading others, not led by others, him the wise style a M

8. Whosoever becomes firm as the post in a bathing-place, in whom others acknowledge p who is free from passion, and (endowed) with well-composed senses, such a one the wise s

9. Whosoever is firm, like a straight shuttle, and is disgusted with evil actions, reflecting on just and unjust, him the wise style a Muni. (214)

10. Whosoever is self-restrained and does not do evil, is a young or middle-aged Muni, se that should not be provoked (as) he does not provoke any, him the wise style a Muni. (215)

11. Whosoever, living upon what is given by others, receives a lump of rice from the top, fr or from the rest (of the vessel, and) does not praise (the giver) nor speak harsh words, him t Muni. (216)

12. The Muni that wanders about abstaining from sexual intercourse, who in his youth is n case, is abstaining from the insanity of pride, liberated, him the wise style a Muni. (217)

13. The man who, having penetrated the world, sees the highest truth, such a one, after cr and sea (of existence), who has cut off all ties, is independent, free from passion, him indee
a Muni. (218)

14. Two whose mode of life and occupation are quite different, are not equal: a household wife, and an unselfish virtuous man. A householder (is intent) upon the destruction of other living creatures, being unrestrained; but a Muni always protects living creatures, being (219)

p. 36

15. As the crested bird with the blue neck (the peacock) never attains the swiftness of the householder does not equal a Bhikkhu, a secluded Muni meditating in the wood. (220)

Munisutta is ended.

Uragavagga is ended.

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and
sacred-texts.com

p. 37

II. KULAVAGGA.

1. RATANASUTTA.

For all beings salvation is only to be found in Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha.--Text and tra Childers' Khuddaka Patha, p. 6. 1. Whatever spirits have come together here, either belong or living in the air, let all spirits be happy, and then listen attentively to what is said. (221)

2. Therefore, O spirits, do ye all pay attention, show kindness to the human race who both bring their offerings; therefore protect them strenuously. (222)

3. Whatever wealth there be here or in the other world, or whatever excellent jewel in the h certainly not equal to Tathagata. This excellent jewel (is found) in Buddha, by this truth may salvation. (223)

4. The destruction (of passion), the freedom from passion, the excellent immortality which attained (being) composed,--there is nothing equal to that Dhamma. This excellent jewel (is Dhamma, by this truth may there be salvation. (224)

5. The purity which the best of Buddhas praised, the meditation which they call uninterrupt meditation like this. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Dhamma, by this truth may there be salvation. (225)

6. The eight persons that are praised by the righteous[1], and make these four pairs, they offerings, (being) Sugata's disciples; what is given to these will bear great fruit. This excellen found) in the Assembly (sangha), by this truth may there be salvation. (226)

7. Those who have applied themselves studiously with a firm mind and free from desire to of Gotama, have obtained the highest gain, having merged into immortality, and enjoying ha getting it for nothing. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there (227)

8. As a post in the front of a city gate is firm in the earth and cannot be shaken by the four that I declare the righteous man to be who, having penetrated the noble truths, sees (them c excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation. (228)

9. Those who understand the noble truths well taught by the profoundly wise (i.e. Buddha) greatly distracted, will not (have to) take the eighth birth. This excellent jewel (is found) in the by this truth may there be salvation. (229)

10. On his (attaining the) bliss of (the right) view three things (dhammas) are left behind (b conceit and doubt and whatever he has got of virtue and (holy) works. He is released also fr and he is incapable of committing the six

[1. The Commentator: satam pasattha ti sappurisehi buddhapakkekabuddhasavakehi anneh pasattha.]

p. 39

deadly sins. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salva

11. Even if he commit a sinful deed by his body, or in word or in thought, he is incapable o it, (for) to conceal is said to be impossible for one that has seen the state (of Nibbana). This jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation. (231)

12. As in a clump of trees with their tops in bloom in the first heat of the hot month, so (Bu the excellent Dhamma leading to Nibbana to the greatest benefit (for all). This excellent jewe Buddha, by this truth may there be salvation. (232)

13. The excellent one who knows what is excellent, who gives what is excellent, and who excellent, the incomparable one taught the excellent Dhamma. This excellent jewel (is found this truth may there be salvation. (233)

14. The old is destroyed, the new has not arisen, those whose minds are disgusted with a the wise who have destroyed their seeds (of existence, and) whose desires do not increase, lamp. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation. (2

15. Whatever spirits have come together here, either belonging to the earth or living in the worship the perfect (tathagata) Buddha, revered by gods and men; may there be salvation. (

16. Whatever spirits have come together here, either belonging to the earth or living in the worship the perfect (tathagata) Dhamma, revered by gods and men; may there be salvatlon.

17. Whatever spirits have come together here,

p. 40

either belonging to the earth or living in the air, let us worship the perfect (tathagata) Sangha gods and men; may there be salvation. (237)

Ratanasutta is ended.

2. AMAGANDHASUTTA.

A bad mind and wicked deeds are what defiles a man; no outward observances can purify h
Amagandhabrahmana: 'Those who eat samaka, kingulaka, and kinaka, pattaphala, mulapha (different sorts of grass, leaves, roots, &c.), justly obtained of the just, do not speak falsehoo they) desirous of sensual pleasures. (238)

2. 'He who eats what has been well prepared, well dressed, what is pure and excellent, giv who enjoys food made of rice, eats, O Kassapa, Amagandha (what defiles one). (239)

3. '(The charge of) Amagandha does not apply to me,' so thou sayest, 'O Brahman (brahm enjoying food (made) of rice together with the well-prepared flesh of birds. I ask thee, O Kas meaning of this, of what description (is then) thy Amagandha?' (240)

4. Kassapabuddha: 'Destroying living beings, killing, cutting, binding, stealing, speaking fa and deception, worthless reading[1], intercourse with another's wife;--this is Amagandha, bu of flesh. (241)

[1. Agghenakuggan ti niratthakanatthaganakaganthapariyapunanam. Commentator.]

p. 41

5. 'Those persons who in this world are unrestrained in (enjoying) sensual pleasures, gree things, associated with what is impure, sceptics (natthikaditthi), unjust, difficult to follow;--this Amagandha, but not the eating of flesh. (242)

6. 'Those who are rough, harsh, backbiting, treacherous, merciless, arrogant, and (who be not give anything to any one;--this is Amagandha, but not the eating of flesh. (243)

7. 'Anger, intoxication, obstinacy, bigotry, deceit, envy, grandiloquence, pride and conceit, the unjust;--this is Amagandha, but not the eating of flesh. (244)

8. 'Those who in this world are wicked, and such as do not pay their debts, are slanderers dealings, counterfeiters, those who in this world being the lowest of men commit sin;--this is not the eating of flesh. (245)

9. 'Those persons who in this world are unrestrained (in their behaviour) towards living cre bent upon injuring after taking others' (goods), wicked, cruel, harsh, disrespectful;--this is An
not the eating of flesh. (246)

10. 'Those creatures who are greedy of these (living beings, who are) hostile, offending; al (evil) and therefore, when dead, go to darkness and fall with their heads downwards into hel
Amagandha, but not the eating of flesh. (247)

11. 'Neither the flesh of fish, nor fasting, nor nakedness, nor tonsure, nor matted hair, nor rough skins, nor the worshipping of the fire, nor the many immortal penances in the world, n oblations, nor sacrifice, nor observance of the seasons, purify a mortal who has not conquered his doubt[1]. (248)

p. 42

12. 'The wise man wanders about with his organs of sense guarded, and his senses conqu in the Dhamma, delighting in what is right and mild; having overcome all ties and left behind does not cling to what is seen and heard.' (249)

13. Thus Bhagavat preached this subject again and again, (and the Brahmana) who was a hymns (of the Vedas) understood it; the Muni who is free from defilement, independent, and follow, made it clear in various stanzas. (250)

14. Having heard Buddha's well-spoken words, which are free from defilement and send a worshipped Tathagata's (feet) in humility, and took orders at once. (251)

Amagandhasutta is ended.

3. HIRISUTTA.

On true frendship. 1. He who transgresses and despises modesty, who says, 'I am a friend undertake any work that can be done, know (about) him: 'he is not my (friend).' (252)

2. Whosoever uses pleasing words to friends without effect[2], him the wise know as one t

but does not do anything. (253)

3. He is not a friend who always eagerly suspects a breach and looks out for faults; but he dwells as a son at the breast (of his mother),

[1. Comp. .

2. Ananvayan ti yam attham dassami karissamiti bhasati tena ananugatam. Commentator.]

p. 43

he is indeed a friend that cannot be severed (from him) by others. (254)

4. He who hopes for fruit, cultivates the energy that produces joy and the pleasure that bri (while) carrying the human yoke[1]. (255)

5. Having tasted the sweetness of seclusion and tranquillity one becomes free from fear a drinking in the sweetness of the Dhamma[2]. (256)

Hirisutta is ended.

4. MAHAMANGALASUTTA.

Buddha defines the highest blessing to a deity.--Text by Grimblot in Journal Asiatique, t. xvi 229, and by Childers in Kh. Patha, p. 4; translation by Gogerly in the Ceylon Friend, 1839, p Childers in Kh. Patha, p. 4; and by L. Feer in Journal Asiatique, t. xviii (1871), p. 296. So it by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then, gone, a deity of beautiful appearance, having illuminated the whole Getavana, approached approached and saluted him, he stood apart, and standing apart that deity addressed Bhaga

1. 'Many gods and men have devised blessings, longing for happiness, tell thou (me) the h (257)

2. Buddha said: 'Not cultivating (the society of)

[1. Pamuggakaranam thanam
Pasamsavahanam sukham
Phalanisamso[*] bhaveti
Vahanto porisam dhuram.

2. Comp. .

*. Phalam patikankhamano phalanisamso. Commentator.]

p. 44

fools, but cultivating (the society of) wise men, worshipping those that are to be worshipped, highest blessing. (258)

3. 'To live in a suitable country, to have done good deeds in a former (existence), and a th one's self, this is the highest blessing. (259)

4. 'Great learning and skill, well-learnt discipline, and well-spoken words, this is the highes
(260)

5. 'Waiting on mother and father, protecting child and wife, and a quiet calling, this is the h blessing. (261)

6. 'Giving alms, living religiously, protecting relatives, blameless deeds, this is the highest (262)

7. 'Ceasing and abstaining from sin, refraining from intoxicating drink, perseverance in the is the highest blessing. (263)

8. 'Reverence and humility, contentment and gratitude, the hearing of the Dhamma at due
the highest blessing. (264)

9. 'Patience and pleasant speech, intercourse with Samanas, religious conversation at due
the highest blessing. (265)

10. 'Penance and chastity, discernment of the noble truths, and the realisation of Nibbana,
highest blessing. (266)

11. 'He whose mind is not shaken (when he is) touched by the things of the world (lokadha remains) free from sorrow, free from defilement, and secure, this is the highest blessing. (26

12. 'Those who, having done such (things), are undefeated in every respect, walk in safety theirs is the highest blessing.' (268)

Mahamangala is ended.

p. 45

5. SUKILOMASUTTA.

The Yakkha Sukiloma threatens to harm Buddha, if he cannot answer his questions. Buddh passions proceed from the body. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Gaya (seated) on a stone seat in the realm of the Yakkha S that time the Yakkha Khara and the Yakkha Sukiloma passed by, not far from Bhagavat. An said this to the Yakkha Sukiloma: 'Is this man a Samana?'

Sukiloma answered: 'He is no Samana, he is a Samanaka (a wretched Samana); howeve he is a Samana or a Samanaka.'

Then the Yakkha Sukiloma went up to Bhagavat, and having gone up to him, he brushed a body. Then Bhagavat took away his body. Then the Yakkha Sukiloma said this to Bhagavat: afraid of me?'

Bhagavat answered: 'No, friend, I am not afraid of thee, but thy touching me is sinful.'

Sukiloma said: 'I will ask thee a question, O Samana; if thou canst not answer it I will eithe thoughts or cleave thy heart, or take thee by the feet and throw thee over to the other shore

Bhagavat answered: 'I do not see, O friend, neither in this world together with the world of Maras, Brahmans, nor amongst the generation of Samana and Brahmanas, gods and men, scatter my thoughts or cleave my heart, or take me by the feet and throw me over to the other shore of the Ganga. However ask, O friend, what thou pleasest.' Then the Yakk addressed Bhagavat in a stanza:

1. ' What origin have passion and hatred, disgust, delight, and horror? wherefrom do they arising do doubts vex the mind, as boys vex a crow?' (269)

2. Buddha said: 'Passion and hatred have their origin from this (body), disgust, delight, an from this body; arising from this (body) doubts vex the mind, as boys vex a crow. (270)

3. 'They originate in desire, they arise in self, like the shoots of the banyan tree; far and wi connected, with sensual pleasures, like the maluva creeper spread in the wood. (271)

4. 'Those who know whence it (sin) arises, drive it away. Listen, O Yakkha! They cross ov that is difficult to cross, and has not been crossed before, with a view to not being born agai Sukilomasutta is ended.

6. DHAMMAKARIYASUTTA OR KAPILASUTTA.

The Bhikkhus are admonished to rid themselves of sinful persons and advised to lead a pu life, a religious life, this they call the best gem, if any one has gone forth from house-life to a life. (273)

2. But if he be harsh-spoken, and like a beast delighting in injuring (others), then the life of is very wicked, and he increases his own pollution. (274)

3. A Bhikkhu who delights in quarrelling and is shrouded in folly, does not understand the preached and taught by Buddha. (275)

4. Injuring his own cultivated mind, and led by ignorance, he does not understand that sin leading to hell. (276)

5. Having gone to calamity, from womb to womb, from darkness to darkness, such a Bhikk passing away, goes to pain. (277)

6. As when there is a pit of excrement (that has become) full during a number of years,--he such a one full of sin is difficult to purify. (278)

7. Whom you know to be such a one, O Bhikkhus, (a man) dependent on a house, having thoughts, and being with sinful deeds and objects, (279)

8. Him do avoid, being all in concord; blow him away as sweepings, put him away as rubb

9. Then remove as chaff those that are no Samanas, (but only) think themselves, blowing have sinful desires and those with sinful deeds and objects. (281)

10. Be pure and live together with the pure, being thoughtful; then agreeing (and) wise you to pain. (282)

Dhammakariyasutta is ended.

7. BRAHMANADMAMMIKASUTTA.

Wealthy Brahmanas come to Buddha, asking about the customs of the ancient Brahmanas.
mode of life and the change wrought in them by seeing the king's riches, and furthermore, h king to commit the sin ofp. 48

having living creatures slain at sacrifices. On hearing Buddha's enlightened discourse the w are converted. Compare Sp. Hardy's Legends, p. 46. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then m Brahmanas of Kosala, decrepit, elderly, old, advanced in age, or arrived at extreme old age, and having gone to him they talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant with him, they sat down apart. Sitting down apart these wealthy Brahmanas said this to Bhag Gotama, are the Brahmanas now-a-days seen (engaged) in the Brahmanical customs (dhar Brahmanas?'

Bhagavat answered: 'The Brahmanas now-a-days, O Brahmanas, are not seen (engaged) customs of the ancient Brahmanas.'

The Brahmanas said: 'Let the venerable Gotama tell us the Brahmanical customs of the an it is not inconvenient to the venerable Gotama.'

Bhagavat answered: 'Then listen, O Brahmanas, pay great attention, I will speak.'

'Yes,' so saying the wealthy Brahmanas listened to Bhagavat. Bhagavat said this:

1. The old sages (isayo) were self-restrained, penitent; having abandoned the objects of th they studied their own welfare. (283)

2. There were no cattle for the Brahmanas, nor gold, nor corn, (but) the riches and corn of for them, and theey kept watch over the best treasure. (284)

p. 49

3. What was prepared for them and placed as food at the door, they thought was to be giv seek for what has been prepared by faith. (285)

4. With garments variously coloured, with beds and abodes, prosperous people from the p whole country worshipped those Brahmanas. (286)

5. Inviolable were the Brahmanas, invincible, protected by the Dhamma, no one opposed t at the doors of the houses anywhere. (287)

6. For forty-eight years they practised juvenile chastity, the Brahmanas formerly went in se and exemplary conduct. (288)

7. The Brahmanas did not marry (a woman belonging to) another (caste), nor did they buy living together in mutual love after having come together. (289)

8. Excepting from the time about the cessation of the menstruation else the Brahmanas di sexual intercourse[1]. (290)

9. They praised chastity and virtue, rectitude, mildness, penance, tenderness, compassion
(291)

10. He who was the best of them, a strong Brahmana, did not (even) in sleep indulge in se (292)

11. Imitating his practices some wise men in this world praised chastity and patience. (293

12. Having asked for rice, beds, garments, butter. and oil, and gathered them justly, they r

[1. Annatra tamha samaya Utuveramanim pati
Antara methunam dhammam Nasu gakkhanti brahmana.]

out of them, and when the sacrifice came on, they did not kill cows. (294)

13. Like unto a mother, a father, a brother, and other relatives the cows are our best frienc medicines are produced. (295)

14. They give food, and they give strength, they likewise give (a good) complexion and ha the real state of this, they did not kill cows. (296)

15. They were graceful, large, handsome, renowned, Brahmanas by nature, zealous for th long as they lived in the world, this race prospered. (297)

16. But there was a change in them: after gradually seeing the king's prosperity and adorn

17. Well-made chariots drawn by noble horses, carpets in variegated colours, palaces anc into compartments and measured out, (299)

18. The great human wealth, attended with a number of cows, and combined with a flock c the Brahmanas became covetous. (300)

19. They then, in this matter, having composed hymns, went to Okkaka, and said: 'Thou h corn, sacrifice thy great property, sacrifice thy great wealth.' (301)

20. And then the king, the lord of chariots, instructed by the Brahmanas, brought about ass purisamedha, sammapasa, and vakapeyya without any hinderance, and having offered thes

Brahmanas wealth: (302)

21. Cows, beds, garments, and adorned women, and well-made chariots, drawn by noble variegated colours, (303)

p. 51

22. Beautiful palaces, well divided into compartments; and having filled these with differen corn, he gave this wealth to the Brahmanas. (304)

23. And they having thus received wealth wished for a store, and the desire of those who l (their) wishes increased still more; they then, in this matter, having composed hymns, went a and said: (305)

24. 'As water, earth, gold, wealth, and corn, even so are there cows for men, for this is a re living beings; sacrifice thy great property, sacrifice thy wealth.' (306)

25. And then the king, the lord of chariots, instructed by the Brahmanas, caused many hur to be slain in offerings. (307)

26. The cows, that are like goats, do not hurt any one with their feet or with either of their h are tender, and yield vessels (of milk),--seizing them by the horns the king caused them to b weapon. (308)

27. Then the gods, the forefathers, Inda, the Asuras, and the Rakkhasas cried out: 'This is because of the weapon falling on the cows. (309)

28. There were formerly three diseases: desire, hunger, and decay, but from the slaying o came ninety-eight. (310)

29. This injustice of (using) violence that has come down (to us), was old; innocent (cows) sacrificing (priests) have fallen off from the Dhamma. (311)

30. So this old and mean Dhamma is blamed by the wise; where people see such a one, t sacrificing priest. (312)

p. 52

31. So Dhamma being lost, the Suddas and the Vessikas disagreed, the Khattiyas disagre the wife despised her husband. (313)

32. The Khattiyas and the Brahmanas and those others who had been protected by their c away with their disputes on descent, fell into the power of sensual pleasures. (314)

This having been said, those wealthy Brahmanas said to Bhagavat as follows:

'It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises wh overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, c lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable G
ways the Dhamma has been illustrated; we take refuge in the venerable Gotama, in the Dha Assembly of Bhikkhus; may the venerable Gotama receive us as followers (upasaka), who f have taken refuge (in him).'

Brahmanadhammikasutta is ended.

8. NAVASUTTA.

On choosing a good and learned teacher. 1. A man should worship him from whom he lea gods (worship) Inda; the learned man being worshipped and pleased with him, makes the (h manifest. (315)

2. Having heard and considered that (Dhamma), the wise man practising the Dhamma tha accordance with the (highest) Dhamma, becomes learned, expert, and skilful, strenuously a a (learned teacher). (316)

3. He who serves a low (teacher), a fool who has not understood the meaning, and who is death, not having overcome doubt, and not having understood the Dhamma. (317)

4. As a man, after descending into a river, a turgid water with a rapid current, is borne alon the current,--how will he be able to put others across? (318)

5. Even so how will a man, not having understood the Dhamma, and not attending to the e learned and not knowing it himself, not having overcome doubt, be able to make others und

6. As one, having gone on board a strong ship, provided with oars and rudder, carries acro others, knowing the way to do it, and being expert and thoughtful, (320)

7. So also he who is accomplished, of a cultivated mind, learned, intrepid, makes others e attention and assiduity understand it, knowing (it himself). (321)

8. Therefore indeed one should cultivate (the society of) a good man, who is intelligent and who leads a regular life, having understood what is good and penetrated the Dhamma, will c (322)

Navasutta is ended.

p. 54

9. KIMSILASUTTA.

How to obtain the highest good. 1. By what virtue, by what conduct, and performing what w be perfectly established (in the commandments) and obtain the highest good? (323)

2. Let him honour old people, not be envious, let him know the (right) time for seeing his te him know the (right) moment for listening to their religious discourses, let him assiduously he well-spoken (words). (324)

3. Let him in due time go to the presence of his teachers, let him be humble after casting a let him remember and practise what is good, the Dhamma, self-restraint, and chastity. (325)

4. Let his pleasure be the Dhamma, let him delight in the Dhamma, let him stand fast in th know how to enquire into the Dhamma, let him not raise any dispute that pollutes the Dhamm his time in (speaking) well-spoken truths[1]. (326)

5. Having abandoned ridiculous talk, lamentation, corruption, deceit, hypocrisy, greedines haughtiness, clamour and harshness, depravity and foolishness, let him live free from infatu steady mind. (327)

6. The words, the essence of which is understood, are well spoken, and what is heard, if u contains the essence of meditation; but the understanding and learning of the man who is ha does not increase. (328)

[1. Comp. .]

p. 55

7. Those who delight in the Dhamma, proclaimed by the venerable ones, are unsurpassed work, they are established in peace, tenderness and meditation, and have gone to the essen understanding. (329)

Kimsilasutta is ended.

10. UTTHANASUTTA.

Advice not to be lukewarm and slothful. 1. Rise, sit up, what is the use of your sleeping; to sick, pierced by the arrow (of pain), and suffering, what sleep is there? (330)

2. Rise, sit up, learn steadfastly for the sake of peace, let not the king of death, knowing yo indolent (pamatta), befool you and lead you into his power. (331)

3. Conquer this desire which gods and men stand wishing for and are dependent upon, let moment pass by you; for those who have let the (right) moment pass, will grieve when they to hell. (332)

4. Indolence (pamada) is defilement, continued indolence is defilement; by earnestness (a knowledge let one pull out his arrow. (333)

Utthanasutta is ended.

11. RAHULASUTTA.

Buddha recommends the life of a recluse to Rahula, and admonishes him to turn his mind a and to be moderate. 1. Bhagavat said: 'Dost thou not despise the wise man, from living wit Is he

p. 56

who holds up a torch to mankind honoured by thee?' (334)

2. Rahula: 'I do not despise the wise man, from living with him constantly; he who holds up mankind is always honoured by me.' (335)

Vatthugatha.

3. Bhagavat: 'Having abandoned the objects of the five senses, the beautiful, the charming from thy house with faith, do thou put an end to pain. (336)

4. 'Cultivate (the society of) virtuous friends and a distant dwelling-place, secluded and qu moderate in food[1]. (337)

5. 'Robes, alms (in bowl), requisites (for the sick), a dwelling-place,--do not thirst after thes (things), that thou mayest not go back to the world again. (338)

6. 'Be subdued according to the precepts, and as to the five senses, be attentive as regard be full of disgust (with the world). (339)

7. 'Avoid signs, what is pleasant and is accompanied with passion, turn thy mind undisturb composed to what is not pleasant. (340)

8. 'Cherish what is signless, leave the inclinations for pride; then by destroying pride thou s calm.' (341)

So Bhagavat repeatedly admomshed the venerable Rahula with these stanzas.

Rahulasutta is ended.

[1. Mitte bhagassu kalyane
Pantan ka sayanasanam
Vivittam appanigghosam,

Mattannu hohi bhogane.
Comp. Dhp. and .]

p. 57

12. VANGISASUTTA.

Vangisa desires to know the fate of Nigrodhakappa, whether he has been completely exting is still with some elements of existence left behind. He is answered by Buddha. So it was h

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Alavi, in the temple of Aggalava. At that time the teacher of Vangisa, the Thera, by name Nigrodhakappa, had attained bliss not long before (akiraparinil reflection occurred to the venerable Vangisa, while retired and meditating:

Whether my teacher be blessed (parinibbuta) or whether he be not blessed. Then the ven the evening time, coming forth from his retirement went to Bhagavat, and having gone to hin after saluting him, and sitting down apart the venerable Vangisa said this to Bhagavat:

'Lord, while retired and meditating, this reflection occurred to me here: Whether my teache whether he be not blessed.'

Then the venerable Vangisa, rising from his seat, throwing his robe over one shoulder and joined hands towards Bhagavat, addressed him in stanzas:

1. 'We ask the Master of excellent understanding: he who in this world had cut off doubt, d a Bhikkhu, well known, famous, and of a calm mind. (342)

2. 'The name "Nigrodhakappa" was given to that Brahmana by thee, O Bhagavat; he wand

p. 58

about worshipping thee, having liberation in view, strong, and seeing Nibbana. (343)

3. 'O Sakka, thou all-seeing, we all wish to learn (something about) this disciple; our ears a hear, thou art our Master, thou art incomparable. (344)

4. 'Cut off our doubt, tell me of him, inform us of the blessed, O thou of great understandin the midst of us, O thou all-seeing, as the thousand-eyed Sakka (speaks in the midst) of the

5. 'Whatever ties there are in this world (constituting) the way to folly, combined with ignor
the seat of doubt, they do not exist before Tathagata, for he is the best eye of men. (346)

6. 'If a man does not for ever dispel the sin as the wind (dispels) a mass of clouds, all the enveloped in darkness, not even illustrious men will shine. (347)

7. 'Wise men are light-bringers, therefore, O wise man, I consider thee as such a one; we who beholds meditation, reveal Kappa to us in the assembly. (348)

8. 'Uplift quickly, O thou beautiful one, thy beautiful voice, like the swans drawing up (their softly with a rich and well-modulated voice; we will all listen to thee attentively. (349)

9. 'Having earnestly called upon him who has completely left birth and death behind and s will make him proclaim the Dhamma, for ordinary people cannot do what they want, but the purpose[1]. (350)

[1. Pahinagatimaranam asesam
Niggayha dhonam vadessami dhammam,
Na kamakaro hi puthugganam Samkheyyakaro ka tathagatanam.]

p. 59

10. 'This full explanation by thee, the perfectly wise, is accepted, this last clasping of the h well bent, O thou of high wisdom, knowing (Kappa's transmigration), do not delude us[1]. (35

11. ' Having perfectly[2] comprehended the Dhamma of the venerable ones, do not delude unsurpassed strength, knowing (everything); as one in the hot season pained by the heat (lo
I long for thy words; send a shower of learning. (352)

12. 'The rich religious life which Kappayana led, has not that been in vain (to him), has he (completely) extinguished; or is he still with some elements of existence (left behind)? How h that we want to hear.' (353)

13. Bhagavat: 'He cut off the desire for name and form in this world,'--so said Bhagavat,--'

Mara's) stream, adhered to for a long time, he crossed completely birth and death,' so said B of the five (Brahmanas, pankavaggiya). (354)

14. Vangisa: 'Having heard thy word, O thou the best of the Isis, I am pleased; not in vain the Brahmana did not deceive me. (355)

15. 'As he talked so he acted, he was a (true) disciple of Buddha, he cut asunder the outsp of deceitful death. (356)

16. 'Kappiya (Kappayana) saw, O Bhagavat, the beginning

[1. Sampannaveyyakaranam tava-y-idam Samuggupannassa samuggahitam,
Ayam angali pakkhimo suppanamito,
Ma mohayi ganam anomapanna.

2. Parovaran ti lokuttaralokiyavasena sundarasundaram dure santikam va. Commentator.]

p. 60

of attachment, Kappayana verily crossed the realm of death, which is very difficult to cross.'

Vangisasutta is ended.

13. SAMMAPARIBBAGANIYASUTTA.

The right path for a Bhikkhu. 1. 'We will ask the Muni of great understanding, who has cros other shore, is blessed (parinibbuta), and of a firm mind: How does a Bhikkhu wander rightly after having gone out from his house and driven away desire?' (358)

2. 'He whose (ideas of) omens, meteors, dreams and signs are destroyed,'--so said Bhaga
Bhikkhu who has abandoned the sinful omens, wanders rightly in the world. (359)

3. 'Let the Bhikkhu subdue his passion for human and divine pleasures, then after conque understanding the Dhamma, such a one will wander rightly in the world. (360)

4. 'Let the Bhikkhu, after casting behind him slander and anger, abandon avarice and be fr compliance and opposition, then such a one will wander rightly in the world. (361)

5. 'He who having left behind both what is agreeable and what is disagreeable, not seizing is independent in every respect and liberated from bonds, such a one will wander rightly in th

6. 'He does not see any essence in the Upadhis, having subdued his wish and passion for he is independent and not to be led by others, such a one will wander rightly in the world[1].

7. 'He who is not opposed (to any one) in word, thought or deed, who, after having unders perfectly, longs for the state of Nibbana, such a one will wander rightly in the world. (364)

8. 'He who thinking "he salutes me" is not elated, the Bhikkhu who, although abused, does it, and) having received food from others does not get intoxicated (with pride), such a one wi rightly in the world. (365)

9. 'The Bhikkhu who, after leaving behind covetousness and existence, is disgusted with c
(others), he who has overcome doubt, and is without pain, such a one will wander rightly in t

10. 'And knowing what becomes him, the Bhikkhu will not harm any one in the world, unde thoroughly, such a one will wander rightly in the world. (367)

11. 'He to whom there are no affections whatsoever, whose sins are extirpated from the ro desire and not longing (for anything), such a one will wander rightly in the world. (368)

12. 'He whose passions have been destroyed, who is free from pride, who has overcome a passion, is subdued, perfectly happy (parinibbuta), and of a firm mind, such a one will wand
world. (369)

13. 'The believer, possessed of knowledge, seeing

[1. Na so upadhisu saram eti
Adanesu vineyya khandaragam
So anissito anannaneyyo Samma so.]

the way (leading to Nibbana), who is no partisan amongst the partisans (of the sixty-two phil wise after subduing covetousness, anger, such a one will wander rightly in the world. (370)

14. 'He who is pure and victorious, who has removed the veil (of the world), who is subdue has gone to the other shore, is without desire, and skilled in the knowledge of the cessation Samkharas, such a one will wander rightly in the world. (371)

15. 'He who has overcome time (kappatita) in the past and in the future, is of an exceeding understanding, liberated from all the dwelling-places (of the mind), such a one will wander ri
world. (372)

16. 'Knowing the step (of the four truths), understanding the Dhamma, seeing clearly the a passions, destroying all the elements of existence (upadhi), such a one will wander rightly in (373)

17. 'Certainly, O Bhagavat, it is so: whichever Bhikkhu lives in this way, subdued and havi bonds, such a one will wander rightly in the world.' (374)

Sammaparibbaganiyasutta is ended.

14. DHAMMIKASUTTA.

Buddha shows Dhammika what the life of a Bhikkhu and what the life of a householder oug heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then th (upasaka) Dhammika, together with five hundred followers, went to Bhagavat, and having gone to Bhagavat and saluted him, he sat down apart the follower Dhammika addressed Bhagavat in stanzas:

1. 'I ask thee, O Gotama of great understanding, How is a Savaka (disciple) to act to be a the one who goes from his house to the wilderness, or the followers with a house? (375)

2. 'For thou knowest the doings of this world and that of the gods, and the final end; there thee seeing the subtle meaning (of things); they call thee the excellent Buddha. (376)

3. 'Knowing all knowledge thou hast revealed the Dhamma, having compassion on creatu
the veil (of the world), thou art all-seeing, thou shinest spotless in all the world. (377)

4. 'The king of elephants, Eravana by name, hearing that thou wert Gina (the Conqueror), presence, and having conversed with thee he went away delighted, after listening (to thee, a good!" (378)

5. 'Also king Vessavana Kuvera came to ask thee about the Dhamma; him, too, thou, O w
when asked, and he also after listening was delighted. (379)

6. 'All these disputatious Titthiyas and Agivikas and Niganthas do not any of them overcom understanding, as a man standing (does not overcome) the one that is walking quickly. (380

7. 'All these disputatious Brahmanas, and there are even some old Brahmanas, all are bou and others also that are considered disputants. (381)

8. 'This subtle and pleasant Dhamma that has been well proclaimed by thee, O Bhagavat, and which we all long to hear, do thou, O thou b speak to us when asked. (382)

p. 64

9. 'Let all these Bhikkhus and also Upasakas that have sat down to listen, hear the Dhamm
(anubuddha) by the stainless (Buddha), as the gods (hear) the well-spoken (words) of Vasav

10. Bhagavat: 'Listen to me, O Bhikkhus, I will teach you the Dhamma that destroys sin, d of you; let him who looks for what is salutary, the thoughtful, cultivate the mode of life suitab Pabbagitas. (384)

11. 'Let not the Bhikkhu walk about at a wrong time, let him go to the village for alms at the for ties ensnare the one that goes at a wrong time, therefore Buddhas do not go at a wrong

12. 'Form, sound, taste, smell, and touch which intoxicate creatures, having subdued the c these things (dhammas), let him in due time go in for his breakfast. (386)

13. 'And let the Bhikkhu, after having obtained his food at the right time and returned, sit d privately; reflecting within himself let him not turn his mind to outward things, (but be) self-co (387)

14. 'If he speak with a Savaka or with anybody else, or with a Bhikkhu, let him talk about th
Dhamma, (but let him) not (utter) slander, nor blaming words against others. (388)

15. 'For some utter language contradicting others[1]; those narrow-minded ones we do not

[1. Vadam hi eke patiseniyanti = virugghanti yugghitukama hutva senaya patimukham gakkh Commentator.]

from here and there ensnare them, and they send their mind far away in that (dispute). (389

16. 'Let a Savaka of him with the excellent understanding (Buddha), after hearing the Dha
Sugata, discriminately seek for food, a monastery, a bed and a chair, and water for taking av his clothes. (390)

17. 'But without clinging to these things, to food, to bed and chair, to water for taking away his clothes, let a Bhikkhu be like a waterdrop on a lotus. (391)

18. 'A householder's work I will also tell you, how a Savaka is to act to be a good one; for t Bhikkhu-dhamma cannot be carried out by one who is taken up by (worldly) occupations. (39

19. 'Let him not kill, nor cause to be killed any living being, nor let him approve of others ki after having refrained from hurting all creatures, both those that are strong and those that tre
world. (393)

20. 'Then let the Savaka abstain from (taking) anything in any place that has not been give knowing (it to belong to another), let him not cause any one to take, nor approve of those tha avoid all (sort of) theft. (394)

21. ' Let the wise man avoid an unchaste life as a burning heap of coals; not being able to chastity, let him not transgress with another man's wife. (395)

22. 'Let no one speak falsely to another in the hall of justice or in the hall of the assembly, cause (any one) to speak (falsely), nor approve of those that speak (falsely), let him avoid al untruth. (396)

p. 66

23. 'Let the householder who approves of this Dhamma, not give himself to intoxicating dri cause others to drink, nor approve of those that drink, knowing it to end in madness. (397)

24. 'For through intoxication the stupid commit sins and make other people intoxicated; let seat of sin, this madness, this folly, delightful to the stupid. (398)

25. 'Let him not kill any living being, let him not take what has not been given (to him), let h speak falsely, and let him not drink intoxicating drinks, let him refrain from unchaste sexual i and let him not at night eat untimely food. (399)

26. 'Let him not wear wreaths nor use perfumes, let him lie on a couch spread on the earth the eightfold abstinence (uposatha), proclaimed by Buddha, who has overcome pain. (400)

27. 'Then having with a believing mind kept abstinence (uposatha) on the fourteenth, fiftee eighth days of the half-month, and (having kept) the complete Patiharakapakkha[1] consistin (401)

28. 'And then in the morning, after having kept abstinence, let a wise man with a believing gladdening the assembly of Bhikkhus with food and drink, make distributions according to hi

29. 'Let him dutifully maintain his parents, and practise an honourable trade; the househol this strenuously goes to the gods by name, Sayampabhas.' (403)

Dhammikasutta is ended.

Kulavagga is ended.

[1. Compare T. W. Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 141.]

III. MAHAVAGGA.

1. PABBAGGASUTTA.

King Bimbisara feeling interested in Buddha tries to tempt him with wealth, but is mildly rebu

1. I will praise an ascetic life such as the clearly-seeing (Buddha) led, such as he thinking (c approved of as an ascetic life. (404)

2. ' This house-life is pain, the seat of impurity,' and 'an ascetic life is an open-air life,' so considering he embraced an ascetic life. (405)

3. Leading an ascetic life, he avoided with his body sinful deeds, and having (also) abando words, he cleansed his life. (406)

4. Buddha went to Ragagaha, he entered the Giribbaga in Magadha for alms with a profus signs. (407)

5. Bimbisara standing in his palace saw him, and seeing him endowed with these signs, h (408)

6. 'Attend ye to this man, he is handsome, great, clean, he is both endowed with good con not look before him further than a yuga (the distance of a plough). (409)

7. 'With downcast eyes, thoughtful, this one is not like those of low caste; let the king's me off, (and ask): "Where is the Bhikkhu going?"' (410)

8. The king's messengers followed after (him, and said): 'Where is the Bhikkhu going, where will he reside? (411)

9. 'Going begging from house to house, watching the door (of the senses), well restrained, filled his bowl, conscious, thoughtful. (412)

10. 'Wandering about in search of alms, having gone out of town, the Muni repaired to (the Pandava; it must be there he lives.' (413)

11. Seeing that he had entered his dwelling, the messengers then sat down, and one mes returned announced it to the king. (414)

12. 'This Bhikkhu, O great king, is sitting on the east side of Pandava, like a tiger, like a bu lion in a mountain cave.' (415)

13. Having heard the messenger's words, the Khattiya in a fine chariot hastening went out mountain. (416)

14. Having gone as far as the ground was practicable for a chariot, the Khattiya, after aligh chariot, and approaching on foot, having come up (to him), seated himself. (417)

15. Having sat down the king then exchanged the usual ceremonious greetings with him, a complimentary talk he spoke these words: (418)

16. 'Thou art both young and delicate, a lad in his first youth, possessed of a fine complexi high-born Khattiya. (419)

17. 'I will ornament the army-house, and at the head of the assembly of chiefs (naga) give enjoy it and tell me thy birth, when asked.' (420)

18. Buddha: 'Just beside Himavanta, O king, there lives a people endowed with the power inhabitants of Kosala. (421)

19. 'They are Adikkas by family, Sakiyas by birth; from that family I have wandered out, no sensual pleasures. (422)

20. 'Seeing misery in sensual pleasures, and considering the forsaking of the world as hap and exert myself; in this my mind delights.' (423)

Pabbaggasutta is ended.

2. PADHANASUTTA.

Mara tries to tempt Buddha, but disappointed is obliged to withdraw. Comp. . 1. To me, wh intent upon exertion near the river Nerangara, having exerted myself, and given myself to m sake of acquiring Nibbana (yogakkhema), (424)

2. Came Namuki speaking words full of compassion: 'Thou art lean, ill-favoured, death is i neighbourhood. (425)

3. 'A thousandth part of thee (is the property) of death, (only) one part (belongs to) life; livi thou venerable one, is better; living thou wilt be able to do good works[1]. (426)

4. 'When thou livest a religious life, and feedest the sacrificial fire, manifold good works are thee; what dost thou want with exertion? (427)

5. 'Difficult is the way of exertion, difficult to pass, difficult to enter upon;' saying these vers stood near Buddha. (428)

[1. Sahassabhago maranassa, Ekamso tava givitam,
Givam bho givitam seyyo,
Givam punnani kahasi.]

p. 70

6. To Mara thus speaking Bhagavat said this: 'O thou friend of the indolent, thou wicked o purpose hast thou come here? (429)

7. 'Even the least good work is of no use to me; and what good works are required, Mara (430)

8. 'I have faith and power, and understanding is found in me; while thus exerting myself, w to live[1]? (431)

9. 'This (burning) wind will dry up even the currents of the rivers; should it not by degrees d blood, while I am exerting myself? (432)

10. 'While the blood is drying up, the bile and the phlegm are dried up; while the flesh is wa
the mind gets more tranquil, and my attention, understanding, and meditation get more stea

11. 'While I am living thus, after having felt the extreme sensations, my mind does not look pleasures; behold a being's purity. (434)

12. 'Lust thy first army is called, discontent thy second, thy third is called hunger and thirst fourth desire. (435)

13. 'Thy fifth is called sloth and drowsiness, thy sixth cowardice, thy seventh doubt, thy eig and stupor, (436)

14. 'Gain, fame, honour, and what celebrity has

[1. Evam mam pahitattam pi
Kim givam anupukkhasi.

2. Lohite sussamanamhi
Pittam semhan ka sussati,
Mamsesu khiyamanesu
Bhiyyo kittam pasidati
Bhiyyo sati ka panna ka Samadhi mama titthati.]

p. 71

been falsely obtained; and he who exalts himself and despises others[1]. (437)

15. 'This, O Namuki, is thine, the black one's, fighting army; none but a hero conquers it, a conquering it obtains joy. (438)

16. 'Woe upon life in this world! death in battle is better for me than that I should live defea

17. 'Plunged into this world some Samanas and Bramanas are not seen, and they do not l
the virtuous walk. (440)

18. 'Seeing on all sides an army arrayed, and Mara on his elephant, I am going out to do b may not drive me away from my place. (441)

19. 'This army of thine, which the world of men and gods cannot conquer, I will crush with (one crushes) an unbaked earthen pot with a stone[2]. (442)

20. 'Having made my thought subject to me and my attention firm, I shall wander about fro kingdom, training disciples extensively. (443)

21. 'They (will be) zealous and energetic, executing my orders, (the orders) of one free fro they will go (to the place) where, having gone, they will not mourn.' (444)

22. Mara: 'For seven years I followed Bhagavat step by step; I found no fault in the perfect thoughtful (Buddha). (445)

[1. Yo k' attanam samukkamse Pare ka avaganati.

2. Yam te tam na-ppasahati
Senam loko sadevako
Tam te pannaya gakkhami[*]
Amam pattam va amhana.

*. Instead of gakkhami I read bhangami. Ba has vekkhapi, Bi vegghami.]

p. 72

23. 'The crow hovered round the rock that looked like (a lump of) fat: "Do we here find som
it something sweet?" (446)

24. 'Having obtained nothing sweet there, the crow went away from that spot. Thus like the the rock, being disgusted, we shall go away from Gotama[1].' (447)

25. While overcome with sorrow the string of his lute slipped down; then that evil-minded Y disappeared there. (448)

Padhanasutta is ended.

3. SUBHASITASUTTA.

On well-spoken language. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi in Getavana. Bhagavat said this: 'O Bhikkhus, the provided with four requisites is well-spoken, not ill-spoken, both faultless and blameless to th

'Which four?'

'O Bhikkhus, the Bhikkhu speaks well-spoken (language), not ill-spoken; he speaks what is not what is unrighteous (adhamma); he speaks what is pleasing, not what is unpleasing; he not what is false. O Bhikkhus, the speech that is provided with these four requisites, is well-s ill-spoken, both faultless

[1. Kako va selam asagga[*].
Nibbiggapema Gotamam[+].

*. Cb Ck avagga, Ba assagga, Bi assagga.

+. Instead of Gotamam I read Gotama.]

p. 73

and blameless to the wise.' This said Bhagavat. When Sugata had said this, then the Maste following:

1. 'Well-spoken language the just call the principal (thing); let one speak what is right (dha what is unrighteous (adhamma), that is the second; let one speak what is pleasing, not what that is the third; let one speak what is true, not what is false, that is the fourth.' (449)

Then the venerable Vangisa, rising from his seat, throwing his robe over one shoulder and joined hands towards Bhagavat, said this: 'It occurs to me, O Sugata!'

'Let it occur to thee, O Vangisa!' said Bhagavat.

Then the venerable Vangisa, standing before Bhagavat, praised him with appropriate stan

2. 'Let one say such words by which he does not pain himself, nor hurt others; such words well-spoken. (450)

3. 'Let one speak pleasing words which are received joyfully (by all), and which (saying) he committing sins, speaks what is pleasing to others. (451)

4. 'Truth verily is immortal speech, this is a true saying; in what is true, in what is good, an is right, the just stand firm, so they say. (452)

5. 'The words which Buddha speaks, which are sure to bring about extinction and put an e (words) are truly the best.' (453)

Subhasitasutta is ended.

p. 74

4. SUNDARIKABHARADVAGASUTTA.

Buddha shows to Sundarikabharadvaga on whom to bestow oblations, and the Bramana is it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt in Kosala on the bank of the river Sundarika. And during that t Sundarikabharadvaga made offerings to the fire and worshipped the fire. Then the Bramana having made offerings to the fire and worshipped the fire, and having risen from his seat, loo all sides towards the four quarters of the globe, saying: 'Who is to enjoy the rest of this oblat Bramana Sundarikabharadvaga saw Bhagavat sitting not far off at the root of a tree, wrappe and seeing him he, after taking the rest of the oblation with his left hand and the waterpot wi hand, went up to Bhagavat. Then Bhagavat, on hearing the footsteps of Sundarikabharadva uncovered his head. Then the Brahmana Sundarikabharadvaga thought: 'This man is shave shaveling,' and he wished to return again from there. Then this came to the mind of Sundari

Bramana: 'Some Bramanas also here are shaved, I think I shall go up and ask him about his Brahmana Sundarikabharadvaga went up to Bhagavat, and having gone up he said this: 'Of

Then Bhagavat answered Sundarikabharadvaga, the Bramana, in stanzas:

1. 'No Bramana am I, nor a king's son, nor any

p. 75

Vessa; having thoroughly observed the class of common people, I wander about the world r possessing nothing. (454)

2. 'Dressed in a sanghati[1] and houseless I wander about, with my hair cut off, calm, not i people in this world. Thou askest me an unseasonable question about (my) family, O Brahm

3. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'Sir, Bramanas together with Bramanas ask truly, Art thou a Bra

Bhagavat: 'If thou sayest, I am a Bramana, and callest me no Bramana, then I ask thee ab that consists of three padas and twenty-four syllables[2].' (456)

4. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'For what (reason) did the Isis, men, Khattiyas, Bramanas make gods abundantly in this world?'

Bhagavat: 'He who, perfect and accomplished at the time of offering, obtains the ear of on (god), he will succeed, so I say.' (457)

5. 'Surely his offering will bear fruit,'--so said the Bramana,--'because we saw such an acc for by not seeing such as you, somebody else will enjoy the oblation.' (458)

6. Bhagavat: 'Therefore, O Bramana, as you have come here to ask for something, ask; p here find one that is calm, without anger, free from pain, free from desire, one with a good u (459)

[1. See Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 166.

2. Tam Savittim pukkhami Tipadam katuvisatakkharam.
(Rig-veda III, 62, 10.)]

p. 76

7. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'I delight in offering, O Gotama, I desire to make an offering, but understand it; do thou instruct me, tell me in what case the offering succeeds.' (460)

8. Bhagavat: 'Therefore, O Bramana, lend me thy ear, I will teach thee the Dhamma. (461)

9. 'Do not ask about descent, but ask about conduct; from wood, it is true, fire is born; (like Muni, although belonging to a low family, may become noble, when restrained (from sinning

10. 'He who is subdued by truth, endowed with temperance, accomplished, leading a relig one in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has good works in vie

11. 'Those who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wander about houseless, well restrained, straight shuttle, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who h view, offer. (464)

12. 'Those whose passions are gone, whose senses are well composed, who are liberated the grasp of Rahu, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana wh view, offer. (465)

13. 'Those who wander about in the world without clinging (to anything), always thoughtful selfishness, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has g offer. (466)

14. 'He who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wanders about victorious, he who knows the death, who is perfectly happy (parinibbuta),

p. 77

calm like a deep water, Tathagata deserves the oblation. (467)

15. 'Just with the just and far from the unjust[1], Tathagata is possessed of infinite underst undefiled both in this world and in the other, Tathagata deserves the oblation. (468)

16. 'He in whom there lives no deceit, no arrogance, he who is free from cupidity, free from free from desire, who has banished anger, who is calm, the Bramana who has removed the

Tathagata deserves the oblation. (469)

17. 'He who has banished (every) resting-place of the mind, he for whom there is no grasp nothing either in this world or in the other, Tathagata deserves the oblation[2]. (470)

18. 'He who is composed, who has crossed over the stream (of existence) and knows the the highest view (of it), he whose passions are destroyed, who is wearing the last body, Tath the oblation. (471)

19. 'He whose passion for existence and whose harsh talk are destroyed, are perished, (a not, he the accomplished and in every respect liberated Tathagata deserves the oblation. (4

20. 'He who has shaken off all ties, for whom there are no ties, who amongst arrogant bein arrogance, having penetrated pain together with its domain and subject, Tathagata deserves

21. 'He who, without giving himself up to desire, sees seclusion (i.e. Nibbana), who has ov that is to be taught by others, to whom there

[1. Samo samehi visamehi dure.

2. Comp. .]

p. 78

are no objects of sense whatever, Tathagata deserves the oblation[1]. (474)

22. 'He to whom all Dhammas of every description, after he has penetrated them, are dest perished, (and therefore) exist not, he who is calm, liberated in the destruction of attachmen Nibbana), Tathagata deserves the oblation. (475)

23. 'He who sees the destruction of bond and birth, who has totally evaded the path of pas pure, faultless, spotless, undepraved, Tathagata deserves the oblation. (476)

24. 'He who does not measure himself by himself, who is composed, upright, firm, without harshness (akhila), free from doubt, Tathagata deserves the oblation. (477)

25. 'He to whom there is no cause of folly, who has a supernatural insight in all Dhammas, last body, and who has acquired perfect enlightenment, the highest, the blessed, (for him) th purification (takes place)[2].' (478)

26. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'May my offering be a true offering, because I met with such a accomplished; Brahman is my witness, may Bhagavat accept me, may Bhagavat enjoy my

27. Bhagavat: 'What is obtained by stanzas is not to be enjoyed by me, this is not the cust clearly-seeing, O Bramana; Buddhas reject what is obtained by stanzas. While the Dhamma

[1. Asam anissaya vivekadassi
Paravediyam[*] ditthim upativatto
Arammana yassa na santi keki, &c.

2. Comp. .

*. Paravediyan ti parehi napetabbam. Commentator.]

p. 79

exists, O Bramana, this is the practice (of the Buddhas). (480)

28. 'With other food and drink must thou serve one that is perfect, a great Isi, whose passi destroyed, and whose misbehaviour has ceased, for this is a field for one who looks for goo

29. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'Good, O Bhagavat, then I should like to know, who will enjoy a me, and whom I shall seek at the time of sacrifice (as one worthy of offerings) after having a doctrine.' (482)

30. Bhagavat: 'Whosoever has no quarrels, whose mind is untroubled, and who has freed whose sloth is driven away, (483)

31. 'Whosoever conquers his sins, knows birth and death, the Muni who is endowed with who has resorted to offering, (484)

32. 'Him you should worship and honour with food and drink; so the gifts will prosper.' (485

33. Sundarikabharadvaga: 'Thou Buddha deservest the oblation, (thou art) the best field fo object of offering to all the world; what is given to thee will bear great fruit.' (486)

Then the Bramana Sundarikabharadvaga said this to Bhagavat: 'It is excellent, O venerab excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what h tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been refuge in

[1. Comp. .

2. Moneyyasampannam = pannasampannam. Commentator.]

p. 80

the venerable Gotama, in the Dhamma, and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus; I wish to receive t orders from the venerable Gotama.'

The Bramana Sundarikabharadvaga received the pabbagga from Bhagavat, and he receiv and the venerable Bharadvaga, having lately received the upasampada, leading a solitary, r ardent, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understar ascertained and possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake o good family rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state. 'Birth had been des life had been led, what was to be done had been done, there was nothing else (to be done) so he perceived, and the venerable Bharadvaga became one of the arahats.

Sundarikabharadvagasutta is ended.

5. MAGHASUTTA.

Buddha on being asked tells Magha of those worthy of offerings and the blessing of offering heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Ragagaha, in the mountain (called) the Vulture's Peak (Gig

Then the young man Magha went to Bhagavat, and having gone to him he talked pleasant having had some pleasant, remarkable conversation with him he sat down apart; sitting dow Magha spoke this to Bhagavat:

p. 81

'O venerable Gotama, I am a liberal giver, bountiful, suitable to beg of; justly I seek for rich having sought for riches justly, I give out of the justly obtained and justly acquired riches to o to three, to four, to five, to six, to seven, to eight, to nine, to ten, to twenty, to thirty, to forty, t fifty, to a hundred, I give still more. (I should like to know), O venerable Gotama, whether I, w giving, so offering, produce much good.'

'Certainly, O young man, dost thou in so offering produce much good; he, O young man, w giver, bountiful, suitable to beg of, and who justly seeks for riches, and having sought for rich gives out of his justly obtained and justly acquired riches to one, to two, to three, to four, to f six, to seven, to eight, to nine, to ten, to twenty, to thirty, to forty, to fifty, to a hundred, and g still more, produces much good.'

Then the young man Magha addressed Bhagavat in stanzas:

1. 'I ask the venerable Gotama, the bountiful,'--so said the young man Magha,--'wearing th wandering about houseless:' 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor, who, des offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink,--where ( bestowed) will the oblation of such an offerer prosper?' (487)

2. 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor, O Magha,'--so said Bhagavat,--'w good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink, su prosper with those worthy of offerings.' (488)

p. 82

3. 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor,'--so said the young man,--'who, d offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink,--tell me a one), O Bhagavat, of those worthy of offerings.' (489)

4. Bhagavat: 'Those indeed who wander about in the world without clinging to anything an possessing anything, perfect, self-restrained, on such in due time people should bestow obla Brahmana who has good (works) in view, offer. (490)

5. 'Those who have cut through all bonds and fetters, who are subdued, liberated, free fro from desire, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has g offer. (491)

6. 'Those who are released from all bonds, who are subdued, liberated, free from pain, an on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has good (works)

7. 'Those who, having forsaken both passion and hatred and folly, have destroyed their de religious life, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Brahmana who ha view, offer[1]. (493)

8. 'Those in whom there lives no deceit, no arrogance, who are free from cupidity, free fro free from desire, on such in due time people should bestew oblations; let the Bramana who
view, offer. (494)

9. 'Those indeed who without being lost in desire,

[1. Comp. .]

p. 83

after crossing the stream (of existence), wander about free from selfishness, on such in due should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has good (works) in view, offer. (495)

10. 'Those in whom there is no desire for anything in the world, nor for existence after exis in the other world, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana wh
in view, offer. (496)

11. 'Those who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wander about houseless, well restrained, straight shuttle, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who h
view, offer. (497)

12. 'Those whose passions are gone, whose senses are well composed, who are liberated the grasp of Rahu, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Brahmana w in view, offer. (498)

13. 'Those who are calm, whose passions are gone, who are without anger, and for whom transmigration after having left here, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; le who has good (works) in view, offer. (499)

14. 'Those who, after leaving birth and death altogether, have conquered all doubt, on suc people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who has good (works) in view, offer. (500)

15. 'Those who wander about in the world with themselves for a light, not possessed of an respect liberated, on such in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Bramana who view, offer. (501)

16. 'Those who in this world rightly understand

p. 84

this: "This is the last (birth), there is no re-birth," on such in due time people should bestow o let the Bramana who has good (works) in view, offer. (502)

17. 'He who is accomplished, and delights in meditation, thoughtful, possessed of thoroug refuge for many, on such a one in due time people should bestow oblations; let the Brahman (works) in view, offer.' (503)

18. 'Certainly my question was not in vain, Bhagavat has told me of those worthy of offerin truly knowest this in this world, as surely to thee this Dhamma is known. (504)

19. 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor,'--so said the young man Magha, of good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink, being such a one), O Bhagavat, of the blessing of offering.' (505)

20. 'Offer, O Magha,'--so said Bhagavat,--'and while offering make calm thy mind in all thin of the one that offers is the oblation, standing fast in this he leaves hatred behind. (506)

21. 'Such a one whose passion is gone will repress hatred, cultivating an unbounded frien continually strenuous night and day he will spread infinite goodness through all regions.' (50

22. Magha: 'Who prospers? who is liberated and who is bound? In which way can one by Brahmaloka? Tell this to me who does not know, O Muni, when asked. Bhagavat is indeed r is seen by me to-day, for thou art to us equal to Brahman, this is the truth; how can one atta thou glorious one?' (508)

p. 85

23. 'He who offers the threefold blessing of oblation, O Magha,'--so said Bhagavat,--'such prosper with those worthy of offerings; so, having offered properly, he who is suitable to beg Brahmaloka, so I say.' (509)

This having been said, Magha the young man spoke as follows to Bhagavat: 'Excellent, O Excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what h tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the Dhamma and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus. Let th accept me as an upasaka (a follower, me), who henceforth for all my life have taken refuge

Maghasutta is ended.

6. SABHIYASUTTA.

Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, goes to the six famous teachers of his time to have his question having his doubts solved, he repairs to Gotama and asks him how one is to behave to becor Samana, a Nahataka, a Khettagina, a Kusala, a Pandita, a Muni, a Vedagu, an Anuvidita, a Sottiya, an Ariya, a Karanavat, a Paribbagaka. Bhagavat answers his questions, and Sabhiy the robe and the orders from Buddha. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Ragagaha, in Veluvana, in Kalandakanivapa. And at that tir recited to Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka

p. 86

(wandering mendicant), by an old benevolent deity: 'He who, O Sabhiya, be it a Samana or these questions to thee when asked, near him thou shouldst live a religious life.'

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having learnt the questions from that deity, went to whate Bramanas there were that had an assembly (of Bhikkhus), a crowd (of followers), and were famous leaders, considered excellent by the multitude, as Purana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosal Pakudha-Kakkayana, Sangaya-Belatthiputta, and Nigantha-Nataputta. Those he went to, an he asked the questions. They, being asked the questions by Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, did answering them), and not succeeding, they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and th questions to Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka.

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka: 'Whatever Samanas and Brama an assembly (of Bhikkhus), a crowd (of followers), and are well-known teachers, famous lea excellent by the multitude, as Purana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosala, Agita-Kesakambali, Paku Sangaya-Belatthiputta, and Nigantha-Nataputta, they, being asked questions by me, did not answering them), and not succeeding they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and th questions to me in this matter; surely I think I shall go back to what I have left, and enjoy ser pleasures.

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka: 'This Samana Gotama has both

p. 87

assembly (of Bhikkhus) and a crowd (of followers), and is a well-known teacher, a famous le excellent by the multitude, surely I think I shall go to Samana Gotama and ask these questio came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka: 'Whatever Samanas and Brahmanas there a aged, advanced in years, having reached old age, experienced elders, long ordained, havin Bhikkhus), crowds (of followers), being teachers well-known, famous leaders, considered ex multitude, as Purana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosala, Agita-Kesakambali, Pakudha-Kakkayana, and Nigantha-Nataputta, they, being asked questions by me, did not succeed (in answering succeeding they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and they also in return put questi matter; (I should like to know) whether Samana Gotama being asked these questions will be to me, for Samana Gotama is both young by birth and new in ascetic life.'

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka: 'Samana Gotama is not to be sli young; even if the Samana is young, yet he is mighty and powerful; surely I think I shall go t and ask these questions.' Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, went on a journey to Ragagaha, journey in regular order he came to Ragagaha, Veluvana, Kalandakanivapa, to Bhagavat, a Bhagavat he talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant and remarkabl him he sat down apart; sitting down apart

p. 88

Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, spoke to Bhagavat in stanzas:

1. 'Anxious and doubtful I have come,'--so said Sabhiya,--'longing to ask questions. Do tho these (doubts when) asked these questions by me, in regular order, and rightly explain them

2. 'Thou hast come from afar, O Sabhiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'longing to ask questions; I to those (doubts when) asked those questions by thee, in regular order, and rightly I shall ex thee. (511)

3. 'Ask me, O Sabhiya, a question; whatsoever thou wishest in thy mind that question I (wi put an end to (thy doubt).' (512)

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka: 'It is marvellous, it is wonderful in reception which I did not get from other Samanas and Brahmanas has been given me by Go glad, rejoicing, delighted, and highly elated asked Bhagavat a question:

4. 'What should a man (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him a Bhikkhu?'--s Sabhiya,--'how may they call him compassionate, and how subdued? how can he be called Asked (about this) do thou, Bhagavat, explain it to me.' (513)

5. 'He who by the path he has himself made, O Sabhiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'has attained happiness, who has conquered doubt, who lives after having left behind both gain and good re-birth, he is a Bhikkhu. (514)

6. 'Always resigned and attentive, he will not hurt any one in all the world, the Samana wh crossed the stream (of existence, and is) untroubled; for whom there are no desires (ussada compassionate. (515)

7. 'He whose senses are trained internally and externally in all the world, he who after pen and the other world longs for death, being trained, he is subdued. (516)

8. 'Whosoever, after having considered all times (kappa), the revolution (samsara), both th re-appearance (of beings), is free from defilement, free from sin, is pure, and has obtained c birth, him they call enlightened (buddha).' (517)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagava delighted, highly elated, asked Bhagavat another question:

9. 'What should a man (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him a Bramana?'- Sabhiya,--'and how (may they call him) a Samana? and how a Nahataka? how can he be ca this) do thou Bhagavat explain it to me.' (518)

10. 'He who, after removing all sins, O Sabhiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'is immaculate, well c firm-minded, perfect after crossing the Samsara, such an independent one is called a Brama

11. 'He who is calm, having left behind good and evil, free from defilement, having underst other world, and conquered birth and death, such a one is called a Samana by being so[1].'

12. 'Whosoever, after having washed away all sins internally and externally in all the world

[1. Samano tadi pavukkate tathatta.]

not enter time (kappa) amongst gods and men who are subject to time, him they call a Naha (521)

13. 'He who does not commit any crime in the world, who, after abandoning all bonds and nothing, being liberated, such a one is called a Naga (sinless) by being so[2].' (522)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagava delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question:

14. 'Whom do the Buddhas call a Khettagina?'--so said Sabhiya,--'how (can they call any c how a Pandita? how can he be called a Muni? Asked (about this) do thou Bhagavat explain

15. 'He who, after examining all regions, O Sabhiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'the divine and th
Brahman's region, is delivered from the radical bond of all regions, such a one is called a Kh has conquered the regions) by being so. (524)

16. 'He who, after examining all treasures, the divine and the human, and Brahman's treas from the radical bond of all treasures, such a one is called a Kusala (happy) by being so. (52

17. 'He who, after examining both kinds of senses, internally and externally, is endowed w

[1. Devamanussesu kappiyesu Kappan n' eti tam ahu nahatako.

2. Agum na karoti kinki loke

Sabbasamyoge visagga bandhanani
Sabbattha na saggati vimutto
Nago tadi pavukkate tathatta.
But compare , , &c.]

p. 91

clear understanding and has conquered evil and good (kanhasukka), such a one is called a
being so. (526)

18. 'He who, having understood the Dhamma of the just and the unjust, internally and exte world, is to be worshipped by gods and men, he, after breaking through the net of ties, is ca (sage).' (527)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagava
delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question:

19. 'What should one (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him Vedagu?'--so s how (may they call him) Anuvidita? and how Viriyavat? How does one become Aganiya? As O Bhagavat, explain it to me.' (528)

20. 'He who, having conquered all sensations, O Sabhiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'which are and to Bramanas, is free from passion for all sensations, he is Vedagu (having passed sens conquering all sensation. (529)

21. 'He who, having seen the delusion of name and form[1], internally and externally, the r and is delivered from the radical bond of all sickness, such a one is called Anuvidita (well-in being so. (530)

22. 'He who is disgusted in this world with all sins, is strong after conquering the pain of he strong and powerful, such a one is called Dhira (= viriyavat, firm) by being so. (531)

[1. Anuvikka papankanamarupam.]

p. 92

23. 'He whose bonds are cut off internally and externally, the root of ties[1], who is delivere radical bond of all ties, such a one is called Aganiya (high-bred) by being so.' (532)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagava
delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question:

24. 'What should a man (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him a Sottiya?'-- Sabhiya,--'how (may they call him) an Ariya? and how a Karanavat? how may he become a
(about this) do thou, O Bhagavat, explain it to me.' (533)

25. 'Whosoever, after having heard and understood every Dhamma in the world, O Sabhiy Bhagavat,--'whatsoever is wrong and whatsoever is blameless, is victorious, free from doub from pain in every respect, him they call a Sottiya (learned in the revelation). (534)

26. 'Whosoever, after having cut off passions and desires, is wise and does not (again) en having driven away the threefold sign, the mud (of lust), and who does not (again) enter time they call an Ariya (noble). (535)

27. 'He who in this world, after having attained the (highest) gain in the Karanas, is skilful, understood the Dhamma, clings to nothing, is liberated, and for whom there are no passions (endowed with the obsrvances). (536)

28. 'Whosoever abstains from the action that has a painful result, above and below and ac

[1. Yass' assu lutani bandhanani Agghattam bahiddha ka sangamulam.]

p. 93

the middle, who wanders with understanding, who has put an end to deceit, arrogance, cupi and form, him they call a Paribbagaka (a wandering mendicant) who has attained the (highe

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagava delighted, highly elated, having risen from his seat, and having put his upper robe upon one his joined hands towards Bhagavat, praised Bhagavat face to face in appropriate stanzas:

29. 'Having conquered the three and sixty (philosophical) views referring to the disputation
Samanas, thou hast crossed over the darkness of the stream[1]. (?) (538)

30. 'Thou hast passed to the end of and beyond pain, thou art a saint, perfectly enlightene thee one that has destroyed his passions, thou art glorious, thoughtful, of great understandi puts an end to pain, thou hast carried me across. (539)

31. 'Because thou sawest my longing, and carriedst me across my doubt, adoration be to hast attained the (highest) gain in the ways of wisdom; O thou who art a true kinsman of the compassionate. (540)

32. 'The doubt I had before thou hast cleared away for me, O thou clearly-seeing; surely th perfectly enlightened, there is no obstacle for thee. (541)

[1. Yani ka tini yani ka satthi
Samanappavadasitani bhuripanna
Sannakkhara sannanissitani (?)
Osaranani vineyya oghatam' aga.]

p. 94

33. 'And all thy troubles are scattered and cut off, thou art calm, subdued, firm, truthful. (54

34. 'All gods and both Narada and Pabbata rejoice at thee, the chief of the sinless (nagana hero, when thou art speaking. (543)

35. 'Adoration be to thee, O noble man, adoration be to thee, O thou best of men; in the w gods there is no man equal to thee. (544)

36. 'Thou art Buddha, thou art the Master, thou art the Muni that conquers Mara; after hav desire thou hast crossed over and hast carried across this generation. (545)

37. 'The elements of existence (upadhi) are overcome by thee, the passions are destroyed a lion, free from desire, thou hast left behind fear and terror. (546)

38. 'As a beautiful lotus does not adhere to the water, so thou dost not cling to good and e stretch forth thy feet, O hero, Sabbiya worships the Master's (feet).' (547)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, stooping with his head to Bhagavat's feet, said this to Bha

'It is excellent, O venerable! It is excellent, O venerable! As one raises what has been ove reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in m has been illustrated; I take refuge in the venerable Gotama, in the Dhamma, and in the Asse wish to receive the robe and the orders from the venerable Bhagavat.'

'He who, O Sabhiya, formerly belonging

p. 95

another creed (annatitthiyapubba), wishes to be adopted into this religion (dhammavinaya), receive the robe and the orders, he serves for four months; after the lapse of four months Bh appeased their thoughts will give him the robe and the orders to become a Bhikkhu, (for) I a acknowledge difference of persons.'

'If, O venerable, those that formerly belonged to another creed and wish to be adopted into and to receive the robe and the orders, serve for four months, and after the lapse of four mo have appeased their thoughts give them the robe and the orders that they may become Bhik serve for four months, and after the lapse of four months Bhikkhus who have appeased thei
(me) the robe and the orders that I may become a Bhikkhu.'

Sabhiya, the Paribbagaka, received the robe and the orders from Bhagavat, and the vene lately received the upasampada, leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possesse highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander a houses to a houseless state. 'Birth had been destroyed, a religious life had been led, what w been done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the became one of the saints.

Sabhiyasutta is ended.

p. 96

7. SELASUTTA.

Keniya, the Gatila, invites Buddha with his assembly to take his meals with him on the morr Bramana, arrived at that place with his three hundred young men; seeing the preparations h on, and is answered that Buddha is expected the next day. On hearing the word 'Buddha,' S lives, goes to him, converses with him, and is converted; so are his followers. So it was hea

At one time Bhagavat wandering about in Anguttarapa, with a large assembly of Bhikkhus went to Apana, a town in Anguttarapa.

And Keniya, the ascetic, with matted hair (gatila) heard the following: 'The Samana, the ve the Sakya son, gone out from the family of the Sakyas, wandering about in Anguttarapa with Bhikkhus, with 1250 Bhikkhus, has reached Apana, and the following good praising words m Gotama: "And so he is Bhagavat, the venerable, the perfectly enlightened, endowed with sc (viggakarana), the happy, knowing the world, the incomparable, the charioteer of men that a the master, the enlightened of gods and men, the glorious; he teaches this world and the wo Maras, of Brahmans, and beings comprising Samanas and Bramanas, gods and men, havin them face to face; he teaches the Dhamma (which is) good in the beginning, in the middle, a full of meaning and rich in words, quite complete; he teaches a religious life, and good is the saints.'"

Then Keniya, the Gatila, went (to the place) where

p. 97

Bhagavat was, and having gone there he talked pleasantly with him, and after having had so remarkable conversation (with him) he sat down apart; and while Keniya, the Gatila, was sitt Bhagavat, by religious talk, taught, advised, roused, and delighted him. Then Keniya, the Ga taught, advised, roused, and delighted by Bhagavat through religious talk, said this to Bhaga

'Let the venerable Gotama accept my food tomorrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkh

This having been said, Bhagavat answered Keniya, the Gatila: 'Large, O Keniya, is the ass one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and thou art intimate with the Bramanas.'

A second time Keniya, the Gatila, said this to Bhagavat: 'Although, O venerable Gotama, t Bhikkhus is large, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and I am intimate with the B venerable Gotama accept my food to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus.'

A second time Bhagavat said this to Keniya, the Gatila: 'Large, O Keniya, is the assembly thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and thou art intimate with the Bramanas.'

A third time Keniya, the Gatila, said this to Bhagavat: 'Although, O venerable Gotama, the Bhikkhus is large, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and I am intimate with the B the venerable Gotama accept my food to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus.' I being silent.

p. 98

Then Keniya, the Gatila, having learnt the assent of Bhagavat, after rising from his seat we hermitage, and having gone there he addressed his friends and servants, his relatives and k follows): 'Let my venerable friends and servants, relatives and kinsmen hear me;--the Sama invited by me to (take his) food (with me) to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus must render me bodily service.'

'Surely, O venerable one,' so saying the friends and servants, relatives and kinsmen of Ke complying with his request, some of them dug fireplaces, some chopped firewood, some wa placed waterpots, some prepared seats. Keniya, the Gatila, on the other hand, himself provi pavilion.

At that time the Bramana Sela lived at Apana, perfect in the three Vedas, vocabulary, Ketu Itihasa as the fifth (Veda), versed in metre, a grammarian, one not deficient in popular contro signs of a great man, he taught three hundred young men the hymns[1]. At that time Keniya intimate with the Brahmana Sela. Then the Bramana Sela surrounded by three hundred you arrived at the place where the hermitage of Keniya, the Gatila, was. And the Bramana Sela s Keniya's hermitage, some of them digging fireplaces, some chopping firewood, some washi placing waterpots, some

[1. Tena kho pana samayena. Selo brahmano Apane pativasati tinnam vedanam paragu sa sakkharappabhedanam itihasapankamanam padako veyyakarano lokayatamahapurisalakkh manavakasatani mante vaketi.]

p. 99

preparing seats, and Keniya, the Gatila, on the other hand, himself providing a circular pavil Keniya, the Gatila, he said this: 'Is the venerable Keniya to celebrate the marriage of a son o of a daughter, or is there a great sacrifice at hand, or has Bimbisara, the king of Magadha, w body of troops, been invited for to-morrow, together with his army?'

'I am not to celebrate the marriage of a son or the marriage of a daughter, nor has Bimbisa Magadha, who has a large body of troops, been invited for to-morrow, together with his arm sacrifice of mine is at hand. The Samana Gotama, the Sakya son, gone out from the Sakya about in Anguttarapa with a large assembly of Bhikkhus, one thousand two hundred and fifty reached Apana, and the following good praising words met the venerable Gotama: "And so venerable, the perfectly enlightened, endowed with science and works (viggakarana), the ha world, the incomparable, the charioteer of men that are to be subdued, the master, the enlig men, the glorious, he has been invited by me for to-morrow, together with the assembly of B

'Didst thou say that he is a Buddha, O venerable Keniya?'

'Yes, I say, O venerable Sela, that he is a Buddha.'

'Didst thou say that he is a Buddha, O venerable Keniya? ,

'Yes, I say, O venerable Sela, that he is a Buddha.'

Then this occurred to the Brahmana Sela: 'This sound "Buddha" is (indeed) rare, but in ou

p. 100

are to be found the thirty-two signs of a great man, and for a great man endowed with these conditions, and no more: if he lives in a house he is a king, a universal (king), a just religious lord of the four-cornered (earth), a conqueror, one who has obtained the security of his peop possessed of the seven gems. These are his seven gems, namely, the wheel gem, the elep the pearl gem, the woman gem, the householder gem, and the chief gem as the seventh. He thousand sons, heroes, possessing great bodily strength and crushing foreign armies; he ha ocean-girt earth without a rod and without a weapon, but by justice, lives (in a house). But if, hand, he goes out from (his) house to the houseless state, he becomes a saint, a perfectly e who has removed the veil in the world. And where, O venerable Keniya, dwells now that ven saint and the perfectly enlightened?'

This having been said, Keniya, the Gatila, stretching out his right arm, spoke as follows to Sela: 'There, where yon blue forest line is, O venerable Sela.'

Then the Bramana Sela together with (his) three hundred young men went to the place wh
Then the Bramana Sela addressed those young men: 'Come ye, venerable ones, with but lit by step, for Bhagavats are difficult of access, walking alone like lions, and when I speak to th
Samana Gotama, do ye not utter interrupting words, but wait ye venerable ones, for the end

Then the Bramana Sela went to the place where

p. 101

Bhagavat was, and having gone there he talked pleasantly with Bhagavat, and after having remarkable conversation with him he sat down apart, and while sitting down apart Sela, the for the thirty-two signs of a great man on the body of Bhagavat. And the Bramana Sela saw of a great man on the body of Bhagavat with the exception of two; in respect to two of the si man he had doubts, he hesitated, he was not satisfied, he was not assured as to the membe membrane and as to his having a large tongue.

Then this occurred to Bhagavat: 'This Bramana Sela sees in me the thirty-two signs of a g exception of two, in respect to two of the signs of a great man he has doubts, he hesitates, h satisfied, he is not assured as to the member being enclosed in a membrane, and as to my l tongue.' Then Bhagavat created such a miraculous creature that the Bramana Sela might se enclosed in a membrane. Then Bhagavat having put out his tongue touched and stroked bo stroked both nostrils, and the whole circumference of his forehead he covered with his tongu

Then this occurred to the Brahmana Sela: 'The Samana Gotama is endowed with the thirty man, with them all, not with (only) some of them, and yet I do not know whether he is a Budd heard old and aged Brahmanas, teachers and their previous teachers, say that those who a perfectly enlightened manifest themselves when their praise is uttered. I think I shall praise t Gotama face to face in suitable stanzas.' Then the Bramana Sela praised Bhagavat face to face in suitable s

p. 102

1. 'Thou hast a perfect body, thou art resplendent, well-born, of beautiful aspect, thou hast colour, O Bhagavat, thou hast very white teeth, thou art strong. (548)

2. 'All the signs that are for a well-born man, they are on thy body, the signs of a great man

3. 'Thou hast a bright eye, a handsome countenance, thou art great, straight, majestic, tho sun in the midst of the assembly of the Samanas. (550)

4. 'Thou art a Bhikkhu of a lovely appearance, thou hast a skin like gold; what is the use o Samana to thee who art possessed of the highest beauty? (551)

5. 'Thou deservest to be a king, a king of universal kings, a ruler of the four-cornered (eart conqueror, a lord of the jambu grove (i.e. India). (552)

6. 'Khattiyas and wealthy kings are devoted to thee; rule, O Gotama, as a king of kings, a (553)

7. 'I am a king, O Sela,'--so said Bhagavat,--'an incomparable, religious king (dhammaraga (dhammena) I turn the wheel, a wheel that is irresistible[1].' (554)

8. 'Thou acknowledgest thyself (to be) perfectly enlightened (sambuddha),'--so said Sela, Brahmana,--'an incomparable, religious king; "with justice I turn the wheel," so thou sayest,

[1. Compare Gospel of .]

p. 103

9. 'Who is thy general, (who is thy) disciple, (who is) the successor of the master, who is to thee the wheel of religion turned (by thee)? ' (556)

10. 'The wheel turned by me, O Sela,'--so said Bhagavat,--'the incomparable wheel of relig to turn after (me), he taking after Tathagata. (557)

11. 'What is to be known is known (by me), what is to be cultivated is cultivated (by me), w left is left by me, therefore I am a Buddha, O Bramana. (558)

12. 'Subdue thy doubt about me, have faith (in me), O Bramana, difficult (to obtain) is the Buddhas repeatedly. (559)

13. 'Of those whose manifestation is difficult for you (to obtain) in the world repeatedly, I a Bramana, a perfectly enlightened, an incomparable physician, (560)

14. 'Most eminent, matchless, a crusher of Mara's army; having subjected all enemies I re every side.' (561)

15. Sela: 'O venerable ones, pay attention to this: as the clearly-seeing (Buddha) says, (s a physician, a great hero, and roars like a lion in the forest. (562)

16. 'Who, having seen him, the most eminent, the matchless, the crusher of Mara's army, even if he be, of black origin (kanhabhigatika). (563)

17. 'He who likes me, let him follow after (me), he who does not like me, let him go away; take the orders in the presence of him of excellent understanding (i.e. Buddha).' (564)

p. 104

18. The followers of Sela: 'If this doctrine of the perfectly enlightened pleases thee, we als the orders in the presence of him of excellent understanding.' (565)

19. These three hundred Bramanas asked with clasped hands (to be admitted into the ord cultivate a religious life, O Bhagavat, in thy presence.' (566)

20. 'A religious life is well taught (by me), O Sela,'--so said Bhagavat,--'an instantaneous, (life), in which it is not in vain to become an ascetic to one who learns in earnest[1].' (567)

Then the Bramana Sela together with his assembly took the robe and the orders in the pre

Then Keniya, the Gatila, by the expiration of that night, having provided in his hermitage n and soft food, let Bhagavat know the time (of the meal): 'It is time, O venerable Gotama, the prepared.' Then Bhagavat in the morning, having put on his raiment and taken his bowl and Gatila Keniya's hermitage, and having gone there he sat down on the prepared seat, togeth of Bhikkhus. Then Keniya, the Gatila, satisfied and served with his own hands the assembly Buddha at their head, with nice hard food and soft food. Then Keniya, the Gatila, having gor who had finished eating and had taken his hand out of the bowl, took a low seat and sat dov

[1. Svakkhatam brahmakariyam
Sanditthikam akalikam
Yattha amogha pabbagga Appamattassa sikkhato.]

p. 105

while Keniya, the Gatila, was sitting down apart, Bhagavat delighted him with these stanzas

21. 'The principal thing in sacrifice is the sacred fire, the principal thing amongst the hymns Savitti[1], the king is the principal amongst men, and the sea the principal amongst waters (

(568)

22. 'Amongst the stars the moon is the principal thing, the sun is the principal thing among burning[3] (objects), amongst those that wish for good works and make offerings the assem is the principal.' (569)

Then Bhagavat, having delighted Keniya, the Gatila, with these stanzas, rose from (his) se

Then the venerable Sela together with his assembly leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding as possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of g rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state; 'birth (had been) destroyed, a re been) led, what was to be done (had been) done, there was nothing else (to be done) for thi perceived, and the venerable Sela together with his assembly became one of the saints.

Then the venerable Sela together with his assembly went to Bhagavat, and having gone (t upper robe on one shoulder, and bending his joined hands towards Bhagavat he addressed

[1. Savitti khandaso mukham.

2. Comp. .

3. Adikko tapatam mukham.]

p. 106

23. 'Because we took refuge in thee on the eighth day previous to this, O thou clearly-seei nights, O Bhagavat, we have been trained in thy doctrine. (570)

24. 'Thou art Buddha, thou art the Master, thou art the Muni that conquered Mara, thou ha off the affections, crossed over (the stream of existence) and taken over these beings. (571)

25. 'The elements of existence (upadhi) have been overcome by thee, the passions have b thee, thou art a lion not seizing on anything, thou hast left behind fear and danger. (572)

26. 'These three hundred Bhikkhus stand here with clasped hands; stretch out thy feet, O Nagas worship the Master's feet.' (573)

Selasutta is ended.

8. SALLASUTTA.

Life is short, all mortals are subject to death, but knowing the terms of the world the wise do and those who have left sorrow will be blessed.--Text in the Dasaratha-Gataka, p. 34. 1. W unknown is the life of mortals in this world, troubled and brief, and combined with pain. (574)

2. For there is not any means by which those that have been born can avoid dying; after re there is death, of such a nature are living beings. (575)

3. As ripe fruits are early in danger of falling, so mortals when born are always in danger o

4. As all earthen vessels made by the potter end in being broken, so is the life of mortals.

p. 107

5. Both young and grown-up men, both those who are fools and those who are wise men, power of death, all are subject to death. (578)

6. Of those who, overcome by death, go to the other world, a father does not save his son their relations. (579)

7. Mark! while relatives are looking on and lamenting greatly, one by one of the mortals is like an ox that is going to be killed. (580)

8. So the world is afflicted with death and decay, therefore the wise do not grieve, knowing the world. (581)

9. For him, whose way thou dost not know, either when he is coming or when he is going, ends, thou grievest in vain. (582)

10. If he who grieves gains anything, (although he is only) a fool hurting himself, let the wis same. (583)

11. Not from weeping nor from grieving will any one obtain peace of mind; (on the contrary

his pain will be, and his body will suffer. (584)

12. He will be lean and pale, hurting himself by himself, (and yet) the dead are not saved, (therefore) is of no avail. (585)

13. He who does not leave grief behind, goes (only) deeper into pain; bewailing the dead h power of grief. (586)

14. Look at others passing away, men that go (to what they deserve) according to their de trembling already here, after falling into the power of death. (587)

15. In whatever manner people think (it will come to pass), different from that it becomes, s

p. 108

the disappointment[1] (in this world); see, (such are) the terms of the world. (588)

16. Even if a man lives a hundred years or even more, he is at last separated from the cor relatives, and leaves life in this world. (589)

17. Therefore let one, hearing (the words of) the saint, subdue his lamentation; seeing the passed away and is dead, (let him say): 'He will not be found by me (any more).' (590)

18. As a house on fire is extinguished by water, so also the wise, sensible, learned, clever drives away sorrow that has arisen, as the wind a tuft of cotton. (591)

19. He who seeks his own happiness should draw out his arrow (which is) his lamentation grief. (592)

20. He who has drawn out the arrow and is not dependent (on anything) will obtain peace overcome all sorrow will become free from sorrow, and blessed (nibbuta). (593)

Sallasutta is ended.

9. VASETTHASUTTA.

A dispute arose between two young men, Bharadvaga and Vasettha, the former contending birth, the latter by deeds. They agreed to go and ask Samana Gotama, and he answered tha his work only. The two young men are converted.--Text (from Magghimanikaya) and translat Buddhist Nirvana, p. 103. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Ikkhanamkala, in the Ikkhanamkala forest. At that time man

[1. Etadiso vinabhavo.]

p. 109

wealthy Bramanas lived at Ikkhanamkala, as the Bramana Kamkin, the Bramana Tarukkha, the Brahmana Ganussoni, the Bramana Todeyya, and other distinguished, wealthy Braman

Then this dialogue arose between the young men Vasettha and Bharadvaga while walking

'How does one become a Bramana?'

The young man Bharadvaga said: 'When one is noble by birth on both sides, on the mothe father's side, of pure conception up to the seventh generation of ancestors, not discarded ar in point of birth, in this way one is a Bramana.'

The young man Vasettha said: 'When one is virtuous and endowed with (holy) works, in th
Bramana.'

Neither could the young man Bharadvaga convince the young man Vasettha, nor could th convince the young man Bharadvaga. Then the young man Vasettha addressed the young Bharadvaga, this Samana Gotama, the Sakya son, gone out from the Sakya family, dwells a forest of Ikkhanamkala, and the following good praising words met the venerable Gotama: " Bhagavat, the venerable, the enlightened, the glorious, let us go, O venerable Bharadvaga, place) where the Samana Gotama is, and having gone there let us ask the Samana Gotama as the Samana Gotama replies so will we understand it.'"

'Very well, O venerable one;' so the young man Bharadvaga answered the young man Va

p. 110

Then the young men Vasettha and Bharadvaga went (to the place) where Bhagavat was, talked pleasantly with Bhagavat, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable conve they sat down apart. Sitting down apart the young man Vasettha addressed Bhagavat in sta

1. 'We are accepted and acknowledged masters of the three Vedas[1], I am (a pupil) of Pc
this young man is (the pupil) of Tarukkha. (594)

2. 'We are accomplished in all the knowledge propounded by those who are acquainted w
we are padakas (versed in the metre), veyyakaranas (grammarians?), and equal to our teac (gappa)[2]. (595)

3. 'We have a controversy regarding (the distinctions of) birth, O Gotama! Bharadvaga say Bramana by birth, and I say, by deeds; know this, O thou clearly-seeing! (596)

4. 'We are both unable to convince each other, (therefore) we have come to ask thee (who perfectly enlightened. (597)

5. 'As people adoring the full moon worship (her) with uplifted clasped hands, so (they wor
the world. (598)

6. 'We ask Gotama who has come as an eye to the world: Is a man a Brahmana by birth, c

[1. Anunnatapatinnata
Tevigga mayam asm' ubho.

2. Tevigganam[*] yad akkhatam
Tatra kevalino 'smase,
Padak' asma veyyakarana,
Gappe[+] akariyasadisa.

*. Tevigganam = tivedanam. Commentator; but compare .

+. Gappe = vede. Commentator.]

p. 111

by deeds? Tell us who do not know, that we may know a Bramana.' (599)

7. 'I will explain to you, O Vasettha,'--so said Bhagavat,--'in due order the exact distinction beings according to species, for their species are manifold. (600)

8. 'Know ye the grass and the trees, although they do not exhibit (it), the marks that consti are for them, and (their) species are manifold. (601)

9. 'Then (know ye) the worms, and the moths, and the different sorts of ants, the marks tha species are for them, and (their) species are manifold. (602)

10. 'Know ye also the four-footed (animals), small and great, the marks that constitute spe them, and (their) species are manifold. (603)

11. 'Know ye also the serpents, the long-backed snakes, the marks that constitute species
(their) species are manifold. (604)

12. 'Then know ye also the fish which range in the water, the marks that constitute species and (their) species are manifold. (605)

13. 'Then know ye also the birds that are borne along on wings and move through the air, constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold. (606)

14. 'As in these species the marks that constitute species are abundant, so in men the ma constitute species are not abundant. (607)

15. 'Not as regards their hair, head, ears, eyes, mouth, nose, lips, or brows, (608)

16. 'Nor as regards their neck, shoulders, belly, back, hip, breast, female organ, sexual int
(609)

p. 112

17. 'Nor as regards their hands, feet, palms, nails, calves, thighs, colour, or voice are there constitute species as in other species. (610)

18. 'Difference there is in beings endowed with bodies, but amongst men this is not the ca difference amongst men is nominal (only)[1]. (611)

19. 'For whoever amongst men lives by cowkeeping,--know this, O Vasettha,--he is a husb
Bramana.' (612)

20. 'And whoever amongst men lives by different mechanical arts,--know this, O Vasettha, not a Bramana. (613)

21. 'And whoever amongst men lives by trade,--know this, O Vasettha,--he is a merchant, (614)

22. And whoever amongst men lives by serving others,--know this, O Vasettha,--he is a se Brahmana. (615)

23. 'And whoever amongst men lives by theft,--know this, O Vasettha,--he is a thief, not a

24. 'And whoever amongst men lives by archery,--know this, O Vasettha,--he is a soldier, (617)

25. 'And whoever amongst men lives by performing household ceremonials,--know this, O sacrificer, not a Bramana. (618)

26. 'And whoever amongst men possesses villages and countries,--know this, O Vasettha Bramana. (619)

[1. Pakkattam sasariresu, Manussesv-etam na viggati,
Vokaran ka manussesu Samannaya pavukkati.]

p. 113

27. 'And I do not call one a Bramana on account of his birth or of his origin from (a particul he may be called bhovadi, and he may be wealthy, (but) the one who is possessed of nothir nothing, him I call a Brahmana[1]. (620)

28. 'Whosoever, after cutting all bonds, does not tremble, has shaken off (all) ties and is lib I call a Bramana. (621)

29. 'The man who, after cutting the strap (i.e. enmity), the thong (i.e. attachment), and the scepticism) with all that pertains to it, has destroyed (all) obstacles (i.e. ignorance), the enlig (buddha), him I call a Bramana. (622)

30. 'Whosoever, being innocent, endures reproach, blows, and bonds, the man who is stro endurance and has for his army this strength, him I call a Bramana. (623)

31. 'The man who is free from anger, endowed with (holy) works, virtuous, without desire, wearing the last body, him I call a Brahmana. (624)

32. 'The man who, like water on a lotus leaf, or a mustard seed on the point of a needle, d sensual pleasures, him I call a Brahmana. (625)

33. 'The man who knows in this world the destruction of his pain, who has laid aside (his) l liberated, him I call a Bramana. (626)

34. 'The man who has a profound understanding, who is wise, who knows the true way an has attained the highest good, him I call a Bramana. (627)

[1. Comp. , &c.]

p. 114

35. 'The man who does not mix with householders nor with the houseless, who wanders a and who has few wants, him I call a Brahmana. (628)

36. 'Whosoever, after refraining from hurting (living) creatures, (both) those that tremble ar are strong, does not kill or cause to be killed, him I call a Bramana. (629)

37. 'The man who is not hostile amongst the hostile, who is peaceful amongst the violent, anything) amongst those that seize (upon everything), him I call a Bramana. (630)

38. 'The man whose passion and hatred, arrogance and hypocrisy have dropt like a musta point of a needle, him I call a Bramana. (631)

39. 'The man that utters true speech, instructive and free from harshness, by which he doe
one, him I call a Bramana. (632)

40. 'Whosoever in the world does not take what has not been given (to him), be it long or s large, good or bad, him I call a Brahmana. (633)

41. 'The man who has no desire for this world or the next, who is desireless and liberated, Bramana. (634)

42. 'The man who has no desire, who knowingly is free from doubt; and has attained the d immortality, him I call a Bramana. (635)

43. 'Whosoever in this world has overcome good and evil, both ties, who is free from grief and is pure, him I call a Bramana. (636)

44. 'The man that is stainless like the moon, pure, serene, and undisturbed, who has destr
call a Bramana. (637)

p. 115

45. 'Whosoever has passed over this quagmire difficult to pass, (who has passed over) rev and folly, who has crossed over, who has reached the other shore, who is meditative, free fr doubt, calm without seizing (upon anything), him I call a Bramana. (638)

46. 'Whosoever in this world, after abandoning sensual pleasures, wanders about housele destroyed the existence of sensual pleasures (kamabhava), him I call a Bramana. (639)

47. 'Whosoever in this world, after abandoning desire, wanders about houseless, and has existence of desire (tanhabhava), him I call a Bramana. (640)

48. 'Whosoever, after leaving human attachment (yoga), has overcome divine attachment, from all attachment, him I call a Brahmana. (641)

49. 'The man that, after leaving pleasure and disgust, is calm and free from the elements o (nirupadhi), who is a hero, and has conquered all the world, him I call a Bramana. (642)

50. 'Whosoever knows wholly the vanishing and reappearance of beings, does not cling to happy (sugata), and enlightened, him I call a Bramana. (643)

51. 'The man whose way neither gods nor Gandhabbas nbr men know, and whose passio saint, him I call a Bramana. (644)

52. 'The man for whom there is nothing, neither before nor after nor in the middle, who pos and does not seize (upon anything), him I call a Bramana. (645)

53. 'The (man that is undaunted like a) bull, who

p. 116

is eminent, a hero, a great sage (mahesi), victorious, free from desire, purified, enlightened, Bramana. (646)

54. 'The man who knows his former dwellings, who sees both heaven and hell, and has re of births, him I call a Bramana. (647)

55. 'For what has been designated as "name" and "family" in the world is only a term, wha designated here and there is understood by common consent[1]. (648)

56. 'Adhered to for a long time are the views of the ignorant, the ignorant tell us, one is a B
birth. (649)

57. 'Not by birth is one a Bramana, nor is one by birth no Bramana; by work (kammana) or work one is no Bramana. (650)

58. 'By work one is a husbandman, by work one is an artisan, by work one is a merchant, servant. (651)

59. 'By work one is a thief, by work one is a soldier, by work one is a sacrificer, by work on (652)

60. 'So the wise, who see the cause of things and understand the result of work, know this really is[2]. (653)

61. 'By work the world exists, by work mankind

[1. Samanna h' esa lokasmim Namagottam pakappitam,
Sammukka samudagatam
Tattha tattha pakappitam.

2. Evam etam yathabhutam
Kammam passanti pandita

Patikkasamuppadadasa Kammavipakakovida.]

p. 117

exists, beings are bound by work as the linch-pin of the rolling cart (keeps the wheel on)[1].

62. 'By penance, by a religious life, by self-restraint, and by temperance, by this one is a B a one (they call) the best Bramana. (655)

63. 'He who is endowed with the threefold knowledge[2], is calm, and has destroyed regen this, O Vasettha,--he is to the wise Brahman and Sakka.' (656)

This having been said, the young men Vasettha and Bharadvaga spoke to Bhagavat as fo

'It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises w overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, o
lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable G
ways the Dhamma has been illustrated; we take refuge in the venerable Gotama, in the Dha
Assembly of Bhikkhus; may the venerable Gotama receive us as followers (upasaka), who f have taken refuge (in him).'

Vasetthasutta is ended.

[1. Kammana vattati loko, Kammana vattati paga,
Kammanibandhana satta Rathasaniva yayato.

2. Tihi viggahi sampanno.]

p. 118

10. KOKALIYASUTTA.

Kokaliya abuses Sariputta and Moggallana to Buddha; therefore as soon as he has left Buc with boils, dies and goes to the Paduma hell, whereupon Buddha describes to the Bhikkhus backbiters in hell. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi, in Getavana, in the park of Anathapindika. Then th Kokaliya approached Bhagavat, and after having approached and saluted Bhagavat he sat d apart the Bhikkhu Kokaliya said this to Bhagavat: "O thou venerable one, Sariputta and Mog desires, they have fallen into the power of evil desires.'

When this had been said, Bhagavat spoke to the Bhikkhu Kokaliya as follows: '(Do) not (sa (do) not (say) so, Kokaliya; appease, O Kokaliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sariputta and Mogg and Moggallana are amiable[1].'

A second time the Bhikkhu Kokaliya said this to Bhagavat: 'Although thou, O venerable Bh to me (to be) faithful and trustworthy, yet Sariputta and Moggallana have evil desires, they h the power of evil desires.'

A second time Bhagavat said this to the Bhikkhu Kokaliya: '(Do) not (say) so, Kokaliya; (do Kokaliya; appease, O Kokaliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sariputta and Moggallana: Sariputta a amiable.'

A third time the Bhikkhu Kokaliya said this to Bhagavat: 'Although thou, O venerable Bhag to me (to be) faithful and trustworthy,

[1. Pesala ti piyasila. Commentator.]

p. 119

yet Sariputta and Moggallana have evil desires, Sariputta and Moggallana have fallen into th desires.'

A third time Bhagavat said this to the Bhikkhu Kokaliya: '(Do) not (say) so, Kokaliya; (do) n Kokaliya; appease, O Kokaliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sariputta and Moggallana: Sariputta a amiable.'

Then the Bhikkhu Kokaliya, after having risen from his seat and saluted Bhagavat and wal towards the right, went away; and when he had been gone a short time, all his body was stru large as mustard seeds; after being only as large as mustard seeds, they became as large a after being only as large as kidney beans, they became as large as chick peas; after being o

chick peas, they became as large as a Kolatthi egg (?); after being only as large as a Kolatth became as large as the jujube fruit; after being only as large as the jujube fruit, they became the fruit of the emblic myrobalan; after being only as large as the fruit of the emblic myrobala as large as the unripe beluva fruit; after being only as large as the unripe beluva fruit, they b large as a billi fruit (?); after being as large as a billi fruit, they broke, and matter and blood fl out. Then the Bhikkhu Kokaliya died of that disease, and when he had died the Bhikkhu Kok Paduma hell, having shown a hostile mind against Sariputta and Moggallana. Then when th Brahman Sahampati of a beautiful appearance, having lit up all Getavana, approached Bhag approached and saluted Bhagavat,

p. 120

he stood apart, and standing apart Brahman Sahampati said this to Bhagavat: 'O thou vener the Bhikkhu, is dead and after death, O thou venerable one, the Bhikkhu Kokaliya is gone to having shown a hostile mind against Sariputta and Moggallana.'

This said Brahman Sahampati, and after saying this and saluting Bhagavat, and walking ro right, he disappeared there.

Then Bhagavat, after the expiration of that night, addressed the Bhikkhus thus: 'Last night when the night had (nearly) passed, Brahman Sahampati of a beautiful appearance, having approached Bhagavat, and having approached and saluted Bhagavat, he stood apart, and s Sahampati said this to Bhagavat: "O thou venerable one, Kokaliya, the Bhikkhu, is dead; and thou venerable one, the Bhikkhu Kokaliya is gone to the Paduma hell, having shown a hostil Sariputta and Moggallana." This said Brahman Sahampati, O Bhikkhus, and having said this walked round me towards the right, he disappeared there.'

When this had been said, a Bhikkhu asked Bhagavat: 'How long is the rate of life, O vener Paduma hell?'

'Long, O Bhikkhu, is the rate of life in the Paduma hell, it is not easy to calculate either (by many years or so many hundreds of years or so many thousands of years or so many hundr

'But it is possible, I suppose, to make a comparison, O thou venerable one?'

p. 121

'It is possible, O Bhikkhu;' so saying, Bhagavat spoke (as follows): 'Even as, O Bhikkhu, (if

Kosala load of sesamum seed containing twenty kharis, and a man after the lapse of every l take from it one sesamum seed at a time, then that Kosala load of sesamum seed, containir would, O Bhikkhu, sooner by this means dwindle away and be used up than one Abbuda he twenty Abbuda hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Nirabbuda hell; and even as are twenty Nirabbud so is one Ababa hell; and even as are twenty Ababa hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Ahaha hell; twenty Ahaha hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Atata hell; and even as are twenty Atata hells, O B Kumuda hell; and even as are twenty Kumuda hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Sogandhika hell; Sogandhika hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Uppalaka hell; and even as are twenty Uppalaka he one Pundarika hell; and even as are twenty Pundarika hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Paduma h Paduma hell, O Bhikkhu, the Bhikkhu Kokaliya is gone, having shown a hostile mind against Moggallana.' This said Bhagavat, and having said this Sugata, the Master, furthermore spok

1. 'To (every) man that is born, an axe is born in his mouth, by which the fool cuts himself, bad language. (657)

2. 'He who praises him who is to be blamed or blames him who as to be praised, gathers u and through that (sin) he will not find any joy. (658)

p. 122

3. 'Trifling is the sin that (consists in) losing riches by dice; this is a greater sin that corrupt mind against Sugatas. (659)

4. 'Out of the one hundred thousand Nirabbudas (he goes) to thirty-six, and to five Abbuda blames an Ariya he goes to hell, having employed his speech and mind badly. (660)

5. 'He who speaks falsely goes to hell, or he who having done something says, "I have not these after death become equal, in another world (they are both) men guilty of a mean deed

6. 'He who offends an offenceless man, a pure man, free from sin, such a fool the evil (dee against, like fine dust thrown against the wind[2]. (662)

7. 'He who is given to the quality of covetousness, such a one censures others in his spee himself) unbelieving, stingy, wanting in affability, niggardly, given to backbiting. (663)

8. 'O thou foul-mouthed, false, ignoble, blasting, wicked, evil-doing, low, sinful, base-born be garrulous in this world, (else) thou wilt be an inhabitant of hell[3]. (664)

9. 'Thou spreadest pollution to the misfortune (of others), thou revilest the just, committing (yourself), and having done many evil deeds thou wilt go to the pool (of hell) for a long time.

[1. Comp. .

2. Comp. .

3. Mukhadugga vibhuta-m-anariya
Bhunahu[*] papaka dukkatakari
Purisanta kali avagata
Ma bahubhani dha nerayiko si.

*. Bhunahu bhutihanaka vuddhinasaka. Commentator.]

p. 123

110. 'For one's deeds are not lost, they will surely come (back to you), (their) master will m them, the fool who commits sin will feel the pain in himself in the other world[1]. (666)

11. 'To the place where one is struck with iron rods, to the iron stake with sharp edges he there is (for him) food as appropriate, resembling a red-hot ball of iron. (667)

12. 'For those who have anything to say (there) do not say fine things, they do not approac faces); they do not find refuge (from their sufferings), they lie on spread embers, they enter a (668)

13. 'Covering (them) with a net they kill (them) there with iron hammers; they go to dense that is spread out like the body of the earth. (669)

14. 'Then (they enter) an iron pot, they enter a blazing pyre, for they are boiled in those (ir a long time, jumping up and down in the pyre. (670)

15. 'Then he who commits sin is surely boiled in a mixture of matter and blood; whatever c inhabits, he becomes rotten there from coming in contact (with matter and blood). (671)

16. 'He who commits sin will surely be boiled in the water, the dwelling-place of worms; the (possible) to get to the shore, for the jars (are) exactly alike[3]. (?) (672)

[1. Comp. .

2. Andham va Timisam ayanti.

3. Pulavavasathe salilasmim
Tattha kim pakkati kibbisakari,
Gantum na hi tiram p' atthi Sabbasama hi samantakapalla.]

p. 124

17. 'Again they enter the sharp Asipattavana with mangled limbs; having seized the tongu different watchmen (of hell) kill (them). (673)

18. 'Then they enter Vetarani, that is difficult to cross and has got streams of razors with s
there the fools fall in, the evil-doers after having done evil. (674)

19. 'There black, mottled flocks of ravens eat them who are weeping, and dogs, jackals, g falcons, crows tear (them). (675)

20. 'Miserable indeed is the life here (in hell) which the man sees that commits sin. Theref man in this world for the rest of his life be strenuous, and not indolent. (676)

21. 'Those loads of sesamum seed which are carried in Paduma hell have been counted b (several) nahutas and five kotis, and twelve hundred kotis besides[1]. (677)

22. 'As long as hells are called painful in this world, so long people will have to live there fo time; therefore amongst those who have pure, amiable, and good qualities one should alway
mind.' (678)

Kokaliyasutta is ended.

11. NALAKASUTTA.

The Isi Asita, also called Kanhasiri, on seeing the gods rejoicing, asks the cause of it, and h that Buddha has been born, he descends from Tusita heaven. When the Sakyas showed the received it joyfully and prophesied [1. Nahutani hi kotiyo panka bhavanti Dvadasa kotisatani pun' anna.]p. 125 about it. Buddha explains to Nalaka, the sister's son of Asita, the highest state of wisdom.-- Lalita-vistara, Adhyaya VII; Asita and Buddha, or the Indian Simeon, by J. Muir, in the Indian Sept. 1878.Vatthugatha.

1. The Isi Asita saw in (their) resting-places during the day the joyful, delighted flocks of th gods, and the gods in bright clothes, always highly praising Inda, after taking their clothes ar (679)

2. Seeing the gods with pleased minds, delighted, and showing his respect, he said this or
'Why is the assembly of the gods so exceedingly pleased, why do they take their clothes and

3. 'When there was an encounter with the Asuras, a victory for the gods, and the Asuras w there was not such a rejoicing. What wonderful (thing) have the gods seen that they are so c

4. 'They shout and sing and make music, they throw (about their) arms and dance; I ask y of the tops of (mount) Meru, remove my doubt quickly, O venerable ones!' (682)

5. 'The Bodhisatta, the excellent pearl, the incomparable, is born for the good and for a ble world of men, in the town of the Sakyas, in the country of Lumbini. Therefore we are glad an pleased. (683)

6. 'He, the most excellent of all beings, the preeminent man, the bull of men, the most exc creatures will turn the wheel (of the Dhamma) in the forest called after the Isis, (he who is) li roaring lion, the strong lord of beasts.' (684)

p. 126

7. Having heard that noise he descended from (the heaven of) Tusita. Then he went to Su and having sat down there he said this to the Sakyas: 'Where is the prince? I wish to see (hi

8. Then the Sakyas showed to (the Isi), called Asita, the child, the prince who was like shi manufactured by a very skilful (smith) in the mouth of a forge, and beaming in glory and hav appearance. (686)

9. Seeing the prince shining like fire, bright like the bull of stars wandering in the sky, like t burning sun in autumn, free from clouds, he joyfully obtained great delight. (687)

10. The gods held in the sky a parasol with a thousand circles and numerous branches, ya golden sticks were fanned, but those who held the yaks' tails and the parasol were not seen

11. The Isi with the matted hair, by name Kanhasiri, on seeing the yellow blankets (shining coin, and the white parasol held over his head, received him delighted and happy. (689)

12. And having received the bull of the Sakyas, he who was wishing to receive him and kn the hymns, with pleased thoughts raised his voice, saying: 'Without superior is this, the most men.' (690)

13. Then remembering his own migration he was displeased and shed tears; seeing this th weeping Isi, whether there would be any obstacle in the prince's path. (691)

14. Seeing the Sakyas displeased the Isi said: 'I do not remember anything (that will be) u prince, there will be no obstacles at all for him, for this is no inferior (person). Be without anxiety. (692)

p. 127

15. ' This prince will reach the summit of perfect enlightenment, he will turn the wheel of th who sees what is exceedingly pure (i.e. Nibbana), this (prince) feels for the welfare of the mu his religion[1] will be widely spread. (693)

16. 'My life here will shortly be at an end, in the middle (of his life) there will be death for m shall not hear the Dhamma of the incomparable one; therefore I am afflicted, unfortunate, an (694)

17. Having afforded the Sakyas great joy he went out from the interior of the town to lead a life; but taking pity on his sister's son, he induced him to embrace the Dhamma of the incom

18. 'When thou hearest from others the sound "Buddha," (or) "he who has acquired perfec walks the way of the Dhamma," then going there and enquiring about the particulars, lead a that Bhagavat.' (696)

19. Instructed by him, the friendly-minded, by one who saw in the future what is exceeding Nibbana), he, Nalaka, with a heap of gathered-up good works, and with guarded senses dw forward to Gina (i.e. Buddha). (697)

20. Hearing the noise, while the excellent Gina turned the wheel (of the Dhamma), and go bull of the Isis, he, after being converted,

[1. Brahmakariyam = sasanam. Commentator.]

p. 128

asked the eminent Muni about the best wisdom, when the time of Asita's order had come. (6

The Vatthugathas are ended.

21. 'These words of Asita are acknowledged true (by me), therefore we ask thee, O Gotan in all things (dhamma). (699)

22. 'O Muni, to me who am houseless, and who wish to embrace a Bhikkhu's life, explain highest state, the state of wisdom (moneyya).' (700)

23. 'I will declare to thee the state of wisdom,'--so said Bhagavat,--'difficult to carry out, an difficult to obtain; come, I will explain it to thee, stand fast, be firm. (701)

24. 'Let a man cultivate equanimity: which is (both) reviled and praised in the village, let hi not to corrupt his mind, let him live calm, and without pride. (702)

25. 'Various (objects) disappear, like a flame of fire in the wood[1]; women tempt the Muni tempt him. (703)

26. 'Let him be disgusted with sexual intercourse, having left behind sensual pleasures of inoffensive and dispassionate towards living creatures, towards anything that is feeble or str

27. 'As I am so are these, as these are so am I, identifying himself with others, let him not cause (any one) to kill[2]. (705)

[1. Ukkavaka nikkharanti Daye aggisikhupama.

2. Yatha aham tatha ete
Yatha ete tatha aham
Attanam upamam katva
Na haneyya na ghataye.
Comp. .]

p. 129

28. 'Having abdoned desire and covetousness let him act as one that sees clearly where a let him cross over this hell. (706)

29. 'Let him be with an empty stomach, taking little food, let him have few wants and not b being consumed by desire he will without desire be happy. (707)

30. 'Let the Muni, after going about for alms, repair to the outskirts of the wood, let him go near the root of a tree. (708)

31. 'Applying himself to meditation, and being wise, let him find his pleasure in the outskirt wood, let him meditate at the root of a tree enjoying himself. (709)

32. 'Then when night is passing away let him repair to the outskirts of the village, let him n being invited nor in what is brought away from the village. (710)

33. 'Let not the Muni, after going to the village, walk about to the houses in haste; cutting o talk while seeking food, let him not utter any coherent speech[1]. (711)

34. '"What I have obtained that is good," "I did not get (anything that is) good," so thinking cases he returns to the tree unchanged[2]. (712)

35. "Wandering about with his alms-bowl in his

[1. Na vakam payutam bhane.

2. Alattham yad idam sadhu
Nalattham kusalam iti,
Ubhayen' eva so tadi[*]
Rukkham va upanivattati.

*. Tadi = nibbikaro. Commentator.]

p. 130

hand, considered dumb without being dumb, let him not blush at a little gift, let him not desp (713)

36. 'Various are the practices illustrated by the Samana, they do not go twice to the other s
(is) not once thought[1]. (?) (714)

37. 'For whom there is no desire, for the Bhikkhu who has cut off the stream (of existence)
all kinds of work, there is no pain. (715)

38. 'I will declare to thee the state of wisdom,'--so said Bhagavat,--'let one be like the edge having struck his palate with his tongue, let him be restrained in (regard to his) stomach. (71

39. 'Let his mind be free from attachment, let him not think much[2] (about worldly affairs), without defilement, independent, and devoted to a religious life. (717)

40. 'For the sake of a solitary life and for the sake of the service that is to be carried out by let him learn, solitariness is called wisdom[3]; alone indeed he will find pleasure. (718)

41. 'Then he will shine through the ten regions, having heard the voice of the wise, of the r those that have abandoned sensual pleasures, let my adherent then still more devote himse belief. (719)

42. 'Understand this from the waters in chasms

[1. Ukkavaka hi patipada Samanena pakasita,
Na param digunam yanti,
Na idam ekagunam mutam.

2. Na kapi bahu kintaye.

3. Ekattam monam akkhatam.]

p. 131

and cracks: noisy go the small waters, silent goes the vast ocean[1]. (720)

43. 'What is deficient that makes a noise, what is full that is calm; the fool is like a half-(fille water-pot, the wise is like a full pool. (721)

44. 'When the Samana speaks much that is possessed of good sense, he teaches the Dha while knowing it he speaks much[2]. (722)

45. 'But he who while knowing it is self-restrained, and while knowing it does not speak mu deserves wisdom (mona), such a Muni has attained to wisdom (mona)[3].' (723)

Nalakasutta is ended.

12. DVAYATANUPASSANASUTTA.

All pain in the world arises from upadhi, avigga, samkhara vinnana, phassa, vedana, tanha, ahara, ingita, nissaya, rupa, mosadhamma, sukha. So it was heard by me:

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Savatthi in Pubbarama, Migaramatar's mansion. At that tim Uposatha day[4], on the fifteenth,

[1. Tan nadihi viganatha Sobbhesu padaresu ka:
Sananta yanti kussobbha
Tunhi yati mahodadhi.

2. Yam samano bahu bhasati
Upetam atthasamhitam
Ganam so dhammam deseti
Ganam so bahu bhasati.

3. Yo ka ganam samyatatto
Ganam na bahu bhasati
Sa muni monam arahati
Sa muni monam agghaga.

4. See Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 140.]

p. 132

it being full moon, in the evening was sitting in the open air, surrounded by the assembly of Bhagavat surveying the silent assembly of Bhikkhus addressed them (as follows):

'Whichever Dhammas there are, O Bhikkhus, good, noble, liberating, leading to perfect en is the use to you of listening to these good, noble, liberating Dhammas, leading to perfect en O Bhikkhus, there should be people that ask so, they shall be answered thus: "Yes, for the r of the two Dhammas." "Which two do you mean?" "(I mean), this is pain, this is the origin of one consideration, "this is the destruction of pain, this is the way leading to the destruction o is the second consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly[ ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This sa
(and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

1. 'Those who do not understand pain and the origin of pain, and where pain wholly and to and do not know the way that leads to the cessation of pain, (724)

2. 'They, deprived of the emancipation of thought

[1. . . . ka upanisa savanaya,'ti iti ke bhikknave pukkhitaro assu te evam assu vakaniya: yava dhammanam yathabhutam nanaya 'ti, kinka dvayatam vadetha? 'idam dukkham, ayam dukk ekanupassana, 'ayam dukkhanirodho, ayam dukkhanirodhagamini patipada' ti ayam dutiyan sammadvayatanupassino . . .]

p. 133

and the emancipation of knowledge, are unable to put an end (to samsara), they will verily c birth and decay. (725)

3. 'And those who understand pain and the origin of pain, and where pain wholly and totall who know the way that leads to the cessation of pain, (726)

4. 'They, endowed with the emancipation of thought and the emancipation of knowledge, a end (to samsara), they will not undergo birth and decay. (727)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons the upadhis (elements of existence)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destr upadhis, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second considera Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, o fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still re the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata Master further spoke:

5. 'Whatever pains there are in the world, of many kinds, they arise having their cause in t who being ignorant creates upadhi, that fool again undergoes pain; therefore being wise do considering what is the birth and origin of pain. (728)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the

p. 134

Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there i there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of avigga (ignorance)," this is one cons from the complete destruction of avigga, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pa second consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This sa (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

6. 'Those who again and again go to samsara with birth and death, to existence in this way way,--that is the state of avigga. (729)

7. 'For this avigga is the great folly by which this (existence) has been traversed long, but who resort to knowledge do not go to rebirth. (730)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons the samkharas (matter)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain,

p. 135

of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat; (and) when Sugata had said further spoke:

8. 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the samkharas, by the destruction of the will be no origin of pain. (731)

9. 'Looking upon this pain that springs from the samkharas as misery, from the cessation o samkharas, and from the destruction of consciousness will arise the destruction of pain, hav
this exactly, (732)

10. 'The wise who have true views and are accomplished, having understood (all things) c having conquered all association with Mara, do not go to re-birth. (733)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons vinnana (consciousness)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of vi absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus, O Bhik Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fru expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the sta Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, spoke:

11. 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of vinnana, by the destruction of vinnana t origin of pain. (734)

p. 136

12. 'Looking upon this pain that springs from vinnana as misery, from the cessation of vinn free from desire (will be) perfectly happy (parinibbuta). (735)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons phassa (touch)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of phassa, thro passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be ex

this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Ana that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master furth

13. 'For those who are ruined by phassa, who follow the stream of existence, who have er the destruction of bonds is far off. (736)

14. 'But those who, having fully understood phassa, knowingly have taken delight in cessa from the comprehension of phassa, and being free from desire, are perfectly happy. (737)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons
the vedanas (sensations)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of th through absence of passion, there

p. 137

no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that co duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in this world knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that d return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

15. 'Pleasure or pain, together with want of pleasure and want of pain, whatever is perceiv and externally, (738)

16. 'Looking upon this as pain, having touched what is perishable and fragile, seeing the d everything), the Bhikkhu is disgusted, having from the perishing of the vedanas become free perfectly happy. (739)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons tanha (desire)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of tanha, throug passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be ex
this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Ana
that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master furth

17. 'A man accompanied by tanha, for a long time transmigrating into existence in this way that way, does not overcome transmigration (samsara). (740)

18. 'Looking upon this as misery, this origin of the pain of tanha, let the Bhikkhu free from seizing (upon anything), thoughtful, wander about. (741)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons
the upadanas (the seizures)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction o through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said further spoke:

19. 'The existence is in consequence of the upadanas; he who has come into existence go has been born is to die, this is the origin of pain. (742)

20. 'Therefore from the destruction of the upadanas the wise with perfect knowledge, havi causes) the destruction of birth, do not go to re-birth. (743)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the arambhas (exertions)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete arambhas, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second conside Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, o fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still re the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata Master further spoke:

21. 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the arambhas, by the destruction of the
is no origin of pain. (744)

22, 23. 'Looking upon this pain that springs from the arambhas as misery, having abandon arambhas, birth and transmigration have been crossed over by the Bhikkhu who is liberated has cut off the desire for existence, and whose mind is calm; there is for him no re-birth. (74

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons the aharas (food?)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the ahar absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus, O Bhik Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fr expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) whe this, the Master further spoke:

p. 140

24. 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the aharas, by the destruction of the aha origin of pain. (747)

25. 'Looking upon this pain that springs from the aharas as misery, having seen the result not resorting to all aharas, (748)

26. 'Having seen that health is from the destruction of desire, he that serves discriminating fast in the Dhamma cannot be reckoned as existing, being accomplished[1]. (749)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "Whatever pain arises is all in cons the ingitas (commotions)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of th through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration; thus by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said further spoke:

27. 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the ingitas, by the destruction of the ing no origin of pain. (750)

28. 'Looking upon this pain that springs from

[1. Samkham nopeti vedagu.]

p. 141

the ingitas as misery, and therefore having abandoned the ingitas and having stopped the s Bhikkhu free from desire and not seizing (upon anything), thoughtful, wander about. (751)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "For the nissita (dependent) there i vacillation," this is one consideration, "the independent (man) does not vacillate," this is the consideration; thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenu resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any o attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that does not return).' This said Bhagav Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

29. 'The independent (man) does not vacillate, and the dependent (man) seizing upon exis in another, does not overcome samsara. (752).

30. 'Looking upon this as misery (and seeing) great danger in things you depend upon, let about independent, not seizing (upon anything), thoughtful. (753)

"'Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "The formless (beings), O Bhikkhus than the rupas (for ruppa, i.e. form-possessing)," this is one consideration, "cessation is calm formless," this is another consideration, "thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers

p. 142

the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (on not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

31. 'Those beings who are possessed of form, and those who dwell in the formless (world)
cessation, have to go to re-birth. (754)

32. 'But those who, having fully comprehended the forms, stand fast in the formless (world liberated in the cessation, such beings leave death behind. (755)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "What has been considered true by men, together with the gods, Mara, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Bramanas, gods, noble through their perfect knowledge been well seen to be really false," this is one consider Bhikkhus, has been considered false by the world of men, together with the gods, Mara, Bra the Samanas, Bramanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble through their perfect knowle be really true," this is another consideration. Thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that consider that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected: in this world perfe knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anagamin (one that d return).' This said Bhagavat,

p. 143

(and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke:

33. 'Seeing the real in the unreal, the world of men and gods dwelling in name and form[1] "This is true." (756)

34. 'Whichever way they think (it), it becomes otherwise, for it is false to him, and what is f perishable[2]. (?) (757)

35. 'What is not false, the Nibbana, that the noble conceive as true, they verily from the co truth are free from desire (and) perfectly happy[3]. (758)

'"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is: "What, O Bhikkhus, has been cons by the world of men, gods, Mara, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Bramanas, gods, an noble by (their) perfect knowledge been well seen to be really pain," this is one consideratio Bhikkhus, has been considered pain by the world of men, gods, Mara, Brahman, and among Brahmanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble by their perfect knowledge been well see pleasure," this is the second consideration. Thus, O

[1. Namarupasmim, 'individuality.'

2. Yena yena hi mannanti
Tato tam hoti annatha,
Tam hi tassa musa hoti,
Mosadhammam hi ittaram.

3. Amosadhammam nibbanam
Tad ariya sakkato vidu,
Te ye sakkabhisamaya Nikkhata parinibbuta.]

p. 144

Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu who considers the Dyad duly, who is strenuous, ardent, resolute, c
fruit is to be expected: in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still re the state of an Anagamin (one who does not return).' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugat Master further spoke:

36. 'Form, sound, taste, smell, and touch are all wished for, pleasing and charming (things they last, so it is said. (759)

37. 'By you, by the world of men and gods these (things) are deemed a pleasure, but wher deemed pain by them. (760)

38. 'By the noble the cessation of the existing body is regarded as pleasure; this is the opp
(what) the wise in all the world (hold)[1]. (761)

39. 'What fools say is pleasure that the noble say is pain, what fools say is pain that the no pleasure:--see here is a thing difficult to understand, here the ignorant are confounded. (762

40. 'For those that are enveloped there is gloom, for those that do not see there is darknes good it is manifest, for those that see there is light; (even being) near, those that are ignoran and the Dhamma, do not discern (anything)[2]. (763)

[1. Sukhan ti dittham ariyehi Sakkayass' uparodhanam,
Pakkanikam idam hoti Sabbalokena passatam.

2. Nivutanam tamo hoti
Andhakaro apassatam,
Satan ka vivatam hoti
Aloko passatam iva,

Santike na vigananti Magadhammass' akovida.]

p. 145

41. 'By those that are overcome by the passions of existence, by those that follow the stre by those that have entered the realm of Mara, this Dhamma is not perfectly understood. (764

42. 'Who except the noble deserve the well-understood state (of Nibbana)? Having perfec state, those free from passion are completely extinguished[1].' (765)

This spoke Bhagavat. Glad those Bhikkhus rejoiced at the words of Bhagavat. While this e being given, the minds of sixty Bhikkhus, not seizing (upon anything), were liberated.

Dvayatanupassanasutta is ended.

Mahavagga, the third.

[1. Ko nu annatra-m-ariyehi
Padam sambuddham arahati
Yam padam samma-d-annaya
Parinibbanti anasava.]

Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 10: The Dhammapada and Sutta Nipata, by Max Muller and sacred-texts.com

p. 146

IV. ATTHAKAVAGGA.

1. KAMASUTTA.

Sensual pleasures are to be avoided. 1. If he who desires sensual pleasures is successful becomes glad-minded, having obtained what a mortal wishes for. (766)

2. But if those sensual pleasures fail the person who desires and wishes (for them), he wil pierced by the arrow (of pain). (767)

3. He who avoids sensual pleasures as (he would avoid treading upon) the head of a snak such a one, being thoughtful (sato), will conquer this desire. (768)

4. He who covets extensively (such) pleasures (as these), fields, goods, or gold, cows and servants, women, relations, (769)

5. Sins will overpower him, dangers will crush him, and pain will follow him as water (pours ship. (770)

6. Therefore let one always be thoughtful, and avoid pleasures; having abandoned them, l stream, after baling out the ship, and go to the other shore. (771)

Kamasutta is ended.

p. 147

2. GUHATTHAKASUTTA.

Let no one cling to existence and sensual pleasures. 1. A man that lives adhering to the ca body), who is covered with much (sin), and sunk into delusion, such a one is far from seclus sensual pleasures in the world are not easy to abandon. (772)

2. Those whose wishes are their motives, those who are linked to the pleasures of the wor difficult to liberate, for they cannot be liberated by others, looking for what is after or what is coveting these and former sensual pleasures. (773)

3. Those who are greedy of, given to, and infatuated by sensual pleasures, those who are having entered upon what is wicked, wail when they are subjected to pain, saying: 'What wil when we die away from here?' (774)

4. Therefore let a man here[1] learn, whatever he knows as wicked in the world, let him no that (?) practise (what is) wicked[2]; for short is this life, say the wise. (775)

5. I see in the world this trembling race given to desire for existences; they are wretched m in the mouth of death, not being free from the desire for reiterated existences. (776)

6. Look upon those men trembling in selfishness, like fish in a stream nearly dried up, with seeing this, let one wander about unselfish, without forming any attachment to existences. (

[1. Idheva = imasmim yeva sasane. Commentator.

2. Na tassa hetu visamam kareyya.]

p. 148

7. Having subdued his wish for both ends[1], having fully understood touch without being g what he has himself blamed, the wise (man) does not cling to what is seen and heard[2]. (77

8. Having understood name[3], let the Muni cross over the stream, not defiled by any gras pulled out the arrow (of passion), wandering about strenuous, he does not wish for this worl (779)

Guhatthakasutta is ended.

3. DUTTHATTHAKASUTTA.

The Muni undergoes no censure, for he has shaken off all systems of philosophy, and is the

1. Verily, some wicked-minded people censure, and also just-minded people censure, but t undergo the censure that has arisen; therefore there is not a discontented (khila) Muni anyw

2. How can he who is led by his wishes and possessed by his inclinations overcome his ov Doing his own doings let him talk according to his understanding[4]. (781)

3. The person who, without being asked, praises

[1. Comp. .

2. Ubhosu antesu vineyya khandam
Phassam parinnaya ananugiddho
Yad atta garahi tad akubbamano
Na lippati ditthasutesu dhiro.

3. Sannam = namarupam. Commentator.

4. Sakam hi ditthim katham akkayeyya
Khandanunito rukiya nivittho,
Sayam samattani pakubbamano
Yatha hi ganeyya tatha vadeyya.]

p. 149

his own virtue and (holy) works to others, him the good call ignoble, one who praises himsel

4. But the Bhikkhu who is calm and of a happy mind, thus not praising himself for his virtue call noble, one for whom there are no desires anywhere in the world[2]. (783)

5. He whose Dhammas are (arbitrarily) formed and fabricated, placed in front, and confuse in himself a good result, is therefore given to (the view which is called) kuppa-patikka-santi[3

6. For the dogmas of philosophy are not easy to overcome, amongst the Dhammas (now t adopted after consideration; therefore a man rejects and adopts (now this and now that) Dha dogmas[4]. (785)

7. For him who has shaken off (sin) there is nowhere in the world any prejudiced view of th existences; he who has shaken off (sin), after leaving deceit and arrogance behind, which (w he (is) independent[6]. (786)

[1. Yo atumanam sayam eva pava = yo evam attanam sayam eva vadati. Commentator.

2. Yass' ussada n' atthi kuhinki loke.

3. Pakappita samkhata yassa dhamma
Purakkhata santi avivadata
Yad attani passati anisamsam
Tam nissito kuppapatikkasantim.

4. Ditthinivesa na hi svativatta,
Dhammesu nikkheyya samuggahitam,
Tasma naro tesu nivesanesu
Nirassati adiyati-kka dhammam.
Comp. .

5. Dhonassa hi n' atthi kuhinki loke
Pakappita ditthi bhavabhavesu,
Mayan ka manan ka pahaya dhono Sa kena gakkheyya, anupayo so.]

p. 150

8. But he who is dependent undergoes censure amongst the Dhammas; with what (name) him who is independent? For by him there is nothing grasped or rejected, he has in this worl (philosophical) view[1]. (787)

Dutthatthakasutta is ended.

4. SUDDHATTHAKASUTTA.

No one is purified by philosophy, those devoted to philosophy run from one teacher to anot are not led by passion, and do not embrace anything in the world as the highest. 1. I see a excellent, sound man, by his views a man's purification takes place, holding this opinion, an this view to be the highest he goes back to knowledge, thinking to see what is pure[2]. (788)

2. If a man's purification takes place by (his philosophical) views, or he by knowledge leav then he is purified by another (way than the ariyamagga, i.e. the noble way), together with h account of his views he tells him to say so[3]. (789)

[1. Upayo[*] hi dhammesu upeti vadam
Anupayam kena katham vadeyya
Attam nirattam na hi tassa atthi
Adhosi so ditthim idh' eva sabbam.

2. Passami suddham paramam arogam,
Ditthena samsuddhi narassa hoti,
Et' abhiganam paraman ti natva.
Suddhanupassiti pakketi nanam.

3. Ditthihi nam pava tatha vadanam.
Comp. ; .

*. Upayo ti tanhaditthinissito. Commentator.]

p. 151

3. But the Brahmana who does not cling to what has been seen, or heard, to virtue and (h what has been thought, to what is good and to what is evil, and who leaves behind what has without doing anything in this world, he does not acknowledge that purification cornes from a

4. Having left (their) former (teacher) they go to another, following their desires they do no asunder their ties; they grasp, they let go like a monkey letting go the branch (just) after hav (hold of it). (791)

5. Having himself undertaken some (holy) works he goes to various (things) led by his sen great understanding, a wise man who by his wisdom has understood the Dhamma, does no (occupations). (792)

6. He being secluded amongst all the Dhammas, whatever has been seen, heard, or thoug in this world be able to alter him, the seeing one, who wanders openly[2]? (793)

7. They do not form (any view), they do not prefer (anything), they do not say, 'I am infinite having cut the tied knot of attachment, they do not long for (anything) anywhere in the world

[1.Na brahmano annato suddhim aha
Ditthe sute silavate mute va
punne ka pape ka anupalitto
Attangaho na idha pakubbamano.

2. Sa sabbadhammesu visenibhuto[*]
Yam kinki dittham va sutam mutam va
Tam eva dassim vivatam karantam

Ken' idha lokasmim vikappayeyya?

*. Marasenam vinasetva thitabhavena visenibhuto. Commentator.]

p. 152

8. He is a Brahmana that has conquered (sin)[1]; by him there is nothing embraced after k it; he is not affected by any kind of passion; there is nothing grasped by him as the highest i (795)

Suddhatthakasutta is ended.

5. PARAMATTHAKASUTTA.

One should not give oneself to philosophical disputations; a Brahmana who does not adopt philosophy, is unchangeable, has reached Nibbana. 1. What one person, abiding by the (p saying, 'This is the most excellent,' considers the highest in the world, everything different fr says is wretched, therefore he has not overcome dispute[2]. (796)

2. Because he sees in himself a good result, with regard to what has been seen (or) heard (holy) works, or what has been thought, therefore, having embraced that, he looks upon eve bad[3]. (797)

3. The expert call just that a tie dependent

[1. Katunnam kilesasimanam atitatta
Simatigo bahitapapatta ka brahmano.

2. Paraman ti ditthisu paribbasano
Yad uttarim kurute gantu loke
Hina ti anne tato sabbam aha, Tasma vivadani avitivatto.
Properly, 'others (are) wretched.'

3. Yad attani passati anisamsam
Ditthe sute silavate mute va

Tad eva so tattha samuggahaya Nihinato passati sabbam annam.]

p. 153

upon which one looks upon anything else as bad. Therefore let a Bhikkhu not depend upon or thought, or upon virtue and (holy) works[1]. (798)

4. Let him not form any (philosophical) view in this world, either by knowledge or by virtue works, let him not represent himself equal (to others), nor think himself either low or distingu

5. Having left what has been grasped, not seizing upon anything he does not depend ever does not associate with those that are taken up by different things, he does not return to any view[2]. (800)

6. For whom there is here no desire for both ends, for reiterated existence either here or in world, for him there are no resting-places (of the mind) embraced after investigation amongs (dhammesu)[3]. (801)

7. In him there is not the least prejudiced idea with regard to what has been seen, heard, c could any one in this world alter such a Brahmana who does not adopt any view? (802)

[1. Tam vapi gantham kusala vadanti
Yam nissito passati hinam annam,
Tasma hi dittham va sutam mutam va
Silabbatam bhikkhu na nissayeyya.

2. Attam pahaya anupadiyano
Nane pi so nissayam no karoti,
Sa ve viyattesu na vaggasari,
Ditthim pi so na pakketi kinki.

3. Yass' ubhayante panidhidha n' atthi
Bhavabhavaya idha va huram va
Nivesana tassa na santi keki Dhammesu nikkheyya samuggahita.]

p. 154

8. They do not form (any view), they do not prefer (anything), the Dhammas are not chose Brahmana is not dependent upon virtue and (holy) works; having gone to the other shore, su return. (803)

Paramatthakasutta is ended.

6. GARASUTTA.

From selfishness come grief and avarice; The Bhikkhu who has turned away frorn the worlc houseless, is independent, and does not wish for purification through another. 1. Short inde within a hundred years one dies, and if any one lives longer, then he dies of old age. (804)

2. People grieve from selfishness, perpetual cares kill them, this (world) is full of disappoin seeing this, let one not live in a house. (805)

3. That even of which a man thinks 'this is mine' is left behind by death: knowing this, let n
(man) turn himself to worldliness (while being my) follower[1]. (806)

4. As a man awakened does not see what he has met with in his sleep, so also he does n person that has passed away and is dead. (807)

5. Both seen and heard are the persons whose particular name is mentioned, but only the

[1. Maranena pi tam pahiyati
Yam puriso mama-y-idan ti mannati,
Evam pi viditva pandito
Na pamattaya nametha mamako.]

remains undecayed of the person that has passed away[1]. (808)

6. The greedy in their selfishness do not leave sorrow, lamentation, and avarice; therefore leaving greediness wandered about seeing security (i.e. Nibbana). (809)

7. For a Bhikkhu, who wanders about unattached and cultivates the mind of a recluse, the that he does not show himself (again) in existence[2]. (810)

8. Under all circumstances the independent Muni does not please nor displease (any one) do not stick to him (as little) as water to a leaf. (811)

9. As a drop of water does not stick to a lotus, as water does not stick to a lotus, so a Mun cling to anything, namely, to what is seen or heard or thought[3]. (812)

10. He who has shaken off (sin) does not therefore think (much of anything) because it ha heard or thought; he does not wish for

[1. Ditthapi sutapi te gana
Yesam namam idam pavukkati
Namam evavasissati
Akkheyyam petassa gantuno.

2. Patilinakarassa bhikkhuno
Bhagamanassa vittamanasam[*]
Samaggiyam ahu tassa tam
Yo attanam bhavane na dassaye.

3. Udabindu yathapi pokkhare
Padume vari yatha na lippati
Evam muni nopalippati
Yad idam dittthasutam mutesu va.

*. Bi has vivitta-.]

p. 156

purification through another, for he is not pleased nor displeased (with anything)[1]. (813)

Garasutta is ended.

7. TISSAMETTEYYASUTTA.

Sexual intercourse should be avoided. 1. 'Tell me, O venerable one,'--so said the venerab Metteyya,--'the defeat of him who is given to sexual intercourse; hearing thy precepts we wil seclusion.' (814)

2. 'The precepts of him who is given to sexual intercourse, O Metteyya,'--so said Bhagava he employs himself wrongly, this is what is ignoble in him. (815)

3. 'He who, having formerly wandered alone, gives himself up to sexual intercourse, him th world a low, common fellow, like a rolling chariot. (816)

4. 'What honour and renown he had before, that is lost for him; having seen this let him lea sexual intercourse. (817)

5. 'He who overcome by his thoughts meditates like a miser, such a one, having heard the others, becomes discontented. (818)

6. 'Then he makes weapons (i.e. commits evil

[1. Dhono na hi tena mannati
Yad idam ditthasutam mutesu va,
Nannena visuddhim ikkhati,
Na hi so raggati no viraggati.
Comp. .]

p. 157

deeds) urged by the doctrines of others, he is very greedy, and sinks into falsehood[1]. (819

7. 'Designated "wise" he has entered upon a solitary life, then having given himself up to s intercourse, he (being) a fool suffers pain. (820)

8. 'Looking upon this as misery let the Muni from first to last in the world firmly keep to his life, let him not give himself up to sexual intercourse. (821)

9. 'Let him learn seclusion, this is the highest for noble men, but let him not therefore think best, although he is verily near Nibbana. (822)

10. 'The Muni who wanders void (of desire), not coveting sensual pleasures, and who has him the creatures that are tied in sensual pleasures envy.' (823)

Tissametteyyasutta is ended.

8. PASURASUTTA.

Disputants brand each other as fools, they wish for praise, but being repulsed they become is not purified by dispute, but by keeping to Buddha, who has shaken off all sin. 1. Here the 'purity,' in other doctrines (dhamma) they do not allow purity; what they have devoted thems they call good, and they enter extensively upon the single truths[2]. (824)

[1. Atha satthani kurute Paravadehi kodito,
Esa khv-assa mahagedho,
Mosavaggam pagahati.

2. Idh' eya suddhim iti vadiyanti
Nannesu dhammesu visuddhim ahu
Yam nissita tattha subham vadana Pakkekasakkesu puthu nivittha.]

p. 158

2. Those wishing for dispute, having plunged into the assembly, brand each other as fools to others and pick a quarrel, wishing for praise and calling themselves (the only) expert. (825

3. Engaged in dispute in the middle of the assembly, wishing for praise he lays about on a when his dispute has been repulsed he becomes discontented, at the blame he gets angry h faults (of others). (826)

4. Because those who have tested his questions say that his dispute is lost and repulsed, grieves having lost his disputes; 'he has conquered me,' so saying he wails. (827)

5. These disputes have arisen amongst the Samanas, in these (disputes) there is (dealt) b having seen this, let him leave off disputing, for there is no other advantage in trying to get p

6. Or he is praised there, having cleared up the dispute in the middle of the assembly; ther laugh and be elated, having won that case as he had a mind to. (829)

7. That which is his exaltation will also be the field of his defeat, still he talks proudly and arrogantly; seeing this, let no one dispute, for the expert do not say that purification (takes p that[1]. (830)

8. As a hero nourished by kingly food goes about roaring, wishing for an adversary--where philosopher, Ditthigatika) is, go thou there, O

[1. Yi unnati sassa vighatabumi, Manatimanam vadate pan' eso,
Etam pi disva na vivadayetha
Na hi tena suddhim kusala vadanti.
Comp. .]

p. 159

hero; formerly there was nothing like this to fight against[1]. (831)

9. Those who, having embraced a (certain philosophical) view, dispute and maintain 'this o to them say thou when a dispute has arisen, 'Here is no opponent[2] for thee.' (832)

10. Those who wander about after having secluded themselves, without opposing view to (opposition) wilt thou meet with amongst those, O Pasura, by whom nothing in this world is g best? (833)

11. Then thou wentest to reflection thinking in thy mind over the (different philosophical) vi hast gone into the yoke with him who has shaken off (al1 sin), but thou wilt not be able to pr (with him)[3]. (834)

Pasurasutta is ended.

9. MAGANDIYASUTTA.

A dialogue between Magandiya and Buddha. The former offers Buddha his daughter for a w her. Magandiya says that purity cornes from philosophy, Buddha from 'inward peace.' The M peace, he does not dispute, he is free from marks. 1. Buddha: 'Even seeing Tanha, Arati, a daughters of Mara), there was not the least wish

[1. Suro yatha ragakhadaya puttho
Abhigaggam eti patisuram ikkham-- Yen' eva so tena palehi sura,
Pubbe va n' atthi yad idam yudhaya.

2. Patisenikatta ti patilomakarako. Commentator.

3. Atha tvam pavitakkam agama
Manasa ditthigatani kintayanto,
Dhonena yugam samagama,
Na hi tvam pagghasi sampayatave.]

p. 160

(in me) for sexual intercourse. What is this (thy daughter's body but a thing) full of water and do not even want to touch it with my foot.' (835)

2. Magandiya: 'If thou dost not want such a pearl, a woman desired by many kings, what v (holy) works, (mode of) life, re-birth dost thou profess?' (836)

3. '"This I say," so (I do now declare), after investigation there is nothing amongst the doct such a one (as I would) embrace, O Magandiya,'-- so said Bhagavat,--'and seeing (misery) i (philosophical) views, without adopting (any of them), searching (for truth) I saw "inward pea

4. 'All the (philosophical) resolutions[2] that have been formed,'--so said Magandiya,--'thos explainest without adopting (any of them); the notion "inward peace" which (thou mentionest explained by the wise?' (838)

5. 'Not by (any philosophical) opinion, not by tradition, not by knowledge, O Magandiya,'--s Bhagavat,--'not by virtue and (holy) works can any one say that purity exists; nor by absence (philosophical) opinion, by absence of tradition, by absence of knowledge, by absence of vir works either; having abandoned these without adopting (anything else), let him, calm and in desire existence[3]. (839)

[1. Idam vadamiti na tassa hoti--Magandiya ti Bhagava--
Dhammesu nikkheyya samuggahitam
Passan ka ditthisu anuggahaya Agghattasantim pakinam adassam.

2. Vinikkhaya, placita?

3. Na ditthiya na sutiya na nanena--Magandiya ti Bhagava-- Silabbatenapi na suddhim aha
Aditthiya assutiya anana
Asilata abbata no pi tena,
Ete ka nissagga anuggahaya Santo anissaya bhavam na gappe.]

p. 161

6. 'If one cannot say by (any philosophical) opinion, or by tradition, or by knowledge,'--so s Magandiya,--'or by virtue and (holy) works that purity exists, nor by absence of (philosophica absence of tradition, by absence of knowledge, by absence of virtue and (holy) works, then doctrine foolish, for by (philosophical) opinions some return to purity.' (840)

7. 'And asking on account of (thy philosophical) opinion, O Magandiya,'--so said Bhagavat to infatuation in what thou hast embraced, and of this (inward peace) thou hast not the least thou holdest it foolish[1]. (841)

8. 'He who thinks himself equal (to others), or distinguished, or low, he for that very reason but he who is unmoved under those three conditions, for him (the notions) "equal" and "disti exist. (842)

9. 'The Brahmana for whom (the notions) "equal" and "unequal" do not exist, would he say
Or with whom should he dispute, saying, "This is false?" With whom should he enter into dis

10. 'Having left his house, wandering about

[1. Ditthin ka nissaya anupukkhamano
Samuggahitesu pamoham aga
Ito ka naddakkhi anum pi sannam

Tasma tuvam momuhato dahasi.

2. Sakkan ti so brahmano kim vadeyya
Musa ti va so vivadetha kena
Yasmim samam visaman kapi n' atthi
Sa kena vadam patisamyugeyya.]

p. 162

houseless, not making acquaintances in the village, free from lust, not desiring (any future e
the Muni not get into quarrelsome talk with people. (844)

11. 'Let not an eminent man (naga) dispute after having embraced those (views) separate (formerly) wandered in the world; as the thorny lotus elambuga is undefiled by water and mu confessor of peace, free from greed, does not cling to sensual pleasures and the world. (845

12. 'An accomplished man does not by (a philosophical) view, or by thinking become arrog of that sort; not by (holy) works, nor by tradition is he to be led, he is not led into any of the resting-places (of the mind). (846)

13. 'For him who is free from marks there are no ties, to him who is delivered by understan no follies; (but those) who grasped after marks and (philosophical) views, they wander abou annoying (people)[1].' (847)

Magandiyasutta is ended.

10. PURABHEDASUTTA.

Definition of a calm Muni. 1. 'With what view and with what virtue is one called calm, tell m
Gotama, (when) asked about the best man?' (848)

2. 'He whose desire is departed before the dissolution (of his body),'--so said Bhagavat,--'

[1. Sannavirattassa na santi gantha,
Pannavimuttassa na santi moha,
Sannan ka ditthin ka ye aggahesum

Te ghattayanta vikaranti loke.]

p. 163

does not depend upon beginning and end, nor reckons upon the middle, by him there is notl (849)

3. 'He who is free from anger, free from trembling, free from boasting, free from misbehavi speaks wisely, he who is not elated, he is indeed a Muni who has restrained his speech. (85

4. 'Without desire for the future he does not grieve for the past, he sees seclusion in the ph (touch), and he is not led by (any philosophical) views. (851)

5. 'He is unattached, not deceitful, not covetous, not envious, not impudent, not contemptu given to slander. (852)

6. 'Without desire for pleasant things and not given to conceit, and being gentle, intelligent credulous, he is not displeased (with anything). (853)

7. 'Not from love of gain does he learn, and he does not get angry on account of loss, and desire he has no greed for sweet things[2]. (854)

8. 'Equable (upekhaka), always thoughtful, he does not think himself equal (to others)[3] in distinguished, nor low: for him there are no desires (ussada). (855)

[1. Vitatanho pura bheda
Pubbam antam anissito
Vemagghe n' upasamkheyyo
Tassa n' atthi purekkhatam.

2. Rasesu nanugigghati

3. Na loke mannate samam
Na visesi na nikeyyo.
Compare ; .]

p. 164

9. 'The man for whom there is nothing upon which he depends, who is independent, havin
Dhamma, for whom there is no desire for coming into existence or leaving existence, (856)

10. 'Him I call calm, not looking for sensual pleasures; for him there are no ties, he has ov
(857)

11. 'For him there are no sons, cattle, fields, wealth, nothing grasped or rejected is to be fo
(858)

12. 'That fault of which common people and Samanas and Brahmanas say that he is poss
by him, therefore he is not moved by their talk. (859)

13. 'Free from covetousness, without avarice, the Muni does not reckon himself amongst t nor amongst the plain, nor amongst the low, he does not enter time, being delivered from tin

14. 'He for whom there is nothing in the world (which he may call) his own, who does not g is no more, and does not walk amongst the Dhammas (after his wish), he is called calm[2].'

Purabhedasutta is ended.

11. KALAHAVIVADASUTTA.

The origin of contentions, disputes, &c. &c. 1. 'Whence (do spring up) contentions and dis lamentation and sorrow together with envy;

[1. Vitagedho amakkhari
Na ussesu vadate muni
Na samesu na omesu, Kappam n' eti akappiyo.

2. Comp. infra, , and .]

p. 165

and arrogance and conceit together with slander, whence do these spring up? pray, tell me

2. 'From dear (objects) spring up contentions and disputes, lamentation and sorrow togeth arrogance and conceit together with slander; contentions and disputes are joined with envy, slander in the disputes arisen.' (863)

3. 'The dear (objects) in the world whence do they originate, and (whence) the covetousne in the world, and desire and fulfilment whence do they originate, which are (of consequence) state of a man[1]?' (864)

4. 'From wish[2] originate the dear (objects) in the world, and the covetousness that prevai world, and desire and fulfilment originate from it, which are (of consequence) for the future s (865)

5. 'From what has wish in the world its origin, and resolutions[3] whence do they spring, ar falsehood and doubt, and the Dhammas which are made known by the Samana (Gotama)?'

6. 'What they call pleasure and displeasure in the world, by that wish springs up; having se origin in (all) bodies[4], a person forms (his) resolutions in the world. (867)

7. 'Anger and falsehood and doubt, these Dhammas are a couple[5]; let the doubtful learn knowledge, knowingly the Dhammas have been proclaimed by the Samana.' (868)

8. 'Pleasure and displeasure, whence have they

[1. Ye samparayaya narassa honti.

2. Khanda.

3. Vinikkhaya.

4. Rupesu disva vibhavam bhavan ka.

5. Te pi kodhadayo dhamma satasatadvaye sante eva pahonti uppagganti. Commentator.]

p. 166

their origin, for want of what do these not arise? This notion which (thou mentionest), viz. "d origin," tell me from what does this arise.' (869)

9. 'Pleasure and displeasure have their origin from phassa (touch), when there is no touch arise. This notion which (thou mentionest), viz. "decay and origin," this I tell thee has its orig this.' (870)

10. 'From what has phassa its origin in the world and from what does grasping spring up? is there no egotism, by the cessation of what do the touches not touch? ' (871)

11. 'On account of name and form the touches (exist), grasping has its origin in wish; by th wishes there is no egotism, by the cessation of form the touches do not touch.' (872)

12. 'How is one to be constituted that (his) form may cease to exist, and how do joy and pa exist? Tell me this, how it ceases, that we should like to know, such was my mind[1]?' (873)

13. 'Let one not be with a natural consciousness, nor with a mad consciousness, nor witho nor with (his) consciousness gone; for him who is thus constituted form ceases to exist, for w delusion has its origin in consciousness[2].' (?) (874)

14. 'What we have asked thee thou hast explained

[1. Katham sametassa vibhoti rupam, Sukham dukham vapi katham vibhoti,
Etam me pabruhi, yatha vibhoti
Tam ganiyama, iti me mano ahu.

2. Na sannasanni na visannasanni
No pi asanni na vibhutasanni
Evam sametassa vibhoti rupam Sannanidana hi papankasamkha.]

p. 167

unto us; we will ask thee another question, answer us that: Do not some (who are considere world tell us that the principal (thing) is the purification of the yakkha, or do they say someth from this[1]?' (875)

15. 'Thus some (who are considered) wise in this world say that the principal (thing) is the of the yakkha; but some of them say samaya (annihilation), the expert say (that the highest anupadisesa (none of the five attributes remaining)[2]. (876)

16. 'And having known these to be dependent, the investigating Muni, having known the th upon, and after knowing them being liberated, does not enter into dispute, the wise (man) do reiterated existence[3].' (877)

Kalahavivadasutta is ended.

12. KULAVIYUHASUTTA.

A description of disputing philosophers. The different schools of philosophy contradict each proclaim different truths, but the truth is only one. As long as the disputations are going on, s there be strife in the world. 1. Abiding by their own views, some (people), having got into co themselves to be

[1. Comp. .

2. Ettavat' aggam pi vadanti h' eke
Yakkhassa suddhim idha panditase,
Tesam pun' eke samayam[*] vadanti
Anupadisese kusala vadana.

3. Ete ka natva upanissita ti
Natva muni nissaye so vimamsi
Natva vimutto na vivadam eti Bhavabhavaya na sameti dhiro.

*. Ukkhedam. Commentator.]

p. 168

the (only) expert (saying), '(He) who understands this, he knows the Dhamma; he who revile perfect[1].' (878)

2. So having got into contest they dispute: 'The opponent (is) a fool, an ignorant (person),' Which one of these, pray, is the true doctrine (vada)? for all these assert themselves (to be t expert. (879)

3. He who does not acknowledge an opponent's doctrine (dhamma), he is a fool, a beast, understanding, all are fools with a very poor understanding; all these abide by their (own) vie

4. They are surely purified by their own view, they are of a pure understanding, expert, tho amongst them there is no one of poor understanding, their view is quite perfect! (881)

5. I do not say, 'This is the reality,' which fools say mutually to each other; they made their the truth, therefore they hold others to be fools. (882)

6. What some say is the truth, the reality, that others say is void, false, so having disagree dispute. Why do not the Samanas say one (and the same thing)? (883)

7. For the truth is one, there is not a second, about which one intelligent man might disput intelligent man; (but) they themselves praise different truths, therefore the Samanas do not s same thing)[2]. (884)

[1. Sakam sakam ditthi paribbasana
Viggayha nana kusala vadanti Yo evam ganati sa vedi dhammam
Idam patikkosam akevali so.

2. Ekam hi sakkam na dutiyam atthi
Yasmim pagano vivade paganam,
Nana te sakkani sayam thunanti,
Tasma na ekam samana vadanti.]

p. 169

8. Why do the disputants that assert themselves (to be the only) expert, proclaim different many different truths been heard of, or do they (only) follow (their own) reasoning? (885)

9. There are not many different truths in the world, no eternal ones except consciousness; reasoned on the (philosophical) views they proclaim a double Dhamma, truth and falsehood

10. In regard to what has been seen, or heard, virtue and (holy) works, or what has been t account of these (views) looking (upon others) with contempt, standing in (their) resolutions that the opponent is a fool and an ignorant person[2] (?) (887)

11. Because he holds another (to be) a fool, therefore he calls himself expert, in his own o one that tells what is propitious, others he blames, so he said[3]. (?) (888)

12. He is full of his overbearing (philosophical) view, mad with pride, thinking himself perfe his own opinion anointed with the spirit (of genius), for his (philosopbical) view is quite comp

[1. Na h' eva sakkani bahuni nana Annatra sannaya nikkani loke,
Takkan ka ditthisu pakappayitva
Sakkam musa ti dvayadhammam ahu.

2. Ditthe sute silavate mute va
Ete ka nissaya vimanadassi
Vinikkhaye thatva pahassamana
Balo paro akusalo ti kahu.

3. Yen' eva balo ti param dahati
Tenatumanam kusalo ti kaha,
Sayam attana sa kusala vadano Annam vimaneti, tath' eva pava.]

p. 170

13. If he according to another's report is low, then (he says) the other is also of a low unde and if he himself is accomplished and wise, there is not any fool amongst the Samanas[1]. (

14. 'Those who preach a doctrine (dhamma) different from this, fall short of purity and are the Titthiyas say repeatedly, for they are inflamed by passion for their own (philosophical) vi

15. Here they maintain purity, in other doctrines (dhamma) they do not allow purity; so the entering extensively (upon details), say that in their own way there is something firm. (892)

16. And saying that there is something firm in his own way he holds his opponent to be a f himself brings on strife, calling his opponent a fool and impure (asuddhadhamma). (893)

17. Standing in (his) resolution, having himself measured (teachers, &c.), he still more ent dispute in the world; but having left all resolutions nobody will excite strife in the world[2]. (89

Kulaviyuhasutta is ended.

[1. Parassa ke hi vakasa nihino
Tumo[*] saha hoti nihinapanno,
Atha ke sayam vedagu hoti dhiro
Na koki balo samanesu atthi.

2. Vinikkhaye thatva sayam pamaya
Uddham so lokasmim vivadam eti,
Hitvana sabbani vinikkhayani
Na medhakam kurute gantu loke.

*. So pi ten' eva. Commentator. Ved. tva (?).]

p. 171

13. MAHAVIYUHASUTTA.

Philosophers cannot lead to purity, they only praise themselves and stigmatise others. But a overcome all dispute, he is indifferent to learning, he is appeased. 1. Those who abiding in (philosophical) views dispute, saying, 'This is the truth,' they all incur blame, and they also o in this matter. (895)

2. This is little, not enough to (bring about) tranquillity, I say there are two fruits of dispute; seen this let no one dispute, understanding Khema (i.e. Nibbana) to be the place where ther (896)

3. The opinions that have arisen amongst people, all these the wise man does not embrac independent. Should he who is not pleased with what has been seen and heard resort to de

4. Those who consider virtue the highest of all, say that purity is associated with restraint; upon themselves a (holy) work they serve. Let us learn in this (view), then, his (the Master's wishing for existence they assert themselves to be the only expert[2]. (898)

5. If he falls off from virtue and (holy) works, he trembles, having missed (his) work; he lam

[1. Ya kak' ima sammutiyo puthugga
Sabba va eta na upeti vidva,
Anupayo so, upayam kim eyya
Ditthe sute khantim[*] akubbamano?

2. Siluttama sannamenahu suddhim,
Vatam samadaya upatthitase,
Idh' eva sikkhema ath' assa suddhim, Bhavupanita kusala vadana.

*. So all the MSS.]

p. 172

prays for purity in this world, as one who has lost his caravan or wandered away from his ho

6. Having left virtue and (holy) works altogether, and both wrong and blameless work, not purity or impurity, he wanders abstaining (from both purity and impurity), without having emb (900)

7. By means of penance, or anything disliked, or what has been seen, or heard, or though they wail for what is pure, without being free from desire for reiterated existence. (901)

8. For him who wishes (for something there always are) desires[1], and trembling in (the m plans; he for whom there is no death and no re-birth, how can he tremble or desire anything

9. What some call the highest Dhamma, that others again call wretched; which one of thes true doctrine (vada)? for all these assert themselves (to be the only) expert. (903)

10. Their own Dhamma they say is perfect, another's Dhamma again they say is wretched they dispute, they each say their own opinions (are) the truth. (904)

11. If one (becomes) low by another's censure, then there will be no one distinguished am for they all say another's Dhamma (is) low, in their own they say there is something firm[2]. (

[1. Gappitani.

2. Parassa ke vamhayitena hino
Na koki dhammesu visesi assa,
Puthu hi annassa vadanti dhammam Nihinato samhi dalham vadana.]

p. 173

12. The worshipping of their own Dhamma is as great as their praise of their own ways; all in the same case, for their purity is individual[1]. (906)

13. There is nothing about a Brahmana dependent upon others, nothing amongst the Dha embrace after investigation; therefore he has overcome the disputes, for he does not regard as the best. (907)

14. 'I understand, I see likewise this,' so saying, some by (their philosophical) views return If he saw purity, what then (has been effected) by another's view? Having conquered they sa exists by another[2]. (?) (908)

15. A seeing man will see name and form, and having seen he will understand those (thing pleasure see much or little, for the expert do not say that purity exists by that. (909)

16. A dogmatist is no leader to purity, being guided by prejudiced views, saying that good he is given to, and saying that purity is there, he saw the thing so[3]. (910)

17. A Brahmana does not enter time, (or) the

[1. Sadhammapuga ka pana tath' eva Yatha pasamsanti sakayanani,
Sabbe pavada tath' iva bhaveyyum
Suddhi hi nesam pakkattam eva.

2. Ganami passami tath' eva etam ditthiya eke pakkenti suddhim
Addakkhi ke kim hi tumassa tena
Atisitva annena vadanti suddhim.

3. Nivissavadi na hi suddhinayo
Pakappita ditthi purekkharano

Yam nissito tattha subham vadano Suddhim vado tattha, tath' addasa so.]

p. 174

number (of living beings), (he is) no follower of (philosophical) views, nor a friend of knowlec penetrated the opinions that have arisen amongst people, he is indifferent to learning, while
it. (911)

18. The Muni, having done away with ties here in the world, is no partisan in the disputes t arisen; appeased amongst the unappeased he is indifferent, not embracing learning, while c (912)

19. Having abandoned his former passions, not contracting new ones, not wandering acco being no dogmatist, he is delivered from the (philosophical) views, being wise, and he does world, neither does he blame himself. (913)

20. Being secluded amongst all the doctrines (dhamma), whatever has been seen, heard, Muni who has laid down his burden and is liberated, not belonging to time (na kappiyo), not for anything. So said Bhagavat. (914)

Mahaviyuhasutta is ended.

14. TUVATAKASUTTA.

How a Bhikkhu attains bliss, what his duties are, and what he is to avoid. 1. 'I ask thee, wh kinsman of the Adikkas and a great Isi, about seclusion (viveka) and the state of peace. How after having seen it, extinguished, not grasping at anything in the world?' (915)

p. 175

2. 'Let him completely cut off the root of what is called papanka[1] (delusion), thinking "I ar wisdom;"'--so said Bhagavat,--'all the desires that arise inwardly, let him learn to subdue the thoughtful. (916)

3. 'Let him learn every Dhamma inwardly or outwardly; let him not therefore be proud, for t

called bliss by the good. (917)

4. 'Let him not therefore think himself better (than others or) low or equal (to others); quest different people, let him not adorn himself[2]. (918)

5. 'Let the Bhikkhu be appeased inwardly, let him not seek peace from any other (quarter) inwardly appeased there is nothing grasped or rejected. (919)

6. 'As in the middle (i.e. depth) of the sea no wave is born, (but as it) remains still[3], so let Bhikkhu be still[3], without desire, let him not desire anything whatever.' (920)

7. He with open eyes expounded clearly the Dhamma that removes (all) dangers; tell (now practices; the precepts or contemplation[4]. (921)

8. Bhagavat: 'Let him not be greedy with his eyes, let him keep his ears from the talk of the not be greedy after sweet things, and let him not desire anything in the world. (922)

9. 'When he is touched by the touch (of illness),

[1. Aviggadayo kilesa. Commentator.

2. Natumanam vikappayan titthe.

3. Thito.

4. Akittayi vivatakakkhu sakkhi
Dhammam parissayavinayam, Patipadam vadehi, bhaddan te,
Patimokkham athavapi samadhim.]

p. 176

let the Bhikkhu not lament, and let him not wish for existence anywhere, and let him not trem (923)

10. 'Having obtained boiled rice and drink, solid food and clothes, let him not store up (thes and let him not be anxious, if he does not get them. (924)

11. 'Let him be meditative, not prying, let him abstain from misbehaviour[1], let him not be the Bhikkhu live in his quiet dwelling. (925)

12. 'Let him not sleep too much, let him apply himself ardently to watching, let him abando laughter, sport, sexual intercourse, and adornment. (926)

13. 'Let him not apply himself to practising (the hymns of) the Athabbana(-veda), to (the in of) sleep and signs, nor to astrology; let not (my) follower (mamaka) devote himself to (interp of birds, to causing impregnation, nor to (the art of) medicine. (927)

14. 'Let the Bhikkhu not tremble at blame, nor puff himself up when praised; let him drive c together with avarice, anger, and slander. (928)

15. 'Let the Bhikkhu not be engaged in purchase and sale, let him not blame others in any scold in the village, let him not from love of gain speak to people. (929)

16. 'Let not the Bhikkhu be a boaster, and let him not speak coherent[2] language; let him let him not speak quarrelsome language. (930)

[1. Virame kukkukkam.

2. Payuta; comp. .]

p. 177

17. 'Let him not be led into falsehood, let him not consciously do wicked things; and with re livelihood, understanding, virtue, and (holy) works let him not despise others. (931)

18. 'Having heard much talk from much-talking Samanas let him not irritated answer them language; for the good do not thwart[1] others. (932)

19. 'Having understood this Dhamma, let the investigating and always thoughtful Bhikkhu conceived bliss to consist in peace, let him not be indolent in Gotama's commandments. (93

20. 'For he a conqueror unconquered saw the Dhamma visibly, without any traditional inst therefore let him learn, heedful in his, Bhagavat's, commandments, and always worshipping

Tuvatakasutta is ended.

15. ATTADANDASUTTA.

Description of an accomplished Muni. 1. From him who has seized a stick fear arises. Loo
(each other); I will tell of grief as it is known to me. (935)

2. Seeing people struggling like fish in (a pond with) little water, seeing them obstructed by a fear came over me. (936)

3. The world is completely unsubstantial, all quarters are shaken; wishing for a house for r see (one) uninhabited. (937)

4. But having seen (all beings) in the end obstructed, discontent arose in me; then I saw in

[1. Patisenikaronti.

2. Sakkhi dhammam anitiham adassi.]

p. 178

this world an arrow, difficult to see, stuck in the heart. (938)

5. He who has been pierced by this arrow runs through all quarters; but having drawn out will not run, he will sit down (quietly). (939)

6. There (many) studies are gone through; what is tied in the world let him not apply himse it; having wholly transfixed desire, let him learn his own extinction (nibbana). (940)

7. Let the Muni be truthful, without arrogance, undeceitful, free from slander, not angry, let avarice. (941)

8. Let the man who has turned his mind to Nibbana conquer sleepiness, drowsiness, and live together with indolence, let him not indulge in conceit. (942)

9. Let him not be led into falsehood, let him not turn his affection to form; let him penetrate let him wander abstaining from violence. (943)

10. Let him not delight in what is old, let him not bear with what is new, let him not grieve f lost, let him not give himself up to desire[1]. (944)

11. (This desire) I call greed, the great stream, I call (it) precipitation, craving, a trouble, a l lust difficult to cross[2]. (945)

12. The Muni who without deviating from truth

[1. Akasam na sito siya ti tanham nissito na bhaveyya. Commentator.

2. Gedham brumi mahogho ti
Agavam brumi gappanam
Arammanam pakappanam
Kamapamko durakkayo.]

p. 179

stands fast on the firm ground (of Nibbana, being) a Brahmana, he, having forsaken everyth called calm. (946)

13. He indeed is wise, he is accomplished, having understood the Dhamma independent ( wandering rightly in the world he does not envy any one here. (947)

14. Whosoever has here overcome lust, a tie difficult to do away with in the world, he does does not covet[1], having cut off the stream, and being without bonds. (948)

15. What is before (thee), lay that aside; let there be nothing behind thee; if thou wilt not gr
what is in the middle, thou wilt wander calm[2]. (949)

16. The man who has no desire at all for name and form (individuality) and who does not g no more, he indeed does not decay in the world[3]. (950)

17. He who does not think, 'this is mine' and 'for others there is also something,' he, not ha does not grieve at having nothing[4]. (951)

18. Not being harsh, not greedy, being without desire, and being the same under all circun (samo[5]),--that I call a good result, when asked about an undaunted man. (952)

19. For him who is free from desire, for the

[1. Naggheti = nabhigghati (read nabhigghayati). Commentator.

2. Comp. infra, , and Dhammapada, p. 308.

3. Comp. infra, .

4. Yassa n'atthi 'idam me' ti
'Paresam vapi kinkanam'
Mamattam so asamvindam
'N' atthi me' ti na sokati.

5. = upekhako. Commentator.]

p. 180

discerning (man) there is no Samkhara; abstaining from every sort of effort he sees happine (953)

20. The Muni does not reckon himself amongst the plain, nor amongst the low, nor among being calm and free from avarice, he does not grasp after nor reject anything[2]. (954)

Attadandasutta is ended.

16. SARIPUTTASUTTA.

On Sariputta asking what a Bhikkhu is to devote himself to, Buddha shows what life he is to 'Neither has before been seen by me,'--so said the venerable Sariputta,--'nor has any one h beautifully-speaking master, a teacher arrived from the Tusita heaven. (955)

2. 'As he, the clearly-seeing, appears to the world of men and gods, after having dispelled
so he wanders alone in the midst (of people). (956)

3. 'To this Buddha, who is independent, unchanged, a guileless teacher, who has arrived (

have come supplicatingly with a question[3] from many who are bound in this world. (957)

4. 'To a Bhikkhu who is loath (of the world) and affects an isolated seat, the root of a tree o cemetery, or (who lives) in the caves of the mountains, (958)

[1. Anegassa viganato
N' atthi kaki nisamkhiti,
Virato so viyarambha
Khemam passati sabbadhi.

2. Comp. supra, Purabhedasutta, vv. 15, 20 {sic., vv. , }.

3. Atthi panhena agamim = atthiko panhena agato 'mhiti atthikanam va panhena atthi agama Commentator.]

p. 181

5. 'How many dangers (are there not) in these various dwelling-places at which the Bhikkh
in his quiet dwelling! (959)

6. 'How many dangers (are there not) in the world for him who goes to the immortal region which the Bhikkhu overcomes in his distant dwelling! (960)

7. 'Which are his words, which are his objects in this world, which are the virtue and (holy) energetic Bhikkhu? (961)

8. 'What study having devoted himself to, intent on one object[2], wise and thoughtful, can own filth as the smith (blows off) that of the silver[3]?' (962)

9. 'What is pleasant for him who is disgusted (with birth, &c.), O Sariputta,'--so said Bhaga cultivates a lonely dwelling-place, and loves perfect enlightenment in accordance with the D tell thee as I understand it. (963)

10. 'Let not the wise and thoughtful Bhikkhu wandering on the borders[4] be afraid of the fi
gad-flies and (all other) flies[5], snakes, contact with (evil) men[6], and quadrupeds. (964)

11. 'Let him not be afraid of adversaries[7], even having seen many dangers from them; fu

[1. Gakkhato amatam disam.

2. Ekodi = ekaggakitto. Commentator.

3. Comp. .

4. Pariyantakari.

5. Damsadhipatanan ti pingalamakkhikanan ka sesamakkhikanan ka, sesamakkhika hi tato tasma adhipata ti vukkanti. Commentator.

6. Manussaphassanan ti koradiphassanam. Commentator.

7. Paradhammikanam.]

p. 182

will overcome other dangers while seeking what is good. (965)

12. 'Touched by sickness and hunger let him endure cold and excessive heat, let him, touc many ways, and being houseless, make strong exertions. (966)

13. 'Let him not commit theft, let him not speak falsely, let him touch friendly what is feeble what he acknowledges to be the agitation of the mind, let him drive that off as a partisan of k Mara). (967)

14. 'Let him not fall into the power of anger and arrogance; having dug up the root of these and let him overcome both what is pleasant and what is unpleasant. (968)

15. 'Guided by wisdom, taking delight in what is good, let him scatter those dangers, let hi discontent in his distant dwelling, let him overcome the four causes of lamentation. (969)

16. 'What shall I eat, or where shall I eat?--he lay indeed uncomfortably (last night)--where this night? let the Sekha who wanders about houseless subdue these lamentable doubts. (9

17. 'Having had in (due) time both food and clothes, let him know moderation in this world happiness; guarded in these (things) and wandering restrained in the village let him, even (if irritated, not speak harsh words. (971)

18. 'Let him be with down-cast eyes, and not prying, devoted to meditation, very watchful; equanimity let him with a composed mind cut off the seat of doubt, and misbehaviour. (972)

19. 'Urged on by words (of his teachers) let him be thoughtful and rejoice (at this urging), l

p. 183

him break stubbornness in his fellow-students, let him utter propitious words and not unseas not think detractingly of others. (973)

20. 'And then the five impurities in the world, the subjection of which he must learn though him overcome passion for form, sound and taste, smell and touch. (974)

21. 'Let the Bhikkhu subdue his wish for these Dhammas and be thoughtful, and with his m then in time he will, reflecting upon Dhamma, and having become intent upon one object, de said Bhagavat. (975)

Sariputtasutta is ended.

Atthakavagga, the fourth.

p. 184

V. PARAYANAVAGGA.

1. VATTHUGATHA.

To the Brahmana Bavari, living on the banks of the Godhavari, in Assaka's territory, comes and asks for five hundred pieces of money, but not getting them he curses Bavari, saying, 'M seventh day hence cleave into seven.' A deity comforts Bavari by referring him to Buddha. T his sixteen disciples to Buddha, and each of thern asks Buddha a question. 1. From the be Kosalas (Savatthi) a Brahmana, well versed in the hymns, went to the South (Dakkhinapath nothingness[1]. (976)

2. In Assaka's territory, in the neighbourhood of Alaka, he dwelt on the banks of the Godha on gleanings and fruit. (977)

3. And close by the bank there was a large village, with the income of which he prepared a (978)

4. Having offered the great sacrifice, he again entered the hermitage. Upon his re-enterin
Brahmana arrived, (979)

5. With swollen feet[2], trembling, covered with mud, with dust on his head. And he going

[1. Akinkanna.

2. Ugghattapado ti maggakkamanena ghattapadatalo panhikaya va panhikam gopphakena gannukam agantvapi ghattapado. Commentator.]

p. 185

to him (i.e. the first Brahmana) demanded five hundred (pieces of money). (980)

6. Bavari, seeing him, bade him be seated, asked him whether he was happy and well, an (981)

7. 'What gifts I had are all given away by me; pardon me, O Brahmana, I have no five hun

8. 'If thou wilt not give to me who asks, may thy head on the seventh clay cleave into seve

9. So after the usual ceremonies this impostor made known his fearful (curse). On hearing
Bavari became sorrowful. (984)

10. He wasted away taking no food, transfixed by the arrow of grief, but yet his mind delig
meditation. (985)

11. Seeing Bavari struck with horror and sorrowful, the benevolent deity (of that place) app said as follows: (986)

12. 'He does not know (anything about) the head; he is a hypocrite coveting riches; knowle and head-splitting is not found in him[1].' (987)

13. 'If the venerable (deity) knows it, then tell me, when asked, all about the head and hea let us hear thy words.' (988)

14. 'I do not know this; knowledge of it is not found in me; as to the head and head-splittin be seen by Buddhas (only).' (989)

15. 'Who then, say, in the circumference of the

[1. Na so muddham paganati, Kuhako so dhanatthiko,
Muddhani muddhapate ka
Nanam tassa na viggati.]

earth knows the head and head-splitting, tell me that, O deity?' (990)

16. 'Formerly went out from Kapilavatthu a ruler of the world, an offspring of the Okkaka ki son, the light-giving; (991)

17. 'He is, O Brahmana, the perfectly Enlightened (Sambuddha); perfect in all things, he h power of all knowledge, sees clearly in everything; he has arrived at the destruction of all thi liberated in the destruction of the upadhis[1]. (992)

18. 'He is Buddha, he is Bhagavat in the world, he, the clearly-seeing, teaches the Dhamm and ask, he will explain it to thee.' (993)

19. Having heard the word 'Sambuddha,' Bavari rejoiced, his grief became little, and he wa great delight. (994)

20. Bavari glad, rejoicing, and eager asked the deity: 'In what village or in what town or in dwells the chief of the world, that going there we may adore the perfectly Enlightened, the fi

(995)

21. 'In Savatthi, the town of the Kosalas, dwells Gina (the Victorious), of great understandi excellent wide knowledge, he the Sakya son, unyoked, free from passion, skilled in head-sp men.' (996)

22. Then (Bavari) addressed his disciples, Brahmanas, perfect in the hymns: 'Come, youth something), listen to my words: (997)

23. 'He whose appearance in the world is difficult to be met with often, he is at the present

[1. Sabbadhammakkhayam patto (i.e. nibbana) Vimutto upadhisamkhaye.2. Sv-agga.]

p. 187

born in the world and widely renowned as Sambuddha (the perfectly Enlightened); go quic behold the best of men.' (998)

24. 'How then can we know, on seeing him, that he is Buddha, O Brahmana? Tell us who what may we recognise him? (999)

25. 'For in the hymns are to be found the marks of a great man, and thirty-two are disclose one by one.' (1000)

26. 'For him on whose limbs these marks of a great man are to be found, there are two wa does not exist. (1001)

27. 'If he abides in a dwelling, he will subdue this earth without rod (or) sword, he will rule justice. (1002)

28. 'And if he departs from his dwelling for the wilderness, he becomes the saint, incompa who has removed the veil (from the world)[1]. (1003)

29. 'Ask in your mind about my birth and family, my marks, hymns, and my other disciples head-splitting. (1004)

30. 'If he is Buddha, the clear-sighted, then he will answer by word of mouth the questions

in your mind.' (1005)

31, 32, 33. Having heard Bavari's words his disciples, sixteen Brahmanas, Agita, Tissame further Mettagu, Dhotaka and Upasiva, and Nanda, further Hemaka, the two Todeyya and K Gatukanni, Bhadravudha and Udaya, and also the Brahmana Posala, and the wise Moghara Pingiya, (1006-1008)

34. All of them, having each their host (of pupils),

[1. Comp. Lalita-vistara (ed. Calc.), pp. 116, 118.]

p. 188

and being themselves widely renowned throughout the world, thinkers delighting in meditatio with the perfume of former (good deeds)[1], (1009)

35. Having saluted Bavari and gone round him towards the right, all with matted hair and b departed with their faces turned to the north. (1010)

36. To Patitthana of Alaka first, then to Mahissati, and also to Uggeni, Gonaddha, Vedisa, (1011)

37. And also to Kosambi, Saketa, and Savatthi, the most excellent of cities, to Setavya, Ka the city of Kusinara, (1012)

38. And to Pava, the city of wealth, to Vesali, the city of Magadha, to Pasanaka Ketiya (the the lovely, the charming. (1013)

39. As he who is athirst (longs for) the cold water, as the merchant (longs for) gain, as he w by heat (longs for) shade, so in haste they ascended the mountain. (1014)

40. And Bhagavat at that time attended by the assembly of the Bhikkhus taught the Dham and roared like a lion in the forest. (1015)

41. Agita beheld Sambuddha as the shining (sun) without (burning) rays, as the moon on t having reached her plenitude. (1016)

42. Then observing his limbs and all the marks in their fulness, standing apart, rejoiced, he questions of his mind:-- (1017)

43. 'Tell me about (my master's) birth, tell me about his family together with the marks, tell perfection in the hymns, how many (hymns) does the Brahmana recite?' (1018)

[1. Pubbavasanavasita.]

p. 189

44. Bhagavat said: 'One hundred and twenty years (is his) age, and by family he is a Bava marks on the limbs, and in the three Vedas he is perfect. (1019)

45. 'In the marks and in the Itihasa together with Nighandu and Ketubha--he recites five hu his own Dhamma he has reached perfection.' (1020)

46. Agita thought: 'Explain fully the marks of Bavari, O thou best of men, who cuts off desi be no doubt left for us.' (1021)

47. Bhagavat said: 'He covers his face with his tongue, he has a circle of hair between the (his) privy member (is) hidden in a sheath, know this, O young man[1].' (1022)

48. Not hearing him ask anything, but hearing the questions answered, the multitude reflec with joined hands:-- (1023)

49. 'Who, be he a god, or Brahman, or Inda, the husband of Suga, asked in his mind those whom did that (speech) reply?' (1024)

50. Agita said: 'The head and head-splitting Bavari asked about; explain that, O Bhagavat, doubt, O Isi.' (1025)

51. Bhagavat said: 'Ignorance is the head, know this; knowledge cleaves the head, togeth thoughtfulness, meditation, determination, and strength.' (1026)

52. Then with great joy having composed himself the young man put his hide on one shou

[1. Mukham givhaya khadeti, Unn' assa bhamukantare,
Kosohitam vatthaguyham,

Evam ganahi manava.]

p. 190

fell at (Bhagavat's) feet (and saluted him) with his head, (saying): (1027)

53. 'Bavari, the Brahmana, together with his disciples, O thou venerable man, delighted ar homage to thy feet, O thou clearly-seeing.' (1028)

54. Bhagavat said: 'Let Bavari, the Brahmana, be glad together with his disciples! Be thou long, O young man! (1029)

55. 'For Bavari and for thee, for all there are all (kinds of) doubt; having got an opportunity whatever you wish.' (1030)

56. After getting permission from Sambuddha, Agita sitting there with folded hands asked first question. (1031)

The Vatthugathas are ended.

2. AGITAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'By what is the world shrouded,'--so said the venerable Agita,--'by what does it not shine thou its pollution, what is its great danger?' (1032)

2. 'With ignorance is the world shrouded, O Agita,'--so said Bhagavat,--'by reason of avari shine; desire I call its pollution, pain is its great danger.' (1033)

3. 'The streams of desire flow in every direction,'--so said the venerable Agita;--'what dams say what restrains the streams, by what may the streams be shut off[1]?' (1034)

[1. Comp. .]

p. 191

4. 'Whatever streams there are in the world, O Agita,'--so said Bhagavat,--'thoughtfulness

thoughtfulness I call the restraint of the streams, by understanding they are shut off.' (1035)

5. 'Both understanding and thoughtfulness,'--so said the venerable Agita,--'and name and venerable man,--asked about this by me, declare by what is this stopped? ' (1036)

6. Buddha: 'This question which thou hast asked, O Agita, that I will explain to thee; (I will thee) by what name and shape[2] are totally stopped; by the cessation of consciousness this (1037)

7. Agita: 'Those who have examined (all) Dhammas (i.e. the saints), and those who are dis who are) common men here,--when thou art asked about their mode of life, declare it unto m wise, O venerable man.' (1038)

8. Buddha: 'Let the Bhikkhu not crave for sensual pleasures, let him be calm in mind, let hi skilful in all Dhammas, and thoughtful.' (1039)

Agitamanavapukkha is ended.

3. TISSAMETTEYYAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'Who is contented in the world,'--so said the venerable Tissametteyya,--'who is without c after knowing both ends does not stick in the middle, as far as his understanding is [1. Namarupan ka.

2. Naman ka rupan ka.]

p. 192

concerned? Whom dost thou call a great man? Who has overcome desire in this world?' (10

2. 'The Bhikkhu who abstains from sensual pleasures, O Metteyya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'w desire, always thoughtful, happy by reflection, he is without commotions, he after knowing b stick in the middle, as far as his understanding is concerned; him I call a great man; he has c in this world.' (1041)

Tissametteyyamanavapukkha is ended.

4. PUNNAKAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'To him who is without desire, who has seen the root (of sin),'--so said the venerable Pu come supplicatingly with a question: on account of what did the Isis and men, Khattiyas and sacrifices to the gods abundantly in this world? (about this) I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me t

2. 'All these Isis and men, Khattiyas and Brahmanas, O Punnaka,'--so said Bhagavat,--'wh sacrifices to the gods abundantly in this world, offered sacrifices, O Punnaka, after reaching wishing for their present condition.' (1043)

3. 'All these Isis and men, Khattiyas and Brahmanas,'--so said the venerable Punnaka,--'w sacrifices to the gods abundantly in this world, did they, O Bhagavat, indefatigable in the wa cross over both birth and old age, O venerable man? I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this.' (1

p. 193

4. 'They wished for, praised, desired, abandoned (sensual pleasures), O Punnaka,'--so sa desired sensual pleasures on account of what they reached by them; they, devoted to offeri passions of existence, did not cross over birth and old age, so I say.' (1045)

5. 'If they, devoted to offering,'--so said the venerable Punnaka,--'did not by offering cross and old age, O venerable man, who then in the world of gods and men crossed over birth ar venerable man, I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this?' (1046)

6. 'Having considered everything[1] in the world, O Punnaka,'--so said Bhagavat,--'he who anywhere in the world, who is calm without the smoke of passions, free from woe, free from over birth and old age, so I say.' (1041)

Punnakamanavapukkha is ended.

5. METTAGUMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this,'--so said the venerable Mettagu,--'I consider thee a and of a cultivated mind, why are these (creatures), whatsoever they are of many kinds in th subject to pain? (1048)

2. 'Thou mayest well ask me concerning the origin of pain, O Mettagu,'--so said Bhagavat,

[1. Parovaraniti parani ka orani ka parattabhavasakattabhavadini parani ka orani ka ti vuttam Commentator.]

p. 194

'I will explain that to thee in the way I myself know it: originating in the upadhis pains arise, w
they are, of many kinds in the world. (1049)

3. 'He who being ignorant creates upadhi, that fool again undergoes pain; therefore let not create upadhi, considering (that this is) the birth and origin of pain.' (1050)

4. Mettagu: 'What we have asked thee thou hast explained to us; another (question) I ask pray: How do the wise cross the stream, birth and old age, and sorrow and lamentation? Exp to me, O Muni, for this thing (dhamma) is well known to thee.' (1051)

5. 'I will explain the Dhamma to thee, O Mettagu,'--so said Bhagavat,--'if a man in the visib without any traditional instruction, has understood it, and wanders about thoughtful, he may
in the world.' (1052)

6. Mettagu: 'And I take a delight in that, in the most excellent Dhamma, O great Isi, which i understood, and he wanders about thoughtful, he may overcome desire in the world.' (1053)

7. 'Whatsoever thou knowest, O Mettagu,'--so said Bhagavat,--'(of what is) above, below, a middle, taking no delight and no rest in these things, let thy mind not dwell on existence. (10

8. 'Living so, thoughtful, strenuous, let the Bhikkhu wandering about, after abandoning self

[1. Kittayissami te dhammam--Mettagu ti Bhagava-- Ditthe dhamme anitiham
Yam viditva sato karam
Tare loke visattikam.]

and old age, and sorrow, and lamentation, being a wise man, leave pain in this world.' (1055

9. Mettagu: 'I delight in these words of the great Isi; well expounded, O Gotama, is (by the upadhi (i.e. Nibbana). Bhagavat in truth has left pain, for this Dhamma is well known to thee

10. 'And those also will certainly leave pain whom thou, O Muni, constantly mayest admon bow down to thee, having come hither, O chief (naga), may Bhagavat also admonish me co

11. Buddha: 'The Brahmana whom I may acknowledge as accomplished, possessing noth world of lust, he surely has crossed this stream, and he has crossed over to the other shore harshness (akhila), (and) free from doubt. (1058)

12. 'And he is a wise and accomplished man in this world; having abandoned this cleaving existence he is without desire, free from woe, free from longing, he has crossed over birth a say.' (1059)

Mettagumanavapukkha is ended.

[1. Et' abhinandami vako mahesino
Sukittitam Gotama nupadhikam, Addha hi Bhagava pahasi dukkham,
Tatha hi te vidito esa dhammo.

Sukittitam Gotama nupadhikan ti ettha anupadhikan ti nibbanam, tam sandhaya va Bhagava sukittitam, &c. Commentator.]

6. DHOTAKAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this,'--so said the venerable Dhotaka,--'I long for thy wo
Isi; let one, having listened to thy utterance, learn his own extinction.' (1060)

2. 'Exert thyself then, O Dhotaka,'--so said Bhagavat,--'being wise and thoughtful in this w having listened to my utterance, learn his own extinction.' (1061)

3. Dhotaka: 'I see in the world of gods and men a Brahmana wandering about, possessing bow down to thee, O thou all-seeing one, free me, O Sakka, from doubts.' (1062)

4. Buddha: 'I shall not go to free any one in the world who is doubtful, O Dhotaka; when th the best Dhamma, then thou shalt cross this stream[1].' (1063)

5. Dhotaka: 'Teach (me), O Brahmana, having compassion (on me), the Dhamma of seclu that I may understand (it and) that I, without falling into many shapes like the air, may wande independent in this world[2].' (?) (1064)

[1. Naham gamissami pamokanaya Kathamkathim Dhotaka kanki loke, Dhamman ka settham aganamano
Evam tuvam ogham imam taresi.

2. Anusasa brahme karunayamano
Vivekadhammam yam aham vigannam
Yathaham akaso va avyapaggamano[*]
Idh' eva santo asito kareyyam.

*. Nanappakaratam anapaggamano. Commentator.]

p. 197

6. 'I will explain to thee peace[1], O Dhotaka,'--so said Bhagavat;--'if a man in the visible w without any traditional instruction, has understood it, and wanders about thoughtful, he may
in the world.' (1065)

7. Dhotaka: 'And I take delight in that, the highest peace[2], O great Isi, which if a man has and he wanders about thoughtful, he may overcome desire in the world.' (1066)

8. 'Whatsoever thou knowest, O Dhotaka,'--so said Bhagavat,--'(of what is) above, below, middle, knowing this to be a tie in the world, thou must not thirst for reiterated existence.' (10

Dhotakamanavapukkha is ended.

7. UPASIVAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'Alone, O Sakka; and without assistance I shall not be able to cross the great stream,'--s venerable Upasiva;--'tell me an object, O thou all-seeing one, by means of which one may c (1068)

2. 'Having in view nothingness, being thoughtful, O Upasiva,'--so said Bhagavat,--'by the r nothing existing shalt thou cross the stream; having abandoned sensual pleasures, being lo shalt regard the extinction of desire (i.e. Nibbana), both day and night[3].' (1069)

[1. Santim.

2. Santim uttamam.

3. Akinkannam pekkhamano satima--Upasiva ti Bhagava-- N' atthiti nissaya tarassu ogham,
Kame pahaya. virato kathahi Tanhakkhayam rattamahabhi passa.]

p. 198

3. Upasiva: 'He whose passion for all sensual pleasures has departed, having resorted to leaving everything else, and being delivered in the highest deliverance by knowledge, will he without proceeding further[1]?' (1070)

4. 'He whose passion for all sensual pleasures has departed, O Upasiva,'--so said Bhagav resorted to nothingness after leaving everything else, and being delivered in the highest deli knowledge, he will remain there without proceeding further.' (1071)

5. Upasiva: 'If he remains there without proceeding further for a multitude of years, O thou one, (and if) he becomes there tranquil and delivered, will there be consciousness for such a

6. 'As a flame blown about by the violence of the wind, O Upasiva,'--so said Bhagavat,--'go be reckoned (as existing), even so a Muni, delivered from name and body, disappears, and (as existing)[3].' (1073)

7. Upasiva: 'Has he (only) disappeared, or does he not exist (any longer), or is he for ever

[1. Sabbesu kamesu yo vitarago
Akinkannam nissito hitva-m-annam
Sannavimokhe parame vimutto Titthe nu so tattha ananuyayi.

2. Titthe ke so tattha ananuyayi
Pugam pi vassanam samantakakkhu
Tatth' eva so siti siya vimutto
Bhavetha vinnanam tathavidhassa?

3. Akki yatha vatavegena khitto
Attham paleti na upeti samkham
Evam muni namakaya vimutto Attham paleti na upeti samkham.]

p. 199

from sickness? Explain that thoroughly to me, O Muni, for this Dhamma is well known to the

8. 'For him who has disappeared there is no form, O Upasiva,'--so said Bhagavat,--'that by he is, exists for him no longer, when all things (dhamma) have been cut off, all (kinds of) dis cut off[2].' (1075)

Upasivamanavapukkha is ended.

8. NANDAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'There are Munis in the world,'--so said the venerable Nanda,--'so people say. How is th by thee? Do they call him a Muni who is possessed of knowledge or him who is possessed

2. Buddha: 'Not because of (any philosophical) view, nor of tradition, nor of knowledge, O expert call (any one) a Muni; (but) such as wander free from woe, free from desire, after hav themselves, those I call Munis[4].' (1077)

[1. Atthangato so uda va so n' atthi
Udahu ve sassatiya arogo,
Tam me muni sadhu viyakarohi,
Tatha hi te vidito esa dhammo.

2. Atthangatassa na pamanam atthi,
Yena nam vaggu tam tassa n' atthi,
Sabbesu dhammesu samuhatesu
Samuhata vadapathapi sabbe.

3. Nanupapannam no munim vadanti
Udahu ve giviten' upapannam?

4. Na ditthiya na sutiya na nanena
Munin ka Nanda kusala vadanti, Visenikatva anigha nirasa
Karanti ye te munayo ti brumi.]

p. 200

3. 'All these Samanas and Brahmanas,'--so said the venerable Nanda,--'say that purity co (philosophical) views, and from tradition, and from virtue and (holy) works, and in many (oth
they, in the way in which they lived in the world, cross over birth and old age, O venerable m O Bhagavat, tell me this.' (1078)

4. 'All these Samanas and Brahmanas, O Nanda,'--so said Bhagavat,--'say that purity com (philosophical) views, and from tradition, and from virtue and (holy) works, and in many (oth
they did not, in the way in which they lived in the world, cross over birth and old age, so I sa

5. 'All these Samanas and Brahmanas,'--so said the venerable Nanda,--'say that purity co (philosophical) views, and from tradition, and from virtue and (holy) works, and in many (oth thou, O Muni, sayest that such have not crossed the stream, who then in the world of gods a birth and old age, O venerable man? I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this.' (1080)

6. 'I do not say that all Samanas and Brahmanas, O Nanda,'--so said Bhagavat,--'are shro old age; those who, after leaving in this world what has been seen or heard or thought, and (holy) works, after leaving everything of various kinds, after penetrating desire, are free from indeed I call men that have crossed the stream[1].' (1081)

[1. Naham 'sabbe samanabrahmanase Gatigaraya nivuta' ti brumi,
Ye s' idha dittham va sutam mutam va
Silabbatam vapi pahaya sabbam
Anekarupam pi pahaya sabbam
Tanham parinnaya anasavase
Te ve nara oghatinna ti brumi.]

p. 201

7. Nanda: 'I delight in these words of the great Isi; well expounded (by thee), O Gotama, is upadhi (i.e. Nibbana); those who, after leaving in this world what has been seen or heard or virtue and (holy) works, after leaving everything of various kinds, after penetrating desire, ar passion, such I call men that have crossed the stream.' (1082)

Nandamanavapukkha is ended.

9. HEMAKAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'Those who before in another world,'--so said the venerable Hemaka,--'explained to me Gotama, saying, "So it was, so it will be," all that (was only) oral tradition, all that (was only) that increased (my) doubts[1]. (1083)

2. 'I took no pleasure in that, but tell thou me the Dhamma that destroys desire, O Muni, w has understood, and he wanders about thoughtful, he may cross desire in the world.' (1084)

3. Buddha: 'In this world (much) has been seen,

[1. Ye me pubbe viyakamsu
Huram Gotamasasanam
Ikk-asi iti bhavissati
Sabban tam itihitiham
Sabban tam takkavaddhanam.]

p. 202

heard, and thought; the destruction of passion and of wish for the dear objects that have bee
Hemaka, is the imperishable state of Nibbana. (1085)

4. 'Those who, having understood this, are thoughtful, calm, because they have seen the I and divine, such have crossed desire in this world[1].' (1086)

Hemakamanavapukkha is ended.

10. TODEYYAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'He in whom there live no lusts,'--so said the venerable Todeyya,--'to whom there is no d has overcome doubt, what sort of deliverance is there for him?' (1087)

2. 'He in whom there live no lusts, O Todeyya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'to whom there is no d has overcome doubt, for him there is no other deliverance.' (1088)

3. Todeyya: 'Is he without breathing or is he breathing, is he possessed of understanding o himself an understanding[2]? Explain this to me, O thou all-seeing one, that I may know a M (1089)

[1. Etad annaya ye sata
Ditthadhammabhinibhuta
Upasanta ka tedasa (?)[*]
Tinna loke visattikam.

2. Nirasaso so uda asasano Pannanava so uda pannakappi.

*. B reads ye sata instead of tedasa.]

p. 203

4. Buddha: 'He is without breathing, he is not breathing, he is possessed of understanding forming himself an understanding; know, O Todeyya, that such is the Muni, not possessing a cleaving to lust and existence.' (1090)

Todeyyamanavapukkha is ended.

11. KAPPAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'For those who stand in the middle of the water,'--so said the venerable Kappa,--'in the f stream that has set in, for those who are overcome by decay and death, tell me of an island and tell thou me of an island that this (pain) may not again come on[1].' (1091)

2. 'For those who stand in the middle of the water, O Kappa,'--so said Bhagavat,--'in the fo that has set in, for those overcome by decay and death, I will tell thee of an island, O Kappa

3. 'This matchless island, possessing nothing (and) grasping after nothing, I call Nibbana, of decay and death[2]. (1093)

[1. Tvan ka me dipam[*] akkhab Yatha yidam naparam siya.

2. Akinkanam anadanam
Etam dipam anaparam
Nibbanam iti nam brumi Garamakkuparikkhayam.

Akinkanan ti kinkanapatipakkham, anadanan ti adanapatipakkham, kinkanadanavupasamar Commentator.

*. B reads disam.]

p. 204

4. 'Those who, having understood this, are thoughtful (and) calm, because they have seen fall into the power of Mara, and are not the companions of Mara.' (1094)

Kappamanavapukkha is ended.

12. GATUKANNIMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'Having heard of a hero free from lust,'--so said the venerable Gatukannin,--'who has cr stream, I have come to ask him who is free from lust; tell me the seat of peace, O thou with wisdom), tell me this truly, O Bhagavat. (1095)

2. 'For Bhagavat wanders about after having conquered lust as the hot sun (conquers) the tell the Dhamma to me who has (only) little understanding, O thou of great understanding, th
how to leave in this world birth and decay.' (1096)

3. 'Subdue thy greediness for sensual pleasures, O Gatukannin,'--so said Bhagavat,--'havi forsaking of the world as happiness, let there not be anything either grasped after or rejecte (1097)

4. 'What is before thee, lay that aside; let there be nothing behind thee; if thou wilt not gras
what is in the middle, thou wilt wander calm[2]. (1098)

[1. Kamesu vinaya gedham, Nekkhammam datthu khemato
Uggahitam nirattam va
Ma te viggittha kinkanam.

2. Comp. supra, .]

p. 205

5. 'For him whose greediness for name and form is wholly gone, O Brahmana, for him ther which he might fall into the power of death.' (1099)

Gatukannimanavapukkha is ended.

13. BHADRAVUDHAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'I entreat the wise (Buddha), the houseless, who cuts off desire,'--so (said) the venerabl Bhadravudha,--'who is free from commotion, forsakes joy, has crossed the stream, is liberat time behind; having heard the chief's (word), they will go away from here[1]. (1100)

2. 'Different people have come together from the provinces, longing (to hear) thy speech, O expound it thoroughly to them, for this Dhamma is well known to thee.' (1101)

3. 'Let one wholly subdue the desire of grasping (after everything), O Bhadravudha,'--so sa Bhagavat,--'above, below, across, and in the middle; for whatever they grasp after in the wo Mara follows the man. (1102)

4. 'Therefore, knowing this, let not the thoughtful Bhikkhu grasp after anything in all the wo considering as creatures of desire this generation, sticking fast in the realm of death.' (1103)

Bhadravudhamanavapukkha is ended.

[1. Okamgaham tanhakkhidam anegam
Nandimgaham oghatinnam vimuttam Kappamgaham abhiyake sumedham, Sutvana nagassa apanamissanti ito.]

14. UDAYAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'To Buddha who is sitting meditating, free from pollution,'--so said the venerable Udaya, performed his duty, who is without passion, accomplished in all things (dhamma), I have com tell me the deliverance by knowledge, the splitting up of ignorance.' (1104)

2. '(It consists in) leaving lust and desire, O Udaya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'and both (kinds o driving away sloth, and warding off misbehaviour. (1105)

3. 'The deliverance by knowledge which is purified by equanimity and thoughtfulness and reasoning on Dhamma I will tell thee, the splitting up of ignorance[1].' (1106)

4. Udaya: 'What is the bond of the world, what is its practice? By the leaving of what is Nib be[2]?' (1107)

5. Buddha: 'The world is bound by pleasure, reasoning is its practice; by the leaving of des said to be.' (1108)

6. Udaya: 'How does consciousness cease in him that wanders thoughtful? Having come t hear thy words.' (1109)

[1. Upekhasatisamsuddham
Dhammatakkapuregavam
Annavimokham pabrumi
Aviggaya pabhedanam.

2. Kim su samyogano loko,
Kim su tassa vikarana
Kiss' assa vippahanena
Nibbanam iti vukkati?]

p. 207

7. Buddha: 'For him who both inwardly and outwardly does not delight in sensation, for hin thoughtful, consciousness ceases.' (1110)

Udayamanavapukkha is ended.

15. POSALAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'He who shows the past (births, &c.),'--so said the venerable Posala,--'who is without de cut off doubt, to him who is accomplished in all things (dhamma), I have come supplicatingly (1111)

2. 'O Sakka, I ask about his knowledge who is aware of past shapes, who casts off every c who sees that there exists nothing either internally or externally; how can such a one be led (1112)

3. 'Tathagata, knowing all the faces of consciousness, O Posala,'--so said Bhagavat,--'kno stands delivered, devoted to that (object)[2]. (1113)

4. 'Having understood that the bonds of pleasure do not originate in nothingness (?), he se

[1. Vibhutarupasannissa
Sabbakayapahayino
Agghattan ka bahiddha ka
Natthi kinkiti passato
Nanam Sakkanupukkhami, Katham neyyo tathavidho.

2. Vinnanatthitiyo sabba--Posala ti Bhagava-- Abhiganam Tathagato
Titthantam enam ganati Vimuttam tapparayanam.]

p. 208

this (matter), this (is) the knowledge of a perfect, accomplished Brahmana[1].' (1114)

Posalamanavapukkha is ended.

16. MOGHARAGAMANAVAPUKKHA

1. 'Twice have I asked Sakka,'--so said the venerable Mogharagan,--'but the clearly-seein explained it to me; if the divine Isi is asked for the third time, he will explain it, so I have hear

2. 'There is this world, the other world, Brahman's world together with the world of the god know thy view, the famous Gotama's (view). (1116)

3. 'To this man who sees what is good I have come supplicatingly with a question: How is upon the world that the king of death may not see him?' (1117)

4. 'Look upon the world as void, O Mogharagan, being always thoughtful; having destroye oneself (as really existing), so one may overcome death; the king of death will not see him w the world[2].' (1118)

Mogharagamanavapukkha is ended.

[1. Akinkannasambhavam
Nandisamyoganam iti
Evam evam abhinnaya
Tato tattha vipassati,
Etam nanam tathamtassa Brahmanassa vusimato.

2. Comp. .]

p. 209

17. PINGIYAMANAVAPUKKHA.

1. 'I am old, feeble, colourless,'--so said the venerable Pingiya,--'my eyes are not clear, my not good; lest I should perish a fool on the way, tell me the Dhamma, that I may know how to decay in this world.' (1119)

2. 'Seeing others afflicted by the body, O Pingiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'(seeing) heedless in their bodies;--therefore, O Pingiya, shalt thou be heedful, and leave the body behind, that never come to exist again.' (1120)

3. Pingiya: 'Four regions, four intermediate regions, above and below, these are the ten re nothing which has not been seen, heard, or thought by thee, and (is there) anything in the w understood (by thee)? Tell (me) the Dhamma, that I may know how to leave birth and decay

4. 'Seeing men seized with desire, O Pingiya,'--so said Bhagavat,--'tormented and overcom decay,--therefore thou, O Pingiya, shalt be heedful, and leave desire behind, that thou maye exist again.' (1122)

Pingiyamanavapukkha is ended.

This said Bhagavat, living in Magadha at Pasanaka Ketiya (the Rock Temple). Sought by s the followers (of Bavari, and) questioned by each of them in turn, he responded to the quest having understood the meaning and tenor of each question, lives according to the Dhamma the further shore of decay and death, for these Dhammas lead to the

p. 209

further shore, and therefore this order of Dhamma was called 'the way to the other shore.'

1, 2. Agita, Tissametteyya, Punnaka and Mettagu, Dhotaka and Upasiva, Nanda and Hem Kappa, and the wise Gatukannin, Bhadravudha and Udaya, and also the Brahmana Posala, and Pingiya the great Isi, (1123, 1124)

3. These went up to Buddha, the Isi of exemplary conduct; asking subtle questions they w supreme Buddha. (1125)

4. Buddha, being asked, responded to their questions truly, and in responding to the quest delighted the Brahmanas.(1126)

5. They, having been delighted by the clearly-seeing Buddha, the kinsman of the Adikkas, to a religious life near the man of excellent understanding. (1127)

6. He who lived according to what had been taught by Buddha (in answer) to each single q this shore to the other shore. (1128)

7. From this shore he went to the other shore entering upon the most excellent way; this w
the other shore, therefore it is called 'the way to the other shore.' (1129)

8. 'I will proclaim accordingly the way to the further shore,'--so said the venerable Pingiya;
it, so he told it; the spotless, the very wise, the passionless, the desireless lord, for what reas
he speak falsely? (1130)

9. 'Well! I will praise the beautiful voice of (Buddha), who is without stain and folly, and wh behind arrogance and hypocrisy. (1131)

10. 'The darkness-dispelling Buddha, the all-seeing,

p. 211

who thoroughly understands the world[1], has overcome all existences, is free from passion all pain, is rightly called (Buddha), he, O Brahmana, has come to me. (1132)

11. 'As the bird, having left the bush, takes up his abode in the fruitful forest, even so I, ha men of narrow views, have reached the great sea, like the hamsa[2]. (1133)

12. 'Those who before in another world explained the doctrine of Gotama, saying, "So it w be," all that was only oral tradition, all that was only something that increased my doubts[3].

13. 'There is only one abiding dispelling darkness, that is the high-born, the luminous, Got understanding, Gotama of great wisdom, (1135)

14. 'Who taught me the Dhamma, the instantaneous, the immediate, the destruction of des distress, whose likeness is nowhere[4].' (1136)

15. Bavari: 'Canst thou stay away from him even for a moment, O Pingiya, from Gotama o understanding, from Gotama of great wisdom, (1137)

[1. Lokantagu.

2. Digo yatha kubbanakam pahaya
Bahupphalam kananam avaseyya
Evam p' aham appadasse pahaya
Mahodadhim hamso-r-iv' agghapatto.

3. Ye 'me pubbe viyakamsu
huram Gotamasasanam
ikk-asi iti bhavissati
sabban tam itihitiham
sabban tam takkavaddhanam.

4. Yo me dhammam adesesi
Sanditthikam akalikam
Tanhakkhayam anitikam Yassa n'atthi upama kvaki.]

p. 212

16. 'Who taught thee the Dhamma, the instantaneous, the immediate, the destruction of de
distress, whose likeness is nowhere?' (1138)

17. Pingiya: 'I do not stay away from him even for a moment, O Brahmana, from Gotama o understanding, from Gotama of great wisdom, (1139)

18. 'Who taught me the Dhamma, the instantaneous, the immediate, the destruction of des distress, whose likeness is nowhere. (1140)

19. 'I see him in my mind and with my eye, vigilant, O Brahmana, night and day; worshippi night, therefore I think I do not stay away from him. (1141)

20. 'Belief and joy, mind and thought incline me towards the doctrine of Gotama; whicheve wise man goes, the very same I am inclined to[1]. (?) (1142)

21. 'Therefore, as I am worn out and feeble, my body does not go there, but in my thought there, for my mind, O Brahmana, is joined to him. (1143)

22. 'Lying in the mud (of lusts) wriggling, I jumped from island to island; then I saw the per Enlightened, who has crossed the stream, and is free from passion.' (1144)

23. Bhagavat[2]: 'As Vakkali was delivered by

[1. Saddha ka piti ka mano sati ka
Namenti me Gotamasasanamha (?),
Yam yam disam vagati bhuripanno
Sa tena ten' eva nato 'ham asmi.

2. At the conclusion of this (i.e. the preceding) gatha, Bhagavat, who stayed at Savatthi, whe maturity of the minds of Pingiya and Bavari, shed a golden light. Pingiya, who sat picturing B to Bavari, having seen the light, looked round, saying, 'What is this?' And when he saw Bhag it were, before him, he said to the Brahmana Bavari: 'Buddha has come.' The Brahmana ros stood with folded hands. Bhagavat, shedding a light, showed himself to the Brahmana, and beneficial for both, he said this stanza while addressing Pingiya. Commentator.]

p. 213

faith, (as well as) Bhadravudha and Alavi-Gotama, so thou shalt let faith deliver thee, and th Pingiya, to the further shore of the realm of death[1].' (1145)

24. Pingiya: 'I am highly pleased at hearing the Muni's words; Sambuddha has removed th from harshness, and wise. (1146)

25. 'Having penetrated (all things) concerning the gods, he knows everything of every des Master will put an end to all questions of the doubtful that (will) admit (him). (1147)

26. 'To the insuperable, the unchangeable (Nibbana), whose likeness is nowhere, I shall c this (Nibbana) there will be no doubt (left) for me, so know (me to be) of a dispossessed min

Parayanavagga is ended.

Suttanipata is ended.

[1. Yatha ahu Vakkali muttasaddho
Bhadravudho Alavi-Gotamo ka
Evam eva tvam pi pamunkayassu saddham,
Gamissasi tvam Pingiya makkudheyyaparam.

2. Asamhiram asamkuppam
Yassa n' atthi upama kvaki
Addha gamissami, na me 'ttha kamkha, Evam padharehi avittakittam.]

ÉÍÍÍ

Introduction

Preamble

1. Science and Technology

Two kinds of technology
The place of ethics
Science and technology cannot be separated
Reaching the limits and finding no answer
Behind the prosperity ...

2. Religion and Science

From common beginnings to separation
A clarity that is not free of confusion
Towards a unity of science and religion
Too little, too late
Not above blunders

3. Science and Buddhism: A meeting or a parting?

The natural religions: understanding nature through wisdom
Good and evil
The Law of Kamma -- scientific morality
The question of free will

4. The Role of Faith in Science and Buddhism

Man-centered versus self-centered
Differences in methods

5. Approaching the Frontiers of Mind

The material world: science's unfinished business
Ethics: a truth awaiting verification
"What is" versus "what should be"
True religion is the foundation of science

Effect of values on scientific research

6. Future Directions

Too little
Too late
Encouraging constructive technology

Translator's Foreword

When transmitting any set of ideas from one culture to another, we are confronted not only with a difference of language, but a disparity of backgrounds and cultural values. This is particularly so when the ideas stem from an examination of one culture through the eyes of another. This book is one such examination: a collection of reflections and suggestions on a traditionally Western domain -- science -- from a traditionally Eastern point of view -- that of a Buddhist monk.

Many of the ideas and concepts presented here may seem strange to the Western reader uninitiated into traditional Buddhist thinking, which necessitates some initial guidance. I advise the reader to open up to a new set of values -- not necessarily agreeing with or denying them, but trying to see the meaning within them.

The contents of the book are taken from the National Science Day Lecture given by Bhikkhu P.A. Payutto at the Faculty of Science, Chiang Mai University, in August 1991, which was recorded and later printed in the Thai language as Buddhasasana ny Thana Pen Rahk Than Korng Wityasaht (published by the Science Faculty, Chiang Mai University, 1992). For this third revised edition I would like to express my thanks to Venerable Jayasaro Bhikkhu, who gave many helpful editorial suggestions. They have helped to produce a more polished product than the first edition, which was somewhat rushed.

It may be helpful to appreciate the vast disparity between the cultural context in which the talk was given and that in which the book will be received. The talks were given at one of Thailand's major universities to an audience of highly educated, modernized Thais. Like many people in modern times, many members of the audience had drifted away from their native religion, Buddhism, because of the unscientific stigma attached to religion from the West. Venerable Payutto takes the position of a concerned father chiding his children, pointing out to them the great value of that which they have left behind. In the process he gives us as Westerners some invaluable insights into our own ways of thinking and confronts our whole cultural development with questions that, particularly at this time, demand answers.

Essentially, then, the talk was given to Thai Buddhists. Now, in book form, it is being presented to Westerners. I hope the reader will be open and at the same time discerning, taking heed of those teachings which are relevant to our situation (not just agreeing with those that we like or disagreeing with those that we don't) and making a sincere effort to benefit from them. In the final analysis, the teachings lead only to benefit, not to harm. The question is, are we ready to benefit from them?

Bruce Evans

Introduction

In this modern, scientific age the sciences and technology have enjoyed remarkable progress, leading to the rapid and exciting changes we see around us. One of the most important factors in this progress is the expertise resulting from specialization, which has enabled human beings to utilize profound and highly detailed stores of knowledge. This knowledge has in turn been used to answer mankind's needs on a practical level, which is a concrete and tangible fruit of scientific research. Science is at the vanguard of this specialized approach to research, and the exciting developments of technology are a concrete manifestation of it.

Before embarking on this quest for specialization, human beings lived surrounded by innumerable natural forces, all of which had a great effect on their lives. Human beings were ignorant of the causes for these natural phenomena, how they affected their lives, or how they were related to each other -- all of nature was a mysterious enigma.

In order to know and understand the natural world, human beings were motivated to begin searching for answers, with a variety of different people searching in a variety of ways, amassing knowledge in ever-increasing detail. But the more they learned, the more there was to learn, and the search for knowledge went deeper and deeper into specialized channels. The world has long been absorbed in this specialized search for knowledge and delighting in the knowledge found. Now we find ourselves immersed in a mass of minutiae, and we tend to think, speak, act and try to solve problems in a specialized way.

We seem to have forgotten that the original objective of this meticulous and compartmentalized search for knowledge was an understanding of the relationship which natural phenomena have on human life, both from a specialized perspective and from a holistic one. With researchers drowning in the data of their own isolated fields of research, human knowledge becomes fragmented and disjointed. We have till now concerned ourselves mainly with the wonders that all this knowledge has enabled us to produce, to the neglect of the fundamental problems with which humanity is still faced.

Ultimately, an impasse has been reached, and we are beginning to see warning signals. This impasse can be seen on two levels:

1. In the search for knowledge: some of the branches of learning, especially physics, which is leading the race for knowledge, seem to have reached the limits that depth and detail can take them. They are incapable of understanding the basic truths of nature, because such an understanding demands an awareness of other fields of learning. This has forced researchers to look for ways to transcend their self-imposed specialized limitations and integrate their knowledge with other fields. At the very least, they are beginning to realize that research in any one specialized field will not lead to realization of the truth.

2. In the application of knowledge: the practical application of knowledge has been geared mostly to responding to human needs and desires. This has led to many problems, which the funnel vision arising from specialization prevented us from foreseeing. These problems are becoming increasingly urgent, even threatening the destruction of the human race. The most obvious and urgent of them is the destruction of the environment, which is forcing us to search for a solution based on a more integrated approach to knowledge.

One of the most important indications of the extent to which the specialized approach to knowledge has developed is the human ability to synthesize both knowledge and new products. Such developments have caused many scientists to delude themselves into believing that they have penetrated reality and conquered nature.

But in fact such knowledge of causal factors and relationships is still limited to the confines of specialization. Beyond these confines, in the whole natural order, such knowledge is inadequate, and the practical application of it leads to problems. It has led to an impasse, one that has awakened humanity to its limitations. The realization of this impasse and its implications is itself one of the most recent advances of research.

From this realization and awareness of the insufficiency of human knowledge, movements have begun to try to integrate the knowledge of these various specialized fields and arrive at a more holistic understanding of the natural order, one which includes both mankind and the natural environment, both the physical world and the mental. This step beyond the confines of specialization and the attempts to integrate diverse bodies of knowledge is a change in direction for mankind, one which has been very difficult to make.

In the context of a holistic understanding of the natural order, the human position within it, and the development of a beneficial human society, the extremely detailed knowledge of specialization has in effect led nowhere, and human beings are still very much in the dark. Science, as the major actor in this scenario, the leader of the quest for knowledge and specialization, is in a most opportune position to help the world in this regard, by integrating its research and knowledge with other fields of learning in order to arrive at a more holistic understanding of the natural order.

That the Science Faculty of Chiang Mai University invited me to present a lecture, which is the source material for this book, and organized the printing of editions of the book in both Thai and English, is a beginning in this direction. It is a gesture of open-mindedness and willingness to consider ideas about the field of science in the eyes of a field which is traditionally regarded as its direct opposite -- religion.

It is worth mentioning here that Buddhism has never seen science as an antagonist. Buddhism welcomes scientific knowledge, recognizing it as another branch of learning about the natural order. Many Buddhists are in fact hopeful that the truths unearthed by science will serve to support and verify the timeless teachings given by the Buddha thousands of years ago. At the very least scientific knowledge may reveal the truths of the physical world, which can only help to improve our understanding of life and mankind's place in the natural order, especially when such knowledge is incorporated with knowledge about the mental world or human world as explained through the teachings of Buddhism.

From the perspective of academic research, this book represents a step toward a more integrated approach to academic learning, broadening the fields of research by recognizing that religion is one branch of the humanities. It is not only academic learning which stands to gain, but human civilization, society and the whole human race.

I would like to extend my appreciation to Ajahn Chatchawal Poonpun, of the Science Faculty of Chiang Mai University, who diligently took upon himself the task of helping the Science Faculty realize its objective, and also saw to the subsequent extension of that first initiative into the printed page. I would also like to extend my appreciation to Khun Yongyuth Dhanapura, the Director of the Buddhadhamma Foundation, who tirelessly dedicates himself to the task of spreading the Buddha's teachings.

I would like to express my thanks to Venerable Phra Kru Palat Insorn (Cintapanno) who has given of his time and energy in the preparation through the Desk Top Publishing process of the original Thai text, which was the source from which the English translation was taken.

Last but not least, I would like to extend my appreciation to Bruce Evans, who brought to the English translation of the Thai book not only a fluency in both the Thai and English languages, but an understanding of the Buddha's teachings and a dedication to the work, resulting in this admirable English version of the talk in book form. For any inaccuracies which may be remaining in the text, I myself take responsibility.

Bhikkhu P.A. Payutto

November 30, 1993

Preamble

National Science Day Lecture, given at Chiang Mai University, Northern Thailand, on August 16, 1991, entitled, "Buddhism as the Foundation of Science."

To many people, the notion of a Buddhist monk talking about science may seem surprising or incongruous, but I feel that such a reaction is unwarranted. It might be necessary to come to some understanding with each other before beginning the subject matter proper of this book in order to establish a better frame of mind.

The perception of me as a religious scholar talking about scientific matters may be a result of modern tendencies. Our age is one of specialists. We tend to put people into pigeonholes -- religious, scientific, economic and so on -- each specializing in his or her own particular field. But I don't think of myself as a religious scholar, and I don't want to be called one. I am simply a Buddhist monk.

To be a Buddhist monk is not necessarily to be a religious scholar, and vice versa. To be a Buddhist monk means to live a certain way of life. To use current terminology, we could say that it is a "specialized" way of life. Religion, on the other hand, is a specialized branch of knowledge. One who has a specialized life style has a role to play, defined by the constraints of that life style, which, in this case, is designed to allow him to live as skilfully as possible on both the personal and social levels. Specialized academic disciplines result from dividing knowledge up into categories. There is no consideration of life style involved, it is a purely academic concern. In this light it is inaccurate to call a Buddhist monk a religious scholar.

Today's lecture, "Buddhism as the Foundation of Science," should not be looked on as a meeting between two disparate academic disciplines. This kind of attitude leads to the impression that you are about to witness some kind of strange confrontation. Let us remember that science is our subject of discussion, our meeting ground. Scientists are the owners of this branch of knowledge, the ones most conversant with it, and now the scientists are allowing me, an outsider, to give some reflections about science. If it is understood in this way, the spirit of the lecture will be more easily grasped.

Thus it isn't necessary for the speaker, an outsider, to have such a vast knowledge of the subject of science. He may know some things about science, of much he may be ignorant, he may speak rightly or wrongly, but nonetheless there is something to be gained from the lecture, even if only an idea of how scientists are viewed by outsiders. And of what use is that? Practically speaking, it is impossible to live or act completely alone. We must interact with other ways of thinking and with events around us. We must be able to interact with other people and other branches of knowledge. If such interaction is successful, then the quality of our own work is enhanced. If it is not successful, our own activity or field of knowledge suffers accordingly.

So this lecture is about science through the eyes of an outsider, in this case a Buddhist monk. As to how a Buddhist monk views science, this will become clear as the lecture proceeds.

A second point that I would like to clarify is in relation to the title of the lecture. Not only is a religious person talking about science -- he is even claiming that his religion is the foundation of science! I won't go into the reasons for this title at present, but would simply like to state that it is inspired by the words of a scientist, and an eminent one at that. He didn't use the exact words I have used, but I don't think I have misrepresented him. In any case, I don't put too much weight on the matter, and as I will be explaining it in the progress of the talk, I don't think you need trouble yourselves over whether Buddhism really is the foundation of science or not. Any benefit you obtain from today's lecture, or whether Buddhism really is the foundation of science, are things that you can each decide for yourselves at your own discretion.

I would like to clarify the meaning of two of the words that will be used throughout this talk, and they are "Buddhism" and "science." By Buddhism here I do not mean the institutional form of Buddhism, but its essential teaching, which is an abstract quality. As for science, we may have a problem. Some scientists may feel that in this context, only pure science should be considered, not applied science or technology. But whenever the average person thinks of the word "science," he thinks of the whole totality, not this narrow definition. I myself am an average person, an outsider like most people. I speak of science in a very general sort of way, including both the pure and the applied sciences.

Chapter 1

Science and Technology

At the outset we must acknowledge the innumerable blessings bestowed on us by science. Nobody will dispute the enormous value science has for us. In order to be able to give this lecture, I have travelled all the way from Bangkok to Chiang Mai in only one hour. Back in the days of King Rama I, you would have had to wait three months for me to get here, and for that matter I probably wouldn't have come at all. For this we must acknowledge science's contribution to travel.

Looking around at communications, we see radios, telephones, fax machines, televisions, videos and satellites, all of which have arisen from scientific and technological developments. Other obvious areas of development are in the medical world, where so many contagious diseases have now been virtually eradicated. Cholera is now quite rare, bubonic plague no longer exists, and smallpox has all but vanished. We no longer have to fear these infectious diseases. In olden times one could die from an infected appendix, but nowadays an appendectomy is a relatively simple operation. Even brain operations are getting easier. Sophisticated tools for accurate examination and diagnosis are more and more accessible. X-Ray machines are being replaced with computer X-Ray machines, and now we have ultra sound and MRI. It's almost no longer necessary for the doctor to examine the patient, the machines do it for him. These are all examples of extremely valuable technological advances.

But on the other hand, when we really look into it, we find that science, and in particular technology, has created a great many problems for humanity as well. In the present time, particularly in the highly developed countries, there is even a fear that the human race, and indeed the whole world, may meet destruction at the hands of this technological progress. It might be a very instantaneous kind of destruction, at the flick of a switch, so to speak, or it could be a slow and gradual kind of destruction, as the gradual deterioration of the environment.

Even within the immediacy of our everyday lives we are threatened by dangers. We can't be sure whether our food has been contaminated with chemicals or not. Sometimes the plants and animals used for our food supply are treated with hormones to boost their growth. Hogs are given special additives to make their meat turn an appealing red color. Poisonous substances are sometimes used in foods as preservatives, flavor enhancers or dyes, not to mention the uncontrolled use of pesticides. Some of the people who sell these foods wouldn't dare eat them themselves!

Two kinds of technology

The application of science which effects the changes in the natural world is called technology. Technology is dependent for its existence on the knowledge obtained through science. It is the tool, or channel, through which humanity has worked to manipulate nature in the pursuit of material comfort. But at the same time, the dangers which threaten us are also contingent on this technology. Technology is thus both an instrument for finding happiness and a catalyst for danger.

Now in answer to all this, scientists may counter that by "science" we mean only pure science. Pure science seeks to discover and explain the truth, its concern is primarily the search for knowledge. Whatever anybody wants to do with this knowledge is their business, not the concern of science. Pure science tends to shake off responsibility in this regard.

Technology has been accused of using scientific knowledge to its own ends, but this is not entirely true. Initially, technology was aimed at bringing benefit to humanity, but nowadays there are two kinds of technology. One is the technology which is used to create benefit, while the other is used to seek personal gain. What we need is the technology that is used to create benefit, but the problems of the present time exist largely because modern technology is of the kind that seeks personal gain.

If we constrain ourselves to creating benefit, the repercussions arising from technological development will be few and far between, but whenever technology is used to seek personal gain, problems arise. Thus we must clearly distinguish between these two kinds of technology.

The place of ethics

Be it the wrong utilization of scientific knowledge, the utilization of technology for personal gain, or even utilization of technology to destroy the earth, all these problems have arisen entirely as a result of human activity, they are a matter of utilization. Because they are rooted in human activity, their solutions are an ethical or moral concern.

These problems can only be simply and directly solved through moral awareness. Only then will technology and science be used for constructive purposes. With moral awareness, even though there may be some harmful consequences arising from lack of circumspection or ignorance, the prevention and rectification of problems will be on the best possible level.

Mankind has looked to science and technology to bring benefit to human society, but there is no guarantee that science and technology will bring only the benefit that humanity hopes for. These things can be used to create harm or benefit. How they are used is entirely at the disposal of the user.

If we ignore morality or ethics, instead of creating benefit, the most likely result is that science and technology will bring problems, stressing as they do:

1. the unrestrained production and consumption of goods with which to gratify the senses, feeding craving and greed (raga and lobha);

2. escalation of the power to destroy (dosa); and

3. increased availability of objects which lure people into delusion and carelessness (moha).

In so doing, technology tarnishes the quality of life and pollutes the environment. Only true moral awareness can alleviate these destructive influences.

Without morality, technological progress, even the beneficial kind, tends to increase the propensity for destruction. The more science and technology advance, and the more keenly destruction seems to threaten mankind, the more is morality necessitated, and the more will the stability and well-being of humanity be dependent on ethical principles.

In any case, this subject of ethics, although a simple and straightforward one, is largely ignored in modern times. Most people want to live without problems, but they don't want to solve them. As long as ethics are ignored like this, problems will persist.

Science and technology cannot be separated

It is not only science that has fostered technology's growth -- technology has also been a decisive factor in the development of science. It is the scientific method that has enabled scientific learning to progress to where it is now, and an essential part of the scientific method is observation and experiment. The earliest forms of observation and experiment were carried out through the five senses -- eye, ear, nose, tongue and body, particularly the eyes for looking, the ears for listening and the hands for touching. However, our sense organs have their limitations. With the naked eye we can see a limited number of stars and a limited portion of the universe. With technological development, the telescope was invented, enabling science to make a Great Leap Forward. Microscopic organisms, invisible to the naked eye, were made visible through the invention of the microscope, allowing science to once again make great advances. Pure science, then, has relied heavily on technology for its progress.

The tools used for scientific research are products of technology, that is why science and technology have been inseparably connected in their development. In the present day, scientists are looking to the computer to further their quest for truth. Capable of collecting and collating vast amounts of information, much more than the ordinary human mind, the computer will be indispensable in the testing of hypotheses and the formulation of theories.

The benefits of science appear to the mass of people through technology. Humanity must, however, learn to choose between technology for creating benefit and technology for seeking personal gain.

Reaching the limits and finding no answer

Science has advanced so far-reaching that it seems to be approaching the limits of the physical universe and, as it approaches the limits of that world, it is turning to the mysteries of the mind. What is mind? How does it work? What is consciousness? Does it arise from a physical source, or is it entirely separate from the physical world? These days computers have Artificial Intelligence. Will the development of Artificial Intelligence lead to computers with minds? This is a question some scientists are speculating about.

Modern methods of observation and verification seem to have transcended the limitations of the five senses. We have developed instruments to expand their limited capabilities. Whenever the senses are incapable of perceiving any further, we resort to these technological instruments. Now, even with these instruments, we seem to have reached our limit, and scientific investigations are reduced to mathematical symbols.

As observation, experimentation and analysis enter the sphere of the psyche, science retains its basic attitude and experimental method, and so there is a lot of guesswork and preconception in its operation. It remains to be seen whether science can in fact enter into the domain of the mind, and by what means.

Values and motivation

Even though pure science tends to be distinguished from applied science and technology, pure science nevertheless shares some of the responsibility for the harm resulting from these things. In fact, in the last hundred years or so, pure science has not really been so pure. There are values implicit within pure science which the scientific fraternity is unaware of; and because it isn't aware of these values, scientific research comes unwittingly under their influence.

What is the source of science? All sciences, be they natural or social sciences, are based on values. Take economics for example. What is the origin or source of economics? It is want. What is want, can it be observed with any of the five senses? It can't, because it is a quality of mind, a value. The discipline known as science claims it is free of values, but in fact it can never be truly value-free because it involves mental qualities.

Where is the source of the physical sciences? The source of science is the desire to know the truth of nature, or reality. This answer is acceptable to most scientists, and in fact it was given by a scientist. The desire to know nature's truths, together with the belief that nature does have constant laws, which function according to cause and effect, are the two foundations on which science bases its quest for nature's secrets.

The source of science is within this human mind, at desire for knowledge and faith. Without these two mental qualities it would be impossible for science to grow and develop. The motivation which drove the early developments of science, and which still exists to some extent, was the desire to know the truths of nature. This was a relatively pure kind of desire. In later times, during the Dark Ages, this desire to know was actively suppressed by the Christian Church and the Inquisition. Those who doubted the word of the Bible, or who made statements which cast doubt on it, were brought before the court and put on trial. If found guilty they were punished. Galileo was one of those brought on trial. He had said that the earth revolved around the sun, and was almost put to death for his beliefs. At the last moment he pleaded guilty and was absolved; he didn't die, but many others were burnt alive at the stake.

At that time there was overt suppression of the search for truth. But the stronger the suppression, the stronger the reaction, so it came about that the suppression and constraint of the Dark Ages had the effect of intensifying the desire to know the truths of nature. This desire has fired the thinking of Western cultures.

This drive can still be considered a relatively pure desire for knowledge. The science we have nowadays, however, is no longer so pure. It has been influenced by two important attitudes or assumptions:

1. That the prosperity of mankind hinges on the subjugation of nature.

This attitude stems from the Christian belief that God created mankind in his own image, to take control of the world and have dominion over nature. God created nature, and all of the things within it, for man's use. Mankind is the leader, the hub of the universe, the master. Mankind learns the secrets of nature in order to manipulate it according to his desires, and nature exists for man's use.

One Western text[1] states that this idea is responsible for Western scientific progress. The text states that in ancient times, people in the East, particularly China and India, were scientifically more advanced than the West, but owing to the influence of this drive to conquer nature, the West has gradually overtaken the East.

So the first major value system is the belief in Man's right to conquer nature. Now we come to the second major influence:

2. That well-being depends on an abundance of material goods.

This line of thinking has exerted a very powerful influence on Western industrial expansion. It has been argued that industries in the West were created to address the problem of scarcity, which is found throughout Western history. Life in Western countries was beset by hostile elemental forces, such as freezing winters, which made farming impossible. People in such places had to live exceedingly arduous lives. Not only were they subject to freezing temperatures, but also food shortages. Life was a struggle for survival, and this struggle led to the development of industry.

The opposite of scarcity is plenty. People in Western countries saw that happiness hinged on the elimination of scarcity, and this was the impulse behind the Industrial Revolution. The awareness of scarcity and the desire to provide plenty, is in turn based on the assumption that material abundance is the prerequisite for happiness.

This kind of thinking has developed into materialism, and from there, consumerism, a significant contribution to which has been made by industrialists working under the influence of the first line of thinking mentioned above. Coupled with the assumption that happiness is dependent on an abundance of material goods, we have the belief that nature must be conquered in order to cater to man's desires. The two assumptions support each other well.

It seems as if the pure desire for knowledge mentioned earlier has been corrupted, coming under the influence of the desires to conquer nature and to produce an abundance of material goods, or materialism. When these two values enter the picture, the pure desire for knowledge becomes an instrument for satisfying the aims of these secondary values, giving rise to an exploitative relationship with nature.

The assumption is that by conquering nature, mankind will be able to create unlimited material goods with which to cater to his desires, resulting in perfect happiness. The search for methods to implement this assumption naturally follows, leading to the marked material progress we have seen in recent times, especially since the Industrial Revolution. It has been said that the science which has developed in the Industrial Age is a servant of industry. It may be claimed that science has paved the way for industry, but industry says, "Science?

That is my servant!"

Together with the development of industry we have observed the gradual appearance, in ever-increasing severity, of the harmful effects contingent on it. Now, with the danger that threatens us from the destruction of the environment, it is all too clear. The cause for this destruction is the powerful influence of these two assumptions: the desire to conquer nature and the drive for material wealth. Together they place mankind firmly on the path to manipulating, and as a result destroying, nature on an ever-increasing scale. These two influences are also the cause for mankind's internal struggles, the contention to amass material comforts. It might even be said that modern man has had to experience the harmful consequences of the past century of industrial development principally because of the influence of these two assumptions.

Behind the prosperity ...

These two assumptions are not the whole picture. There are also two major trends which have served to support them:

1. Specialization: The Industrial Age is the age of specialization. Learning has been subdivided into specialized fields, each of which may be very proficient in its respective right, but on an overall level they lack integration.

The purpose of the specialization of learning is to obtain knowledge on a more detailed level, which can then be brought together into one integrated whole, but the specialists have become blinded by their knowledge, producing an unbalanced kind of specialization. In the field of science there are those who feel that science alone will solve mankind's problems and answer all his questions, which gives them little inclination to integrate their learning with other fields of knowledge.

This kind of outlook has caused the belief that religion and ethics are also specialized fields of learning. Modern education reduces ethics to just another academic subject. When people think of ethics, they think, "Oh, religion," and file it away in its little compartment. They aren't interested in ethics, but when it comes to solving the world's problems, they say, "Oh, my discipline can do that!" They don't think of trying to integrate their learning with other disciplines. If they really were capable of solving all problems as they say, then they would have to be able to solve the ethical ones, too. But then they say that ethics is a concern of religion, or some other specialized field. This brings us to the second trend:

2. The belief that ethical problems can be solved without the need for ethics. Supporters of this idea believe that when material development has reached its peak, all ethical problems will disappear of their own accord.

According to this view, it is not necessary to train people or to develop the mind. This is a line of reasoning which has recently appeared in the field of economics. Economists say that when the economy is healthy and material goods are in plentiful supply, there will no longer be any contention, and society will be harmonious. This is to say in effect that ethical or moral problems can be solved through material means.

This is not entirely wrong. Economic situations do have a bearing on ethical problems, but it is a mistake to oversimplify the situation by believing that ethical problems would somehow disappear of their own accord if the economy were healthy. It might be said, however, that this line of reasoning is true in one sense, because without morality it would be impossible for the economy to be healthy. It could also be said that if ethical practice was good (for example, people were encouraged to be diligent, generous, prudent, and to use their possessions in a way that is beneficial to society), then economic problems would disappear.

The statement, "When the economy is good, ethical problems will not arise," is true in the sense that before the economy can be healthy, ethical problems must be addressed. Similarly, the statement, "When ethical problems are all solved, the economy will be healthy," is true in the sense that before ethical problems can be solved, economic problems must also be addressed.

The phrase "ethical problems" takes in a wide range of situations, including mental health and the pursuit of happiness. Thus, the attempt to solve ethical problems through materialistic means must also entail dealing with moods and feelings, examples of which can be seen in the synthesization of tranquillizers to relieve stress and depression. But it would be a mistake to try to solve ethical problems through such means. This kind of relief is only temporary, it soothes the problem but does not solve it.

Many branches of academic learning strive to be recognized as proper sciences, but the specialist perspective causes funnel-vision and discord, and in itself becomes an impediment to true science. Specialization is inimical to true science. Even physics cannot be called true science, because it lacks integration; its facts are piecemeal, its truth is partial. When truth is partial, it is not the real truth. Without the whole picture, our deductions will not be in accordance with the total reality. The stream of cause and effect is not seen in its entirety, so the truth remains out of reach.

These two trends, specialization and the belief that ethical problems can be solved through material means, pervade the Age of Industrialization. Coupled with the two assumptions previously mentioned, they intensify problems accordingly.

Many of the points I have mentioned so far come within the domain of religion, and in order to see this more clearly, I would like to enter the subject of religion itself. I have been speaking about science, its origins and development, now let us take a look at the origins and development of religion and try to integrate the two.

Footnote:

1. Encyclopaedia Britannica, 15th Ed., (1988), s.v. "Science, the History of," by L. Pearce Williams (vol. 27, p.37). [Back to text]

Chapter 2

Religion and Science

From common beginnings to separation

It is commonly asserted that religion arose from the fear of danger, particularly natural dangers, such as lightning, floods, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and hurricanes. These dangers have threatened human beings throughout the ages. Ancient man, ignorant of the workings of nature, could not understand the causes of these natural forces. Terrified at the threat they presented, he began to search for answers. This quest precipitated an interest in the nature that surrounded man, and a desire to find some solutions to his problems.

This awareness of danger is the common origin of both religion and science. The desire for security was the motivating force for the birth of religion. Together with the fear of danger arose a sense of wonder at the marvels of nature, which led to the desire to know its truths. This was no idle curiosity: human beings were forced to find out about nature in order to address the dangers which threatened them. Thus the aspiration to be free of danger, which was based on fear, indirectly led to the desire to know nature's truths, which gave birth to science. Religion was born from the desire to escape danger, and science was born from the desire to know nature's truths.

History tells us that the earliest forms of scientific research, in such cultures as in Egypt and Mesopotamia, were in fact conducted by priests. They were the first people to take an interest in nature and to devote time to finding solutions to the dangers that threatened them.

However, the common origin of science and religion is also the point at which they parted. The reason they parted lies within the nature of truth itself. The natural dangers which threaten humanity are immediate concerns, matters of life and death. The threat is tangible and urgent. Do what you will, we must have an answer right now. Because all people are faced equally with the same dangers, answers must be relevant to the whole of society. In such a situation, it is necessary to come up with answers which can be acted upon immediately, answers which put an end to the urgent demands for security. When an answer appears that is acceptable, it is institutionalized as religion.

The practical answers thus provided may take forms, such as mystic ceremonies, which to the modern eye would seem absurd, but even so, they are something which can be acted upon immediately. For the mainstream of society, this is what becomes religion.

Now there are others who take the time to gradually collect facts, experiment and analyze. These people, through observation and experiment, arrive at a different set of answers. This is what is known as "science," the knowledge that comes from gradual and systematic observation.

Here religion and science diverge. One answer serves as a remedy for an immediate need, for the masses, and, relying heavily on faith and belief, lacks systematic observation. This is religion. Religion, then, is tied to faith. Science, on the other hand, is a discipline of gradual and systematic investigation. It is not concerned with finding immediate answers, and is available only to the few who are so inclined, not the whole of society. The systematic observation of natural facts has been carried on through the ages by interested parties, and the resulting institution has become known as "science."

At this juncture we have one clear distinction between religion and science: religion is for the masses, whereas science is for a select few. It may be questioned how religion manages to maintain uniformity in the letter and the practice of its teachings. This is achieved through faith. Religion has its roots in faith, and uses faith to preserve its teaching. Religion provides an unchanging belief system, a dogma, which must be adhered to and upheld, one that is unquestionable.

Science is accessible to those who are capable of understanding it, the thinkers. Its essence is preserved through verifiable truths and valid methods of experimentation. Science thus preserves and propagates its truths through wisdom, or, more specifically, the scientific method.

Religion seeks to convey an all-embracing, absolute truth, an answer which addresses an immediate need. It might be more accurate to say that the answer thus provided is what becomes known as religion, rather than that religion provides the answer. There is no institution of religion, as such, which comes up with these answers. It is rather that the answers proposed by humanity have become institutionalized as religion.

In one sense, religion seeks to provide one absolute answer to the fundamental questions of life, covering all levels, from the highest to the lowest. Science, on the other hand, attempts to observe truth from its individual manifestations, piece by piece. It is a collection of piecemeal facts which are hoped will gradually lead to an overall picture.

Even though science, too, wants general principles, its general principles are conditional. They are confined to specific situations and conditions, and are only part of the overall, or fundamental, truth. We could say that religion gives a total answer, science a piecemeal one.

Owing to the limitations of both science and religion, there arose a third group which, too, aspired to find answers to the fundamental questions of life and the universe. They were dissatisfied with religion because, although it gave such an answer, it was not one that appealed to reason. Science, on the other hand, although providing answers that were verifiable and appealed to reason, had not yet come up with any absolute answers. Scientific research had still not reached the fundamental level of reality. This third group did not want to wait for science's answers, so they attempted to find answers to those fundamental questions through reasoned analysis, without the need for verification. This system of thought became another science, known as philosophy.

We could compare these three disciplines, using the fundamental questions of nature as a measuring stick, in this way:

1. Science: is still in the process of verification and observation and is yet to come up with an answer.

2. Philosophy: attempts to give an answer pending verification by using reasoned analysis.

3. Religion: provides an absolute answer which needs no verification.

Both science and philosophy appeared after religion, and both attempt to give clearer answers. However, both of them fail to give answers that are satisfactory and fulfilling for everyday life, and that is why religion still exists and answers a need through faith.

Because religion offers this comprehensive and immediate truth, an answer that is suitable for the masses, but which at the same time is not verifiable through any of the five senses, it must hinge on faith. And because these answers are unverified, they will be constantly changing. At one time one kind of answer is given: people don't know whether it is true or not, because it can't be verified. If they believe it they accept it. At a later time a new answer is given. Nobody knows whether this new answer is true or not either -- it, too, can't be verified. It boils down to preference. Some prefer the older belief, some the newer one. Religions, built as they are on faith, vary in accordance with that faith. For this reason we can see at any one time many different religions. This is because an all-embracing, absolute answer cannot be verified, it rests on belief. When a new answer arises there may be some who believe that, but others won't, and all the answers are equally unverifiable.

In contrast, science answers slowly and methodically, verifying each point as it goes. It solves problems rationally. At any given time there is only one science. It is often said, "There are many religions, but only one science." However, from a historical perspective it can be said that there are many sciences, because science doesn't give a total view of truth. Theories about the nature of the universe vary from time to time. For example, at one time science favored the Ptolemaic universe, which portrayed an earth-centered model. Then came the Copernican System, with the heliocentric solar system, and then there were the Cartesian and Newtonian systems, and now we have the universe of the new physics. Science's picture of reality has been constantly changing. Nature, or the universe, according to the modern theories of physics, whether the quantum or relativity theories, is completely different from the universe in the time of Newton. In this sense there have been many sciences.

It is not only from the historical perspective that there have been many sciences. In the present age there also seem to be many sciences existing together. There are scientists who now say that the time has come for science to reappraise some of its basic premises. They reject some of the old scientific premises and talk of a "new physics" and a "new science."

Science deals with the outside world, which is measured by the five senses. Here religion differs yet again. It not only looks at the outside world, but also the human being, the one who is observing. While science concerns itself solely with the objects of observation, religion concerns itself with the observer, the one who is using these five sense bases. Thus, religion is not confined to data observable through the five senses, but is directly related to the level of development of each individual. The way religion is perceived is directly related to the level of mental development of the perceiver, which gives it an added level of complexity.

In any case, as far as religion goes, even though it lays emphasis on the human being, it does so only insofar as the human being is experiencing a problem, and that problem needs to be dealt with. When looking for the causes of that problem, however, most religions look, like science, to the external environment. In this respect, most religions are similar to science: they look to the external natural world as the source of problems or suffering.

Religion's search for truth is in order to solve the human problem, while science's search for truth is in order to satisfy the thirst for knowledge. For most religions, which are compelled to have ready answers, the causes of problems, whether internal or external, are seen as existing behind that natural world, in the form of spirits, deities, gods or other supernatural forces. For external disturbances, such as lightning, earthquakes and so on, sacrifices and prayers are prescribed. For internal disturbances, such as sickness, mental disease or hysteria, mediums or spirit healers perform mystic ceremonies. Meanwhile science, not being compelled to find any immediate remedies, slowly and systematically goes about its search for data.

The natural religions, Buddhism in particular, have a special interest in the human condition, but they do not see the source of problems entirely in the external world. Buddhism looks for the source of problems within the entire process of causes and conditions -- including those within the human being, such as wrong ways of thinking -- be they internal or external, material or immaterial, physical or mental.

Among ordinary religions, there are many that teach the treatment of problems by appropriate means, through morality or ethics, which seems to indicate an understanding of the internal factors contributing to them, but this is not necessarily the case. In fact, such practice is often done not with real understanding of these factors, but out of obedience to some external, supernatural force. The relationship is one between mankind and an external power. Ethical behavior in these religions is usually done in order to avoid punishment, or to gain favors or blessings, rather than through awareness of the factors occurring in the natural processes.

Religions, many and varied at the one time, address the needs of different levels of people. At any one time society consists of many different levels of virtue and understanding, thus the need for many religions, answering many different levels of need.

In the past, scientific truths were verifiable through the five senses, but this is no longer the case. With the passage of time it has become necessary to develop instruments, such as the telescope and the microscope, to extend the capabilities of these senses. Nowadays even those instruments have reached their limits, making it necessary to develop even more complex instruments and test hypotheses with mathematics. Mathematical languages and computers are the newest instruments of verification.

Science's development of increasingly complex means of verification has caused it to become a highly specialized field, accessible to very few people. It has become impossible for the average man to observe the truths of science, because the instruments are not available to him.

Religion, on the other hand, belongs to the masses. It is available for the average man, who is free to accept or reject it without the need for proof. Although it is true that some religions, like science, reserve their truths for a select few, the priests or monks, and even reserve the right to spiritual attainments, this is more a result of manipulations by certain individuals than the nature of religions themselves. In the natural religions, such as Buddhism, there is no such distinction or exclusion, because nature is its own master. How can truth be monopolized? Each individual has a right to understand and attain the truths of nature, depending on intelligence and discernment.

Note that there are two kinds of inability to verify truths. One is through an inability to access the instruments of verification, while the other is because such truths cannot be verified through the means being used. In the present time science is experiencing problems on both counts, especially when attempting to make a statement of ultimate truth, or delving into the realm of the mind.

If the scope of science is not broadened, it will arrive at a dead end. In science there is a very strong aspiration to answer the fundamental and ultimate questions of the universe, but we never seem to get near them. Just as scientific research seems to be getting on the verge of an answer, the truth seems to slip beyond reach once more.

A clarity that is not free of confusion

In addition to the new science and the classical science, or the new physics and the classical physics, we have one science for the specialists and one for the average man. Many of the concepts spoken of in science are completely beyond the ability of the average man to visualize. Not only can he not verify them for himself, he can't even grasp the concepts in question. And this applies not only to the average man: some of the concepts of science are even beyond the ability of most scientists to visualize! One can only take their word for it.

Let us take an example. According to science, light is at once a wave and a particle. Scientists were trying to define the nature of light itself: it's a particle, right? One group said, "Yes, that's right. It's a particle, a stream of photons." But another group said, "No, light is a wave." In the end it seems that it is both a particle and a wave. But what's that? It has to be proven with mathematics. This kind of thing is beyond the grasp of the ordinary human mind.

Let's look at some more examples: astronomers tell us that there are black holes scattered throughout the universe. These are stars with such extremely high gravitational pulls that even light cannot escape them, they are absolutely dark. Now what does the average man make of that? Something that even light cannot escape from?! Now they say that in these black holes both matter and energy are compacted to such terrific densities that nothing on this earth of ours can compare. As an illustration, they say that if all the empty space were somehow pressed out of a skyscraper, like the Empire State Building, 102 stories high, its mass and energy could be compacted into the size of a needle! A skyscraper! Now what is the man in the street going to make of that?

Scientists say that this is how a black hole is. In fact it's even stranger, because, apart from being the size of a needle, at the same time it would still weigh as much as the original Empire State Building. It's inconceivable -- all we can do is believe them. We've trusted the scientists for so long, we give them the benefit of the doubt. But deep inside we're all wondering, "Huh? How is that possible?"

Science is not yet able to provide an explanation of the totality of life and the world, it is still engaged in the process of collecting and verifying pieces of data. It can still not explain many of the basic questions of the universe, such as the nature, or even existence, of the basic particle.

Science has gone beyond the point where it can be proven with the five senses. Hypotheses are proven through mathematics, which is then interpreted by physicists. The truth is reduced to algebraic equations, which are not in themselves the truth, and don't really clarify the truth in a convincing way. Mathematical symbols have become the new objects of faith. They are interpreted without a direct awareness of reality, which is very nearly the condition that Sir Arthur Eddington spoke of. Sir Arthur Eddington was an English scientist, credited with being the first person to devise a way to prove Einstein's Theory of Relativity, on account of which he was knighted. He said:

"Science is incapable of leading mankind directly to the truth, or reality as such, it can only lead him to a shadow world of symbols."[2]

Even observable phenomena are not a certainty. Scientists use the scientific method as a means of testing their observations. The main factors of this method are observation and experiment, which must be done until there is no longer room for doubt. But, even then, the matter is not closed, because of the limitations of the experimental method and the instruments used.

Let's take as an example Newton's Law of Gravitation. This was a universally accepted truth, a Law, until Einstein came along and said it was not entirely correct. On the subatomic level, the Law of Gravity no longer applies. In Newton's time, however, there were no instruments to observe the subatomic level. Mankind had to wait until the twentieth century and the arrival of Einstein, using mathematical equations and reasoning, to perceive this truth. So we must be careful. You cannot ultimately believe even experimentation.

I am reminded of the story of the chicken and Farmer Brown. Every morning that the chicken sees Farmer Brown, Farmer Brown is carrying some food for him. He sees this every single morning, so it follows that whenever he sees Farmer Brown the chicken gets fed. Chicken sees Farmer Brown = gets fed ... this is the equation. But there comes a morning when the chicken sees Farmer Brown and doesn't get fed, because Farmer Brown isn't carrying food in his hand, he's carrying a knife. The equation "Chicken sees Farmer Brown = gets fed" becomes "Chicken sees Farmer Brown = gets throat cut." So it seems that even verification based on repeated observation cannot be completely trusted, it's still not a foregone conclusion.

Towards a unity of science and religion

Science is of little direct use to the masses. The function through which science should really help the people is in the field of understanding, but the role it in effect plays is by and large through technology, which does not improve understanding by any means. In what direction does technology assist humanity? Mostly in consumption, often nourishing greed, aversion, or delusion. Television is invented, and so we are able to watch that. But when people watch television they don't look at things which are going to increase their understanding and intelligence, they prefer to look at things which make them more indulgent and heedless. We have communications technology, but rather than using it for developing wisdom and discernment, it is too often used to encourage delusion.

Science takes no responsibility for the uses its knowledge is put to, leaving technology to help the masses. Technology, however, doesn't always help; sometimes it is downright harmful. As I said, instead of becoming a tool to create benefit, it becomes a tool for seeking personal gain. Thus, science leaves the people in the hands of religion. Who can you blame? One may ask, "Why does religion make people so gullible?" but then it can be countered, "Why does science abandon the people to religion?"

Very few people have access to the more profound levels of science. All most people can do is believe it, they can't really know it. Nowadays science has become more and more a matter of faith, not knowledge, which puts it on much the same standing as most religions.

When science is finally able to arrive at the truth, to answer mankind's ultimate questions, it will be perfected. Many religions will no longer be sustainable. Conversely, a religion which points to the highest truth, to reality, will be in a position to unify with science. At that time science and religion will have reached another meeting point, their last one, where religion becomes science and science becomes religion, the division between the two gone forever.

Too little, too late

The real-life problems in society are in need of an immediate answer or remedy -- now, in this present life. As individuals we are only on this earth for a limited time. The situations threatening us give no time for procrastination.

Even though science is capable of providing many efficient ways of answering our problems, it is hampered by being "too little, too late." By being "too little," I mean that the knowledge of science is insufficient to solve the fundamental problems of life. It cannot make people good, it cannot make them happy, it cannot show them how to rectify bad habits, it cannot heal suffering, sadness, anger, sorrow, depression and so on. It can't even solve social problems.

Scientists may counter that science has helped in many ways. People with insomnia, depression and mental problems are all helped by drugs. Science is of great benefit in these areas. It must be conceded that applied science and technology in the medical fields have helped vast numbers of people. People with severe mental problems are indeed helped to some degree by science, and scientists may even believe that in the future it will be possible to make people happy through the use of drugs. Whenever you feel unhappy, just pop a capsule and the suffering is gone ... but this is no longer medicine, it is hedonism. Scientists may conduct research into the nature of the brain, ascertain which particular chemicals are secreted when certain emotions, such as happiness, are experienced, isolate the chemical agent and synthesize it. Then, whenever people have a feeling of depression or sadness, they can take this drug and be immediately relieved. With chemicals like this as freely available as food, people will always be happy, and never again have to experience depression.

But then again, reflecting on the dangers of chemicals, there are enough problems in the world already with food additives and pesticides, without adding any more. However, this is not the most important point. Even more important is the perspective of values, or quality of life. The objective of religion is to lead people to freedom. Freedom means the ability to be happy without the need for external agents, to be more and more independently happy and less and less dependent on externals, to develop a life free of enslavement to a mass of external trappings. But the use of drugs forces people to lay their happiness and their fate more and more into the hands of externals, making them less and less able to live with themselves.

In causing people to depend increasingly on externals, science is not unlike the ancient religions, which led people to invest their fate in the gods with sacrifices and supplications. In both cases, the happiness and suffering of human beings is offered up into the hands of external agents, and in essence they equally destroy man's independence.

This is what I mean by "too little." Science on its own is not capable of solving mankind's problems. To use Buddhist terminology, we could say that science and technology do not encourage people to have good behavior (sila), do not encourage quality in the mind, or inner well-being (samadhi) and they suffer from "funnel vision," in that they seek to amass data, but they do not provide us with the knowledge of how to lead a happy life (panna).[*]

The second objection to science is that it is "too late." Scientific truth is not whole or complete, it is not yet able to give us definitive and final answers, and there is no indication of when it will be able to do so. Scientific knowledge is constantly changing. At one time the truth is thought to be one way, later on it is found to be otherwise. If we had to sit and wait for science to come up with a final answer to the nature of the universe, we would all die first without ever finding out how to conduct our lives.

Scientists are always looking for a general principle, but they can only arrive at "sub-principles," only pieces of the overall picture. In the meantime, while we are waiting for science's explanation of fundamental truth, we are using it, through technology, to enhance our lives and pander to our desires. For the moment, it is technology that is actually giving concrete results rather than science itself. But technology cannot answer mankind's fundamental questions. For an answer to the truth (or non-truth) of the natural world, mankind must first rely on religion, using science only for the convenience offered through technological progress. This is the situation at the present time.

Religion is still present in this world because mankind is still waiting for a complete and absolute answer, one that is right for the situation and which is immediately practicable. Because such answers cannot be verified, and because science cannot verify them, most people are forced to resort to belief.

Although science has made such great advances, all it has done is expand the perceivable limits of the material world. In terms of answering mankind's fundamental questions and showing man's proper relationship and position in the world, science seems to have been running in circles and made no real progress.

Not above blunders

It is not only in the field of pure science that the problem of mistakes arises from time to time. Within the field of applied science and technology, mistakes are common. They are usually not wrongdoings as such, but blunders that arise out of ignorance, oversight or lack of circumspection.

Take for example the drug chloramphenicol. At one time this drug was very widespread. It was reputed to be a wonder drug, it seemed to cure everything. Whenever you were sick, all you had to do was just go and buy some chloramphenicol, they sold it everywhere. Later on, after about ten years, it was discovered that this drug would gradually build up in the body and cause bone marrow to cease production of blood corpuscles, and many people had died of leukemia.

Then there was the case of DDT. At one time it was thought that with DDT, our problems with the insect world were over - ants, mosquitoes... all gone. People thought that they could eradicate these creatures and no longer have to be bothered by them. Many years later it was found that DDT was carcinogenic, an insidious substance which could prove fatal even to humans. What's more, while the humans were suffering ill effects from the drug, the insect population was becoming immune to it. In time it has become less effective as an insecticide, and is now more likely to kill the human beings. Many countries have banned the use of DDT, but Thailand is still using it, even now.

Then there was the case of thalidomide. Thalidomide was a pain killer and tranquillizer which was highly praised by the medical profession. It was reputed to have passed the most rigorous tests, and was trusted so highly that it was announced as an exceptionally safe drug. It was so lauded that even the developed countries, which are normally very cautious about drugs and medicines, allowed the drug to be bought without a prescription. It was sold for about five years, up until 1961, at which time it was found that this drug, when taken by pregnant women, caused deformities in babies. Before the danger was realized and the drug recalled from the market, about 8,000 children were born deformed.

Let's take one more example, the case of CFC's (chlorofluorocarbons). This group of chemicals is widely used in refrigerators, air conditioners and "pressure-pack" spray cans, and they have been used for a long time with complete confidence. By the time we knew what was going on, these chemicals had risen up into the upper levels of the atmosphere and caused gaps in the ozone layer, causing great concern among scientists and environmentalists the world over. And so a new piece of knowledge arises -- what we thought was a good thing turns out to be not so good after all.

The emergence and development of science has undoubtedly helped to improve understanding and the human intellect, about this there is no argument. But at the same time, if we look closely we will see that it has also caused human intelligence and understanding to decline. Previously, when science was just beginning to develop, people were very impressed with its achievements. There was a great deal of excitement over the discoveries and technological achievements of science, and people put all their hopes into science and technology. All of nature's mysteries were going to be revealed, and science would lead humanity into an age of perfect happiness. Those who wholeheartedly trusted science began to doubt religions and the answers provided by them, and many people lost faith entirely and discarded religion.

Unfortunately, the truth dealt with by science is only a partial one. It deals only with the physical world. Science has no answers to the questions dealing with internal human problems, the answers for which mankind had previously turned to religion. This renunciation of religion in modern times would not be such a big loss if by religion we simply meant the institutional forms of religion, but it means that the part of religion which deals with solving internal human problems has also been discarded. With science taking no interest in these matters, and people ignoring them, there arises a break in the stream of knowledge. The answers which had previously been provided by religions have been ignored, and mankind's mental and spiritual growth has been retarded and even, in some areas, gone into decline.

The nature of the world, life and human problems, will not allow mankind to ignore the need for religion. Fundamental, practical and immediate answers are still as much in demand as ever before. When science is seen to be incapable of providing an answer to this need, and when human beings tire of their fascination with science, they may come to their senses and remember this fundamental need within. They may then turn once more to religion for their answers. But because the stream of mental development has been interrupted, or set back, their searching will be very erratic, and a fresh start may have to be made. Indications of this can be seen in some of the religious developments in highly developed countries, where there has been a persistence of religious superstition and gullibility in spite of being surrounded by a high level of scientific sophistication.

However that may be, science is not without its merits and blessings in leading to better understanding within religious circles. The active role religion, especially in its institutional forms, has taken on occasion in suppressing the development of human intelligence is well known. Some religions have clung blindly to absurd beliefs and practices, even in the face of their own fundamental principles.

The development of science and its attitudes and methods has had some measure of good influence on religions and religious attitudes in society. At the very least, it has prodded religions to reevaluate some of their teachings and attitudes. It has also served as a gauge with which to appraise the answers offered by different religions.

However, from the point of view of the masses, especially in countries in which outlooks and methods have been heavily influenced by science, science does not seem to have had a significantly beneficial effect on life-styles and mental well-being. Science itself is of not much interest to most people. While they look at science favorably, their belief in it is really no different from the beliefs of former generations in magical forces and the occult. It is naive, not based on knowledge. This is "scientism." When most people think of science, they look straight past it at technology, which they look on as a means for gratifying their desires. For that reason, the development of science has had little ennobling influence on the knowledge, understanding, or attitudes of society.

On the brighter side, people seem to be getting over their excitement about science and are beginning to look at their needs in relation to religion. Many religions are addressing these needs on different levels. At the same time, some members of scientific circles are becoming aware of the limitations of orthodox science, and are expanding the horizons of their research to include more religious perspectives, which suggests the possibility of a fully-developed science merging with a fully-developed religion, together to lead humanity to reality, peace, and a life free of foolish attachments.

On the other hand, it may be that science is trying to prove what religion has already predicted. While humanity cannot wait for an answer, we must provide one of some kind, and this answer has become religion. As long as the answer is not proven, we must accept it, while science slowly and methodically tests it out. In this scenario, science is that effort on the part of humanity to prove the truths (or non-truths) of religion. Looking at it in this way, the two fields harmonize; having arisen from a common origin, they eventually merge once more.

As time goes on, the limits of the scientific method will once again be felt. Science will be unable to prove the truths presented by religion. A number of leading scientists are now beginning to realize that this final, ultimate truth spoken of by religion is beyond the reach of science at any point in time.

Footnotes:

2. Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington, The Nature of the Physical World (New York: Macmillan, 1929), p.282. [Back to text]

[*] Sila, samadhi and panna, or moral restraint, concentration and wisdom, are the threefold foundation of Buddhist training. [Back to text]

Chapter 3

Science and Buddhism: A meeting or a parting?

To talk of Buddhism we must first talk about its origins. I have suggested that the origin of religion was the fear of danger, but this is not true of Buddhism, which arose from the fear of suffering. Please note this distinction. Dealing with the origins of religion we talk about danger, but when dealing with Buddhism we talk about suffering, which has a more specific meaning. The fear of danger has its object in external factors, such as floods, earthquakes, and so on, but suffering includes all the problems experienced in life, including those within the mind.

What is suffering? Suffering is the condition of stress and conflict inherent within the human predicament. Simply speaking, suffering (dukkha) is difficulty (panha), because difficulty is what causes stress and conflict.

In the religious quest for protection from danger, people saw that in human society events were caused by human agents. They thought that there must be someone directing things in the natural world also, and so religions proposed God, a "someone," a supernatural source for all natural events. Applying the human social model to the forces behind nature, they came up with God. This is why some contemporary psychologists, reversing a well-known Christian teaching, have said that mankind created God in his own image. Mankind reasoned that it was necessary to appease the God, just as for an earthly leader, and this gave rise to various techniques and ceremonies for paying homage to the deity.

- The essential factor in determining events in the world, according to these ancient religions, was the will of God.
- The factor which tied humanity to god or the supernatural was faith.
- That faith was demonstrated through sacrifices, prayers, and ceremonies.

So we have an overall picture here of a director of events -- the will of God; we have the human connection -- faith; and we have the method of interaction -- sacrifices, prayers and ceremonies. This is the general picture of the role of faith in most religions.

Now, let's see how these factors relate when it comes to Buddhism. As I have mentioned, Buddhism is based on the desire to be free of suffering. To be free of suffering, you must have a method. To know the method, you have to look at the source of suffering. Whereas other religions taught that the source of danger was in supernatural forces, Buddhism says that the source of suffering is a natural process which must be understood.

Suffering has an origin which is subject to the natural processes of cause and effect. Not knowing or understanding this natural cause and effect process is the cause of suffering. Buddhism delves into the origin of suffering by encouraging keen investigation of this law of cause and effect, or Law of Nature.

At this point we have arrived at the source of Buddhism. Just now I said that the origin of other religions was the awareness of danger, the origin of danger in turn being the will of God or supernatural forces; but the source of Buddhism is the awareness of suffering, and the origin of suffering is ignorance of the Law of Nature.

Now we come to redressing the problem. When ignorance of the Law of Nature is the cause, the remedy is its exact opposite, and that is knowledge and understanding of it, which we call wisdom. Up until the emergence of Buddhism, religions had relied on faith as the connection between human beings and the source of danger. Buddhism shifted the human connection from faith to wisdom, and this is a salient characteristic of Buddhism. According to Buddhism, human beings must know and understand the process of cause and effect, and treat problems according to such knowledge.

Finally,[*] the work of correcting the factors involved in the creation of suffering is a human responsibility, and lies within human potential. Responsibility for solving the problem has shifted from the will of God to human endeavor.

Three points are highly significant:

1. Theistic religions concern themselves with the source of danger, which is said to be God (or divine), but Buddhism concerns itself with the source of suffering, which is said to be ignorance.

2. The tie to this source in theistic religions is faith, but in Buddhism it is wisdom.

3. The director of results in theistic religions is a divine or supernatural power, but in Buddhism this responsibility has been placed back into human hands, with the emphasis on human action.

The emphasis in Buddhism shifts from faith to wisdom, and this is a revolutionary change. Such wisdom begins with the desire to know, or the desire for knowledge -- before there can be wisdom, there must be an aspiration for it. But this aspiration differs from the aspiration for knowledge in science, as I will presently point out.

Another important shift in emphasis in Buddhism is from the directives of a deity to human endeavor. This is one of Buddhism's cornerstones. No matter where Buddhism spreads to, or how distorted the teaching becomes, this emphasis on human endeavor never varies. If this one principle is missing, then we can confidently say that it is no longer Buddhism.

The principle of human endeavor is expressed in Buddhist circles as the law of kamma. People may misunderstand kamma, there may be many misconceptions about it, even within the Buddhist world, but no matter how the teachings of Buddhism may vary from place to place and time to time, kamma always deals with human endeavor.

Buddhism's combination of adherence to the Law of Nature, proclaiming man's independence, and putting wisdom to the fore instead of faith, is a unique event in the history of religion. It has even caused some Western scholars to wonder whether Buddhism is a religion at all, and Western books on Buddhism often state that Buddhism is not a religion.

Summarizing, we have these three important principles:

1. a Law of Nature
2. proclaiming man's independence
3. replacing faith with wisdom

The natural religions: understanding nature through wisdom

I would like to describe here some of the basic characteristics of Buddhism. Firstly I would like to present some of the teachings from the Buddha himself, and then expand on them to see how they relate to science.

1. Adherence to the Law of Nature: Truth is the Law of Nature, something which naturally exists. The Buddha was the one who discovered this truth. At funerals, Buddhist monks chant a Sutta called the Dhammaniyama Sutta. The meaning of this Sutta is that the truth of nature exists as a normal condition, whether a Buddha arises or not.

What is this Law of Nature? The monks chant uppada va bhikkhave tathagatanam, anuppada va tathagatanam: "Whether Buddhas arise or not, it is a natural, unchanging truth that all compounded things are unenduring, stressful, and not-self." [Dhammaniyama or Uppada Sutta, A.I. 286]

Unenduring (anicca) means that compounded things are constantly being born and dying, arising and passing away.

Stressful (dukkha) means that they are constantly being conditioned by conflicting and opposing forces, they are unable to maintain any constancy.

Not-self (anatta) means that they are not a self or intrinsic entity, they merely follow supporting factors. Any form they take is entirely at the direction of supporting factors. This is the principle of conditioned arising, the most basic level of truth.

The Buddha was enlightened to these truths, after which he declared and explained them. This is how the chant goes. This first principle is a very important one, the basis of Buddhism. Buddhism regards these natural laws as fundamental truths.

2. The interrelation and interdependence of all things: Buddhism teaches the Law of Dependent Origination. In brief, the law states:

Imasmim sati idam hoti Imasmim asati idam na hoti
Imassuppada idam uppajjati Imassa nirodha idam nirujjhati

Which means:

When there is this, this is; when this is not, neither is this.
Because this arises, so does this; because this ceases, so does this.
[As in the Natumha Sutta, S.II. 64-5]

This is a truth, a natural law. It is the natural law of cause and effect on its most basic level.

It is worth noting that Buddhism prefers to use the words "causes and conditions" rather than "cause and effect." Cause and effect refers to a specific and linear relationship. In Buddhism it is believed that results do not arise simply from a cause alone, but also from numerous supporting factors. When the conditions are ready, then the result follows. For example, suppose we plant a mango seed and a mango tree sprouts. The mango tree is the fruit (effect), but what is the cause of that mango tree? You might say the seed is the cause, but if there were only the seed, the tree couldn't grow. Many other factors are needed, such as earth, water, oxygen, suitable temperature, fertilizer and so on. Only when factors are right can the result arise. This principle explains why some people, even when they feel that they have created the causes, do not receive the results they expected. They must ask themselves whether they have also created the conditions.

Note also that this causal relationship does not necessarily proceed in a linear direction. We tend to think of these things as following on one from the other -- one thing arises first, and then the result arises afterwards. But it doesn't necessarily have to function in that way. Suppose we had a blackboard and I took some chalk and wrote on it the letters A, B, and C. The letters that appear on the blackboard are a result, but what is their cause? We might answer "a person," but we might also answer "chalk." No matter which factor we take to be the cause, it alone cannot give rise to the result. To achieve a letter "A" on a blackboard there must be a confluence of many factors -- a writer, chalk, a blackboard of a color that contrasts with the color of the chalk, a suitable temperature, the surface must be free of excess moisture -- so many things have to be just right, and these are all factors in the generation of the result.

Now, in the appearance of that letter "A," it isn't necessary for all the factors involved to have occurred one after the other, is it? We can see that some of those factors must be there simultaneously. Many of the factors are interdependent in various ways. This is the Buddhist teaching of cause and condition.

3. The position of faith: Just now I said that Buddhism shifted the emphasis in religion from faith to wisdom, so why should we be speaking about faith again? In fact faith plays a very important role in Buddhism, but the emphasis is changed. Let us take a look at how faith in Buddhism is connected to verification through actual experience. The teaching that is most quoted in this respect is the Kalama Sutta, which contains the passage:

"Here, Kalamas,
"Do not believe simply because you have heard it.
"Do not believe simply because you have learn it.
"Do not believe simply because you have practiced it from ancient times.
"Do not believe simply because it is rumored.
"Do not believe simply because it is in the scriptures.
"Do not believe simply on logic.
"Do not believe simply through guesswork.
"Do not believe simply through reasoning.
"Do not believe simply because it conforms to your theory.
"Do not believe simply because it seems credible.

"Do not believe simply out of faith in your teacher.
[Kalama or Kesaputtiya Sutta, A.I. 188]

This teaching amazed people in the West when they first heard about it, it was one of Buddhism's most popular teachings, because at that time science was just beginning to flourish. This idea of not believing anything other than verifiable truths was very popular. The Kalama Sutta is fairly well known to Western people familiar with Buddhism, but Thai Buddhists have barely heard of it.

The Buddha goes on to say in the Kalama Sutta that one must know and understand through experience which things are skillful and which unskillful. When something is seen to be unskillful and harmful, conducive not to benefit but to suffering, it should be given up. When something is seen to be skillful, useful and conducive to happiness, it should be acted upon. This is a matter of clear knowledge, of direct realization, of personal experience -- it is a shift from faith to wisdom.

The Buddha also gave some clear principles for examining one's personal experience: "Independent of faith, independent of learning, independent of reasoned thinking, independent of conformity with one's own views, one knows clearly for oneself, in the present moment, when there is greed in the mind, when there is not greed in the mind; when there is hatred in the mind and when there is not hatred in the mind; when there is delusion in the mind and when there is not delusion in the mind." This is true personal experience, the state of our own minds, which can be known clearly for ourselves in the present moment.

4. Proclamation of mankind's independence: Buddhism arose among the Brahmanical beliefs, which held that Brahma was the creator of the world. Brahma (God) was the appointer of all events, and mankind had to perform sacrifices and ceremonies of homage, of which people at that time had devised many, to keep Brahma happy. Their ceremonies for gaining the favor of Brahma and other gods were lavish. The Vedas stated that Brahma had divided human beings into four castes. Whichever caste a person was born into, he was bound for life. There was no way to change the situation, it was all tied up by the directives of Brahma.

When the Buddha-to-be was born, as the Prince Siddhattha Gotama, the first thing attributed to him was his proclamation of human independence. You may have read in the Buddha's biography, how, when the Prince was born, he performed the symbolic gesture of walking seven steps and proclaiming, "I am the greatest in the world, I am the foremost in the world, I am the grandest in the world." [Mahapadana Sutta, D.II. 15] This statement can be easily misconstrued. One may wonder, "Why was Prince Siddhattha being so arrogant?" but this statement should be understood as the Buddha's proclamation of human independence. The principles expounded by the Buddha in his later life all point to the potential of human beings to develop themselves and realize the highest good, and so become the most sublime of all beings. The Buddha's own enlightenment was the supreme demonstration and proof of that potential. With such potential, it is no longer necessary for human beings to plead for help from external sources. Instead they can better themselves. A human being who becomes a Buddha is revered by even the celestial beings and gods.

There are many examples of this kind of teaching in the scriptures. Consider, for example, the oft-quoted:

Manussabhutam sambuddham attadantam samahitam ...
deva'pi namassan'ti

This means: "The Buddha, although a human being, is one who has trained and perfected himself ... Even the gods revere him." [Naga Sutta, A.III. 346; Udayitherakatha, Khu., Thag. 689]

With this principle, the human position changes. The attitude of looking externally, taking refuge in gods and deities, has been firmly retracted, and people are advised to look at themselves, to see within themselves a potential for the finest achievement. No longer is it necessary for people to throw their fates to the gods. If human beings realize this potential, even those gods will recognize their excellence and pay reverence.

This principle entails a belief, or faith, in the potential of human beings to be developed to the highest level, of which the Buddha is our example.

5. Remedy based on practical and reasoned action rather than dependence on external forces: This principle is well illustrated in one of the teachings of the Dhammapada:

"Finding themselves threatened by danger, people take refuge in spirits, shrines, and sacred trees, but these are not a true refuge. Turning to such things as a refuge, there is no true safety.

"Those who go for refuge to the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha, who understand the Four Noble Truths by seeing problems, the cause of problems, freedom from problems, and the way leading to freedom from problems, are able to transcend all danger." [Dhammapada, Verses 188-192]

This is a turning point, a shift in emphasis from pleading with deities to responsible action. However, if unaware of this principle, people can even see the Triple Gem as simply an object of devotion, in the same way that members of theistic religions see deities.

The Triple Gem begins with the Buddha, our example of a perfected human being. This is a reminder to humanity of its potential, and as such encourages us to reflect on our responsibility for its development. By taking the Buddha for refuge, we reflect on our responsibility to develop ourselves and use wisdom to address the problems of life.

When we think of the Dhamma, we are reminded that this development of potential must be done through means which conform to the Law of Nature and function according to causes and conditions.

When we reflect on the Sangha, we think of those who have used the Dhamma (teaching) skillfully, developing and realizing their highest potential. They are living examples of the actual attainment of the truth, and, through developing ourselves in right practice, we can become one of them.

These are the Three Refuges. To believe or have faith in these refuges means that we strive to solve problems like wise human beings. This tenet compels us to use wisdom.

The way to solve problems through wisdom is:

1. Dukkha (suffering): We begin with the problem, recognizing that there is one.

2. Samudaya (the cause of suffering -- craving based on ignorance): We search out the cause of that problem.

3. Nirodha (the cessation of suffering -- Nibbana): We establish our aim, which is to extinguish the problem.

4. Magga (the way leading to the cessation of suffering): We practice in accordance with that aim.

6. Teaching only those truths which are of benefit: There are many different kinds of knowledge and many different kinds of truth, but some of them are not useful, they are not concerned with solving the problems of life. The Buddha did not teach such truths and was not interested in finding out about them. He concentrated on teaching only those truths which would be of practical benefit. This principle is illustrated in the simile of the leaves, which the Buddha gave while he was staying with a company of monks in the Sisapa forest. One day he picked up a handful of leaves from the forest floor and asked the monks, "Which is the greater number, the leaves in my hand, or the leaves on the trees?" An easy question, and the monks answered immediately. The leaves in the Buddha's hand were very few, while the leaves in the forest were of far greater number.

The Buddha replied, "It is the same with the things that I teach you. There are many truths that I know, but most of them I do not teach. They are like the leaves in the forest. The truths that I do teach are like the leaves here in my hand. Why do I not teach those other truths? Because they are not conducive to ultimate wisdom, to understanding of the way things are, or to the rectification of problems and the transcendence of suffering. They do not lead to the attainment of the goal, which is Nibbana." [Sisapa Sutta, S.V. 437]

The Buddha said that he taught the things he did because they were useful, they led to the solving of problems, and were conducive to a good life. In short, they led to the transcendence of suffering.

Another important simile was given in answer to some questions of metaphysics. Such questions are among the questions with which science is currently wrestling, such as: Is the Universe finite or infinite? Does it have a beginning? The scriptures mention ten stock philosophical questions which had been in existence from before the time of the Buddha. One monk went to ask the Buddha about them. The Buddha refused to answer his questions, but instead gave the following simile:

A man was shot by a poisoned arrow. With the arrowhead still embedded within him, his relatives raced to find a doctor. As the doctor was preparing to cut out the arrowhead, the man said, "Wait! I will not let you take out this arrowhead until you tell me the name of the man who shot me, where he lives, what caste he is, what kind of arrow he used, whether he used a bow or a crossbow, what the arrow was made of, what the bow was made of, what the bowstring was made of, and what kind of feather was attached to the end of the arrow. Until I find out the answers to these questions, I will not let you take this arrow out." [Chulamalunkyovada Sutta, M.I. 428]

Obviously, if he were to wait for the answers to all those questions that man would not only fail to find out the information he wanted, but he would die needlessly. What would be the proper course of action here? Before anything else, he would have to have that arrowhead taken out. Then, if he still wanted to know the answers to those questions, he could go ahead and find out.

In the same way, the subject of the Buddha's teaching is human suffering and the way to relieve it. Metaphysical questions are not at all relevant. Even if the Buddha had answered them, his answers could not be verified. The Buddha taught to quickly do what must be done, not to waste time in vain pursuits and debates. This is why he did not answer such questions.

Good and evil

I have already said that most religions see the events of the world as the workings of God or supernatural forces. According to them, if mankind does not want any unpleasant events to befall him, or if he wants prosperity, he must let God see some display of worship and obeisance. This applies not only to external natural events, but even people's personal lives. The deity, God, is the Creator of the universe, together with all of its happiness and suffering. He is constantly monitoring mankind's behavior to ascertain whether it is pleasing to Him or not, and people are constantly on their guard to avoid any actions which might displease Him.

According to this standard, all of humanity's behavior can be classified into two categories. Firstly, those actions which are pleasing to God, which are duly rewarded, and which are known as "good"; and those actions which are displeasing to God, which He punishes, and which are known as "evil." Whatever God approves of is "good," whatever He forbids is "evil." The priests of the religion are the mediators who inform mankind which actions are good and which are evil, according to God's standards. These have been the accepted standards for defining good and evil in Western culture.

As for science, from the time it parted with religion it interested itself solely with the external, physical world and completely ignored the abstract side of things. Science took no interest at all in moral or ethical issues, seeing them as matters of religion, unfounded on facts, and turned its back on them altogether. People in Western countries, the countries which are technologically developed, were captivated by the advances of science. In comparison, religion's teachings of deities and supernatural forces seemed ill-founded, and so they, too, turned their backs on religion. At that time morals and ethics lost their meaning. If God is no longer important, then morals or ethics, God's set of laws, are no longer important. Many people today, especially those in scientific circles, view ethics as merely the arbitrary dictates of certain groups of people, such as priests, established at best to maintain order in society, but lacking any basis in ultimate truth.

Those branches of science which study the development of human civilization, especially sociology, and some branches of anthropology, seeing the success of the physical sciences, have tried to afford their branches of learning a similar standing, by using much the same principles and methods as the physical sciences. The social sciences have tended to look on ethics or morals as values without scientific foundation. They have tended to avoid the subject of ethics in order to show that they, too, are pure sciences void of value systems. Even when they do make studies about ethical matters, they look on them only as measurable quantities of social behavior.

The physical sciences, the social sciences, and people in the modern age in general, look on ethical principles as purely conventional creations. They confuse ethics with its conventional manifestations, a grave mistake in the search for authentic knowledge -- in trying to avoid falsehood, they have missed the truth.

Now let us come back to the subject of Buddhism. In regard to ethics, both science and Buddhism differ from the mainstream of religions, but while science has cut itself off from them, completely disregarding any consideration of ethics or values, Buddhism turns toward them, studying and teaching the role of ethical principles within the natural process. While most religions look at the events of nature, both outside of man and within him, as directed by the will of God, Buddhism looks at these events as a normal and natural process of causes and conditions. These same laws apply as much to mental phenomena as to the physical workings of nature. They are part of the stream of causes and conditions, functioning entirely at the directives of the natural laws. The difference in quality is determined by variations within the factors of the stream.

Buddhism divides the laws of nature, called niyama, into five kinds. They are:

1. Utuniyama (physical laws): The natural laws dealing with the events in the natural world or physical environment.

2. Bijaniyama (biological laws): The natural laws dealing with animals and plants, particularly heredity.

3. Cittaniyama (psychic laws): The natural laws dealing with the workings of the mind and thinking.

4. Kammaniyama (karmic or moral laws): The natural law dealing with human behavior, specifically intention and the actions resulting from it.

5. Dhammaniyama (the general law of cause and effect): The natural law dealing with the relationship and interdependence of all things, known simply as the way of things. [DA.U. 234; Dhs A. 272]

In terms of these five divisions of natural law, we can see that science has complete confidence in the dhammaniyama (the general law of cause and effect), while limiting its field of research to utuniyama (physical laws) and bijaniyama (biological laws). As for Buddhism, practically speaking it emphasizes kammaniyama (the law of moral action), although the Abhidhamma stresses the study of cittaniyama (psychic laws), in their relation to kammaniyama and dhammaniyama.

The Law of Kamma -- scientific morality

A true understanding of reality is impossible if there is no understanding of the interrelation and unity of all events in nature. This includes, in particular, the human element, the mental factors and values systems, of those who are studying those events. Scientists may study the physical laws, but as long as they are ignorant of themselves, the ones who are studying those laws, they will never be able to see the truth -- even of the physical sciences.

On a physical level, human beings exist within the natural physical environment, but on an experiential level the world is in fact more a product of our intentions. Our daily lives, our thoughts, behavior and deeds, our communications, our traditions and social institutions are entirely products of human intentional action, which is known in Buddhism as kamma. Intention is the unique faculty which lies behind human progress. The human world is thus the world of intention, and intention is the creator and mover of the world. In Buddhism it is said: kammuna vattati loko -- the world is driven by kamma. [Vasettha Sutta, Khu., Sm., 654] In order to understand the human world, or the human situation, it is necessary to understand the natural law of kamma.

All behavior, intentional action, ethical principles and mental qualities are entirely natural. They exist in accordance with the Laws of Nature. They are neither the will of God, nor are they accidental. They are processes which are within our human capacity to understand and influence.

Please note that Buddhism distinguishes between the Law of Kamma and psychic laws. This indicates that the mind and intention are not the same thing, and can be studied as separate truths. However, these two truths are extremely closely linked. The simple analogy is that of a man driving a motor boat. The mind is like the boat and its engine, while intention is the driver of the boat, who decides where the boat will go and what it will do.

Certain natural events may occur as a result of the workings of different laws in different situations, while some events are a product of a number of these natural laws functioning in unison. A man with tears in his eyes may be suffering from the effects of smoke (physical law), or from extremely happy or sad emotional states (psychic law), or he may be suffering anxiety over past deeds (law of kamma). A headache might be caused by illness (biological law), a stuffy or overheated room (physical law) or it could be from depression and worry (law of kamma).

The question of free will

When people from the West start studying the subject of kamma, they are often confused by the problem of free will. Is there such a thing as free will? In actual fact there is no free will, in the absolute sense, because intention is just one factor within the overall natural processes of cause and effect. However, will can be considered free in a relative way. We might say it is relatively free, in that it is in fact one of the factors within the overall natural process. In Buddhism this is called purisakara. Each person has the ability to initiate thinking and intention, and as such become the instigating factor in a cause and effect process, or kamma, for which we say each individual must accept responsibility.

Misunderstandings, or lack of understanding, in relation to this matter of free will, arise from a number of more deeply-rooted misconceptions, in particular, the delusion of self. The concept of self causes a lot of confusion when people try to look at reality as an actual condition with minds still trapped in habitual thinking, which clings fast to concepts. The two perspectives clash. The perception is of a doer and a receiver of results. While in reality there is only a feeling, the perception is of "one who feels." (In the texts it is said: "There is the experience of feeling, but no-one who feels.") The reason for this confusion is ignorance of the teaching of anatta, not-self.

Buddhism doesn't stop simply at free will, but strives to the stage of being "free of will," transcending the power of will, which can only be achieved through the complete development of human potential through wisdom.

Within the process of human development, the mind and wisdom are distinguished from each other. Wisdom that is fully developed will liberate the mind. So we have the mind with intention, and the mind with wisdom. However, this is a practical concern, a vast subject which must be reserved for a later time.

Footnote:

[*] The allusion here, and in the previous four paragraphs, is to the Four Noble Truths, for which click here. [Back to text]

Chapter 4

The Role of Faith in Science and Buddhism

Now let us take a comparative look at some of the qualities related to Buddhism, science and other religions, beginning with faith.

Most religions use emotion as the driving force for attaining their goals. Emotion arouses belief and obedience to the teachings, and emotions, particularly those which produce faith, are a necessary part of most religions. In other words, because faith is so crucial to them, emotion is encouraged. In contrast to other religions, Buddhism stresses wisdom, giving faith a place of importance only in the initial stages. Even then, faith is used with reservation, as wisdom is considered to be the prime factor in attaining the goal.

In order to clearly understand faith, it helps to analyze it into different kinds. Generally speaking, faith can be divided into two main kinds:

The first kind of faith is that which obstructs wisdom. It relies on inciting, or even enforcing, belief, and such belief must be complete and unquestioning. To doubt the teaching is forbidden, only unquestioning obedience is allowed. This kind of faith does not allow any room for wisdom to develop. Faith in most religions is of this variety. There must be belief and there must be obedience. Whatever the religion says must go, no questions asked. This feature of religion is known as dogma, the doctrine that is unquestionable, characterized by adherence in the face of reason.

The second kind of faith is a channel for wisdom. It stimulates curiosity and is the incentive for learning. In this world there are so many things to learn about; without faith we have no starting point or direction in which to set our learning, but when faith arises, be it in a person or a teaching, we have that direction. Faith, particularly in a person, awakens our interest and encourages us to approach the object of that interest. Having faith in the order of monks, for example, encourages us to approach them and learn from them, to gain a clearer understanding of the teachings.

An example of this kind of faith can be seen in the life story of Sariputta, the Buddha's foremost disciple. He became interested in the teachings of the Buddha through seeing the monk Assaji walking on alms round. Being impressed by the monk's bearing, which suggested some special quality, some special knowledge or spiritual attainment, he approached Assaji and asked for a teaching. This is a good example of the second kind of faith.

The second kind of faith is a positive influence, an incentive for learning. It also gives a point of focus for that learning. Energies are motivated in whatever direction faith inclines. A scientist, for example, having the faith in a particular hypothesis, will direct his enquiry specifically in that direction, and will not be distracted by irrelevant data.

These two kinds of faith must be clearly distinguished. The faith that functions in Buddhism is the faith which leads to wisdom, and as such is secondary to wisdom. Buddhism is a religion free of dogma.

The second kind of faith is found in both Buddhism and science. It has three important functions in relation to wisdom:

1. It gives rise to interest and is the incentive to begin learning.

2. It provides the energy needed in the pursuit of that learning.

3. It gives direction or focus to that energy.

Apart from these main functions, well-directed faith has a number of further characteristics, which can be shown in the Buddhist system of practice. The goal of Buddhism is liberation, transcendence, or freedom. Buddhism wants human beings to be free, to transcend defilements and suffering. This freedom must be attained through wisdom, understanding of the truth, or the law of nature. This truth is as equally attainable by the disciples as it was by the Teacher, and their knowledge is independent of him. The Buddha once asked Sariputta, "Do you believe what I have been explaining to you?" Sariputta answered, "Yes, I see that it is so." The Buddha asked him, "Are you saying this just out of faith in me?" Sariputta answered, "No, I answered in agreement not because of faith in the Blessed One, but because I clearly see for myself that it is so." [Pubbakotthaka Sutta, Saim. S.V. 220]

This is another of Buddhism's principles. The Buddha did not want people to simply believe him or attach to him. He pointed out the fault of faith in others, because he wanted people to be free. This liberation, or freedom, the goal of Buddhism, is attained through wisdom, through knowledge of reality.

But how is wisdom to arise? For most people, faith is an indispensable stepping stone in the development of wisdom. (For clear thinkers, those who have what is known as yoniso manasikara,[*] the need for faith may be greatly reduced.)

In order to attain liberation it is necessary to develop wisdom, and that development is in turn dependent on faith. This gives us three stages connected like links in a chain:

Faith leads to Wisdom leads to Liberation

Faith is the initiator of the journey to truth, which in turn leads to wisdom, which in turn leads to liberation. This model of conditions is the defining constraint on faith in Buddhism. Because faith is related to both wisdom and liberation, it has two characteristics:

1. It leads to wisdom.
2. It is coupled with, and leads to, liberation.

Faith in Buddhism does not forbid questions or doubts, nor demand belief or unquestioning committal in any way. Both Buddhism and science use faith as a stepping stone on the journey to truth. Now the question arises, what kind of faith is it which leads to wisdom? It is the belief that this universe, or the world of nature, functions according to constant and invariable laws, and these laws are accessible to man's understanding. This faith is the impetus for the search for truth, but because faith in itself is incapable of leading directly to the truth, it must be used to further develop wisdom. At this stage the faith of Buddhism and the faith of science look very similar. Both have a belief in the laws of nature, and both strive to know the truth of these laws through wisdom. However, the similarity ends here. From this point on, the faith of Buddhism and the faith of science part their ways.

I have said that the source of both religion and science is the awareness of problems in life, the dangers of the natural world. In search of a remedy for this problem, human beings looked on the natural environment with trepidation and wonder. These two kinds of feeling led to both the desire for a way out of danger, and the desire to know the truth of nature. From this common origin, religion and science part their ways. Science, in particular, confines its research exclusively to external, physical phenomena. Science does not include mankind in its picture of the universe, except in a very limited, biological sense. In other words, science does not consider the universe as including mankind, and does not look at mankind as encompassing the whole of the universe.

Looking at nature in this way, science has only one object for its faith, and that is the physical universe -- the faith that nature has fixed laws. In brief we could call this "faith in nature."

But the objective of Buddhism is to solve the problem of human suffering, which arises from both internal and external conditions, with an emphasis on the world of human behavior. At the same time, Buddhism sees this process as a natural one. For this reason, Buddhism, like science, has faith in nature, but this faith also includes human beings, because human beings are a part of nature, and they encompass the whole of nature within themselves.

The faith of science has only one object, but the faith of Buddhism has two objects, and they are:

1. Nature
2. Mankind

In one sense, these two kinds of faith are one and the same, because they are both beliefs in nature, the first kind more obviously so. But the first kind of faith does not cover the whole picture, it includes only the external environment. In Buddhism, mankind is recognized as a part of nature. The physical human organism is as natural as the external environment.

Moreover, human beings possess a special quality which differs from the external manifestations of nature, and distinguishes mankind from the world around him. This is a quality peculiar to human beings. You could even say it is their "humanness." This unique quality is mankind's inner world, that aspect of nature which has an ethical dimension.

In Buddhism we believe that this abstract quality of human beings is also a natural phenomenon, and is also subject to the natural laws of cause and effect, and as such is included in natural truth. In order to know and understand nature, both the physical and the mental sides of nature should be thoroughly understood.

Bearing in mind that human beings want to know and understand nature, it follows that in order to do so they must understand the ones who are studying it. Mental qualities, such as faith and desire to know, are abstract qualities. They are part of the human inner world, and as such must come into our field of research and understanding. If mental qualities are not studied, any knowledge or understanding of nature is bound to be distorted and incomplete. It will be incapable of leading to true understanding of reality.

Although in science there is faith in nature and an aspiration to know its truths, nature is not seen in its entirety. Science ignores human values and as a result has an incomplete or faulty view of nature. The scientific search for knowledge is inadequate and cannot reach completion, because one side of nature, the internal nature of man, is ignored.

As in Buddhism, the faith of science can be divided into two aspects, and has two objects. That is, firstly there is belief in the laws of nature, and secondly, belief in the ability of human intelligence to realize those laws, in other words faith in human potential. However, this second aspect of faith is not clearly stated in science, it is more a tacit understanding. Science does not mention this second kind of faith, and pays little attention to the development of the human being. Science is almost wholly motivated by the first kind of faith.

Buddhism differs from science in this respect, in that it holds the faith in human potential to be of prime importance. Buddhism has developed comprehensive practical methods for realizing this potential, and these have come to form the main body of its teachings. Throughout these teachings, faith is based on three interconnected principles:

- the conviction that nature functions according to fixed laws;
- the conviction in human potential to realize the truth of those laws through wisdom;
- the conviction that the realization of these laws will enable human beings to realize the highest good, liberation from suffering.

This kind of faith makes a great difference between Buddhism and science. In Buddhism the search for truth is conducted in conjunction with training to develop human potential. The development of human potential is what determines the way knowledge is used, thus the probability of using knowledge to serve the destructive influences of greed, hatred and delusion is minimized. Instead, knowledge is used in a constructive way.

As for science, a one-sided faith in the laws of nature is liable to cause the search for knowledge to be unfocused and misdirected. There is no development of the human being, and there is no guarantee that the knowledge gained will be used in ways that are beneficial. Science's search for the truths of nature does not, therefore, help anybody, even the scientists, to attain contentment, to relieve suffering, to ease tension or to have calmer and clearer minds. Moreover, science opens wide the way for undesirable values to subvert scientific development, leading it in the direction of greed, aversion and delusion. Thus, the drives to subjugate nature and to achieve material wealth, which have guided scientific development over the last century or more, have caused exploitation and destruction of the environment. If this trend continues, scientific development will be unsustainable.

It should be stressed that human beings have minds, or, more specifically, their actions are conditioned by the mental factor of intention. Faith in the laws of nature, and the desire to understand those laws, implies a value system, be it conscious or otherwise. Beliefs and attitudes will condition the style and direction of methods used for finding the truth, as well as the context and way in which that truth is seen.

According to the Buddha's teaching, the attainment of ultimate truth is only possible with a mind which has been purified of greed, aversion and delusion. Such purification requires training, a central concern of which are beliefs, attitudes and views. A search for truth blind to the assumptions on which it is based will not only be doomed to failure (because it ignores one side of reality) but will be overwhelmed by inferior values.

Simply speaking, the knowledge of scientists is not independent of values. A simple example of these secondary values is the pleasure obtained from, and which lies behind, the search for knowledge and the discoveries it yields. Even the pure kind of search for knowledge, which is a finer value, if analyzed deeply, is likely to have other sets of values hidden within it, such as the desire to feed some personal need.

In summary, we have been looking at two levels of values: the highest value and those intermediate values which are compatible with it. The highest value is a truth which must be attained to, it cannot be artificially set up in the mind. Scientists already have faith in nature. Such conviction or faith is a value that is within them from the outset, but this faith must be expanded on to include the human being, which necessarily entails faith in the highest good, simply by bearing in mind that the laws of nature are connected to the highest good.

With the proper kind of faith, commensurate secondary values will also arise, or will be further underscored by intentional inducement. This will serve to prevent values from straying into undesirable areas, or from being overwhelmed by inferior qualities.

Faith, which is our fundamental value, conditions the values which are secondary to it, in particular the aspiration to know. From faith in the truth of nature arises the aspiration to know the truth of nature. Such an aspiration is important in both science and Buddhism. From faith in the existence of the highest good and in human potential arises the aspiration to attain the state of freedom from suffering, to remedy all problems and pursue personal development.

The first kind of aspiration is the desire to know the truth of nature. The second aspiration is the desire to attain the state of freedom. When these two aspirations are integrated, the desire for knowledge is more clearly defined and focused: it becomes the desire to know the truth of nature in order to solve problems and lead human beings to freedom. This is the consummation of Buddhism. With the merging of these two kinds of aspiration, we complete the cycle, producing balance and sufficiency. There is a clear definition for our aspiration for knowledge. It is firmly related to the human being, and directed to the express purpose of creating a noble life for the human race. This direction defines the way knowledge is to be used.

As for science, from ancient times there has been merely an aspiration for knowledge. When the aspiration for knowledge is aimless and undefined, the result is a random collection of data, an attempt to know the truth of nature by looking further and further outward. It is truth for its own sake. The scientific search for truth lacks direction. However, human beings are driven by values. Since this aspiration for knowledge is without clear definition, it throws open the chance for other aspirations, or lesser values, to fill the vacuum. Some of these ulterior aims I have already mentioned, such as the desire to subjugate nature and the desire to produce material wealth. These two aspirations have created a different kind of process. I would like to reiterate the meaning of that process: it is the aspiration to know the truths of nature in order to exploit it for the production of material wealth. This process has been the cause of innumerable problems in recent times -- mental, social, and in particular, as we are seeing at present, environmental.

The thinking of the industrial age has taken advantage of science's oversight, an undefined aspiration for knowledge, and led to human action without consideration for the human being. Looking closely, we will see that the reason science has this lack of direction is because it looks for truth exclusively in the external, material world. It does not search for knowledge within the human individual. Science is not interested in, and in fact ignores, human nature, and as a result has become an instrument of industry and its selfish advances on the environment.

Ignorance of human nature means ignorance of the fact that pandering to the five senses is incapable of making humankind happy or contented. Sensual desire has no end, and so the need for material resources is endless. Because material goods are obtained through exploitation of nature, it follows that the manipulation of nature is also without end and without check. Ultimately, nature will not have enough to satisfy human desires, and in fact the exploitation of nature in itself gives man more misery than happiness.

Man-centered versus self-centered

Just now I mentioned some important common ground shared by Buddhism and science in regard to faith and aspiration for knowledge. Now I would like to take a look at the object of this faith and aspiration, which is reality or truth. Our aspiration and our faith are rooted in the desire for truth or knowledge. Having reached the essential truth of nature through knowledge, our aspiration is fulfilled.

In Buddhism the goal is to use the knowledge of truth to improve on life, to solve problems and attain perfect freedom. The goal of science, on the other hand, is the utilization of knowledge for the subjugation of nature, in order to provide a wealth of material goods. This is perhaps illustrated most clearly in the words of Rene Descartes, whose importance in the development of Western science and philosophy is well known. He wrote that science was part of the struggle to "render ourselves the masters and possessors of nature."[3]

With different goals, the object of knowledge must also be different. The prime object of Buddhist enquiry is the nature of the human being, and from there all the things with which the human being must deal. Mankind is always the centre from which we study the truth of nature.

In science, on the other hand, the object of research is the external, physical environment. Even though science occasionally looks into the human being, it is usually only as a physical organism within the physical universe. Mankind as such is not studied. That is, science may study human life, but only in a biological sense, not in relation to "being human."

So the field of the Buddhist search for knowledge is the human being, while that of science is the external world. With this point of reference, let us take a look at the respective extents of the nature that science seeks to know, and the nature that Buddhism seeks to know.

Buddhism believes that human beings are the highest evolution of nature, and so encompass the entire spectrum of reality within themselves. That is, a human being contains nature on both the physical and mental planes. Therefore, only through studying mankind is it possible to know the truth of all aspects of nature, both the physical and the mental.

Buddhism puts mankind at the centre, it is anthropocentric. Its express aim is to understand and to develop the human being. Science, on the other hand, is interested primarily in the external world. It seeks to know the truths of things outside of the human being. Over the years, however, as science incorporated the intention to conquer nature into its values, it once again put mankind at the centre of the picture, but in a very different way from the way Buddhism does. Buddhism gives human beings the central position in the sense of recognizing their responsibilities toward nature, insofar as they must develop themselves and redress problems. This outlook is of benefit, it is aimed at the transcendence of suffering, freedom and the highest good.

Science, in incorporating the view of the desirability of subjugating nature into its aspirations, places mankind in the centre of the picture also, but only as the exploiter of nature. Man says "I want this," from where he proceeds to manipulate nature to his desires. Simply speaking, science's placing of man in the centre is from the perspective of feeding his selfishness.

Having looked at the aim of enquiry, let us now consider the means or methods for attaining that aim. In Buddhism, the method is threefold.

1. Impartial awareness of sense data, awareness of things as they are.
2. Ordered or systematic thinking.
3. Verification through direct experience.

How can we ensure that the awareness of sense data will be unbiased? In general, whenever human beings cognize sense data, certain values immediately become involved. Right here, at the very first arising of awareness, there is already the problem of whether the experiencer is free of these values or not.

Buddhism stresses the importance of seeing the truth right from the first arising of awareness: when eye sees sights, ear hears sounds, and so on. For most human beings, this is already a problem. Awareness is usually in accordance with the way we would like things to be, or as we think they are, rarely as they really are. We cannot see things the way they are because of distortions, biases, and preferences. When there is awareness of a feeling, the workings of the mind will immediately react with like or dislike. People build these reactions into habits and they become extremely fluent. As soon as an experience is cognized, these values of comfort, discomfort or indifference immediately follow, and from there to love or hate, delight or aversion. Once like and dislike arise, they influence the subsequent thought process. If there is attraction, thinking will take on one form; if there is repulsion, it will take another form. Because of this, experience is distorted and biased, awareness is false; only some perspectives are seen, not others. The knowledge that arises form this sort of awareness is not clear or comprehensive, it is not awareness of things as they really are.

In Buddhist practice, we try to establish ourselves correctly from the beginning. There must be awareness of things as they are, awareness with sati, mindfulness, neither delighting nor being averse. Experiences must be perceived with an aware mind, the mind of a student or the mind of an observer, not with a mind that is liking or disliking. In brief, there are two ways to do this:

1. Cognizing by seeing the truth: to be aware of things as they are, not to be swayed by the powers of delight and aversion. This is a pure kind of awareness, bare perception of experience without the addition of value-judgements. It is referred to in the scriptures as "perceiving just enough for the development of wisdom (nana)," just enough to know and understand the experience as it is, and for the presence of mindfulness (sati). Specifically, this is to see things according to their causes and conditions.

2. Cognizing in a beneficial way: that is, cognizing in conjunction with a skillful value, one that will be useful, rather than one that caters to sense desires. This is to perceive experiences in such a way as to be able to make use of them all, both the liked and the disliked.

This second kind of knowing can be enlarged on thus: experience is a natural function of life, but in order for the mind to benefit from experiences, we must perceive them in the proper way. There must be a conscious attempt to perceive experiences in a way that is beneficial in solving problems and leading to personal development. Otherwise, awareness will be merely a tool for either satisfying or frustrating sense-desires, and any benefit will be lost. With this kind of awareness, we perceive experiences in such a way as to make use of them. Whether experiences are pleasant, unpleasant, comfortable or not, they can all be used in a beneficial way. It all depends on whether we learn how to perceive them properly or not.

In the context of this book, where the object is knowledge of the truth, we will emphasize the first kind of awareness. In this awareness, if the wrong channels are avoided, the effects of delight and aversion do not occur, and awareness will be of the learning variety.

Clear awareness of sense data is very important. Learning must begin at the first moment of awareness -- cognizing in order to learn, not in order to indulge in like or dislike, or to feed sense desires. Although science may not openly speak about or emphasize this method, it is essential if the aim is to perceive the truth.

The second factor in attaining knowledge is right thinking. This means thinking that is structured, reasoned and in harmony with causes and conditions. In Buddhist scriptures many ways of thinking, collectively known as yoniso-manasikara, or intelligent reflection, are mentioned. Intelligent reflection is an important factor in the development of Right View, understanding in accordance with reality. It is to see things according to their causes and conditions, or to understand the principle of causes and conditions. Some of the ways of intelligent reflection mentioned in the texts are:

a. Searching for causes and conditions: This kind of thinking was of prime importance in the Buddha's own enlightenment. For example, when the Buddha investigated the experience of pleasure and pain, he asked himself, "On what do these feelings of pleasure and pain depend? By what are they conditioned?" He saw that sense contact is the condition for feeling. Then, asking himself, "By what is sense contact conditioned?" the Buddha saw that the six sense bases are the condition for sense contact, and so on. This is an example of thinking according to causes and conditions.

b. Thinking by way of analysis: Life as a human organism can be analyzed into two main constituents, body and mind. Body and mind can both be further analyzed. Mind, for example, can be analyzed into vedana (feeling), sanna (perception), sankhara (volitional activities), and vinnana (consciousness),[] and each of these categories can be further divided into even smaller constituents. Feeling, for example, can be divided into three kinds, five kinds, six kinds and more. Thinking in this way is called "thinking by way of analysis," which is a way of breaking up the overall picture or system so that the causes and conditions involved can be more easily seen.

c. Thinking in terms of benefit and harm: This is to look at the quality of things, both their benefit and their harm, rather than looking exclusively at their benefit or their harm. Most people tend to see only the benefits of things that they like, and only the faults of the things they don't like, but Buddhism encourages us to look at things from all perspectives, to see both the benefit and the harm in them.

These different kinds of thinking (altogether, ten are mentioned in the scriptures) are known as yoniso-manasikara, a very important part of the Buddhist way to truth. In its broadest sense, thinking also includes the way we perceive things, and so it also includes the level of first awareness, and, like those forms of awareness, can also be divided into two main groups -- that is, thinking in order to see the truth, and thinking in a way that is beneficial.

The third method for finding knowledge used in Buddhism is that of verification through personal experience. One of the important principles of Buddhism is that the truth can be known and verified through direct experience (sanditthiko, paccattam veditabbo vinnuuhi).

Note, for example, the Kalamasutta mentioned earlier, in which the Buddha advises the Kalamas not to simply believe in things, but, "when you have seen for yourself which conditions are skillful and which unskillful, then strive to develop the skillful ones and to give up the unskillful." This teaching clearly illustrates practice based on personal experience.

The Buddha's life story recounts that he used this method throughout his practice. When he first left his palace in search of enlightenment, he practiced according to the methods prevalent at that time -- asceticism, yoga, trances and the rest. When he later went to live alone in the forest, the practices he undertook were all ways of experimenting. For example, the Buddha is recorded as recounting how he went to live alone in wild jungles so that he could experiment with fear. In the deep hours of the night a branch would crack and fear would arise. The Buddha would always look for the causes of the fear. No matter what posture he happened to be in when fear arose, he would maintain that posture until he had overcome the fear. (That is, if he was walking he would continue to walk until his fear subsided; if he was sitting, standing or lying down he would continue to sit, stand or lie down until his fear subsided.) Most people would have run for their lives, but the Buddha didn't run. He stayed still until he had overcome the problem. Another example of the Buddha's experimenting was his experimenting with good and bad thoughts until he was able to give up unskillful thoughts.

The Buddha used the method of personal experience throughout his practice. Later, when he was teaching his disciples, he taught them to assess the teacher closely before believing him, because faith must always be a vehicle for the development of wisdom. The Buddha taught to closely assess teachers, even the Buddha himself, both from the perspective of whether he was teaching the truth, and also in the sense of the purity of the teacher's intentions.

The teacher's knowledge can be tested by considering the plausibility of the teaching. The teacher's intentions can be tested by considering the teacher's intentions in teaching: Does he teach out of desire for a personal reward? Is he looking for anything other than the benefit of the listener? Such assessment and evaluation should continue through all the levels of the teacher-disciple relationship.

Then there is the teaching of the Four Foundations of Mindfulness, which emphasizes insight meditation. When we are practising insight meditation, we must always consider and reflect on the experiences that come into our awareness, as they arise. Whether a pleasant feeling or unpleasant feeling arises, whether the mind is depressed or elated, the Buddha taught to look into it and note its arising, its faring and its passing away.

Even in the highest stages of practice, when assessing to see whether one is enlightened or not, we are told to look directly into our own hearts, to see whether there is still greed, hatred and delusion or not, rather than looking for special signs or miracles.

Because the emphasis and field of research in Buddhism and science differ in terms of observation, experiment and verification, results in the two fields will differ. Science strives to observe events solely in the physical universe, through the five senses, with the objective of manipulating the external physical world. In the language of Buddhism we might say that science specializes in the fields of utuniyama (physical laws) and bijaniyama (biological laws). Buddhism, on the other hand, emphasizes the study of the human organism, accepting experiences through all the six senses, including the mind. The objective of Buddhist practice is to attain the highest good and an understanding of the truth of nature. Even before the objective is reached, there is correction of problems and progress in human development. In Buddhist terminology we would say that Buddhism has its strength in the fields of kammaniyama (moral laws) and cittaniyama (psychic laws).

If it were possible to incorporate the respective fields of expertise of both science and Buddhism, to bring the fruits of their labors together, we might arrive at a balanced way for leading human development to a higher level.

Differences in methods

While on the subject of the three methods for finding knowledge, I would like to look at the differences between these methods in Buddhism and in science.

Firstly, science uses the technique of amassing knowledge in order to find truth. This amassing of knowledge is completely divorced from concerns of life-style, whereas in Buddhism, the method of attaining knowledge is part of the way of life. Science has no concern with life-style, it seeks truth for its own sake, but in Buddhism, method is part of the way of life -- in fact it is the way of life. Consider, for example, the effect of clear awareness, without the bias of delight and loathing, on the quality of life. The Buddhist search for knowledge has great worth in itself, regardless of whether or not the goal is attained.

Science takes its data exclusively from the experiences arising through the five senses, while Buddhism includes the experiences of the sixth sense, the mind -- a sense which science does not acknowledge. Buddhism states that the sixth sense is a verifiable truth. However, verification can only really be done through the respective senses from which that data arose. For instance, to verify a taste we must use the tongue; to verify volume of sound we must use the ear, not the eye. If we want to verify colors, we don't use our ears. The sense base which verifies sense data must be compatible with the kind of data that is being verified.

If the sixth sense is not recognized, we will be deprived of an immense amount of sense data, because there is much experience which arises exclusively in the mind. There are, for example, many experiences within the mind which can be immediately experienced and verified, such as love, hate, anger, and fear. These things cannot be verified or experienced through other sense organs. If we experience love, we ourselves know our own mind, we can verify it for ourselves. When there is fear, or a feeling of anger, or feelings of comfort, peace, or contentment, we can know them directly in our own minds. Therefore, in Buddhism we give this sixth sense, the mind and its thinking, a prominent role in the search for knowledge or truth.

Science resorts to instruments designed for the other five senses, mainly the eyes and ears, such as the encephalogram, to study the thinking process. Scientists tell us that in the future they'll be able to tell what people are thinking simply by using a machine, or by analyzing the chemicals secreted by the brain. These things do have a factual basis, but the truths that they are likely to reveal will probably be like Sir Arthur Eddington's "shadow world of symbols." They will not be the truth, but shadows of the truth. Scientific truth, like the scientific method, is faulty, because it breaches one of the rules of observation: the instruments do not correspond with the data. As long as this is so, science will have to continue observing shadows of reality for a long time to come.

Now this sixth sense, the mind, is also very important in science. The scientific method, from the very beginnings right up to and including experimentation and conclusion, has developed through this sixth sense. Before any other senses can be used, the scientist must utilize thinking. He must organize a plan, a method of verification, and he must establish an hypothesis. All of these activities are mental processes, which are dependent on the sixth sense, the mind. Even in practical application, the mind must be following events, taking notes. Moreover, the mind is the arbitrator, the judge of whether or not to accept the data that arise during the experiment.

The final stages of scientific enquiry, the assessment and conclusions of the experiment, the formulation of a theory and so on, are all thought processes. We can confidently say that the theories of science are all results of thinking, they are fruits of the sixth sense, which is the headquarters of all the other senses.

Buddhism acknowledges the importance of the sixth sense as a channel through which events can be directly experienced. The truth of the mind is a verifiable cause and effect process. It is subject to the laws of nature. Even though it may seem very intricate and difficult to follow, Buddhism teaches that the mind conforms to the stream of causes and conditions, just like any other natural phenomenon. In the material world, or the world of physics, it is recognized that all things exist according to causes and conditions, but in cases where the conditions are extremely intricate, it is very difficult to predict or follow events. A simple example is weather prediction, which is recognized as a very difficult task because there are so many inconstants. The sequence of causes and conditions within the mind is even more complex than the factors involved in the weather, making prediction of results even more difficult.

Human beings are a part of nature which contain the whole of nature within them. If people were able to open their eyes and look, they would be able to attain the truth of nature as a direct experience. Using scientific instruments, extensions of the five senses, is a roundabout way of proceeding. It can only verify truth on some levels, just enough to conquer nature and the external world (to an extent), but it cannot lead mankind to the total truth of reality.

Footnotes:

[*] Systematic attention, wise consideration, critical reflection. [Back to text]

[] These are the four mental khandhas which, together with rupa, or material form, go to make up the whole of conditioned existence. [Back to text]

3. Rene Descartes, quoted by Clive Ponting, A Green History of the World, (St. Martin's Press, New York, 1992) p. 148. [Back to text]

Chapter 5

Approaching the Frontiers of Mind

Science, and in particular physics, has made such great advances that it can almost be said to have reached the limits of its field. At one time it was believed that scientific research would lead to an understanding of the whole universe simply through observation based on the five senses. Scientists considered that all phenomena relating to the mind were derived from matter. By understanding matter completely, the mind would also be understood. Nowadays very few scientists still believe this, because the enormous amount of knowledge amassed about matter has not led to a clearer understanding of the nature of the mind.

At the present time, concepts about the reality of matter and mind fall into two main categories, or models:

1. That the world of matter and the world of mind are like two sides of one coin. That is, they are separate, but they interact with each other. Those who maintain this view believe that these two realities are on opposite sides, and each side must be independently studied and then integrated into one body of knowledge.

2. That the world of matter and the world of mind are like two rings. In this model, the borders of knowledge are pictured as a big ring, containing within it a smaller ring. The inner ring is limited to its own circumference, while the outer ring covers both its own area and that of the smaller one. That is, one ring surrounds the other. If the larger ring is understood, then all is understood, but if only the smaller ring is understood, such knowledge is still incomplete.

Now if, in this model, the knowledge of matter is the smaller ring, even if our knowledge covers the entire world of matter, still it is only the smaller ring that is understood. The outer ring, which includes the mind, is still not known. If, on the other hand, the outer ring is matter, then to know the truth of matter will automatically be to know everything. Now which model is more correct?

Many eminent physicists have said that the knowledge of science is only partial, it is only a beginning. In terms of the model of the two rings, it would seem that the knowledge of matter is only the inner ring, because it is limited to the five senses. Beyond these senses we arrive at the world of symbols, mathematical proofs, in relation to which we have Sir Arthur Eddington's words:

"We have learned that the exploration of the external world by the methods of the physical sciences leads not to a concrete reality but to a shadow world of symbols."[4]

Another eminent physicist, Max Planck, winner of the Nobel Prize for Physics in 1918, and regarded as the father of modern Quantum Theory, once stated that no sooner was one of science's mysteries solved than another would arise in its place. He conceded the limitations of scientific truth in these words:

"... Science cannot solve the ultimate mystery of nature. And that is because, in the last analysis, we ourselves are part of nature, and, therefore, part of the mystery that we are trying to solve."[5]

One scientist went so far as to write:

"...the most outstanding achievement of twentieth-century physics is not the theory of relativity with its welding together of space and time, or the theory of quanta with its present apparent negation of the laws of causation, or the dissection of the atom with the resultant discovery that things are not what they seem; it is the general recognition that we are not yet in contact with ultimate reality."[6]

So it has reached this stage: the most significant advance of science is the realization that it is incapable of reaching the truth. All it can lead to is a shadow world of symbols. If scientists accept this, then it must be time to choose a new path: either to redefine the scope of science, or to expand its field of research in order to attain a more holistic understanding of nature.

If scientific research remains limited to its original scope, it will become just another specialized field, incapable of seeing the overall picture of the way things are. If, on the other hand, science is to lead mankind to a true understanding of nature, it must expand its field of thought by redefining its fundamental nature and transcending its present limitations.

The material world: science's unfinished work

Fundamental questions remain unanswered, even in the world of matter, in which science specializes. There are still many things that science cannot explain, or were once taken to be understood but which now are no longer on sure ground. One example is the "quark." The quark is taken to be the most basic constituent of matter, but whether it really is or not is still open to question. At present it is believed to be so, but the possibility that there is a more fundamental particle cannot be dismissed. In fact, the very existence of the quark has not been conclusively proven. The same applies with quanta, fundamental units of energy. Once again, these are not irrefutably known to exist, they are only understood or believed to exist.

We are still not sure that matter and energy are like two faces of the same thing. If that's the case, then how can they be interchanged? Even light, which scientists have been studying for so long, has still not been clearly defined. The fundamental nature of light is still considered to be one of the deeper mysteries of science. Light is an energy force that is at once a wave and a particle. How can this be so? And how can it be a fixed velocity when, according to the Theory of Relativity, even time can be stretched and shrunk? The electromagnetic field is another mystery, another form of energy which is not yet clearly defined as a wave or a particle. Where do cosmic rays come from? We don't know. Even gravitation is still not completely understood. How does it work? We know that it's a law, and we can use it, but how does it work? We don't know. And the Theory of Relativity tells us that the space-time mass can be warped. How is that? It is very difficult for ordinary people to understand these things.

All in all, science still does not clearly know how the universe and life came about. The ultimate point of research in science is the origin of the universe and the birth of life. At the present time, the Big Bang Theory is in fashion. But how did the Big Bang occur? From where did the primal atom originate? The questions roll on endlessly.

In short, we can say that the nature of reality on the fundamental level is still beyond the scope of scientific research. Some scientists even say that there is no way that science will ever directly know the fundamental nature of reality.

It might be said that the fundamental truth will naturally continue to elude us if we confine our research to the material world. Even the most fundamental truth of the physical universe cannot be understood by searching on only one side, because in fact all things in the universe are interconnected. Being interconnected, looking at only one side will not lead to a final answer. The remaining fragment of the mystery might exist on the other side of reality, the side that is being ignored.

There will come a time when science will be forced to take an interest in solving the riddles of the mind. Many scientists and physicists are in fact beginning to look at the mind and how it works. Is the mind merely a phenomenon which arises within the workings of matter, like the functions of a computer? Can a computer have a mind? Numerous books have been written on this subject.[7]

Some people say that, on one level, even the Theory of Relativity is simply a philosophical concept. Space and time depend on consciousness. Mundane perceptions of form and size are not merely the workings of the sense organs, but are also a product of interpretation. Eye sees form, but it doesn't know size or shape. The apprehension of size and shape are functions of the mind. Thus, awareness of the material world is not limited to the five senses, but includes mental factors.

It is the mind which knows science, but science has yet to discover the nature of the mind, which it must do if science is to reveal the ultimate truth. Doubt will not be dispelled until science takes an interest in the field of mind. The problem of whether mind and matter are one and the same or separate things will come to the fore. This problem has existed since the time of the Buddha, and is related in the abyakata panha (questions the Buddha wouldn't answer).

Nowadays, leaders in the field of science seem to be divided into four main approaches to the nature of reality.

The first approach is that of the orthodox or conservative scientists. They stand by their conviction that science can eventually answer all questions, and that only through science can reality be understood.

The second approach is that of a group of "new" scientists, who concede that science is not able to explain the reality of the mind. They feel that science doesn't need to become involved and are willing to leave research into the mind to other fields, such as religion.

The third approach is a that of a group of new physicists who believe that the Eastern religions can help to explain the nature of reality. They believe that the way for future of scientific research is pointed out in Eastern religions. The most well-known of these is Fritjof Capra, author of The Tao of Physics and The Turning Point.[*]

The fourth approach is that of another group of new physicists, who maintain that the material world is one level of reality contained within the realm of the mind. This is the model I mentioned earlier, of the large ring with the smaller ring inside it.

Ethics: a truth awaiting verification

Ethics is a very broad subject, one which is normally considered a religious matter, but here we will consider it in relation to science. Some people go so far as to say that good and evil are merely social conventions, almost a matter of personal preference. Such an idea seems to contain some measure of truth, when it is considered how in some societies certain actions are deemed good, but in other societies those very same actions are deemed evil.

However, the perception of good and evil as merely social conventions arises from confusion of the factors involved. It stems from:

1. A failure to differentiate between ethical principles and conventions. (A failure to differentiate between naturally good behavior (cariyadhamma) and that which a society or culture agrees on as good or appropriate behavior (pannattidhamma).) And more profoundly ...

2. A failure to see the relationship that connects ethical principles with reality. (A failure to see the relationship between good behavior and reality; namely that actions are good and appropriate when they are in harmony with the way things are.)

This gives us three levels to be considered: (a) reality, (b) ethics, and (c) convention. The differences and the relationship between these three levels must be clearly understood. The conditions involved in the stream, ranging from the qualities of good and evil, which are true conditions in reality, to good and evil actions and speech, which are ethics, and from there to the laws and conventions of society, are always interconnected.

This threefold system of reality, ethics and regulations is very similar to the scientific system. The basis of science, pure science, is comparable to reality. Resting on this base we have the applied sciences and technology. If pure science is faulty, then the applied sciences and technology will suffer. From the applied sciences and technology we reach the third level, which is the forms technology takes, which are many and varied. One of the reasons for this is that technology seeks to work with the laws of nature in the most efficient way. The forms of technology will vary in efficiency because the extent to which they are consistent with the laws of nature varies. Those forms of technology which are most harmonious with the laws of nature, and through which those laws function most fluently, will be the most efficient, and vice versa.

Reality can be compared to pure science.

Ethics can be compared to applied science and technology.

Regulations or conventions can be compared to the forms that technology takes.

Rules and regulations are determined to organize societies. This is convention, which can be established according to preference. For example, in Thailand the regulation is that cars drive on the left side of the road, while in America cars drive on the right side. The two countries have determined different regulations. Now, which is good and which is evil? Can Thailand say that the Americans are bad because they drive on the right side of the road, or can America say the opposite? Of course not. These regulations are the standard for each country, and each country is free to make its own standards. This is convention.

However, convention is not simply a matter of preference, it is based on natural factors. Even in very simple matters, such as deciding which side of the road cars must drive, there is an objective in mind, which is order and harmony on the road and well-being for society. This is what both countries want, and this is a concern of ethics. American society wants this quality, and so does Thai society. Even though their conventions differ, the ethical quality desired by both societies is the same. In this instance we can see that although there is a difference in the regulations made, ethically speaking there is consistency.

Now the problem arises, which regulation gives better results? This is the crucial point. It may be questioned which is the more conducive to order and harmony between the regulations of keeping to the right in America and keeping to the left in Thailand, and there may be some differences of opinion, but this does not mean that societies determine these regulations merely out of preference.

This is the relationship between ethics and convention, or regulations. Regulations are made to provide an ethical result. In Buddhist monastic terms, the monks put it very simply by saying "Vinaya is for developing sila": Vinaya refers to the rules and regulations of society, but the objective of these is sila, which is good and skillful behavior.

There is an exception in cases where regulations have indeed been made out of partiality, for the benefit of a privileged few. For example, there are times when it seems that certain laws have been made to serve the interests of a select group. In this case we say that corruption has arisen within the regulating process, which will in turn cause a degeneration of moral behavior. When the root of the legal structure is rotten, it will be very unlikely to produce a good result.

Because conventions have this common objective of ethical well-being, but their forms differ, we must learn how to distinguish clearly between ethics and conventions. Many of these differences are observable in the customs and traditions of different societies -- family customs, for example. In one society, a woman is allowed so many husbands, a man is allowed so many wives, while in other societies, the customs differ. Nevertheless, overall, the objective is order and harmony within the family, which is an ethical quality.

However, in the determining of regulations for society, administrators have varying levels of intelligence and wisdom, and their intentions are sometimes honest, sometimes not. Societies have different environments, different histories. With so many variables, the ethical result also varies, being more or less efficacious as the case may be. From time to time these regulations must be reevaluated. Conventions are thus tied to specific situations and considerations of time and place, while ethical objectives are universal.

Therefore, by looking at the situation in the right manner, even though there may be some discrepancies in the form regulations take, we can see that they are in fact the results of humanity's efforts to create a harmonious society. That is, conventions are not the end result, but rather the means devised to attain an ethical standard, more or less effective, depending on the intelligence and honesty of the people determining them.

Bearing this in mind, we can avoid the mistaken belief that good and evil are merely social conventions, or are determined by preference. We must look on regulations as our human attempts to find well-being. No matter how useful or ineffective regulations may be, our objective remains an ethical one.

The success of regulations is very much tied to the presence of a moral standard within the people who are determining them, and whether or not they have made their decisions intelligently.

Ethical principles must be based on ultimate reality or truth. That is, moral principles must be in conformity with the process of cause and effect, or causes and conditions. In the field of convention, whenever a regulation brings about an ethically satisfactory result, it has been successful. For example, if we establish that cars must run on the left or right side of the road, and this regulation is conducive to order and harmony, then we say that it has fulfilled its purpose.

Reality (saccadhamma), ethics (cariyadhamma) and convention (pannattidhamma) are abstract qualities. Because ethical qualities are tied to reality, it follows that they are factors within the whole stream of causes and conditions. Failing to understand or see the relationship and connection between reality, ethics and convention, we will not be able to enter into a thorough consideration of values, which are mental properties, and see their proper place within the laws of nature and the process of causes and conditions.

"What is" versus "what should be"

Buddhism learns the laws of nature, and then applies them to an ethical perspective. When people practice in accordance with ethics, they receive the results in accordance with the natural law of cause and effect, and attain well-being, which is their objective. This gives us three stages: (1) knowing or realizing the truth; (2) practicing according to an ethical standard; (3) attaining a good result.

Science learns the truths of nature, but only on the material side, and then uses the knowledge gained for technology, with the objective of a life of abundance.

One path leads to a healthy life, while the other leads to abundance; one way deals with the nature of man, the other deals with the nature of material things. Science does not connect the truth to ethics, but instead, because it deals only with the material world, connects it to technology.

It is generally understood that science concerns itself exclusively with the question "What is," shrugging off any concern with "What should be?" as a concern of values or ethics, which lie beyond its scope. Science does not see that ethics is based on reality because it fails to see the connection between "What is?" and "What should be?"

Science applies itself to problems on the material plane, but on ethical questions it is silent. Suppose we saw a huge pit full of fire, with a temperature of thousands of degrees. We tell someone, "The human body is only able to withstand a certain temperature. If a human body were to enter into that fire it would be burnt to a crisp." This is a truth. Now suppose we further say, "If you don't want to be burnt to a crisp, don't go into that pit." In this case, the level of science tells us that the hole is of such and such a temperature, and that the human body cannot withstand such a temperature. Ethics is the code of practice which says, "If you don't want to be burnt to a crisp, don't go into that fire."

In the same way that technology must be based on the truths of pure science, ethics must be based on reality. And just as any technology which is not founded on scientific truth will be unworkable, so too will any ethic not founded on natural truth be a false ethic. The subject of ethics covers both "What should be?" and "What is?" in that it deals with the truth of human nature, which is that aspect of natural truth overlooked by science. For that reason, a true understanding of reality, which includes an understanding of human nature, is impossible without a clear understanding of proper ethics. The question is, what kind of reality, and how much of it, and in what degree, is sufficient to bring about an understanding of ethics?

True religion is the foundation of science

Science does not have any advice on how human beings are to live or behave. However, the origin and inspiration for the birth and growth of science was a desire to know the truth and a conviction in the laws of nature, which are mental qualities. Even the secondary values which were later incorporated into this aspiration, such as the aspiration to subjugate nature, are all mental processes. Not only the aspiration for knowledge, but even the great discoveries of science have been products of the mind. Some scientists possessed a quality we could call "intuition." They foresaw the truths that they discovered in their mind's eye before actually verifying them in the field.

Without this quality of intuition and foresight, science might have become just another baseless branch of knowledge, or largely a matter of guesswork, lacking direction or goal. Intuition has played a vital role in the history of science. For many eminent scientists it was involved in making their most important discoveries. Some train of thought, never before thought of, would arise in the scientist's mind, initiating systematic reasoning, formulation of a hypothesis and experimentation, and eventually a new theory. All the advances of science made so far have arisen through faith, conviction, aspiration to know, intuition and other mental qualities, and in the minds of the most eminent scientists, those who made the most far-reaching breakthroughs, these qualities could be found in abundance. Even observation begins with a thought, which establishes a path of investigation, and constrains observation to the relevant framework. For example, Newton saw the apple fall and understood the Law of Gravity. According to the story, he saw the apple fall and immediately had a realization, but in fact Newton had been pondering the nature of motion for months at that time. It was a mental process in his mind, which culminated in a realization when he saw the apple fall.

This kind of thing may happen to anybody. We may be thinking of some particular problem to no avail for a long time, and then, while we happen to be just sitting quietly, the answer suddenly flashes into the mind. These answers don't just arise randomly or by accident. In fact, the mind has been functioning on a subtle level. The realization is the result of a cause and effect process.

Mind, through faith and motivation, is the origin of science; through intuition and foresight it is the drive for scientific progress; and through the goals and objectives which are envisioned and aspired to in the mind, it is the direction for science's future advancement. The search for fundamental truths is possible because the mind conceives that such truths do exist.

Having reached this point, I would like to tell you the name of the eminent scientist who inspired the title of this talk. He is none other than Albert Einstein. He didn't, however, say the exact words I have used. What he did say was:

"... in this materialistic age of ours the serious scientific workers are the only profoundly religious people ..."[8]

Einstein felt that in this age it is hard to find people with religion. Only the scientists who study science with a pure heart have true religion. He went on to say,

"... but science can only be created by those who are thoroughly imbued with the aspiration toward truth and understanding ... those individuals to whom we owe the great creative achievements of science were all of them imbued with the truly religious conviction that this universe of ours is something perfect and susceptible to the rational striving for knowledge ..."[9]

The desire to know the truth, and the faith that behind nature there are laws which are constant truths throughout the entire universe is what Einstein called religious feeling, or more specifically, 'cosmic religious feeling'. Then he went on to say,

"... cosmic religious feeling is the strongest and noblest motive for scientific research."[10]

And again:

"... Buddhism, as we have learned especially from the wonderful writings of Schopenhauer, contains a much stronger element of this..."[11]

Einstein says that Buddhism has a high degree of cosmic religious feeling, and this cosmic religious feeling is the origin or seed of scientific research. So you can decide for yourselves whether the title I have used for this talk is suitable or not.

I have mentioned this to show in what manner it can be said that Buddhism is the foundation of science, but please don't attach too much importance to this idea, because I don't completely agree with Einstein's view. My disagreement is not with what he said, but that he said too little. What Einstein called the "cosmic religious feeling" is only part of what religious feeling is, because religion should always come back to the human being, to the nature of being human, including how human beings should behave towards nature, both internally and externally. I cannot see that Einstein's words clearly include self-knowledge and benefit to the human being. However that may be, from Einstein's words it is evident that he felt that science had its roots in the human desire for knowledge, and conviction in the order of nature.

However, I don't wish to place too much emphasis on whether Buddhism really is the foundation of science or not. It might be better, in fact, to change the title of this talk, to something like ... "What would a science which is based on Buddhism be like?" This may give us some new perspectives to think about. The statement "Buddhism is the foundation of science" is just an opinion, and some may say a conceited opinion at that. And that would get us nowhere. To ask "How should science be in order to be founded on Buddhism?" would be much more constructive.

In answer, we must first expand the meaning of the word "religion" or "religious feeling" in order to correspond to Buddhism:

a. The words "cosmic religious feeling" must cover both the external natural world and the natural world within the human being, or both the physical universe and the abstract, or mental.

b. The definition of science as originating from the aspiration to know the truth must be complemented by a desire to attain the highest good, which Buddhism calls "freedom from human imperfection."

In point (a) we are extending the scope of that which is to be realized. In point (b) we are reiterating those values which are in conformity with the highest good, ensuring that the aspiration for truth is pure and clear, and minimizing the possibility of lesser values corrupting that aspiration.

With these two points in mind, we can now answer, "The science which accords with Buddhism is that which aspires to understand natural truth, in conjunction with the development of the human being and the attainment of the highest good," or, "the science which is founded on Buddhism arises from an aspiration for knowledge of nature, together with a desire to attain the highest good, which is the foundation for constructive human development."

This kind of definition may seem to be bordering onto applied science, but it isn't really. From one perspective, the natural sciences of the last age were influenced by selfish motives. This is why these alternative incentives are so important, to replace the desire to conquer nature and produce an abundance of material wealth with an aspiration for freedom from suffering.

To rephrase our definition, we could say "The science which attains a true and comprehensive knowledge of reality will be the integration of the physical sciences, the social sciences and the humanities. All sciences will be connected and as one." Or to put it another way, "Once science extends the limits of its fundamental definition and improves its techniques for research and study, the truths of the social sciences and humanities will be attainable through the study of science."

This statement is not said in jest or carelessness. In the present day, the advances of the sciences and human society within the global environment have necessitated some cohesiveness in the search for knowledge. It could be said that the time is ripe. If we don't deal with the situation in the proper way, that ripeness may give way to putrefaction, like an overripe fruit. The question is, will science take on the responsibility of leading mankind to this unification of learning?

Knowledge of truth should be divided into two categories:

a. That which is necessary or useful, and is possible for a human being to attain within the limits of one lifetime.

b. That which is not necessary or useful. Phenomena which have not yet been verified can be looked into, but a good life should not be dependent on having to wait for their verification.

The human life-span is limited and soon comes to an end. Quality of life, or the highest good, are things which are needed within this life-span. Scientists tend to say, "Wait until I've verified this first, and then you will know what to do." This attitude should be changed. We need to distinguish between the different kinds of knowledge mentioned above. If science is to be a truly comprehensive body of learning, it must relate correctly to these two kinds of truth.

On the other hand, if science is to continue its present course, it might provide a more integrated response by cooperating with Buddhism for answers to those questions which demand immediate answers, so that the attainment of the highest good in this very life is a possibility. In the meantime, science can seek answers to those questions which, even if not answered, do not affect our ability to live in peace and well-being.

Effect of values on scientific research

The reason we need to clarify intermediate aims is that if pure science does not determine its own set of values, it will not be able to escape the influence of other interests. Outside parties with personal interests have determined science's values in the past, and these values have led to the destruction of the environment. Science has become a "lackey of industry." A lackey of industry cannot be a servant of mankind. These days some say that industry is destroying mankind, a point that deserves consideration. If scientists do not establish their own values, someone else will.

Human beings possess intention. It is one of mankind's unique qualities, one which affects everything we do. This means the search for knowledge cannot be totally without intention and values. Human beings, as the highest kind of being, are capable of realizing truth and the highest good. We should aspire to realize this potential.

As long as science lacks clarity on its position in relation to values, and yet exists within a world of values, it will have its direction determined by other interests. This may cause some scientists to feel cheated and frustrated in their pursuit of knowledge. As long as industry is society's "star player," it will continue to exert a powerful influence over science, through its influence on government policies and financial institutions. For example, if a scientific institute submits a proposal for research in a particular field, but such research is not in the interests of industry, the industrial sector has the power to withhold support, thus pressuring the government to do likewise.

When this happens the scientists may get discouraged and end up like Sir Isaac Newton. Newton was heavily influenced by values in his research. He discovered the Law of Gravity when he was only 24 years old. However, some of his ideas clashed with the establishment of the time, and he was ridiculed. Newton was a very moody fellow, and easily hurt. He didn't like to associate with other people. As soon as people started to criticize his work, he got upset and gave it up. He wouldn't go anywhere near science for twenty-two years.

Now Edmond Halley, the scientist who predicted the cycles of the comet named after him, saw the value of Newton's work, and so he went to Newton and encouraged him to start work again. Newton, taking heart, began work on the momentous book Philosophiae Naturalis Principia Mathematica. But then, when he had finished only two thirds of the manuscript, another scientist, who, during the twenty-two years that Newton had refused to put his ideas to print, had come to an understanding of the Law of Gravity and calculus, claimed that he had discovered all of this before Newton. When Newton heard this he went off into another sulk. He wasn't going to write the book after all. He had only written two thirds of it when he gave up once more. Halley had to go to him again and give him another pep talk to coax him into continuing his work, after which he finally completed it.

This is a good example of how values can completely overwhelm a scientist, with repercussions for the whole scientific world. If Newton, who was a genius, had had a strong heart, not giving in to feelings of hurt and indignation, he may have been able to give the scientific world so much more than he did, instead of discarding his research for over twenty years.

In the present time, with the industrial and financial sectors all-powerful, scientists must adhere to their own ethics to prevent external values from overwhelming them. In this age of environmental ruin, some of the truths being discovered by scientific research may not be in the interests of some of the industrial and financial sectors. We hear statements in the USA from research teams that the greenhouse scare is unfounded, that the world isn't going to heat up. Then, at a later time, another group of researchers tells us that the first group was influenced by financial considerations from industrial sectors. The situation is very complicated. Personal advantage begins to play a role in scientific research, and subjects it even more to the influence of values.

At the very least, ethical principles encourage scientists to have a pure aspiration for knowledge. This is the most powerful force the progress of science can have. At the present moment we are surrounded by a world which is teeming with values, mostly negative. In the past, science and industry worked together, like husband and wife. Industry spurred science on, and science helped industry to grow. But in the coming age, because some of the interests of industry are becoming a problem in the natural environment, and because science is being questioned about this, scientific research may come up with facts that are embarrassing to the industrial sector, science and industry may have to part their ways, or at least experience some tension in their relationship. Science may be forced to find a new friend, one who will help and encourage it to find knowledge that is useful to the human race.

As science approaches the frontiers of the mind, the question arises, "Will science recognize the sixth sense and the data which are experienced there? Or will scientists continue to try to verify moods and thoughts by looking at the chemicals secreted by the brain, or measuring the brain's waves on a machine, and thereby looking at mere shadows of the truth?" This would be like trying to study a stone from the "plops" it makes in the water, or from the ripples that arise on the water's surface. One might measure the waves that correspond to stones of different sizes, and then turn that into a mathematical equation, or estimate the mass of the stone that's fallen into the water by measuring the ripples extending from it. Has this been the approach of science's study of nature? The fact is, they never actually pick up a stone! If this is the case, science may have to take a look at some of the ways of observing and experimenting used in other traditions, such as Buddhism, which maintains that observation and experiment from direct experience in the mind the best way to observe the laws of nature.

Footnotes:

4. Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington, The Nature of the Physical World (new York: Macmillan, 1929), p. 282. [Back to text]

5. Max Planck, "The Mystery of Our Being," in Quantum Questions, ed. Ken Wilbur (Boston: New Science Library, 1984), p. 153. [Back to text]

6. Sir James Jeans, The Mysterious Universe (Cambridge University Press, 1931), p.111. [Back to text]

7. Roger Penrose, The Emperor's New Mind (New York, Penguin Books USA, 1991). [Back to text]

8. Albert Einstein, Ideas and Opinions (New York: Bonanza Books, 1954), p.40. [Back to text]

9. Ibid., pp. 45, 52. [Back to text]

10. Ibid., p.39. [Back to text]

11. Ibid., p.38. [Back to text]

Chapter 6

Future Directions

Too little

I would like to suggest some areas in which science could be improved upon, beginning with a discussion of "insufficiency." Science is not sufficient to remedy the problems of the modern day world. To illustrate, let us look at the situation in the environment. The problem of conservation is one of the major issues of our time, and science must play a leading role in dealing with this problem, especially in terms of research and proposals for solutions.

Scientific knowledge is invaluable. It can warn us of the dangers that exist, their causes, and the ways in which we have to deal with them. Technology is an essential tool in this work. But such valuable tools alone are not enough to solve the problem. Indeed, we may find that the problems have largely arisen from science and technology.

Science and technology are not able to correct their own handiwork. In spite of having the necessary knowledge at our disposal, we do not use it. In spite of having the technical capability to solve problems, we continue to use the kind of technology which aggravates them. Scientific knowledge is incapable of changing human behavior. Attempts to solve these problems always flounder on indecision. Science may have to open up and work in conjunction with other disciplines, by providing them with data for use in a collective effort to address these problems.

From a Buddhist perspective, any attempt to solve human problems, regardless of type, must always be implemented on three levels.

To give an example, environmental problems must be addressed on three levels:

1. behavior
2. the mind
3. understanding

These three levels must be integrated in the process of problem solving, thus:

1. On the level of behavior, there must be social constraint, that is, restraint on the outward manifestations of bodily and verbal behavior.

There are two ways to constrain behavior in society:

Firstly, restraint from without, through regulations and laws, including punishment for lawbreakers and so on. In Buddhism this is called "vinaya." The second way is restraint from within the individual, through intention. Usually such intention arises from religious faith. With belief or confidence in religion, there is a readiness and willingness to restrain behavior. In Buddhism such internal restraint is called sila.

In short, the first way is vinaya -- regulations and standards for constraining destructive actions, and the second way is sila -- the conscious intention to be restrained within the restrictions thus imposed.

Both of these levels are related in that they are concerned with the control and training of behavior. On a social level it is necessary to establish regulations, but alone they are not enough. There must also be sila, restraint from within, moral conduct that is fluent and regular.

2. In terms of the mind, since it is one of the factors involved in causing problems, solving problems by control of behavior alone is not enough. We must also deal with the mind. In our example, our aim is to conserve nature. If we want all people to contribute in the conservation of nature, we must first instill into them a desire to do so. So from "conservation of nature" we arrive at "wanting to conserve nature."

A desire to conserve nature is dependent on a love of nature. With an appreciation of nature, the desire to conserve it will naturally follow. But that's not the end -- people will only appreciate nature when they can live happily with nature. It seems that most people have realized the importance of appreciating nature, but if that is all they see they are not seeing the whole chain of conditions. Failing to see all the factors involved, their attempts to address the problem will also fail. We must search further down to find the beginning of the chain, to see what needs to be done to encourage people to appreciate nature.

A love of nature will arise with difficulty if people are not happy living with nature. Our minds must be at ease living with nature before we can love nature, and we must love nature before we can a develop a desire to conserve nature, which is a necessary prerequisite for the actual work of conservation.

Even though there may be other factors, or some discrepancies, in our chain of conditions, this much is enough to convey the general idea. It seems, though, that so far scientific work has obstructed this process from taking place. The desire to seek happiness from the exploitation of nature has caused people to feel, deeply within, that they can only be happy through technology, and that nature is an obstacle to this happiness. Many children in the present day feel that their happiness lies with technology, they do not feel at all comfortable with nature. They may even go so far as to see nature as an enemy, an obstacle to their happiness. Nature must be conquered so that they can enjoy the happiness of technology. Take a look at the minds of people in the present age and you will see that most people in society feel this way. This is a result of the influence of science in the recent Industrial Age.

The beliefs in conquering nature and seeking happiness in material goods, which are represented and advocated by technology, have held sway over the minds of human beings for such a long time that people have developed the feeling that nature is an enemy, an obstruction to human progress. As long as this kind of thinking prevails, it will be very difficult for us to love nature. Our ways of thinking must be changed. If we are to continue living in a natural world we must find a point of balance, and in order to do that we must develop an appreciation of nature, at least to see that nature can provide us with happiness. There is much beauty in nature, and technology can be used to enhance our appreciation of it.

In order to be more effective, constraint of behavior needs to be supported by mental conviction. If there is appreciation of skilful action and a sense of satisfaction in such behavior, self-training need not be a forced or difficult process.

3. In terms of understanding, wisdom refers to an understanding of the process of cause and effect, or causes and conditions, in nature. This is of prime importance. In order to understand the pro's and cons of the issue of conservation we must have some understanding of the natural order. In this respect Pure science can be of immense benefit, providing the data which will clarify the relevant factors involved in the deterioration of the environment, in what ways the environment has deteriorated, and what effects are to be expected from this deterioration.

An understanding of the situation will open people's minds and make them receptive. If there is understanding that a certain action causes damage to the environment, and that this will in turn have a detrimental effect on human beings, there will be an incentive to change behavior.

Sometimes, however, in spite of understanding the ill-effects of something, we cannot change our behavior because the mind has not yet accepted the truth on a deep enough level. That is why it is important for the mind to have both an understanding of the situation on an intellectual level, and also an emotional feeling, an appreciation, an ability to be happy with nature. Scientific knowledge alone is not enough to induce people to change their ways, because of attachment to habits, personal gains, social preferences and so on. With enjoyment of nature as a foundation, any intellectual understanding of the ecological system will serve to deepen or fortify all qualities on the emotional level.

The methods of Buddhism are a comprehensive solution to the problem at all levels. There are three prongs or divisions of the Buddhist path. In Buddhism we call the first level sila, the constraint or control of moral behavior through vinaya, laws and regulations. Restraint of action is achieved through intention, which is the essence of sila. Both these levels, regulations and moral intention, are included under the general heading of sila, training in moral conduct.

The second level concerns the mind, training the feelings, qualities and habits of the mind to be virtuous and skillful. This division is known as samadhi, the training of the mind.

The third level is wisdom, panna, or knowledge and understanding. Wisdom is the quality which monitors the activities of the first and second levels and keeps them on the right track. On its own, wisdom tends to be inactive. It must be supported by training in moral conduct and meditation.

Wisdom not only supervises the practice of moral restraint and meditation, but also examines the negative side of things, seeing, for example, the harmful effects of unskillful behavior patterns, even when such behavior is enjoyable or profitable. If such pleasure is seen to be in any way harmful, wisdom is the voice which tells us that such behavior should be given up or corrected, and in which ways it can be done.

These three divisions work together and are interdependent. Initially we train our actions, cultivating skillful behavior and giving up the unskillful. At the same time we train the mind, instilling in it skillful drives and a feeling of joy or satisfaction in the practice. We also develop understanding of reality and the reasons for practice, seeing the benefit and harm of our actions as they are. As we train and the practice becomes more and more consistent, the mind takes joy in the practice, which causes faith to increase. When faith increases, the mind is keen to contemplate and understand our actions. When wisdom or understanding arises, seeing the benefit in practicing skillfully and the harm of not practicing, faith is enhanced once again. When faith is increased, we are more able to control and adapt our behavior and make it more in accordance with the right path.

Too late

Now we come to the quality of "too late." I would like to give an illustration of what I mean by this statement to show what it has to do with science. As an example I would like to compare the attitudes of Buddhism with the attitudes of science, which have some strong similarities.

In science we have scientific knowledge on one hand, and scientific attitude on the other. In many cases the scientific attitude is more important than scientific knowledge. Why is this? Because the data or knowledge obtained by science has sometimes proven to be wrong and had to be corrected. This tends to be an ongoing process. This scientific attitude or objective is a constant principle, one which has been of immense benefit to human beings. Whether individual pieces of knowledge can actually be used or not is not a sure thing, but this attitude is a condition that can be used immediately and is of immediate benefit. However, the attitudes of science and Buddhism have some slight discrepancies.

Firstly, let us define our terms. What are the attitudes of Buddhism and science? Both attitudes have the same objectives, and that is to see all things according to cause and effect, or causes and conditions.

On encountering any situation, both the Buddhist attitude and the scientific attitude will try to look at it according to its causes and conditions, to try to see it as it really is.

For example: You see your friend walking towards you with a sour look on his face. For most of us, seeing a sour expression on our friend's face would normally be an unpleasant sight. We would think our friend was angry with us, and we would react in negative ways. An awareness of unpleasant experience has taken place, and a reaction of dislike arises. Thinking, "He can get angry, well so can I," we wear a sour expression in response.

But with a Buddhist or scientific attitude, when we see our friend walking towards us with a sour expression, we do not look on it with an aggravated state of mind, through liking or disliking, but with the objective of finding out the truth. This is the attitude of looking at things according to causes and conditions ... "Hmm, he's looking angry. I wonder why my friend is looking angry today. I wonder if something's bothering him. Maybe somebody said something to upset him at home, or maybe he's got no money, or maybe ..." That is, we look for the real causes for his expression. This is what I call the Buddhist attitude, which is applied to mental phenomena, and which correlates with the scientific attitude, which applies to the material plane. It is an attitude of learning, of looking at things according to causes and conditions.

If we look at the situation in this way no problem arises. Such an attitude leads to the relief of problems and the development of wisdom. Searching for the causes and conditions for our friend's sour expression, we might ask him the cause or act in some other intelligent way, initiating a response which is attuned to solving the problem.

This is an example of an attitude which is common to both Buddhism and science. But how do their attitudes differ? The scientific attitude is one that is used only to gain knowledge, but the Buddhist attitude is considered to be part and parcel of life itself. That is, this attitude is part of the skillful life, it is a way of living harmoniously in society. In short, it is ethics.

The scientific attitude is one clear example of how science avoids the subject of ethics or values while in fact containing them. That is, the scientific attitude is in itself an ethic, but because science does not clearly recognize this, it fails to fully capitalize on this ethic.
More importantly, science fails to see ethics as an essential factor within the process of realizing the truth of nature.

Buddhism does not use its attitude simply for the acquisition of knowledge, but incorporates it into daily life, in the actuality of the present moment. This brings us to the quality I call "too late." Because the scientific attitude is an attitude and means simply of finding knowledge, any practical application must wait until science finds out all the answers. As long as we don't know the answers our hands are tied. If we don't yet know what something is, we don't know how we should behave towards it.

But in this world there are so many things that science does not yet have the answers for, and there's no telling when science will have the answers. In the meantime, mankind, both as an individual and as a society, must conduct life in the present moment. To put it simply, the conduct of life for human beings in a skillful and proper way, within the space of one individual life-span or one society, in real time, cannot wait for these answers from the scientific world.

The Buddhist attitude is to search for knowledge in conjunction with living life, holding that to look at things according to cause and effect is part and parcel of the process of living a good life, not simply a tool to find knowledge. Therefore, with the Buddhist attitude, whenever we meet something that is not yet known clearly to us, or has not yet been verified, we have an outlook which enables us to practice skillfully towards it. We do not lose our standard in life.

The scientific attitude seeks knowledge only, but does not give an outlook for living life. Buddhism teaches both levels, giving a path of practice in relation to things in present day life. I will give an illustration, one which has troubled mankind throughout the ages and toward which even we, as Buddhists, fail to use a proper Buddhist outlook. I refer to the subject of heavenly beings [devata].

The subject of heavenly beings is one that can be looked at in terms of its relation to verifiable truth, or it can be looked at in relation to human society, in the light of everyday life. Looking at the subject with the scientific attitude, we think of it in terms of its verifiable truth, that is, whether these things actually exist or not. Then we have to find a means to verify the matter. The subject would eventually become one of those truths "waiting to be verified," or perhaps "unverifiable." And there the matter ends, with mankind having no practical course to follow. As long as it remains unverified, it becomes simply a matter of belief. One group believes these things do exist, one group believes they don't. Each side has its own ideas. Take note that those who believe that there are no such things are not beyond the level of belief -- they are still stuck on the belief that such things do not exist. Both of these groups of people are living in the one society. As long as they hold these differing and unresolvable beliefs, there is going to be a state of tension.

In this instance, science has no recommendations to offer, but in Buddhism there are ways of practice given in graded steps. On the first level, looking for truth by experimentation, regardless of who wants to prove the matter one way or the other, there is no problem. Those who are looking for the facts are free to continue their search, either in support of the existence of heavenly beings or against it.

On the second level, finding a right attitude for the conduct of everyday life, what should we do? In Buddhism there is a way of practice which does not contradict the case either for or against the existence of heavenly beings. Our lives have a standard which is clear and can be applied immediately. We are always ready to accept the truth, whether it is eventually proven that heavenly beings do exist or they do not, and our way of life will be in no way affected by such a discovery.

Most people are easily swayed or put on the defensive because of doubts about issues such as this, which tends to make them lean towards either one of two extreme views -- either that heavenly beings do exist or that they don't. If you believe that heavenly beings do exist, then you have to make supplications and perform ritual ceremonies to placate them. If you believe that there aren't any heavenly beings, then you must argue with those who do.

But in Buddhism we distinguish clearly between the search for facts, which proceeds as normal, and the conduct of everyday life. Our life does not depend on the heavenly beings. If there are heavenly beings, then they are beings in this universe just like us, subject to birth, aging, sickness and death, just like us. We Buddhists have a teaching which encourages us to develop kind thoughts to all beings in the universe. If there are heavenly beings, then we must have kind thoughts toward those heavenly beings.

The essential teaching of Buddhism is self-development and self-reliance. The objective is freedom. If we are practicing in accordance with the principle of self-reliance, we know what our responsibility is. It is to train ourselves, to better ourselves. The responsibility of the heavenly beings is to better themselves. So we both have the same responsibility, to better ourselves. We can coexist with the heavenly beings with kind thoughts. At the same time, whether heavenly beings exist or not is no concern of ours. In this way, Buddhism has a clear outlook on the matter, and Buddhists do not have to worry about such things.

Without this attitude, we get caught in the problem of whether these things do exist or not. If they do exist, how should we conduct ourselves? We might create ceremonies and sacrifices, which is not the duty of a Buddhist. The Buddhist responsibility is to practice to better oneself. If a human being succeeds in fully bettering himself, then he becomes the most excellent of all beings -- revered even by the heavenly beings.

This is an example of Buddhist attitude, which in essence is very similar to the attitude described in the simile of the man wounded by the poisoned arrow. If you have been pierced by an arrow, your first duty is to remove it before the poison spreads throughout the body and kills you. As for searching for data in relation to that incident, whoever feels so inclined can do so, but first it is necessary to take out that arrow.

This is very similar to the thinking of Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington. He had a similar idea, although he did not put it in Buddhist terms. He wrote:

"Verily, it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a scientific man to pass through a door. And whether the door be barn door or church door it might be wiser that he should consent to be an ordinary man and walk in rather than wait till all the difficulties involved in a really scientific ingress are resolved."[12]

In Christian texts it is said that it would be easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to go to heaven. Eddington rephrased this a little, saying that it would be easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a scientific man to go through a door and into a room. What did he mean by this?

I stress here that Eddington is talking about a scientific man, not a scientist. The reason it would be so hard for a scientific man to enter a room is that a scientific man would have to first stand in front of the door and wonder, "... Hmm, I wonder if I should go through this door?" He would have to consider all the physical laws. He might try to figure for example, how many pounds of air pressure per square inch would be on his body if he walked through the door, how fast the earth would be spinning at the time, how this would effect his walking into the room ... he would be thinking for ever. In the end the scientific man would find it impossible to go through the door, because he would never finish his scientific calculations. That is why Eddington said it would be even easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a scientific man to pass through a door. He concluded that scientists should behave as normal. Whether it be the door of a church, a barn door or any other kind of door, then just to go through it.

If things continue as they are, science is in danger of becoming another kind of "higher philosophy." That is, one of those "truths" which are impossible to use in the situations of everyday life, because they are forever waiting to be verified. Pure science maintains that it is void of values, but it is well known how important the role of science has been in the development of society in recent times, even though this development has been the activity of human beings, imbued as they are with values. When we look closely at history we find that values have been exerting a subtle influence over the birth and development of science, beginning with faith and the aspiration to know the truths of nature, up until the most destructive value, the desire to conquer nature and produce an abundance of material goods.

The solution to the problem of values in science is not to try to get rid of them. It is not necessary for science to try to evade values. It is more a matter of trying to clarify the values that science does, or should, have. Otherwise, science may unknowingly become the victim of other values, values which obstruct the truth, and cause it to become a negative influence, one that could even threaten the complete destruction of the human race.

In the preceding parts of this lecture I have tried to show the connection of science to values on two levels, the highest value and the provisional value. This highest value is one that science must adhere to in order to attain to the highest truth, because the highest value is in itself the truth and thus an indispensable factor in the attainment of ultimate truth. However, this highest value, the highest good, or freedom, is an ideal, it is an objective, and as such will not exert a major influence on the quality of science in general.

The value which will have the most immediate influence over science is the secondary value, of which there are two kinds: that which is derived from, and harmonious with, the highest value; and the phony value which has infiltrated into science as a result of a lack of reflection on values.

While scientists have no understanding of values, and fail to see the relationship between them and the truth they are seeking, science will, in addition to limiting the scope of knowledge to which it aspires and rendering the search for highest knowledge fruitless, be taken over by the lesser and more counterproductive values, some inherited from previous generations, and some fed by desire and the search for happiness within the minds of present-day scientists themselves. When these inferior values dominate the mind, not only do they throw the search for true knowledge off course, but they lead to destructive tendencies, causing problems either in the immediate present, or if not, then at some time in the future.

Conversely, if scientists, or those seeking truth, realize the connection between abstract values and the physical world, they will also realize that to search for and understand natural truth is to understand the nature of man; that for man to understand himself is to understand the nature around him. When there is this kind of realization, the secondary value which is derived from the highest value will arise of itself. It will automatically be fulfilled. When there is right understanding, the result will be twofold, namely:

1. The search for knowledge will not be limited or misdirected, but will be set straight on the course for the highest kind of knowledge.

2. The correct kind of secondary value will automatically arise and human development will proceed in conjunction with the search for knowledge.

If research is based on this right understanding, the right kind of value will automatically be present.

The highest kind of value is a condition that will be attained on the realization of truth. It is not necessary to strive to attain this value in itself, simply to bear it in mind. When this is realized, a balanced kind of secondary value, which is congruous with the highest value, will arise.

Even though in the path that is directed toward, and harmonious with, the truth, the assurance of values is not necessary, being already included in the awareness of truth, in practical terms, such as when scientific knowledge is transferred into technology, it may be necessary to emphasize some values in order to clarify the direction of research and to prevent the infiltration of inferior and destructive values. Examples of some of these positive values might be: the search for knowledge in order to attain freedom from human imperfection, or to search for knowledge in order to solve problems and further the development of mankind and even such lesser values as striving to do everything as circumspectly as possible, with minimal harmful results.

At the very least, the realization of the importance of values will enable scientists to be aware of and to understand the way to relate to the values with which they have to deal in their search for knowledge, such as greed, anger, hurt, jealousy, envy and so on, such as in the case of Newton. More importantly, they will see the benefit of a correct set of values and know how to use them effectively, even in the advancement of the search for knowledge. At the very least, scientists will have a sense of morals and not become the mere servants of industry.

One value which is of prime importance to humanity and its activities is happiness. The value of happiness lies deeply and subconsciously behind all human activities and is thus an essential part of ethics. Our conception of happiness will naturally influence all our undertakings. For example, the values of the Industrial Age saw that happiness lay in the subjugation of nature, after which nature could be used as humanity wished. This has led to the developments which are presently causing so many problems in the world.

In order to address problems successfully we must see the truth of happiness and suffering as they really are. Conversely, if we do not correct our values in regard to happiness and suffering, we will have no way of addressing the problems of human development.

To correct our definition of happiness means, in brief, to change our social values, no longer trying to find happiness in the destruction of nature, but instead finding happiness in harmony with nature. In this way we can limit the manipulation of nature to only what is necessary to relieve human suffering rather than to feed pleasure-seeking.

Mankind must realize that if he continues to seek happiness from the destruction of nature, he will not find the happiness he is looking for, even if nature is completely destroyed. Conversely, if mankind is able to live happily with nature, he will experience happiness even while developing the freedom from suffering.

Roughly speaking, there are three main values with which scientists will inevitably have to deal. They are:

1. Mundane values, which scientists, as ordinary people, have in common with everybody else. This includes incentives or motivations, both good and bad, occurring in everyday life, and also in the search for and use of knowledge. Such values include selfishness, the desire for wealth, gains, fame or eminence, or, on the other hand, altruistic values, such as kindness and compassion.

2. Values which are adhered to as principles, and which guide the direction of learning, such as the idea of subjugating nature, the values of the industrial age, the belief that happiness can be obtained through a wealth of material goods, or conversely, the principle of addressing problems and improving the quality of life.

3. The highest value, which scientists should adhere to as members of the human race, is the ideal of the human race as a whole, which, as I have said, has so far been neglected by the world of science. Science is still only half way, with an aspiration to know the truths of nature solely on an outward level. Such an aspiration does not include the matter of "being human," or the highest good.

Science has still some unfinished business to do in regard to these three values.

Encouraging constructive technology

On the level of everyday life, or satisfying the everyday needs of humanity, science plays the vital role of paving the way for technological development and encouraging the production, development and consumption of lopsided technology. On the other hand, social preferences for a particular kind of technology encourage scientific research aimed at producing, developing and consuming that technology.

From what we have seen, science, supported by the beliefs in the efficacy of conquering nature and producing an abundance of material goods, has spurred the production and development of technology along a path resulting in serious problems. Science and technology may have actually done more harm than good.

The kind of production, development and consumption of technology which has caused these problems is one geared to feeding greed (selfishly and wastefully catering to desires on the sensual plane), hatred (causing exploitation, destruction, power mongering), and delusion (encouraging heedlessness, time-wasting activities, and the blind consumption and use of technology).

In the development of science on the technological level, it will be necessary to change some of the basic assumptions it is based on, by encouraging the development of constructive technology, which is free of harmful effects, within the constraints of these three principles:

1. Technology which is moderate.
2. Technology which is used for creating benefit.
3. Technology which serves to develop understanding and improve the human being.

I would like to expand on this a little.

1. We must acknowledge the needs of the ordinary human being. Ordinary people want to be able to satisfy their desires for sense pleasures. We do not want to suppress or deny these sense pleasures. The important point is to encourage the constraint of behavior to a degree which is not destructive or extravagant, by encouraging restraint on the mind, keeping it within moderate limitations. It must be a limitation in which self-created sense desires are balanced by an awareness of what is of real benefit to and truly necessary in life. This is expressed in the words "know moderation." This value is closely related to the development of wisdom. In particular, there should be some principles governing the production, development and consumption of material goods wherein they are directed towards real benefit, aimed at bettering the quality of life rather than satisfying inferior values. In short, we can call this, "technology which is moderate," or technology which puts a limitation on greed.

2. In addition to selfishness and greed, mankind has a tendency to covet power over others, and to destroy those who oppose his desires. The human potential for hatred has found expression in many ways, causing the production, development and consumption of technology which facilitates mutual destruction more than mutual cooperation. Mankind must turn around and change this direction of development, by establishing a clear objective and creating a firm and decisive plan to encourage the production, development and consumption of goods which are constructive and beneficial to human society. This technology for benefit will help to do away with or diminish the production of technology which caters to hatred.

3. So far, the production, development and consumption of technology has mostly been of a kind which leads people to heedlessness, intoxication and dullness, especially in the present time, when many parts of the world have stepped into the Information Age. If mankind practices wrongly in regard to this information technology, it becomes an instrument for promoting heedlessness rather than an educational aid. Witness, for example, the gambling machines and video games which abound in the cities of the world, completely void of any purpose other than to waste time and money. Witness also the ignorant use of technology, without any awareness of its benefits and dangers, leading to environmental damage. These things not only degrade the environment, they also debase human dignity.

For this reason we need to effectuate a conscious change of direction -- to stress production, development and consumption of technology which promotes intelligence and development of the human being, using it as a tool for the communication of knowledge that is useful, and which encourages people to use their time constructively. There must also be conscious use of technology, with an awareness of the benefits and dangers involved in it. In this way, technology will be an instrument for enhancing the quality of life and protecting the environment. Society will become an environment which supports and encourages mental development. This third kind of technology can be called, "technology which enhances intelligence and human development," which is directly opposite to the technology which encourages delusion.

If production, development and consumption of technology can be channelled in this way, and if science opens the way to this kind of technology, then sustainable development will surely become a reality.

Footnote:

12. Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington, "Defense of Mysticism," in Quantum Questions, ed. Ken Wilbur (Boston: New Science Library, 1984), p. 208. [Back to text]

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
TITLE OF WORK: Towards Sustainable Science
FILENAME: SCIENCE.ZIP
AUTHOR: Venerable P.A. Payutto
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhadhamma Foundation
87/126 Tesabahl Songkroh Rd, Lad Yao, Chatuchak,
Bangkok 10900
THAILAND
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Venerable P.A. Payutto (1993)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1993
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF BUDDHANET DISTRIBUTION: July, 2000
ORIGIN WEB SITE: BuddhaNet at www.buddhanet.net/ftp03.htm

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to BuddhaNet. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

BuddhaNet, P.O. Box K1020, Haymarket, NSW 2000, AUSTRALIA.

<end of file>

By the same author from BPS

BANNER OF THE ARAHANTS

This book, by a senior English Buddhist monk, covers the history and development of the Sangha, the Order of Buddhist monks and nuns, from the Buddha's time to the present. Following the historical account, lively and informative chapters throw light on the lifestyles of Buddhist monks, on Buddhist nuns past and present, and on Westerners in the Sangha.

230 Pages Hardback: U. S. $5.00 {Verify with BPS for current pricing}

Some other Wheels of Bhikkhu Khantipalo

The Blessings of Pindapata (WHEEL 73)

Practical Advice for Meditators (WHEEL 116)

The Buddhist Monk's Discipline (WHEEL 130/131)

Forest Meditations (WHEEL 243/244)

Bag of Bones: A Miscellany on the Body (WHEEL 271/272)

ÉÍÍÍ

1. Compassion (Buddhism). 2. Meditation - Buddhism. 3. Love - Religious aspects - Buddhism. 4. Parents and child - Religious aspects - Buddhism. I.Title.
294.35699
PRINTED FOR FREE DISTRIBUTION
2,000 COPIES 1997

BOOK LAYOUT AND DESIGN BY LIM HOCK ENG

PRINTED IN PENANG, MALAYSIA

Introduction

The practice of loving-kindness or mettà, can be done in one of two ways: Either in intensive prolonged meditation to develop deep states of concentration or in daily life at any time one meets with people and animals or thinks about them. The systematic practice of loving-kindness for deep concentration as it is practised in various meditation centres has been discussed in detail by such teachers like late Venerable Mahasi Sayadaw and Venerable Sujiva.*

To learn about the radiating of metta to all beings with children, we have to tap into the store of knowledge accumulated by lay people and parents. It must be know-ledge which has grown out of years of living and loving with children and young adults. Gregory Kramer, father of three boys, shows us in his short essay with what subtle but precise adjustments in the standard practice of loving-kindness he was able to anchor it in the lives of his children. There are three aspects in Mr. Kramer's mettà practice with his sons, which seem to me particularly important for his success:

* Parents should know themselves how metta feels like and be in the habit of radiating it to their children and all beings.

* Children should never be coerced into sending, wishes of well-being to themselves or others.

* Parents should trust their intuitive understanding of their children and be flexible enough to adjust the method to the age and unique personalities of the kids.

* See: Brahma Vihara Dhamma by Mahasi Sayadaw Meditation on Loving Kindness by Ven. Sujiva.

There are many wonderful ways to radiate loving-kindness with children and young adults. I hope that this essay will encourage parents to share their own experiences, successes and obstacles, in their family metta practice.

We would like to thank Gregory Kramer for his co-operation to publish this booklet. Thanks also to Sandy Eastoak and NORTH ATLANTIC BOOKS for the permission to reprint this text.

Bodhisara
Penang, 1997

'One has to learn to live with oneself,
to be a friend with oneself,
to be at peace with oneself,
to somehow learn to be happy with oneself, because where you go, you take you with you.'
- Ajahn Brahmavamso

I believe the fruits of the loving-kindness meditation as advocated by Gregory Kramer and borne from his personal experience will help us and our children - for those of us with young children - achieve the goals set out above by the Venerable as necessary to one find peace here and now.

- C. T. Teo

Ever since my first child was just about old enough to understand speech, I have practiced loving-kindness meditation with him at bedtime every evening. I've done the same with my other two children. It's been about sixteen years now. I would be happy to pass along some of what I've learned.

Loving-kindness is a meditation practice taught by the Buddha to develop the mental habit of self-less or altruistic, love. By arousing within ourselves feelings of good will towards ourselves, those near to us, and all beings, we make it likely that these feelings will arise rather than other, less desirable feelings. Hatred cannot coexist with loving-kindness; it dissipates and is not replenished if we supplant thoughts rooted in anger with thoughts rooted in love.

Loving-kindness makes the mind more pliable, counteracts the judgments that arise as we become more perceptive about ourselves and others, and brings us beyond our selfishness. This outward movement is very important to balance the inner focus of meditation practice. The benefits of loving-kindness practice extend far beyond those who meditate. It offers to all the opportunity to kind selflessness, joy, adaptability, and expansiveness. It is a truly universal practice and need not be associated with any particular religious concept.

I've always given my three sons a choice. Most evenings they clearly want to do this. If, however, one of them is cranky or upset, I'll say, "Would you like to do loving-kindness tonight?" and if the answer is no, then I'll say, "OK, honey," give him a kiss (through the blanket if necessary), and say goodnight. So they know it is for them. If they see it is OK with me not to do it - it won't hurt my feelings - then it is alive and part of their lives. It prevents it from becoming a ritual with little meaning.

Feeling good about doing this meditation is what brings it into their lives. They associate their own happiness and peace with a meditation that wishes happiness and peace for themselves and others.

It also feels good that the practice has become part of our evening, just as the story and my lying down with them. It is a special time of attention, gentleness, fantasy, mind opening, and familial love.

It tells me something about how this practice feels to them when, following a tense time, such as an argument, they still want me to practice loving-kindness with them. At times like these the pleasant and wholesome associ-ations of loving-kindness meditation are of unique value.

I long expected the day to arrive when my eldest son, who is now eighteen, would not want to practice anymore. Even as I expected this, he and I benefitted from the connection we felt at bedtime (and, of course, through many other times.) The wedge of teenagerdom and his growing, independence was a challenge at times, but this special connection was very strong. I am now finding a similar connection with our middle child as he enters his teenage years.

What finally did happen, as the eldest reached about sixteen years of age, was I became busier at bedtime with his two brothers and he simply became less insistent on my presence for the practice. Every now and then I ask him if he still practices loving-kindness on his own and am pleased to find that he does.

Now, I have to point out, this can all take a lot of time. The stories (usually made up rather than read), the loving-kindness meditation, and the "be with" time can add up to twenty or thirty minutes. With children in separate rooms this can add up to an hour each night. As wonderful as it can be, sometimes I can't do it. And it's good to know that even a five minute practice has great value.

Interestingly, when I'm busy the boys still request a "quick loving-kindness" even before a story or "be with" time. When I have to be away, they do just fine without me. Here is how we do the loving-kindness practice. I ask them to close their eyes and relax. I suggest that they pay attention to their bodies, noticing, the sensation of lying down. Then, they think along with me as I say the following:

Send loving-kindness to yourself.
Really love yourself.
Want yourself to be happy.

Think:
I love myself.
May I be free from anger.
May I be free from sadness.
May I be free from pain.
(I really want to be free from pain.)
May I be free from difficulties.
May I be free from all suffering.
May I be healthy.
May my body be healthy and strong.
May I be filled with loving-kindness.
May I know the joy of generosity and love.
May I be happy.
May I really be happy.
May I be at peace.

I spread this loving-kindness out.
I send love to Dad and Mom.
May Mom and Dad be free from difficulties.
May they be free from pain and sadness.
May they be free from attachment,
Free from anger and ill will.
May they be free from all suffering.
May Mom and Dad be healthy and happy.
Completely healthy and happy.
May they be at peace.

I send loving-kindness to both my brothers.
May they be free from sadness and anger.
May they be free from sickness.
May they be free from all suffering.

May they be happy and free.
Free from suffering, free from difficulties.
May they be well and happy.
May they be at peace.

I send loving-kindness to my teachers and the kids at school (Even the ones I don't know).
May they all be free from sorrow and suffering.
May they be free
from anger and difficulties.
May they be happy.
Free from all difficulties and sadness.
May they be well and happy.
May they be at peace.

I send love now to all the people
I don't know everywhere on the earth.
May all beings on the planet be free from suffering.
May they be free from pain, grief, and despair.
May they be happy,
Truly happy.
May they be at peace.

May all beings in the universe be free from suffering.
May all beings in all universes, everywhere, be free from suffering.
May they be well and happy.
May they be at peace.

May all beings of all kinds, in all directions be happy and at peace.
Above and below,
Near and far,
High and low.
All types of beings.
Humans and non-humans.
Seen and unseen.

All the animals, birds, and fishes.
All beings and creatures,
With no exceptions.
May they all be happy.
May they be free.

I open my heart
And accept the loving-kindness of every being and creature in return.
I let that love into my heart.
And I share the benefits of this meditation with every one.

May all beings be well and happy.
May all beings be well and happy.
May all beings be well and happy.
May there be peace.
May there be peace.
May there be peace.

Following, the meditation, each child gets a kiss and an "I love you."
I lie there briefly, then leave.

This practice is slightly different from the one I do with my adult meditation students. There are nuances that I adjust with age and mood, to make the meditation something that kids can relate to directly and emotionally. As they mature and their world grows, the scope of the meditation can grow and still be congruent with that world.
By beginning with some instructions rather than the practice itself, I'm setting the stage and the mood. This creates a transition from listening, to stories to focusing, on their feelings and then growing those feelings towards love. Another adjustment is that each person, group, or region towards whom the loving-kindness is sent has slightly different words. I do not want this practice to become rote. By avoiding repetition, we help the meditation stay alive and relevant.
Then, we grow the feelings of love in the most fertile soil: logically the closest and most loved people (or animals or plants). The children themselves get the most attention, based on the simple fact that we all want to be free from pain and difficulties. When we know how that feels for ourselves, we can, with identification and understanding, spread that feeling to others. After all, they are just like us and must also want to be free from pain, discomfort, and other suffering.

We extend loving-kindness toward ourselves, toward someone we love a great deal (DAD AND MOM), toward others we love (THE BROTHERS), then toward those we like (OUR FRIENDS AT SCHOOL) or at least feel neutral toward (TEACHERS, OTHER KIDS), then toward all beings. With adults, the practice goes from oneself to a loved one, then to a neutral one, than to one towards whom we feel anger, then on out geographically. With children, we slowly grow the world; we are not "pushing the river."
When they are ready, we extend the loving-kindness toward people they feel some agitation toward. Even with the youngest child I will occasionally add people he may feel anger towards. With my thirteen year old we do so often, though he seems to feel little agitation towards others.

There is an element of improvisation in the way I conduct this practice. If I feel the kids are in a particularly loving place, I may focus more on sending love to their teachers. "May they really be free from difficulties and suffering." This would help them to see their teachers as regular humans, with pain, with lives outside the classroom, and not beyond error and emotion. I may also focus extra loving-kindness on someone in need, such as an ill grandmother. The child can then be helped to see that when there is need, you step outside yourself and you give extra.

In spreading the loving-kindness geographically, I try to walk the line between it becoming a mental exercise ("Where is that town?" "What is a continent?") and being so general as not to invoke feelings of expansiveness ("Oh, we're at that spreading thing that I don't really understand, I'll just lie here."). This grows in sophistication with age.

But one must be careful not to turn it into a geography lesson, although a little intrigue doesn't hurt ("I send loving-kindness across all of Asia, Africa, Australia; across all the oceans to all the creatures in the sea"). The feeling of expansiveness is paramount here.

From me, to them, to all on earth, to all in the universe, to all in all directions, with no exceptions. This helps the heart grow and soften. It takes children (or us) out of themselves in a gentle way. Questions come up with kids that may not come up with adults, like the time my youngest wanted to send loving-kindness to YELLOW BLANKIE. First, I said to him that YELLOW BLANKIE doesn't have a consciousness. This did not impress him. Then I said we'd send loving-kindness to YELLOW BLANKIE, figuring, that "all beings" could include his fabric friend if my son so chose. However, when we began the loving-kindness practice, it went like this:

ME: "I send loving-kindness to Dad and Mom . . ."
MY SON: ". . . and YELLOW BLANKIE."
ME: "OK, and YELLOW BLANKIE."

As my eldest son matured and his emotional understanding was expanded, I gently expanded the meditation. Compassion is an extension of love, further along this trajectory of going beyond ourselves to embrace others. So the eldest may, having been instructed, after sending, loving-kindness to all beings, let himself feel the suffering of others, to let his heart resonate with the pain of others. This was done in a gentle and non-dogmatic way. There is a sense of respect and maturity that he may have felt, albeit subtly, for being able to grow in his practice in this way.

I can't say for certain, but it is my hope that this compassion will grow within my sons as they reach deeper into the rich and complex social world of young adulthood and thus act as counterbalance to the arrogance and judgment that comes with the territory. I particularly hope that they can develop a true compassion for those less fortunate than themselves, people without enough to eat, without adequate clothing or housing, people who are in war zones or are stricken by disease. In our privileged society, where many of us don't see the outer reaches of human suffering, I want actively to instil the capacity for compassion. The compassion itself will grow with their experience.

I try to do this without too much attachment to results or to the process itself. If my children decide they don't want to do this anymore, I hope I can let go of it lightly But for now, as for the past sixteen years, they value this practice of loving-kindness.

About the Author

GREGORY KRAMER lives with his wife and three sons in Portland, Oregon, USA. He is long-time student of insight meditation (vipassana), having, practiced with various Asian teachers. He has taught insight meditation for 18 years and conducted numerous retreats under the auspices of the METTA FOUNDATION and at the BARRE CENTER FOR BUDDHIST STUDIES in Massachusetts. Gregory Kramer also co-founded HARVEST WITH HEART, a hunger project in upstate New York. As the president of the METTA FOUNDATION, Kramer is directing their efforts to build a bridge between the study and practice of meditation and to develop artistic and scholarly supports for contemplation, he has investigated various approaches to mindfulness training and studied the Buddhist psychology, Abhidhamma.

<end of file>

ALSO AVAILABLE FROM THE BPS

Middle Land, Middle Way: A Pilgrim's Guide to the Buddha's India

by Ven. S. Dhammika

Just before the Buddha attained final Nirvana he urged his disciples to visit, at least once in their lives, the places where the most important events in his career occurred. In the centuries since then pilgrims from all over the Buddhist world have endured danger and hardship to come to India to see the places made sacred by the Buddha's presence. //Middle Land, Middle Way// is the first comprehensive guidebook for the modern Buddhist wishing to undertake a pilgrimage. In the introduction the author gives an inspiring account of the significance and history of pilgrimage in Buddhism, as well as the biographies of famous pilgrims of the past. Then sixteen places are covered, the Buddha's association with each place, their subsequent history and a detailed and informative description of the monuments found there. With maps and color photos //Middle Land, Middle Way// is an essential companion for both the pilgrim and the general traveler.

208 Pages Softback 140 mm x 214 mm

U.S. $10.00/S.L. Rs. 200 Order No. BP 609S

[end]

OF RELATED INTEREST FROM THE BPS

THE PRACTICE OF LOVING KINDNESS
Texts translated by Bhikkhu Nanamoli

This compact booklet contains a selection of suttas from the Pali Canon explaining, in the Buddha's own words, the methods of practicing loving kindness both in daily life and as a subject of meditation.

WH 7; 1987, 28 pp. $1.00/Rs. 20

METTA: THE PHILOSOPHY & PRACTICE OF UNIVERSAL LOVE
Acharya Buddharakkhita

Short essays based on the famous Metta Sutta and other suttas exploring metta in its relation to ethics and mental purification. Contains a detailed explanation of the technique of metta bhavana, the meditation on universal love.

WH 365/366; 1989, 56 pp. $1.95/Rs. 30

THE ROOTS OF GOOD AND EVIL
Nyanaponika Thera

A collection of texts on the wholesome and unwholesome mental roots, interwoven with the compiler's own insightful comments and advice on the purification of the mind.

WH 251/253; 1986,112 pp. $1.80/Rs. 18

THE UDANA: INSPIRED UTTERANCES OF THE BUDDHA
Translated by John D. Ireland

The Udana is one of the loveliest and most uplifting texts in the Pali Canon, a collection of eighty short but deeply impressive suttas. Each sutta begins with a memorable incident that comes to the Buddha's attention and elicits from him an "inspired utterance" expressing his insight into the event's deeper significance. Opening at the foot of the Bodhi Tree shortly after his Enlightenment, the Udana records some of the best known incidents in the Master's life: his paeon of victory over the forces of darkness; his instruction to Bahiya on "sudden awakening"; the story of Nanda and the pink-footed nymphs; the parable of the blind men and the elephant; the solemn Nibbana suttas; and much more. This new translation combines precision with clarity and also includes helpful explanatory notes drawn mostly from the Udana Commentary.

1990, 160 pp. 140 mm x 214 mm $8.50/Rs. 160 BP 214S

THE ITIVUTTAKA: THE BUDDHA'S SAYINGS
Translated by John D. Ireland

The Itivuttaka is a collection of 112 short discourses of the Buddha belonging to the Pali Canon. According to the commentarial tradition, the suttas of the Itivuttaka were collected by the woman lay-disciple Khujjuttara from sermons given by the Buddha while he was staying at Kosambi. Khujjuttara, a servant in the court of King Udena, was declared by the Buddha his most learned woman lay follower. She had become a stream-enterer after meeting the Buddha and afterwards converted the women of the palace to the Dhamma. She used to go regularly to listen to the Buddha preach and then later reported what she heard to the other women. The compilation of these sayings became known as the Itivuttaka. The suttas of the Itivuttaka -- in mixed prose and verse -- are elevated and profound, and at times reach a pitch of lofty spiritual exaltation. This new translation, while scrupulously exact, captures and conveys the inspirational flavor of the Pali original. The book also includes helpful explanatory notes drawn mostly from the Itivuttaka Commentary.

1991, 130 pp. 140 mm x 214 mm $7.50/Rs.150 BP 215S

* * * * * * * *

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[Last updated: 29 September 1993]

"SEIJO AND HER SOUL SEPARATED".

[this text was first published in the MIND MOON CIRCLE, Summer 1991 pp 2-4]

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Subhana Barzaghi Sensei, Kuan-Yin Zen Center, NSW, Australia
Enquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle", Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 660 2993

SEIJO AND HER SOUL SEPARATED

SUBHANA BARZAGHI, SENSEI

Spring 1991

The story: During the T'ang dynasty, there lived a man called Chokan. He had two daughters. When the elder girl died, he devoted himself to the younger, Seijo. As she grew up he turned his attention to the question of a suitable husband for her and eventually selected a good and strong young man. But Seijo had already taken her cousin Ochu as her lover. She had grown up with him in a union blessed since childhood, and she considered herself betrothed to him. When Chokan announced that his choice of a suitor was to arrive in the village, Seijo became cast down and sad. Ochu, unable to bear the prospect of witnessing the betrayal, left the village without saying farewell. He took his boat and rowed into the night. As he rowed he noticed the outline of a figure running along the bank. He put into the shore to see who it was; and there was Seijo, tear stained and adamant. Together they travelled to a distant land where they lived as man and wife. Five years went by. Seijo gave birth to two girls. But though she loved Ochu and the children, she was weighed down by the dishonour she'd done to her father. All this she told to Ochu. And he admitted that he too longed for his homeland. "Let us go back and beg forgiveness," he said.

And so they returned. At the port, Ochu left Seijo and the girls while he walked to the village. He went directly to Chokan's house, confessed the whole story and bowed his head at their ungrateful behaviour. Chokan received him kindly. "Which girl do you mean?" he asked. "Your daughter Seijo," Ochu replied. "That is not possible," Chokan said. "Seijo is here in the house with me. Since you left the village without bidding her farewell she has lain here; she lies here now."

Mystified, Chokan refused Ochu's invitation to go with him to the port. Instead he sent a servant to check the boat. When the servant returned, reporting that it was indeed Seijo who waited there, Chokan took Ochu into the house. "She has not spoken since you left," he said. "It is as if she has been absent in mind, or drugged. Now I see that her soul left to follow you." So saying, he showed Ochu into Seijo's room. Hearing the story, Seijo rose from her bed, still without speaking, and walked out into the village just as Seijo and her children stepped from the cart that had brought them from the port. The silent Seijo moved forward to greet her, and as she did, the two were united.

Chokan spoke to Seijo. "Ever since Ochu left this village, you have not uttered a word, and you have always been absent in mind as if you were drugged. Now I see that your soul left your body and has been with Ochu." To this Seijo replied, "I did not know that I was sick in bed at home. When I learned that Ochu had left this village in distress, I followed his boat that night, feeling as if it were a dream. I myself am not sure which was the real me - the one with you, sick in bed, or the one with Ochu as his wife."

This story is a useful metaphor for each of our lives and also highlights a process of realisation. How I would like to approach it is to go beyond the content of the story and focus on the process. The first part of the process being separation, the illusion of duality, the second part the sense of longing, being the turning point; and the third part, reunion and transformation. Our koan study here requires us to take up the point, which is the real Seijo? It's not enough to say they were one from the beginning. We must seek the true Seijo here and now.

The first aspect that I want to address is Seijo's spirit separated. If we take this story as our own story, how often do we separate ourselves, live our lives in a fragmented way, disconnected from the environment and unresponsive the the people around us? If we start the day with a shower we are no sooner under the shower before we are thinking about what we want for breakfast. We start eating our breakfast and after the first two mouthfuls we are then off planning the day. So we tend to live in this unmindful and disconnected way. We see in this dramatised analogy that Seijo was like a ghost, living with her parents at home and not knowing she was at home. We often split off from this present moment, wanting to be somewhere else, dreaming of the ideal mate, or wanting to be something more than we are. We are ghosts to our children when we are preoccupied by our careers, mortgages, or even preoccupied saving the planet.

This is obvious when we try to engage in this simple act of sitting on our cushions, and being aware of our breath, when something from the past, some fantasy, some soap opera, will pop up and take over and suddenly we are up off our cushion and spend the next twenty minutes wandering around in our head.

If we look at our lives, how many roles do we divide ourselves into? Parent, partner, career/job, member of a sangha/community, peace activist, student - no Hollywood movie director would cast any actor in so many roles, yet we taken on these roles daily. Seijo was a wife and mother of two children in a far city. Seijo was a sick daughter at home. When we split off or divide ourselves from the present moment we drain our vital energy and are basically ineffective. In this story Seijo was completely laid low.

If our attention is not focused we are no longer congruent. We may be thinking one thing, feeling another, saying something else, and doing something entirely different. If we look into our own emotional and psychological split, what emotions do we encounter that are difficult for us to be with? We often avoid or suppress unpleasant feelings and sensations. To be with them and include them in our zazen is our growing edge. In the very midst of our pain and difficulties lies a great freedom.

So our practice of mindfulness is to bring us home to this moment, moment after moment, to heal the splits in our psyche and to let go of that psychological conflict. The dawning of the heart and the steady light of insight will emerge by gently and faithfully returning to the practice of being with the way of things just as they are.

If we are worried about the future or preoccupied by anger or fear, although our child may be standing in front of us, the child will not really exist for us. She or he is like a ghost and we may be living like ghosts too. If I want to be with my son, I need to return to the present moment, hold him in my arms and connect with our breathing, then I naturally awaken that precious playfulness and dance of the love of life.

If we look deeper we find (as Yasutani Roshi said), "The fundamental delusion of humanity is to suppose that "I" am here and "you" are out there." This fundamental delusion of a separate permanent self is the root cause of much of our suffering. We get caught by the dualistic concepts of subject/object, self/other, oneness/emptiness, true/false, body/soul. Seijo is not simply limited to this body and soul and we are also not limited, we are this great life that is neither one nor two.

If we see from the Bodhisattva's point of view that the actuality of our daily lives and the essential world are intrinsically one and the same, one indivisible whole, then our daily actions, driving the car, feeding the kids, cleaning the house are all manifestations of the Tao. The clouds, colours, sounds, smells, feelings and thoughts are the interconnected net of Indra and the very texture and body of the Buddha.

Another major way in which we hold onto our separation is by attachment to our fixed opinions, views and beliefs. There is no mistake as to why Thich Nhat Hanh made the first precept in the "Order of Interbeing" (which means to continue to realise or to be in touch with): Do not be idolatrous about or bound to any doctrine, theory or ideology - this includes Buddhist ones. This encourage us to experience directly for ourselves the truth. What often gets in the way is our own self-centred preoccupations. It's when we get out of our own way, let go, that the great universe opens up. If we return to the story, there is something very beautiful in this process, Seijo's longing to return home. Essentially we all have this deep longing to return to our true home, however often it is masked by the veils of our desires and ignorance. It is often pain and discontent that leads us in search of the truth, and our longing for inner peace and harmony that turns us around. Our suffering and our joy returns us to our practice over and over.

When the Buddha said the first noble truth is ~Life is suffering", what did he mean? The statement was not made from a morbid depressing view of life. Yet if we are intimate with the moment to moment impermanent nature of all things, we recognise that there is an underlying dissatisfaction. The question arises: is there something more? What emerges is the longing to understand. I know in my own life there welled up inside of me a great passion to want to know what I am, what I am. In fact, it was that passion and determination that led me to meet Aitken Roshi and it's the same passion and determination that the Buddha had when he sat down under the Bodhi tree. Our search for peace is, in truth, the longing for the empty infinite self, the heart longing to discover its own original face. It is this very longing which is the manifestation of the Bodhisattva vow to save all beings.

So we do our zazen and we patiently refuse the domination of our fantasies, judgmental opinions about ourselves and others and we turn around as Seijo did to this moment. We turn the dharma wheel when we encounter this moment this is our focus and our samadhi will gradually deepen us, the process has its own natural momentum and unfolding .

The story has a beautiful and inspiring ending, symbolic of the process of realisation. The Seijo sick at home in bed and the Seijo with the two children from the distant city rejoined and became one. Seijo is here with us now, she is inviting us to discover our affinity with the stones and clouds, not to change from one form into another but rather to enable us to experience this ancient truth of no-self.

Another aspect that is reflected in this story, probably relevant more to women, is that we have traditionally experienced our lives and defined ourselves by who we are with. For example, Seijo was a daughter in relationship to her parents, Seijo was a wife in relationship to her husband. The person we are partner to can very often define who we think we are. We are constantly in relationship, each moment is relationship and in truth there is only one relationship. All things are no other than one's very self, so we are constantly in relationship with the self, with our infinite true self. The split Seijo became one, our maturity is not to just define ourselves by the person in our lives but to stop and be in communion with our original face without definition. The true self knows no separation.

The moon and the clouds are the same Mountains and valleys are different.
All are blessed, all are blessed.
Is this one? Is this two?

Yes, indeed the blessed outcome. The Bodhisattva way is to nurture our longing to return home, to find our unity with all beings. The moon and the clouds are the same, essentially all beings by nature are the Buddha Tao. If we cannot see into the essential world, and only recognise our uniqueness and our differences, (mountains and valleys are different) this thinking directly leads to chaos. Such chaos is evident in our society and reflected in the way we treat our environment. Dharma/Gaia calls us to wake up the light of dawn and remember that the moon and clouds are the same, even in our darkest valleys and most difficult moments. The garden is watered, Dharma/Gaia is nurtured, all are blessed, all are blessed.

---

end of file

150 4# Sek 1
I SHALL WEAR THE UPPER ROBE CORRECTLY
Sek 2
I SHALL WEAR THE LOWER ROBE CORRECTLY
Sek 3
I SHALL WALK WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 4
I SHALL SIT WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 5
I SHALL WALK WELL RESTRAINED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 6
I SHALL SIT WELL RESTRAINED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 7
I SHALL WALK WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 8
I SHALL SIT WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 9
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 10
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 11
I SHALL NOT WALK LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 12
I SHALL NOT SIT LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 13
I SHALL NOT WALK TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 14
I SHALL NOT SIT TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 15
I SHALL NOT WALK SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 16
I SHALL NOT SIT SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 17
I SHALL NOT WALK SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 18
I SHALL NOT SIT SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 19
I SHALL NOT WALK MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS

Sek 20
I SHALL NOT SIT MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 21
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 22
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 23
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 24
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 25
I SHALL NOT WALK OVER TOES OR HEELS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 26
I SHALL NOT SIT CLASPING THE KNEES IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 27
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS CAREFULLY
Sek 28
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
Sek 29
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
Sek 30
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS LEVEL WITH THE RIM OF THE BOWL
Sek 31
I SHALL EAT ALMS CAREFULLY
Sek 32
I SHALL EAT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
Sek 33
I SHALL EAT ALMS EVENLY
Sek 34
I SHALL EAT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
Sek 35
I SHALL NOT EAT DIGGING HOLES
Sek 36
I SHALL NOT HIDE CURRIES
Sek 37
I SHALL NOT ASK FOR RICE AND CURRIES
Sek 38
I SHALL NOT LOOK AT ANOTHER'S WAY OF EATING TO FIND FAULT

Sek 39
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING UP EXTRA LARGE MOUTHFULS
Sek 40
I SHALL MAKE UP A ROUND MOUTHFUL
Sek 41
I SHALL NOT EAT WITH THE MOUTH OPEN
Sek 42
I SHALL NOT PUT THE FINGERS IN THE MOUTH
Sek 43
I SHALL NOT SPEAK WITH THE MOUTH FULL
Sek 44
I SHALL NOT EAT BREAKING FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE
Sek 45
I SHALL NOT EAT BITING INTO FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE
Sek 46
I SHALL NOT EAT STUFFING OUT THE CHEEKS
Sek 47
I SHALL NOT EAT SHAKING THE HAND
Sek 48
I SHALL NOT EAT SCATTERING RICE
Sek 49
I SHALL NOT EAT PUTTING OUT THE TONGUE
Sek 50
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A CHAMPING SOUND
Sek 51
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A SUCKING SOUND
Sek 52
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE HAND
Sek 53
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE BOWL
Sek 54
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE LIPS
Sek 55
I SHALL NOT ACCEPT A WATER POT WITH A SOILED HAND
Sek 56
I SHALL NOT THROW WATER WITH GRAINS OUT IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 57
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS AN UMBRELLA IN HIS HAND

Sek 58
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A STICK IN HIS HAND
Sek 59
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A KNIFE IN HIS HAND
Sek 60
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A WEAPON IN HIS HAND
Sek 61
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING NON-LEATHER FOOT
Sek 62
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING LEATHER FOOTWEA
Sek 63
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS IN A VEHICLE
Sek 64
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS LYING DOWN
Sek 65
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS CLASPING HIS KNEES
Sek 66
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING A TURBAN
Sek 67
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS HIS HEAD COVERED
Sek 68
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON THE GROUND TO O
Sek 69
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON A LOWER SEAT
Sek 70
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE STANDING TO ONE SITTING
Sek 71
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING AHEAD
Sek 72
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING ON THE PATH WHILE
Sek 73
I SHALL NOT STOOL OR URINATE WHILE STANDING
Sek 74
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT ON CROPS
Sek 75
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT INTO WATER

Sek 1

I SHALL WEAR THE UPPER ROBE CORRECTLY
Sek 2
I SHALL WEAR THE LOWER ROBE CORRECTLY
Sek 3
I SHALL WALK WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 4
I SHALL SIT WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 5
I SHALL WALK WELL RESTRAINED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 6
I SHALL SIT WELL RESTRAINED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 7
I SHALL WALK WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 8
I SHALL SIT WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 9
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 10
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 11
I SHALL NOT WALK LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 12
I SHALL NOT SIT LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 13
I SHALL NOT WALK TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 14
I SHALL NOT SIT TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 15
I SHALL NOT WALK SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 16
I SHALL NOT SIT SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 17
I SHALL NOT WALK SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 18
I SHALL NOT SIT SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 19
I SHALL NOT WALK MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 20

I SHALL NOT SIT MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 21
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 22
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 23
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 24
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 25
I SHALL NOT WALK OVER TOES OR HEELS IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 26
I SHALL NOT SIT CLASPING THE KNEES IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 27
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS CAREFULLY
Sek 28
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
Sek 29
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
Sek 30
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS LEVEL WITH THE RIM OF THE BOWL
Sek 31
I SHALL EAT ALMS CAREFULLY
Sek 32
I SHALL EAT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
Sek 33
I SHALL EAT ALMS EVENLY
Sek 34
I SHALL EAT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
Sek 35
I SHALL NOT EAT DIGGING HOLES
Sek 36
I SHALL NOT HIDE CURRIES
Sek 37
I SHALL NOT ASK FOR RICE AND CURRIES
Sek 38
I SHALL NOT LOOK AT ANOTHER'S WAY OF EATING TO FIND FAULT
Sek 39

I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING UP EXTRA LARGE MOUTHFULS
Sek 40
I SHALL MAKE UP A ROUND MOUTHFUL
Sek 41
I SHALL NOT EAT WITH THE MOUTH OPEN
Sek 42
I SHALL NOT PUT THE FINGERS IN THE MOUTH
Sek 43
I SHALL NOT SPEAK WITH THE MOUTH FULL
Sek 44
I SHALL NOT EAT BREAKING FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE
Sek 45
I SHALL NOT EAT BITING INTO FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE
Sek 46
I SHALL NOT EAT STUFFING OUT THE CHEEKS
Sek 47
I SHALL NOT EAT SHAKING THE HAND
Sek 48
I SHALL NOT EAT SCATTERING RICE
Sek 49
I SHALL NOT EAT PUTTING OUT THE TONGUE
Sek 50
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A CHAMPING SOUND
Sek 51
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A SUCKING SOUND
Sek 52
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE HAND
Sek 53
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE BOWL
Sek 54
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE LIPS
Sek 55
I SHALL NOT ACCEPT A WATER POT WITH A SOILED HAND
Sek 56
I SHALL NOT THROW WATER WITH GRAINS OUT IN INHABITED AREAS
Sek 57
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS AN UMBRELLA IN HIS HAND
Sek 58

I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A STICK IN HIS HAND
Sek 59
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A KNIFE IN HIS HAND
Sek 60
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A WEAPON IN HIS HAND
Sek 61
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING NON-LEATHER FOOT
Sek 62
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING LEATHER FOOTWEA
Sek 63
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS IN A VEHICLE
Sek 64
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS LYING DOWN
Sek 65
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS CLASPING HIS KNEES
Sek 66
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING A TURBAN
Sek 67
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS HIS HEAD COVERED
Sek 68
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON THE GROUND TO O
Sek 69
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON A LOWER SEAT
Sek 70
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE STANDING TO ONE SITTING
Sek 71
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING AHEAD
Sek 72
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING ON THE PATH WHILE
Sek 73
I SHALL NOT STOOL OR URINATE WHILE STANDING
Sek 74
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT ON CROPS
Sek 75
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT INTO WATER

150 1# I SHALL WEAR THE UPPER ROBE CORRECTLY
1
I SHALL WEAR THE LOWER ROBE CORRECTLY
2
I SHALL WALK WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
3
I SHALL SIT WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
4
I SHALL WALK WELL RESTRAINT IN INHABITED AREAS
5
I SHALL SIT WELL RESTRAINT IN INHABITED AREAS
6
I SHALL WALK WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
7
I SHALL SIT WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
8
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
9
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
10
I SHALL NOT WALK LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
11
I SHALL NOT SIT LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
12
I SHALL NOT WALK TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
13
I SHALL NOT SIT TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
14
I SHALL NOT WALK SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
15
I SHALL NOT SIT SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
16
I SHALL NOT WALK SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
17
I SHALL NOT SIT SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
18
I SHALL NOT WALK MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
19

I SHALL NOT SIT MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
20
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS 21
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
22
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH MY HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
23
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH MY HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
24
I SHALL NOT WALK OVER TOES OR HEELS IN INHABITED AREAS
25
I SHALL NOT SIT HOLDING UP THE KNEES IN INHABITED AREAS 26
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS CAREFULLY
27
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
28
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
29
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS LEVEL WITH THE RIM OF THE BOWL
30
I SHALL EAT ALMS CAREFULLY
31
I SHALL EAT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL 32
I SHALL EAT ALMS EVENLY
33
I SHALL EAT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
34
I SHALL NOT EAT DIGGING HOLES
35
I SHALL NOT HIDE CURRIES
36
I SHALL NOT ASK FOR RICE AND CURRIES
37
I SHALL NOT LOOK AT ANOTHER'S SHALL NOT WAY OF EATING TO FIND FAULT
38

I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING UP EXTRA LARGE MOUTHFULS
39
I SHALL MAKE UP A ROUND MOUTHFUL
40
I SHALL NOT EAT WITH THE MOUTH OPEN
41
I SHALL NOT PUT THE FINGERS IN THE MOUTH
42
I SHALL NOT SPEAK WITH THE MOUTH FULL 43
I SHALL NOT EAT BREAKING FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE 44
I SHALL NOT EAT BITING INTO FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE 45
I SHALL NOT EAT STUFFING OUT THE CHEEKS
46
I SHALL NOT EAT SHAKING THE HAND
47
I SHALL NOT EAT SCATTERING RICE
48
I SHALL NOT EAT PUTTING OUT THE TONGUE
49
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A CHAMPING SOUND
50
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A SUCKING SOUND
51
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE HAND
52
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE BOWL
53
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE LIPS
54
I SHALL NOT ACCEPT A WATER POT WITH A SOILED HAND
55
I SHALL NOT THROW WATER WITH GRAINS OUT IN INHABITED AREAS
56
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS AN UMBRELLA IN HIS HAND
57

I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A STICK IN HIS HAND
58
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A KNIFE IN HIS HAND
59
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A WEAPON IN HIS HAND
60
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING NON-LEATHER FO
61
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING LEATHER FOOTWE
62
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS IN A VEHICLE
63
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS LYING DOWN
64
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS CLASPING HIS KNEES
65
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING A TURBAN
66
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS HIS HEAD COVERED 67
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS SITTING HIGHER 68
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON THE GROUND TO 69
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS SITTING ON A HIGHER SEAT
70
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING AHEAD
71
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING ON THE PATH WHI
72
I SHALL NOT STOOL OR URINATE WHILE STANDING
73
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT ON CROPS
74
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT INTO WATER 75
I SHALL WEAR THE UPPER ROBE CORRECTLY
1

I SHALL WEAR THE LOWER ROBE CORRECTLY
2
I SHALL WALK WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
3
I SHALL SIT WELL COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
4
I SHALL WALK WELL RESTRAINT IN INHABITED AREAS
5
I SHALL SIT WELL RESTRAINT IN INHABITED AREAS
6
I SHALL WALK WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
7
I SHALL SIT WITH EYES DOWN IN INHABITED AREAS
8
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
9
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ROBES HITCHED UP IN INHABITED AREAS
10
I SHALL NOT WALK LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
11
I SHALL NOT SIT LAUGHING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
12
I SHALL NOT WALK TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
13
I SHALL NOT SIT TALKING LOUDLY IN INHABITED AREAS
14
I SHALL NOT WALK SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
15
I SHALL NOT SIT SWAYING THE BODY IN INHABITED AREAS
16
I SHALL NOT WALK SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
17
I SHALL NOT SIT SWINGING THE ARMS IN INHABITED AREAS
18
I SHALL NOT WALK MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
19
I SHALL NOT SIT MOVING THE HEAD IN INHABITED AREAS
20

I SHALL NOT WALK WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS 21
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH ARMS IN AKIMBO IN INHABITED AREAS
22
I SHALL NOT WALK WITH MY HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
23
I SHALL NOT SIT WITH MY HEAD COVERED IN INHABITED AREAS
24
I SHALL NOT WALK OVER TOES OR HEELS IN INHABITED AREAS
25
I SHALL NOT SIT HOLDING UP THE KNEES IN INHABITED AREAS 26
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS CAREFULLY
27
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL
28
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
29
I SHALL ACCEPT ALMS LEVEL WITH THE RIM OF THE BOWL
30
I SHALL EAT ALMS CAREFULLY
31
I SHALL EAT ALMS WITH ATTENTION ON THE BOWL 32
I SHALL EAT ALMS EVENLY
33
I SHALL EAT ALMS IN PROPER PROPORTION
34
I SHALL NOT EAT DIGGING HOLES
35
I SHALL NOT HIDE CURRIES
36
I SHALL NOT ASK FOR RICE AND CURRIES
37
I SHALL NOT LOOK AT ANOTHER'S SHALL NOT WAY OF EATING TO FIND FAULT 38
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING UP EXTRA LARGE MOUTHFULS
39

I SHALL MAKE UP A ROUND MOUTHFUL
40
I SHALL NOT EAT WITH THE MOUTH OPEN
41
I SHALL NOT PUT THE FINGERS IN THE MOUTH
42
I SHALL NOT SPEAK WITH THE MOUTH FULL 43
I SHALL NOT EAT BREAKING FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE 44
I SHALL NOT EAT BITING INTO FOOD, UNLESS APPROPRIATE 45
I SHALL NOT EAT STUFFING OUT THE CHEEKS
46
I SHALL NOT EAT SHAKING THE HAND
47
I SHALL NOT EAT SCATTERING RICE
48
I SHALL NOT EAT PUTTING OUT THE TONGUE
49
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A CHAMPING SOUND
50
I SHALL NOT EAT MAKING A SUCKING SOUND
51
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE HAND
52
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE BOWL
53
I SHALL NOT EAT LICKING THE LIPS
54
I SHALL NOT ACCEPT A WATER POT WITH A SOILED HAND
55
I SHALL NOT THROW WATER WITH GRAINS OUT IN INHABITED AREAS
56
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS AN UMBRELLA IN HIS HAND
57
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A STICK IN HIS HAND
58

I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A KNIFE IN HIS HAND
59
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS A WEAPON IN HIS HAND
60
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING NON-LEATHER FO
61
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING LEATHER FOOTWE
62
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS IN A VEHICLE
63
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS LYING DOWN
64
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS CLASPING HIS KNEES
65
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WEARING A TURBAN
66
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO HAS HIS HEAD COVERED 67
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON THE GROUND TO 68
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE SITTING ON A LOWER SEAT
69
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHILE STANDING TO ONE SITTING 70
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING AHEAD
71
I SHALL NOT TEACH ONE WHO IS NOT SICK WHO IS WALKING ON THE PATH WHI
72
I SHALL NOT STOOL OR URINATE WHILE STANDING
73
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT ON CROPS
74
I SHALL NOT STOOL, URINATE OR SPIT INTO WATER
75

FAITH IN MIND

The Supreme Way is not difficult
If only you do not pick and choose.
Neither love nor hate,
And you will clearly understand.
Be off by a hair,
And you are as far apart as heaven from earth.
If you want it to appear,
Be neither for nor against.
For and against opposing each other --
This is the mind's disease.
Without recognizing the mysterious principle
It is useless to practice quietude.
The Way is perfect like great space,
Without lack, without excess.
Because of grasping and rejecting,
You cannot attain it.
Do not pursue conditioned existence;
Do not abide in acceptance of emptiness.
In oneness and equality,
Confusion vanishes of itself.
Stop activity and return to stillness,
And that stillness will be even more active.
Only stagnating in duality,
How can you recognize oneness?
If you fail to penetrate oneness,
Both places lose their function.
Banish existence and you fall into existence;
Follow emptiness and you turn your back on it.
Excessive talking and thinking
Turn you from harmony with the Way.
Cut off talking and thinking,
And there is nowhere you cannot penetrate.
Return to the root and attain the principle;
Pursue illumination and you lose it.
One moment of reversing the light

Is greater than the previous emptiness.
The previous emptiness is transformed;
It was all a product of deluded views.
No need to seek the real;
Just extinguish your views.
Do not abide in dualistic views;
take care not to seek after them.
As soon as there is right and wrong
The mind is scattered and lost.
Two comes from one,
Yet do not even keep the one.
When one mind does not arise,
Myriad dharmas are without defect.
Without defect, without dharmas,
No arising, no mind.
The subject is extinguished with the object.
The object sinks away with the subject.
Object is object because of the subject;
Subject is subject because of the object.
Know that the two
Are originally one emptiness.
In one emptiness the two are the same,
Containing all phenomena.
Not seeing fine or coarse,
How can there be any bias?
The Great Way is broad,
Neither easy nor difficult.
With narrow views and doubts,
Haste will slow you down.
Attach to it and you lose the measure;
The mind will enter a deviant path.
Let it go and be spontaneous,
Experience no going or staying.
Accord with your nature, unite with the Way,
Wander at ease, without vexation.
Bound by thoughts, you depart from the real;
And sinking into a stupor is as bad.
It is not good to weary the spirit.

Why alternate between aversion and affection?
If you wish to enter the one vehicle,
Do not be repelled by the sense realm.
With no aversion to the sense realm,
You become one wit true enlightenment.
The wise have no motives;
Fools put themselves in bondage.
One dharma is not different from another.
The deluded mind clings to whatever it desires.
Using mind to cultivate mind --
Is this not a great mistake?
The erring mind begets tranquility and confusion;
In enlightenment there are no likes or dislikes.
The duality of all things
Issues from false discriminations.
A dream, an illusion, a flower in the sky --
How could they be worth grasping?
Gain and loss, right and wrong --
Discard them all at once.
If the eyes do not close in sleep,
All dreams will cease of themselves.
If the mind does not discriminate,
All dharmas are of one suchness.
The essence of one suchness is profound;
Unmoving, conditioned things are forgotten.
Contemplate all dharmas as equal,
And you return to things as they are.
When the subject disappears,
There can be no measuring or comparing.
Stop activity and there is no activity;
When activity stops, there is no rest.
Since two cannot be established,
How can there be one?
In the very ultimate,
Rules and standards do not exist.
Develop a mind of equanimity,
And all deeds are put to rest.
Anxious doubts are completely cleared.

Right faith is made upright.
Nothing lingers behind,
Nothing can be remembered.
Bright and empty, functioning naturally,
The mind does not exert itself.
It is not a place of thinking,
Difficult for reason and emotion to fathom.
In the Dharma Realm of true suchness,
There is no other, no self.
To accord with it is vitally important;
Only refer to "not-two."
In not-two all things are in unity;
Nothing is not included.
The wise throughout the ten directions
All enter this principle.
This principle is neither hurried nor slow --
One thought for ten thousand years.
Abiding nowhere yet everywhere,
The ten directions are right before you.
The smallest is the same as the largest
In the realm where delusion is cut off.
The largest is the same as the smallest;
No boundaries are visable.
Existence is precisely emptiness;
Emptiness is precisely existence.
If it is not like this,
Then you must not preserve it.
One is everything;
Everything is one.
If you can be like this,
Why worry about not finishing?
Faith and mind are not two;
Non-duality is faith in mind.
The path of words is cut off;
There is no past, no future, no present.

Seng Ts'an
Third Patriarch of Ch'an

ÉÍÍÍ

consciousness that arise.

Meditation is not confined to a static, crossed-legged posture. This is especially true of insight (//vipassana//) meditation, which is a dynamic practice of paying close attention to what you are doing in whatever posture or situation you happen to be in. To establish meditative attention, a conscious orientation to one of the six-sense doors is necessary for getting your bearings and for being in the present moment context.

Try this Exercise in Orientating to a Sense-Door

Check! Where is your attention at this present moment? What sense impression is predominant now? Is it the eye-door as you view the page, the ear-door attracted by sounds or the touch sensations of the body's contact on the chair your sitting on. This //moment// is the time to establish the habit of being consciously present at a sense door and notice what is happening during a sense impression.

Stop now for a few minutes, choose a sense-door and be attentive to what is happening there: what feeling is present, what is the quality of that feeling, is it pleasant, unpleasant or neutral; the associated thought and particularly notice the changes. It is useful to make a habit of asking yourself //checking questions// on the practice during your daily routine: what sense door am I at?; what is happening there?; what are the associated feelings that arise?.

This strategy of being present at a sense-door ties in with the practical application and study of Dependent Origination, //Paticcasamuppada// or causality. As the meditator experiences the series of causal events, they can be intercepted at the linkage of either consciousness, sense impression and or feeling. The ability to do this gives you the potential of being free of the conditioned cycle of suffering that most people are unknowingly trapped in.

The Law of Dependent Origination is a profound subject, it is the very essence of the Buddha's Teachings. There is the famous exchange between the Buddha and his personal attendant, Ananda, when Ananda casually remarked that he thought it was an easy thing to understand. The Buddha responded by saying, "Not so Ananda, don't ever say such a thing. It's because people do not understand dependent origination, that they are not able to penetrate it, that their minds are befuddled. Just as a ball of twine becomes all tangled up and knotted, just so are beings ensnared and unable to free themselves from the wheel of existence, the conditions of suffering and states of hell and ruin".

How to untangle the tangle? (quote from the //Visuddhi Magga// -The Path of Purification)

The untangling is done by "insighting" into dependent origination through awareness //at a sense door//. What we are experiencing now is from a series of events that arose because of previous conditions and is linked as a causal chain of effects, i.e. as cyclic existence.

It is useful to have a working knowledge of the eleven links in the cycle of Dependent Origination. Even such theoretical knowledge will point you in the right direction to find out how to be free of it:

1 With Ignorance as a condition, Karmic Formations or Volitional Actions arise;

2 With Volitional Actions as a condition, Consciousness arises;

3 With Consciousness as a condition, Mentality/Materiality arises;

4 With Mentality/Materiality as a condition, The Six Sense Bases arise;

5 With The Six Sense Bases as a condition, Contact (sense impressions) arise;

6 With Sense Impressions as a condition, Feelings (//vedana//) arise;

7 With Feelings as a condition, Grasping arises;

8 With Grasping as a condition, Clinging arises;

9 With Clinging as a condition, Becoming arises;

10 With Becoming as a condition, Birth arises;

11 With Birth as a condition - Pain, old age, death arise, i.e. conditioned suffering.

Here is the enlightenment story of Bahiya, the wooden robed one, who was able to practice in this way. Bahiya was originally a merchant, who when travelling at sea with all his merchandise was shipwrecked and was cast ashore naked. He found bark to cover himself, and finding an old bowl, he went searching for alms-food. The local people were impressed by his seeming austerities and his reputation grew as an ascetic. He was tested when people offered him fine robes, but knowing that they would lose faith in him if he accepted, he refused keeping up the deception. Bahiya was installed in a temple and worshipped as an Arahant (an Enlightened One). So that in time he came to believe that he was actually an enlightened being.

He lived impeccably and gained good concentration powers. Sitting in meditation one day, it is said that a deva (who was a former blood-relation) was able to persuade Bahiya that he wasn't really enlightened at all and that he should go and see the Buddha, an Arahant who could help him.

Bahiya made a long journey to where the Buddha was at Savatthi and reached the monastery just as the Buddha was about to go on the daily alms-round. Bahiya had to request the Buddha to teach him the Dharma three times, before the Buddha would teach at such an inopportune time.

The Buddha then gave these brief instructions:
"Bahiya, you should train yourself in this way:
With the seen, there will be //just the seen//; with the heard, there will be //just the heard//; with the sensed (touched, tasted, smelt) there will be //just the sensed//; with the cognized, there will be //just the cognized//."

When for you, Bahiya, there is merely the seen, heard, sensed and cognized, then you will not be therein. Then you, Bahiya, will be neither here nor there nor within both - this is itself the end of suffering.

Through this brief instruction, Bahiya was immediately Enlightened - through non-clinging - thus becoming an Arahant.

Not long after the Buddha had departed, Bahiya was fatally gored by a cow. The Buddha returned from his alms-round and finding Bahiya dead, arranged for his cremation and a stupa to be built for him. When asked what the destiny of Bahiya was the Buddha said, that because he had grasped the meditation subject in the teachers presence, and practised as instructed according to the Dharma, Bahiya had attained Parinibbana - final Enlightenment.

<end of file>

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S of the Diamond Sangha traditionSESSHIN GUIDELINES(Note for Tanto: These guidelines abbreviated as you go.)At sesshin, we separate ourselves from our daily affairs and sink de question, "What is my essential nature?" In these special circumstances, we hold the convi human being like Shakyamuni Buddha and all succeeding founding teachers, may attain to potential as an enlightened person."At sesshin, we are free to be true to our hearts. We are transcend the background chatter of our busy, superficial minds, and to see into the fact of After this realisation, sesshin offers us the chance to make great progress on the broad path maturity.The procedures outlined below are designed to provide the optimum setting for true everyone attending this sesshin. If you have heard all this before, please listen carefully aga beginner's mind.I. THE THREE ESSENTIALS OF SESSHIN; l) Don't talk or whisper. 2) around. 3) Don't indulge in social greetings.These strictures are designed to free you of e concerns and make it easier to keep your zazen attention and awareness in everything that absolutely necessary for you to talk to a work leader - please do so as quietly and succinctly possible.Don't write notes to anyone, especially the cooks. Don't seek or give counsel to yo sister students.If you have any problem about logistics please refer to the Jisha. If you have problems, such as illness, an emergency or a personal problem, please refer to the Tanto. U urgent emergency, wait until the break period before approaching the leader.Avoid eye cont people. Don't bother to gassho to each other, and don't bother with the normal courtesies s another at doorways. The first to the doorway should simply go straight through.2. SCHED ARRANGEMENTS;The schedule and seating plan for the dojo are both posted outside the strictly to your allocated place and don't interfere with anyone else's mats or cushions.3.
CLOTHING:Clothing should be plain and dark coloured, preferably black. It should be loose wear shorts or singlets as shoulders should be covered.You may keep a jumper neatly folde case of cold weather. Don't use blankets to drape around yourself.Shoes: Shoes should be you step up onto the verandah and placed on the shoe shelf to keep the verandah quiet and leave the dojo, collect your shoes and sit on the verandah edge to put them on. The shoe s shoes. Hats and coats take up too much space.4. WATCHES:Unless you have a job which watch (leaders and cooks)don't wear one. Sesshin gives you a rare chance to forget time.5 LOTIONS:Don't wear strong-smelling perfume or aftershave. It can be distracting to your br sisters. Insect repellant and sunscreen is provided.6. PROMPTNESS AND ATTENDANCE early, and do not leave until you have been given the signal to do so. Do not enter or leave periods of zazen or during ceremonies or talks. Always attend every group function. If som emergency arises, speak to the Tanto about it. Do not ask to leave just because you are up can be important for your zazen. Your absence would inevitably disturb the group spirit. Ne speaking first with the Tanto. If you do, we will be obliged to search for you to be sure that y right, or even to suspend the sesshin so that everyone may look for you. It is not enough to the Tanto in such circumstances. Don't go too far away at the breaks or fall asleep in a far p won't be able to hear the han announcing the next period - always stay within earshot.7. TE (irrelevant at Gorricks Run)Don't use the phone or arrange for any calls to be made to you.

some urgent need to use the phone, please talk to the Tanto first. 8. DOORS:Be very carefu and closing doors to cause the least possible noise. Doors to be left open should be wedge position. Don't stand about in doorways. Move well clear, especially when entering or leavi WINDOWS:Don't touch windows in the dojo. The leaders will look after them for you.l0. SM are any smokers here, please only smoke during the breaks, and go far away. Wash your h coming back to the dojo, and don't smoke in your dojo clothes as the smell lingers on. Fire i at Gorrick's Run, so take extreme care when lighting matches, or stubbing out butts. Better smoke up here at all.11. WASHINGIt is important to prevent colds and other illnesses going group. Please wash your hands carefully before handling any food, and after work periods.
available every second day, alternating the upstairs and downstairs dojos, during the lunch l will be hot shower day for upstairs people. Conserve water by turning off the water supply w Half a bucket is ample. It is essential that you don't indulge in long showers as we have lots few showers.At Gorrick's Run there are two open showers, and one cubicle. Cold showers the creek, but do not wash off your soap into the creek. Take a bucket down with you, and w Up here, water is precious, please be mindful about how it is used. Do not wash hands, clo under running water. A mugful of water will suffice to wash soap off hands. If you notice oth water, tell the Jisha, who will remind people.During sesshin in hot weather it is most importa drink enough water to prevent dehydration. Make it a practice to have a cup of water every (The following pages contain guidlelines for meal ceremonies and signals. It has been our p those new to sesshin, or those who feel rusty about tea and meal ceremonies, to meet with to go through the following procedures. Note: Since Autumn l99l sesshin, people can conti servers enter dojo for seconds.) 12. TEA:When the server appears before you, bow with yo gasssho, then hold your cup or bowl beside that of your neighbour with one hand, while hold next to the cup, palm up. When the serving of tea is sufficient, raise your free hand smartly.
signal for the server to stop pouring. Be mindful of the server's line of vision and keep your hand close to the cup. Remember a brisk gesture communicatesmore clearly than a vague hand.13. MEALS:When the server appears before you for the first serving of a meal, bow w gassho. When the server extends a hand in your direction, place your bowl firmly in the paln hand, and then come to gassho. When the server has given you enough, rub your hands to accept something from each main dish during the first serving of a meal. While the server is neighbour, speed the serving process by helping yourself to those dishes within reasonable server rises to move on to the next group of people, bow again with your hands at gassho.
person to be served, bow holding your bowl in your left hand, resting it on your left thigh, and with your right hand. Avoid touching your food with fingers or eating utensils until eating beg to make your offering of a small quantity of grain, cereal or bread when the offering dish is p breakfast and noon, eating begins at the end of a sutra which is recited with your first bowl h at eye level. Take your first bite from this bowl before putting it down. At the evening meal, recited, and eating begins on a signal from the Ino.When the servers enter the dojo for the s you may continue eating unless you want a second helping. When the server nears your pla your hands to gassho without bowing If you indicate you do want more, the server will stop and you should hold out your bowl in the direction of the dish from which you wish to be serv of the meal, each person washes his or her bowls with tea and dries them with the cloth prov bowls have been washed, drink all the tea except a small amount, which is offered when the

it. Make this offering carefully and respectfully, as with the grain offering.There will be three the end of each meal. At the first, rise with your bowl. At the second, bow and straighten yo return to your regular place if you moved for the meal. At the third, bow, then goto your rest place.GENERAL MEAL CAUTIONS:Please handle your bowls and utensils quietly at all time the servers, or attempt signals other than those specified. Eat as heartily as you wish, but d behind in finishing. Eat everything you accept. Stay out of the kitchen unless you have an a Do not speak or write notes to the cooks for any reason. Food and food trips (such as fruita fasting) can be extremely preoccupying during sesshin. Make up your mind in advance that sesshin, you will let go of your particular convictions in this area, and will eat with the rest of of the group. Please avoid loading up on one or two particular dishes, or picking and choosi People who do not eat animal products need not take cheese or milk or eggs: they will be c not as ingredients in main dishes. Do not fast. Be circumspect about following these guidel will maintain your strength for zazen. If you have a medically assigned diet, special arrange made if they have not been already, by talking to the Jisha. Do not take food that has been those with special diets, ie rice crackers.l4. ENTERING AND LEAVING THE DOJO:Approa hands in the kinhin position, gassho at the door, facing the altar, then walk to your seat with the kinhin position. Keep to the sides of the dojo, rather than walking diagonally, and walk si briskly. Bow to your seat, turning so that you do not place your back to the altar as you do s again facing into the dojo and bow to the Sangha. Turn again, plump your zafu if necessary Gassho again whenever leaving the dojo, facing the altar, except when leaving to go to doku formal kinhin. 15. KINHIN:Kinhin or walking meditation is an opportunity to continue zazen walking, a transition from the cushion to the everyday world.Kinhin comes at the end of ever (with a few exceptions),and is signalled by the Jikijitsu with two bells. (Demonstrate bells)Wh the bells, gassho. Carefully unfold your feet and swing around on your cushion in the directi place your feet firmly on the floor and stand up. Wait there with your hands in the kinhin mu careful if your feet or legs have gone numb. Make sure the feeling has returned before atten
If necessary, remain seated on your cushion for the first round of kinhin and rejoin the line w comes round again. While everybody is standing, there will be a pause before the Jiki hits t people to leave the dojo to use the toilet or to join the dokusan line. If you wish to leave, gas walk briskly down the dojo with hands in kinhin position.The beginning of kinhin is signalled the clappers. You gassho then turn left and begin the slow walk with hands in kinhin mudra breathing to the number of footsteps and let your facial muscles relax into a half smile. Brea take you three steps, breathing in,two - whatever is natural. Remember your breath countin up with the person in front maintaining the same distance between you and that person. If a you have left the dojo, thatdistance can be quite a way. When the end of kinhin is approach will signal with a clap. Keep walking until you are at your place, then stop, face inwards and Jiki to lead a silent gassho which you join in. Then turn in the direction of the altar, gassho t cushion, and sit down. If you wish to pick up an extra cushion or use a chair, do so after the bow. You may leave the kinhin line to go to the toilet, to your job (cooks) or to the dokusan l at the beginning of kinhin as mentioned, or as the line passes the dojo door. Gassho as you line.To return to the line. If you return from the toilet while kinhin is going on, you may wait u empty place in the line comes past the dojo door, then gassho and rejoin the line. If your pla passed, wait at the dojo door until the end of kinhin, then when the sangha bows, gassho, a palace.Kinhin may be outdoors sometimes. This will be announced. Leave the dojo in line, t shoes and hat and join the line without attempting to keep to dojo positions.l6. TOILETS:At there are three toilets. Preferably pee outside behind the building, not in the space between

l7. FULL BOWS:When the Ino rings the inkin with an accelerando, there will be three full b (Demonstrate)l8. ZAZEN:If anyone is not familiar with the practice that we do here, or has n oriented into posture and breathing, please put up your hands and we'll go through that afte Warning. Please be very careful and aware of your bodies. Don't force yourself to maintain difficult positions. Feel free to use achair if you cannot stay on your cushions without pain.
cushions or kneeling benches if necessary. When getting up from sitting in cross-legged po cradle your knees. It is quite easy to damage knees.Relax down into your sitting position, m gently before settling down.Moving. Try to be as steady as possible throughout the sitting pe minor irritations. If it is necessary lto adjust your position because you are in pain, and you judge of this, do so carefully and slowly, keeping your practice going throughout. Be careful single unnecessary shift in position can set off a chain of moves.Using a chair: Use a chair sitting block rather than chopping and changing. Fold your zabuton in half. Remember to b zafu or bench at mealtimes. (Demonstrate)Neatness. Keep your place and yourselves tidy time.l9. NOTEBOOKS:Unless you are working on koans, don't write or read anything during is a wonderful opportunity to concentrate solely on the matter at hand. If you are writing and unobtrusively.20. SUTRAS:For the sutra period in the morning, the Shodoka reading, and c at night, sutra books will be handed out. Keep them on the back of your mat when not in us floor. When using them, hold them thus (demonstrate). Sutra books are not handed out be TEISHO or DHARMA TALK:There will be a teisho every day at 2.00 p.m. The Jiki will say, " and everyone stands at their place. After gassho, move with zafu to your place under the ch your hands in kinhin mudra, and wait for the Ino's signals. During the talk, sit formally in za until it is indicated that you may sit comfortably. 22. KYOSAKU:The kyosaku or Waking Stic request only. You may wish to be struck if you are feeling tired, have some tension in your r need some encouragement, are feeling stale and blocked, or for no reason at all. Don't pon won't I ask for the kyosaku?" as you hearthe footsteps approaching. Asking for it simply me hands to gassho when the stick is being walked, then inclining the head first to the left, then the stick. After the stick has been used, gassho again. Do not ask for it twice within the one kyosaku will be walked approximately every second period.23. IN THE MORNING:Get up a the 4 a.m. bell. Don't get up before the bell. Everyone should be in the dojo before 4.l5 a.m exercise period. 24. KENTAN:Towards the end of the first period of zazen each morning, th enter the room for kentan. This consists of his making his bows before the altar, then walkin line of students around the dojo. As he approaches your seat, raise your hands to gassho.

you, lower your hands to zazen mudra once again.25. END OF DAY:At the end of each day ceremony conducted by the Jiki and Jisha. Please bring your hands to gassho for the eveni sit up doing zazen after the last gassho but go straight to bed.26. ENDING OF SESSHIN:O
sesshin after sosan there will be a closing ceremony. After this, there will be a tea meditatio photo, then lunch. Arrangements for packing and cleaning up will be announced on the day SPIRIT:Join the group. Do everything our way and forget for the time being any other practi free time resting, washing or doing zazen or walking meditation. Enjoy your sesshin. Guard if it were a precious jewel.(On the following page are Dokusan Guidelines, for those who are sesshin, or for those who feel rusty.)DOKUSAN GUIDELINES Dokusan is a time for deeper ordinary conversation. l. Getting in line: When the dokusan bell rings, step to the dokusan l your place if your block has been called. If all places are filled, return to your seat and wait f vacancy. You may try again when you hear the dokusan bell ring twice, or when somebody but only if your block has been called. Do not delay taking your turn, but do not stampede t either. Do not bow when you leave the dojo for dokusan. Take your zafu or bench with you Consideration: Be considerate to slower, or older people when going to the dokusan line. C also consider pacing their dokusan particularly if the sesshin is full and there may not be tim everyone.3. Sosan: The first, last and on occasion middle dokusan of each sesshin is comp or sosan (pron: shosan). The Jisha will lightly tap your shoulder when it is your turn to go.
extend over two or three periods during the first day of sesshin. Everybody goes in order of dojo.4. In line: Continue your zazen while sitting in the dokusan line. Move up as the perso you moves ahead. Do not leave the line unless you intend to give up your place entirely. 5.
first in line, and you hear the teacher's bell ring, hit the kansho twice, loud enough for it to be the dokusan room and without further ceremony, walk to the edge of the verandah with your sandals on, and wait for the wait for the next bell to go to dokusan.6. Entering the dokusan your first full bow at the threshold of the dokusan room. Step immediately inside with your h allowing the person who has just finished dokusan to pass behind you and close the door as

Make another full bow in front of the teacher, then kneel on the zabuton in front of him and b dialogue.Tell the teacher your name initially, and your practice or koan. This is an opportuni deepening insight, not for ordinary conversation.When the bell rings, gassho, rise, and move door, which you open, then make a full bow near the threshold, wait for the next student to e then move behind them, out the door, which you close.7. Returning to the dojo: you may u after dokusan, but do not dawdle. If kinhin is in progress, wait till it is finished before re-entering.----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes
organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S of the Diamond Sangha tradition TRADITIONAL EVENING CLOSING CEREMONY.
as third repetition of Great Vows begins. At end ofGreat vows, Jiki on drum and Jisha on be time thus. If it isbefore 9 p.m., Jiki hits drum 8 times, and Jisha signals which third of the8th is, e.g. if l0 to 9, with three bells. Each bell denotes 20 minutes.If it is after 9 p.m., Jiki hits d times. and Jisha indicates what thirdit is with the bell. JIKI AND JISHA SHOULD AND SEPARATE, AS THOUGH ANSWERING EACH OTHER ACROS drum) X X X X X X x X (if before 9 pm) X X X X X X X x X (if after 9 p.m.)JISHA (On bell) O O O (if last third) O (if lst third) REPEAT FOR TOTAL OF THREE TIMES,
WITH FIVE SECOND INTERVALS BETWEEN. JIKI (On han) XJISHA I beg to urge you, everyone - life and death is a grave matter - all things pass quickly awayyyyyyyyyy..... Each of you must be completely alert, n neglectful, never indulgentttttttt.....JIKI (han) X X X X X X X (7 at 5 second intervals) Accelerando (about l5 seconds) X X X X X
(5 at 5 second intervals) Accelerando (about l5 seconds) X X X
(3 at 5 second intervals) Accelerando (about l5 seconds)
X X X (5 seconds)JISHA (Bell) OINO (Bell) OJIKI AND JISHA RETURN TO END OF SESSHIN CEREMONYJIKI: Sit facing in (when sosan nea finished)TANTO: Tanto walks the stick to close the dojo and prepares incense for ie two half sticks lit and one long standing by. Teacher enters, offers incens bows. Downstairs dojo joins upstairs dojo.TEACHER: Offers closing words for sess Hands out sutra books.INO: Leads Heart Sutra and End of Sesshin dedication, then Musical offering, then 3 bows.TANTO: Tells sangha what is to happen. Form circle fo leaving spaces for leaders. Tea and sharing follows, depending on th time available. Sesshin photo at end of tea.JISHA; Announces clean-up leaders and team straight after group photograph has been taken, in spirit of silence. COOK: Anno lunch on han. (Lunch may be served prior to cleaning up, depending on the time.)(G bell-of-mindfulness ringer: BODY, SPEECH & MIND IN PERFECTONENESS, I SEND MY
THE BELL,MAY THE HEARERS AWAKEN FROM FORGETFULNESS AND TRANSCEND who hear the bell: LISTEN, LISTEN, THIS WONDERFUL SOUND BRINGS ME BACK TO M SELF.)----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes
organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S of the Diamond Sangha traditionSESSHIN LEADERSHIP: INO ROLE4.25 a.m. Strike inkin drink tea. When all have finished, hit inkin again to signal return of wrapped teacu place behidnd zabutons.6.30 a.m. Ino leads meal chants (after Jiki has responde with inkin). After the 2 clap-dings (Ino on clappers, Jiki on inkin) which end meals a which are followed by a standing bow, bowls at eye level, participants replace bo straighten places, turn and stand with hands in kinhin position until Ino rings final inkin to dismiss sangha.8.30 a.m. Morning sutra ceremony. All sutras are done i except Hakuin Zenji's Song of Zazen and the dedication which follows it.
(Note: there are 2 dedications following Sho Sai Myo Kichijo Dharani. We First Sutra Dedication during sesshin, the other one during daily practice at Annan
There are 3 dedications following Kanzeon, "In the purity and clarity of the Dharmakaya" is used at the closing ceremony on the last day of sesshin. "Infinite r light and dark" is the daily dedication and "The Buddha and his teachers" is the rig use during sutra service.)ll.30 am Ino again leads meal sutras.l.55 pm Teisho is announced. When Jiki hits drum 3 times at 2.00 p.m. Ino says, "Please stand" and clappers full sound, length-to- length, then muted sound, length-to-end, at 5 secon intervals, ideally arriving on a full hit to coincide with arrival of teacher in dojo. As he bows, Ino bows, teacher reaches for incense (Tanto will offer it), Ino down clappers and picks up inkin. Hits inkin as teacher bows and begins accele bows, 4th standing bow when teacher is at his seat. He will come to gas to signal "On Opening the dharma". Then, after teisho, teacher's gassho signals " Vows".4.25 pm Approx. Jiki will say "Sit facing in for the reading" and Ino will lea Shodoka. If it is a large sesshin, the Ino should go early to dokusan to be sure to b in time for this.5.00 pm Supper. No sutras. Clappers are used to signal the beginning of meal and seconds. Meal ends with the usual clap-dings.8.50 pm Closing ceremony. Onc initiates the 3 bows, timing the inkin to coincide with the teacher's personal bow following his incense offering. When all are seated and sutra books have bee out, Ino leads Hakuin Zenji's Song of Zazen, followed by "The sky of samadhi" de then Great Vows. The ceremony ends with the Jiki on han and Jisha on and Ino on inkin (Bok, Bong, Ding- accelerando) initiating final 3 prostrations. Tea his final words, departs, Ino hits inkin, cushions are straightened, then final Inkin to dismiss for the night is hit by Jiki.----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes
organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S of the Diamond Sangha traditionAdditional notes for Jikijitsu during sesshin.All periods are 2 long exactly (unless the teacher specifies somethingdifferent). If, due to this rule, the last pe block is only 5 minutes long,it is 5 minutes long. Jiki hits han before all but the early morning
The diagram for this is withthe han, but it is important to have practised it prior to sesshin.4.
Jiki rings wake-up bell. Don't get up more than a couple of minutes before thi Head server may ask Jiki to start the water for tea. Light candle on altar and in Light the lamps at Gorrick's Run.4.l5 a.m. Jiki hits inkin once, stands with it, a second hit, lead to morning exercise area (if this is somewhere other than dojo) If the group is large enough to be split in two, Jisha leads second group in exercise. 4.25 a.m. inkin for fast kinhin, slow down after a couple of minutes. If out of dojo, hit inkin again as Jiki crosses threshhold. When all are at places, hit inkin again, bow an facing in for tea.4.55 a.m. Following kentan, when Roshi bows on threshhold just as he is leave the dojo, Jiki bows and reaches for bell to end period. If Roshi has not entered dojo by 4.55, end period anyway.6.30a.m. Head server strikes han with accel answers with inkin All stand up with bowls, Jiki hits inkin, all bow.
At the end of the meal, following last sutra, Ino hits clappers, Jiki hits inkin, Ino clappers, Jiki inkin, all rise with bowls at eye level, Jiki hits inkin, bowls put away, cushions straightened, Jiki dismisses on inkin.l0.00 a.m. Jiki leads long kinhin, outside if Go Run.l.55 p.m. Teisho: Jiki hits shijo once, says "Prepare for teisho" then goes out to hit han once as signal to teacher, and waits there.2.00 p.m. Jiki hits drum 3 times (if by som Jisha is still in the dojo at this time, Jiki should delay drum until Jisha is ready outs dokusan door.) 4.30 p.m. Around this time the Shodoka reading begins. This depends o kinhin. If a period began at 4.20 p.m., sit for 5 minutes. Jiki hits shijo once and says, "Prepare for reading" and hands round sutra books. Ino begins. Alwa about 5 minutes after Shodoka reading. If kinhin ends between 4.25 and 4.35, the of kinhin, Jiki says, "Sit facing in" and hands out sutra books. In this case, after reading, continue zazen for l0 minutes, then do kinhin. (Shdoka usually takes app l5 minutes to read.) Be sure there's enough time for kinhin before meal bell8.30 p.m. of last kinhin, Jiki says, "Sit facing in". If dokusan is over, and Roshi is not in the d by 8.55 p.m., go ahead with evening ceremony.
----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes
organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S of the Diamond Sangha traditionDOKUSAN/SOSAN/INTERVIEWSThe following are notes f interview procedure & times.Sosan (pronounced SHOSAN), happens Day l, 4 and 7 during strictly in dojo order, Jisha tapping each person on the shoulder, taking about 6 at a time. Ji head of line, and hits bell for everybody during sosan, whereas at other times, Jisha only hits person. To start sosan, or any block of interviews, teacher rings bell, Jisha replies with an ac teacher rings again, then Jisha rings 2 open bells. Jisha indicates that first in line actually w verandah edge with shoes on to save time crossing to hojo. Jisha has to establish with tea he wants to finish, so that Jisha can estimate when to close the line. Maintain communicatio line: to signal all have completed interviews for time being, ring 3 open bells, then l mute, l c then returns to dojo.Ordinary dokusan/interviews happen other days at 5.l0 a.m., 3.00 p.m. a
These are done in blocks, or as upstairs and downstairs dojos, when sitting at Gorrick's Run begin, Jisha announces "Block l for dokusan/interviews" or whatever is appropriate. When a an end, Jisha announces "Last call for block l", then "Block 2 for dokusan."

IF YOU NEED TO MAKE ANY ANNOUNCEMENTSIt is best to make these after meals, b

NOTES ON SITTING UP ON LAST NIGHT - YASATeacher announces "sitting up lat and then Jisha goesinto details about what the guidelines are.Prepare beds first, so as to mi disturb others when you decide tofinish your yasa. People not sitting up have priority.Don't u incense, bells or candles.Last person remember to turn off light, close doors. Addition explanatory notes for Jisha during sesshin.Make sure Roshi has list of sesshin participants a in dojo.Jisha should ensure hojo altar is set up, bell, incense/candles, ready.May need lamp for early morning and evening dokusan.4.55 a.m. After Kentan, when Ros leaves the dojo, follow him out after he has bowed. Go into dokusan room, light candle and incense, check water. Check Roshi on when to start dokusan. Set up dokusan line. SOSAN: Tanto goes first on Day l. Except for sosan, Jisha always goes first to dokusan.6.l5 a.m. Stop the dokusan, noting down in order those returned to dojo unseen. Jisha goes in to Roshi after last person, then returns to dojo.8.30-ll.30 a.m. Unless otherwise mentioned by Roshi, usually no dokusan in this block. (Dokusan is pronounced with short 'o' as DOKSAN.)l.55 p.m. Jisha sees Teisho area (chestnut tree) is organised with Roshi zabuton/zafu water, tape recorder standing by.

Tanto waits with incense. Jisha picks up incense from Tanto and goes and waits outside Roshi's door.2.00 p.m. When Jiki beats drum 3 times, Jisha knocks fast on Roshi's door 3 times, enters, bows, picks up teisho notes, bows, then leads Roshi to dojo. Bow at dojo door, follow Roshi in. Bow to altar. Place teisho notes on mat and come down right hand side of dojo, hand over incense, and return to seat near lectern.approx 2.30 p.m.
After teisho, follow Roshi out with notes. Bow, turning book so that arrow on cloth faces Roshi, give it to him and bow.
Return to dojo.3.05 p.m. approx.
(Check Roshi for dokusan time) Enter dokusan room, light candle, incense, pick up people left over from morning in correct order. Then announce BLOCK1 FOR (or whatever) after morning people have left, then go to dokusan line. Roshi rings handbell. Jisha accelerando (l0 secs). Roshi rings bell.
Jisha ring twice, then go yourself. (Remember for Sosan, Jisha rings bell for people)ends 4.45/4.50 p.m.
TO FINISH OFF DOKUSAN: 3 open bells, l closed bell, l open bell AFTER Roshi's bell. Put bell & cushions away and return to dojo.6.55 p.m. Kinhin Jisha sets up line, lights incense, candle, lamp, checks Roshi's water and start time.7.00 p.m. approx. after bells Jisha picks up any leftover peop announces X BLOCK FOR DOKUSAN8.50/9.00 p.m. approx Nobody in to dokusan after 8.45 p.m. (check with Roshi). Close dokusan line (bells as above) return to dojo.----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or
COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 30 March
1992]----------This document describes
organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the S
of the Diamond Sangha traditionSCHEDULE FOR TRADITIONAL SEVEN-DAY SESSHIN D LEADERS' ROLES THROUGHOUT THE DAY.TIME LEADER ACTION_____ Rings bell to wake up everybody. (Jiki has map of people/tents)4.l5 A.M. JIKI Rings bell x l - all stand up.
"Spread out for exercise"4.20 A.M. JIKI Clap x l and form kinhin line. Kinhin should last for 5 minutes. Clap x l when approaching own zafu.
JIKI Leads silent bow.
'Sit facing in for tea' Open cups/cloths.
Servers enter dojo on own initiative and serve tea. When servers leave, INO Inkin x l Bow, drink, wrap cups. INO Inkin x l (Don't wait for slow ones) Bow, return cups behind zabutons.
TANTO Lights incense, picks up kyosaku, bows to Buddha, Dharma and Sangha, then stands with stick down showing calligraphy. JIKI Clap x l just as Tanto puts stick down, ready to walk.
TANTO Stick down, calligraphy facing into dojo, Tanto walks once around dojo; stick up return to starting point, again bow to Sangha, Dharma, Buddha and replaces stick on altar.
JIKI As soon as Tanto bows to Buddha, Jiki hits 3 bells for beginning of zazen.
Everybody should be in dojo by now. If anybody is missing from their place, Tanto should go get them.4.53 A.M.
TANTO Lights second candle, breaks one piece of(hears Roshi coming) incense in half, puts one on either side of incense holder, lit (waiting incense). Takes out stick of long incense for teacher.
4.55 A.M. TEACHER Enters dojo for Kentan. Tanto lights incense and hands to teacher.
JIKI On teacher's final bow at exit, Jiki picks up striker, waits until teacher out of the dojo, then hits bells for end of period.

Kinhin then zazen for three periods with dokusan/shosan.6.20 A.M. COOK Hits han x 3.
SERVERS Exit to kitchen, to prepare trays.
6.30 A.M. HEADSERVER Accelerando on umpan. JIKI Be ready with inkin and hit as soon as accelerando finishes. Everyone rises with bowls.
JIKI Hits inkin x l to bow with bowls. Sit.
INO Leads meal ceremony as per cards.
During meal, if anything slows down, Ino says, "Pass fruit salad along" etc. INO & JIKI At very end of meal sutras, Ino hits inkin x l and Jiki hits clapper x l twice.
(Important to do this briskly.) JIKI Hits inkin x l, we bow with wrapped bowls, tidy cushions then Jiki hits final inkin.7.l5 A.M.
SANGHA Samu. LEADERS Leaders meeting with teacher.8.00 A.M. SANGHA Tea and bikkies on verandah. 8.20 A.M JIKI Hits han as per instructions.8.30 A.M. INO Hits inkin after last hit on han for three bows. Sit facing in for sutras. JIKI Hands out sutra books briskly.
Down- stairs leader does likewise.
INO Lead morning sutras (no "Song of Zazen") and include "Dedication for morning at sesshin". If it is necessary to announce page number, don't wait to start. At end of sutra service, Great Vows, then 3 bows. JIKI Collects sutra books, then leads kinhin. 9-ll.30 A.M. ALL Zazen for five periods. Probably outside kinhin around l0 a.m (check Roshi).ll.20 A.M. COOK Hits han x 3. Servers leave dojo.
Brings in lunch offering for altar.ll.30 A.M. HEADSERVER Accelerando on umpan. JIKI Hits inkin straightaway, all rise.
INO Meal sutras as per card.
At end of meal, Ino hits inkin x l, JIKI
Jiki hits clapper x l, repeat, then stand Jiki hits inkin, bow with bowls, tidy up cushions, then Jiki hits final inkin.NOON SANGHA Rest period. (Removal of offering)l.00 P.M.
" " Tea on verandahl.20 P.M. JIKI Hits han.
1.30 P.M. JIKI Hits clappers

once then 3 bells to start period.l.55 P.M.
JIKI Hits bell x l "Prepare for Teisho".
Goes straight out and hits han x l as signal to teacher. JISHA Sees everything is ready: Roshi's mat, water, tape-recorder, en route to the chestnut tree TANTO Lights stick for Jisha to take to teacher.
JISHA Walks towards Tanto who is holding incense on thumbs, gasshos and takes incense in same manner, leaves dojo without bowing at exit and goes to teacher's quarters, carries his papers.
JIKI Hits drum 3 times. INO
"Please stand". Hits clappers, with five second intervals, first loud, then soft, ending on a loud clap when teacher reaches dojo entrance. JISHA Bows to teacher, follows him in, bow to altar, places papers at teacher's place, goes straight to altar. Teacher bows, Jisha hands him incense, and as teacher bows on placing incense INO Hits inkin for 3 bows, then standing bow to altar, then when teacher in place, Ino hits inkin x l to bow to each other, then all sit formally. When teacher's hands to gassho, Ino starts "On opening the Dharma" on big bell. Dharma talk follows.
At end of talk, teacher's hands to gassho, Ino starts "Great Vows" then 3 bows. At final bow to altar, teacher leaves. JISHA Picks up notes and follows Roshi. INO Hits inkin when Jisha/teacher gone.
All return to dojo. JIKI Claps for kinhin as usual. Four periods of zazen follow, with dokusan starting around 3.05 pm.4.30 P.M. JIKI Hits bell x l and says, "Prepar for reading" then hands out books.
INO Announces page number, hits bell,
"Shodoka", starts reading. JIKI

Wait five minutes after reading to collect books.
(Make sure there is time for kinhin before evening meal.)4.50 P.M. COOK Hits han x 3. Servers exit dojo. Cook enters dojo with offering.5.00 P.M. HEADSERVER Acceleranda on umpan/ha JIKI Hits inkin x l at end of accelerando.
All stand with bowls. Jiki hits inkin and all bow, sit. INO Leads silent bow to unwrap bowls. SERVERS Enter dojo after bow. (No bells)
INO Bow to start offering, and when servers have left dojo, clap x l to eat. Clap x l for seconds. SERVERS Bring in tea. All wash bowls. INO Bow to pass offering jug along. Wrap bowls. Ino hits inkin x l, JIKI clap x l, repeat, stand, inkin x l, bow tidy cushions, inkin x l, bow.5.30 P.M. ALL Rest period.6.20 P.M. JIKI Hits han.
6.30 P.M. JIKI Rings inkin x 3 - no clapper.
Normal zazen, dokusan until last period.
JIKI Judges when last kinhin will be by checking dokusan line - should begin 8.30 - 8.35 P.M. At end of kinhin, says, "Sit facing in."8.40 P.M. TANTO Holding kyosaku up for first round of dojo, and down for second, Tanto closes dojo. JIKI Clap x l as Tanto holds stick up to start walking, and when Tanto does final bow to Buddha, Jiki hits bell x 3 to signal start of zazen period.
JISHA At end of interviews, Jisha rings last bell. TANTO Lights incense and candle. TEACHER Comes in and bows to altar.
INO Have inkin ready in hand to hit as teacher is at bottom of bow, then accelerando for 3 bows. Sit facing in. JIKI Hands out sutra books. INO Lead evening service, Song of Zazen, Evening Dedication, Great Vows - no accelerando at end of this. JIKI & JISHA Leave dojo at end of second round of Vows for closing ceremony. (see notes for details) INO At last hit of closing ceremony, inkin x l, then three bows.

TEACHER Final words for the night. Leaves. INO Hits inkin x l, all bow, tidy up. JIKI Hits inkin x l, bow at waist, leave.----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]

[Last updated: 15 October 1995]

This document describes organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the Sydney Zen Center of the Diamond Sangha tradition

SESSHIN CAUTIONS

(Tanto speaks.)
At sesshin, we separate ourselves from the concerns and preoccupations of our busy every day lives and sink deeply into the question, "What is my essential nature?" In these special training circumstances we are free to devote ourselves entirely to the practice of realising the Buddha Way.

At sesshin we are free to be true to our hearts. We are free to transcend the background chatter of our busy minds and to see into the fact of our own nature. Sesshin offers us the chance to make great progress on the broad path of maturity.

The forms and procedures which follow are designed to establish an optimum setting for true Zen training for everyone attending sesshin, a structure which supports each of us in giving full attention to the matter at hand. At the same time, internalising the guidelines, and practising them mindfully, creates an environment for the entire group which fosters and expresses our deepest aspirations.

There is a lot to remember. It is all right to make mistakes. You will find that you will pick it up as sesshin continues. Just practice with sincerity. If you have heard all this before, please listen carefully again with beginner's mind.

The three essentials of sesshin.

I. Don't talk or whisper.

2. Don't look around.
3. Don't greet people or make gestures.

If a practice-related problem arises and it is necessary to speak to someone about it, speak only to the Tanto or to the Teacher in dokusan. If a work-related problem arises, speak only to your work leader - the head vegetable chopper, the head server etc, or to the Jisha. Don't speak or write notes to the cooks or to anyone else. Don't give advice or seek help from your fellow students. Let the sesshin leaders and the Teacher handle any difficulties.

Your eyes should be kept lowered. Eye contact is distracting during sesshin. Don't signal others with gestures. Don't greet or acknowledge your friends as you come and go in sesshin. Continue your zazen at all times. Keeping your hands in kinhin position whenever possible will help to bring you back to your practice. During work periods, bring all your attention to the task at hand.

Schedule and seating arrangements: The schedule and seating plan for the dojos are both posted outside the door. Please keep strictly to your allocated place and don't interfere with anyone else's mats or cushions.

Clothing. Clothing should be plain and dark coloured, preferably black. It should be loose-fitting. Don't wear shorts or singlets. You may keep a jumper folded at your place in case of cold weather.

Watches. Unless you have a job which requires wearing a watch - leaders and cooks - don't wear one. Sesshin gives us a rare chance to forget time.

Perfumes and lotions. Don't wear strong-smelling perfume or aftershave, it can be distracting. Insect repellant lotion and sunscreen is provided on the shelf outside the door.

Promptness and attendance. Attend every group function. Always be at your place early. If you are not at your place, someone will have to go looking for you. Don't come in after the bells have rung.

Don't go too far away at the breaks or fall asleep in a far paddock, you won't be able to hear the han announcing the next period. Always stay within earshot. Don't leave the dojo until you have the signal to do so.

If some emergency arises, speak only to one of the leaders about it. Do not leave a note. Do not ask to leave sesshin just because you are upset. Such times can be important for your zazen. Your absence inevitably would disturb the group spirit. Never leave sesshin wtihout speaking first to one of the leaders and to the Teacher.

Doors and windows. Be careful when opening and closing doors to cause the least possible noise. Doors to be left open should be hooked into position. Don't stand about in doorways. Don't touch the windows in the dojo. The leaders will look after them for you.

Shoes. The verandah is a shoes-off area to save trekking grass into the dojo. Sit on the edge of the verandah, take your shoes off and carry them to the shoeshelf. Don't leave them higgledy piggledy on the verandah, where they may block the doors. Come to the dojo via the stone step near the double doors to avoid treading around the verandah.

Smoking: If there are smokers here, please only smoke during breaks and go far away, taking care when lighting matches or stubbing out butts. Wash your hands afterwards and don't smoke in your sitting clothes. Better still, don't smoke up here at all.

Hygiene: Please wash your hands carefully before handling any food, and after work periods. Water is precious here. Don't wash hands, clothes or utensils under running water. Put the plug in the basin.

Dehydration: Remember to drink plenty of water if the weather is warm. Don't squirrel mugs away in your tent or there won't be enough to go round at morning and afternoon tea time.

Toilets: There are three pit toilets here. Just use them for shitting, ladling out some lime every other time. Put the lid down when you're through, and close the latch on the toilet door as a signal the toilet is unoccupied. Pee outside, discreetly. Just avoid peeing between the dojo and hojo area.

Showers: At Gorricks Run there are two open showers and one cubicle and there will be hot showers in the lunch break, alternating dojos every day, tomorrow showers for people in the upstairs dojo, the next day, downstairs. Cold showers may be taken during the other breaks or you may want to take a bucket down to the creek but please soap up and rinse well away from the creek.

Dojo Cautions:

(Tanto speaks, Jikki demonstrates)

Entering the dojo.

1) Step into the dojo, bow in the direction of the altar. This is your bow to the Buddha. Do this every time you come in, even if you are only fetching a cushion.

2) If you are coming in for zazen, place your hands in the kinhin position and walk quietly around the edge of the dojo to your seat as others will be already sitting.

3) Bow towards your seat. This is your bow to the Dharma.

4) Turning in the direction of the altar, face the room and bow. This is your bow to the Sangha.

5) Turning in the direction of the altar, take your seat. Plump up your cushion if necessary.

Leaving the Dojo.

When you leave the dojo, bow to the Buddha at the door. There are two instances when you do not do this, when you are leaving to go to dokusan and when you are leaving during kinhin (bow as you step out of the line but not at the door.)

In the Dojo.

Please walk quietly in the dojo and keep your hands in kinhin position. The only exception to this is when you leave to go to dokusan, then your hands should be in gassho and your cushion under your arm.

Sit still during zazen, chanting and other activities in the dojo. Ignore minor irritations. If it is necessary to adjust your position because you are in pain, and you must be the judge of this, do so carefully and slowly, keeping your practice going throughout. Be careful though - a single shift in position can set off a chain of moves.

Extra cushions, benches and knee pads are stored under the stairs. There are chairs outside the dojo to use if your knees are sore. Please be very careful and aware of your bodies.

(Jikki demonstrates use of chair.)

Stay with the chair for an entire block of sitting but remember to be sitting on your cushion or bench for mealtimes.

If you feel a sneeze or a cough coming, do not hesitate to cover your mouth., At such times, consideration for others should be your first concern.

From time to time during the sesshin day, the Jikki Jitsu will say, "please sit facing in". Those in the centre block cannot do this. Just stay as you are.

Kinhin

(Tanto speaks, Jikki and other leaders demonstrate:)

When you hear the bell ring twice, it is time for kinhin.

Still sitting on your cushion, bow.

Rock gently from side to side.

Turn around on your cushion in the direction of the altar.

Stand up and place your hands in kinhin position. If your foot has gone to sleep, be careful when standing. It's all right to stay sitting down until you can safely stand. If you can't join the kinhin line when it begins, wait on your cushion until your place comes back. Then gassho and join the line.

Gassho when you hear the Jikki's clappers. Turn to your left and start walking. The Jikki sets the pace. Please keep up with the person in front.

Keep your head up and your eyes lowered in kinhin. There will sometimes be extended outside kinhin. Continue your zazen practice during kinhin and at all other times, keying your breath to your steps.

The Jikki will clap the clappers before you reach your cushion to let you know kinhin is finishing. Stop at your place with your back to your cushion.

Gassho with everybody together then turn in the direction of the altar to face your place. gassho again and take your seat.

(Tanto speaks, Jikki and others demonstrate)

If you need to leave the dojo during kinhin to get a drink, go to the toilet or attend to some sesshin job, you may leave in the following ways:

1) Go quickly when you hear the bell struck twice for kinhin, especially if you are heading for the toilets. Gassho at the door.

2) If you cannot leave quickly, walk in the kinhin line until you get to the door. Gassho as you leave the line but not at the door.

3) If the person in front of you leaves, maintain the gap.

4) When you return to the dojo, wait near the door until your place in the line comes round. Gassho quickly and step in.

5) Sometimes you cannot rejoin the line. Your place has already passed or you are too late. In this situation, wait near the door until the line has stopped. Bow with the final bow. Only then return to your place. Also if you need to fetch a chair or another cushion you must wait for the final bow of kinhin. The principle is "everyone moves together."

Kinhin is not a rest period. Leave the line only to go to the toilet or to get a drink or if you need to attend to some sesshin duty, such as cooking. If you need to go to the toilet, leave promptly so you will be back in the dojo before the bells ring for the next period of zazen.

Early Morning Procedures

(Tanto speaks, other leaders demonstrate:)

The bell will be rung at 4 am. Get up quickly and go to the dojo.

Kentan. The first period of zazen is sat facing in. Towards the end of this, the Teacher will enter the dojo for kentan. The Teacher first bows to the altar and then walks slowly round the dojo. As he/she approaches your place, raise your hands in gassho but do not bow. After the Teacher has passed, lower your hands to zazen mudra again.

Kyosaku and Massage

I(no speaks, other leaders demosnstrate.)

The kyosaku is an effective way to relieve tiredness and tension, in the shoulders or on either side of the lower back. The sound of the kyosaku, as with all other sounds, brings us back to our practice. The kyosaku and brief massage will be offered during this sesshin but only at your request.

To request the kyosaku on the shoulders, when you hear one of the leaders walking behind you, raise your hands in gassho. When the leader taps your shoulder, lower your hands to zazen mudra. Do not tense your shoulders but move your head to the side and pull long hair out of the way.

If you would like to be hit on the lower back, raise your hands in gassho and lean right forward.

To request a brief massage, do a tea ceremony bow with hands on knees.

When the leader has finished, gassho. The leader walking the kyosaku may adjust your posture.

Sutras.

(Ino speaks, other leaders demonstrate.)

1) To request a sutra book, hands are at gassho.

2) When you use the book, hold it well up with your three middle fingers outside and thumb and little finger inside.

3) When you are not using the book, lay it on the mat beside you, not on the floor.

4) Most of the chants are recited with hands in gassho. For the first day or two, watch the leaders.

Teisho. (Tanto speaks)

There will be a teisho every afternoon. The Jiki will say, "Prepare for Teisho" and everyone stands at their place. When the weather is fine, we will sit under the chestnut tree. Carry your zafu across and wait for the Ino's signals. During the talk, sit formally in zazen position until it is indicated you may sit comfortably.

Dokusan. (Tanto speaks)

It is important to meet the Teacher in dokusan. Dokusan is a chance for creativity and mutual deepening. The Teacher's intention is to guide us towards realisation of our essential nature, not to judge us.

Dokusan is a time to ask questions about our practice. You don't have to have a reason to go. Say what is in your heart. If you have nothing to say, that's all right. Tell the Teacher you have nothing to say. This is your presentation.

Dokusan is completely confidential. The Teacher does not discuss it with anyone else and it is requested that you keep your side private. The teaching given to you may be harmful medicine for someone else.

(Jisha speaks.)

On the first and last days of sesshin, everybody goes to dokusan in turn, tapped by the Jisha. This is called sosan. The Jisha will say, "Sosan - please wait until you are tapped." When you are tapped, take your zafu to your place on the verandah. The Jisha will ring the bell for sosan.

At other times, the Jisha will call "Upstairs dokusan" or "downstairs dokusan". Stay seated until the Teacher rings the bell, the Jisha does an accelerando, the Teacher rings again, and finally the Jisha rings twice, the signal for dokusan to begin. You may leave the dojo at this point and take your place in the line outside.

You may also leave the dojo for dokusan when kinhin starts, at the end of kinhin, when you hear Jisha's two bells, or when somebody else comes back from dolusan. This helps to cut the coming and going to a minimum.

If you are a cook or a leader and you cannot wait in the dokusan line, stand next to the person standing. If it's you at the head of the line and one of the leaders or a cook stands beside you, let them go in first.

When the person in front of you leaves the dokusan line, take up the bell-stick and wait for the Teacher's bell. When you hear it, ring the bell twice, pick up your zafu and shoes and move to the edge of the verandah. Continue your practice while you wait. When you next hear the Teacher's bell, leave your zafu behind and set off for the hojo with your hands in kinhin position. Leave your shoes on the verandah and step into the room. Do a full bow at the threshhold, close the door and turning to the Teacher, do a full bow, then sit down in front of the Teacher in any formal zazen position. (Not full bows for apprentice teachers)

Give your practice - "I am doing Mu" or "My practice is counting my breath" - whatever.

Leaving dokusan
(Jisha speaks)

1) When the teacher rings the bell, do a tea ceremony bow as you sit.

2) Stand up and gassho, then move towards the door, which you open, and make a full bow on the threshold again.

3) Put on your shoes, return to the dojo with your hands at gassho, collect your cushion and return to the dojo in the ordinary way, unless kinhin is in progress, in which case follow kinhin procedure.

4) You may wish to use the toilet or drink some water after dokusan. Do this mindfully and return to the dojo without delay.

Meals

(Ino speaks)

Please handle your bowls and utensils quietly. Don't speak to servers or attempt signals other than those specified. Remember a brisk gesture communicates to servers more clearly than a vague wave of your hand. Eat everything you accept. Stay out of the kitchen unless you have an assignment there. People with medically assigned diets will have separate dishes sometimes which will be labelled. Do not take them unless you have notified the planners. Has anybody questions about formal tea and meals?

General rules for sesshin:
(Tanto speaks)

Do not read or take notes in the dojo. There should be no books except sutra books in the dojo. Unless you are working on koans, don't write or read anything during sesshin. Sesshin is a wonderful opportunity to concentrate solely on the matter at hand. If you are writing and reading, do so unobtrusively.

It is important to be careful of personal hygiene during sesshin as infection can spread very quickly. There is a supply of basic medicines should you require them.

At the end of each day there is a closing ceremony conducted by the Jiki and Jisha. Do not sit up doing zazen after the last gassho but go straight to bed.

These rules and procedures provide us with a conversation-free structure that we come to know. This security sets us free to settle into our depths.

Sangha Spirit
(Tanto speaks)

Wholeheartedly joining in is the key to a fulfilling sesshin. If you come from another discipline, please put it aside during sesshin and join with us. Engage in the timetable of activities, and in your free time have a sleep, go for a walk etc. With this spirit, relaxing or working, everything becomes zazen.

Join the group. Do everything our way and forget for the time being any other practice. Spend your free time resting, washing or doing zazen or walking meditation. There's a lot to remember. Most of it is learned as you do sesshin. Just do your best and feel free to make mistakes. No one is judging you.

The term "sesshin" means "to settle the mind, to touch the mind, to convey the mind". Each day provides a myriad opportunities to continue this practice. Essentially, each moment contains everything we need. Doing zazen moment by moment opens us up to these possibilities, allowing us to settle into our depths.

Enjoy your sesshin. Guard every moment as if it were a precious jewel.

---

end of file

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP and/or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[Last updated: 28 November 1993]

This document describes organizational details of sesshin (a Zen meditation retreat) as practiced by members of the Sydney Zen Center of the Diamond Sangha tradition

SESSHIN GUIDELINES

(Note for Tanto: These guidelines can be considerably abbreviated as you go.)

At sesshin, we separate ourselves from our daily affairs and sink deeply into the question, "What is my essential nature?" In these special circumstances, we hold the conviction, "I, too, a human being like Shakyamuni Buddha and all succeeding founding teachers, may attain to my own fullest potential as an enlightened person."

At sesshin, we are free to be true to our hearts. We are free to transcend the background chatter of our busy, superficial minds, and to see into the fact of our own nature. After this realisation, sesshin offers us the chance to make great progress on the broad path of maturity.

The procedures outlined below are designed to provide the optimum setting for true Zen training for everyone attending this sesshin. If you have heard all this before, please listen carefully again with beginner's mind.

l. THE THREE ESSENTIALS OF SESSHIN;

l) Don't talk or whisper.

2) Don't look around.

3) Don't indulge in social greetings.

These strictures are designed to free you of everyday concerns and make it easier to keep your zazen attention and awareness in everything that you do.

If it is absolutely necessary for you to talk to a work leader - please do so as quietly and succinctly as possible.

Don't write notes to anyone, especially the cooks. Don't seek or give counsel to your brother and sister students.

If you have any problem about logistics please refer to the Jisha. If you have any other problems, such as illness, an emergency or a personal problem, please refer to the Tanto. Unless there is an urgent emergency, wait until the break period before approaching the leader.

Avoid eye contact with other people. Don't bother to gassho to each other, and don't bother with the normal courtesies such as waiting for another at doorways. The first to the doorway should simply go straight through.

2. SCHEDULE AND SEATING ARRANGEMENTS;

The schedule and seating plan for the dojo are both posted outside the door.

Please keep strictly to your allocated place and don't interfere with anyone else's mats or cushions.

3. CLOTHING:

Clothing should be plain and dark coloured, preferably black. It should be loose-fitting. Don't wear shorts or singlets as shoulders should be covered. You may keep a jumper neatly folded at your place in case of cold weather. Don't use blankets to drape around yourself.
Shoes: Shoes should be removed before you step up onto the verandah and placed on the shoe shelf to keep the verandah quiet and clean. When you leave the dojo, collect your shoes and sit on the verandah edge to put them on. The shoe shelf is just for shoes. Hats and coats take up too much space.

4. WATCHES:

Unless you have a job which requires wearing a watch (leaders and cooks) don't wear one. Sesshin gives you a rare chance to forget time.

5. PERFUMES & LOTIONS:

Don't wear strong-smelling perfume or aftershave. It can be distracting to your brothers and sisters. Insect repellant and sunscreen is provided.

6. PROMPTNESS AND ATTENDANCE;

Always be at your place early, and do not leave until you have been given the signal to do so. Do not enter or leave the dojo during periods of zazen or during ceremonies or talks. Always attend every group function. If some extreme emergency arises, speak to the Tanto about it. Do not ask to leave just because you are upset. Such times can be important for your zazen. Your absence would inevitably disturb the group spirit. Never leave without speaking first with the Tanto. If you do, we will be obliged to search for you to be sure that you are all right, or even to suspend the sesshin so that everyone may look for you. It is not enough to leave a note for the Tanto in such circumstances. Don't go too far away at the breaks or fall asleep in a far paddock. You won't be able to hear the han announcing the next period - always stay within earshot.

7. TELEPHONE; (irrelevant at Gorricks Run)

Don't use the phone or arrange for any calls to be made to you. If there is some urgent need to use the phone, please talk to the Tanto first.

8. DOORS:

Be very careful when opening and closing doors to cause the least possible noise. Doors to be left open should be wedged or hooked into position. Don't stand about in doorways. Move well clear, especially when entering or leaving the dojo.

9. WINDOWS:

Don't touch windows in the dojo. The leaders will look after them for you.

l0. SMOKING:

If there are any smokers here, please only smoke during the breaks, and go far away. Wash your hands and face before coming back to the dojo, and don't smoke in your dojo clothes as the smell lingers on. Fire is a real hazard at Gorrick's Run, so take extreme care when lighting matches, or stubbing out butts. Better still, don't smoke up here at all.

11. WASHING

It is important to prevent colds and other illnesses going round the group. Please wash your hands carefully before handling any food, and after work periods. Hot showers will be available every second day, alternating the upstairs and downstairs dojos, during the lunch break. Tomorrow will be hot shower day for upstairs people. Conserve water by turning off the water supply while soaping up. Half a bucket is ample. It is essential that you don't indulge in long showers as we have lots of people and few showers.

At Gorrick's Run there are two open showers, and one cubicle. Cold showers can be taken down at the creek, but do not wash off your soap into the creek. Take a bucket down with you, and wash off with that. Up here, water is precious, please be mindful about how it is used. Do not wash hands, clothes or utensils under running water. A mugful of water will suffice to wash soap off hands. If you notice others misusing water, tell the Jisha, who will remind people.

During sesshin in hot weather it is most important that you drink enough water to prevent dehydration. Make it a practice to have a cup of water every second period.

(The following pages contain guidlelines for meal ceremonies and signals. It has been our practice to ask those new to sesshin, or those who feel rusty about tea and meal ceremonies, to meet with the Ino in a group, to go through the following procedures. Note: Since Autumn l99l sesshin, people can continue eating when servers enter dojo for seconds.)

12. TEA:

When the server appears before you, bow with your hands at gasssho, then hold your cup or bowl beside that of your neighbour with one hand, while holding your other hand next to the cup, palm up. When the serving of tea is sufficient, raise your free hand smartly. This is the signal for the server to stop pouring. Be mindful of the server's line of vision and keep your signalling hand close to the cup. Remember a brisk gesture communicates more clearly than a vague wave of your hand.

13. MEALS:

When the server appears before you for the first serving of a meal, bow with your hands at gassho. When the server extends a hand in your direction, place your bowl firmly in the palm of his or her hand, and then come to gassho. When the server has given you enough, rub your hands together audibly. Always accept something from each main dish during the first serving of a meal.

While the server is helping your neighbour, speed the serving process by helping yourself to those dishes within reasonable reach. When the server rises to move on to the next group of people, bow again with your hands at gassho. If you are the last person to be served, bow holding your bowl in your left hand, resting it on your left thigh, and covering it with your right hand.

Avoid touching your food with fingers or eating utensils until eating begins, except to make your offering of a small quantity of grain, cereal or bread when the offering dish is passed. At breakfast and noon, eating begins at the end of a sutra which is recited with your first bowl held before you at eye level. Take your first bite from this bowl before putting it down. At the evening meal, no sutras are recited, and eating begins on a signal from the Ino.

When the servers enter the dojo for the second serving, you may continue eating unless you want a second helping. When the server nears your place in line, bring your hands to gassho without bowing If you indicate you do want more, the server will stop in front of you, and you should hold out your bowl in the direction of the dish from which you wish to be served. At the end of the meal, each person washes his or her bowls with tea and dries them with the cloth provided. After the bowls have been washed, drink all the tea except a small amount, which is offered when the jug is passed for it. Make this offering carefully and respectfully, as with the grain offering.

There will be three bells at the end of each meal. At the first, rise with your bowl. At the second, bow and straighten your place and return to your regular place if you moved for the meal. At the third, bow, then go to your resting or work place.

GENERAL MEAL CAUTIONS:

Please handle your bowls and utensils quietly at all times. Don't speak to the servers, or attempt signals other than those specified. Eat as heartily as you wish, but do not lag behind in finishing. Eat everything you accept. Stay out of the kitchen unless you have an assignment there. Do not speak or write notes to the cooks for any reason.

Food and food trips (such as fruitarianism and fasting) can be extremely preoccupying during sesshin. Make up your mind in advance that, for the interval of sesshin, you will let go of your particular convictions in this area, and will eat with the rest of us as one of the group. Please avoid loading up on one or two particular dishes, or picking and choosing among dishes. People who do not eat animal products need not take cheese or milk or eggs: they will be offered separately, not as ingredients in main dishes. Do not fast. Be circumspect about following these guidelines, and you will maintain your strength for zazen. If you have a medically assigned diet, special arrangements may be made if they have not been already, by talking to the Jisha. Do not take food that has been set aside for those with special diets, ie rice crackers.

l4. ENTERING AND LEAVING THE DOJO:

Approach the dojo with your hands in the kinhin position, gassho at the door, facing the altar, then walk to your seat with your hands in the kinhin position. Keep to the sides of the dojo, rather than walking diagonally, and walk silently and briskly. Bow to your seat, turning so that you do not place your back to the altar as you do so. Then turn again facing into the dojo and bow to the Sangha. Turn again, plump your zafu if necessary and sit down.

Gassho again whenever leaving the dojo, facing the altar, except when leaving to go to dokusan, or during formal kinhin.

15. KINHIN:

Kinhin or walking meditation is an opportunity to continue zazen while walking, a transition from the cushion to the everyday world. Kinhin comes at the end of every period of zazen (with a few exceptions), and is signalled by the Jikijitsu with two bells. (Demonstrate bells) When you hear the bells, gassho. Carefully unfold your feet and swing around on your cushion in the direction of the altar, place your feet firmly on the floor and stand up. Wait there with your hands in the kinhin mudra. Be very careful if your feet or legs have gone numb. Make sure the feeling has returned before attempting to stand. If necessary, remain seated on your cushion for the first round of kinhin and rejoin the line when your place comes round again. While everybody is standing, there will be a pause before the Jiki hits the clappers for people to leave the dojo to use the toilet or to join the dokusan line. If you wish to leave, gassho, then walk briskly down the dojo with hands in kinhin position.

The beginning of kinhin is signalled by Jiki with the clappers. You gassho then turn left and begin the slow walk with hands in kinhin mudra. Key your breathing to the number of footsteps and let your facial muscles relax into a half smile. Breathing out may take you three steps, breathing in, two - whatever is natural. Remember your breath counting, or 'mu'. Keep up with the person in front maintaining the same distance between you and that person. If a few people near you have left the dojo, that distance can be quite a way.

When the end of kinhin is approaching, the Jiki will signal with a clap. Keep walking until you are at your place, then stop, face inwards and wait for the Jiki to lead a silent gassho which you join in. Then turn in the direction of the altar, gassho to your cushion, and sit down. If you wish to pick up an extra cushion or use a chair, do so after the initial group bow.

You may leave the kinhin line to go to the toilet, to your job (cooks) or to the dokusan line either at the beginning of kinhin as mentioned, or as the line passes the dojo door. Gassho as you leave the line.

To return to the line. If you return from the toilet while kinhin is going on, you may wait until your empty place in the line comes past the dojo door, then gassho and rejoin the line. If your place has already passed, wait at the dojo door until the end of kinhin, then when the sangha bows, gassho, and return to your palace.

Kinhin may be outdoors sometimes. This will be announced. Leave the dojo in line, then find your shoes and hat and join the line without attempting to keep to dojo positions.

l6. TOILETS:

At Gorrick's Run there are three toilets. Preferably pee outside behind the building, not in the space between dojo and hojo.

l7. FULL BOWS:

When the Ino rings the inkin with an accelerando, there will be three full bows. (Demonstrate)

l8. ZAZEN:

If anyone is not familiar with the practice that we do here, or has not been oriented into posture and breathing, please put up your hands and we'll go through that after this.

A Warning. Please be very careful and aware of your bodies. Don't force yourself to maintain uncomfortable or difficult positions. Feel free to use a chair if you cannot stay on your cushions without pain. Use support cushions or kneeling benches if necessary. When getting up from sitting in cross-legged positions be careful, cradle your knees. It is quite easy to damage knees.

Relax down into your sitting position, move your body gently before settling down.

Moving. Try to be as steady as possible throughout the sitting period. Ignore minor irritations. If it is necessary lto adjust your position because you are in pain, and you must be the judge of this, do so carefully and slowly, keeping your practice going throughout. Be careful though - a single unnecessary shift in position can set off a chain of moves.

Using a chair: Use a chair for a whole sitting block rather than chopping and changing. Fold your zabuton in half. Remember to be sitting on your zafu or bench at mealtimes. (Demonstrate)

Neatness. Keep your place and yourselves tidy and neat all the time.

l9. NOTEBOOKS:

Unless you are working on koans, don't write or read anything during sesshin. Sesshin is a wonderful opportunity to concentrate solely on the matter at hand. If you are writing and reading, do so unobtrusively.

20. SUTRAS:

For the sutra period in the morning, the Shodoka reading, and closing ceremony at night, sutra books will be handed out. Keep them on the back of your mat when not in use, not on the floor. When using them, hold them thus (demonstrate). Sutra books are not handed out before Teisho.

2l. TEISHO or DHARMA TALK:

There will be a teisho every day at 2.00 p.m. The Jiki will say, "Prepare for Teisho" and everyone stands at their place. After gassho, move with zafu to your place under the chestnut tree with your hands in kinhin mudra.

[end file]

ÉÍÍÍ

Love (metta) in the Theravadin teaching

"Love, but not the sensuous fire that burns, scorches and tortures, that inflicts more wounds than it cures - flaring up now, at the next moment being extinguished, leaving behind more coldness and loneliness than was felt before.(2)"

The three main antidotes against attraction to the opposite sex

The first is, "Think of every female (male) that you encounter as either your mother, sister, or daughter (father, brother, son)(3). In fact if one accepts the theory of endless transmigration as literal truth, every other human being has been, at one time or another, such a relative.(4)

The second antidote to sensual desire include the contemplation of the thirty-two parts of the body. The first five and visible parts are:

hair of the head, hair of the body (pubic hair), nails, teeth and skin.

When considered in isolation, these body parts lose their attraction. This meditation helps to protect one's whole mental make-up - emotionally, ethically, intellectually against the insidious influences of the media directed at the sex instinct(5)

The third antidote is watchfulness. In Burma, for example, the monk is hidden behind a screen to prevent him from being captivated by anyone in his audience or vice versa.(6)

Sex and morality

> "If we have no moral commitment, then our instincts can take control. For example, if we just follow sexual desire without any reference to morality, then we become caught up in all kinds of things that cause self-aversion. There is adultery, promiscuity and disease, and all the disruption and confusion that come from not reining in our instinctual nature through the limitations of morality." from "The Four Noble Truths" by Ajahn Sumedho(4NOBLETR.ZIP)" p68.

Buddha's positive comments on love and marriage

In Buddha's time there was the devoted couple known as "Nakulas parents" The father once declared to Buddha that ever since he had taken her as a child bride, he had not transgressed against his wife, even in thought - "My sole wish is to be united with her forever, in this world and the next." When Buddha heard the wife echo the same sentiments regarding her husband, he announced to his followers:

"This husband and wife are indeed well-matched - well-matched in faith, well-matched in virtue, well-matched in generosity, well-matched in goodness, well-matched in wisdom. A perfect pair and a wonderful example of wedded bliss, surely they will be together for eternity, enjoying great felicity."(7)

One of the Buddha's followers was blessed with a devoted wife who was good and virtuous as well as beautiful and charming. On a journey the couple was waylaid by bandits. The gang leader threatened to kill the husband and carry off the wife. The woman told the bandit chief defiantly, "If you kill my husband, I will kill myself on the spot." Seeing that there was no chance of getting their way, the bandits let the couple go.

Buddha was told of the incident and said to the husband, "You are very fortunate to have such a good wife. She also saved my life in a previous incarnation. I was an elephant king and she was my mate. I was determined to destroy a monster crab that was terrorising our herd, but it caught my leg with one of its claws. All the other elephants fled in panic, and I was being pulled down into the river. 'Don't leave me!' I yelled out to my mate. 'I will never leave you, noble husband, the one I have adored for all these years,' she reassured me. She then tricked the crab into slightly loosening its grip and I was able to crush the monster."

Buddha concluded, "With such a fine woman as your wife you are assured of eternal happiness and joint attainment of enlightenment.(8)". (Note that enlightenment is normally considered to be a solitary attainment.)

Ven Anuruddha's story of restraint

There were monks who took their vows seriously. While on a journey, Anuruddha requested lodging at a rest-house in a certain village. The woman proprietess welcomed him, but soon after he was taken in a group arrived and also asked to be put up.

The proprietess became enamored of the handsome monk and invited him to spend the night in her quarters on the pretense that the rest-house would be too crowded and noisy for him. Anuruddha consented, and the woman moved quickly to prepare the chamber. She set up a luxurious couch and dressed herself in her most alluring clothes and wore her sweetest perfume. When Anuruddha entered, she declared her love for him and added that they would make a perfect couple. She cast off her gown and paraded before the monk. But even when she slipped onto the couch next to him, Anuruddha admirably retained control of his faculties and successfully resisted the woman's considerable charms.

Amazed at the monk's dignified self-control, the woman asked for forgiveness, listened keenly to the monk's Dhamma discourse through the rest of the night, and that morning took refuge in the Buddha's teaching. Word got out about the episode, and Anuruddha was, rather surprisingly, censured despite his noble behaviour and conversion of the woman - he had allowed himself to be alone with a woman in her sleeping quarters, and that is absolutely forbidden.

Ven Ananda's story of restraint

Few can reside in a state of true celibacy in both body and mind. Ananda, for instance, was Buddha's personal attendant for years. He became Buddha's follower primarily because of the Master's transcendence of sex: "When anyone becomes inflamed by sexual passion, his mind becomes disturbed and confused, he loses self-control, and he becomes reckless and crude. Besides, in sexual intercourse the blood becomes inflamed and adulterated with impure secretions. Naturally, from such a source there can never originate an aureole of such transcendently pure and golden brightness as I have seen emanating from the person of [Buddha.....and that is why I became] one of his true followers."(9)

With that kind of example ever before him, we might expect Ananda to be the ideal celibate, but no - it was very rough going even for him. Ananda seems to have had a much more pleasant personality than many of the other lugubrious monks and was consequently a great favourite of the women in the community. It was Ananda who lobbied the Buddha for the establishment of the Order of Nuns. Women, including nuns, continually fell in love with Ananda (his name means "Beloved") and more than once he had to be rescued by miraculous intervention from the clutches of some adoring female(10) He did, however, stay the course, and he remains an inspiration for celibate Buddhists.(11)

Conclusion

Theravada Buddhism gives very thorough treatment of the issue of sex and the monks are supported by strict rules regarding sexuality. Laypeople too are given advice to reduce sexual craving and Buddha gave a positive message to some marriages - that they could lead to the joint attainment of Nibbana/Nirvana.

Notes

1) Tsomo, "Sakyadhita: Daughters of the Buddha", p298, Ithaca, N.Y, Snow Lion Publications, 1980.

2) Nyanaponika Thera, "The Four Sublime States", Buddhist Publication Society, PO Box 61, Kandy, Sri Lanka.
3) Rahula, Gotama's son, was given similar advice: "Regard all women as your mother - gracious, sweet, beautiful, and chaste (Jones, "Mahavastu", Vol.2 p254, London Pali Text Society, 1973)
4) Stevens, John, "Lust for Enlightenment - Buddhism and Sex" p45, Shambhala, 1990
5) Nyanaponika Thera, "The Heart of Buddhist Meditation"p66, Buddhist Publication Society, PO Box 61, Kandy, Sri Lanka.
6) Bechert and Grombrich p31
7) Woodward and Hare, "Gradual Sayings" Vol.2 pp69-70
8) Jataka 267
9) Goddard "A Buddhist Bible" p112, Boston, Beacon Press, 1966
10) Goddard "A Buddhist Bible" p110
11) Woodward and Hare, "Gradual Sayings", Vol.1 p148ff, London , Pali Text Society, 1973.

Sanghadisesa Procedures at Wat Pah Nanachat
(For information on the computer files see below)

Introduction

This is a collection of material designed to facilitate procedures for settling Sanghadisesa of Parivasa (probation), Manatta ('counting of nights') and Abbhana (rehabilitation). It describes as they are currently used at Wat Pah Nanachat. The main chapter 'Procedures for Practisin Manatta' was based on a guide produced by the English Sangha, but has been modified and current Wat Pah Nanachat practice. Since the material has been compiled on computer (the Microsoft Word 6.0 format), it can be printed out as separate articles or sheets, reworked, or desired.

Some practices detailed here are extra to those found in the Vinaya Pitaka, but are the gene practices of Wat Pah Pong and its branches. It should be borne in mind that these practices according to the individual interpretations of senior monks. However, they are usually in exc Vinaya requires. When these points are referred to some indication will be given.

The supplementary articles provide additional information and discussion of related issues:

Observances for Bhikkhus Practising Parivasa and Manatta covers in detail the duties which undertaken during these periods.

Announcing by Messenger for a sick parivasika or manattacarika bhikkhu

What Constitutes Concealment - from Ajahn Thanissaro's 'Buddhist Monastic Code.'

Leddupata - discussion of distances in the light of parivasa and manatta procedures.

Hatthapasa and Sãma discusses these issues in the light of Wat Pah Pong practices.

Defective Kammavaca - conditions which make Sanghakamma fail.

Other Ways of Practising Parivasa and Manatta - how these can be done in other traditions.

Chanting Section

The normal way of putting together the chanting for these procedures using Vinaya Mukha V since the examples in VM are abbreviated, and a knowledge of Pali is assumed. This Chant complete sets of chanting sheets which are drawn from the examples given in Vinaya Mukha been expanded in full. A set consists of eight sheets if doing parivasa, five if doing manatta

In most cases it should be possible to adapt these existing sheets for a particular circumstan few simple alterations. Since the material is maintained on computer the sheets needed can printed out easily. The sheets reproduced here can also be photocopied

Preparing the Chanting

The sets of chanting sheets have been compiled according to the instructions contained in t
'Preparing the Chanting for Sanghadisesa Procedures' which explains how to make up new to adapt those given here.
Although the chanting appears complicated, it is in fact quite straightforward. There are two chanting:

a standard pattern followed by the chanting which remains the same whatever the offence.

chunks of specific information inserted, which give details of the particular circumstance bei

The standard pattern is a kind of framework into which the details of specific circumstances Parivasa and Manatta Templates contain this framework and have been used to construct t way this works is described in full in the article 'Preparing the Chanting for Sanghadisesa Pr
---
It is hoped that the community will find this material useful and it will help these procedures smoothly in future. The chanting sheets have been checked several times for errors, but the again in order to ensure that the chanting can be done properly.

Vipassi Bhikkhu
Wat Pah Nanachat July 2542

The Computer Files
The computer files come on a floppy disk in a self-extracting zip file. These are all in Microso format contained in the folder 'SG Files'.

In this folder there are three copies of the files:
SG Mastermaster copy - read-only file protected from editing

SG Wkg working copy
SG Bakbackup copy - also read only Sanskrit Palatino Fonts (in which the document is composed) are also included (they are pu

It is recommended that these folders be copied onto the computer's hard disk - the backup c in a different location in case of hard disk crash. The self-extracting zip file SG Files.exe can saved in a suitable place. This file will work with Windows 3.1 and Windows 95. If you do no Word 6 you can still view and print the files using 'Word Viewer' which is freeware and come installation CD of Windows 95. Each folder contains the following files:

Contents:
article name:file name:
IntroductionIntro
Types of Sanghadisesa ProcedureSGTypes
Procedures for Practising Parivasa and ManattaProcedur
Checklist of things to be Covered before Entering ParivasaCheck Observances for Bhikkhus Practising Parivasa and ManattaObserve Announcing by Messenger for a Sick BhikkhuAnnounce
What Constitutes ConcealmentConceal
LeddupataLeddu
Hatthapasa and SimaHattha
Defective KammavacaDefKam
Other Ways of Practising Parivasa and ManattaOtherWay

Chanting Section:
Cuëasuddhanta Parivasa (Purifying Probation)Cula
Mahasuddhanta Parivasa (Purifying Probation)Maha
For One Unconcealed Offence of Sanghadisesa One: (Manatta only)OneSg1
For One Unconcealed Offence of Sanghadisesa Two: (Manatta only)OneSg2
Two Unconcealed Offences of Sanghadisesa Three : (Manatta only)One Sg3
Several Unconcealed Offences of Sanghadisesa One: (Manatta only)ManySg
One Offence Concealed for Five DaysConc5
Combining Concealed and Unconcealed OffencesConcUnc
Aggha-Samodhana Parivasa (For Offences Concealed Difft Durations)Agga
Missaka-Samodhana Parivasa (Difft. Offences Concealed Differently)Missaka
Mulaya-Patikassana (Sending Back To The Beginning)Mulaya

Preparing the Chanting:

Preparing the Chanting for Sanghadisesa ProceduresChanting
Extracts From The Chanting SheetsExtract
Manatta TemplateManTemp
Parivasa TemplatePariTemp
The Computer FilesCompFile

Sanskrit Palatino Fonts are also included (they are public domain). These should be installe computer in order that the documents appear properly .

The individual document 'Master' is a 'Master Document' which contains the whole book - ar other files as a set of subdocuments. Opening the file 'Master' will open the whole set of do together. This can then be worked on as if it were a single document. Individual files can als worked on separately. Changes made to each affect the other, but if the subdocuments are link is broken and the master document will no longer be able to load it. If you want to re-nar location of a subdocument it is best to copy it into a new location as a new file leaving the or it was. The new file will not be part of the master document but the original will remain so. In working with master documents can be found in the on-line Help with Microsoft Word or in th Microsoft Word 6.0.

When individual files are opened it is possible that the appearance may be strange - this oc document may take on the 'styles' (headings, text, paragraphs and so on) to which Word ha resident users. To avoid this it is best to open the Master document even if you only want to article or set of chanting sheets.

17 1# What are the five things to be done according to seniority during penance?
PATIMOKKHA, PARIVARA, DISTRIBUTION OF RAINS-CLOTH, GIFTS, FOOD

What are the three things that interrupt Parivasa (Pali & English)?
SAHAVASA - STAYING WITH REGULAR MONKS AT DAWN; VIPPAVASA - DWELLING A ANNOUNCING THE PENANCE TO ARRIVING MONKS OR AT THE PATIMOKKHA

In addition to the things that interrupt Parivasa, what are the things that interrupt Manatta (
BEING WITH LESS THAN A GROUP, IE FOUR MONKS; NOT ANNOUNCING DAILY TO A

According to the commentary, what does 'pakatatta-bhikkhu' mean?
ANY MONK NOT DOING THE SAME PENANCE OR ONE WHO HAS PUT THE DUTIES A

According to the commentary, can a monk practicing Manatta accept duties from a junior m undertaking Manatta?
YES

In which ways are all bhikkhus doing any form of probation equal?
THEY CAN'T FILL A QUORUM FOR SANGHAKAMMA; ALL DUTIES, EXCEPT INFORMIN

According to the commentary, if a Manatta or Parivasa monk receives duties from a Pakat told not to do them, does he have an offence?
NO

On which formal occasions, other than acts relating to his case does a monk doing any pe the Sangha?
PATIMOKKHA & PAVARANA

Does a monk who is doing penance have to inform another monk who is doing penance?
YES

Is it necessary for a monk doing any penance to be present within arms-length during any
YES

According to the commentary, what are the factors for concealment?
COMMITED OFFENCE, NOT SUSPENDED, NO OBSTRUCTION, ABLE TO INFORM & KN

According to the commentary, if one is not sure whether the offence is heavy or not but co count as concealed?

YES

In which (six) cases should a monk doing any penance not receive help from a regular mo
GETTING WATER FOR WASHING THE FEET, FOOTSTOOL, SLEEPING PLACE, RECEIV

Can a monk doing penance receive help from a novice?
NOT ATTENDANCE DUTIES

What is the legality if a monk who is doing any penance pays respect (anjali or bow) to a ju DUKKATA FOR THE SENIOR

Are there any attendance duties a monk doing any penance is not allow to do?
NO

Within which distance does a monk doing Manatta have to be outside the monastery?
TWO LEDDUPATA

13 1# Where in the Vinaya Pitaka can the duties for the Sanghadisesa penances be found
CV 2.1

Where in the Vinaya Pitaka does it say when a day doesn't count (ratticcheda)?
CV 2.2

Where in the Vinaya Pitaka can the five things to be done according to seniority be found?
CV 2.7

Where in the Vinaya Pitaka can be found that a monk should participate in the Patimokkha
CV 2.2

Where else does the term 'vippavasa' (dwelling apart) occur?
NP 2 & 29

Where in the Vinaya Pitaka can the term 'vatta' be found to feature dominantly?
CV 8

Where in the Canon does 'ratti' mean night/dawn and where day?
NIGHT: P 5 & 49; DAY: M 131-4

Where in the Canon does it say that a monk must be within arms lengths to be considered Sanghakamma?
P 80

In which Patimokkha-rules does the term 'leddupata' ('a stone's throw') occur?
P 14, 84, 85

In which Patimokkha-rules is hatthapasa the determining factor whether an offence has oc
NP 2, P 19 & 80; BNI PJ 4 & SG 3

Where does it say that a monk doing any penance may go on almsround?
COMY: IF HE USUALLY GOES

Where does it say that a leddupata might be 18 meters?
PG 306

Where does it say or what suggests that two leddupata might mean 36 meters from one m almsround?

NOWHERE, NOTHING

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP ar on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path thecoombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 9 August 1993]----------Subject: relationship between shakuhachi and zenFrom: draven@iris.dazixco.ingr.com (Denise Raven)Date: 26 Jul 1993 2 0700Newsgroups: soc.religion.eastern[...]The Japanese Music Institute of America is a non-educationalorganization dedicated to fostering the growth and study of traditionalJapanese r institute provides quality music programs,specifically in the areas of Shakuhachi and traditio Japaneseensemble training. All programs are funded through student fees anddonations. J Masayuki Koga, one of Japan's finest Shakuhachimasters. Koga-sensei received his maste the TozanShakuhachi Flute School in 1964. He has recorded several albums forColumbia r information about the institute, lessons, performances, orteaching materials as well as Shak instruments, pleasecontact the JMI: Japanese Music InstituteP.O. Box 317Navarro, CA 954
"There is no secret to excel in playing the shakuhachi. Blow not intensely, but from your he Although technique is secondary, it helps to express your true self. If we are natural, we mal
If we have an open mind, our sound will be mellow. If we have right attitudes toward life, our acceptable to everyone. Take care of your sound as you would care for yourself." -- Koga Raven----------end of file

É ÍÍÍ

3. Activity of any kind is meditation.
4. The community is independent -- creating its own resources, such as growing food.

Although some scholars debate whether the "pure regulations" originated in this period, these trends are noticeable in the Ch'an stories and documents of the 6th and 7th century.

With Ch'an practice codified and carried out, and the emergence of the unified and stable T'ang dynasty, the next generations of students were given a platform on which to base their own ideas and teachings.

During the period of Tao-hsin's lifetime, the argument about sudden versus gradual enlightenment emerged. Although Tao-hsin was a proponent of gradual enlightenment, later generations continued to debate and new schools began to emerge based on doctrinal differences. Tao-hsin's position is summed up in his work Five Gates of Tao-hsin:

> Let it be known: Buddha is the mind. Outside of the mind there is no Buddha. In short, this includes the following five things:
>
> First: The ground of the mind is essentially one with the Buddha.
>
> Second: The movement of the mind brings forth the treasure of the Dharma. The mind moves yet is ever quiet; it becomes turbid and yet remains such as it is.
>
> Third: The mind is awake and never ceasing; the awakened mind is always present; the Dharma of awakened mind is without specific form.
>
> Fourth: The body is always empty and quiet; both within and without, it is one and the same; the body is located in the Dharma world, yet is unfettered.
>
> Fifth: Maintaining unity without going astray -- dwelling at once in movement and rest, one can see the Buddha nature clearly and enter the gate of samadhi.

Tao-hsin had two students of prominence: Fa-jung, who started what is now known as the Oxhead School and his successor Hung-jen.

Hung-jen, the fifth Chinese patriarch of Ch'an, has a history similar to the first four patriarchs of Ch'an. He left home early to become a monk, sat for long periods of time in meditation, discarded the sutras, realized enlightenment, and died at an advanced age after transmitting his teachings to a single successor.

Hung-jen marks the beginning of a new period of Ch'an, one characterized by strong master-disciple relationships and the expanding of spiritual practice beyond the Indian dhyana meditations. Hung-jen's spiritual practice was based on the "gradual enlightenment" teachings of his predecessor, Tao-hsin. In the text Tsui-shang-ch'en lun, a work believed to be written by Hung-jen, he gives instruction to his students:

> Look to where the horizon disappears beyond the sky and behold the figure one. This is a great help. It is good for those beginners to sit in meditation, when they find their mind distracted, to focus their mind on the figure one.

In this period of expansion of Ch'an practice, Hung-jen had as many as eleven students who he confirmed as mastering the teachings. Even more incredible than this, three of these students, Shen-hsiu, Hui-neng and Chih-hsien started their own schools based on variations of Hung-jen's teachings.

However, the tradition of choosing a dharma heir continued, and Hung-jen's heir was a brilliant student named Fa-ju. For some reason, however, Fa-ju was never included in the list of patriarchs, and at the time, a formal theory of a patriarchal lineage had not been established. Despite the succession of Fa-ju, the official heir to Hung-jen, according to the Confucian scholar Ch'ang Yueh (667-730), is Shen-hsiu.

Before we look at Shen-hsiu, we should first look at the teacher who modern day Zen schools consider the sixth patriarch, Hui-neng. It is almost impossible to separate fact from fiction in the case of Hui-neng. Nearly everything that is known about him comes from the Platform Sutra, a work whose historical basis was completely fabricated. We do know that he was a younger contemporary to Shen-hsiu who led the typical mundane life of the Ch'an teacher as was discussed in the section about Hung-jen.

As for Hui-neng's actual teachings, they were no different from those of Shen-hsiu. In fact, as John McRae discovered in his research, "Ch'eng-kuan of the Hua-yen school, for example, was unable to see any significant difference between the teachings of Northern (Shen-hsiu's) and Southern (Hui-neng's) Ch'an. The arguments over sudden versus gradual enlightenment were complete fabrications created by one of Hui-neng's successors, Shen-hui, who will be discussed later.

Shen-hsiu was a very famous, highly educated teacher who attempted, like Hui-neng, to emulate the teachings of his late master. Shen-hsiu moved to Lo-yang, the capitol, in 701. He was accepted by the Emperor and Empress and even tailored his teachings to fit their needs. This was the beginning of the Zen idea of "skillful means". Shen-hsiu named his school the "East Mountain Teaching" in honor of his teacher Hung-jen, who taught on what was known as the East Mountain.

Up to this time, there was no reference to Northern or Southern schools and there was little or no conflict between methods of spiritual practice. This harmonious period between the time of Hung-jen and the deaths of Shen-hsiu and Hui-neng was the most creative period of Ch'an. However, this broad range of creativity inevitably resulted in conflict. As Heinrich Dumoulin points out: "The rich diversity of spiritual and intellectual elements that flowed together during this early period of Zen Buddhism were the harbinger of conflicts to appear in the following two or three generations." The instigator of these conflicts was a monk named Shen-hui.

It is with Shen-hui and his successors that the colorful legends of Ch'an are created and developed. Before Shen-hui, there had been no Northern and Southern schools, gradual or sudden enlightenment, or even a conflict over lineage.

Shen-hui was a monk from Nan-yang who was determined to start his own school of Ch'an. He studied with Hui-neng for about seven years, until Hui-neng's death in 713. In 732, Shen-hui held a conference in Hua-t'ai at the Ta-yun Temple. This was where he planned his attack against the school of Shen-hsiu which included referring to Shen-hsiu's school as the Northern School, substituting Shen-hsiu for Hui-neng in the lineage, attacking Shen-hsiu's school on doctrinal points and once his attack was successful, declaring himself Hui-neng's successor.

Shen-hui's first line of attack was to create a broader difference between the schools of Hui-neng and Shen-hsiu. He did this by labeling Shen-hsiu's teachings "The Northern School", an attack that implied that Shen-hsiu's school was based on inferior teachings. Before this attack, as was mentioned earlier, Shen-hsiu referred to his school as "The East Mountain Teaching". Shen-hsiu's disciples later referred to their school as the "Southern School". This controversy over what is the Northern School and what is the Southern School is based both on geography (the "Northern School" was in the North) and the Chinese saying nan-tun pei-chien, meaning "suddenness of the South, gradualness of the North".

At the time, sudden enlightenment was considered the true teaching, and everyone identified their school with the practice of sudden enlightenment. Therefore, for Shen-hui to label Shen-hsiu's school "The Northern School" is an insult, implying that Shen-hsiu's school had inferior teachings. It would be similar to referring to Theravadan Buddhism as Hinayana. Heinrich Dumoulin writes: "According to the mainstream of later Zen, not only is sudden enlightenment incomparably superior to gradual enlightenment but it represents true Zen -- indeed, it is the very touchstone of authentic Zen."

Shen-hui's substitution of Hui-neng as the real dharma heir involves a series of fabricated stories and teachings, including re-writing the lineage, and attempting to prove that Hung-jen intended for Hui-neng to be his successor.

Shen-hui first makes his point by saying that from the time of Bodhidharma, each master has given his robes to his successor. This line of succession continues all the way down to Hung-jen, who, according to Shen-hui, gave his robes to Hui-neng. Shen-hui wrote:

> The robe is proof of the Dharma, and the Dharma is the doctrine (confirmed by the possession) of the robe. Both Dharma and robe are passed on through each other. There is no other transmission. Without the robe, the Dharma cannot be spread, and without the Dharma, the robe cannot be obtained.

Up to this point, the idea of a singular line of succession did not exist. In fact, when Shen-hui first told this story at the conference in Hua-t'ai, a representative from Shen-hsiu's lineage expressed puzzlement: "Confused, Ch'ung-yuan asked why there could be only one succession in each generation and whether the transmission of the Dharma was dependent on the transmission of the robe." As most lies tend to be, this one required additional supporting lies to make it stand on its own.

To legitimize these fabricated stories, Shen-hui created another story to complement them. In this story, Shen-hui creates a fictional dialogue that he uses in his teachings: "During his lifetime the Ch'an Master Shen-hsiu stated that the robe, symbolic of the Dharma, as transferred in the sixth generation, was at Shao-chou (near Hui-neng's temple)."

The most important fabricated story is probably the dialogue that takes place between Shen-hsiu and the Empress Wu. Philip Yampolsky describes this story from one of Shen-hui's texts called Nan-yang ho-shang wen-ta tsa-cheng i:

> ...when the Empress Wu invited Shen-hsiu to court, in the year 700 or 701, this learned priest is alleged to have said that in Shao-chou there was a great master [Hui-neng], who had in secret inherited the Dharma of the Fifth Patriarch.

See Apendix I. This story appears in almost every account of Ch'an in this period, including the Sutra of the Sixth Patriarch which will be discussed later.

Shen-hui then attacks "The Northern School" on doctrinal differences. Again, these attacks are fabricated. Shen-hui claims, as was mentioned in his labeling of Shen-hsiu's teachings, "the Northern School", that the Northern School practices gradual enlightenment. To back up this claim, he uses several fabricated dialogues similar to the ones he used in his robe claims. The most famous one is a dialogue between Master Yuan and Shen-hui about two of Shen-hsiu's successors, P'u-chi and Hsiang-mo:

> The Master Yuan said: "P'u-chi chan shih of Sung-yueh and Hsiang-mo of Tung-shan, these two priests of great virtue, teach men to "concentrate the mind to enter dhyana, to settle the mind to see purity, to stimulate the mind to illuminate the external, to control the mind to demonstrate the internal." On this they base their > teaching. Why, when you talk about Ch'an, don't you teach men these things? What is sitting in meditation (tso-ch'an)?"

>
> The priest [Shen-hui] said: "If I taught people to do these things, it would be a hindrance to attaining enlightenment. The sitting (tso) I'm talking about means not to give rise to thoughts. The meditation (ch'an) I'm talking about is to see the original nature."

This assault was Shen-hui's best shot against the Northern School. As Philip Yampolsky writes: "This attack was clever and effective; it may, however, have been quite unjustified." The Northern School also taught a form of sudden enlightenment. It's teachings were a sophisticated blend of practices derived from the Heart Sutra, the Lankavatara Sutra and the teachings of Hua-Yen. As Philip Yampolsky points out, it may have been closer to the teachings of Hung-jen than what Shen-hui promoted.

These descriptions of Shen-hui's attacks might sound as if there was a pitched battle between the Northern School and the Southern School. This was not the case. The "Northern School" as it is known today, ignored Shen-hui. There is not a single reference to Shen-hui in any Northern School text. As John McRae points out, "This failure to rebut Shen-hui's criticism is indicative of the fictitious nature of the entity `Northern School.'" Even if these attacks failed, however, it gave Shen-hui's school much needed publicity. If it had not been for Shen-hui's attack, which drew attention to the school of Hui-neng, Hui-neng's school would have drifted into obscurity. The down side to this for Shen-hui, was that his outspoken attacks attracted the attention of the imperial censor, Lu I, who was in favor of the Northern School. After an interview with Emperor Hsuan-tsung in 753, government officials were convinced that Shen-hui was a dangerous person, and therefore banished him from the capitol, Lo-yang.

Shen-hui was sent to various places during his exile, all of which were strongholds of Northern School teachings. He used this situation to his advantage, preaching and gaining increasing influence through his attacks. The government which banished Shen-hui was driven into exile in 756, when a rebel army took the capital cities in the An Lu-Shan Rebellion. Forced to defend themselves from this attack, the government began fund-raising efforts to support their armies, which included setting up ordination platforms to sell certificates of ordination. Shen-hui was brought back from exile to help in these efforts. In return for his service, the government promised him a position of authority and power. Heinrich Dumoulin responds to this by saying:

> It seems ironic that one who so relentlessly criticized masters of the Northern School for carelessly assuming honorific titles and so betraying the true spirit of Bodhidharma should spend his old age basking in the grace of the powers that be.

A discussion of this conflict would not be complete without mentioning the Platform Sutra of the Sixth Patriarch. This work was composed by a monk of the Ox-head school in an attempt to reconcile the difference between the schools of Northern and Southern Ch'an. In what some Buddhist historians call brilliant planning, the Oxhead School, in writing the Platform Sutra, decided to agree with the doctrinal points of the Northern School while supporting Shen-hui's claim that Hui-neng was the 6th Patriarch. At the same time, they carefully avoided any mention of Shen-hui. The historical accounts of Hui-neng and Shen-hsiu in the Platform Sutra, which some scholars and Zen teachers still hold as true, come mainly from the fictional tales created by Shen-hui. Although the historical accounts in the Platform Sutra are completely false, however, the teachings within it come from the Northern School, and as was pointed out earlier, are very much along the lines of those taught by Hung-jen.

The Northern School continued to exist until the Hui-ch'ang Persecutions of the 9th century (842-845), but without much prestige or power. Shen-hui's school, fostered by the government, became the predominant school of Ch'an. By being so close to the imperial court, Northern Ch'an had become the "trendy" religion of the day. Therefore, it is not surprising that a new trend emerged, a trend led by Shen-hui. This event has prompted Zen masters to warn their students against "setting up shop" near centers of government. 500 years later, Zen Master Do-gen, clearly the most famous Japanese Zen Master, was warned by his Chinese teacher Ju-ching:

> You should not live in cities or other places of human habitation. Rather, staying clear of kings and ministers, make your home in deep mountains and remote valleys, transmitting the essence of Zen Buddhism forever, if even only to a single true Bodhiseeker.

Not only was this loss of favor a reason for Northern Chan's initial decline, but it stood as a blemish against its reputation, not only because of its degeneration but because of the stigma of being a religion of court, and therefore trendy and superficial. Another important, and often overlooked reason for the decline of the Northern School, is argued by John McRae.

McRae's argument is: Why shouldn't the Northern School cease to exist? After all, the labels, lineage tables and arguments over doctrine were insignificant to followers of the Northern School. They were only individuals studying under a teacher in an attempt to follow the path of the Buddha. McRae argues:

> There is no evidence that its members took any pledge of loyalty other than a personal dedication to the bodhisattva path. Each individual's affiliation was with the Dharma and with his own master, not to some institutional entity known as the East Mountain Teaching, or the Northern School.

Far from being vanquished in a religious struggle, the Northern School simply lost its popularity and slowly declined. However, the Southern School shared the same fate.

Although Shen-hui won the battle, forever resulting in the inclusion of Hui-neng as the 6th Patriarch, his Southern School slowly died out due to a lack of creativity among its successors. As Heinrich Dumoulin points out: "There are no names of note among the direct disciples of Shen-hui."

The interaction and creativity of the seven different schools that emerged from the Hui-ch'ang Persecutions became the imaginative force that brought Ch'an to where it is today. They included Hui-neng as the 6th Patriarch, as it was taught in the Oxhead School's Platform Sutra, but left out Shen-hui, substituting his name with the creative leaders of their own schools. This clearly became the Golden Age of Ch'an Buddhism, characterized by "...a relaxing of traditional institutional structures, a loosening of metropolitan controls, a geographical diffusion across the entire country, a deeper penetration among the common people, and in general a widespread process of inculturation."

This period of Ch'an is what eventually resulted in the spread of Ch'an Buddhism to Vietnam, Korea and Japan -- and ultimately to the West. Although this period of infighting was unusual, it was very important in the development of Ch'an. After Shen-hui, Ch'an schools began to cooperate with each other, allowing themselves to grow, both in size and in understanding as students and masters exposed themselves to different aspects of teachings. In fact, there is a Zen tradition today of not looking at "sects" or "schools" of Buddhism as separate or different, but as some of the different manifestations of Buddhist teachings; a "skillful means" for teaching a variety of students. Although the period of Ch'an infighting was lacking in Buddhist spiritual values, it nevertheless brought about a period of cooperation and creativity that exists to the present day.

Appendix I

FROM: A.F. Price & Wong Mou-lam, Trans. The Diamond Sutra & The Sutra of Hui-neng. (Boston: Shambhala, 1990) 138. (PRE TUN-HUANG)

Works Cited

Aitken, Robert. The Gateless Barrier. San Francisco: North Point Press, 1990.

Dumoulin, Heinrich. Zen Buddhism: A History Vol 1. New York: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1988.

Kohn, Michael H., Trans. The Shambhala Dictionary of Buddhism and Zen. Boston: Shambhala, 1991.

McRae, John R. The Northern School and the Formation of Early Ch'an Buddhism. Honolulu: University of Hawaii Press, 1986.

Price, A.F. and Wong Mou-lam, Trans. The Diamond Sutra & The Sutra of Hui-neng. Boston: Shambhala, 1990.

Schirokauer, Conrad. A Brief History of Chinese and Japanese Civilizations. New York: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Publishers, 1978.

Yampolsky, Philip B., Trans. The Platform Sutra of the Sixth Patriarch. New York: Columbia University Press, 1967.
Yokoi, Yu-ho-. Zen Master Do-gen. New York: Weatherhill, 1987.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND DECLINE OF THE NORTHERN SCHOOL OF CH'AN

by

Gary L. Ray

HRHS1621

History of Buddhism II

Richard K. Payne

Institute of Buddhist Studies

Berkeley, CA

May 5, 1992

TABLE I

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP an
on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path
coombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 23 November
1993]----------CHENG-TAO-KO [Zhengdaoge]
(J. Shodoka (J.); Song of Enlightenment,Song of Immediate Satori, Song of Realization, Son Realizationof the Way, Odes on Enlightenment is a Zen Buddhist didactical poem in64 verse the Ch'an (Zen).Its authorship is traditionally attributed to Yung-chia Hsuan-chueh[Yongjia X of the most gifted teachers of the Ch'an (Zen)school during the T'ang Dynasty China.Yung-c [also known under the names of Yung-chiaHsuan-chio, Great Master Chen-chio, Yoka Genk (J.)]was a scholar and a monk who lived in the years 665-713. He was a Dharmaheir of the Hui-neng (J. Eno) and Dharma brother tosuch personalities as Ch'ing-yuan Hsing-ssu (J. Se Nan-yuehHuai-jang (J. Nangaku Ejo), Nan-yang Hui-chung (J. Nan'yo Echu) andHo-tse She Jinne).The Cheng-tao-ko poem was published 1924-1934 in Japan as a part of theTaisho S (Buddhist Canon Published in The Taisho Era) [No. 2014, Vol. 48].It was also translated fron into English and given extensivecommentaries by the Ch'an Master Sheng-Yen in his 1990 ofWisdom: Lectures on 'The Song of Enlightenment'. Elmhurst, N.Y.: DharmaDrum Publicati translation from Japanese was prepared in the 1960s by Mr RobertAitken and Eido Shimano Diamond Sangha Zen BuddhistSociety, Koko An, 2119 Kaloa Way, Honolulu, Hawaii, USA was subsequently re-printed in a book: Daily Sutras forChanting and Recitation. n.d. New Y of the ZenStudies Society Inc.In December 1991 the Aitken-Shimano's translation was revis RobertAitken Roshi and incorporated (under its japanese title 'Shodoka') intoa collection of t Sutras in use by the Diamond Sangha itselfas well as by other affiliated Zen centers and con includingthe California Diamond Sangha; Sydney Zen Center and the Zen Group ofWestern below has been also used to construct a"ANU-Cheng-Tao-Ko-Verses" WAIS database acce thestandard WAIS client software and the Coombsquest gopher atcoombs.anu.edu.au, port Ciolek <tmciolek@coombs.anu.edu.au>19 November
1993----------CHENG-TAO-KO [Zhengdaoge]
(J. Shodoka (J.); Song of EnlightenmentEnglish transl. copyright (c) 1991 by R. Aitken & the Sangha,Hawaii.Verse 1 - There is the leisurely one ...There is the leisurely one,Walking the beyond philosophy,Not avoiding fantasy, not seeking truth.The real nature of ignorance is th itself;The empty delusory body is the very body of the Dharma.When the Dharma body awa completely,There is nothing at all.The source of our self-natureIs the Buddha of innocent tru physical reactions come and goLike clouds in the empty sky;Greed, hatred, and ignorance a disappearLike bubbles on the surface of the sea.When we realize actuality,There is no distin mind and thingAnd the path to hell instantly vanishes.If this is a lie to fool the world,My tongu cut out forever.Once we awaken to the Tathagata-Zen,The six noble deeds and the ten thou actionsAre already complete within us.In our dream we see the six levels of illusion clearly;A awaken the whole universe is empty.No bad fortune, no good fortune, no loss, no gain;Neve

in eternal serenity.For years the dusty mirror has gone uncleaned,Now let us polish it compl for all.Who has no-thought? Who is not-born?If we are truly not-born,We are not un-born eit robot if this is not so.How can we realize ourselvesBy virtuous deeds or by seeking the Bud your hold on earth, water, fire, wind;Drink and eat as you wish in eternal serenity.All things a and completely empty;This is the great enlightenment of the Tathagata.Transience, emptine enlightenment --These are the ultimate truths of Buddhism;Keeping and teaching them is tru devotion.If you don`t agree, please ask me about it.Cut out directly the root of it all, --This is point of the Buddha-seal.I can't respond to any concern about leaves and branches.People the Mani-jewel.Living intimately within the Tathagata-garbha,It operates our sight, hearing, s sensation, awareness;And all of these are empty, yet not empty.The rays shining from this p Mani-jewelHave the form of no form at all.Clarify the five eyes and develop the five powers; intellectual work, -- just realize, just know.It is not difficult to see images in a mirror,But who hold of the moon in the water?Always working alone, always walking alone,The enlightened way of NirvanaWith melody that is old and clear in spiritAnd naturally elegant in style,But wit is tough and bony,Passing unnoticed in the world.We know that Shakya's sons and daughte but not in the Tao.In their poverty, they always wear ragged clothing,But they have the jewel treasured within.This jewel of no price can never be used upThough they spend it freely to h meet.Dharmakaya, Sambogakaya, Nirmanakaya,And the four kinds of wisdomAre all contai kinds of emancipation and the six universal powersAre all impressed on the ground of their student goes directly to the ultimate,The others are very learned but their faith is uncertain.R
dirty garments from your own mind;Why should you show off your outward striving?Some m abuse;They try to set fire to the heavens with a torchAnd end by merely tiring themselves ou scandal as though it were ambrosial truth;Immediately everything meltsAnd I enter the place and words.When I consider the virtue of abusive words,I find the scandal-monger is my goo do not become angry at gossip,We have no need for powerful endurance and compassion.T
to be mature in expression,And full-moon brilliance of dhyana and prajnaDoes not stagnate only can I take hold of complete enlightenment by myself,But all Buddha-bodies, like sands become awakened in exactly the some way.The incomparable lion-roar of doctrineShatters one hundred kinds of animals.Even the king of elephants will run away, forgetting his pride; heavenly dragon listens calmly, with pure delight.I wandered over rivers and seas, crossing streams,Visiting teachers, asking about the Way in personal interviews;Since I recognized th Teacher at Ts'ao Ch'i,I know what is beyond the relativity of birth and death.Walking is Zen, Zen;Speaking or silent, active or quiet, the essence is at peace.Even facing the sword of dea unmoved;Even drinking poison, our mind is quiet.Our teacher, Shakyamuni, met Dipankara eons he trained as Kshanti, the ascetic.Many births, many deaths;I am serene in this cycle,- to it.Since I abruptly realized the unborn,I have had no reason for joy or sorrowAt any honor disgrace.I have entered the deep mountains to silence and beauty;In a profound valley bene cliffs,I sit under the old pine trees.Zazen in my rustic cottageIs peaceful, lonely, and truly comfortable.When you truly awaken,You have no formal merit.In the multiplicity of the relativ cannot find such freedom.Self-centered merit brings the joy of heaven itself,But it is like sho arrow at the sky;When the force is exhausted, it falls to the earth,And then everything goes should this be betterThan the true way of the absolute,Directly penetrating the ground of Ta take hold of the sourceAnd never mind the branches.It is like a treasure-moonEnclosed in a emerald.Now I understand this Mani-jewelAnd my gain is the gain of everyone endlessly.Th

the river,The wind blows through the pines,--Whose providence is this long beautiful evenin Buddha-nature jewel of moralityIs impressed on the ground of my mind,And my robe is the cloud, and the mist.A bowl once calmed dragonsAnd a staff separated fighting tigers;The ri staff jingle musically.The form of these expressions is not to be taken lightly;The treasure-st TathagataHas left traces for us to follow.The awakened one does not seek truth--Does not delusion.Truth and delusion are both vacant and without form,But this no-form is neither em empty;It is the truly real form of the Tathagata.The mind-mirror is clear, so there are no obst brilliance illuminates the universeTo the depths and in every grain of sand.Multitudinous thi cosmosAre all reflected in the mind,And this full clarity is beyond inner and outer.To live in is to ignore cause and effect;This chaos leads only to disaster.The one who clings to vacan world of things,Escapes from drowning but leaps into fire.Holding truth and rejecting delusio but skillful lies.Students who do zazen by such liesLove thievery in their own children.They Dharma-treasure;They lose accumulated power;And this disaster follows directly upon duali Zen is the complete realization of mind,The complete cutting off of delusion,The power of w penetrating directly to the unborn.Students of vigorous will hold the sword of wisdom;The pr diamond flame.It not only cuts off useless knowledge,But also exterminates delusions.They Dharma-thunder;They strike the Dharma-drum;They spread clouds of love, and pour ambro footsteps nourish limitless beings;Sravaka, Pratyeka, Bodhisattva--all are enlightened;Five nature all are emancipated.High in the Himalayas, only fei-ni grass grows.Here cows produ delicious milk,And this food I continually enjoy.One complete nature passes to all natures;O Dharma encloses all Dharmas.One moon is reflected in many waters;All the water-moons a moon.The Dharma-body of all Buddhas has entered my own nature,And my nature become Tathagata.One level completely contains all levels;It is not matter, mind nor activity.In an ins eighty-thousand teachings are fulfilled;In a twinkling the evil of eons is destroyed.All categor category;What relation have have these to my insight?Beyond praise, beyond blame, --Like has no bounds.Right here it is eternally full and serene,If you search elsewhere, you cannot cannot grasp it, you cannot reject it;In the midst of not gaining,In that condition you gain it.It in silence,In speech you hear its silence.The great way has opened and there are no obstac asks, what is your sectAnd how do you understand it?I reply, the power of tremendous praj is positive;People say it is negative;But they do not know.A smooth road, a rough road --Eve cannot imagine.I have continued my zazen for many eons;I do not say this to confuse you.I Dharma-banner and set forth our teaching;It is the clear doctrine of the BuddhaWhich I foun teacher, Hui Neng,Mahakashyapa became the Buddha-successor,Received the lamp and p generations of teachers in India,Then over seas and rivers to our landBodhi Dharma came a founder,And his robe, as we all know, passed through six teachers here,And how many gen gain the path,No one knows.The truth is not set forth;The false is basically vacant.Put both e and non-existence aside,Then even non-vacancy is vacant,The twenty kinds of vacancy hav oneness of the Tathagata-beingIs naturally sameness.Mind is the base, phenomena are dus a flaw in the mirror.When the flaw is brushed aside,The light begins to shine.When both min are forgotten,Then we become naturally genuine.Ah, the degenerate materialistic world!Peo they find self-control difficult.In the centuries since Shakyamuni, false views are deep,Demo the Dharma is weak, disturbances are many.People hear the Buddha's doctrine of immediac it, the demons will be crushedAs easily as a roofing tile.But they cannot accept, what a pity!Y

the source of action;Your body is the agent of calamity;No pity nor blame to anyone else.If y an invitation to hell,Never slander the Tathagata's true teaching.In the sandalwood forest, th other tree.Only the lion lives in such deep luxuriant woods,Wandering freely in a state of pea animals and birds stay far away.Just baby lions follow the parent,And three-year-olds alread loudly.How can the jackal pursue the king of the DharmaEven with a hundred-thousand dem Buddha's doctrine of directnessIs not a matter for human emotion.If you doubt this or feel ur you must discuss it with me.This is not the free rein of a mountain monk's ego.I fear your tra to wrong viewsOf permanent soul or complete extinction.Being is not being; non-being is no this rule by a hair,And you are off by a thousand miles.Understanding it, the dragon-child ab Buddhahood;Misunderstanding it, the greatest scholar falls into hell.From my youth I piled st studies,In sutras and sastras I searched and researched,Classifying terms and forms, oblivi entered the sea to count the sands in vainAnd then the Tathagata scolded me kindlyAs I rea counting your neighbor's treasure?"My work had been scattered and entirely useless,For ye blown by the wind.If the seed-nature is wrong, misunderstandings arise,And the Buddha's d immediacy cannot be attained.Shravaka and Pratyeka students may study earnestlyBut they aspiration.Others may be very clever,But they lack prajna.Stupid ones, childish ones,They s is something in an empty fist.They mistake the pointing finger for the moon.They are idle dre form and sensation.Not supposing something is the Tathagata.This is truly called Kwan-Yin, who sees freely.When awakened we find karmic hindrances fundamentally empty.But when repay all our debts.The hungry are served a king's repast,And they cannot eat.The sick mee doctors;Why don't they recover?The practice of Zen in this greedy world --This is the power vision.The lotus lives in the midst of the fire;It is never destroyed.Pradhanashura broke the g precepts;But he went on to realize the unborn.The Buddhahood he attained in that momentL our time.The incomparable lion roar of the doctrine!How sad that people are stubbornly igno knowing that crime blocks enlightenment,Not seeing the secret of the Tathagata teaching.Tw guilty of murder and carnality.Their leader, Upali, had the light of a glow-worm;He just added guilt.Vimalakirti cleared their doubts at onceAs sunshine melts the frost and snow.The rema emancipationWorks wonders innumerable as the sands of the Ganges.To this we offer cloth medicine.Ten thousand pieces of gold are not sufficient;Though you break your bodyAnd yo powder, --This is not enough for repayment.One vivid word surpasses millions of years of pr of the Dharma deserves our highest respect.Tathagatas, innumerable as sands of the Gang fact by their attainment.Now I know what the Mani-jewel is:Those who believe this will gain i accordingly.When we see truly, there is nothing at all.There is no person; there is no Buddha things of the universeAre just bubbles on the sea.Wise sages are all like flashes of lightning burning iron ring revolves around my head,With bright completeness of dhyana and prajnaI equanimity.If the sun becomes cold, and the moon hot,Evil cannot shatter the truth.The carr elephant moves like a mountain,How can the mantis block the road?The great elephant doe rabbit's path.Great enlightenment is not concerned with details.Don't belittle the sky by looki pipe.If you still don't understand,I will settle it for you.----------end of record

THE SHORTER DISCOURSE ON THE LION'S ROAR

INTRODUCTION

Among the hordes of animals that roam the wild, whether the jungle, the mountains or the plain, the lion is universally recognized to be their chief. The living embodiment of self-possessed power, he is the most regal in manner and deportment, the mightiest, the foremost with respect to speed, courage and dominion. The expression of the lion's supremacy is its roar -- a roar which reduces to silence the cries, howls, bellows, shrieks, barks and growls of lesser creatures. When the lion steps forth from his den and sounds his roar, all the other animals stop and listen. On such an occasion none dares even to sound its own cry, let alone to come into the open and challenge the fearless, unsurpassable roar of the golden-maned king of beasts.

The Buddha's discourses, as found in the ancient Pali Canon, frequently draw their imagery from the rich and varied animal life of the luxuriant Indian jungle. It is thus not surprising that when the Buddha has occasion to refer to himself, he chooses to represent himself as the stately lion and to describe his proclamation of the Dhamma, bold and thunderous, as a veritable lion's roar in the spiritual domain. The Majjhima Nikaya, the Collection of Middle Length Discourses, contains two suttas which bear this metaphor in their title. These two -- No. 11 and No. 12 in the collection -- are called respectively the Shorter Discourse on the Lion's Roar and the Great Discourse on the Lion's Roar. The variation in their titles, signalled by the Pali words //cula//, "minor," and //maha//, "great," evidently refers at one level to their different lengths, the one being four pages in the Pali, the other sixteen. At another level, these different designations may allude to the relative weight of the subject matter with which they deal, the "great" discourse being a rare revelation by the Buddha of his exalted spiritual endowments and all-encompassing knowledge, which entitle him to "roar his lion's roar" in the assemblies of human beings and gods. Still, both suttas, as their controlling image suggests, are of paramount importance. Each delivers in its own way an eloquent and inspiring testimony to the uniquely emancipating nature of the Buddha's Teaching and the peerless stature of the Teacher among the spiritual guides of humanity.

* * *

The Pali Commentaries explain that there are two kinds of lion's roar: that of the Buddha himself and that of his disciples. The former is sounded when the Buddha extols his own attainments or proclaims the potency of the doctrine he has realized; the latter, when accomplished disciples testify to their own achievement of the final goal, the fruit of Arahantship. Viewed in the light of this distinction, the Shorter Discourse on the Lion's Roar exhibits a hybrid character, being a sutta spoken by the Buddha to instruct his disciples how they should affirm, in discussions with others who hold different convictions, the singular greatness of the Teaching.

Section 2. The Buddha opens the discourse by disclosing the content of this roar. He tells his monks that they can boldly declare that "only here" (//idh'eva//) -- i.e. in the Dispensation of the Enlightened One -- is it possible to find true recluses of the first, second, third and fourth degrees. The expression "recluse" (//samana//) here refers elliptically to the four grades of noble disciples who have reached the stages of realization at which final deliverance from suffering is irrevocably assured: the stream-enterer, the once-returner, the non-returner and the Arahant. The "doctrines of others" (//parappavada//), the Buddha says, are devoid of true recluses, of those who stand on these elevated planes. In order to understand this statement properly, it is important to distinguish exactly what the words imply and what they do not imply. The words do not mean that other religions are destitute of persons of saintly stature. Such religions may well engender individuals who have attained to a high degree of spiritual purity -- beings of noble character, lofty virtue, deep contemplative experience, and rich endowment with love and compassion. These religions, however, would not be capable of giving rise to //ariyan// individuals, those equipped with the penetrative wisdom that can cut through the bonds that fetter living beings to samsara, the round of repeated birth and death. For such wisdom can only be engendered on a basis of right view -- the view of the three characteristics of all conditioned phenomena, of dependent arising, and of the Four Noble Truths -- and that view is promulgated exclusively in the fold of the Buddha's Dispensation.

Admittedly, this claim poses an unmistakable challenge to eclectic and universalist approaches to understanding the diversity of humankind's religious beliefs, but it in no way implies a lack of tolerance or good will. During the time of the Buddha himself, in the Ganges Valley, there thrived a whole panoply of religious teachings, all of which proposed, with a dazzling diversity of doctrines and practices, to show seekers of truth the path to liberating knowledge and to spiritual perfection. In his frequent meetings with uncommitted inquirers and with convinced followers of other creeds, the Buddha displayed the most complete tolerance and gracious cordiality. But though he was always ready to allow each individual to form his or her own convictions without the least constraint or coercion, he clearly did not subscribe to the universalist thesis that all religions teach essentially the same message, nor did he allow that the attainment of final release from suffering, Nibbana, was accessible to those who stood outside the fold of his own Dispensation. While this position may seem narrow and parochial to many today, when reaction against the presumptions of dogmatic religion has become so prevalent, it is not maintained by the Buddha as a hidebound dogma or from motives of self-exalting pride, but from a clear and accurate discernment of the precise conditions required for the attainment of deliverance.

The Buddha's statement on this issue emerges in at least two important passages in the Canon, each of which reveals, from a slightly different angle, exactly what those conditions are. One is found in the Mahaparinibbana Sutta (DN 16/ii,151-52). While the Buddha was lying between the twin sal trees on the eve of his demise, a wandering ascetic named Subhadda came into his presence to resolve a doubt: he wished to know whether or not the other great religious teachers contemporary with the Buddha, who were regarded as saints by the multitude, had actually attained spiritual realization, as they claimed to have done. The Buddha shifted the burden of the discussion away from a question aimed at assessing particular individuals and rephrased it in terms of a general evaluative principle. He declared: "In whatsoever Dhamma and Discipline the Noble Eightfold Path is not found, there one cannot find true recluses of the four degrees of liberation. But in whatever Dhamma and Discipline the Noble Eightfold Path is found, there one can find the four types of true recluses." Then the Buddha imparted to Subhadda the information that was important for him to know: "In this Dhamma and Discipline the Noble Eightfold Path is found, and in it alone are found also the true recluses of the four degrees. Outside this Dispensation the four types of enlightened individuals are not to be found. The doctrines of others are devoid of true recluses." In this passage the thrust of the Buddha's explanation points to a particular method of practice as essential to the attainment of true realization. That method of practice is the training in the Noble Eightfold Path, and because this path, in its fullness and perfection, is unique to the Dispensation of a Fully Enlightened One, it follows that persons who have reached the planes of deliverance are unique to his Dispensation as well.

In the Shorter Discourse on the Lion's Roar the reason for the Buddha's exclusivistic claim does not focus upon practice but upon doctrine, upon the understanding of the nature of reality that separates his own Dhamma from all other attempts to comprehend the human situation. As the argument unfolds, the Buddha will show that the essential key to liberation, the key that he alone makes available, is the teaching of //anatta//, of non-self or egolessness, which is at the same time the boundary line that marks the difference between his own doctrine and the doctrines of other teachers.

Sections 3-4. After announcing the "lion's roar" in Section 2, in the next section the Buddha begins to construct an imaginary dialogue between "the wanderers of other sects," i.e. the proponents of the rival religious systems, and his own ordained disciples, the bhikkhus. In the first stage of the discussion, the wanderers ask the bhikkhus about the grounds on which they advance their seemingly sweeping claim. The Buddha advises the monks that they should answer by mentioning four reasons: that they have confidence in the Teacher, they have confidence in his Teaching, they have fulfilled the precepts of training, and their co-religionists, both monastic and lay, live together in cordial harmony. The wanderers, however, do not remain satisfied with this answer, but join issue with the bhikkhus by pointing out that the four reasons that the Buddhists have offered are also found in their own sects. Thus there seems to be no essential distinction between them that the bhikkhus can appeal to as the basis for their thesis.

Section 5. The Buddha does not meet this challenge with a direct reply, but instead approaches it via an indirect route. He enters upon this route by first clarifying, through questioning of the wanderers, the criteria of a truly emancipating teaching. As a matter of mutual consensus both the bhikkhus and the wanderers agree that such a teaching must posit a goal that can be attained only by those who have achieved complete purification: freedom from lust, hate and delusion, from craving and clinging, from arbitrary prejudices ("favouring and opposing"), and from the coils of "proliferation" (//papanca//), i.e. thought constructions born of craving and groundless speculation.

Although the bhikkhus and the wanderers both agree on these criteria, this does not suffice to establish that they are shared equally by the different spiritual systems, nor does this imply that they are capable of being fulfilled regardless of the specific doctrine to which one subscribes or the discipline in which one trains. To show, again in an indirect manner, that the outside systems are not capable of leading to final liberation, the Buddha points out that there are two broad "families" of views, diametrically opposed to each other, under which the wide diversity of speculative systems can be subsumed. These two views are called, in the sutta, the view of being (//bhavaditthi//) and the view of non-being (//vibhavaditthi//). The view of being is identical with eternalism (//sassatavada//), the positing of some eternal entity or spiritual principle, i.e. a substantial self or soul, as the essence of the individual, and the positing of an eternal entity, such as a creator God or metaphysical

Absolute, as the ground or source of the objective universe. The view of non-being is identical with annihilationism (//ucchedavada//), the repudiation of any principle of continuity beyond death and the denial of an objective, transpersonal foundation for morality.

While those who adhere to the former view do concur with the Buddhists in accepting the efficacy of spiritual practice, their teachings, according to the Buddha, are not free of an erroneous grasp of actuality. They spring from a deep clinging to the notion of a permanent self, which issues in an edifice of doctrine designed to substantiate that idea and guarantee the immortality of the imagined self. Hence the Buddha traces this view to its root in the craving for being (//bhavatanha//), and he maintains that those who adopt such a view are for that very reason the victims, even though unwittingly, of craving and attachment. The view of non-being, on the other hand, arises from an attitude of contempt towards existence, and finds its root in the craving for non-being (//vibhavatanha//). The thinkers who adopt this view generally begin, as the Buddha does, by recognizing the pervasive nature of suffering; but instead of pursuing this suffering back to its true causes, they rush to an unwarranted extreme by declaring that the entire life-process comes to an absolute end with the breakup of the body at death, so that at death a being is annihilated and exists no more in any way.

Having isolated these two views and shown them in their mutual opposition, the Buddha then states that any "recluses or brahmins," i.e. spiritual teachers, who do not understand these views as they really are fail to measure up to the criteria of those who have achieved the final goal. They are still subject to lust, hatred and delusion, to craving and clinging, etc., and thus they cannot claim to be freed from the cycle of repeated birth and death. Only those who have comprehended these views, who see their dangers and have relinquished them, are accessible to the right view that leads beyond all erroneous extremes, and it is by the instrumentality of that view that they are capable of cutting off the defilements and arriving at release from the samsaric round.

Sections 9-15. Even at this point, however, the Buddha has not yet explicitly shown that liberation from cyclic existence is an exclusive prerogative of his own Dispensation. He has only left this conclusion as an inference for those who are already aware that his Dhamma makes known the middle way that transcends extremist views. In the present sequence, however, he will bring his argument to its conclusion by homing in on the crucial point that separates his own teaching from all other religious and philosophical systems. He takes up this task by way of an examination of the mental activity of clinging (//upadana//). He states that there are four kinds of clinging: (1) clinging to sense pleasures; (2) clinging to speculative views regarding the self and the world; (3) clinging to rules and observances, i.e. to external rules, rituals and austerities in the belief that they lead to liberation; (4) and clinging to a doctrine of self, i.e. to a view of a truly existent self. The last type of clinging, the subtlest and most elusive of the group, is tantamount to what the texts refer to as "personality view" (//sakkayaditthi//): the view of a substantial self taken to be either identical in some way to the five aggregates that constitute the personality, or to stand in some relationship to those aggregates (see MN 44/i,300, etc.).

The Buddha next points out that the recluses and brahmins who propose a path to liberation all declare that they propound "the full understanding of all kinds of clinging," a phrase the commentary to the sutta glosses as meaning the //overcoming// (//samatikkama//) of all kinds of clinging. However, the Buddha says, in spite of this claim, the other spiritual teachers recognize and attack only a limited number of the forms of clinging; at best, they might teach the overcoming of the first three forms of clinging. What they cannot teach, because they have not comprehended this for themselves, is the overcoming of clinging to a doctrine of self, and it is this fourth type of clinging that vitiates even the aspects of their teachings that are wholesome and praiseworthy. Because they perceive the dangers in the grosser types of clinging, they might urge their disciples to relinquish them, to give up sensuality, dogmatism and ritualism, and to cultivate in their place renunciation, detachment and equanimity. Thereby they can enjoin their disciples to engage in virtuous courses of spiritual practice, courses which have the potency to generate superior states of rebirth within the round of samsara. However, what they have not discovered, because of the insurmountable limits to their range of understanding, is the buried root of the entire cycle of repeated existence, which consists precisely in that adherence to the notion of self. For this reason, the Buddha maintains, such a Dhamma and Discipline cannot show the way to the uprooting of the belief in self, and he therefore concludes that it is "unemancipating, unconducive to peace" -- the final peace of Nibbana. Being taught by one who is not a Fully Enlightened Buddha, such a system does not merit the confidence of those who can be satisfied with nothing less than complete release from all samsaric suffering.

In contrast to other spiritual teachers, the Buddha continues, he himself, the Tathagata, describes the full understanding of all kinds of clinging, inclusive of the clinging to a doctrine of self. Recognizing the danger in views of self, aware that all such views, no matter how lofty, are undermined by a fundamental cognitive error, he proclaims a path that leads to the eradication of views of self in all their bewildering variety. Hence, the Buddha says, his Dhamma and Discipline is truly emancipating, truly capable of leading to final peace, promulgated by a Fully Enlightened One, the proper field of confidence for seekers of liberation.

Sections 16-17. In the final sections of the discourse, the Buddha will validate his claim regarding the emancipating quality of his Dispensation by showing how a disciple who undertakes the practice of his teaching can reach the fruit of final deliverance. He first takes up the four kinds of clinging, the subject around which the preceding portion of the exposition revolved, and connects this topic with another major principle of his doctrine, dependent arising (//paticca samuppada//). By applying the principle of dependent arising, he traces clinging to its source in craving, and then, continuing this line of inquiry, he pursues the entire sequence of conditional factors at the base of samsara back to its deepest and most pernicious root, ignorance (//avijja//).

In the final paragraph he introduces a bhikkhu who arrives at the culmination of the path: one who develops wisdom to the fullest extent, abandons all ignorance, and arouses the liberating knowledge.

Such a one no longer clings through any kind of clinging: he has eradicated all four types of clinging, including the clinging to a doctrine of self, and with their eradication has attained the final goal, the personal realization of Nibbana right in this very life.

* * * * * * * *

MAJJHIMA NIKAYA No. 11

The Shorter Discourse on the Lion's Roar

(//Culasihanada Sutta//)

1. Thus have I heard. On one occasion the Blessed One was living at Savatthi in Jeta's Grove, Anathapindika's Park. There he addressed the bhikkhus thus: "Bhikkhus." -- "Venerable sir," they replied. The Blessed One said this:

2. "Bhikkhus, only here is there a recluse, only here a second recluse, only here a third recluse, only here a fourth recluse. The doctrines of others are devoid [*p.64] of recluses: that is how you should rightly roar your lion's roar. [1]

3. "It is possible, bhikkhus, that wanderers of other sects might ask: 'But on the strength of what (argument) or with the support of what (authority) do the venerable ones say thus?' Wanderers of other sects who ask thus may be answered in this way: 'Friends, four things have been declared to us by the Blessed One who knows and sees, accomplished and fully enlightened; on seeing these in ourselves we say thus: "Only here is there a recluse, only here a second recluse, only here a third recluse, only here a fourth recluse. The doctrines of others are devoid of recluses." What are the four? We have confidence in the Teacher, we have confidence in the Dhamma, we have fulfilled the precepts, and our companions in the Dhamma are dear and agreeable to us whether they are layfolk or those gone forth. These are the four things declared to us by the Blessed One who knows and sees, accomplished and fully enlightened, on seeing which in ourselves we say as we do.'

4. "It is possible, bhikkhus, that wanderers of other sects might say thus: 'Friends, we too have confidence in the Teacher, that is, in our Teacher; we too have confidence in the Dhamma, that is, in our Dhamma; we too have fulfilled the precepts, that is, our precepts; our companions in the Dhamma are dear and agreeable to us too whether they are layfolk or those gone forth. What is the distinction here, friends, what is the variance, what is the difference between you and us?'

5. "Wanderers of other sects who ask thus may be answered in this way: 'How then, friends, is the goal one or many?' Answering rightly, the wanderers of other sects would answer thus: 'Friends, the goal is one, not many.' [2] -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one affected by lust or free from lust?' Answering rightly, the wanderers of other sects would answer thus: 'Friends, that goal is for one free from lust, not for one affected by lust.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one affected by hate or free from hate?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one free from hate, not for one affected by hate.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one affected by delusion or free from delusion?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one free from delusion, not for one affected by delusion.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one affected by craving or free from craving?' [*p.65] Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one free from craving, not for one affected by craving.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one affected by clinging or free from clinging?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one free from clinging, not for one affected by clinging.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one who has vision or for one without vision?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one with vision, not for one without vision.' -- 'But, friends, is that goal for one who favours and opposes, or for one who does not favour and oppose?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one who does not favour and oppose, not for one who favours and opposes.' [3] -- 'But, friends is that goal for one who delights in and enjoys proliferation, or for one who does not delight in and enjoy proliferation?' Answering rightly, they would answer: 'Friends, that goal is for one who does not delight in and enjoy proliferation, not for one who delights in and enjoys proliferation.' [4]

6. "Bhikkhus, there are these two views: the view of being and the view of non-being. Any recluses or brahmins who rely on the view of being, adopt the view of being, accept the view of being, are opposed to the view of non-being. Any recluses or brahmins who rely on the view of non-being, adopt the view of non-being, accept the view of non-being, are opposed to the view of being. [5]

7. "Any recluses or brahmins who do not understand as they actually are the origin, the disappearance, the gratification, the danger and the escape [6] in the case of these two views are affected by lust, affected by hate, affected by delusion, affected by craving, affected by clinging, without vision, given to favouring and opposing, and they delight in and enjoy proliferation. They are not freed from birth, ageing and death, from sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair; they are not freed from suffering, I say.

8. "Any recluses or brahmins who understand as they actually are the origin, the disappearance, the gratification, the danger and the escape in the case of these two views are without lust, without hate, without delusion, without craving, without clinging, with vision, not given to favouring and opposing, and they do not delight in and enjoy proliferation. They are freed from birth, ageing and death, from sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief and despair; they are freed from suffering, I say. [*p.66]

9. "Bhikkhus, there are these four kinds of clinging. What four? Clinging to sensual pleasures, clinging to views, clinging to rules and observances, and clinging to a doctrine of self.

10. "Though certain recluses and brahmins claim to propound the full understanding of all kinds of clinging, they do not completely describe the full understanding of all kinds of clinging. [7] They describe the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures without describing the full understanding of clinging to views, clinging to rules and observances, and clinging to a doctrine of self. Why is that? Those good recluses and brahmins do not understand these three instances of clinging as they actually are. Therefore, though they claim to propound the full understanding of all kinds of clinging, they describe only the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures without describing the full understanding of clinging to views, clinging to rules and observances, and clinging to a doctrine of self.

11. "Though certain recluses and brahmins claim to propound the full understanding of all kinds of clinging ... they describe the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures and clinging to views without describing the full understanding of clinging to rules and observances and clinging to a doctrine of self. Why is that? They do not understand two instances ... therefore they describe only the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures and clinging to views without describing the full understanding of clinging to rules and observances and clinging to a doctrine of self.

12. "Though certain recluses and brahmins claim to propound the full understanding of all kinds of clinging ... they describe the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures, clinging to views, and clinging to rules and observances without describing the full understanding of clinging to a doctrine of self. They do not understand one instance ... therefore they describe only the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures, clinging to views, and clinging to rules and observances without describing the full understanding of clinging to a doctrine of self. [8]

13. "Bhikkhus, in such a Dhamma and Discipline as that it is plain that confidence in the Teacher is not rightly directed, that confidence in the Dhamma is not rightly directed, that fulfilment of the precepts is not rightly directed, and that the affection among companions in the Dhamma is not rightly directed. Why is that? Because that is how it is when the Dhamma and Discipline is [*p.67] badly proclaimed and badly expounded, unemancipating, unconducive to peace, expounded by one who is not fully enlightened.

14. "Bhikkhus, when a Tathagata, accomplished and fully enlightened, claims to propound the full understanding of all kinds of clinging, he completely describes the full understanding of all kinds of clinging: he describes the full understanding of clinging to sensual pleasures, clinging to views, clinging to rules and observances, and clinging to a doctrine of self. [9]

15. "Bhikkhus, in such a Dhamma and Discipline as that it is plain that confidence in the Teacher is rightly directed, that confidence in the Dhamma is rightly directed, that fulfilment of the precepts is rightly directed, and that the affection among companions in the Dhamma is rightly directed. Why is that? Because that is how it is when the Dhamma and Discipline is well proclaimed and well expounded, emancipating, conducive to peace, expounded by one who is fully enlightened.

16. "Now these four kinds of clinging have what as their source, what as their origin, from what are they born and produced? These four kinds of clinging have craving as their source, craving as their origin, they are born and produced from craving. [10] Craving has what as its source ...? Craving has feeling as its source.... Feeling has what as its source ...? Feeling has contact as its source ... Contact has what as its source ...? Contact has the sixfold base as its source.... The sixfold base has what as its source ...? The sixfold base has mentality-materiality as its source.... Mentality-materiality has what as its source ...? Mentality-materiality has consciousness as its source.... Consciousness has what as its source ...? Consciousness has formations as its source.... Formations have what as their source ...? Formations have ignorance as their source, ignorance as their origin; they are born and produced from ignorance.

17. "Bhikkhus, when ignorance is abandoned and true knowledge has arisen in a bhikkhu, then with the fading away of ignorance and the arising of true knowledge he no longer clings to sensual pleasures, no longer clings to views, no longer clings to rules and observances, no longer clings to a doctrine of self. [11] When he does not cling, he is not agitated. When he is not agitated, he personally attains Nibbana. He understands: 'Birth is destroyed, the holy life has been lived, what had to be done has been done, there is no more coming to any state of being.' " [12] [*p.68]

That is what the Blessed One said. The bhikkhus were satisfied and delighted in the Blessed One's words.

* * *

Notes

1. Comy. explains "lion's roar" (//sihanada//) as meaning a supreme roar (//setthanada)//, a fearless roar (//abhitanada//), and a roar which cannot be confuted (//appatinada//). It adds: The roar about the existence of these four types of recluse only here is the supreme roar. The absence of any fear on account of others when one advances such a claim makes it a fearless roar. As none of the rival teachers can rise up and say, "These recluses also exist in our Dispensation," it is a roar which cannot be confuted.

2. Comy.: Even though the adherents of other sects all declare Arahantship -- understood in a general sense as spiritual perfection -- to be the goal, they point to other attainments as the goal in accordance with their views. Thus the brahmins declare the Brahma-world to be the goal, the great ascetics declare the gods of Streaming Radiance, the wanderers the gods of Refulgent Glory, and the Ajivakas the non-percipient state, which they posit to be "infinite mind" (//anantamanasa//).

3. "Favouring and opposing" (//anurodha-pativirodha//): reacting with attraction through lust and with aversion through hatred.

4. Proliferation (papanca), according to Comy., generally means mental activity governed by craving, conceit and views, but here only craving and views are intended.

5. The adoption of one view entailing opposition to the other links up with the earlier statement that the goal is for one who does not favour and oppose.

6. Comy. mentions eight conditions which serve as the origin (//samudaya//) of these views: the five aggregates, ignorance, contact, perception, thought, unwise attention, bad friends, and the voice of another. Their disappearance (//atthangama//) is the path of stream-entry, which eradicates all wrong views. Their gratification (//assada//) may be understood as the satisfaction of psychological need to which the view caters, specifically the nurturing of craving for being by the eternalist view and of craving for non-being by the annihilationist view. Their danger (//adinava//) is the continued bondage they entail, by obstructing the acceptance of right view, which leads to liberation. And the escape from them (//nissarana//) is Nibbana.

7. Comy. glosses full understanding (//parinna//) here as overcoming (//samatikkama//), with reference to the commentarial notion of //pahanaparinna//, "full understanding as abandonment."

8. This passage clearly indicates that the critical differentiating factor of the Buddha's Dhamma is its "full understanding of clinging to a doctrine of self." This means, in effect, that the Buddha alone is able to show how to overcome all views of self by developing penetration into the truth of non-self (//anatta//).

9. Comy.: The Buddha teaches how clinging to sense pleasures is abandoned by the path of Arahantship, while the other three types of clinging are eliminated by the path of stream-entry. The path of stream-entry eliminates the other three clingings because these three are all forms of wrong view, and all wrong views are overcome at that stage. Although the statement that clinging to sense pleasures is abandoned by the path of Arahantship may sound strange, in view of the fact that sensual desire is already eliminated by the non-returner, the Tika (subcommentary) to the sutta explains that in the present context the word //kama//, sense pleasure, should be understood to comprise all forms of greed, and the subtler types of greed are only eliminated with the attainment of Arahantship.

10. This passage is explained in order to show how clinging is to be abandoned. Clinging is traced back, via the chain of dependent arising, to its root-cause in ignorance, and then the destruction of ignorance is shown to be the means to eradicate clinging.

11. The Pali idiom, //n'eva kamupadanam upadiyati//, would have to be rendered literally as "he does not cling to the clinging to sense pleasures," which may obscure the sense more than it illuminates it. The word //upadana// in Pali is the object of its own verb form, while "clinging" in English is not. The easiest solution is to translate directly in accordance with the sense rather than to try to reproduce the idiom in translation.

12. This is the stock canonical declaration of Arahantship.

* * * * * * * *

|| namo tassa bhagavato arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa ||

saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• ye

sagÄ• thÄ• vagga-aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ•

ganthÄ• rambhakathÄ•

karuá¹‡Ä• sÄ«talahadayaá¹ƒ \Ne I 1/ \Ee I 1/ \Be I 1/, paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajjotavihatamohatamaá¹ƒ

sanarÄ• maralokagaruá¹ƒ, vande __sugataá¹ƒ_ gativimuttaá¹ƒ ||

buddhopi buddhabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ, bhÄ• vetvÄ• ceva sacchikatvÄ• ca.

yaá¹ƒ upagato gatamalaá¹ƒ, vande tamanuttaraá¹ƒ __dhammaá¹ƒ_ ||

sugatassa orasÄ• naá¹ƒ, puttÄ• naá¹ƒ mÄ• rasenamathanÄ• naá¹ƒ.

aá¹-á¹-hannampi samÅ«haá¹ƒ, sirasÄ• vande __ariyasaá¹…ghaá¹ƒ_ ||

iti \Ne I 2/ me pasannamatino, ratanattayavandanÄ• mayaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ.

yaá¹ƒ suvihatantarÄ• yo, hutvÄ• tassÄ• nubhÄ• vena || saá¹ƒyuttavaggapaá¹-imaá¹‡á¸• itassa, __saá¹ƒyuttaÄ• gamavarassa_.

buddhÄ• nubuddhasaá¹ƒvaá¹‡á¹‡itassa, Ã±Ä• á¹‡appabhedajananassa ||

atthappakÄ• sanatthaá¹ƒ, __aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• _ Ä• dito vasisatehi.

paÃ±cahi yÄ• saá¹…gÄ«tÄ• , anusaá¹…gÄ«tÄ• ca pacchÄ• pi ||

sÄ«haá¸·adÄ«paá¹ƒ pana Ä• bhatÄ• tha, vasinÄ• mahÄ• mahindena.

á¹-hapitÄ• sÄ«haá¸·abhÄ• sÄ• ya, dÄ«pavÄ• sÄ«namatthÄ• ya ||

apanetvÄ• na \Be I 2/ tatohaá¹ƒ, sÄ«haá¸·abhÄ• saá¹ƒ manoramaá¹ƒ bhÄ• saá¹ƒ.

tantinayÄ• nucchavikaá¹ƒ, Ä• ropento vigatadosaá¹ƒ ||

samayaá¹ƒ avilomento, therÄ• naá¹ƒ theravaá¹ƒsadÄ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ.

sunipuá¹‡avinicchayÄ• naá¹ƒ, mahÄ• vihÄ• re nivÄ• sÄ«naá¹ƒ ||

hitvÄ• \Ee I 2/ punappunÄ• gata-matthaá¹ƒ, atthaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sayissÄ• mi.

sujanassa ca tuá¹-á¹-hatthaá¹ƒ, ciraá¹-á¹-hitatthaÃ±ca dhammassa ||

sÄ• vatthipabhÅ«tÄ«naá¹ƒ, nagarÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• katÄ• heá¹-á¹-hÄ• .

saá¹…gÄ«tÄ«naá¹ƒ dvinnaá¹ƒ, yÄ• me atthaá¹ƒ vadantena ||

vitthÄ• ravasena sudaá¹ƒ, vatthÅ«ni ca yÄ• ni tattha vuttÄ• ni.

tesampi na idha bhiyyo, vitthÄ• rakathaá¹ƒ karissÄ• mi ||

suttÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ne I 3/ pana atthÄ• , na vinÄ• vatthÅ«hi ye pakÄ• santi.

tesaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sanatthaá¹ƒ, vatthÅ«nipi dassayissÄ• mi ||

sÄ«lakathÄ• dhutadhammÄ• , kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ni ceva sabbÄ• ni.

cariyÄ• vidhÄ• nasahito, jhÄ• nasamÄ• pattivitthÄ• ro ||

sabbÄ• ca abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• yo, paÃ±Ã±Ä• saá¹…kalananicchayo ceva.

khandhÄ• dhÄ• tÄ• yatanindriyÄ• ni, ariyÄ• ni ceva cattÄ• ri ||

saccÄ• ni paccayÄ• kÄ• radesanÄ• , suparisuddhanipuá¹‡anayÄ• .

avimuttatantimaggÄ• , vipassanÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• ceva ||

iti pana sabbaá¹ƒ yasmÄ• , __visuddhimagge_ mayÄ• suparisuddhaá¹ƒ.

vuttaá¹ƒ tasmÄ• bhiyyo, na taá¹ƒ idha vicÄ• rayissÄ• mi ||

``majjhe __visuddhimaggo, _ esa catunnampi Ä• gamÄ• naÃ±hi.

á¹-hatvÄ• pakÄ• sayissati, tattha yathÄ• bhÄ• sitamatthaá¹ƒâ€™â€™ ||

icceva kato tasmÄ• , tampi gahetvÄ• na saddhimetÄ• ya.

aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya vijÄ• natha, saá¹ƒyuttavinissitaá¹ƒ atthanti ||

1. devatÄ• saá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ

1. naá¸·avaggo

1. oghataraá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

tattha \Ne I 4/ \Be I 3/ __saá¹ƒyuttÄ• gamo_ nÄ• ma sagÄ• thÄ• vaggo, nidÄ• navaggo, kha saá¸·Ä• yatanavaggo, mahÄ• vaggoti paÃ±cavaggo hoti. suttato --- ``satta suttasahassÄ• ni, satta suttasatÄ• ni ca.

dvÄ• saá¹-á¹-hi ceva suttÄ• ni, eso saá¹ƒyuttasaá¹…gahoâ€™â€™ ||

bhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• rato \Ee I 3/ bhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• rasataá¹ƒ hoti. tassa vaggesu __sagÄ• thÄ• vagg __oghataraá¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ_. tassÄ• pi ``evaá¹ƒ me sutaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• yasmatÄ• paá¹-hamamahÄ• saá¹…gÄ«tikÄ• le vuttaá¹ƒ nidÄ• namÄ• di. sÄ• panesÄ• paá¹-hamama sumaá¹…galavilÄ• siniyÄ• dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya Ä• dimhi vitthÄ• ritÄ• , tasmÄ vitthÄ• ritanayeneva veditabbÄ• .

<1> yaá¹ƒ \Ee I 4/ panetaá¹ƒ ``evaá¹ƒ me sutaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dikaá¹ƒ nidÄ• naá¹ƒ, tattha _ __me_tiÄ• dÄ«ni nÄ• mapadÄ• ni. __sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ viharatÄ«_ti ettha __vÄ«_ti upasagga Ä• khyÄ• tapadanti iminÄ• tÄ• va nayena padavibhÄ• go veditabbo.

atthato pana __evaá¹ƒ_saddo tÄ• va upamÅ«padesa-sampahaá¹ƒsana-garahaá¹‡a-vacanasampaá¹-iggahÄ• kÄ• ranidassanÄ• tathÄ• hesa --- ``evaá¹ƒ jÄ• tena maccena, kattabbaá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ bahuâ€™â€™ nti (Dhp 5 upamÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• gato. ``evaá¹ƒ te abhikkamitabbaá¹ƒ \Ne I 5/, evaá¹ƒ te paá¹-ikkamitabba
4.122) upadese. ``evametaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• , evametaá¹ƒ sugatÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (AN I ``evamevaá¹ƒ panÄ• yaá¹ƒ vasalÄ« yasmiá¹ƒ vÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ vÄ• tassa muá¹‡á¸• akassa sa bhÄ• satÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (SN I 1.187) garahaá¹‡e. ``evaá¹ƒ, bhanteti kho te bhikkhÅ paccassosuâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dÄ«su (MN I 1) vacanasampaá¹-iggahe. ``evaá¹ƒ byÄ• kho aha dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (MN I 398) Ä• kÄ• re \Be I 4/. `` samaá¹‡o Ä• nando tenupasaá¹…kama; upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• mama vacanena samaá¹‡aá¹ appÄ• taá¹…kaá¹ƒ lahuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ phÄ• suvihÄ• raá¹ƒ puccha --- `subho mÄ• bhavantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandaá¹ƒ appÄ• bÄ• dhaá¹ƒ appÄ• taá¹…kaá¹ƒ lahuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ balaá¹

ti. evaÃ±ca vadehi --- `sÄ• dhu kira bhavaá¹ƒ Ä• nando yena subhassa mÄ• á¹‡avassa \Ee nivesanaá¹ƒ, tenupasaá¹…kamatu anukampaá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• yÄ• â€™ tiâ€™â€™ Ä• dÄ«su ( maÃ±Ã±atha kÄ• lÄ• mÄ• , ime dhammÄ• kusalÄ• vÄ• akusalÄ• vÄ• ti? akusalÄ• , bhant sÄ• vajjÄ• , bhante. viÃ±Ã±ugarahitÄ• vÄ• viÃ±Ã±uppasatthÄ• vÄ• ti? viÃ±Ã±ugarahitÄ• , samÄ• dinnÄ• ahitÄ• ya dukkhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattanti vÄ• no vÄ• , kathaá¹ƒ vo ettha hotÄ«ti? samÄ• dinnÄ• ahitÄ• ya dukkhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattanti, evaá¹ƒ no ettha hotÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ svÄ• yamidha Ä• kÄ• ranidassanÄ• vadhÄ• raá¹‡esu daá¹-á¹-habbo.

tattha Ä• kÄ• ratthena __evaá¹ƒ_saddena etamatthaá¹ƒ dÄ«peti --- nÄ• nÄ• nayanipuá¹‡aa anekajjhÄ• sayasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ atthabyaÃ±janasampannaá¹ƒ vividhapÄ• á¹-ihÄ• riyaa paá¹-ivedhagambhÄ«raá¹ƒ sabbasattÄ• naá¹ƒ sakasakabhÄ• sÄ• nurÅ«pato sotapathamÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ sabbappakÄ• rena ko samattho viÃ±Ã±Ä• tuá¹ƒ? sabbathÄ• mena pana sotukÄ• sutaá¹ƒ, mayÄ• pi ekenÄ• kÄ• rena sutanti.

nidassanatthena --- ``nÄ• haá¹ƒ sayambhÅ«, na mayÄ• idaá¹ƒ sacchikataâ€™â€™ nti attÄ ``evaá¹ƒ me sutaá¹ƒ, mayÄ• pi evaá¹ƒ sutaâ€™â€™ nti idÄ• ni vattabbaá¹ƒ sakalasuttaá¹ƒ

avadhÄ• raá¹‡atthena --- ``etadaggaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, mama sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹
Ä• nando, gatimantÄ• naá¹ƒ, satimantÄ• naá¹ƒ, dhitimantÄ• naá¹ƒ, upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kÄ• naá¹ƒ
(AN I 1.220-223) evaá¹ƒ \Ne I 6/ bhagavatÄ• --- ``Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando atthakusalo dhamm niruttikusalo pubbÄ• parakusaloâ€™â€™ ti (AN II 5.169) evaá¹ƒ dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• ca attano dhÄ• raá¹‡abalaá¹ƒ dassento sattÄ• naá¹ƒ sotukÄ• mataá¹ƒ janeti --- ``evaá¹ƒ me su atthato vÄ• byaÃ±janato vÄ• anÅ«namanadhikaá¹ƒ, evameva na aÃ±Ã±athÄ• daá¹-á¹-hal __me_saddo \Be I 5/ tÄ«su atthesu dissati. tathÄ• hissa --- ``gÄ• thÄ• bhigÄ«taá¹ƒ me abh ntiÄ• dÄ«su (Sn 81) mayÄ• ti attho. ``sÄ• dhu me, bhante, bhagavÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena dhamm tiÄ• dÄ«su (SN II 4.88) mayhanti attho. ``dhammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• me, bhikkhave, bhavathÄ• â mamÄ• ti attho. idha pana ``mayÄ• sutaâ€™â€™ nti ca ``mama sutaâ€™â€™ nti ca atthac

__suta_nti ayaá¹ƒ __suta_saddo saupasaggo anupasaggo ca gamana-vissuta-kilinnaupacitÄ• nuyoga-sotaviÃ±Ã±eyya-sotadvÄ• rÄ• nusÄ• raviÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ hissa --- ``senÄ• ya pasutoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su gacchantoti attho. ``sutadhammassa passa vissutadhammassÄ• ti attho. ``avassutÄ• avassutassÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (Vin IV 657) k

``tumhehi puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasutaá¹ƒ anappakaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dÄ«su (Khp 7.12) upacitanti atth dhÄ«rÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (Dhp 181) jhÄ• nÄ• nuyuttÄ• ti attho. ``diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sutaá¹ƒ 241) sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyanti attho. ``sutadharo sutasannicayoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (MN I 339) sotadvÄ• rÄ• nusÄ• raviÃ±Ã±Ä• tadharoti attho. idha panassa sotadvÄ• rÄ• nusÄ• rena upa upadhÄ• raá¹‡anti vÄ• attho. me-saddassa hi mayÄ• ti atthe sati --- ``evaá¹ƒ mayÄ• sutaá upadhÄ• ritaâ€™â€™ nti yujjati. mamÄ• ti atthe sati --- ``evaá¹ƒ mama sutaá¹ƒ, sotadvÄ• rÄ upadhÄ• raá¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti yujjati.

evametesu tÄ«su padesu __eva_nti sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• diviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akiccanidassanaá¹ vuttaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gipuggalanidassanaá¹ƒ. __suta_nti assavanabhÄ• vapaá¹-ikkh anÅ«nÄ• nadhikÄ• viparÄ«taggahaá¹‡anidassanaá¹ƒ. tathÄ• __eva_nti tassa sotadvÄ• rÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avÄ«thiyÄ• nÄ• nappakÄ• rena Ä• rammaá¹‡e \Ne I 7/ pavattibhÄ• vappakÄ• attappakÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. __suta_nti dhammappakÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. ayaÃ±hettha saá¹…khepo --- ``nÄ pavattÄ• ya viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avÄ«thiyÄ• mayÄ• na aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ, idaá¹ƒ pana kataá¹ƒ, tathÄ• \Be I 6/ __eva_nti niddisitabbappakÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. __me_ti puggalappakÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. __

puggalakiccappakÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti --- ``yaá¹ƒ suttaá¹ƒ niddisissÄ• mi, taá¹ƒ sutaâ€™â€™ nti.

tathÄ• __eva_nti yassa cittasantÄ• nassa nÄ• nÄ• kÄ• rappavattiyÄ• nÄ• natthabyaÃ±jan nÄ• nÄ• kÄ• raniddeso \Ee I 7/. __eva_nti hi ayaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• rapaÃ±Ã±atti. __me_ti kattunido visayaniddeso. ettÄ• vatÄ• nÄ• nÄ• kÄ• rappavattena cittasantÄ• nena taá¹ƒsamaá¹…gino gahaá¹‡asanniá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ hoti.

atha vÄ• __eva_nti puggalakiccaniddeso. __suta_nti viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akiccaniddeso. __me_ti ubhayakiccayuttapuggalaniddeso. ayaá¹ƒ panettha saá¹…khepo --- ``mayÄ• savanakiccavi puggalena viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡avasena laddhasavanakiccavohÄ• rena sutaâ€™â€™ nti.

tattha __eva_nti ca __me_ti ca saccikaá¹-á¹-haparamatthavasena avijjamÄ• napaÃ±Ã±atti.
paramatthato atthi, yaá¹ƒ evanti vÄ• meti vÄ• niddesaá¹ƒ labhetha. __suta_nti vijjamÄ• na taá¹ƒ ettha sotena upaladdhaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ paramatthato vijjamÄ• nanti. tathÄ• __eva_nti ca __ upÄ• dÄ• ya vattabbato upÄ• dÄ• paÃ±Ã±atti. __suta_nti diá¹-á¹-hÄ• dÄ«ni upanidhÄ• ya v upanidhÄ• paÃ±Ã±atti.

ettha ca __eva_nti vacanena asammohaá¹ƒ dÄ«peti. na hi sammÅ«á¸·ho nÄ• nappakÄ• ra __suta_nti vacanena sutassa asammosaá¹ƒ dÄ«peti. yassa hi sutaá¹ƒ sammuá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ h mayÄ• sutanti paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti. iccassa asammohena paÃ±Ã±Ä• siddhi, asammosena pana paÃ±Ã±Ä• pubbaá¹…gamÄ• ya satiyÄ• byaÃ±janÄ• vadhÄ• raá¹‡asamatthatÄ• , satipubba atthapaá¹-ivedhasamatthatÄ• \Ne I 8/. tadubhayasamatthatÄ• yogena atthabyaÃ±janasamp anupÄ• lanasamatthato dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikattasiddhi.

aparo nayo --- __eva_nti vacanena yoniso manasikÄ• raá¹ƒ dÄ«peti, ayoniso manasikaroto nÄ• nappakÄ• rapaá¹-ivedhÄ• bhÄ• vato. __suta_nti vacanena avikkhepaá¹ƒ dÄ«peti vikkhi tathÄ• hi vikkhittacitto puggalo sabbasampattiyÄ• vuccamÄ• nopi ``na mayÄ• sutaá¹ƒ, pu bhaá¹‡athÄ• â€™â€™ ti bhaá¹‡ati. yoniso manasikÄ• rena cettha attasammÄ• paá¹‡idhiá¹ƒ sÄ• dheti, sammÄ• appaá¹‡ihitattassa pubbe akatapuÃ±Ã±assa vÄ• tadabhÄ• vato. avikkh saddhammassavanaá¹ƒ sappurisÅ«panissayaÃ±ca sÄ• dheti. na hi vikkhittacitto sotuá¹ƒ sa anupanissayamÄ• nassa savanaá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti.

aparo nayo --- yasmÄ• __ ``eva_nti yassa cittasantÄ• nassa nÄ• nÄ• kÄ• rappavattiyÄ• nÄ• natthabyaÃ±janaggahaá¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti, tassa nÄ• nÄ• kÄ• raniddesoâ€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ, na sammÄ• appaá¹‡ihitattano pubbe akatapuÃ±Ã±assa vÄ• hoti, tasmÄ• __eva_nti iminÄ pacchimacakkadvayasampattimattano dÄ«peti. __suta_nti savanayogena purimacakkadvay appatirÅ«padese vasato sappurisÅ«panissayavirahitassa vÄ• savanaá¹ƒ atthi. iccassa pac Ä• sayasuddhi siddhÄ• hoti, purimacakkadvayasiddhiyÄ• payogasuddhi, tÄ• ya ca Ä• saya adhigamabyattisiddhi, payogasuddhiyÄ• Ä• gamabyattisiddhi. iti payogÄ• sayasuddhassa Ä vacanaá¹ƒ aruá¹‡uggaá¹ƒ viya sÅ«riyassa udayato, yoniso manasikÄ• ro viya ca kusalakam vacanassa pubbaá¹…gamaá¹ƒ bhavitunti á¹-hÄ• ne nidÄ• naá¹ƒ á¹-hapento __evaá¹ƒ me su

aparo nayo --- __eva_nti iminÄ• nÄ• nappakÄ• rapaá¹-ivedhadÄ«pakena vacanena attano atthapaá¹-ibhÄ• napaá¹-isambhidÄ• sampattisabbhÄ• vaá¹ƒ dÄ«peti. __suta_nti iminÄ• sotabbabhedapaá¹-ivedhadÄ«pakena dhammaniruttipaá¹-isambhidÄ• sampattisabbhÄ• vaá manasikÄ• radÄ«pakavacanaá¹ƒ bhÄ• samÄ• no --- ``ete mayÄ• dhammÄ• manasÄ• nup suppaá¹-ividdhÄ• â€™â€™ ti dÄ«peti. __suta_nti idaá¹ƒ savanayogadÄ«pakavacanaá¹ƒ bh dhammÄ• sutÄ• dhÄ• tÄ• vacasÄ• paricitÄ• â€™â€™ ti dÄ«peti. tadubhayenapi atthabya savane Ä• daraá¹ƒ janeti. atthabyaÃ±janaparipuá¹‡á¹‡aÃ±hi \Ne I 9/ dhammaá¹ƒ Ä• darena 9/ hitÄ• paribÄ• hiro hotÄ«ti Ä• daraá¹ƒ janetvÄ• sakkaccaá¹ƒ dhammo sotabboti.

__evaá¹ƒ_ \Be I 8/ __me suta_nti iminÄ• pana sakalena vacanena Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando t dhammaá¹ƒ attano adahanto asappurisabhÅ«miá¹ƒ atikkamati, sÄ• vakattaá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nan okkamati. tathÄ• asaddhammÄ• cittaá¹ƒ vuá¹-á¹-hÄ• peti, saddhamme cittaá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ sutamevetaá¹ƒ mayÄ• , tasseva pana bhagavato vacanaâ€™â€™ nti dÄ«pento attÄ• naá¹ƒ apadisati, jinavacanaá¹ƒ appeti, dhammanettiá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• peti.

apica ``evaá¹ƒ me sutaâ€™â€™ nti attanÄ• uppÄ• ditabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ appaá¹-ijÄ• nanto purim

``sammukhÄ• paá¹-iggahitamidaá¹ƒ mayÄ• tassa bhagavato catuvesÄ• rajjavisÄ• radassa Ä• sabhaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹-á¹-hÄ• yino sÄ«hanÄ• danÄ• dino sabbasattuttamassa dhammissa dhammÄ• dhipatino dhammadÄ«passa dhammasaraá¹‡assa saddhammavaracakkavattino ettha atthe vÄ• dhamme vÄ• pade vÄ• byaÃ±jane vÄ• kaá¹…khÄ• vÄ• vimati vÄ• katta sabbadevamanussÄ• naá¹ƒ imasmiá¹ƒ dhamme assaddhiyaá¹ƒ vinÄ• seti, saddhÄ• sampa vuccati ---

``vinÄ• sayati assaddhaá¹ƒ, saddhaá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• heti sÄ• sane.

evaá¹ƒ me sutamiccevaá¹ƒ, vadaá¹ƒ gotamasÄ• vakoâ€™â€™ ti ||

__eka_nti gaá¹‡anaparicchedaniddeso. __samaya_nti paricchinnaniddeso. __ekaá¹ƒ sama aniyamitaparidÄ«panaá¹ƒ. tattha __samaya_saddo --- ``samavÄ• ye khaá¹‡e kÄ• le, samÅ«he hetudiá¹-á¹-hisu.

paá¹-ilÄ• bhe pahÄ• ne ca, paá¹-ivedhe ca dissatiâ€™â€™ ||

tathÄ• hissa ``appeva nÄ• ma svepi upasaá¹…kameyyÄ• ma kÄ• laÃ±ca samayaÃ±ca up
I 447) samavÄ• yo attho. ``ekova kho, bhikkhave, khaá¹‡o ca samayo \Ne I 10/ ca brahmac tiÄ• dÄ«su (AN III 8.29) khaá¹‡o. ``uá¹‡hasamayo pariá¸·Ä• hasamayoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su ``mahÄ• samayo \Ee I 10/ pavanasmiâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dÄ«su (DN II 332) samÅ«ho. ``samayo appaá¹-ividdho ahosi, bhagavÄ• kho sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ viharati, bhagavÄ• pi maá¹ƒ jÄ• nissat bhikkhu satthusÄ• sane sikkhÄ• ya aparipÅ«rakÄ• rÄ«â€™ ti. ayampi kho te \Be I 9/, bhado appaá¹-ividdho ahosÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (MN II 135) hetu. ``tena kho pana samayena u samaá¹‡amuá¹‡á¸• ikÄ• putto samayappavÄ• dake tindukÄ• cÄ«re ekasÄ• lake mallikÄ• ya tiÄ• dÄ«su (MN II 260) diá¹-á¹-hi.

``diá¹-á¹-he dhamme ca yo attho, yo cattho samparÄ• yiko.

atthÄ• bhisamayÄ• dhÄ«ro, paá¹‡á¸• itoti pavuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti || ---

Ä• dÄ«su (SN I 1.129) paá¹-ilÄ• bho. ``sammÄ• mÄ• nÄ• bhisamayÄ• antamakÄ• si dukkh pahÄ• naá¹ƒ. ``dukkhassa pÄ«á¸·anaá¹-á¹-ho saá¹…khataá¹-á¹-ho santÄ• paá¹-á¹-ho vipari abhisamayaá¹-á¹-hoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (Paá¹-is II 8) paá¹-ivedho. idha panassa kÄ• lo att saá¹ƒvacchara-utu-mÄ• saá¸• á¸• hamÄ• sa-ratti-diva-pubbaá¹‡ha-majjhanhika-sÄ• yanha--muhuttÄ• dÄ«su kÄ• lappabhedabhÅ«tesu samayesu ekaá¹ƒ samayanti dÄ«peti.

tattha kiÃ±cÄ• pi etesu saá¹ƒvaccharÄ• dÄ«su samayesu yaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ suttaá¹ƒ yasmiá¹ƒ ya utumhi mÄ• se pakkhe rattibhÄ• ge divasabhÄ• ge vÄ• vuttaá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ therassa s suvavatthÄ• pitaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya. yasmÄ• pana ``evaá¹ƒ me sutaá¹ƒ asukasaá¹ƒvacchare asukapakkhe asukarattibhÄ• ge asukadivasabhÄ• ge vÄ• â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ vutte na sakk uddisituá¹ƒ vÄ• uddisÄ• petuá¹ƒ vÄ• , bahu ca vattabbaá¹ƒ hoti, tasmÄ• ekeneva padena ``ekaá¹ƒ samayaâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha.

ye vÄ• ime gabbhokkantisamayo jÄ• tisamayo saá¹ƒvegasamayo abhinikkhamanasamayo mÄ• ravijayasamayo abhisambodhisamayo diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rasamayo desan evamÄ• dayo bhagavato devamanussesu ativiya suppakÄ• sÄ• \Ee I 11/ anekakÄ• lappab tesu samayesu desanÄ• samayasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒ samayanti dÄ«peti. yo cÄ• yaá¹ƒ karuá¹‡Ä• kiccasamayo, attahitaparahitapaá¹-ipattisamayesu parahitapaá¹-ipattisamayo \Be sannipatitÄ• naá¹ƒ karaá¹‡Ä«yadvayasamayesu dhammikathÄ• samayo, desanÄ• paá¹-ipa tesupi samayesu aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya ``ekaá¹ƒ samayaâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha.

kasmÄ• panettha yathÄ• abhidhamme ``yasmiá¹ƒ samaye kÄ• mÄ• vacaraâ€™â€™ nti c ``yasmiá¹ƒ samaye, bhikkhave, bhikkhu vivicceva kÄ• mehÄ«â€™â€™ ti ca bhummavacan ``tena samayena buddho bhagavÄ• â€™â€™ ti karaá¹‡avacanena, tathÄ• akatvÄ• ``ekaá upayogavacanena niddeso katoti. tattha tathÄ• , idha ca aÃ±Ã±athÄ• atthasambhavato. tat aÃ±Ã±esu suttapadesu ca adhikaraá¹‡attho bhÄ• venabhÄ• valakkhaá¹‡attho ca sambhava kÄ• lattho samÅ«hattho ca samayo, tattha vuttÄ• naá¹ƒ phassÄ• didhammÄ• naá¹ƒ khaá¹‡a ca samayassa bhÄ• vena tesaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vo lakkhÄ«yati. tasmÄ• tadatthajotanatthaá¹ƒ tattha kato.

vinaye ca hetuattho karaá¹‡attho ca sambhavati. yo hi so sikkhÄ• padapaÃ±Ã±attisamayo dubbiÃ±Ã±eyyo, tena samayena hetubhÅ«tena karaá¹‡abhÅ«tena ca sikkhÄ• padÄ• ni paÃ sikkhÄ• padapaÃ±Ã±attihetuÃ±ca apekkhamÄ• no bhagavÄ• tattha tattha vihÄ• si. tasmÄ• karaá¹‡avacanena niddeso kato.

idha pana aÃ±Ã±asmiá¹ƒ ca evaá¹ƒjÄ• tike accantasaá¹ƒyogattho sambhavati. yaÃ±hi sam aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vÄ• suttantaá¹ƒ desesi, accantameva taá¹ƒ samayaá¹ƒ karuá¹‡Ä• vihÄ• rena v tadatthajotanatthaá¹ƒ idha upayogavacananiddeso katoti.

tenetaá¹ƒ vuccati ---

``taá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ atthamapekkhitvÄ• , bhummena karaá¹‡ena ca.

aÃ±Ã±atra samayo vutto, upayogena so idhÄ• â€™â€™ ti ||

porÄ• á¹‡Ä• \Ne I 12/ \Ee I 12/ pana vaá¹‡á¹‡ayanti --- ``tasmiá¹ƒ samayeâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ti vÄ• ``ekaá¹ƒ samayaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• abhilÄ• pamattabhedo esa, sabbattha bhummame ``ekaá¹ƒ samayaâ€™â€™ nti vuttepi ``ekasmiá¹ƒ samayeâ€™â€™ ti attho veditabbo.

__bhagavÄ• _ti garu. garuá¹ƒ hi loke ``bhagavÄ• â€™â€™ ti vadanti. ayaÃ±ca sabbaguá¹‡ sabbasattÄ• naá¹ƒ garu, tasmÄ• ``bhagavÄ• â€™â€™ ti veditabbo. porÄ• á¹‡ehipi vuttaá¹ƒ ``bhagavÄ• ti vacanaá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, bhagavÄ• ti vacanamuttamaá¹ƒ.

garu gÄ• ravayutto so, bhagavÄ• tena vuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti || (Vism I 142).

apica ---

``bhagyavÄ• bhaggavÄ• yutto, bhagehi ca vibhattavÄ• .

bhattavÄ• vantagamano, bhavesu bhagavÄ• tatoâ€™â€™ ti || --- imissÄ• gÄ• thÄ• ya vasenassa padassa vitthÄ• rato attho veditabbo. so ca __visuddhimag buddhÄ• nussatiniddese vuttoyeva.

ettÄ• vatÄ• cettha __evaá¹ƒ me suta_nti vacanena yathÄ• sutaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ dassento b paccakkhaá¹ƒ karoti. tena ``nayidaá¹ƒ atikkantasatthukaá¹ƒ pÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ, ayaá¹ƒ vo satth adassanena ukkaá¹‡á¹-hitaá¹ƒ janaá¹ƒ samassÄ• seti. __ekaá¹ƒ samayaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• _ti v bhagavato avijjamÄ• nabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ dassento rÅ«pakÄ• yaparinibbÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ• dheti. tena ariyadhammassa desako dasabaladharo vajirasaá¹…ghÄ• tasamÄ• nakÄ• yo sopi bhagavÄ jÄ«vite Ä• sÄ• janetabbÄ• â€™â€™ ti jÄ«vitamadamattaá¹ƒ janaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvejeti, saddhamm __eva_nti ca bhaá¹‡anto desanÄ• sampattiá¹ƒ niddisati. __me suta_nti sÄ• vakasampattiá¹ kÄ• lasampattiá¹ƒ. __bhagavÄ• _ti desakasampattiá¹ƒ.

__sÄ• vatthiya_nti evaá¹ƒnÄ• make nagare. samÄ«patthe cetaá¹ƒ bhummavacanaá¹ƒ. __v avisesena iriyÄ• pathadibbabrahmaariyavihÄ• resu \Ne I 13/ aÃ±Ã±ataravihÄ• rasamaá¹…g pana á¹-hÄ• nagamananisajjÄ• sayanappabhedesu iriyÄ• pathesu aÃ±Ã±atarairiyÄ• pathas 12/, tena á¹-hitopi gacchantopi nisinnopi sayÄ• nopi bhagavÄ• viharaticceva veditabbo. so iriyÄ• pathabÄ• dhanaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±ena iriyÄ• pathena vicchinditvÄ• aparipatantaá¹ƒ attabhÄ• tasmÄ• ``viharatÄ«â€™â€™ ti vuccati.

__jetavane_ti jetassa rÄ• jakumÄ• rassa vane. taÃ±hi tena ropitaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvaá¸• á¸• hitaá¹ƒ tasmÄ• ``jetavanaâ€™â€™ nti saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gataá¹ƒ. tasmiá¹ƒ jetavane. __anÄ• thapiá¹‡á anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikena gahapatinÄ• catupaÃ±Ã±Ä• sahiraÃ±Ã±akoá¹-ipariccÄ• gena buddh bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa niyyÄ• titattÄ• ``anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikassa Ä• rÄ• moâ€™â€™ ti saá¹…

saá¹…khepo, vitthÄ• ro pana papaÃ±casÅ«daniyÄ• majjhimaá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya sabbÄ• sav 14) vutto.

tattha siyÄ• --- yadi tÄ• va bhagavÄ• sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ viharati, ``jetavaneâ€™â€™ ti na vat viharati, ``sÄ• vatthiyaâ€™â€™ nti na vattabbaá¹ƒ. na hi sakkÄ• ubhayattha ekaá¹ƒ samay panetaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ daá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ.

nanu avocumha ``samÄ«patthe bhummavacanaâ€™â€™ nti. tasmÄ• yathÄ• gaá¹…gÄ• y carantÄ• ni ``gaá¹…gÄ• yaá¹ƒ caranti, yamunÄ• yaá¹ƒ carantÄ«â€™â€™ ti vuccati, evamid samÄ«pe jetavanaá¹ƒ, tattha viharanto vuccati ``sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ viharati jetavaneâ€™â€™ t gocaragÄ• manidassanatthaá¹ƒ hissa sÄ• vatthivacanaá¹ƒ, pabbajitÄ• nurÅ«panivÄ• saá¹-á sesavacanaá¹ƒ.

__aÃ±Ã±atarÄ• devatÄ• _ti nÄ• magottavasena apÄ• kaá¹-Ä• ekÄ• devatÄ• ti attho. ``abh bhagavÄ• ahu Ã±Ä• taÃ±Ã±atarassa mahesakkhassa yakkhassa saá¹ƒkhittena taá¹‡hÄ• s bhÄ• sitÄ• â€™â€™ ti ettha pana abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• to sakkopi devarÄ• jÄ• ``aÃ±Ã±ataroâ€™â€ \Ee I 14/ ca idaá¹ƒ devÄ• nampi devadhÄ«tÄ• nampi sÄ• dhÄ• raá¹‡avacanaá¹ƒ. imasmiá¹ƒ ca kho rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• naá¹ƒ devÄ• naá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±ataro.

__abhikkantÄ• ya rattiyÄ• _ti ettha abhikkanta-saddo khayasundarÄ• bhirÅ«paabbhÄ• num 14/. tattha ``abhikkantÄ• , bhante, ratti, nikkhanto paá¹-hamo yÄ• mo \Be I 13/, ciranisinno b uddisatu, bhante, bhagavÄ• bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ pÄ• timokkhaâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dÄ«su (AN dissati. ``ayaá¹ƒ imesaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ puggalÄ• naá¹ƒ abhikkantataro ca paá¹‡Ä«tataro cÄ• (AN I 4.100) sundare.

``ko me vandati pÄ• dÄ• ni, iddhiyÄ• yasasÄ• jalaá¹ƒ.

abhikkantena vaá¹‡á¹‡ena, sabbÄ• obhÄ• sayaá¹ƒ disÄ• â€™â€™ ti || --- evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vv 857) abhirÅ«pe. ``abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama, abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotam (Vin III 15) abbhÄ• numodane. idha pana khaye. tena abhikkantÄ• ya rattiyÄ• , parikkhÄ«á¹ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. tatthÄ• yaá¹ƒ devaputto majjhimayÄ• masamanantare Ä• gatoti veditabbo. niy devatÄ• naá¹ƒ yadidaá¹ƒ buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• buddhasÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• n majjhimayÄ• masamanantareyeva Ä• gacchanti.

__abhikkantavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• _ti idha __abhikkanta_-saddo abhirÅ«pe, __vaá¹‡á¹‡a_-saddo pa chavithuti-kulavagga-kÄ• raá¹‡a-saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• nappamÄ• á¹‡a-rÅ«pÄ• yatanÄ• dÄ«su dissa ``suvaá¹‡á¹‡avaá¹‡á¹‡osi bhagavÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (Sn 553) chaviyÄ• . ``kadÄ gahapati, ime samaá¹‡assa vaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (MN II 77) thutiyaá¹ƒ. `` vaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (DN III 115) kulavagge. ``atha kena nu vaá¹‡á¹‡ena vuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (SN I 1.234) kÄ• raá¹‡e. ``mahantaá¹ƒ hatthirÄ• javaá¹ abhinimminitvÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (SN I 1.138) saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ne. ``tayo pattassa va evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vin III 602) pamÄ• á¹‡e. ``vaá¹‡á¹‡o gandho raso ojÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• chaviyÄ• daá¹-á¹-habbo. tena abhikkantavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• abhirÅ«pacchavi, iá¹-á¹-havaá¹‡á¹‡Ä vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. devatÄ• hi manussalokaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchamÄ• nÄ• pakativaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ pakatiido oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ attabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ katvÄ• \Ee I 15/ atirekavaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ atirekaiddhiá¹ƒ mÄ• pe gacchantÄ• manussÄ• viya abhisaá¹…khatena kÄ• yena Ä• gacchanti. tattha kÄ• mÄ• vac Ä• gantuá¹ƒ sakkonti, rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• pana na \Be I 14/ sakkonti. tesaÃ±hi atisukhumo atta
15/ iriyÄ• pathakappanaá¹ƒ hoti. tasmÄ• ayaá¹ƒ devaputto abhisaá¹…khateneva Ä• gato. t ``abhikkantavaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti.

__kevalakappa_nti ettha __kevala_-saddo anavasesa-yebhuyyÄ• byÄ• missÄ• natirekadaá¸·hatthavisaá¹ƒyogÄ• dianekattho. tathÄ• h parisuddhaá¹ƒ brahmacariyaâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vin III 1) anavasesatthamattho. `` aá¹…gamagadhÄ• pahÅ«taá¹ƒ khÄ• danÄ«yabhojanÄ«yaá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ• ya upasaá¹…kamissa yebhuyyatÄ• . ``kevalassa dukkhakkhandhassa samudayo hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su ``kevalaá¹ƒ saddhÄ• mattakaá¹ƒ nÅ«na ayamÄ• yasmÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vin I bhante, anuruddhassa bÄ• hiyo nÄ• ma saddhivihÄ• riko kevalakappaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghabhedÄ• evamÄ• dÄ«su (AN I 4.243) daá¸·hatthatÄ• . ``kevalÄ« vusitavÄ• uttamapurisoti vuccatÄ«â II 3.57) visaá¹ƒyogo attho. idha panassa anavasesattho adhippeto.

__kappa_-saddo panÄ• yaá¹ƒ abhisaddahana-vohÄ• ra-kÄ• la-paÃ±Ã±atti-chedana-vikappa-lesasamantabhÄ• vÄ• dianek ``okappaniyametaá¹ƒ bhoto gotamassa, yathÄ• taá¹ƒ arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassÄ• â€ abhisaddahanamattho. ``anujÄ• nÄ• mi, bhikkhave, paÃ±cahi samaá¹‡akappehi phalaá¹ƒ p evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vin II 250) vohÄ• ro. ``yena sudaá¹ƒ niccakappaá¹ƒ viharÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ kÄ• lo. ``iccÄ• yasmÄ• kappoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su paÃ±Ã±atti. ``alaá¹…kato kappital evamÄ• dÄ«su (Vv 1094, 1101) chedanaá¹ƒ. ``kappati dvaá¹…gulakappoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ ``Ä• tthi kappo nipajjituâ€™â€™ nti \Ee I 16/ evamÄ• dÄ«su (AN III 8.80) leso. ``kevalakapp obhÄ• setvÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dÄ«su (SN I 1.94) samantabhÄ• vo. idha panassa saman __kevalakappaá¹ƒ jetavana_nti ettha ``anavasesaá¹ƒ samantato jetavanaâ€™â€™ nti evam

__obhÄ• setvÄ• _ti \Be I 15/ vatthÄ• laá¹…kÄ• rasarÄ«rasamuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• ya Ä• bhÄ• ya ph sÅ«riyo viya ca ekobhÄ• saá¹ƒ ekapajjotaá¹ƒ karitvÄ• ti attho.

__yenÄ• _ti \Ne I 16/ bhummatthe karaá¹‡avacanaá¹ƒ. __yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…ka bhagavÄ• , tattha upasaá¹…kamÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamettha attho daá¹-á¹-habbo. yena vÄ• k devamanussehi upasaá¹…kamitabbo, tena kÄ• raá¹‡ena upasaá¹…kamÄ«ti evamettha atth kÄ• raá¹‡ena bhagavÄ• upasaá¹…kamitabbo? nÄ• nappakÄ• raguá¹‡avisesÄ• dhigamÄ• c sÄ• duphalÅ«pabhogÄ• dhippÄ• yena dijagaá¹‡ehi niccaphalitamahÄ• rukkho viya. __upas vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. __upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• _ti upasaá¹…kamanapariyosÄ• nadÄ«panaá¹ƒ. atha vÄ Ä• sannataraá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ bhagavato samÄ«pasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ gantvÄ• tipi vuttaá¹ƒ h idÄ• ni yenatthena loke aggapuggalassa upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• gatÄ• , taá¹ƒ pucchitukÄ• n dasanakhasamodhÄ• nasamujjalaá¹ƒ aÃ±juliá¹ƒ sirasi patiá¹-á¹-hapetvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ aá¹ bhÄ• vanapuá¹ƒsakaniddeso --- ``visamaá¹ƒ candimasÅ«riyÄ• parivattantÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• tasmÄ• yathÄ• á¹-hitÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ á¹-hitÄ• hoti, tathÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«ti evamettha att bhummatthe vÄ• etaá¹ƒ upayogavacanaá¹ƒ. __aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«_ti á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kappesi. pa garuá¹-á¹-hÄ• niyaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• Ä• sanakusalatÄ• ya ekamantaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hanti, aÃ±Ã±ataro, tasmÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si.

kathaá¹ƒ á¹-hito pana ekamantaá¹ƒ á¹-hito hotÄ«ti? cha á¹-hÄ• nadose vajjetvÄ• . seyyathi
accÄ• sannaá¹ƒ, uparivÄ• taá¹ƒ \Ee I 17/, unnatappadesaá¹ƒ, atisammukhaá¹ƒ, atipacchÄ• sace kathetukÄ• mo hoti, uccÄ• saddena kathetabbaá¹ƒ hoti. accÄ• sanne á¹-hito saá¹…gh uparivÄ• te á¹-hito sarÄ«ragandhena bÄ• dhati. unnatappadese á¹-hito agÄ• ravaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sace daá¹-á¹-hukÄ• mo hoti, cakkhunÄ• cakkhuá¹ƒ Ä• hacca daá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ hoti. atipac daá¹-á¹-hukÄ• mo hoti, gÄ«vaá¹ƒ pasÄ• retvÄ• daá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ hoti. tasmÄ• ayampi ete aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si. tena vuttaá¹ƒ ``ekamantaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

__etadavocÄ• _ti \Be I 16/ etaá¹ƒ avoca. __kathaá¹ƒ nÅ«_ti kÄ• raá¹‡apucchÄ• . bhagavat dasasahassilokadhÄ• tuyÄ• pÄ• kaá¹-o, tenimissÄ• devatÄ• ya tattha kaá¹…khÄ• natthi, i ``tiá¹‡á¹‡oâ€™â€™ ti na jÄ• nÄ• ti, tena sÄ• taá¹ƒ kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ pucchamÄ• nÄ• evamÄ•

__mÄ• risÄ• _ti \Ne I 17/ devatÄ• naá¹ƒ piyasamudÄ• cÄ• ravacanametaá¹ƒ. niddukkhÄ• ti ``yadÄ• kho te, mÄ• risa, saá¹…kunÄ• saá¹…ku hadaye samÄ• gaccheyya, atha naá¹ƒ tva `vassasahassaá¹ƒ me niraye paccamÄ• nassÄ• â€™â€™ â€™ ti (MN I 512) idaá¹ƒ virujjhat niddukkho nÄ• ma hoti. kiÃ±cÄ• pi na niddukkho, ruá¸·hÄ«saddena pana evaá¹ƒ vuccati. pu paá¹-hamakappikÄ• naá¹ƒ niddukkhÄ• naá¹ƒ sukhasamappitÄ• naá¹ƒ esa vohÄ• ro, aparab vÄ• , ruá¸·hÄ«saddena ayaá¹ƒ vohÄ• ro vuccateva nippadumÄ• pi nirudakÄ• pi vÄ• pokkha __oghamatarÄ«_ti ettha cattÄ• ro oghÄ• , kÄ• mogho bhavogho diá¹-á¹-hogho avijjoghoti. t

kÄ• maguá¹‡esu chandarÄ• go kÄ• mogho nÄ• ma. rÅ«pÄ• rÅ«pabhavesu chandarÄ• go jh dvÄ• saá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hiyo diá¹-á¹-hogho nÄ• ma. catÅ«su saccesu aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ avijjo kÄ• mogho aá¹-á¹-hasu lobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, bhavogho catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatavippayuttalobhasahagatesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, diá¹-á¹-hogho catÅ«su diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttesu cittuppÄ• desu uppajjati, avijjogho sabbÄ• kusalesu uppajjati.

sabbopi cesa avahananaá¹-á¹-hena rÄ• saá¹-á¹-hena ca oghoti veditabbo. __avahananaá¹-á adhogamanaá¹-á¹-hena. ayaÃ±hi attano vasaá¹ƒ gate satte adho gameti, nirayÄ• dibhedÄ• nibbatteti, uparibhÄ• vaá¹ƒ vÄ• nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ gantuá¹ƒ adento adho tÄ«su bhavesu catÅ«s sattasu viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹-á¹-hitÄ«su navasu sattÄ• vÄ• sesu ca gametÄ«tipi attho. __rÄ• sa mahantaá¹-á¹-hena. mahÄ• heso kilesarÄ• si avÄ«cito paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya yÄ• va bhavaggÄ• p paÃ±casu kÄ• maguá¹‡esu chandarÄ• go nÄ• ma. sesesupi eseva nayo. evamayaá¹ƒ rÄ• s veditabbo. __atarÄ«_ti imaá¹ƒ catubbidhampi oghaá¹ƒ kena nu tvaá¹ƒ, mÄ• risa, kÄ• raá¹‡e athassÄ• bhagavÄ• paÃ±haá¹ƒ vissajjento __appatiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ khvÄ• ha_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha.

appatiá¹-á¹-hahanto. __anÄ• yÅ«ha_nti anÄ• yÅ«hanto, avÄ• yamantoti attho. iti bhagavÄ• paá¹-icchannaá¹ƒ katvÄ• paÃ±haá¹ƒ kathesi. devatÄ• pi naá¹ƒ sutvÄ• ``bÄ• hirakaá¹ƒ tÄ• á¹-hÄ• tabbaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ• taritabbaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne Ä• yÅ«hantÄ• taranti, ayaá¹ bhavaggÄ• patthaá¹-aá¹ƒ \Ne I 18/ kilesoghaá¹ƒ kilesarÄ• siá¹ƒ appatiá¹-á¹-hahanto anÄ• y kiá¹ƒ nu kho etaá¹ƒ? kathaá¹ƒ nu kho etaâ€™â€™ nti? vimatiá¹ƒ pakkhantÄ• paÃ±hassa a kiá¹ƒ pana bhagavatÄ• yathÄ• sattÄ• na jÄ• nanti, evaá¹ƒ kathanatthÄ• ya pÄ• ramiyo pÅ paá¹-ividdhÄ• ti? na etadatthÄ• ya paá¹-ividdhÄ• . dve pana bhagavato desanÄ• niggaham

ca. tattha ye paá¹‡á¸• itamÄ• nino honti aÃ±Ã±Ä• tepi Ã±Ä• tasaÃ±Ã±ino paÃ±casatÄ• brÄ tesaá¹ƒ mÄ• naniggahatthaá¹ƒ yathÄ• na jÄ• nanti, evaá¹ƒ mÅ«lapariyÄ• yÄ• disadisaá¹ƒ d niggahamukhena desanÄ• . vuttampi cetaá¹ƒ ``niggayha niggayhÄ• haá¹ƒ, Ä• nanda, vakkh Ä• nanda, vakkhÄ• mi, yo sÄ• ro, so á¹-hassatÄ«â€™â€™ ti (MN III 196). ye \Ee I 19/ pana tesaá¹ƒ suviÃ±Ã±eyyaá¹ƒ katvÄ• Ä• kaá¹…kheyyasuttÄ• disadisaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ deseti, `` tissa, ahamovÄ• dena ahamanuggahena ahamanusÄ• saniyÄ• â€™â€™ ti (SN II 3.84) ca n anuggahamukhena desanÄ• .

ayaá¹ƒ pana devaputto mÄ• natthaddho paá¹‡á¸• itamÄ• nÄ«, evaá¹ƒ kirassa ahosi --- aha tathÄ• gatassa oghatiá¹‡á¹‡abhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• mi, ``iminÄ• pana kÄ• raá¹‡ena tiá¹‡á¹‡oa jÄ• nÄ• mi. iti mayhaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• tameva bahu, appaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• taá¹ƒ, tamahaá¹ƒ kathitama nÄ• ma taá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• vadeyya, yassÄ• haá¹ƒ atthaá¹ƒ na jÄ• neyyanti. atha satthÄ• ``ay viya \Be I 18/ raá¹…gajÄ• taá¹ƒ abhabbo imaá¹ƒ mÄ• naá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya desanaá¹ƒ sampaa tÄ• vassa katvÄ• puna nÄ«cittena pucchantassa pakÄ• sessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti paá¹-icc kathesi. sopi nihatamÄ• no ahosi, sÄ• cassa nihatamÄ• natÄ• uttaripaÃ±hapucchaneneva paÃ±hapucchanassa ayamattho --- kathaá¹ƒ pana tvaá¹ƒ, mÄ• risa, appatiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ anÄ• yathÄ• haá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• mi, evaá¹ƒ me kathehÄ«ti.

athassa bhagavÄ• kathento __yadÄ• svÄ• ha_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __yadÄ• svÄ• ha_nt sukÄ• ro nipÄ• tamattaá¹ƒ. yathÄ• ca ettha, evaá¹ƒ sabbapadesu. __saá¹ƒsÄ«dÄ• mÄ«_ti ataranto tattheva osÄ«dÄ• mi. __nibbuyhÄ• mÄ«_ti á¹-hÄ• tuá¹ƒ asakkonto ativattÄ• mi. iti a dosaá¹ƒ disvÄ• atiá¹-á¹-hanto avÄ• yamanto oghamatarinti evaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• paÃ±ho ka paá¹-ividdho, na pana pÄ• kaá¹-o, tassa pÄ• kaá¹-Ä«karaá¹‡atthaá¹ƒ satta dukÄ• dassitÄ• hi santiá¹-á¹-hanto saá¹ƒsÄ«dati nÄ• ma, abhisaá¹…khÄ• ravasena Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati taá¹‡hÄ• diá¹-á¹-hÄ«hi vÄ• santiá¹-á¹-hanto saá¹ƒsÄ«dati nÄ• ma, avasesakilesÄ• naÃ±cev vasena Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati nÄ• ma. taá¹‡hÄ• vasena vÄ• santiá¹-á¹-hanto saá¹ƒsÄ«da Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati nÄ• ma. sassatadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• vÄ• santiá¹-á¹-hanto saá¹ƒsÄ«dati n ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati nÄ• ma. olÄ«yanÄ• bhinivesÄ• hi bhavadiá¹ atidhÄ• vanÄ• bhinivesÄ• vibhavadiá¹-á¹-hi \Ee I 20/. lÄ«navasena vÄ• santiá¹-á¹-hanto sa uddhaccavasena Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati nÄ• ma. tathÄ• kÄ• masukhallikÄ• nuyogavasena nÄ• ma, attakilamathÄ• nuyogavasena Ä• yÅ«hanto nibbuyhati nÄ• ma. sabbÄ• kusalÄ• bh santiá¹-á¹-hanto saá¹ƒsÄ«dati nÄ• ma, sabbalokiyakusalÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• ravasena Ä• yÅ« vuttampi cetaá¹ƒ --- ``seyyathÄ• pi, cunda, ye keci akusalÄ• dhammÄ• , sabbe te adhobhÄ kusalÄ• dhammÄ• , sabbe te uparibhÄ• gaá¹…gamanÄ«yÄ• â€™â€™ ti (MN I 86).

imaá¹ƒ paÃ±havissajjanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• va devatÄ• sotÄ• pattiphale patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya tuá¹-á¹-h tuá¹-á¹-hiÃ±ca pasÄ• daÃ±ca pakÄ• sayantÄ« __cirassaá¹ƒ vatÄ• _ti gÄ• thamÄ• ha. tattha kÄ• lassa accayenÄ• ti attho. ayaá¹ƒ \Be I 19/ kira devatÄ• kassapasammÄ• sambuddhaá¹ parinibbÄ• nato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya antarÄ• aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ buddhaá¹ƒ na diá¹-á¹-hapubbÄ• , tasm evamÄ• ha. kiá¹ƒ panimÄ• ya devatÄ• ya ito pubbe satthÄ• na diá¹-á¹-hapubboti. diá¹-á¹-ha adiá¹-á¹-hapubbo vÄ• , dassanaá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya evaá¹ƒ vattuá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-ati. __brÄ• hmaá¹ khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savabrÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. __parinibbuta_nti kilesanibbÄ• nena nibbutaá¹ƒ. __loke_ __visattika_nti rÅ«pÄ• dÄ«su Ä• rammaá¹‡esu Ä• sattavisattatÄ• dÄ«hi kÄ• raá¹‡ehi visatti taá¹ƒ visattikaá¹ƒ appatiá¹-á¹-hamÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• yÅ«hamÄ• naá¹ƒ tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ nittiá¹‡á¹‡a cirassaá¹ƒ vata khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savabrÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ passÄ• mÄ«ti attho.

__samanuÃ±Ã±o satthÄ• ahosÄ«_ti tassÄ• devatÄ• ya vacanaá¹ƒ citteneva samanumodi, __antaradhÄ• yÄ«_ti abhisaá¹…khatakÄ• yaá¹ƒ jahitvÄ• attano pakatiupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡akakÄ• laddhÄ• sÄ• laddhapatiá¹-á¹-hÄ• hutvÄ• dasabalaá¹ƒ gandhehi ca mÄ• lehi ca pÅ«jetvÄ• agamÄ• sÄ«ti.

oghataraá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

2. nimokkhasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<2> idÄ• ni \Ne I 20/ dutiyasuttato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya paá¹-hamamÄ• gataÃ±ca uttÄ• natthaÃ± anuttÄ• naá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ tadeva vaá¹‡á¹‡ayissÄ• ma. __jÄ• nÄ• si no_ti jÄ• nÄ• si nu. __nimok maggÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ nÄ• mÄ• ni \Ee I 21/. maggena hi sattÄ• kilesabandhanato nimuccanti, t __nimokkho_ti vutto. phalakkhaá¹‡e pana te kilesabandhanato pamuttÄ• , tasmÄ• phalaá¹ƒ __pamokkho_ti vuttaá¹ƒ. nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ patvÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ sabbadukkhaá¹ƒ viviccati, tasm __viveko_ti vuttaá¹ƒ. sabbÄ• ni vÄ• etÄ• ni nibbÄ• nasseva nÄ• mÄ• ni. nibbÄ• naÃ±hi pat nimuccanti pamuccanti viviccanti, tasmÄ• tadeva ``nimokkho pamokkho vivekoâ€™â€™ ti khvÄ• ha_nti jÄ• nÄ• mi kho ahaá¹ƒ. avadhÄ• raá¹‡attho khokÄ• ro \Be I 20/. ahaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ nimokkhÄ• dijÄ• nanatthameva hi mayÄ• samatiá¹ƒsa pÄ• ramiyo pÅ«retvÄ• sabbaÃ±Ã±u sÄ«hanÄ• daá¹ƒ nadati. buddhasÄ«hanÄ• daá¹ƒ nÄ• ma kira etaá¹ƒ suttaá¹ƒ.

__nandÄ«bhavaparikkhayÄ• _ti nandÄ«mÅ«lakassa kammabhavassa parikkhayena. nandiy vaá¹-á¹-ati. tattha hi purimanaye nandÄ«bhavena tividhakammÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• ravasena s saÃ±Ã±Ä• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ehi taá¹ƒsampayuttÄ• ca dve khandhÄ• . tehi pana tÄ«hi khandhe gahaá¹‡ena gahitÄ• vÄ• ti anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡akÄ• naá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ arÅ«pakkhandhÄ• naá¹ƒ saupÄ• disesaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ kathitaá¹ƒ hoti. __vedanÄ• naá¹ƒ nirodhÄ• upasamÄ• _ti u nirodhena ca upasamena ca. tattha vedanÄ• gahaá¹‡ena taá¹ƒsampayuttÄ• tayo khandhÄ vatthÄ• rammaá¹‡avasena rÅ«pakkhandhopi. evaá¹ƒ imesaá¹ƒ upÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡akÄ• naá¹ƒ pa appavattivasena anupÄ• disesaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ kathitaá¹ƒ hoti. dutiyanaye pana nandigga saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho gahito, bhavaggahaá¹‡ena upapattibhavasaá¹…khÄ• to rÅ«pakkha tayo khandhÄ• . evaá¹ƒ imesaá¹ƒ paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ appavattivasena nibbÄ• n veditabbaá¹ƒ. imameva ca nayaá¹ƒ catunikÄ• yikabhaá¹‡á¸• ikatthero roceti. iti nibbÄ• nava desanaá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hÄ• pesÄ«ti.

nimokkhasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

3. upanÄ«yasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<3> tatiye \Ne I 21/ \Ee I 22/ __upanÄ«yatÄ«_ti parikkhÄ«yati nirujjhati, upagacchati vÄ• , a maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ upetÄ«ti attho. yathÄ• vÄ• gopÄ• lena gogaá¹‡o nÄ«yati, evaá¹ƒ jarÄ• ya ma upanÄ«yatÄ«ti attho. __jÄ«vita_nti jÄ«vitindriyaá¹ƒ. __appa_nti parittaá¹ƒ thokaá¹ƒ. tassa dv parittatÄ• veditabbÄ• sarasaparittatÄ• ya ca khaá¹‡aparittatÄ• ya ca. sarasaparittatÄ• yap ciraá¹ƒ jÄ«vati, so vassasataá¹ƒ appaá¹ƒ vÄ• bhiyyoâ€™â€™ ti (DN II 7; SN I 2.143) vacan khaá¹‡aparittatÄ• yapi. paramatthato hi atiparitto sattÄ• naá¹ƒ jÄ«vitakkhaá¹‡o ekacittappav 21/. yathÄ• nÄ• ma rathacakkaá¹ƒ pavattamÄ• nampi ekeneva nemippadesena pavattati, ti tiá¹-á¹-hati, evamevaá¹ƒ ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ citte nirudd niruddhoti vuccati. yathÄ• ha --- atÄ«te cittakkhaá¹‡e jÄ«vittha na jÄ«vati na jÄ«vissati, anÄ cittakkhaá¹‡e jÄ«vissati na jÄ«vati na jÄ«vittha, paccuppanne cittakkhaá¹‡e jÄ«vati na jÄ«vi jÄ«vissati.

``jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ attabhÄ• vo ca, sukhadukkhÄ• ca kevalÄ• .

ekacittasamÄ• yuttÄ• , lahuso vattate khaá¹‡o ||

``ye niruddhÄ• marantassa, tiá¹-á¹-hamÄ• nassa vÄ• idha.

sabbepi sadisÄ• khandhÄ• , gatÄ• appaá¹-isandhikÄ• ||

``anibbattena na jÄ• to, paccuppannena jÄ«vati.

cittabhaá¹…gÄ• mato loko, paÃ±Ã±atti paramatthiyÄ• â€™â€™ ti || (Nidd I 10).

__jarÅ«panÄ«tassÄ• _ti jaraá¹ƒ upagatassa, jarÄ• ya vÄ• maraá¹‡asantikaá¹ƒ upanÄ«tass tÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ leá¹‡aá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavituá¹ƒ samatthÄ• nÄ• ma keci natthi. __etaá¹ƒ bhay jÄ«vitindriyassa maraá¹‡Å«pagamanaá¹ƒ, Ä• yuparittatÄ• , jarÅ«panÄ«tassa tÄ• á¹‡Ä• bhÄ bhayavatthu bhayakÄ• raá¹‡anti \Ee I 23/ attho. __puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni kayirÄ• tha sukhÄ• vahÄ• n sukhÄ• vahÄ• ni sukhadÄ• yakÄ• ni puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni kareyya. iti devatÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarajjhÄ• aparacetanaá¹ƒ muÃ±cacetanaÃ±ca gahetvÄ• bahuvacanavasena \Ne I 22/ ``puÃ±Ã±Ä• nA jhÄ• nassÄ• daá¹ƒ jhÄ• nanikantiá¹ƒ jhÄ• nasukhaÃ±ca gahetvÄ• ``sukhÄ• vahÄ• nÄ«â€™ devatÄ• ya sayaá¹ƒ dÄ«ghÄ• yukaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne brahmaloke nibbattattÄ• heá¹-á¹-hÄ• kÄ• n parittÄ• yukaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne cavamÄ• ne upapajjamÄ• ne ca thullaphusitake vuá¹-á¹-hipÄ• tas etadahosi ``ahovatime sattÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetvÄ• aparihÄ«najjhÄ• nÄ• kÄ• laá¹ƒ katv ekakappa-dvekappa-catukappa-aá¹-á¹-hakappa-soá¸·asakappa-dvattiá¹ƒsakappa-catusaá¹-addhÄ• naá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyuâ€™â€™ nti. tasmÄ• evamÄ• ha.

atha bhagavÄ• --- ``ayaá¹ƒ devatÄ• aniyyÄ• nikaá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-akathaá¹ƒ kathetÄ«â€™â€™ dassento dutiyaá¹ƒ gÄ• thamÄ• ha. tattha __lokÄ• misa_nti dve lokÄ• misÄ• \Be I 22/ pariy
ca. pariyÄ• yena tebhÅ«makavaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ lokÄ• misaá¹ƒ, nippariyÄ• yena cattÄ• ro paccay pariyÄ• yalokÄ• misaá¹ƒ adhippetaá¹ƒ. nippariyÄ• yalokÄ• misampi vaá¹-á¹-atiyeva. __sant nibbÄ• nasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ accantasantiá¹ƒ pekkhanto icchanto patthayantoti.

upanÄ«yasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

4. accentisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<4> catutthe __accentÄ«_ti atikkamanti. __kÄ• lÄ• _ti purebhattÄ• dayo kÄ• lÄ• . __taraya atikkamamÄ• nÄ• puggalaá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Å«pagamanÄ• ya tarayanti sÄ«ghaá¹ƒ sÄ«ghaá¹ƒ g paá¹-hamamajjhimapacchimavayÄ• naá¹ƒ guá¹‡Ä• , rÄ• sayoti attho. ``anujÄ• nÄ• mi, bhikk vatthÄ• naá¹ƒ diguá¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹…ghÄ• á¹-iâ€™â€™ nti (Vin I 348) ettha hi paá¹-alaá¹-á¹-ho ``sataguá¹‡Ä• dakkhiá¹‡Ä• pÄ• á¹-ikaá¹…khitabbÄ• â€™â€™ ti (MN III 379) ettha Ä• nisa antaguá¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti ettha koá¹-á¹-hÄ• saá¹-á¹-ho. ``kayirÄ• mÄ• lÄ• guá¹‡e bahÅ«â€™ rÄ• saá¹-á¹-ho. ``paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti ettha bandhanaá¹-á¹-ho. idha pana rÄ tasmÄ• __vayoguá¹‡Ä• _ti vayorÄ• sayo veditabbÄ• . __anupubbaá¹ƒ_ \Ee I 24/ __jahantÄ puggalaá¹ƒ jahanti. majjhimavaye á¹-hitaá¹ƒ hi paá¹-hamavayo jahati, pacchimavaye á¹-hita paá¹-hamamajjhimÄ• jahanti, maraá¹‡akkhaá¹‡e pana tayopi vayÄ• jahanteva. __etaá¹ƒ b kÄ• lÄ• naá¹ƒ atikkamanaá¹ƒ, rattidivÄ• naá¹ƒ taritabhÄ• vo, vayoguá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ jahanabhÄ sesaá¹ƒ purimasadisamevÄ• ti.

accentisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

5. katichindasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<5> paÃ±came \Ne I 23/ \Be I 23/ __kati chinde_ti chindanto kati chindeyya. sesapadesupi ``chinde jaheâ€™â€™ ti atthato ekaá¹ƒ. gÄ• thÄ• bandhassa pana maá¹-á¹-habhÄ• vatthaá saddapunaruttiá¹ƒ vajjayantÄ« evamÄ• ha. __kati saá¹…gÄ• tigo_ti kati saá¹…ge atigato, at saá¹…gÄ• tikotipi pÄ• á¹-ho, ayameva attho. __paÃ±ca chinde_ti chindanto paÃ±ca orambh chindeyya. __paÃ±ca jahe_ti jahanto paÃ±cuddhambhÄ• giyasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni jaheyya. idhÄ atthato ekameva, bhagavÄ• pana devatÄ• ya Ä• ropitavacanÄ• nurÅ«peneva evamÄ• ha. a baddhapÄ• sasakuá¹‡o viya paÃ±corambhÄ• giyasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni heá¹-á¹-hÄ• Ä• kaá¸• á¸ anÄ• gÄ• mimaggena chindeyyÄ• ti vadati. hatthehi gahitarukkhasÄ• khÄ• viya paÃ±cuddh upari Ä• kaá¸• á¸• hamÄ• nÄ• kÄ• rÄ• ni honti, tÄ• ni arahattamaggena jaheyyÄ• ti vadati. _
etesaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá¹ƒ chindanatthÄ• ya ceva pahÄ• natthÄ• ya ca uttari atirekaá¹ƒ v saddhÄ• paÃ±camÄ• ni indriyÄ• ni bhÄ• veyyÄ• ti attho. __paÃ±ca saá¹…gÄ• tigo_ti rÄ• ga mohasaá¹…go mÄ• nasaá¹…go diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹…goti ime paÃ±ca saá¹…ge atikkanto. __ogh caturoghatiá¹‡á¹‡oti kathÄ«yati. imÄ• ya pana gÄ• thÄ• ya paÃ±cindriyÄ• ni lokiyalokuttarÄ katichindasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

6. jÄ• garasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<6> chaá¹-á¹-he \Ee I 25/ __jÄ• garata_nti jÄ• garantÄ• naá¹ƒ. __paÃ±ca jÄ• garata_nti vis pana saddhÄ• dÄ«su paÃ±casu indriyesu jÄ• garantesu paÃ±ca nÄ«varaá¹‡Ä• suttÄ• nÄ• taá¹ƒsamaá¹…gÄ«puggalo yattha katthaci nisinno vÄ• á¹-hito vÄ• aruá¹‡aá¹ƒ uá¹-á¹-haper akusalasamaá¹…gitÄ• ya sutto nÄ• ma hoti. evaá¹ƒ suttesu paÃ±casu nÄ«varaá¹‡esu paÃ± nÄ• ma. kasmÄ• \Be I 24/? yasmÄ• taá¹ƒsamaá¹…gÄ«puggalo yattha katthaci nipajjitvÄ• appamÄ• datÄ• ya kusalasamaá¹…gitÄ• ya jÄ• garo nÄ• ma hoti. paÃ±cahi pana nÄ«varaá gaá¹‡hÄ• ti parÄ• masati. purimÄ• \Ne I 24/ hi kÄ• macchandÄ• dayo pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pa indriyehi parisujjhatÄ«ti ayamattho veditabbo. idhÄ• pi paÃ±cindriyÄ• ni lokiyalokuttarÄ• nev jÄ• garasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

7. appaá¹-ividitasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<7> sattame __dhammÄ• _ti catusaccadhammÄ• . __appaá¹-ividitÄ• _ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena appa dvÄ• saá¹-á¹-hidiá¹-á¹-higatavÄ• desu. te hi ito paresaá¹ƒ titthiyÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• dattÄ• paravÄ __nÄ«yare_ti attano dhammatÄ• yapi gacchanti, parenapi nÄ«yanti. tattha sayameva sassa gacchanti nÄ• ma, parassa vacanena tÄ• ni gaá¹‡hantÄ• nÄ«yanti nÄ• ma. __kÄ• lo tesaá puggalÄ• naá¹ƒ pabujjhituá¹ƒ ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• lo. lokasmiÃ±hi buddho uppanno, dhammo desiya suppaá¹-ipanno, paá¹-ipadÄ• bhaddikÄ• , ime ca pana mahÄ• janÄ• vaá¹-á¹-e suttÄ• napp __sambuddhÄ• _ti sammÄ• hetunÄ• kÄ• raá¹‡ena buddhÄ• . cattÄ• ro hi buddhÄ• --- sab catusaccabuddho, sutabuddhoti. tattha samatiá¹ƒsapÄ• ramiyo pÅ«retvÄ• sammÄ• sambo nÄ• ma. kappasatasahassÄ• dhikÄ• ni dve asaá¹…khyeyyÄ• ni pÄ• ramiyo pÅ«retvÄ• saya nÄ• ma. avasesÄ• khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• catusaccabuddhÄ• nÄ• ma. bahussuto sutabuddho purimÄ• vaá¹-á¹-anti. __sammadaÃ±Ã±Ä• _ti sammÄ• hetunÄ• \Ee I 26/ kÄ• raá¹‡ena jÄ• sama_nti visame vÄ• lokasannivÄ• se visame vÄ• sattanikÄ• ye visame vÄ• kilesajÄ• te s appaá¹-ividitasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

8. susammuá¹-á¹-hasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<8> aá¹-á¹-hame \Be I 25/ __susammuá¹-á¹-hÄ• _ti paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya appaá¹-ividdhabhÄ• vene dve khettÄ• ni kasitvÄ• , ekaá¹ƒ vapitvÄ• , bahudhaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ adhigatassa avÄ• pitakhettato ``bahuá¹ƒ me dhaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ naá¹-á¹-haâ€™â€™ nti vadanto aladdhameva ``naá¹-á¹-haâ€™ appaá¹-ividitÄ• va susammuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ma. __asammuá¹-á¹-hÄ• _ti paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya paá¹-sesaá¹ƒ purimasadisamevÄ• ti.

susammuá¹-á¹-hasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. mÄ• nakÄ• masuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<9> navame \Ne I 25/ __mÄ• nakÄ• massÄ• _ti mÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• mentassa icchantassa. __
samÄ• dhipakkhiko damo natthÄ«ti vadati. ``saccena danto damasÄ• upeto, vedantagÅ« v (SN I 1.195) ettha hi indriyasaá¹ƒvaro damoti vutto. ``yadi saccÄ• damÄ• cÄ• gÄ• , khanty vijjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti (SN I 1.246; Sn 191) ettha paÃ±Ã±Ä• . ``dÄ• nena damena saá¹ƒyamen puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, atthi puÃ±Ã±assa Ä• gamoâ€™â€™ ti (SN II 4.365) ettha uposathakammaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡a, iminÄ• damÅ«pasamena samannÄ• gato sunÄ• parantasmiá¹ƒ janapade vihari III 396) ettha adhivÄ• sanakhanti. imasmiá¹ƒ pana sutte damoti samÄ• dhipakkhikadhammÄ tenevÄ• ha --- ``na monamatthi asamÄ• hitassÄ• â€™â€™ ti. tattha __mona_nti catumagga munÄ• tÄ«ti monaá¹ƒ, catusaccadhamme jÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti attho. __maccudheyyassÄ• _ti tebh maccuno patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹-á¹-hena maccudheyyanti vuccati. __pÄ• ra_nti \Ee I 27/ tasseva __tareyyÄ• _ti paá¹-ivijjheyya pÄ• puá¹‡eyya vÄ• . idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti --- eko araÃ±Ã±e vih puggalo maccudheyyassa pÄ• raá¹ƒ na tareyya na paá¹-ivijjheyya na pÄ• puá¹‡eyyÄ• ti.

__mÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• yÄ• _ti arahattamaggena navavidhamÄ• naá¹ƒ pajahitvÄ• . __susamÄ upacÄ• rappanÄ• samÄ• dhÄ«hi suá¹-á¹-hu samÄ• hitatto. __sucetaso_ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampay sundaracitto. Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayuttacittena hi sucetasoti na vuccati, tasmÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡asampa hutvÄ• ti attho. __sabbadhi vippamutto_ti sabbesu khandhÄ• yatanÄ• dÄ«su vippamutto hu tebhÅ«makavaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ samatikkamanto nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijjhanto taratÄ«ti paá¹-ivedha vuttaá¹ƒ. iti imÄ• ya gÄ• thÄ• ya tisso sikkhÄ• kathitÄ• honti. kathaá¹ƒ --- mÄ• no nÄ• mÄ tasmÄ• ``mÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti iminÄ• adhisÄ«lasikkhÄ• kathitÄ• hoti. ``susa adhicittasikkhÄ• . ``sucetasoâ€™â€™ ti ettha cittena paÃ±Ã±Ä• dassitÄ• , tasmÄ• iminÄ• kathitÄ• . adhisÄ«laÃ±ca nÄ• ma sÄ«le sati hoti, adhicittaá¹ƒ citte sati, adhipaÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ sÄ«laá¹ƒ nÄ• ma paÃ±capi dasapi sÄ«lÄ• ni, pÄ• timokkhasaá¹ƒvaro adhisÄ«laá¹ƒ nÄ• mÄ samÄ• pattiyo cittaá¹ƒ, vipassanÄ• pÄ• dakajjhÄ• naá¹ƒ adhicittaá¹ƒ. kammassakataÃ±Ä• â adhipaÃ±Ã±Ä• . anuppannepi hi buddhuppÄ• de pavattatÄ«ti paÃ±casÄ«laá¹ƒ \Ne I 26/ das pÄ• timokkhasaá¹ƒvarasÄ«laá¹ƒ buddhuppÄ• deyeva pavattatÄ«ti adhisÄ«laá¹ƒ. cittapaÃ±Ã nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ patthayantena samÄ• dinnaá¹ƒ paÃ±casÄ«lampi dasasÄ«lampi adhisÄ«lamev samÄ• pattiyopi adhicittameva. sabbampi vÄ• lokiyasÄ«laá¹ƒ sÄ«lameva, lokuttaraá¹ƒ adhi cittapaÃ±Ã±Ä• supi eseva nayoti. iti imÄ• ya gÄ• thÄ• ya samodhÄ• netvÄ• tisso sikkhÄ• s hotÄ«ti.

mÄ• nakÄ• masuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. araÃ±Ã±asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<10> dasame __santÄ• na_nti santakilesÄ• naá¹ƒ, paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• . ``santo have s 21.413), dÅ«re santo pakÄ• santÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (Dhp 304) hi paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• pi \Ee I __brahmacÄ• rina_nti seá¹-á¹-hacÄ• rÄ«naá¹ƒ maggabrahmacariyavÄ• saá¹ƒ vasantÄ• naá pasÄ«datÄ«_ti kena kÄ• raá¹‡ena chavivaá¹‡á¹‡o pasÄ«datÄ«ti pucchati. kasmÄ• panesÄ vanasaá¹‡á¸• avÄ• sikÄ• bhummadevatÄ• Ä• raÃ±Ã±ake bhikkhÅ« pacchÄ• bhattaá¹ƒ piá araÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ• \Be I 27/ rattiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nadivÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• nesu mÅ«lakammaá¹-á¹-passati. tesaÃ±ca evaá¹ƒ nisinnÄ• naá¹ƒ balavacittekaggatÄ• uppajjati. tato visabhÄ• gasa sabhÄ• gasantati okkamati, cittaá¹ƒ pasÄ«dati. citte pasanne lohitaá¹ƒ pasÄ«dati, cittasamu upÄ• dÄ• rÅ«pÄ• ni parisuddhÄ• ni honti, vaá¹‡á¹-Ä• pamuttatÄ• laphalassa viya mukhass disvÄ• devatÄ• cintesi --- ``sarÄ«ravaá¹‡á¹‡o nÄ• mÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹‡Ä«tÄ• ni rasasampann sukhasamphassÄ• ni nivÄ• sanapÄ• puraá¹‡asayanÄ• ni utusukhe tebhÅ«mikÄ• dibhede c mÄ• lÄ• gandhavilepanÄ• dÄ«ni ca labhantÄ• naá¹ƒ pasÄ«dati, ime pana bhikkhÅ« piá¹‡á¸ missakabhattaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±janti, viraá¸·amaÃ±cake vÄ• phalake vÄ• silÄ• ya vÄ• sayanÄ• n rukkhamÅ«lÄ• dÄ«su vÄ• abbhokÄ• se vÄ• vasanti, kena nu kho kÄ• raá¹‡ena etesaá¹ƒ v tasmÄ• pucchi.

athassÄ• bhagavÄ• kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ kathento dutiyaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• ha. tattha __atÄ«ta_ rÄ• jÄ• dhammiko ahosi, so amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ paá¹‡Ä«te paccaye adÄ• si. Ä• cariyupajjhÄ• yÄ mayaá¹ƒ evarÅ«pÄ• ni bhojanÄ• ni bhuÃ±jimhÄ• , cÄ«varÄ• ni pÄ• rupimhÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ ekad paccayabÄ• hullikÄ• viya ime bhikkhÅ« atÄ«taá¹ƒ nÄ• nusocanti. __nappajappanti nÄ• gat rÄ• jÄ• bhavissati, phÄ«tÄ• janapadÄ• bhavissanti, bahÅ«ni sappinavanÄ«tÄ• dÄ«ni uppa bhuÃ±jathÄ• â€™â€™ ti tattha tattha vattÄ• ro bhavissanti, tadÄ• mayaá¹ƒ evarÅ«pÄ• ni b cÄ«varÄ• ni pÄ• rupissÄ• mÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ anÄ• gataá¹ƒ na patthenti. __paccuppannenÄ• _ti laddhena yÄ• penti. __tenÄ• _ti tena tividhenÄ• pi kÄ• raá¹‡ena.

evaá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡asampattiá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• idÄ• ni tasseva vaá¹‡á¹‡assa vinÄ• saá¹ƒ dassen tattha \Ee I 29/ __anÄ• gatappajappÄ• yÄ• _ti anÄ• gatassa patthanÄ• ya. __etenÄ• _ti ete __naá¸·ova harito luto_ti yathÄ• harito naá¸·o lÄ• yitvÄ• uá¹‡hapÄ• sÄ• á¹‡e pakkhitto sus sussantÄ«ti.

araÃ±Ã±asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• . naá¸·avaggo paá¹-hamo.

2. nandanavaggo

1. nandanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<11> nandanavaggassa \Be I 28/ paá¹-hame __tatrÄ• _ti tasmiá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• me. __kho_ti byaÃ±janasiliá¹-á¹-hatÄ• vasena nipÄ• tamattaá¹ƒ. __bhikkhÅ« Ä• mantesÄ«_ti parisajeá¹-á jÄ• nÄ• pesi. __bhikkhavo_ti tesaá¹ƒ Ä• mantanÄ• kÄ• radÄ«panaá¹ƒ. __bhadante_ti pativa bhikkhÅ«_ti ye tattha sammukhÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• dhammapaá¹-iggÄ• hakÄ• bhikkhÅ«. __bhagav vacanaá¹ƒ patiassosuá¹ƒ, abhimukhÄ• hutvÄ• suá¹‡iá¹ƒsu sampaá¹-icchiá¹ƒsÅ«ti attho. __

idÄ• ni vattabbaá¹ƒ ``bhÅ«tapubbaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• divacanaá¹ƒ avoca. tattha __tÄ• vatiá¹ƒs tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsakÄ• ye nibbattÄ• . tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsakÄ• yo nÄ• ma dutiyadevaloko vuccati. maghe macalagÄ• me kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• tattha uppanne tettiá¹ƒsa devaputte upÄ• dÄ• ya kira tass paá¹‡á¹‡atti jÄ• tÄ• ti vadanti. yasmÄ• pana sesacakkavÄ• á¸·esupi cha kÄ• mÄ• vacarade cetaá¹ƒ ``sahassaá¹ƒ \Ne I 28/ cÄ• tumahÄ• rÄ• jikÄ• naá¹ƒ sahassaá¹ƒ tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsÄ• naâ tasmÄ• nÄ• mapaá¹‡á¹‡attiyevesÄ• tassa devalokassÄ• ti veditabbÄ• . evaÃ±hi niddosaá __nandane vane_ti ettha taá¹ƒ vanaá¹ƒ paviá¹-á¹-he paviá¹-á¹-he nandayati tosetÄ«ti nand maraá¹‡animittesu uppannesu ``sampattiá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya cavissÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti paridevam devÄ• namindo ``mÄ• paridevittha, abhijjanadhammÄ• nÄ• ma saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• natthÄ«â€ pavesÄ• peti. tÄ• saá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• hi devatÄ• hi bÄ• hÄ• su gahetvÄ• pavesitÄ• nampi \Ee disvÄ• va maraá¹‡asoko vÅ«pasammati, pÄ«tipÄ• mojjameva uppajjati. atha tasmiá¹ƒ kÄ«á uá¹‡hasantatto himapiá¹‡á¸• o viya vilÄ«yanti, vÄ• tÄ• pahatadÄ«pasikhÄ• viya vijjhÄ• yan anto paviá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ nandayati tosetiyevÄ• ti nandanaá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ nandane. __accharÄ• s __accharÄ• _ti devadhÄ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ, tÄ• saá¹ƒ samÅ«hena parivutÄ• .

__dibbehÄ«_ti devaloke nibbattehi. __paÃ±cahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehÄ«_ti manÄ• piyarÅ«pasaddagandharasaphoá¹-á¹-habbasaá¹…khÄ• tehi paÃ±cahi kÄ• mabandh
I 29/. __samappitÄ• _ti upetÄ• . itaraá¹ƒ tasseva vevacanaá¹ƒ. __paricÄ• rayamÄ• nÄ• _ti r rÅ«pÄ• dÄ«su indriyÄ• ni saÃ±cÄ• rayamÄ• nÄ• . __tÄ• yaá¹ƒ velÄ• ya_nti tasmiá¹ƒ paricÄ devaputtassa adhunÄ• abhinibbattakÄ• lo veditabbo. tassa hi paá¹-isandhikkhaá¹‡eyeva ra viya virocayamÄ• no tigÄ• vutappamÄ• á¹‡o attabhÄ• vo nibbatti. so dibbavatthanivattho dibbÄ• laá¹…kÄ• rapaá¹-imaá¹‡á¸• ito dibbamÄ• lÄ• vilepanadharo dibbehi candanacuá¹‡á dibbehi paÃ±cahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehi ovuto nivuto pariyonaddho lobhÄ• bhibhÅ«to hutvÄ• lob nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ apassanto Ä• sabhiá¹ƒ vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• santo viya mahÄ• saddena ``na te suk imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ gÄ• yamÄ• no nandanavane vicari. tena vuttaá¹ƒ --- ``tÄ• yaá¹ƒ velÄ• ya abhÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

__ye na passanti nandana_nti ye tatra paÃ±cakÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• nubhavanavasena nandana __naradevÄ• na_nti devanarÄ• naá¹ƒ, devapurisÄ• nanti attho. __tidasÄ• na_nti tikkhattuá¹ __yasassina_nti parivÄ• rasaá¹…khÄ• tena yasena sampannÄ• naá¹ƒ.

__aÃ±Ã±atarÄ• devatÄ• _ti ekÄ• ariyasÄ• vikÄ• devatÄ• . __paccabhÄ• sÄ«_ti ``ayaá¹ƒ b sampattiá¹ƒ \Ne I 29/ niccaá¹ƒ acalaá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±ati, nÄ• ssÄ• chedanabhedanaviddhaá¹ƒs jÄ• nÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti adhippÄ• yaá¹ƒ vivaá¹-á¹-etvÄ• dassentÄ« ``na tvaá¹ƒ bÄ• leâ€™â€ patiabhÄ• si. __yathÄ• arahataá¹ƒ vaco_ti yathÄ• arahantÄ• naá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ, tathÄ• tva tassÄ• adhippÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹-ikkhipitvÄ• \Ee I 31/ idÄ• ni arahantÄ• naá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ dasse

__aniccÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __aniccÄ• vata saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• _ti sabbe tebhÅ«makasaá aniccÄ• . __uppÄ• davayadhammino_ti uppÄ• davayasabhÄ• vÄ• . __uppajjitvÄ• nirujjhant vevacanaá¹ƒ. yasmÄ• vÄ• uppajjitvÄ• nirujjhanti, tasmÄ• uppÄ• davayadhamminoti. uppA tadanantarÄ• vemajjhaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ gahitameva hoti. __tesaá¹ƒ vÅ«pasamo sukho_ti te vÅ«pasamasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ nibbÄ• nameva sukhaá¹ƒ. idaá¹ƒ arahataá¹ƒ vacoti.

nandanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

2. nandatisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<12> dutiye \Be I 30/ __nandatÄ«_ti tussati attamano hoti. __puttimÄ• _ti bahuputto. tassa kasikammaá¹ƒ katvÄ• dhaÃ±Ã±assa koá¹-á¹-he pÅ«renti, ekacce vaá¹‡ijjaá¹ƒ katvÄ• hiraÃ
Ä• haranti, ekacce rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• yÄ• navÄ• hanagÄ• manigamÄ• dÄ«ni Ä• nubhÄ• vasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ siriá¹ƒ anubhavamÄ• nÄ• mÄ• tÄ• vÄ• pitÄ• vÄ• nandati maá¹‡á¸• itapasÄ• dhite putte sampattiá¹ƒ anubhavamÄ• ne disvÄ• nandatÄ«ti, ``nandati p Ä• ha. __gohi tathevÄ• _ti yathÄ• puttimÄ• puttehi, tathÄ• gosÄ• mikopi sampannaá¹ƒ go nissÄ• ya gorasasampattiá¹ƒ anubhavamÄ• no gohi nandati. __upadhÄ« hi narassa nandan cattÄ• ro upadhÄ« --- kÄ• mÅ«padhi, khandhÅ«padhi, kilesÅ«padhi, abhisaá¹…khÄ• rÅ«pa paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e paá¹-icca uppajjati sukhaá¹ƒ somanassaá¹ƒ, ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ vuttassa sukhassa adhiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÄ• vato ``upadhiyati ettha sukhaâ€™â€™ nti upadhÄ«ti vuccati. khandhÄ• pi khandhamÅ«lakassa dukkhassa adhiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÄ• vato adhiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÄ• vato, abhisaá¹…khÄ• rÄ• pi bhavadukkhassa adhiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÄ• v adhippeto. paÃ±ca hi kÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• tebhÅ«mikÄ• dipÄ• sÄ• da-uá¸·Ä• rasayana-vatthÄ• laá¹…kÄ• ra-nÄ• á¹-akaparivÄ• rÄ• div paccupaá¹-á¹-hitÄ• pÄ«tisomanassaá¹ƒ upasaá¹ƒharamÄ• nÄ• naraá¹ƒ nandayanti. tasmÄ evaá¹ƒ imepi upadhÄ« hi narassa nandanÄ• ti veditabbÄ• . __na hi so nandati yo nirÅ«padh kÄ• maguá¹‡asampattirahito daliddo dullabhaghÄ• sacchÄ• dano \Ne I 30/, na hi so nandat manussanerayiko ca kiá¹ƒ nandissati bhagavÄ• ti Ä• ha.

idaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• satthÄ• cintesi --- ``ayaá¹ƒ devatÄ• sokavatthumeva nandavatthuá¹ƒ karoti sokavatthubhÄ• vamassÄ• dÄ«pessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti phalena phalaá¹ƒ pÄ• tento viya tÄ bhindanto tameva gÄ• thaá¹ƒ parivattetvÄ• __socatÄ«_ti Ä• ha. tattha __socati puttehÄ«_ti puttesu naá¹-á¹-hesupi nassantesupi idÄ• ni nassissantÄ«ti nÄ• sasaá¹…kÄ«pi \Be I 31/ soc marantesupi corehi rÄ• japurisehi gahitesu vÄ• paccatthikÄ• naá¹ƒ hatthaá¹ƒ upagatesu vÄ hutvÄ• socati. rukkhapabbatÄ• dÄ«hi patitvÄ• hatthapÄ• dÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ bhedavasena bhin bhedasaá¹…kÄ«pi hutvÄ• socati. yathÄ• ca puttehi puttimÄ• , gosÄ• mikopi tatheva navah __upadhÄ« hi narassa socanÄ• _ti yathÄ• ca puttagÄ• vo, evaá¹ƒ paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡opa ``tassa ce kÄ• mayÄ• nassa, chandajÄ• tassa jantuno.

te kÄ• mÄ• parihÄ• yanti, sallaviddhova ruppatÄ«â€™â€™ ti || (Sn 773) --- vuttanayena naraá¹ƒ socanti. tasmÄ• narassa socanÄ• sokavatthukamevÄ• ti veditabbÄ• .

nirÅ«padhÄ«_ti yassa pana catubbidhÄ• pete upadhiyo natthi, so nirupadhi mahÄ• khÄ«á¹‡ socati devateti.

nandatisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

3. natthiputtasamasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<13> tatiye __natthi puttasamaá¹ƒ pema_nti virÅ«pepi hi attano puttake suvaá¹‡á¹‡abimba mÄ• lÄ• guá¸·e viya sÄ«sÄ• dÄ«su katvÄ• pariharamÄ• nÄ• tehi ohaditÄ• pi omuttikÄ• pi somanassaá¹ƒ Ä• pajjanti. tenÄ• ha --- ``natthi puttasamaá¹ƒ pemaâ€™â€™ nti \Ee I 33/. p nÄ• ma natthÄ«ti vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. __gosamitaá¹ƒ dhana_nti gohi samaá¹ƒ godhanasamaá¹ƒ g aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma natthi bhagavÄ• ti Ä• ha. __sÅ«riyasamÄ• Ä• bhÄ• _ti sÅ«ri nÄ• ma natthÄ«ti dasseti. __samuddaparamÄ• _ti ye keci aÃ±Ã±e sarÄ• nÄ• ma, sabbe te tesaá¹ƒ uttamo, samuddasadisaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ udakanidhÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• ma natthi, bhagavÄ yasmÄ• pana attapemena samaá¹ƒ pemaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma natthi. mÄ• tÄ• pitÄ• dayo hi chaá¸• a aposetvÄ• pi sattÄ• attÄ• nameva \Be I 32/ posenti. dhaÃ±Ã±ena ca samaá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ nÄ sattÄ• dubbhikkhÄ• honti), tathÄ• rÅ«pe hi kÄ• le hiraÃ±Ã±asuvaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dÄ«ni gomahiá dhaÃ±Ã±aggahaá¹‡atthaá¹ƒ dhaÃ±Ã±asÄ• mikÄ• nameva santikaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• gacchanti.

nÄ• ma natthi. sÅ«riyÄ• dayo hi ekadesaá¹ƒyeva obhÄ• santi, paccuppannameva ca tamaá dasasahassimpi lokadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ ekappajjotaá¹ƒ kÄ• tuá¹ƒ sakkoti, atÄ«taá¹ƒsÄ• dipaá¹-icch vidhamati. meghavuá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• ca samo saro nÄ• ma natthi. nadÄ«vÄ• pi hotu talÄ• kÄ• d saro nÄ• ma natthi. meghavuá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• hi pacchinnÄ• ya mahÄ• samuddo aá¹…gulipabba hoti, vuá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• pana pavattamÄ• nÄ• ya yÄ• va Ä• bhassarabhavanÄ• pi ekodakaá¹ƒ h paá¹-igÄ• thaá¹ƒ vadanto __natthi attasamaá¹ƒ pema_ntiÄ• dimÄ• hÄ• ti.

natthiputtasamasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

4. khattiyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<14> catutthe __khattiyo dvipada_nti dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ rÄ• jÄ• seá¹-á¹-ho. __komÄ• rÄ«_ti k ayaá¹ƒ sesabhariyÄ• naá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti vadati. __pubbajo_ti paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jÄ• to kÄ• á¹‡ kuá¹‡iÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ vÄ• aÃ±Ã±ataro, yo paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jÄ• to, ayameva putto imissÄ• deva

hoti. yasmÄ• pana dvipadÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ buddhÄ• dayo seá¹-á¹-hÄ• , tasmÄ• bhagavÄ• paá kiÃ±cÄ• pi bhagavÄ• sabbesaá¹ƒyeva apadÄ• dibhedÄ• naá¹ƒ sattÄ• naá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-ho, up sabbasattaseá¹-á¹-ho dvipadesuyeva uppajjati, tasmÄ• __sambuddho dvipadaá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-h uppannassa cassa sabbasattaseá¹-á¹-habhÄ• vo \Ee I 34/ appaá¹-ihatova hoti. __Ä• jÄ• nÄ assÄ• dÄ«su aÃ±Ã±ataro vÄ• , yo kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• ti, ayaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ«yova catuppa kÅ«á¹-akaá¹‡á¹‡araÃ±Ã±o guá¸·avaá¹‡á¹‡aasso viya. rÄ• jÄ• kira pÄ• cÄ«nadvÄ• rena nik gamissÄ• mÄ«ti kalambanadÄ«tÄ«raá¹ƒ sampatto, asso tÄ«re á¹-hatvÄ• udakaá¹ƒ otarituá rÄ• jÄ• assÄ• cariyaá¹ƒ Ä• mantetvÄ• , ``aho \Be I 33/ vata tayÄ• asso sikkhÄ• pito udaka icchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. Ä• cariyo ``susikkhÄ• pito deva asso, etassa hi cittaá¹ƒ --- `sacÄ otarissÄ• mi, vÄ• laá¹ƒ temissati, vÄ• le tinte raÃ±Ã±o aá¹…ge udakaá¹ƒ pÄ• teyyÄ• â€™ ti sarÄ«re udakapÄ• tanabhayena na otarati, vÄ• laá¹ƒ gaá¹‡hÄ• pethÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. rÄ vegena otaritvÄ• pÄ• raá¹ƒ gato. __sussÅ«sÄ• _ti sussÅ«samÄ• nÄ• . kumÄ• rikÄ• le vÄ• surÅ«pÄ• vÄ• virÅ«pÄ• vÄ• , yÄ• sÄ• mikaá¹ƒ sussÅ«sati paricarati toseti, sÄ• bhariyÄ• __assavo_ti Ä• suá¹‡amÄ• no. jeá¹-á¹-ho vÄ• hi hotu kaniá¹-á¹-ho vÄ• , yo mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«na sampaá¹-icchati, ovÄ• dapaá¹-ikaro hoti, ayaá¹ƒ puttÄ• naá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-ho, aÃ±Ã±ehi sandhic puttehi ko attho devateti.

khattiyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

5. saá¹‡amÄ• nasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<15> paÃ±came __á¹-hite majjhanhike_ti á¹-hitamajjhanhike. __sannisÄ«vesÅ«_ti yathÄ• p upagantvÄ• sannisinnesu vissamamÄ• nesu. á¹-hitamajjhanhikakÄ• lo nÄ• mesa sabbasat iriyÄ• pathadubbalyakÄ• lo. idha pana pakkhÄ«naá¹ƒyeva vasena dassito. __saá¹‡atevÄ• _ mahÄ• viravaá¹ƒ viya muccati. saá¹‡amÄ• nameva cettha ``saá¹‡atevÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuttaá nÄ• metaá¹ƒ. nidÄ• ghasamayasmiÃ±hi á¹-hitamajjhanhikakÄ• le catuppadagaá¹‡esu ceva sannisinnesu vÄ• tapÅ«ritÄ• naá¹ƒ susirarukkhÄ• naÃ±ceva chiddaveá¹‡upabbÄ• naÃ±ca k sÄ• khaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghaá¹-á¹-ayantÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• dapÄ• naÃ±ca araÃ±Ã±amajjhe mahÄ• sado sandhÄ• yetaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. __taá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ paá¹-ibhÄ• ti ma_nti taá¹ƒ evarÅ«pe kÄ• le ma saá¹‡amÄ• naá¹ƒ mayhaá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ hutvÄ• upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti. dandhapaÃ±Ã±Ä• kiresÄ• nisajjaphÄ• sukaá¹ƒ kathÄ• phÄ• sukaá¹ƒ dutiyakaá¹ƒ alabhantÄ« evamÄ• ha. yasmÄ• pa piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tapaá¹-ikkantassa vivitte araÃ±Ã±Ä• yatane kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• anappakaá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ uppajjati, yaá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya vuttaá¹ƒ ---

``suÃ±Ã±Ä• gÄ• raá¹ƒ \Be I 34/ paviá¹-á¹-hassa, santacittassa bhikkhuno.

amÄ• nusÄ« ratÄ« hoti, sammÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ vipassatoâ€™â€™ ti || (Dhp 373) ca, ``purato \Ne I 33/ pacchato vÄ• pi, aparo ce na vijjati.

atÄ«va phÄ• su bhavati, ekassa vasato vaneâ€™â€™ ti || (Th 537) ca.

tasmÄ• bhagavÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ gÄ• thamÄ• ha. tattha __sÄ• rati paá¹-ibhÄ• ti ma_nti yÄ• ev nisajjÄ• nÄ• ma, sÄ• rati mayhaá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• tÄ«ti attho. sesaá¹ƒ tÄ• disamevÄ• ti.

saá¹‡amÄ• nasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

6. niddÄ• tandÄ«suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<16> chaá¹-á¹-he __niddÄ• _ti, ``abhijÄ• nÄ• mahaá¹ƒ, aggivessana, gimhÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchi okkamitÄ• â€™â€™ ti (MN I 387) evarÅ«pÄ• ya abyÄ• kataniddÄ• ya pubbabhÄ• gÄ• para sasaá¹…khÄ• rikaakusale citte uppannaá¹ƒ thinamiddhaá¹ƒ. __tandÄ«_ti aticchÄ• tÄ• tisÄ«
Ä• gantukaá¹ƒ Ä• lasiyaá¹ƒ. vuttampi cetaá¹ƒ --- ``tattha katamÄ• tandÄ«? yÄ• tandÄ« tan Ä• lasyaá¹ƒ Ä• lasyÄ• yanÄ• Ä• lasyÄ• yitattaá¹ƒ, ayaá¹ƒ vuccati tandÄ«â€™â€™ ti (Vibh kÄ• yavijambhanÄ• . __aratÄ«_ti akusalapakkhÄ• ukkaá¹‡á¹-hitatÄ• . __bhattasammado_t bhattakilamatho. vitthÄ• ro pana tesaá¹ƒ --- ``tattha katamÄ• \Ee I 36/ vijambhitÄ• ? yÄ• kÄ vijambhanÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dinÄ• nayena abhidhamme Ä• gatova. __etenÄ• _ti etena nidd upakkiliá¹-á¹-ho nivÄ• ritapÄ• tubhÄ• vo. __nappakÄ• satÄ«_ti na jotati, na pÄ• tubhavatÄ«t lokuttaramaggo. __idhÄ• _ti imasmiá¹ƒ loke. __pÄ• á¹‡ina_nti sattÄ• naá¹ƒ. __vÄ«riyenÄ• _ maggasahajÄ• tavÄ«riyena. __naá¹ƒ paá¹‡Ä• metvÄ• _ti etaá¹ƒ kilesajÄ• taá¹ƒ nÄ«haritvÄ• lokiyalokuttaramaggo. iti maggeneva upakkilese nÄ«haritvÄ• maggassa visuddhi vuttÄ• ti.

niddÄ• tandÄ«suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

7. dukkarasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<17> sattame \Be I 35/ __duttitikkha_nti dukkhamaá¹ƒ duadhivÄ• siyaá¹ƒ. __abyattenÄ• _ti __sÄ• maÃ±Ã±a_nti samaá¹‡adhammo. iminÄ• devatÄ• idaá¹ƒ dasseti --- yaá¹ƒ paá¹‡á¸• vassÄ• ni vÄ«satipi saá¹-á¹-hipi \Ne I 34/ vassÄ• ni dante abhidantamÄ• dhÄ• ya jivhÄ• ya t cetasÄ• cittaá¹ƒ abhiniggaá¹‡hitvÄ• pi ekÄ• sanaá¹ƒ ekabhattaá¹ƒ paá¹-isevamÄ• nÄ• Ä• brahmacariyaá¹ƒ carantÄ• sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ karonti. taá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• bÄ• lo abyatto kÄ• tu hi tattha sambÄ• dhÄ• _ti tasmiá¹ƒ sÄ• maÃ±Ã±asaá¹…khÄ• te ariyamagge bahÅ« sambÄ• paá¹-ipannassa pubbabhÄ• ge bahÅ« parissayÄ• ti dasseti.

__cittaÃ±ce na nivÄ• raye_ti yadi ayoniso uppannaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ na nivÄ• reyya, kati ahÄ• ni careyya? ekadivasampi na careyya. cittavasiko hi samaá¹‡adhammaá¹ƒ kÄ• tuá¹ƒ na sakko

Ä• rammaá¹‡e Ä• rammaá¹‡e. Ä• rammaá¹‡aÃ±hi idha padanti adhippetaá¹ƒ. yasmiá¹ƒ yas uppajjati, tattha tattha bÄ• lo visÄ«dati nÄ• ma. iriyÄ• pathapadampi vaá¹-á¹-ati. gamanÄ• d kileso uppajjati, tattha tattheva visÄ«dati nÄ• ma. __saá¹…kappÄ• na_nti kÄ• masaá¹…kap

__kummo vÄ• _ti kacchapo viya. __aá¹…gÄ• nÄ«_ti gÄ«vapaÃ±camÄ• ni aá¹…gÄ• ni. __sa samodahitvÄ• vÄ• . __manovitakke_ti manamhi uppannavitakke. ettÄ• vatÄ• idaá¹ƒ dasse soá¹‡á¸• ipaÃ±camÄ• ni aá¹…gÄ• ni sake kapÄ• le samodahanto siá¹…gÄ• lassa otÄ• raá¹ \Ee I 37/ appasayhataá¹ƒ Ä• pajjati, evamevaá¹ƒ bhikkhu manamhi uppannavitakke sake Ä• samodahaá¹ƒ mÄ• rassa otÄ• raá¹ƒ na deti, samodahitvÄ• cassa appasayhataá¹ƒ Ä• pajja taá¹‡hÄ• diá¹-á¹-hinissayehi anissito hutvÄ• . __aheá¹-hayÄ• no_ti avihiá¹ƒsamÄ• no. __pa kilesanibbÄ• nena parinibbuto. __nÅ«pavadeyya kaÃ±cÄ«_ti yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci puggalaá¹ƒ Ä• cÄ kÄ• yaci maá¹…kuá¹ƒ kÄ• tukÄ• mo hutvÄ• na vadeyya, ``kÄ• lena vakkhÄ• mi no akÄ• le dhamme ajjhattaá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hapetvÄ• ullumpanasabhÄ• vasaá¹‡á¹-hitena cittena kÄ• ruÃ vadeyyÄ• ti.

dukkarasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

8. hirÄ«suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<18> aá¹-á¹-hame \Be I 36/ __hirÄ«nisedho_ti hiriyÄ• akusale dhamme nisedhetÄ«ti hirÄ« lokasmiá¹ƒ_ \Ne I 35/ __vijjatÄ«_ti koci evarÅ«po vijjatÄ«ti pucchati. __yo nindaá¹ƒ apabodh garahaá¹ƒ apaharanto bujjhati. __asso bhadro kasÄ• mivÄ• _ti yathÄ• bhadro assÄ• jÄ• nÄ bujjhati, patodacchÄ• yaá¹ƒ disvÄ• saá¹ƒvijjhanto viya kasÄ• ya attani nipÄ• taá¹ƒ na deti, bhÅ«tassa dasaakkosavatthuno attani nipÄ• taá¹ƒ adadanto nindaá¹ƒ apabodhati apaharan khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savo vijjatÄ«ti pucchati. abhÅ«takkosena pana parimutto nÄ• ma natthi. __tanuy akusale dhamme nisedhetvÄ• carantÄ• khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• nÄ• ma appakÄ• ti attho. __sad sativepullena samannÄ• gatÄ• . __antaá¹ƒ dukkhassa pappuyyÄ• _ti vaá¹-á¹-adukkhassa k nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡itvÄ• . sesaá¹ƒ vuttanayamevÄ• ti.

hirÄ«suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. kuá¹-ikÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<19> navame __kacci te kuá¹-ikÄ• _ti ayaá¹ƒ devatÄ• dasa mÄ• se antovasanaá¹-á¹-hÄ• n kuá¹-ikaá¹ƒ katvÄ• , yathÄ• sakuá¹‡Ä• divasaá¹ƒ gocarapasutÄ• rattiá¹ƒ kulÄ• vakaá¹ƒ al sattÄ• \Ee I 38/ tattha tattha gantvÄ• pi mÄ• tugÄ• massa santikaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, Ä• laya kulÄ• vakaá¹ƒ katvÄ• . kulapaveá¹‡iá¹ƒ santÄ• nakaá¹-á¹-hena putte santÄ• nake katvÄ• , t katvÄ• , gÄ• thÄ• bandhanena ime paÃ±he samodhÄ• netvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ pucchi, bhag __tagghÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __tagghÄ• _ti ekaá¹ƒsavacane nipÄ• to. __natthÄ«_ti pah vaá¹-á¹-asmiá¹ƒ vÄ• puna mÄ• tukucchivÄ• sassa dÄ• rabharaá¹‡assa puttanibbattiyÄ• vÄ

devatÄ• ``mayÄ• sannÄ• haá¹ƒ bandhitvÄ• guá¸·hÄ• paÃ±hÄ• pucchitÄ• , ayaÃ±ca sam vissajjesi, jÄ• naá¹ƒ nu kho me ajjhÄ• sayaá¹ƒ kathesi, udÄ• hu \Be I 37/ ajÄ• naá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ v mukhÄ• ruá¸·haá¹ƒ kathesÄ«â€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• puna __kintÄ• ha_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha ahaá¹ƒ. athassÄ• bhagavÄ• Ä• cikkhanto __mÄ• tara_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. __sÄ• hu te_ti gÄ• sampahaá¹ƒsitvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ vanditvÄ• gandhamÄ• lÄ• dÄ«hi pÅ«jetvÄ• attano deva kuá¹-ikÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. samiddhisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<20> dasame \Ne I 36/ __tapodÄ• rÄ• me_ti tapodassa tattodakassa rahadassa vasena ev vebhÄ• rapabbatassa kira heá¹-á¹-hÄ• bhummaá¹-á¹-hakanÄ• gÄ• naá¹ƒ paÃ±cayojanasat devalokasadisaá¹ƒ maá¹‡imayena talena Ä• rÄ• muyyÄ• nehi ca samannÄ• gataá¹ƒ. tattha kÄ«á¸·anaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne mahÄ• udakarahado, tato tapodÄ• nÄ• ma nadÄ« sandati kuthitÄ• edisÄ• ? rÄ• jagahaá¹ƒ kira parivÄ• retvÄ• mahÄ• petaloko tiá¹-á¹-hati, tattha dvinnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• lohakumbhinirayÄ• naá¹ƒ antarena ayaá¹ƒ tapodÄ• Ä• gacchati, tasmÄ• kuthitÄ• s

``yatÄ• yaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, tapodÄ• sandati, so daho acchodako sÄ«todako sÄ• todako seto ramaá¹‡Ä«yo pahÅ«tamacchakacchapo, cakkamattÄ• ni ca padumÄ• ni pupphanti. apicÄ• y dvinnaá¹ƒ mahÄ• nirayÄ• naá¹ƒ antarikÄ• ya Ä• gacchati, tenÄ• yaá¹ƒ tapodÄ• kuthitÄ• sa 231).

imassa pana Ä• rÄ• massa \Ee I 39/ abhimukhaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne tato mahÄ• udakarahado jÄ• t ``tapodÄ• rÄ• moâ€™â€™ ti vuccati.

__samiddhÄ«_ti tassa kira therassa attabhÄ• vo samiddho abhirÅ«po pÄ• sÄ• diko, tasmÄ saá¹…khaá¹ƒ gato. __gattÄ• ni parisiÃ±citu_nti padhÄ• nikatthero esa, balavapaccÅ«se uá¹ sarÄ«raá¹ƒ utuá¹ƒ gÄ• hÄ• petvÄ• bahi \Be I 38/ saá¹-á¹-hihatthamatte mahÄ• caá¹…kame ``sedagahitehi gattehi paribhuÃ±jamÄ• naá¹ƒ senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ kilissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti maÃ±Ã± parisiÃ±canatthaá¹ƒ sarÄ«radhovanatthaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kami. __ekacÄ«varo aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ« kÄ• yabandhanaá¹ƒ bandhitvÄ• cÄ«varaá¹ƒ hatthena gahetvÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si.

__gattÄ• ni pubbÄ• payamÄ• no_ti gattÄ• ni pubbasadisÄ• ni vodakÄ• ni kurumÄ• no. allas cÄ«varaá¹ƒ kilissati duggandhaá¹ƒ hoti, na cetaá¹ƒ vattaá¹ƒ. thero pana vattasampanno, tas nhÄ• yitvÄ• paccuttaritvÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si. tattha idaá¹ƒ nhÄ• navattaá¹ƒ --- udakatitthaá¹ƒ g

katthaci cÄ«varÄ• ni nikkhipitvÄ• vegena á¹-hitakeneva na otaritabbaá¹ƒ, sabbadisÄ• pana vivittabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• khÄ• á¹‡ugumbalatÄ• dÄ«ni vavatthapetvÄ• tikkhattuá¹ƒ ukkÄ• uttarÄ• saá¹…gacÄ«varaá¹ƒ apanetvÄ• pasÄ• retabbaá¹ƒ, kÄ• yabandhanaá¹ƒ mocetvÄ• á¹-hapetabbaá¹ƒ. sace udakasÄ• á¹-ikÄ• natthi, udakante ukkuá¹-ikaá¹ƒ nisÄ«ditvÄ• nivÄ• sinnaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ atthi, pasÄ• retabbaá¹ƒ. no ce atthi, saá¹ƒharitvÄ• á¹-hapetabbaá¹ƒ. u saá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ nÄ• bhippamÄ• á¹‡amattaá¹ƒ otaritvÄ• vÄ«ciá¹ƒ anuá¹-á¹-hÄ• pentena saddaá Ä• gatadisÄ• bhimukhena nimujjitabbaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ cÄ«varaá¹ƒ rakkhitaá¹ƒ hoti. ummujjante saá¹‡ikaá¹ƒ ummujjitvÄ• nhÄ• napariyosÄ• ne udakante ukkuá¹-ikena nisÄ«ditvÄ• nivÄ• s uá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya suparimaá¹‡á¸• alaá¹ƒ nivÄ• setvÄ• kÄ• yabandhanaá¹ƒ bandhitvÄ• cÄ«var á¹-hÄ• tabbanti.

theropi tathÄ• nhÄ• yitvÄ• paccuttaritvÄ• vigacchamÄ• naudakaá¹ƒ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ olokayamÄ pakatiyÄ• pi pÄ• sÄ• dikassa \Ee I 40/ paccÅ«sasamaye sammÄ• pariá¹‡atÄ• hÄ• rassa u mukhavaá¹‡á¹‡o viroci, bandhanÄ• pavuttatÄ• laphalaá¹ƒ viya pabhÄ• sampanno puá¹‡á¹‡ taá¹…khaá¹‡avikasitapadumaá¹ƒ viya mukhaá¹ƒ sassirikaá¹ƒ ahosi, sarÄ«ravaá¹‡á¹‡opi vip vanasaá¹‡á¸• e adhivatthÄ• bhummadevatÄ• pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ olokayamÄ• nÄ asakkontÄ« kÄ• mapariá¸·Ä• hÄ• bhibhÅ«tÄ• hutvÄ• , ``theraá¹ƒ palobhessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€
I 39/ alaá¹…kÄ• rena alaá¹…karitvÄ• sahassavaá¹-á¹-ipadÄ«paá¹ƒ pajjalamÄ• nÄ• viya ca viya sakalÄ• rÄ• maá¹ƒ ekobhÄ• saá¹ƒ katvÄ• theraá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• avanditvÄ• va abhÄ• si. tena vuttaá¹ƒ --- ``atha kho aÃ±Ã±atarÄ• devatÄ• ... pe ... ajjhabhÄ• sÄ«â€™â€ __abhutvÄ• _ti paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e aparibhuÃ±jitvÄ• . __bhikkhasÄ«_ti piá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya c upaccagÄ• _ti ettha kÄ• lo nÄ• ma paÃ±cakÄ• maguá¹‡apaá¹-isevanakkhamo daharayobba obhaggena daá¹‡á¸• aparÄ• yaá¹‡ena pavedhamÄ• nena kÄ• sasÄ• sÄ• bhibhÅ«tena na s imaá¹ƒ kÄ• laá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya devatÄ• ``mÄ• taá¹ƒ kÄ• lo upaccagÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. ta atikkami.

__kÄ• laá¹ƒ vohaá¹ƒ na jÄ• nÄ• mÄ«_ti ettha __vo_ti nipÄ• tamattaá¹ƒ. __kÄ• laá¹ƒ na jÄ• sandhÄ• ya vadati. sattÄ• naÃ±hi ---

``jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ \Ne I 38/ byÄ• dhi kÄ• lo ca, dehanikkhepanaá¹ƒ gati.

paÃ±cete jÄ«valokasmiá¹ƒ, animittÄ• na nÄ• yareâ€™â€™ ||

tattha __jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ_ tÄ• va ``ettakameva, na ito paraâ€™â€™ nti vavatthÄ• nÄ• bhÄ• vato kalalakÄ• lepi hi sattÄ• maranti, abbuda-pesi-ghana-aá¸• á¸• hamÄ• sa-ekamÄ• sa-dvemÄ• sa-temÄ• sa-catumÄ• sapaÃ±c kucchito nikkhantasamayepi, tato paraá¹ƒ vassasatassa antopi bahipi marantiyeva. __byÄ•

byÄ• dhinÄ• sattÄ• maranti, na aÃ±Ã±enÄ• â€™â€™ ti vavatthÄ• nÄ• bhÄ• vato animitto.
maranti sotarogÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±atarenapi. __kÄ• lo_pi, ``imasmiá¹ƒ yeva kÄ• le maritab nti evaá¹ƒ \Ee I 41/ vavatthÄ• nÄ• bhÄ• vato animitto. pubbaá¹‡hepi hi sattÄ• maranti majjh aÃ±Ã±atarasmimpi. __dehanikkhepana_mpi, ``idheva mÄ«yamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ dehena patitab evaá¹ƒ vavatthÄ• nÄ• bhÄ• vato animittaá¹ƒ. antogÄ• me jÄ• tÄ• naÃ±hi bahigÄ• mepi attal jÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ antogÄ• mepi. tathÄ• thalajÄ• naá¹ƒ jale, jalajÄ• naá¹ƒ thaleti anekappakÄ• r __gati_pi, ``ito cutena idha nibbattitabbaâ€™â€™ nti evaá¹ƒ vavatthÄ• nÄ• bhÄ• vato anim cutÄ• manussesupi nibbattanti \Be I 40/, manussalokato cutÄ• devalokÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ yattha evaá¹ƒ yante yuttagoá¹‡o viya gatipaÃ±cake loko samparivattati. tassevaá¹ƒ samparivattato kÄ• le maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti imaá¹ƒ maraá¹‡assa kÄ• laá¹ƒ vohaá¹ƒ na jÄ•

__channo kÄ• lo na dissatÄ«_ti ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• lo mayhaá¹ƒ paá¹-icchanno avibhÅ«to na paÃ± yasmÄ• ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• lo paá¹-icchanno na paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati, tasmÄ• paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e ab maá¹ƒ kÄ• lo upaccagÄ• _ti ettha samaá¹‡adhammakaraá¹‡akÄ• laá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya ``kÄ• lo samaá¹‡adhammo nÄ• ma pacchime kÄ• le tisso vayosÄ«mÄ• atikkantena obhaggena daâ pavedhamÄ• nena kÄ• sasÄ• sÄ• bhibhÅ«tena na sakkÄ• kÄ• tuá¹ƒ. tadÄ• hi na sakkÄ• buddhavacanaá¹ƒ vÄ• gaá¹‡hituá¹ƒ, dhutaá¹…gaá¹ƒ vÄ• paribhuÃ±jituá¹ƒ, araÃ±Ã±avÄ• s icchiticchitakkhaá¹‡e samÄ• pattiá¹ƒ vÄ• samÄ• pajjituá¹ƒ, padabhÄ• á¹‡a-sarabhaÃ±Ã±ad vÄ• kÄ• tuá¹ƒ, taruá¹‡ayobbanakÄ• le panetaá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ sakkÄ• kÄ• tunti ayaá¹ƒ samaa mÄ• maá¹ƒ upaccagÄ• , yÄ• va maá¹ƒ nÄ• tikkamati, tÄ• va kÄ• me abhutvÄ• va samaá¹‡

__pathaviyaá¹ƒ_ \Ne I 39/ __patiá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• _ti sÄ• kira devatÄ• --- ``ayaá¹ƒ bhikkhu samaá¹‡adhammakaraá¹‡assa kÄ• laá¹ƒ nÄ• ma katheti, akÄ• laá¹ƒ nÄ• ma katheti, sahetu sÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaâ€™â€™ nti ettÄ• vatÄ• va there lajjaá¹ƒ paccupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• mahÄ• b viya \Ee I 42/ ca naá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±amÄ• nÄ• gÄ• ravajÄ• tÄ• Ä• kÄ• sÄ• oruyha pathaviyaá¹ sandhÄ• yetaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. kiÃ±cÄ• pi pathaviyaá¹ƒ á¹-hitÄ• , yena panatthena Ä• gatÄ• , pu __daharo tva_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __susÅ«_ti taruá¹‡o. __kÄ• á¸·akeso_ti suá¹-á¹-hu kÄ• bhaddakena. ekacco hi daharopi samÄ• no kÄ• á¹‡o vÄ• hoti kuá¹‡iÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ vÄ• aÃ± samannÄ• gato nÄ• ma na hoti. yo pana abhirÅ«po hoti dassanÄ«yo pÄ• sÄ• diko sabbasa alaá¹…kÄ• raparihÄ• raá¹ƒ icchati, tena tena alaá¹…kato devaputto viya carati, ayaá¹ƒ bhad samannÄ• gato nÄ• ma hoti. thero ca uttamarÅ«pasampanno, tena naá¹ƒ evamÄ• ha.

__anikkÄ«á¸·itÄ• vÄ«_ \Be I 41/ __kÄ• mesÅ«_ti kÄ• mesu akÄ«á¸·itakÄ«á¸·o abhuttÄ• vÄ attho. __mÄ• sandiá¹-á¹-hikaá¹ƒ hitvÄ• _ti yebhuyyena hi tÄ• adiá¹-á¹-hasaccÄ• avÄ«tarÄ devatÄ• bhikkhÅ« dasapi vassÄ• ni vÄ«satimpi ... pe ... saá¹-á¹-himpi vassÄ• ni parisuddha brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caramÄ• ne disvÄ• --- ``ime bhikkhÅ« mÄ• nusake paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e patthayantÄ• samaá¹‡adhammaá¹ƒ karontÄ«â€™â€™ ti saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ uppÄ• denti, ayampi mÄ• nusake kÄ• me sandiá¹-á¹-hike, dibbe ca kÄ• like katvÄ• evamÄ• ha.

__na kho ahaá¹ƒ, Ä• vuso_ti, Ä• vuso, ahaá¹ƒ sandiá¹-á¹-hike kÄ• me hitvÄ• kÄ• like kÄ• n patthemi na pihemi. __kalikaÃ±ca kho ahaá¹ƒ, Ä• vuso_ti ahaá¹ƒ kho, Ä• vuso, kÄ• likaá¹ƒ sandiá¹-á¹-hikaá¹ƒ lokuttaradhammaá¹ƒ anudhÄ• vÄ• mi. iti thero cittÄ• nantaraá¹ƒ aladdha mÄ• nusakepi paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e __kÄ• likÄ• _ti akÄ• si, cittÄ• nantaraá¹ƒ laddhabbatÄ __sandiá¹-á¹-hika_nti. paÃ±cakÄ• maguá¹‡esu samohitesupi sampannakÄ• massÄ• pi kÄ• icchiticchitÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• nubhavanaá¹ƒ na sampajjati. cakkhudvÄ• re iá¹-á¹-hÄ• rammaá¹ cittakÄ• rapotthakÄ• rarÅ«pakÄ• rÄ• dayo pakkosÄ• petvÄ• , ``idaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma sajjethÄ• â€™ etthantare anekakoá¹-isatasahassÄ• ni cittÄ• ni uppajjitvÄ• nirujjhanti. atha pacchÄ• taá¹ƒ sampÄ• puá¹‡Ä• ti \Ee I 43/. sesadvÄ• resupi eseva nayo. sotÄ• pattimaggÄ• nantaraá¹ƒ pa
I 40/ uppajjati, antarÄ• aÃ±Ã±assa cittassa vÄ• ro natthi. sesaphalesupi eseva nayoti.

so tamevatthaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• __kÄ• likÄ• hi, Ä• vuso_tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __kÄ• likÄ• _ti v samohitasampattinÄ• pi kÄ• lantare pattabbÄ• . __bahudukkhÄ• _ti paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e bahutÄ• ya bahudukkhÄ• . taá¹ƒvatthukasseva upÄ• yÄ• sassa bahutÄ• ya __bahupÄ• yÄ• paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡e nissÄ• ya laddhabbasukhato Ä• dÄ«navo bhiyyo, dukkhameva bahu ayaá¹ƒ dhammo_ti ayaá¹ƒ lokuttaradhammo yena yena adhigato hoti, tena tena parasaddhÄ paccavekkhaá¹‡aÃ±Ä• á¹‡ena sayaá¹ƒ daá¹-á¹-habboti \Be I 42/ __sandiá¹-á¹-hiko_. attano nÄ• ssa kÄ• loti akÄ• lo, akÄ• loyeva __akÄ• liko_. yo ettha ariyamaggadhammo, so attano phalaá¹ƒ detÄ«ti attho. ``ehi passa imaá¹ƒ dhammaâ€™â€™ nti evaá¹ƒ pavattaá¹ƒ ehipassa __ehipassiko_. Ä• dittaá¹ƒ celaá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ«saá¹ƒ vÄ• ajjhupekkhitvÄ• pi bhÄ• vanÄ• vasen arahatÄ«ti __opaneyyiko_. sabbehi ugghaá¹-itaÃ±Ã±Å«Ä• dÄ«hi viÃ±Ã±Å«hi ``bhÄ• vito me phalaá¹ƒ, sacchikato nirodhoâ€™â€™ ti attani attani veditabboti __paccattaá¹ƒ veditabbo vi ayamettha saá¹…khepo, vitthÄ• ro pana __visuddhimagge_ (Vism I 146 Ä• dayo) dhammÄ•
vutto.

idÄ• ni sÄ• devatÄ• andho viya rÅ«pavisesaá¹ƒ therena kathitassa atthe ajÄ• nantÄ« __ka bhikkhÅ«_tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __kathaÃ±cÄ• _tipadassa ``kathaÃ±ca bhikkhu kÄ• likÄ• kA kathaá¹ƒ bahudukkhÄ• , kathaá¹ƒ bahupÄ• yÄ• sÄ• â€™â€™ ti? evaá¹ƒ sabbapadehi samb __navo_ti aparipuá¹‡á¹‡apaÃ±cavasso hi bhikkhu navo nÄ• ma hoti, paÃ±cavassato paá¹-á dasavassato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya thero. aparo nayo --- aparipuá¹‡á¹‡adasavasso navo, dasavass majjhimo, vÄ«sativassato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya thero. tesaá¹ƒ ahaá¹ƒ navoti vadati.

navopi ekacco sattaá¹-á¹-havassakÄ• le pabbajitvÄ• dvÄ• dasaterasavassÄ• ni \Ee I 44/ sA atikkanto cirapabbajito hoti, ahaá¹ƒ pana acirapabbajitoti vadati. __imaá¹ƒ dhammavinaya_n vinayaÃ±ca. ubhayampetaá¹ƒ sÄ• sanasseva nÄ• maá¹ƒ. dhammena hettha dve piá¹-akÄ• vinayapiá¹-akaá¹ƒ, iti tÄ«hi piá¹-akehi pakÄ• sitaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipattiá¹ƒ adhunÄ• Ä• gatomhÄ«ti __mahesakkhÄ• hÄ«_ti mahÄ• parivÄ• rÄ• hi. ekekassa hi devaraÃ±Ã±o koá¹-isatampi koa te attÄ• naá¹ƒ mahante á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hapetvÄ• tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ passanti. tattha amhÄ• disÄ• mÄ• tugÄ• majÄ• tikÄ• naá¹ƒ kuto okÄ• soti dasseti.

__mayampi_ \Be I 43/ __Ä• gaccheyyÄ• mÄ• _ti idaá¹ƒ sÄ• devatÄ• ``sacepi cakkavÄ• á¹ nisinnÄ• hoti, mahatiyÄ• buddhavÄ«thiyÄ• satthu santikaá¹ƒ gantuá¹ƒ labhatÄ«â€™â€™ bhikkhu, puccha bhikkhÅ«_ti thirakaraá¹‡avasena Ä• meá¹• itaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ.

__akkheyyasaÃ±Ã±ino_ti ettha ``devo, manusso, gahaá¹-á¹-ho, pabbajito, satto, puggalo, ti tiÄ• dinÄ• nayena akkheyyato sabbesaá¹ƒ akkhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ sabbÄ• saá¹ƒ kathÄ• naá¹ƒ v ``akkheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuccanti. ``satto naro poso puggalo itthÄ« purisoâ€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti saÃ±Ã±ino, akkheyyesveva saÃ±Ã±inoti __akkheyyasaÃ±Ã±ino, _ paÃ±casu khand sattapuggalÄ• disaÃ±Ã±inoti attho. __akkheyyasmiá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• _ti paÃ±casu khandhe patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• . ratto hi rÄ• gavasena patiá¹-á¹-hito hoti, duá¹-á¹-ho dosavasena, mÅ«á¹·ho parÄ• maá¹-á¹-ho diá¹-á¹-hivasena, thÄ• magato anusayavasena, vinibaddho mÄ• navasen vicikicchÄ• vasena, vikkhepagato uddhaccavasena patiá¹-á¹-hito hoti. __akkheyyaá¹ƒ apari paÃ±cakkhandhe tÄ«hi pariÃ±Ã±Ä• hi aparijÄ• nitvÄ• . __yogamÄ• yanti maccuno_ti maccu pakkhepaá¹ƒ upakkhepaá¹ƒ upakkamaá¹ƒ abbhantaraá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, maraá¹‡avasaá¹ƒ g gÄ• thÄ• ya kÄ• likÄ• kÄ• mÄ• kathitÄ• .

__pariÃ±Ã±Ä• yÄ• _ti Ã±Ä• tapariÃ±Ã±Ä• , tÄ«raá¹‡apariÃ±Ã±Ä• , pahÄ• napariÃ±Ã±Ä• ti parijÄ• nitvÄ• . tattha katamÄ• __Ã±Ä• tapariÃ±Ã±Ä• ? _ paÃ±cakkhandhe \Ee I 45/ parijÄ• rÅ«pakkhandho, ayaá¹ƒ vedanÄ• kkhandho, ayaá¹ƒ saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho, ayaá¹ƒ saá¹…kh viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandho, imÄ• ni tesaá¹ƒ lakkhaá¹‡arasapaccupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• napadaá¹-á¹-hÄ Ã±Ä• tapariÃ±Ã±Ä• . katamÄ• __tÄ«raá¹‡apariÃ±Ã±Ä• ? _ evaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• taá¹ƒ katvÄ• paÃ dukkhato rogatoti dvÄ• cattÄ• lÄ«sÄ• ya Ä• kÄ• rehi. ayaá¹ƒ \Ne I 42/ tÄ«raá¹‡apariÃ±Ã±Ä• __pahÄ• napariÃ±Ã±Ä• ? _ evaá¹ƒ tÄ«rayitvÄ• aggamaggena paÃ±casu khandhesu chand pahÄ• napariÃ±Ã±Ä• .

__akkhÄ• tÄ• raá¹ƒ na maÃ±Ã±atÄ«_ti evaá¹ƒ tÄ«hi pariÃ±Ã±Ä• hi paÃ±cakkhandhe parijÄ bhikkhu akkhÄ• tÄ• raá¹ƒ puggalaá¹ƒ na maÃ±Ã±ati. __akkhÄ• tÄ• ra_nti kammavasena kÄ akkhÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ kathetabbaá¹ƒ puggalaá¹ƒ na maÃ±Ã±ati, na passatÄ«ti attho \Be I 44/. ki ``tissoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ``phussoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• evaá¹ƒ yena kenaci nÄ• mena vÄ• gottena __taÃ±hi tassa na hotÄ«_ti taá¹ƒ tassa khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa na hoti. __yena naá¹ƒ vajjÄ• _ti rattoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ``dosena duá¹-á¹-hoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ``mohena mÅ«á¹·hoâ€™â€™ ti v kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ tassa khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa natthi.

__sace vijÄ• nÄ• si vadehÄ«_ti sace evarÅ«paá¹ƒ khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• si, ``jÄ• nÄ•
jÄ• nÄ• si, atha ``na jÄ• nÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadehi. __yakkhÄ• _ti devataá¹ƒ Ä• lapanto Ä sandiá¹-á¹-hiko navavidho lokuttaradhammo kathito. __sÄ• dhÅ«_ti Ä• yÄ• canatthe nipÄ• t __yo maÃ±Ã±atÄ«_ti yo attÄ• naá¹ƒ ``ahaá¹ƒ samoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ``visesÄ«â€™â€™ ti v maÃ±Ã±ati. etena ``seyyohamasmÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dayo tayo mÄ• nÄ• gahitÄ• va. tesu ga honti. __so vivadetha tenÄ• _ti so puggalo teneva mÄ• nena yena kenaci puggalena saddhi tvaá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• si, kiá¹ƒ jÄ• tiyÄ• pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• si, udÄ• hu gottena, kulapadesena, vaá bÄ• husaccena, dhutaguá¹‡enÄ• â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ vivadeyya. iti imÄ• yapi upaá¸• á¸• hag kathitÄ• .

__tÄ«su vidhÄ• sÅ«_ti tÄ«su mÄ• nesu. ``ekavidhena rÅ«pasaá¹…gahoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ« ``vidhoâ€™â€™ ti vutto. ``kathaá¹ƒvidhaá¹ƒ sÄ«lavantaá¹ƒ vadanti, kathaá¹ƒvidhaá¹ƒ paÃ± vadantÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (SN I 1.95) Ä• kÄ• ro. ``tisso imÄ• , bhikkhave, vidhÄ• . kata seyyohamasmÄ«ti vidhÄ• , sadisohamasmÄ«ti vidhÄ• , hÄ«nohamasmÄ«ti vidhÄ• â€™â€™ ``vidhÄ• â€™â€™ ti vutto. idhÄ• pi mÄ• nova. tena vuttaá¹ƒ ``tÄ«su vidhÄ• sÅ«ti tÄ«su mÄ __avikampamÄ• no_ti so puggalo etesu saá¹…khepato tÄ«su \Ne I 43/, vitthÄ• rato navasu calati. __samo visesÄ«ti na tassa hotÄ«_ti tassa pahÄ«namÄ• nassa khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa `` ``seyyoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ``hÄ«noâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• na hotÄ«ti dasseti. pacchimapadaá¹ƒ vutta upaá¸• á¸• hagÄ• thÄ• ya navavidho sandiá¹-á¹-hiko lokuttaradhammo kathito.

__pahÄ• si_ \Be I 45/ __saá¹…kha_nti, ``paá¹-isaá¹…khÄ• yoniso Ä• hÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• hÄ• ret
4.120, 239) paÃ±Ã±Ä• ``saá¹…khÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• gatÄ• . ``atthi te koci gaá¹‡ako vÄ• mu yo pahoti gaá¹…gÄ• ya vÄ• lukaá¹ƒ gaá¹‡etuâ€™â€™ nti (SN II 4.410) ettha gaá¹‡anÄ• . `` papaÃ±casaá¹…khÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«su (Sn 880) koá¹-á¹-hÄ• so. ``yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ samaÃ±Ã±Ä• â€™â€™ ti (Dhs 1313-1315) ettha paá¹‡á¹‡atti ``saá¹…khÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• g adhippetÄ• . __pahÄ• si saá¹…kha_nti padassa hi ayamevattho --- ratto duá¹-á¹-ho mÅ«á¸·h paá¹‡á¹‡attiá¹ƒ khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savo pahÄ• si jahi pajahÄ«ti.

__na vimÄ• namajjhagÄ• _ti navabhedaá¹ƒ tividhamÄ• naá¹ƒ na upagato. nivÄ• saá¹-á¹-he ``vimÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti vuccati, taá¹ƒ Ä• yatiá¹ƒ paá¹-isandhivasena na upagacchÄ«tipi atth atÄ«tavacanaá¹ƒ. __acchecchÄ«_ti chindi. __chinnagantha_nti cattÄ• ro ganthe chinditvÄ• __anÄ«gha_nti niddukkhaá¹ƒ. __nirÄ• sa_nti nittaá¹‡haá¹ƒ. __pariyesamÄ• nÄ• _ti olokaya na adhigacchanti na vindanti na passanti. vattamÄ• natthe atÄ«tavacanaá¹ƒ. __idha vÄ• hu vÄ• paraloke vÄ• . __sabbanivesanesÅ«_ti tayo bhavÄ• , catasso yoniyo, paÃ±ca gatiyo, s viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹-á¹-hitiyo, nava sattÄ• vÄ• sÄ• , iti imesupi sabbesu sattanivesanesu evarÅ kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• uppajjamÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• uppannaá¹ƒ \Ee I 47/ vÄ• na passantÄ«ti attho.
sandiá¹-á¹-hikaá¹ƒ lokuttaradhammameva kathesi.

imaÃ±ca gÄ• thaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• sÄ• pi devatÄ• atthaá¹ƒ sallakkhesi, teneva kÄ• raá¹‡ena __i bhante_tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __pÄ• paá¹ƒ na kayirÄ• _ti gÄ• thÄ• ya dasakusalakammapat vaá¹-á¹-ati aá¹-á¹-haá¹…gikamaggavasenapi. dasakusalakammapathavasena tÄ• va __vaca vacÄ«sucaritaá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ. __manasÄ• _ti tividhaá¹ƒ manosucaritaá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ. __kÄ• ye sabbaloke_ti tividhaá¹ƒ kÄ• yasucaritaá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ. ime tÄ• va dasakusalakammapathadha pahÄ• yÄ• _ti iminÄ• pana kÄ• masukhallikÄ• nuyogo \Ne I 44/ paá¹-ikkhitto. __satimÄ• sa dasakusalakammapathakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ satisampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ. __dukkhaá¹ƒ na se iminÄ• attakilamathÄ• nuyogo paá¹-isiddho. iti devatÄ• ``ubho ante vivajjetvÄ• \Be I 46/ kÄ satisampajaÃ±Ã±ehi saddhiá¹ƒ dasakusalakammapathadhamme tumhehi kathite Ä• jÄ• nÄ•

aá¹-á¹-haá¹…gikamaggavasena pana ayaá¹ƒ nayo --- tasmiá¹ƒ kira á¹-hÄ• ne mahatÄ« dha desanÄ• pariyosÄ• ne devatÄ• yathÄ• á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hitÄ• va desanÄ• nusÄ• rena Ã±Ä• á¹‡ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya attanÄ• adhigataá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹…gikaá¹ƒ maggaá¹ƒ dassentÄ« evamÄ• h sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• gahitÄ• , mano pana aá¹…gaá¹ƒ na hotÄ«ti __manasÄ• _ti maggasampa __kÄ• yena vÄ• kiÃ±cana sabbaloke_ti sammÄ• kammanto gahito, Ä• jÄ«vo pana vÄ• cÄ• hoti. __satimÄ• _ti iminÄ• vÄ• yÄ• masatisamÄ• dhayo gahitÄ• . __sampajÄ• no_tipadena sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hisammÄ• saá¹…kappÄ• . __kÄ• me pahÄ• ya, dukkhaá¹ƒ na sevethÄ• _ti iti ime dve ante anupagamma majjhimaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ tumhehi kathitaá¹ƒ, Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mi tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ gandhamÄ• lÄ• dÄ«hi pÅ«jetvÄ• padakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ katvÄ• pakkÄ• mÄ«ti.

samiddhisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

nandanavaggo dutiyo.

3. sattivaggo

1. sattisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<21> sattivaggassa paá¹-hame \Ee I 48/ __sattiyÄ• _ti desanÄ• sÄ«sametaá¹ƒ. ekatokhÄ• attho. __omaá¹-á¹-ho_ti pahato. cattÄ• ro hi pahÄ• rÄ• omaá¹-á¹-ho ummaá¹-á¹-ho maá¹-á¹ tattha upari á¹-hatvÄ• adhomukhaá¹ƒ dinnapahÄ• ro omaá¹-á¹-ho nÄ• ma; heá¹-á¹-hÄ• á¹-dinno ummaá¹-á¹-ho nÄ• ma; aggaá¸·asÅ«ci viya vinivijjhitvÄ• gato maá¹-á¹-ho nÄ• ma; ses nÄ• ma. imasmiá¹ƒ pana á¹-hÄ• ne omaá¹-á¹-ho gahito. so hi sabbadÄ• ruá¹‡o duruddharas antopubbalohitova hoti \Ne I 45/, pubbalohitaá¹ƒ anikkhamitvÄ• vaá¹‡amukhaá¹ƒ pariyonan pubbalohitaá¹ƒ \Be I 47/ niharitukÄ• mehi maÃ±cena saddhiá¹ƒ bandhitvÄ• adhosiro kÄ• ta maraá¹‡amattaá¹ƒ vÄ• dukkhaá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• ti. __paribbaje_ti vihareyya.

imÄ• ya gÄ• thÄ• ya kiá¹ƒ katheti? yathÄ• sattiyÄ• omaá¹-á¹-ho puriso sallubbahana-vaá¹‡ atthÄ• ya vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhati, payogaá¹ƒ karoti parakkamati. yathÄ• ca á¸• ayhamÄ• no tassa nibbÄ• panatthÄ• ya vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhati, payogaá¹ƒ karoti parakkamati, evameva b pahÄ• nÄ• ya sato appamatto hutvÄ• vihareyya bhagavÄ• ti kathesi.

atha bhagavÄ• cintesi --- imÄ• ya devatÄ• ya upamÄ• tÄ• va daá¸·haá¹ƒ katvÄ• Ä• nÄ«tÄ parittakaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• á¹-hitÄ• , punappunaá¹ƒ kathentÄ«pi hesÄ• kÄ• marÄ• gassa vikkha yÄ• va ca kÄ• marÄ• go maggena na samugghÄ• á¹-iyati, tÄ• va anubaddhova hoti. iti tame paá¹-hamamaggavasena desanaá¹ƒ vinivaá¹-á¹-etvÄ• desento dutiyaá¹ƒ gÄ• thamÄ• ha. ta veditabboti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. phusatisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<22> dutiye __nÄ• phusantaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«_ti kammaá¹ƒ aphusantaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko na phusati, kammaá¹ƒ na phusati. kammaÃ±hi nÄ• karoto kariyati. __phusantaÃ±ca tato_ \Ee I 49/ __p phusantaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko phusati, kammameva vÄ• phusati. kammaÃ±hi karoto kariyati. __tas appaduá¹-á¹-hapadosina_nti yasmÄ• na aphusantaá¹ƒ phusati, phusantaÃ±ca phusati, aya dhammatÄ• , tasmÄ• yo ``appaduá¹-á¹-hassa narassa dussati, suddhassa posassa anaá¹…
vutto appaduá¹-á¹-hapadosÄ« puggalo, taá¹ƒ puggalaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ phusantameva kamma phusati. so hi parassa upaghÄ• taá¹ƒ kÄ• tuá¹ƒ sakkoti vÄ• mÄ• vÄ• , attÄ• panÄ• nena c nÄ• ma hoti. tenÄ• ha bhagavÄ• --- ``tameva bÄ• laá¹ƒ pacceti pÄ• paá¹ƒ, sukhumo rajo pa khittoâ€™â€™ ti. dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. jaá¹-Ä• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<23> tatiye \Ne I 46/ \Be I 48/ __antojaá¹-Ä• _ti gÄ• thÄ• yaá¹ƒ __jaá¹-Ä• _ti taá¹‡hÄ• ya jÄ adhivacanaá¹ƒ. sÄ• hi rÅ«pÄ• dÄ«su Ä• rammaá¹‡esu heá¹-á¹-hupariyavasena punappuna saá¹ƒsibbanaá¹-á¹-hena veá¸·ugumbÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ sÄ• khÄ• jÄ• lasaá¹…khÄ• tÄ• jaá¹-Ä• v sakaparikkhÄ• raparaparikkhÄ• resu sakaattabhÄ• va-paraattabhÄ• vesu ajjhattikÄ• yatana uppajjanato __antojaá¹-Ä• bahijaá¹-Ä• _ti vuccati. tÄ• ya evaá¹ƒ uppajjamÄ• nÄ• ya __jaá¹ yathÄ• nÄ• ma veá¸·ujaá¹-Ä• dÄ«hi veá¸·uÄ• dayo, evaá¹ƒ tÄ• ya taá¹‡hÄ• jaá¹-Ä• ya sabb sattanikÄ• yasaá¹…khÄ• tÄ• pajÄ• jaá¹-itÄ• vinaddhÄ• , saá¹ƒsibbitÄ• ti attho. yasmÄ• ca taá¹ƒ gotama pucchÄ• mÄ«_ti tasmÄ• taá¹ƒ pucchÄ• mi. __gotamÄ• _ti bhagavantaá¹ƒ go vijaá¹-aye jaá¹-a_nti imaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ tedhÄ• tukaá¹ƒ jaá¹-etvÄ• á¹-hitaá¹ƒ jaá¹-aá¹ƒ ko vijaá¹-vijaá¹-etuá¹ƒ ko samatthoti pucchati.

athassa bhagavÄ• tamatthaá¹ƒ vissajjento __sÄ«le patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• yÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• yÄ• _ti catupÄ• risuddhisÄ«le á¹-hatvÄ• . ettha ca bhagavÄ• jaá¹-Ä• vijaá¹-an

Ä• rabhanto na ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ puá¹-á¹-ho aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kathetÄ«â€™â€™ ti veditabbo. jaá¹-Ä• patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• dassanatthamettha sÄ«laá¹ƒ kathitaá¹ƒ.

__naro_ti \Ee I 50/ satto. __sapaÃ±Ã±o_ti kammajatihetukapaá¹-isandhipaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya paÃ± paÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca bhÄ• vaya_nti samÄ• dhiÃ±ceva vipassanaÃ±ca bhÄ• vayamÄ• no. cittasÄ« samÄ• pattiyo kathitÄ• , paÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• mena vipassanÄ• . __Ä• tÄ• pÄ«_ti vÄ«riyavÄ• . vÄ Ä• tÄ• panaparitÄ• panaá¹-á¹-hena ``Ä• tÄ• poâ€™â€™ ti vuccati, tadassa atthÄ«ti Ä• tÄ• p vuccati paÃ±Ã±Ä• , tÄ• ya samannÄ• gatoti attho. iminÄ• padena pÄ• rihÄ• riyapaÃ±Ã±aá¹ __pÄ• rihÄ• riyapaÃ±Ã±Ä• _ nÄ• ma ``ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• lo uddesassa, ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• lo paripucchÄ• sabbattha kÄ• rÄ• pitÄ• pariharitabbapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . imasmiÃ±hi paÃ±hÄ• byÄ• karaá¹‡e tikk tattha paá¹-hamÄ• jÄ• tipaÃ±Ã±Ä• , dutiyÄ• vipassanÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , tatiyÄ• sabbakiccapa pÄ• rihÄ• riyapaÃ±Ã±Ä• .

__so_ \Be I 49/ __imaá¹ƒ vijaá¹-aye jaá¹-a_nti so imehi sÄ«lÄ• dÄ«hi samannÄ• gato bhikk pathaviyaá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya sunisitaá¹ƒ satthaá¹ƒ ukkhipitvÄ• mahantaá¹ƒ veá¸·ugumbaá evamevaá¹ƒ sÄ«le \Ne I 47/ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya samÄ• dhisilÄ• yaá¹ƒ sunisitaá¹ƒ vipassanÄ• p vÄ«riyabalapaggahitena pÄ• rihÄ• riyapaÃ±Ã±Ä• hatthena ukkhipitvÄ• sabbampi taá¹ƒ atta taá¹‡hÄ• jaá¹-aá¹ƒ vijaá¹-eyya saÃ±chindeyya sampadÄ• leyyÄ• ti.

ettÄ• vatÄ• sekhabhÅ«miá¹ƒ kathetvÄ• idÄ• ni jaá¹-aá¹ƒ vijaá¹-etvÄ• á¹-hitaá¹ƒ mahÄ• kh __yesa_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. evaá¹ƒ jaá¹-aá¹ƒ vijaá¹-etvÄ• á¹-hitaá¹ƒ khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savaá¹ƒ dasse vijaá¹-anokÄ• saá¹ƒ dassento __yattha nÄ• maÃ±cÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __nÄ• ma_nti __paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ rÅ«pasaÃ±Ã±Ä• cÄ• _ti ettha paá¹-ighasaÃ±Ã±Ä• vasena kÄ• mabhavo ga rÅ«pabhavo. tesu dvÄ«su gahitesu arÅ«pabhavo gahitova hoti bhavasaá¹…khepenÄ• ti. __ jaá¹-Ä• _ti ettha tebhÅ«makavaá¹-á¹-assa pariyÄ• diyanaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne esÄ• jaá¹-Ä• chijjati, chijjati nirujjhatÄ«ti ayaá¹ƒ attho dassito hoti. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. manonivÄ• raá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<24> catutthe __yato yato_ti pÄ• pato vÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡ato vÄ• . ayaá¹ƒ kira devatÄ• ``yaá¹ kusalÄ• dibhedaá¹ƒ lokiyaá¹ƒ vÄ• lokuttaraá¹ƒ vÄ• mano, taá¹ƒ nivÄ• retabbameva, na up evaá¹ƒ laddhikÄ• \Ee I 51/. __sa sabbato_ti so sabbato. atha bhagavÄ• --- ``ayaá¹ƒ devatÄ katheti, mano nÄ• ma nivÄ• retabbampi atthi bhÄ• vetabbampi, vibhajitvÄ• namassÄ• das dutiyagÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• ha. tattha __na mano saá¹ƒ yatattamÄ• gata_nti, yaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ ``na sa nivÄ• rayeâ€™â€™ ti, kataraá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ mano, yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sabbato na nivÄ• retabbanti ce. m Ä• gataá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ mano yattha saá¹ƒ yatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gataá¹ƒ, ``dÄ• naá¹ƒ dassÄ• mi, sÄ tiÄ• dinÄ• nayena uppannaá¹ƒ, etaá¹ƒ mano na nivÄ• retabbaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±adatthu brÅ«heta __yato yato ca pÄ• paka_nti yato yato akusalaá¹ƒ uppajjati, tato tato ca taá¹ƒ nivÄ• retabba

5. arahantasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<25> paÃ±came \Be I 50/ __katÄ• vÄ«_ti catÅ«hi maggehi katakicco. __ahaá¹ƒ vadÄ• mÄ« vanasaá¹‡á¸• avÄ• sinÄ«, sÄ• Ä• raÃ±Ã±akÄ• naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ``ahaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jÄ• m mama \Ne I 48/ cÄ«varaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dikathÄ• vohÄ• raá¹ƒ sutvÄ• cintesi --- ``ahaá¹ƒ im `khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• â€™ ti maÃ±Ã±Ä• mi, khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• naÃ±ca nÄ• ma evarÅ«pÄ• att nu khoâ€™â€™ ti jÄ• nanatthaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ pucchati.

__sÄ• maÃ±Ã±a_nti lokaniruttiá¹ƒ lokavohÄ• raá¹ƒ. __kusalo_ti khandhÄ• dÄ«su kusalo. _
upaladdhinissitakathaá¹ƒ hitvÄ• vohÄ• rabhedaá¹ƒ akaronto ``ahaá¹ƒ, mamÄ• â€™â€™ ti bhuÃ±janti, khandhÄ• nisÄ«danti, khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ patto, khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ cÄ«varaâ€™â€™ hoti, na koci jÄ• nÄ• ti. tasmÄ• evaá¹ƒ avatvÄ• lokavohÄ• rena voharatÄ«ti.

atha devatÄ• --- ``yadi diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• vasena na vadati, mÄ• navasena nu kho vadatÄ«â€™ __yo hotÄ«_ti pucchi. tattha __mÄ• naá¹ƒ nu kho_ti so bhikkhu mÄ• naá¹ƒ upagantvÄ• mÄ atha bhagavÄ• --- ``ayaá¹ƒ devatÄ• khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savaá¹ƒ samÄ• naá¹ƒ viya karotÄ«â€™â€ ``khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa navavidhopi mÄ• no pahÄ«noâ€™â€™ ti dassento paá¹-igÄ• thaá¹ƒ vidhamitÄ• . __mÄ• naganthassÄ• _ti mÄ• nÄ• ca \Ee I 52/ ganthÄ• ca assa. __maÃ±Ã±a taá¹‡hÄ• -diá¹-á¹-hi-mÄ• na-maÃ±Ã±anaá¹ƒ so vÄ«tivatto, atikkantoti attho. sesaá¹ƒ uttÄ• n paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. pajjotasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<26> chaá¹-á¹-he __puá¹-á¹-hu_nti pucchituá¹ƒ. __kathaá¹ƒ jÄ• nemÅ«_ti kathaá¹ƒ jÄ• ney divÄ• ca rattiÃ±ca. __tattha tatthÄ• _ti yattha yattheva pajjalito hoti, tattha tattha. __esÄ• Ä buddhÄ• bhÄ• . katamÄ• pana sÄ• ti? Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• loko vÄ• hotu pÄ«tiÄ• loko vÄ• pasÄ• vÄ• , sabbopi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• tubhÄ• vÄ• uppanno Ä• loko __buddhÄ• bhÄ• _ nÄ• ma asadisÄ• ti. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

7. sarasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<27> sattame \Be I 51/ __kuto sarÄ• nivattantÄ«_ti ime saá¹ƒsÄ• rasarÄ• kuto nivattanti, nappavattantÄ«ti \Ne I 49/ attho. __na gÄ• dhatÄ«_ti na patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti. __ato_ti ato nibbÄ• uttÄ• natthamevÄ• ti. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. mahaddhanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<28> aá¹-á¹-hame nidhÄ• nagataá¹ƒ muttasÄ• rÄ• di mahantaá¹ƒ dhanametesanti __maha suvaá¹‡á¹‡arajatabhÄ• janÄ• di mahÄ• bhogo etesanti __mahÄ• bhogÄ• . aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã± aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ abhigijjhanti patthenti pihenti. __analaá¹…katÄ• _ti atittÄ• apariyattaj __ussukkajÄ• tesÅ«_ti nÄ• nÄ• kiccajÄ• tesu anuppannÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ uppÄ• c anubhavanatthÄ• ya ussukkesu. __bhavasotÄ• nusÄ• rÄ«sÅ«_ti vaá¹-á¹-asotaá¹ƒ anusaran avÄ• vaá¹-Ä• . __agÄ• ra_nti mÄ• tugÄ• mena saddhiá¹ƒ gehaá¹ƒ. __virÄ• jiyÄ• _ti virÄ• jet aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

9. catucakkasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<29> navame \Ee I 53/ __catucakka_nti catuiriyÄ• pathaá¹ƒ. iriyÄ• patho hi idha cakkanti a __navadvÄ• ra_nti navahi vaá¹‡amukhehi navadvÄ• raá¹ƒ. __puá¹‡á¹‡a_nti asucipÅ«raá¹ƒ taá¹‡hÄ• ya saá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ. __kathaá¹ƒ yÄ• trÄ• bhavissatÄ«_ti etassa evarÅ«passa sarÄ« niggamanaá¹ƒ bhavissati, kathaá¹ƒ mutti parimutti samatikkamo bhavissatÄ«ti pucchati. __n upanÄ• haá¹ƒ, pubbakÄ• le kodho, aparakÄ• le upanÄ• hoti evaá¹ƒ pavattaá¹ƒ balavakodha ``chetvÄ• naddhi varattaÃ±ca, sandÄ• naá¹ƒ sahanukkamaâ€™â€™ nti gÄ• thÄ• ya (Dhp 3 __varattÄ• , _ diá¹-á¹-hi __sandÄ• naá¹ƒ_ nÄ• ma jÄ• taá¹ƒ. idha pana pÄ• á¸·iniddiá¹-á¹-he avasesÄ• ``varattÄ• â€™â€™ ti veditabbÄ• , iti kilesavarattaÃ±ca chetvÄ• ti attho. __icchÄ dhammo icchanaá¹-á¹-hena icchÄ• , lubbhanaá¹-á¹-hena lobhoti vutto. paá¹-hamuppattikÄ• aparÄ• paruppattiko balavÄ• lobho. aladdhapatthanÄ• vÄ• icchÄ• , paá¹-iladdhavatthumh taá¹‡ha_nti avijjÄ• mÅ«lena samÅ«lakaá¹ƒ taá¹‡haá¹ƒ. __abbuyhÄ• _ti aggamaggena uppÄ uttÄ• namevÄ• ti. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. eá¹‡ijaá¹…ghasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<30> dasame \Ne I 50/ \Be I 52/ __eá¹‡ijaá¹…gha_nti eá¹‡imigassa viya suvaá¹-á¹-itajaá¹…
athÅ«laá¹ƒ samasarÄ«raá¹ƒ. atha vÄ• Ä• tapena milÄ• taá¹ƒ mÄ• lÄ• gandhavilepanehi an attho. __vÄ«ra_nti vÄ«riyavantaá¹ƒ. __appÄ• hÄ• ra_nti bhojane mattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• ya mitÄ• h vikÄ• labhojanapaá¹-ikkhepavasena vÄ• parittÄ• hÄ• raá¹ƒ. __alolupa_nti \Ee I 54/ catÅ«su loluppavirahitaá¹ƒ. rasataá¹‡hÄ• paá¹-ikkhepo vÄ• esa. __sÄ«haá¹ƒvekacaraá¹ƒ nÄ• ga_nt viya, ekacaraá¹ƒ nÄ• gaá¹ƒ viya. gaá¹‡avÄ• sino hi pamattÄ• honti, ekacarÄ• appamattÄ• gahitÄ• ti. __paveditÄ• _ti pakÄ• sitÄ• kathitÄ• . __etthÄ• _ti etasmiá¹ƒ nÄ• marÅ«pe. paÃ± rÅ«paá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ, manena nÄ• maá¹ƒ, ubhayehi pana avinibhuttadhamme gahetvÄ• paÃ bhummaá¹ƒ yojetabbanti. dasamaá¹ƒ.

sattivaggo tatiyo.

4. satullapakÄ• yikavaggo

1. sabbhisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<31> satullapakÄ• yikavaggassa paá¹-hame __satullapakÄ• yikÄ• _ti sataá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ sagge nibbattÄ• ti satullapakÄ• yikÄ• . tatridaá¹ƒ vatthu --- sambahulÄ• kira samuddavÄ• á samuddaá¹ƒ pakkhandiá¹ƒsu. tesaá¹ƒ khittasaravegena gacchantiyÄ• nÄ• vÄ• ya sattame mahantaá¹ƒ uppÄ• tikaá¹ƒ pÄ• tubhÅ«taá¹ƒ, mahÄ• Å«miyo uá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• nÄ• vaá¹ƒ uda nimujjamÄ• nÄ• ya mahÄ• jano attano attano devatÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• mÄ• ni gahetvÄ• Ä• yÄ• tesaá¹ƒ majjhe eko puriso --- ``atthi nu kho me evarÅ«pe bhaye patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• parisuddhÄ• ni saraá¹‡Ä• ni ceva sÄ«lÄ• ni ca disvÄ• yogÄ« viya pallaá¹…kaá¹ƒ Ä• bhujitv itare sabhayakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ pucchiá¹ƒsu. so tesaá¹ƒ \Be I 53/ kathesi --- ``ambho ahaá¹ƒ nÄ abhirÅ«hanadivase bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa dÄ• naá¹ƒ datvÄ• saraá¹‡Ä• ni ceva sÄ«lÄ• ni ca bhayaá¹ƒ natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti. kiá¹ƒ pana sÄ• mi etÄ• ni aÃ±Ã±esampi vattantÄ«ti? Ä• ma v \Ne I 51/ amhÄ• kampi dethÄ• ti. so te manusse sataá¹ƒ sataá¹ƒ katvÄ• satta koá¹-á¹-hÄ• s paÃ±casÄ«lÄ• ni adÄ• si. tesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jaá¹…ghasataá¹ƒ gopphakamatte udake á¹-hi jÄ• á¹‡umatte, tatiyaá¹ƒ kaá¹-imatte, catutthaá¹ƒ nÄ• bhimatte, paÃ±camaá¹ƒ thanamatte, c galappamÄ• á¹‡e, sattamaá¹ƒ mukhena loá¹‡odake pavisante aggahesi. so tesaá¹ƒ sÄ«lÄ• tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ natthi, sÄ«lameva Ä• vajjethÄ• â€™â€™ ti ugghosesi. tÄ• tattha kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• Ä• sannakÄ• le gahitasÄ«laá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsabhavane nib ghaá¹-Ä• vaseneva vimÄ• nÄ• ni nibbattiá¹ƒsu. sabbesaá¹ƒ majjhe Ä• cariyassa yojanasatik nibbatti, avasenÄ• ni tassa parivÄ• rÄ• ni hutvÄ• sabbaheá¹-á¹-himaá¹ƒ dvÄ• dasayojanika nibbattakkhaá¹‡eyeva kammaá¹ƒ Ä• vajjentÄ• Ä• cariyaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sampattilÄ• bhaá¹ƒ Ä dasabalassa santike amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ Ä• cariyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ katheyyÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti m bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamiá¹ƒsu, tÄ• devatÄ• Ä• cariyassa vaá¹‡á¹‡abhaá¹‡anatthaá¹ abhÄ• siá¹ƒsu.

tattha __sabbhirevÄ• _ti paá¹‡á¸• itehi, sappurisehi eva. ra-kÄ• ro padasandhikaro. __sam nisÄ«deyya. desanÄ• sÄ«sameva cetaá¹ƒ, sabbairiyÄ• pathe sabbhireva saha kubbeyyÄ• t kareyya. __santhava_nti mittasanthavaá¹ƒ. taá¹‡hÄ• santhavo pana na kenaci saddhiá¹ƒ kÄ buddha-paccekabuddha-buddhasÄ• vakehi saha kÄ• tabbo. idaá¹ƒ sandhÄ• yetaá¹ƒ vuttaá sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ. __saddhamma_nti paÃ±casÄ«ladasasÄ«lacatusatipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• dibhe paÃ±casÄ«laá¹ƒ adhippetaá¹ƒ. __seyyo hotÄ«_ti vaá¸• á¸• hi hoti. __na pÄ• piyo_ti lÄ• mak __nÄ• Ã±Ã±ato_ti vÄ• likÄ• dÄ«hi telÄ• dÄ«ni viya aÃ±Ã±ato andhabÄ• lato paÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ pana telÄ• dÄ«ni viya sataá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itameva sevanto bhajanto lab \Ee I 56/ sokavatthÅ«naá¹ƒ sokÄ• nugatÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ majjhagato na socati ba \Be I 54/ upÄ• sikÄ• viya, paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ corasatÄ• naá¹ƒ majjhe dhammasenÄ• patissa sa saá¹ƒkiccasÄ• maá¹‡ero viya ca.

__Ã±Ä• timajjhe virocatÄ«_ti Ã±Ä• tigaá¹‡amajjhe saá¹ƒkiccatherassa saddhivihÄ• riko adh sobhati. so kira therassa bhÄ• gineyyo hoti, atha naá¹ƒ thero Ä• ha --- ``sÄ• maá¹‡era, mah gaccha, vassÄ• ni pucchitvÄ• ehi, upasampÄ• dessÄ• mi taâ€™â€™ nti. so ``sÄ• dhÅ«â€™ pattacÄ«varamÄ• dÄ• ya coraaá¹-aviyÄ• orabhÄ• ge bhaginigÄ• maá¹ƒ gantvÄ• piá¹‡á¸• A bhaginÄ« disvÄ• vanditvÄ• gehe nisÄ«dÄ• petvÄ• bhojesi. so katabhattakicco vassÄ• ni p jÄ• nÄ• mi, mÄ• tÄ• me jÄ• nÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. atha so ``tiá¹-á¹-hatha tumhe, ahaá¹ gamissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aá¹-aviá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡o. tamenaá¹ƒ dÅ«ratova corapuriso disvÄ• c ``sÄ• maá¹‡ero kireko aá¹-aviá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡o, gacchatha naá¹ƒ Ä• nethÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• á¹‡ naâ€™â€™ nti Ä• haá¹ƒsu, ekacce vissajjemÄ• ti. sÄ• maá¹‡ero cintesi --- ``ahaá¹ƒ sekho saddhiá¹ƒ mantetvÄ• sotthimattÄ• naá¹ƒ karissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti corajeá¹-á¹-hakaá¹ƒ Ä• n Ä• vuso, karissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti imÄ• gÄ• thÄ• abhÄ• si --- ``ahu atÄ«tamaddhÄ• naá¹ƒ, araÃ±Ã±asmiá¹ƒ brahÄ• vane.

ceto kÅ«á¹-Ä• ni oá¸• á¸• etvÄ• , sasakaá¹ƒ avadhÄ« tadÄ• ||

``sasakaÃ±ca mataá¹ƒ disvÄ• , ubbiggÄ• migapakkhino.

ekarattiá¹ƒ apakkÄ• muá¹ƒ, `akiccaá¹ƒ vattate idhaâ€™ ||

``tatheva samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ hantvÄ• , adhimuttaá¹ƒ akiÃ±canaá¹ƒ.

addhikÄ• nÄ• gamissanti, dhanajÄ• ni bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

``saccaá¹ƒ kho samaá¹‡o Ä• ha, adhimutto akiÃ±cano.

addhikÄ• nÄ• gamissanti, dhanajÄ• ni bhavissati ||

``sace paá¹-ipathe disvÄ• , nÄ• rocessasi kassaci.

tava saccamanurakkhanto, gaccha bhante yathÄ• sukhaâ€™â€™ nti ||

so \Ne I 53/ \Ee I 57/ \Be I 55/ tehi corehi vissajjito gacchanto Ã±Ä• tayopi disvÄ• tesampi n te anuppatte corÄ• gahetvÄ• viheá¹-hayiá¹ƒsu, uraá¹ƒ paharitvÄ• paridevamÄ• naÃ±cass etadavocuá¹ƒ ---

``kiá¹ƒ te hoti adhimutto, udare vasiko asi.

puá¹-á¹-hÄ• me amma akkhÄ• hi, kathaá¹ƒ jÄ• nemu taá¹ƒ mayaâ€™â€™ nti ||

``adhimuttassa ahaá¹ƒ mÄ• tÄ• , ayaÃ±ca janako pitÄ• .

bhaginÄ« bhÄ• taro cÄ• pi, sabbeva idha Ã±Ä• tayo ||

``akiccakÄ• rÄ« adhimutto, yaá¹ƒ disvÄ• na nivÄ• raye.

etaá¹ƒ kho vattaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ, ariyÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammajÄ«vinaá¹ƒ ||

``saccavÄ• dÄ« adhimutto, yaá¹ƒ disvÄ• na nivÄ• raye.

adhimuttassa suciá¹‡á¹‡ena, saccavÄ• dissa bhikkhuno.

sabbeva abhayaá¹ƒ pattÄ• , sotthiá¹ƒ gacchantu Ã±Ä• tayoâ€™â€™ ti ||

 evaá¹ƒ te corehi vissajjitÄ• gantvÄ• adhimuttaá¹ƒ Ä• haá¹ƒsu --- ``tava tÄ• ta suciá¹‡á¹‡ena, saccavÄ• dissa bhikkhuno.

sabbeva abhayaá¹ƒ pattÄ• , sotthiá¹ƒ paccÄ• gamamhaseâ€™â€™ ti ||

 tepi paÃ±casatÄ• corÄ• pasÄ• daá¹ƒ Ä• pajjitvÄ• adhimuttassa sÄ• maá¹‡erassa santike upajjhÄ• yassa santikaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ attanÄ• upasampanno pacchÄ• te paÃ± katvÄ• upasampÄ• desi. te adhimuttatherassa ovÄ• de á¹-hitÄ• sabbe aggaphalaá¹ƒ araha imamatthaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• devatÄ• ``sataá¹ƒ saddhammamaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya Ã±Ä• timajjhe viroca

 __sÄ• tata_nti satataá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• ciraá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«ti vadati. __sabbÄ• saá¹ƒ vo_ tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ. __pariyÄ• yenÄ• _ti kÄ• raá¹‡ena. __sabbadukkhÄ• pamuccatÄ«_ti, na kev kevalaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ labhati, sokamajjhe na socati, Ã±Ä• timajjhe virocati, sugatiyaá¹ƒ nib sukhaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hati, sakalasmÄ• pana vaá¹-á¹-adukkhÄ• pi muccatÄ«ti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. maccharisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

 <32> dutiye \Ne I 54/ \Ee I 58/ \Be I 56/ __maccherÄ• ca pamÄ• dÄ• cÄ• _ti attasampattin maccherena ceva sativippavÄ• salakkhaá¹‡ena pamÄ• dena ca. ekacco hi `idaá¹ƒ me denta gamissati, mayhaá¹ƒ vÄ• gharamÄ• nusakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• na bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti macch khiá¸• á¸• Ä• dipasutattÄ• `dÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ• tabbaâ€™â€™ nti cittampi na uppÄ• deti. __eva evametaá¹ƒ yasadÄ• yakaá¹ƒ sirÄ«dÄ• yakaá¹ƒ sampattidÄ• yakaá¹ƒ sukhadÄ• yakaá¹ƒ dÄ dÄ«yatÄ«tiÄ• dinÄ• kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ kathesi. __puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ Ä• kaá¹…khamÄ• nenÄ• _ti pub icchamÄ• nena. __deyyaá¹ƒ hoti vijÄ• natÄ• _ti atthi dÄ• nassa phalanti jÄ• nantena dÄ• ta __tameva bÄ• laá¹ƒ phusatÄ«_ti taá¹ƒyeva bÄ• laá¹ƒ idhalokaparalokesu jighacchÄ• ca pi anubandhati na vijahati. __tasmÄ• _ti yasmÄ• tameva phusati, tasmÄ• . __vineyya macche vinetvÄ• . __dajjÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ malÄ• bhibhÅ«_ti malÄ• bhibhÅ« hutvÄ• taá¹ƒ maccherama dadeyya.

__te matesu na mÄ«yantÄ«_ti adÄ• nasÄ«latÄ• ya maraá¹‡ena matesu na mÄ«yanti. yath á¹-hapite bahumhipi annapÄ• nÄ• dimhi ``idaá¹ƒ imassa hotu, idaá¹ƒ imassÄ• â€™â€™ ti u saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gaá¹ƒ na karoti, evaá¹ƒ adÄ• nasÄ«lopÄ«ti matakassa ca adÄ• nasÄ«lassa ca honti. tena dÄ• nasÄ«lÄ• evarÅ«pesu matesu na mÄ«yantÄ«ti attho. __panthÄ• naá¹ƒva sa pavecchantÄ«_ti yathÄ• addhÄ• naá¹ƒ kantÄ• ramaggaá¹ƒ saha vajantÄ• pathikÄ• saha v appasmiá¹ƒ pÄ• theyye saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gaá¹ƒ katvÄ• pavecchanti dadantiyeva, evamevaá¹ƒ y saá¹ƒsÄ• rakantÄ• raá¹ƒ saha vajantÄ• saha vajantÄ• naá¹ƒ appasmimpi deyyadhamme sa dadantiyeva, te matesu na mÄ«yanti.

__esa dhammo sanantano_ti esa porÄ• á¹‡ako dhammo, sanantanÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ee I 59/ vÄ• dhammoti. __appasmeke_ti appasmiá¹ƒ deyyadhamme eke. __pavecchantÄ«_ti \Be I 57/ da dicchare_ti bahunÄ• pi bhogena samannÄ• gatÄ• ekacce na dadanti. __sahassena samaá saddhiá¹ƒ mitÄ• , sahassa dÄ• nasadisÄ• hoti.

__duranvayo_ti \Ne I 55/ duranugamano, duppÅ«roti attho. __dhammaá¹ƒ care_ti dasakusa carati. __yopi samuÃ±jakaÃ±care_ti yo api khalamaá¹‡á¸• alÄ• disodhanapalÄ• lapoá¹-han samuÃ±jakaÃ±carati. __dÄ• raÃ±ca posa_nti dÄ• raÃ±ca posanto. __dadaá¹ƒ appakasmi_n paá¹‡á¹‡asÄ• kamattasmimpi saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gaá¹ƒ katvÄ• dadantova so dhammaá¹ƒ carati.
sahassaá¹ƒ sahassaá¹ƒ katvÄ• gaá¹‡itÄ• naá¹ƒ purisÄ• naá¹ƒ sataá¹ƒ, satasahassanti atth bhikkhusahassassa vÄ• yÄ• go kahÄ• paá¹‡asahassena vÄ• nibbattito yÄ• gopi sahassay sahassayÄ• gino, tesaá¹ƒ sahassayÄ• ginaá¹ƒ. etena dasannaá¹ƒ vÄ• bhikkhukoá¹-Ä«naá kahÄ• paá¹‡akoá¹-Ä«naá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• to dassito hoti. ye ettakaá¹ƒ dadanti, te kalampi n tathÄ• vidhassÄ• ti Ä• ha. yvÄ• yaá¹ƒ samuÃ±jakaá¹ƒ carantopi dhammaá¹ƒ carati, dÄ• raá dadantopi, tathÄ• vidhassa ete sahassayÄ• gino kalampi nagghanti. yaá¹ƒ tena daliddena e salÄ• kabhattamattampi vÄ• dinnaá¹ƒ, tassa dÄ• nassa sabbesampi tesaá¹ƒ dÄ• naá¹ƒ kal nÄ• ma soá¸·asabhÄ• gopi satabhÄ• gopi sahassabhÄ• gopi. idha satabhÄ• go gahito. yaá tasmiá¹ƒ satadhÄ• vibhatte itaresaá¹ƒ dasakoá¹-isahassadÄ• naá¹ƒ tato ekakoá¹-á¹-hÄ• sa evaá¹ƒ tathÄ• gate dÄ• nassa agghaá¹ƒ karonte samÄ«pe á¹-hitÄ• devatÄ• cintesi --- ``ev dÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• dena pavaá¹-á¹-etvÄ• ratanasatike viya narake pakkhipanto idaá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ p dÄ• naá¹ƒ candamaá¹‡á¸• ale paharanto viya ukkhipati, kathaá¹ƒ nu kho etaá¹ƒ mahapphal jÄ• nanatthaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• ya ajjhabhÄ• si. tattha __kenÄ• _ti kena kÄ• raá¹‡ena. __mahagg vipulassetaá¹ƒ vevacanaá¹ƒ. __samena dinnassÄ• _ti samena dinnassa dÄ• nassa. athass vibhajitvÄ• dassento __dadanti heke_tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __visame niviá¹-á¹-hÄ• _ti visam patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• hutvÄ• . __chetvÄ• _ti pothetvÄ• . __vadhitvÄ• _ti mÄ• retvÄ• . __socayitvÄ sokasamappitaá¹ƒ katvÄ• . __assumukhÄ• _ti assumukhasammissÄ• . paraá¹ƒ rodÄ• petvÄ assumukhadÄ• nanti vuccati. __sadaá¹‡á¸• Ä• _ti daá¹‡á¸• ena tajjetvÄ• paharitvÄ• dinna vuccati. __eva_nti nÄ• haá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambuddhatÄ• ya mahÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• appa parittakadÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• mahapphalaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma. idaá¹ƒ pana mahÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ attano upp appaphalaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma hoti, itaraá¹ƒ parittadÄ• naá¹ƒ attano uppattiyÄ• parisuddhatÄ• ya ev nÄ• mÄ• ti imamatthaá¹ƒ dassento __eva_ntiÄ• dimÄ• hÄ• ti. dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. sÄ• dhusuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<33> tatiye \Ne I 56/ __udÄ• naá¹ƒ udÄ• nesÄ«_ti udÄ• hÄ• raá¹ƒ udÄ• hari. yathÄ• hi yaa gahetuá¹ƒ na sakkoti vissanditvÄ• gacchati, taá¹ƒ avasesakoti vuccati. yaÃ±ca jalaá¹ƒ taá¸ na sakkoti, ajjhottharitvÄ• gacchati, taá¹ƒ oghoti vuccati, evamevaá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒ pÄ«tivacanaá¹ gahetuá¹ƒ na sakkoti, adhikaá¹ƒ hutvÄ• anto asaá¹‡á¹-hahitvÄ• bahi nikkhamati, taá¹ƒ __u evarÅ«paá¹ƒ pÄ«timayaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ nicchÄ• resÄ«ti attho. __saddhÄ• yapi sÄ• hu dÄ• n kammaphalaÃ±ca saddahitvÄ• pi dinnadÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ• hu laddhakaá¹ƒ bhaddakameva. __Ä kathaá¹ƒ panetaá¹ƒ ubhayaá¹ƒ samaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma hotÄ«ti? jÄ«vitabhÄ«ruko hi yujjhituá¹ƒ na dÄ• tuá¹ƒ na sakkoti. ``jÄ«vitaÃ±ca rakkhissÄ• mi yujjhissÄ• mi cÄ• â€™â€™ ti hi vadanto Ä• layaá¹ƒ vissajjetvÄ• , ``chejjaá¹ƒ vÄ• hotu maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• , gaá¹‡hissÄ• metaá¹ƒ issa ussahantova yujjhati. ``bhoge ca rakkhissÄ• mi, dÄ• naÃ±ca dassÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadan Ä• layaá¹ƒ vissajjetvÄ• mahÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ dassÄ• mÄ«ti ussahantova deti. evaá¹ƒ dÄ• naÃ kiÃ±ca bhiyyo? __appÄ• pi santÄ• bahuke jinantÄ«_ti yathÄ• ca yuddhe appakÄ• pi vÄ«ra jinanti, evaá¹ƒ saddhÄ• disampanno appakampi dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadanto bahumaccheraá¹ƒ mad adhigacchati. evampi dÄ• naÃ±ca yuddhaÃ±ca samÄ• naá¹ƒ. tenevÄ• ha --- ``appampi ce saddahÄ• no dadÄ• ti, teneva so hoti sukhÄ« paratthÄ• â€™â€™ ti || imassa \Be I 59/ ca panatthassa pakÄ• sanatthaá¹ƒ ekasÄ• á¹-akabrÄ• hmaá¹‡avatthu ca a vitthÄ• retabbaá¹ƒ.

__dhammaladdhassÄ• _ti dhammena samena laddhassa bhogassa dhammaladdhassa ca

laddhadhammo nÄ• ma adhigatadhammo ariyapuggalo. iti yaá¹ƒ dhammaladdhassa bhogas ariyapuggalassa dÄ«yati, tampi sÄ• dhÅ«ti attho. __yo dhammaladdhassÄ• _ti imasmimpi g __uá¹-á¹-hÄ• navÄ«riyÄ• dhigatassÄ• _ti uá¹-á¹-hÄ• nena ca vÄ«riyena ca adhigatassa bho
I 57/ desanÄ• sÄ«samattametaá¹ƒ. yamassa pana vetaraá¹‡impi saÃ±jÄ«vakÄ• á¸·asuttÄ• ekatiá¹ƒsamahÄ• nirayepi sabbasova atikkamitvÄ• ti attho.

__viceyya dÄ• na_nti vicinitvÄ• dinnadÄ• naá¹ƒ. tattha dve vicinanÄ• dakkhiá¹‡Ä• vicinan dakkhiá¹‡eyyavicinanaÃ±ca. tesu lÄ• makalÄ• make paccaye apanetvÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tapaá¹‡Ä dÄ• naá¹ƒ dakkhiá¹‡Ä• vicinanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma. vipannasÄ«le \Ee I 62/ ito bahiddhÄ• paÃ±can dakkhiá¹‡eyye pahÄ• ya sÄ«lÄ• diguá¹‡asampannÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ• sane pabbajitÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ• nÄ• ma. evaá¹ƒ dvÄ«hÄ• kÄ• rehi viceyya dÄ• naá¹ƒ. __sugatappasattha_nti sugatena vaá dakkhiá¹‡eyyavicinanaá¹ƒ dassento __ye dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. __bÄ«jÄ• ni vuttÄ dakkhiá¹‡Ä• vicinanaá¹ƒ Ä• ha. avipannabÄ«jasadisÄ• hi vicinitvÄ• gahitÄ• paá¹‡Ä«tapaá

__pÄ• á¹‡esupi sÄ• dhu saá¹ƒyamo_ti pÄ• á¹‡esu saá¹ƒyatabhÄ• vopi bhaddako. ayaá¹ƒ d dÄ• nÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ atikkamitvÄ• sÄ«lÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ kathetumÄ• raddhÄ• . __aheá¹-ha caramÄ• no. __parÅ«pavÄ• dÄ• _ti parassa upavÄ• dabhayena. __bhayÄ• _ti upavÄ• dabh dhammapadaá¹ƒva seyyo_ti dÄ• nato nibbÄ• nasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ dhammapadameva seyyo santo_ti pubbe ca kassapabuddhÄ• dikÄ• le pubbatare ca koá¹‡Ä• gamanabuddhÄ• dikÄ• l pubbatare ca santo nÄ• mÄ• ti. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. nasantisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<34> catutthe \Be I 60/ __kamanÄ«yÄ• nÄ«_ti rÅ«pÄ• dÄ«ni iá¹-á¹-hÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ni. __
puriso maccudheyyÄ• _ti tebhÅ«makavaá¹-á¹-asaá¹…khÄ• tÄ• maccudheyyÄ• apunÄ• ga anÄ• gantÄ• . nibbÄ• naÃ±hi sattÄ• na punÄ• gacchanti, tasmÄ• taá¹ƒ apunÄ• gamananti ca pamatto ca anÄ• gantÄ• nÄ• ma hoti, so taá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡ituá¹ƒ na sakkoti, tasmÄ• evam taá¹‡hÄ• chandato jÄ• taá¹ƒ. __agha_nti paÃ±cakkhandhadukkhaá¹ƒ. dutiyapadaá¹ƒ tassev __chandavinayÄ• aghavinayo_ti taá¹‡hÄ• vinayena paÃ±cakkhandhavinayo \Ee I 63/. __ag paÃ±cakkhandhavinayena vaá¹-á¹-adukkhaá¹ƒ vinÄ«tameva hoti. __citrÄ• nÄ«_ti Ä• ramma __saá¹…kapparÄ• go_ti saá¹…kappitarÄ• go. evamettha vatthukÄ• maá¹ƒ paá¹-ikkhipitvÄ• ayaá¹ƒ panattho __pasÅ«rasuttena_ \Ne I 58/ (Sn 830 Ä• dayo) vibhÄ• vetabbo. pasÅ«rapa ``saá¹…kapparÄ• go purisassa kÄ• moâ€™â€™ ti vutte ---

``na te kÄ• mÄ• yÄ• ni citrÄ• ni loke, saá¹…kapparÄ• gaÃ±ca vadesi kÄ• maá¹ƒ.

saá¹…kappayaá¹ƒ akusale vitakke,

bhikkhÅ«pi te hehinti kÄ• mabhogÄ«â€™â€™ ti || ---

Ä• ha. atha naá¹ƒ thero avoca ---

``te ce kÄ• mÄ• yÄ• ni citrÄ• ni loke, saá¹…kapparÄ• gaá¹ƒ na vadesi kÄ• maá¹ƒ.

passanto rÅ«pÄ• ni manoramÄ• ni,

satthÄ• pi te hehiti kÄ• mabhogÄ« ||

suá¹‡anto saddÄ• ni, ghÄ• yanto gandhÄ• ni.

sÄ• yanto rasÄ• ni, phusanto phassÄ• ni manoramÄ• ni.

satthÄ• pi te hehiti kÄ• mabhogÄ«â€™â€™ ti ||

__athettha dhÄ«rÄ• _ti atha etesu Ä• rammaá¹‡esu paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• chandarÄ• gaá¹ƒ vinaya sabba_nti dasavidhampi saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ. __akiÃ±cana_nti rÄ• gakiÃ±canÄ• divirahitaá¹ƒ. _
vaá¹-á¹-adukkhÄ• pana tassa upari na patanti. __iccÄ• yasmÄ• _ \Be I 61/ __mogharÄ• jÄ•
saá¹…khaâ€™â€™ nti gÄ• thaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• tassaá¹ƒ \Ee I 64/ parisati anusandhikusalo mogl ``imissÄ• gÄ• thÄ• ya attho na yathÄ• nusandhiá¹ƒ gatoâ€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• yathÄ• nusa tattha __idha vÄ• huraá¹ƒ vÄ• _ti idhaloke vÄ• paraloke vÄ• . __naruttamaá¹ƒ atthacaraá¹ sabbe khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• naruttamÄ• ceva atthacarÄ• ca narÄ• naá¹ƒ, thero pana dasabal taá¹ƒ namassanti pasaá¹ƒsiyÄ• te_ti yadi tathÄ• vimuttaá¹ƒ devamanussÄ• namassanti, at kÄ• yena vÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya vÄ• anupaá¹-ipattiyÄ• vÄ• namassanti, te kiá¹ƒ pasaá¹ƒsiyÄ• , __bhikkhÅ«ti_ mogharÄ• jattheraá¹ƒ \Ne I 59/ Ä• lapati. __aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya dhamma_nti catusa __saá¹…gÄ• tigÄ• tepi bhavantÄ«_ti ye taá¹ƒ kÄ• yena vÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya vÄ• anupaá¹-ipatt catusaccadhammaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya vicikicchaá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya saá¹…gÄ• tigÄ• pi honti, pasaá¹ catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. ujjhÄ• nasaÃ±Ã±isuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<35> paÃ±came __ujjhÄ• nasaÃ±Ã±ikÄ• _ti ujjhÄ• nasaÃ±Ã±Ä« devaloko nÄ• ma pÄ• á¹-i tathÄ• gatassa catupaccayaparibhogaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya ujjhÄ• yamÄ• nÄ• Ä• gatÄ• . tÄ• saá¹ƒ

``samaá¹‡o gotamo bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ paá¹ƒsukÅ«lacÄ«vara-piá¹‡á¸• iyÄ• lopa-rukkhamÅ«las santosasseva pariyantakÄ• ritaá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡eti, sayaá¹ƒ pana pattuá¹‡á¹‡adukÅ«la khomÄ• dhÄ• reti, rÄ• jÄ• rahaá¹ƒ uttamaá¹ƒ bhojanaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jati, devavimÄ• nakappÄ• ya gandha sappinavanÄ«tÄ• dÄ«ni bhesajjÄ• ni paá¹-isevati, divasaá¹ƒ mahÄ• janassa dhammaá¹ƒ de gacchati, kiriyÄ• aÃ±Ã±atoâ€™â€™ ti ujjhÄ• yamÄ• nÄ• Ä• gamiá¹ƒsu. tena tÄ• saá¹ƒ dha ``ujjhÄ• nasaÃ±Ã±ikÄ• â€™â€™ ti nÄ• maá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ.

__aÃ±Ã±athÄ• santa_nti aÃ±Ã±enÄ• kÄ• rena bhÅ«taá¹ƒ. __nikaccÄ• _ti nikatiyÄ• vaÃ±c __kitavassevÄ• _ti kitavo vuccati sÄ• kuá¹‡iko. so \Be I 62/ hi agumbova samÄ• no sÄ• khapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dipaá¹-icchÄ• danena gumbavaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• upagate moratitt mÄ• retvÄ• dÄ• rabharaá¹‡aá¹ƒ karoti. iti tassa kitavassa imÄ• ya vaÃ±canÄ• ya evaá¹ƒ va sakuá¹‡amaá¹ƒsabhojanaá¹ƒ viya kuhakassÄ• pi paá¹ƒsukÅ«lena attÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-icchÄ• mahÄ• janaá¹ƒ vaÃ±cetvÄ• khÄ• damÄ• nassa vicarato. __bhuttaá¹ƒ theyyena tassa ta_nt catupaccayaparibhogo theyyena paribhutto nÄ• ma hotÄ«ti devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ sandhÄ paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• _ti ayaá¹ƒ kÄ• rako vÄ• akÄ• rako vÄ• ti paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• jÄ• nanti. iti tÄ• devat mayameva paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• â€™â€™ ti maÃ±Ã±amÄ• nÄ• evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu.

atha bhagavÄ• __nayida_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __yÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipadÄ• daá¸·hÄ• _ti ay dhammÄ• nudhammapaá¹-ipadÄ• daá¸·hÄ• thirÄ• . yÄ• ya paá¹-ipadÄ• ya dhÄ«rÄ• paá¹‡ lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• nena cÄ• ti dvÄ«hi jhÄ• nehi jhÄ• yino mÄ• rabandhanÄ• pamuccant bhÄ• sitamattena vÄ• savanamattena vÄ• okkamituá¹ƒ \Ne I 60/ paá¹-ipajjituá¹ƒ na sakkÄ• dhÄ«rÄ• pakubbantÄ«_ti dhÄ«rÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• viditvÄ• lokapariyÄ• yaá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ• ra catusaccadhammaÃ±ca aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya kilesanibbÄ• nena nibbutÄ• loke visattikaá¹ƒ tiá¹‡á¹‡Å mayaá¹ƒ evarÅ«pÄ• ni na kathemÄ• ti attho.

__pathaviyaá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• _ti ``ayuttaá¹ƒ amhehi kataá¹ƒ, akÄ• rakameva mayaá¹ƒ samudÄ• carimhÄ• â€™â€™ ti lajjamÄ• nÄ• mahÄ• brahmani viya bhagavati gÄ• ravaá¹ƒ aggikkhandhaá¹ƒ viya bhagavantaá¹ƒ durÄ• sadaá¹ƒ katvÄ• passamÄ• nÄ• Ä• kÄ• sato o attho. __accayo_ti aparÄ• dho. __no, bhante, accÄ• gamÄ• _ti amhe atikkamma abhibhavit __Ä• sÄ• detabba_nti ghaá¹-á¹-ayitabbaá¹ƒ. tÄ• kira devatÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ kÄ• yena vÄ• ghaá¹-á¹-ayiá¹ƒsu. tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ avanditvÄ• Ä• kÄ• se patiá¹-á¹-hamÄ• nÄ• kÄ• yena gh kitavopamaá¹ƒ Ä• haritvÄ• nÄ• nappakÄ• rakaá¹ƒ asabbhivÄ• daá¹ƒ vadamÄ• nÄ• vÄ• cÄ
Ä• sÄ• detabbaá¹ƒ amaÃ±Ã±imhÄ• ti Ä• haá¹ƒsu. __paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÅ«_ti khamatu. __Ä• 63/ anÄ• gate saá¹ƒvaraá¹‡atthÄ• ya, puna evarÅ«passa aparÄ• dhassa dosassa akaraá¹‡ __sitaá¹ƒ_ \Ee I 66/ __pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• sÄ«_ti aggadante dassento pahaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kÄ• raá¹ƒ d devatÄ• na sabhÄ• vena khamÄ• penti, lokiyamahÄ• janaÃ±ca sadevake loke aggapuggal ekasadisaá¹ƒ karonti. atha bhagavÄ• ``parato kathÄ• ya uppannÄ• ya buddhabalaá¹ƒ dÄ«p khamissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti sitaá¹ƒ pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• si. __bhiyyoso mattÄ• yÄ• _ti atirekappam abhÄ• sÄ«_ti kupito esa amhÄ• kanti maÃ±Ã±amÄ• nÄ• abhÄ• si.

__na paá¹-igaá¹‡hatÄ«_ti na khamati nÄ• dhivÄ• seti. __kopantaro_ti abbhantare uppanna dosaá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• Ä• dÄ• ya viharanto. __sa veraá¹ƒ paá¹-imuÃ±catÄ«_ti so evarÅ«p paá¹-imuÃ±canto viya taá¹ƒ veraá¹ƒ attani paá¹-imuÃ±cati á¹-hapeti, na paá¹-inissajjatÄ«ti a na vijjethÄ• _ti sace accÄ• yikakammaá¹ƒ na bhaveyya. __no cidhÄ• pagataá¹ƒ siyÄ• _ti ya bhÄ• veyya. __kenÄ«dha kusalo siyÄ• _ti yadi verÄ• ni na sammeyyuá¹ƒ, kena kÄ• raá¹‡er __kassaccayÄ• _ti \Ne I 61/ gÄ• thÄ• ya kassa atikkamo natthi? kassa aparÄ• dho natthi?

ko niccameva paá¹‡á¸• ito nÄ• mÄ• ti attho? imaá¹ƒ kira gÄ• thaá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡Ä• panatthaá¹ƒ sitapÄ• tukammaá¹ƒ. tasmÄ• idÄ• ni devatÄ• naá¹ƒ buddhabalaá¹ƒ dÄ«petvÄ• khamissÄ• buddhassÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __tathÄ• gatassÄ• _ti tathÄ• Ä• gatoti evamÄ• dÄ«hi kÄ __buddhassÄ• _ti catunnaá¹ƒ saccÄ• naá¹ƒ buddhattÄ• dÄ«hi kÄ• raá¹‡ehi vimokkhantikap laddhanÄ• massa. __accayaá¹ƒ desayantÄ«na_nti yaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ tumhehi ``accayaá¹ƒ des veraá¹ƒ paá¹-imuÃ±catÄ«â€™â€™ ti, taá¹ƒ sÄ• dhu vuttaá¹ƒ, ahaá¹ƒ pana taá¹ƒ veraá¹ƒ nÄ patthayÄ• mÄ«ti attho. __paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• mi voccaya_nti tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ aparÄ• dhaá¹ƒ kha

6. saddhÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<36> chaá¹-á¹-he \Be I 64/ __saddhÄ• dutiyÄ• purisassa hotÄ«_ti purisassa devaloke mar nibbÄ• naÃ±ca gacchantassa saddhÄ• dutiyÄ• hoti, sahÄ• yakiccaá¹ƒ sÄ• dheti. __no ce a avatiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«_ti yadi \Ee I 67/ assaddhiyaá¹ƒ na tiá¹-á¹-hati. __yaso_ti parivÄ• ro. __kittÄ vaá¹‡á¹‡abhaá¹‡anaá¹ƒ. __tatvassa hotÄ«_ti tato assa hoti. __nÄ• nupatanti saá¹…gÄ• _ti saá¹…gÄ• na anupatanti. __pamÄ• damanuyuÃ±jantÄ«_ti ye pamÄ• daá¹ƒ karonti nibbatte nÄ• ma. __dhanaá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒva rakkhatÄ«_ti muttÄ• maá¹‡isÄ• rÄ• diuttamadhanaá¹ __jhÄ• yanto_ti lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• nena ca Ä• rammaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• nena ca jhÄ• yanto __lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• naá¹ƒ_ nÄ• ma vipassanÄ• maggaphalÄ• ni. vipassanÄ• hi tÄ«á¹‡ upanijjhÄ• yatÄ«ti lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• naá¹ƒ. maggo vipassanÄ• ya Ä• gatakiccaá¹ƒ sÄ• lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• naá¹ƒ. phalaá¹ƒ tathalakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ nirodhasaccaá¹ƒ upanijjhÄ• yatÄ lakkhaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• naá¹ƒ. aá¹-á¹-ha samÄ• pattiyo pana kasiá¹‡Ä• rammaá¹‡assa upanij __Ä• rammaá¹‡Å«panijjhÄ• na_nti veditabbÄ• . __paramaá¹ƒ_ nÄ• ma arahattasukhaá¹ƒ a

7. samayasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<37> sattame __sakkesÅ«_ti ``sakyÄ• vata, bho kumÄ• rÄ• â€™â€™ ti (DN I 267) udÄ• n laddhanÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ nivÄ• so ekopi janapado rÅ«á¸·hÄ«saddena s tasmiá¹ƒ sakkesu janapade. __mahÄ• vane_ti sayaá¹ƒjÄ• te aropime himavantena saddhiá __sabbeheva arahantehÄ«_ti imaá¹ƒ suttaá¹ƒ kathitadivaseyeva pattaarahantehi.

tatrÄ• yaá¹ƒ anupubbikathÄ• --- sÄ• kiyakoliyÄ• hi kira kapilavatthunagarassa ca koliyana rohiá¹‡iá¹ƒ nÄ• ma nadiá¹ƒ ekeneva Ä• varaá¹‡ena bandhÄ• petvÄ• sassÄ• ni kÄ• renti. at sassesu milÄ• yantesu ubhayanagaravÄ• sÄ«nampi kammakÄ• rÄ• sannipatiá¹ƒsu. tattha
--- ``idaá¹ƒ udakaá¹ƒ ubhayato Ä• hariyamÄ• naá¹ƒ na tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ, na amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ paho pana sassaá¹ƒ ekena udakeneva nipphajjissati, idaá¹ƒ udakaá¹ƒ amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ dethÄ• â€™
Ä• haá¹ƒsu --- ``tumhesu koá¹-á¹-he pÅ«retvÄ• á¹-hitesu mayaá¹ƒ rattasuvaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ«lam \Be I 65/ ca gahetvÄ• pacchipasibbakÄ• dihatthÄ• na sakkhissÄ• ma tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ gharad amhÄ• kampi sassaá¹ƒ ekeneva udakena nipphajjissati, idaá¹ƒ udakaá¹ƒ amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ deth dassÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti. ``mayampi na dassÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• pahÄ• raá¹ƒ adÄ• si, sopi aÃ±Ã±assÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ paharitvÄ• rÄ• jakul ghaá¹-á¹-etvÄ• kalahaá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hayiá¹ƒsu.

koliyakammakÄ• rÄ• vadanti --- ``tumhe kapilavatthuvÄ• sike gahetvÄ• gajjatha, ye soá¹‡ attano bhaginÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvasiá¹ƒsu, etesaá¹ƒ hatthino ca assÄ• ca phalakÄ• vudh karissantÄ«â€™â€™ ti? sÄ• kiyakammakÄ• rÄ• vadanti --- ``tumhe dÄ• ni kuá¹-á¹-hino dÄ anÄ• thÄ• niggatikÄ• tiracchÄ• nÄ• viya kolarukkhe vasiá¹ƒsu, etesaá¹ƒ hatthino ca assÄ amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ karissantÄ«â€™â€™ ti? te gantvÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ kamme niyuttaamaccÄ• n rÄ• jakulÄ• naá¹ƒ kathesuá¹ƒ. tato sÄ• kiyÄ• --- ``bhaginÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvasitakÄ• naa dassessÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti yuddhasajjÄ• nikkhamiá¹ƒsu. koliyÄ• pi --- ``kolarukkhavÄ• sÄ dassessÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti yuddhasajjÄ• nikkhamiá¹ƒsu.

bhagavÄ• pi rattiyÄ• paccÅ«sasamayeva mahÄ• karuá¹‡Ä• samÄ• pattito uá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya lo yuddhasajje nikkhamante addasa. disvÄ• --- ``mayi gate ayaá¹ƒ kalaho vÅ«pasammissati n upadhÄ• rento --- ``ahamettha gantvÄ• kalahavÅ«pasamanatthaá¹ƒ tÄ«á¹‡i jÄ• takÄ• ni ka vÅ«pasammissati. atha sÄ• maggidÄ«panatthÄ• ya dve jÄ• takÄ• ni kathetvÄ• __attadaá¹‡ desessÄ• mi. desanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• \Ee I 69/ ubhayanagaravÄ• sinopi aá¸• á¸• hatiyÄ• ni aá¸• dassanti, ahaá¹ƒ te pabbÄ• jessÄ• mi, tadÄ• mahÄ• samÄ• gamo bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti tasmÄ• imesu yuddhasajjesu nikkhamantesu kassaci anÄ• rocetvÄ• sayameva pattacÄ«va senÄ• naá¹ƒ antare Ä• kÄ• se pallaá¹…kaá¹ƒ Ä• bhujitvÄ• chabbaá¹‡á¹‡arasmiyo vissajjet kapilavatthuvÄ• sino bhagavantaá¹ƒ disvÄ• va, ``amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• tiseá¹-á¹-ho satthÄ• Ä tena amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ kalahakaraá¹‡abhÄ• voâ€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• , ``na kho pana sakkÄ• bha sarÄ«re satthaá¹ƒ \Be I 66/ pÄ• tetuá¹ƒ. koliyanagaravÄ• sino amhe hanantu vÄ• bajjhantu Ä• vudhÄ• ni chaá¸• á¸• etvÄ• , bhagavantaá¹ƒ vanditvÄ• , nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu. koliyanagaravÄ• s Ä• vudhÄ• ni chaá¸• á¸• etvÄ• , bhagavantaá¹ƒ vanditvÄ• , nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu.

bhagavÄ• jÄ• nantova, ``kasmÄ• Ä• gatattha, mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• â€™â€™ ti pucchi? ``na, bh pabbatakÄ«á¸·Ä• ya, na nadÄ«kÄ«á¸·Ä• ya, na giridassanatthaá¹ƒ, imasmiá¹ƒ pana á¹-hÄ• paccupaá¹-á¹-hapetvÄ• Ä• gatamhÄ• â€™â€™ ti. ``kiá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya vo kalaho, mahÄ• rÄ• j udakaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ agghati, mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• ti? appaá¹ƒ, bhanteti. pathavÄ« nÄ• ma kiá¹ƒ aggha anagghÄ• , bhanteti. khattiyÄ• kiá¹ƒ agghantÄ«ti? khattiyÄ• nÄ• ma anagghÄ• , bhanteti. a nissÄ• ya kimatthaá¹ƒ anagghe khattiye nÄ• setha, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, kalahe assÄ• do nÄ• ma mahÄ• rÄ• ja, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne veraá¹ƒ katvÄ• ekÄ• ya rukkhadevatÄ• ya kÄ• á¸·asÄ«hena s sakalampi imaá¹ƒ kappaá¹ƒ anuppattoyevÄ• ti vatvÄ• __phandanajÄ• takaá¹ƒ_ (J I 13.14 Ä ``parapattiyena nÄ• ma, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, na bhavitabbaá¹ƒ. parapattiyÄ• hutvÄ• hi ekassa sa tiyojanasahassavitthate himavante catuppadagaá¹‡Ä• mahÄ• samuddaá¹ƒ pakkhandino \E parapattiyena na bhavitabbaâ€™â€™ nti vatvÄ• , __pathavÄ«undriyajÄ• takaá¹ƒ_ kathesi. t mahÄ• rÄ• ja, dubbalopi mahÄ• balassa randhaá¹ƒ vivaraá¹ƒ passati, kadÄ• ci mahÄ• balo sakuá¹‡ikÄ• hatthinÄ• gaá¹ƒ ghÄ• tesÄ«â€™â€™ ti __laá¹-ukikajÄ• takaá¹ƒ_ (J I 5.39 Ä• c kalahavÅ«pasamanatthÄ• ya tÄ«á¹‡i jÄ• takÄ• ni kathetvÄ• sÄ• maggiparidÄ«panatthÄ• ya kathaá¹ƒ? ``samaggÄ• naÃ±hi, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, koci otÄ• raá¹ƒ nÄ• ma passituá¹ƒ na sakkotÄ __rukkhadhammajÄ• takaá¹ƒ_ (J I 1.74) kathesi \Ne I 64/. tato ``samaggÄ• naá¹ƒ, mahÄ• rÄ dassituá¹ƒ na sakkhi. yadÄ• pana aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vivÄ• damakaá¹ƒsu, atha te nesÄ• Ä• dÄ• ya gatoti vivÄ• de assÄ• do nÄ• ma natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• , __vaá¹-á¹-akajÄ• ta evaá¹ƒ imÄ• ni paÃ±ca jÄ• takÄ• ni kathetvÄ• avasÄ• ne __attadaá¹‡á¸• asuttaá¹ƒ_ (Sn 94

rÄ• jÄ• no pasannÄ• --- ``sace satthÄ• nÄ• gamissa, mayaá¹ƒ sahatthÄ• aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã± pavattayissÄ• ma. amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ puttabhÄ• taro ca gehadvÄ• re \Be I 67/ na passeyyÄ• ma, Ä• haraá¹‡ako nÄ• bhavissa. satthÄ• raá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya no jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ laddhaá¹ƒ. sace pana s ajjhÄ• vasissa dÄ«pasahassadvayaparivÄ• raá¹ƒ catumahÄ• dÄ«parajjamassa hatthagataá atirekasahassaá¹ƒ kho panassa puttÄ• abhavissaá¹ƒsu, tato khattiyaparivÄ• ro avicarissa. t sampattiá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya nikkhamitvÄ• sambodhiá¹ƒ patto. idÄ• nipi khattiyaparivÄ• royeva vic ubhayanagaravÄ• sino aá¸• á¸• hatiyÄ• ni aá¸• á¸• hatiyÄ• ni kumÄ• rasatÄ• ni adaá¹ƒsu. b mahÄ• vanaá¹ƒ agamÄ• si. tesaá¹ƒ garugÄ• ravena na attano ruciyÄ• pabbajitÄ• naá¹ƒ an purÄ• á¹‡adutiyikÄ• yopi tesaá¹ƒ --- ``ayyaputtÄ• ukkaá¹‡á¹-hantu, gharÄ• vÄ• so na saá¹‡ vatvÄ• sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ pesenti. te ca atirekataraá¹ƒ ukkaá¹‡á¹-hiá¹ƒsu.

bhagavÄ• Ä• vajjento tesaá¹ƒ anabhiratibhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• --- ``ime bhikkhÅ« mÄ• diser vasantÄ• ukkaá¹‡á¹-hanti, handa nesaá¹ƒ \Ee I 71/ kuá¹‡Ä• ladahassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathe anabhiratiá¹ƒ vinodemÄ«â€™â€™ ti kuá¹‡Ä• ladahassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathesi. te taá¹ƒ daá daá¹-á¹-hukÄ• mattha, bhikkhave, kuá¹‡Ä• ladahanti? Ä• ma bhagavÄ• ti. yadi evaá¹ƒ etha iddhimantÄ• naá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• gamanaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ mayaá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ gamissÄ• mÄ• ti.
mamÄ• nubhÄ• vena gahetvÄ• gamissÄ• mÄ«ti. sÄ• dhu, bhanteti. bhagavÄ• paÃ±ca bhik uppatitvÄ• kuá¹‡Ä• ladahe patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya te bhikkhÅ« Ä• ha --- ``bhikkhave, imasmiá¹ƒ k macchÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ na jÄ• nÄ• tha mamaá¹ƒ pucchathÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

te pucchiá¹ƒsu. bhagavÄ• pucchitaá¹ƒ pucchitaá¹ƒ kathesi. na kevalaÃ±ca, macchÄ• naá¹ vanasaá¹‡á¸• e rukkhÄ• nampi pabbatapÄ• de dvipadacatuppadasakuá¹‡Ä• nampi nÄ• mÄ dvÄ«hi \Ne I 65/ sakuá¹‡ehi mukhatuá¹‡á¸• akena á¸• aá¹ƒsitvÄ• gahitadaá¹‡á¸• ake nisinn purato pacchato ubhosu ca passesu sakuá¹‡asaá¹…ghaparivuto Ä• gacchati. bhikkhÅ« taá bhante, imesaá¹ƒ sakuá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ rÄ• jÄ• bhavissati, parivÄ• rÄ• ete etassÄ• â€™â€™ ti bhikkhave, ayampi mameva vaá¹ƒso mama paveá¹‡Ä«ti. idÄ• ni tÄ• va mayaá¹ƒ, bhante, et pana bhagavÄ• \Be I 68/ ``ayampi mameva vaá¹ƒso mama paveá¹‡Ä«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha, ta sotukÄ• mattha, bhikkhaveti? Ä• ma bhagavÄ• ti. tena hi suá¹‡Ä• thÄ• ti tÄ«hi gÄ• thÄ• sat __kuá¹‡Ä• lajÄ• takaá¹ƒ_ (J II 21.kuá¹‡Ä• lajÄ• taka) kathento anabhiratiá¹ƒ vinodesi. desa sotÄ• pattiphale patiá¹-á¹-hahiá¹ƒsu, maggeneva ca nesaá¹ƒ iddhipi Ä• gatÄ• . bhagavÄ• ``
tesaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naâ€™â€™ nti Ä• kÄ• se uppatitvÄ• mahÄ• vanameva agamÄ• si. tepi b Ä• nubhÄ• vena gantvÄ• Ä• gamanakÄ• le attano Ä• nubhÄ• vena bhagavantaá¹ƒ parivÄ• bhagavÄ• paÃ±Ã±attÄ• sane nisÄ«ditvÄ• te bhikkhÅ« Ä• mantetvÄ• --- ``etha, bhikkhave uparimaggattayavajjhÄ• naá¹ƒ vo kilesÄ• naá¹ƒ kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kathessÄ• mÄ«â€™ kathesi. bhikkhÅ« cintayiá¹ƒsu --- ``bhagavÄ• amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ anabhiratabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• anabhiratiá¹ƒ \Ee I 72/ vinodesi, tattha sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ pattÄ• naá¹ƒ no idÄ• ni idha tiá¹‡ maggÄ• naá¹ƒ kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ adÄ• si, na kho pana amhehi `sotÄ• pannÄ• mayaâ vaá¹-á¹-ati, purisapurisehi no bhavituá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-atÄ«â€™â€™ ti te dasabalassa pÄ• de var nisÄ«danaá¹ƒ papphoá¹-etvÄ• visuá¹ƒ visuá¹ƒ pabbhÄ• rarukkhamÅ«lesu nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu.

bhagavÄ• cintesi --- ``ime bhikkhÅ« pakatiyÄ• pi avissaá¹-á¹-hakammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• , lado bhikkhuno kilamanakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ nÄ• ma natthi. gacchantÄ• gacchantÄ• ca vipassanaá¹ƒ patvÄ• `attanÄ• paá¹-ividdhaguá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rocessÄ• mÄ• â€™ ti mama santikaá¹ƒ Ä• gam dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·adevatÄ• ekacakkavÄ• á¸·e sannipatissanti, mahÄ• samayo bha nisÄ«dituá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-atÄ«â€™â€™ ti tato vivitte okÄ• se buddhÄ• sanaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• petvÄ

sabbapaá¹-hamaá¹ƒ kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• gatatthero saha paá¹-isambhidÄ• hi __tato aparo tato aparo_ti paÃ±casatÄ• pi paduminiyaá¹ƒ padumÄ• ni viya vikasiá¹ƒsu. sab arahattaá¹ƒ pattabhikkhu \Ne I 66/ ``bhagavato Ä• rocessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti pallaá¹…kaá¹ƒ nisÄ«danaá¹ƒ papphoá¹-etvÄ• uá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya dasabalÄ• bhimukho ahosi. __evaá¹ƒ aparopi bhattasÄ• laá¹ƒ pavisantÄ• \Be I 69/ viya paá¹-ipÄ• á¹-iyÄ• va Ä• gamiá¹ƒsu. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ nisÄ«danaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• petvÄ• , ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ«ditvÄ• , paá¹-ividdhaguá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• roc aÃ±Ã±o koci? natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti nivattitvÄ• Ä• gatamaggaá¹ƒ olokento aparampi addasa sabbepi te Ä• gantvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ«ditvÄ• , ayaá¹ƒ imassa harÄ• yamÄ• no na kathe harÄ• yamÄ• no na kathesi. khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ kira dve Ä• kÄ• rÄ• honti --- ``aho vat

paá¹-ividdhaguá¹‡aá¹ƒ sadevako loko khippameva paá¹-ivijjheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti cittaá¹ƒ upp paá¹-ividdhabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ pana nidhiladdhapuriso viya na aÃ±Ã±assa Ä• rocetukÄ• mÄ• hon

evaá¹ƒ osaá¹-amatte pana tasmiá¹ƒ ariyamaá¹‡á¸• ale pÄ• cÄ«nayugandharaparikkhepato dhÅ«mo rajo rÄ• hÅ«ti, imehi upakkilesehi vippamuttaá¹ƒ buddhuppÄ• dapaá¹-imaá¹‡á¸• ita rÄ• maá¹‡eyyakadassanatthaá¹ƒ pÄ• cÄ«nadisÄ• ya ukkhittarajatamayamahÄ• Ä• dÄ• sam nemivaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• , parivattiyamÄ• narajatacakkasassirikaá¹ƒ puá¹‡á¹‡acandam ullaá¹…ghitvÄ• , anilapathaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipajjittha. iti evarÅ«pe khaá¹‡e laye muhutte bhagavÄ• kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ mahÄ• vane mahatÄ• bhikkhusaá¹…ghena saddhiá¹ƒ paÃ±camattehi b arahantehi.

tattha bhagavÄ• pi mahÄ• sammatassa vaá¹ƒse uppanno, tepi paÃ±casatÄ• bhikkhÅ« ma bhagavÄ• pi khattiyagabbhe jÄ• to, tepi khattiyagabbhe jÄ• tÄ• . bhagavÄ• pi rÄ• japabbajit bhagavÄ• pi setacchattaá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya hatthagataá¹ƒ cakkavattirajjaá¹ƒ nissajjitvÄ• pabbajit pahÄ• ya hatthagatÄ• ni rajjÄ• ni vissajjitvÄ• pabbajitÄ• . iti bhagavÄ• parisuddhe okÄ• se rattibhÄ• ge, sayaá¹ƒ parisuddho parisuddhaparivÄ• ro, vÄ«tarÄ• go vÄ«tarÄ• gaparivÄ• ro vÄ«tadosaparivÄ• ro, vÄ«tamoho vÄ«tamohaparivÄ• ro, nittaá¹‡ho nittaá¹‡haparivÄ• ro, nik nikkilesaparivÄ• ro, santo santaparivÄ• ro, danto dantaparivÄ• ro, mutto muttaparivÄ• ro, at vaá¹‡á¹‡abhÅ«mi nÄ• mesÄ• , yattakaá¹ƒ sakkoti, tattakaá¹ƒ vattabbaá¹ƒ. iti ime bhikkhÅ« ``paÃ±camattehi bhikkhusatehi sabbeheva arahantehÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

__yebhuyyenÄ• _ti \Ne I 67/ \Be I 70/ bahutarÄ• sannipatitÄ• , mandÄ• na sannipatitÄ• a arÅ«pÄ• vacaradevatÄ• samÄ• pannadevatÄ• yo ca. tatrÄ• yaá¹ƒ sannipÄ• takkamo --- ma devatÄ• caliá¹ƒsu, ``Ä• yÄ• ma bho! buddhadassanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma bahÅ«pakÄ• raá¹ƒ, dham bhikkhusaá¹…ghadassanaá¹ƒ bahÅ«pakÄ• raá¹ƒ. Ä• yÄ• ma Ä• yÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti! mah Ä• gantvÄ• bhagavantaÃ±ca taá¹ƒmuhuttaá¹ƒ arahattappattakhÄ«á¹‡Ä• save ca vanditvÄ• eteneva upÄ• yena tÄ• saá¹ƒ tÄ• saá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• saddantaraá¸• á¸• hagÄ• vutagÄ• vutaá¸• á¸• hayojanayojanÄ• divasena tiyojanasahassa tikkhattuá¹ƒ tesaá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• nagarasahassesu, navanavutiyÄ• doá¹‡amukhasatasahasses paá¹-á¹-anakoá¹-isatasahassesu, chapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sÄ• ya ratanÄ• karesÅ«ti sakalajambudÄ« aparagoyÄ• ne, uttarakurumhi, dvÄ«su parittadÄ«pasahassesÅ«ti sakalacakkavÄ• á¸·e, tato dutiyatatiyacakkavÄ• á¸·eti evaá¹ƒ dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·esu devatÄ• sannipatitÄ• ti ve dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·aÃ±hi idha dasalokadhÄ• tuyoti adhippetaá¹ƒ. tena vuttaá¹ƒ --- ``d devatÄ• yebhuyyena sannipatitÄ• hontÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

evaá¹ƒ sannipatitÄ• hi devatÄ• hi sakalacakkavÄ• á¸·agabbhaá¹ƒ yÄ• va brahmalokÄ• sÅ« pakkhittasÅ«cÄ«hi viya paripuá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti. tattha brahmalokassa evaá¹ƒ uccattanaá¹ƒ v lohapÄ• sÄ• de kira sattakÅ«á¹-Ä• gÄ• rasamo pÄ• sÄ• á¹‡o brahmaloke á¹-hatvÄ• adho k pathaviá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• ti. evaá¹ƒ mahante okÄ• se yathÄ• heá¹-á¹-hÄ• á¹-hatvÄ• khittÄ• upari gantuá¹ƒ, upari vÄ• á¹-hatvÄ• khittasÄ• sapÄ• heá¹-á¹-hÄ• otarituá¹ƒ antaraá¹ƒ na nirantarÄ• devatÄ• ahesuá¹ƒ. yathÄ• kho pana cakkavattiraÃ±Ã±o nisinnaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• gatÄ• gatÄ• mahesakkhÄ• khattiyÄ• okÄ• saá¹ƒ labhantiyeva, parato parato pana atis bhagavato nisinnaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ asambÄ• dhaá¹ƒ, Ä• gatÄ• gatÄ• mahesakkhÄ• devÄ• labhantiyeva. api sudaá¹ƒ bhagavato Ä• sannÄ• sannaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne vÄ• lagganittudanamatt devÄ• sukhume attabhÄ• ve mÄ• petvÄ• aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsu. sabbaparato saá¹-á¹-hi saá¹-á¹-h __suddhÄ• vÄ• sakÄ• yikÄ• na_nti \Be I 71/ \Ee I 75/ suddhÄ• vÄ• savÄ• sÄ«naá¹ƒ. suddh anÄ• gÄ• mikhÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• vÄ• sÄ• paÃ±ca brahmalokÄ• . __etadahosÄ«_ti k samÄ• pattiá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjitvÄ• yathÄ• paricchedena vuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• brahmabhavanaá¹ƒ ol bhattagehaá¹ƒ viya suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ addasaá¹ƒsu. tato ``kuhiá¹ƒ brahmÄ• no gatÄ• â€™â€™ mahÄ• samÄ• gamaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• \Ne I 68/ --- ``ayaá¹ƒ samÄ• gamo mahÄ• , mayaá¹ƒ ohÄ dullabho hoti, tasmÄ• gacchantÄ• atucchahatthÄ• hutvÄ• ekekaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ abhisaá¹.

mahÄ• samÄ• game ca attano Ä• gatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• pessÄ• ma, dasabalassa ca vaá iti tesaá¹ƒ samÄ• pattito uá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya Ä• vajjitattÄ• etadahosi.

__bhagavato purato pÄ• turahesu_nti pÄ• á¸·iyaá¹ƒ bhagavato santike abhimukhaá¹-á¹-hÄ katvÄ• vuttÄ• , na kho panettha evaá¹ƒ attho veditabbo. te pana brahmaloke á¹-hitÄ• yeva abhisaá¹…kharitvÄ• eko puratthimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ otari, eko dakkhiá¹‡acakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ, eko pacchimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iy uttaracakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ otari. tato puratthimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-i nÄ«lakasiá¹‡aá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjitvÄ• nÄ«larasmiyo vissajjetvÄ• dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·ad paá¹-imuÃ±canto viya attano Ä• gatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• petvÄ• buddhavÄ«thi nÄ• ma ken tasmÄ• mahatiyÄ• buddhavÄ«thiyÄ• va Ä• gantvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekam á¹-hito kho attanÄ• abhisaá¹…khataá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ abhÄ• si.

dakkhiá¹‡acakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡abrahmÄ• pÄ«takasiá¹‡aá¹ƒ samÄ suvaá¹‡á¹‡apabhaá¹ƒ muÃ±citvÄ• dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·adevatÄ• naá¹ƒ suvaá¹‡á¹‡ap Ä• gatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• petvÄ• tatheva akÄ• si. pacchimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-i lohitakasiá¹‡aá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjitvÄ• lohitakarasmiyo muÃ±citvÄ• dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·a rattavarakambalena parikkhipanto viya attano Ä• gatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• petvÄ• tatheva a uttaracakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡abrahmÄ• odÄ• takasiá¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee I 76/ s odÄ• tarasmiyo vissajjetvÄ• dasasahassacakkavÄ• á¸·adevatÄ• naá¹ƒ sumanakusumapaá Ä• gatabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• petvÄ• tatheva akÄ• si.

pÄ• á¸·iyaá¹ƒ pana __bhagavato purato pÄ• turahesuá¹ƒ. atha kho tÄ• devatÄ• bhagavan ekamantaá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsÅ«_ti evaá¹ƒ ekakkhaá¹‡e viya purato pÄ• tubhÄ• vo ca abhivÄ•

á¹-hitabhÄ• vo ca vutto, so iminÄ• anukkamena ahosi, ekato katvÄ• pana dassito. gÄ• thÄ pÄ• á¸·iyampi visuá¹ƒ visuá¹ƒyeva vuttaá¹ƒ.

tattha \Ne I 69/ __mahÄ• samayo_ti mahÄ• samÅ«ho. __pavanaá¹ƒ_ vuccati vanasaá¹‡á¸• ``imasmiá¹ƒ pana vanasaá¹‡á¸• e ajja mahÄ• samÅ«ho sannipÄ• toâ€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. tato dassetuá¹ƒ __devakÄ• yÄ• samÄ• gatÄ• _ti Ä• ha. tattha __devakÄ• yÄ• _ti devaghaá¹-Ä• dhammasamaya_nti evaá¹ƒ samÄ• gate devakÄ• ye disvÄ• mayampi imaá¹ƒ dhammasam __dakkhitÄ• ye aparÄ• jitasaá¹…gha_nti kenaci aparÄ• jitaá¹ƒ ajjeva tayo mÄ• re madditvÄ imaá¹ƒ aparÄ• jitasaá¹…ghaá¹ƒ dassanatthÄ• ya Ä• gatamhÄ• ti attho. so pana, brahmÄ• , bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• , puratthimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒyeva aá¹-á¹-h atha dutiyo vuttanayeneva Ä• gantvÄ• abhÄ• si. tattha __tatra bhikkhavo_ti tasmiá¹ƒ sann bhikkhÅ«. __samÄ• dahaá¹ƒsÅ«_ti samÄ• dhinÄ• yojesuá¹ƒ. __cittamattano ujukaá¹ƒ akaá vaá¹…kakuá¹-ilajimhabhÄ• ve haritvÄ• ujukaá¹ƒ akariá¹ƒsu. __sÄ• rathÄ«va nettÄ• ni gahe samappavattesu sindhavesu odhastapatodo sÄ• rathÄ« sabbayottÄ• ni gahetvÄ• acodento evaá¹ƒ chaá¸·aá¹…gupekkhÄ• ya samannÄ• gatÄ• guttadvÄ• rÄ• sabbepete paÃ±casatÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• , ete daá¹-á¹-huá¹ƒ idhÄ• gatamhÄ• bhagavÄ• ti, sopi gantvÄ• yathÄ• á¹-hÄ•

atha tatiyo vuttanayeneva Ä• gantvÄ• abhÄ• si. tattha __chetvÄ• khÄ«la_nti rÄ• gadosam __paligha_nti rÄ• gadosamohapalighameva. __indakhÄ«la_nti rÄ• gadosamohaindakhÄ«la manejÄ• _ti ete taá¹‡hÄ• ejÄ• ya anejÄ• bhikkhÅ« indakhÄ«laá¹ƒ Å«hacca samÅ«hanitvÄ• appaá¹-ihatacÄ• rikaá¹ƒ \Be I 73/ caranti. __suddhÄ• _ti nirupakkilesÄ• . __vimalÄ• _ti nimn vevacanaá¹ƒ. __cakkhumatÄ• _ti paÃ±cahi cakkhÅ«hi cakkhumantena. __sudantÄ• _ti cakk ghÄ• natopi jivhÄ• topi kÄ• yatopi manatopi dantÄ• . __susunÄ• gÄ• _ti taruá¹‡anÄ• gÄ• . t chandÄ• dÄ«hi na gacchantÄ«ti __nÄ• gÄ• , _ tena tena maggena pahÄ«ne kilese na Ä• ga nÄ• nappakÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• guá¹ƒ na karontÄ«ti nÄ• gÄ• . ayamettha saá¹…khepo, vitthÄ• ro pa vuttanayeneva veditabbo.

apica ---

``Ä• guá¹ƒ na karoti kiÃ±ci loke, sabbasaá¹ƒyoga visajja bandhanÄ• ni.

sabbattha \Ne I 70/ na sajjatÄ« vimutto,

nÄ• go tÄ• di pavuccate tathattÄ• â€™â€™ ti || --- evamettha attho veditabbo. __susunÄ• gÄ• _ti susÅ« nÄ• gÄ• , susunÄ• gabhÄ• vasampat evarÅ«pe anuttarena yoggÄ• cariyena damite taruá¹‡anÄ• ge dassanÄ• ya Ä• gatamha bha yathÄ• á¹-hÄ• neyeva aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si.

atha catuttho vuttanayeneva Ä• gantvÄ• abhÄ• si. tattha __gatÄ• se_ti nibbematikasaraá¹ gantvÄ• yathÄ• á¹-hÄ• neyeva aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«ti. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. sakalikasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<38> aá¹-á¹-hame __maddakucchismi_nti evaá¹ƒnÄ• make uyyÄ• ne. taÃ±hi ajÄ• tasattum
--- ``ayaá¹ƒ mayhaá¹ƒ kucchigato gabbho raÃ±Ã±o sattu bhavissati. kiá¹ƒ me iminÄ• â€™â€ gabbhapÄ• tanatthaá¹ƒ kucchi maddÄ• pitÄ• . tasmÄ• ``maddakucchÄ«â€™â€™ ti saá¹…
abhayavÄ• satthÄ• ya dinnattÄ• __migadÄ• yo_ti vuccati.

__tena kho pana samayenÄ• _ti ettha ayaá¹ƒ anupubbikathÄ• --- devadatto hi ajÄ• tasattu
ca dhanapÄ• lakaÃ±ca \Ee I 78/ payojetvÄ• pi tathÄ• gatassa \Be I 74/ jÄ«vitantarÄ• yaá¹ƒ ``sahattheneva mÄ• ressÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti gijjhakÅ«á¹-apabbataá¹ƒ abhiruhitvÄ• mahanta kÅ«á¹-Ä• gÄ• rappamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ silaá¹ƒ ukkhipitvÄ• , ``samaá¹‡o gotamo cuá¹‡á¹‡avicuá¹‡ pavijjhi. mahÄ• thÄ• mavÄ• kiresa paÃ±cannaá¹ƒ hatthÄ«naá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ dhÄ• reti. aá¹-á¹-h yaá¹ƒ buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ parÅ«pakkamena jÄ«vitantarÄ• yo bhaveyyÄ• ti taá¹ƒ tathÄ• gatassa Ä• gacchantaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• se aÃ±Ã±Ä• silÄ• uá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• sampaá¹-icchi. dvinnaá¹ƒ silÄ• pÄ• sÄ• á¹‡assa sakalikÄ• uá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• bhagavato piá¹-á¹-hipÄ• dapariyantaá¹ƒ abhiha pahato viya samuggatalohitena lÄ• khÄ• rasamakkhito viya ahosi. bhagavÄ• uddhaá¹ƒ ullo etadavoca --- ``bahu tayÄ• moghapurisa, apuÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasutaá¹ƒ, yo tvaá¹ƒ paduá¹-á¹-hac tathÄ• gatassa lohitaá¹ƒ uppÄ• desÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya bhagavato aphÄ• su cintayiá¹ƒsu --- ``ayaá¹ƒ vihÄ• ro ujjaá¹…galo \Ne I 71/ visamo, bahÅ«naá¹ƒ khattiyÄ• dÄ«n pabbajitÄ• naÃ±ca anokÄ• soâ€™â€™ ti. te tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ maÃ±casivikÄ• ya Ä• dÄ• ya m vuttaá¹ƒ --- ``tena kho pana samayena bhagavato pÄ• do sakalikÄ• ya khato hotÄ«â€™â€™ __bhusÄ• _ti balavatiyo. __suda_nti nipÄ• tamattaá¹ƒ. __dukkha_nti sukhapaá¹-ikkhepo. __

__kharÄ• _ti pharusÄ• . __kaá¹-ukÄ• _ti tikhiá¹‡Ä• . __asÄ• tÄ• _ti amadhurÄ• . na tÄ• su n appÄ• yanti vaá¸• á¸• hentÄ«ti __amanÄ• pÄ• . sato sampajÄ• no_ti vedanÄ• dhivÄ• sanas hutvÄ• . __avihaÃ±Ã±amÄ• no_ti apÄ«á¸·iyamÄ• no, samparivattasÄ• yitÄ• ya vedanÄ• na

__sÄ«haseyya_nti ettha kÄ• mabhogiseyyÄ• , petaseyyÄ• , sÄ«haseyyÄ• , tathÄ• gatasey ``yebhuyyena, bhikkhave, kÄ• mabhogÄ« sattÄ• vÄ• mena passena sentÄ«â€™â€™ ti aya yebhuyyena dakkhiá¹‡apassena \Ee I 79/ sayÄ• no nÄ• ma natthi. ``yebhuyyena, bhikkhave sentÄ«â€™â€™ ti ayaá¹ƒ petaseyyÄ• . appamaá¹ƒsalohitattÄ• hi aá¹-á¹-hisaá¹…ghÄ• á¹-a sayituá¹ƒ na sakkonti, uttÄ• nÄ• va senti. ``yebhuyyena, bhikkhave, sÄ«ho migarÄ• jÄ• naá antarasatthimhi anupakkhipitvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡ena passena setÄ«â€™â€™ ti ayaá¹ƒ sÄ«hasey 75/ hi sÄ«ho migarÄ• jÄ• dve purimapÄ• de ekasmiá¹ƒ, `pacchimapÄ• de ekasmiá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ naá¹…guá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ antarasatthimhi pakkhipitvÄ• purimapÄ• dapacchimapÄ• danaá¹…guá sallakkhetvÄ• dvinnaá¹ƒ purimapÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ matthake sÄ«saá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• sayati, diva pabujjhamÄ• no na utrasanto pabujjhati, sÄ«saá¹ƒ pana ukkhipitvÄ• purimapÄ• dÄ• dÄ«na sallakkhetiâ€™. sace kiÃ±ci á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ vijahitvÄ• á¹-hitaá¹ƒ hoti, ``nayidaá¹ƒ tuyhaá¹ƒ jÄ sÅ«rabhÄ• vassa anurÅ«paâ€™â€™ nti anattamano hutvÄ• tattheva sayati, na gocarÄ• ya á¹-hite pana ``tuyhaá¹ƒ jÄ• tiyÄ• ca sÅ«rabhÄ• vassa ca anurÅ«pamidaâ€™â€™ nti haá¹-á sÄ«havijambhitaá¹ƒ vijambhitvÄ• kesarabhÄ• raá¹ƒ vidhunitvÄ• tikkhattuá¹ƒ sÄ«hanÄ• daá pakkamati. catutthajjhÄ• naseyyÄ• pana ``tathÄ• gataseyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuccati. tÄ• su idh ayaÃ±hi tejussadairiyÄ• pathattÄ• uttamaseyyÄ• nÄ• ma.

__pÄ• de pÄ• da_nti dakkhiá¹‡apÄ• de vÄ• mapÄ• daá¹ƒ. __accÄ• dhÄ• yÄ• _ti atiÄ• dhÄ
á¹-hapetvÄ• \Ne I 72/. gopphakena hi gopphake jÄ• á¹‡unÄ• vÄ• jÄ• á¹‡umhi saá¹…ghaá vedanÄ• uppajjati, cittaá¹ƒ ekaggaá¹ƒ na hoti, seyyÄ• aphÄ• sukÄ• hoti. yathÄ• na saá¹…
atikkamma á¹-hapite vedanÄ• nuppajjati, cittaá¹ƒ ekaggaá¹ƒ hoti, seyyÄ• phÄ• su hoti. tas __sato sampajÄ• no_ti sayanapariggÄ• hakasatisampajaÃ±Ã±ena samannÄ• gato. ``uá¹-á¹ panettha na vuttaá¹ƒ, gilÄ• naseyyÄ• hesÄ• tathÄ• gatassa.

__sattasatÄ• _ti \Ee I 80/ imasmiá¹ƒ sutte sabbÄ• pi tÄ• devatÄ• gilÄ• naseyyaá¹-á¹-hÄ• n __udÄ• naá¹ƒ udÄ• nesÄ«_ti gilÄ• naseyyaá¹ƒ Ä• gatÄ• naá¹ƒ domanassena bhavitabbaá¹ tathÄ• gatassa vedanÄ• dhivÄ• sanaá¹ƒ disvÄ• , ``aho buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ mahÄ• nubhÄ• vatÄ vattamÄ• nÄ• su vikÄ• ramattampi natthi, sirÄ«sayane alaá¹…karitvÄ• á¹-hapitasuvaá¹‡á¹‡ aniÃ±jamÄ• nena kÄ• yena nipanno, idÄ• nissa adhikataraá¹ƒ mukhavaá¹‡á¹‡o virocati, Ä• viya sampati vikasitaá¹ƒ viya ca aravindaá¹ƒ assa mukhaá¹ƒ sobhati, kÄ• yepi vaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• y susammaá¹-á¹-hakaÃ±canaá¹ƒ viya vippasÄ«datÄ«â€™â€™ ti udÄ• naá¹ƒ udapÄ• di.

__nÄ• go_ \Be I 76/ __vata bho_ti, ettha __bho_ti dhammÄ• lapanaá¹ƒ. balavantaá¹-á¹-hena
nÄ• gabhÄ• vena. __sÄ«ho vatÄ• _tiÄ• dÄ«su asantÄ• sanaá¹-á¹-hena __sÄ«ho_. byattapa kÄ• raá¹‡Ä• kÄ• raá¹‡ajÄ• nanena vÄ• __Ä• jÄ• nÄ«yo_. appaá¹-isamaá¹-á¹-hena __nisab usabho, gavasahassajeá¹-á¹-hako vasabho, gavasatasahassajeá¹-á¹-hako nisabhoti vuccati appaá¹-isamaá¹-á¹-hena Ä• sabhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti. tenevatthena idha ``nisa dhuravÄ• haá¹-á¹-hena __dhorayho_. nibbisevanaá¹-á¹-hena __danto_.

__passÄ• _ti aniyamitÄ• á¹‡atti. __samÄ• dhi_nti arahattaphalasamÄ• dhiá¹ƒ. __suvimutta_ suvimuttaá¹ƒ. rÄ• gÄ• nugataá¹ƒ pana cittaá¹ƒ abhinataá¹ƒ nÄ• ma hoti, dosÄ• nugataá¹ƒ a tadubhayapaá¹-ikkhepena __na cÄ• bhinataá¹ƒ na cÄ• panata_nti Ä• ha. __na ca sasaá¹…

na sasaá¹…khÄ• rena sappayogena kilese niggahetvÄ• vÄ• ritavataá¹ƒ, kilesÄ• naá¹ƒ pana phalasamÄ• dhinÄ• samÄ• hitanti attho. __atikkamitabba_nti viheá¹-hetabbaá¹ƒ ghaá¹-á¹-e aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• . aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä« hi andhabÄ• lova evarÅ«pe satthari aparajjheyyÄ• ti deva vadanti.

__paÃ±cavedÄ• _ti \Ee I 81/ itihÄ• sapaÃ±camÄ• naá¹ƒ vedÄ• naá¹ƒ dhÄ• rakÄ• . __sataá __tapassÄ«_ti tapanissitakÄ• \Ne I 73/ hutvÄ• . __cara_nti carantÄ• . __na sammÄ• vimutt brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• vassasataá¹ƒ caranti, cittaÃ±ca nesaá¹ƒ sammÄ• vimuttaá¹ƒ na hoti. __hÄ gamÄ• te_ti hÄ«nattasabhÄ• vÄ• te nibbÄ• naá¹…gamÄ• na honti. ``hÄ«nattharÅ«pÄ• â€ hÄ«natthajÄ• tikÄ• parihÄ«natthÄ• ti attho. __taá¹‡hÄ• dhipannÄ• _ti taá¹‡hÄ• ya ajjhottha __vatasÄ«labaddhÄ• _ti ajavatakukkuravatÄ• dÄ«hi ca vatehi tÄ• diseheva ca sÄ«lehi badd paÃ±cÄ• tapatÄ• panaá¹ƒ kaá¹‡á¹-akaseyyÄ• dikaá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ. idÄ• ni sÄ• devatÄ• sÄ• sa kathentÄ« __na mÄ• nakÄ• massÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. taá¹ƒ vuttatthamevÄ• ti. aá¹-á¹-hamaá

9. paá¹-hamapajjunnadhÄ«tusuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<39> navame __pajjunnassa dhÄ«tÄ• _ti pajjunnassa nÄ• ma vassavalÄ• hakadevaraÃ±Ã dhÄ«tÄ• . __abhivande_ti bhagavÄ• tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ pÄ• de \Be I 77/ vandÄ• mi. __cakkhum cakkhumantena tathÄ• gatena. __dhammo anubuddho_ti, ``idaá¹ƒ mayÄ• pubbe paresaá¹ƒ sutaá¹ƒyeva Ä• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadati. __sÄ• haá¹ƒ dÄ• nÄ«_ti, sÄ• ahaá¹ƒ idÄ• ni. __sakk paá¹-ivedhavasena paccakkhameva jÄ• nÄ• mi. __vigarahantÄ• _ti, ``hÄ«nakkharapadabya ``aniyyÄ• nikoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• evaá¹ƒ garahantÄ• . __roruva_nti, dve roruvÄ• --- dhÅ«maro tattha dhÅ«maroruvo visuá¹ƒ hoti, jÄ• laroruvoti pana avÄ«cimahÄ• nirayassevetaá¹ƒ nÄ• n aggimhi jalante jalante punappunaá¹ƒ ravaá¹ƒ ravanti, tasmÄ• so ``roruvoâ€™â€™ ti vucca dÄ• ruá¹‡aá¹ƒ. __khantiyÄ• upasamena upetÄ• _ti ruccitvÄ• khamÄ• petvÄ• gahaá¹‡akha upetÄ• ti. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. dutiyapajjunnadhÄ«tusuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<40> dasame __dhammaÃ±cÄ• _ti ca saddena saá¹…ghaÃ±ca, iti tÄ«á¹‡i ratanÄ• ni nama vadati. __atthavatÄ«_ti, atthavatiyo. __bahunÄ• pi kho ta_nti yaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ sÄ• abhÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ bahunÄ• pi pariyÄ• yena ahaá¹ƒ vibhajeyyaá¹ƒ. __tÄ• diso dhammo_ti, tÄ• dis taá¹ƒsaá¹‡á¹-hito tappaá¹-ibhÄ• go bahÅ«hi pariyÄ• yehi vibhajitabbayuttakoti dasseti. __la kathayissÄ• mi. __yÄ• vatÄ• me manasÄ• pariyatta_nti yattakaá¹ƒ mayÄ• manasÄ• pariy
I 74/ divasaá¹ƒ avatvÄ• madhupaá¹-alaá¹ƒ pÄ«á¸·entÄ« viya muhutteneva saá¹ƒkhittena ka uttÄ• namevÄ• ti. dasamaá¹ƒ.

satullapakÄ• yikavaggo catuttho.

5. Ä• dittavaggo

1. Ä• dittasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<41> Ä• dittavaggassa paá¹-hame __jarÄ• ya maraá¹‡ena cÄ• _ti desanÄ• sÄ«sametaá¹ƒ, aggÄ«hi loko Ä• dittova. __dÄ• nenÄ• _ti dÄ• nacetanÄ• ya. __dinnaá¹ƒ hoti sunÄ«hata_nti dÄ• yakasseva hoti gharasÄ• mikassa viya nÄ«hatabhaá¹‡á¸• akaá¹ƒ, tenetaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. _ 78/ adinne bhoge corÄ• pi haranti rÄ• jÄ• nopi, aggipi á¸• ahati, á¹-hapitaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nepi nas maraá¹‡ena. __sarÄ«raá¹ƒ sapariggaha_nti sarÄ«raÃ±ceva corÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ vasena avinaá __saggamupetÄ«_ti vessantaramahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• dayo viya sagge nibbattatÄ«ti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ

2. kiá¹ƒdadasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<42> dutiye __annado_ti yasmÄ• atibalavÄ• pi dve tÄ«á¹‡i bhattÄ• ni abhutvÄ• uá¹-á¹-hÄ bhutvÄ• pana dubbalopi hutvÄ• balasampanno hoti, tasmÄ• ``annado baladoâ€™â€™ ti Ä surÅ«popi duccoá¸·o vÄ• acoá¸·o vÄ• virÅ«po hoti ohÄ«á¸·ito duddasiko, vatthacchanno d \Ee I 83/, tasmÄ• ``vatthado hoti vaá¹‡á¹‡adoâ€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. __yÄ• nado_ti hatthiyÄ• nÄ pana ---

``na hatthiyÄ• naá¹ƒ samaá¹‡assa kappati, na assayÄ• naá¹ƒ, na rathena yÄ• tuá¹ƒ.

idaÃ±ca yÄ• naá¹ƒ samaá¹‡assa kappati,

upÄ• hanÄ• rakkhato sÄ«lakhandhaâ€™â€™ nti ||

tasmÄ• \Ne I 75/ chattupÄ• hanakattarayaá¹-á¹-himaÃ±capÄ«á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ• yako, yo ca nisseá¹‡iá¹ƒ karoti, setuá¹ƒ karoti, nÄ• vaá¹ƒ paá¹-iyÄ• deti, sabbopi yÄ• nadova hoti. __suk yÄ• nassa sukhÄ• vahanato sukhado nÄ• ma hoti. __cakkhudo_ti andhakÄ• re cakkhumant dÄ«pado cakkhudo nÄ• ma hoti, anuruddhatthero viya dibbacakkhu sampadampi labhati.

__sabbadado hotÄ«ti_ sabbesaá¹ƒyeva balÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ dÄ• yako hoti. dve tayo gÄ• me pi aladdhÄ• Ä• gatassÄ• pi sÄ«talÄ• ya pokkharaá¹‡iyÄ• nhÄ• yitvÄ• patissayaá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ nipajjitvÄ• uá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya nisinnassa hi kÄ• ye balaá¹ƒ Ä• haritvÄ• pakkhittaá¹ƒ viya hoti. ba kÄ• ye vaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ vÄ• tÄ• tapehi jhÄ• yati, patissayaá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ• dvÄ• raá¹ƒ p nipannassa ca visabhÄ• gasantati vÅ«pasammati, sabhÄ• gasantati okkamati, vaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• y

pakkhittaá¹ƒ \Be I 79/ viya hoti. bahi vicarantassa pÄ• de kaá¹‡á¹-ako vijjhati, khÄ• á¹‡u pah sarÄ«sapÄ• diparissayo ceva corabhayaÃ±ca uppajjati, patissayaá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ• dvÄ• raá¹ƒ sabbete parissayÄ• na honti, dhammaá¹ƒ sajjhÄ• yantassa dhammapÄ«tisukhaá¹ƒ, kamma manasikarontassa upasamasukhaá¹ƒ uppajjati. tathÄ• bahi vicarantassa ca sedÄ• muccan senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ pavisanakkhaá¹‡e kÅ«pe otiá¹‡á¹‡o viya hoti, maÃ±capÄ«á¹-hÄ• dÄ«ni na p nisinnassa pana akkhipasÄ• do Ä• haritvÄ• pakkhitto viya hoti, dvÄ• rakavÄ• á¹-avÄ• tapÄ
I 84/ paÃ±Ã±Ä• yanti. tena vuttaá¹ƒ --- ``so ca sabbadado hoti, yo dadÄ• ti upassayaâ€™â€ __amataá¹ƒdado ca so hotÄ«_ti paá¹‡Ä«tabhojanassa pattaá¹ƒ pÅ«rento viya amaraá¹‡ad dhammamanusÄ• satÄ«_ti yo dhammaá¹ƒ anusÄ• sati, aá¹-á¹-hakathaá¹ƒ katheti, pÄ• á¸·iá pucchitapaÃ±haá¹ƒ vissajjeti, kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• cikkhati, dhammassavanaá¹ƒ karot anusÄ• sati nÄ• ma. sabbadÄ• nÄ• naÃ±ca idaá¹ƒ dhammadÄ• nameva agganti veditabbaa ``sabbadÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammadÄ• naá¹ƒ jinÄ• ti, sabbarasaá¹ƒ dhammaraso jinÄ• ti.

sabbaratiá¹ƒ \Ne I 76/ dhammarati jinÄ• ti,

taá¹‡hakkhayo sabbadukkhaá¹ƒ jinÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti || (Dhp 354). dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. annasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<43> tatiye __abhinandantÄ«_ti patthenti. __bhajatÄ«_ti upagacchati, cittagahapatisÄ«valit pacchato anubandhati. __tasmÄ• _ti yasmÄ• idhaloke paraloke ca annadÄ• yakameva anu uttÄ• namevÄ• ti. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. ekamÅ«lasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<44> catutthe __ekamÅ«la_nti avijjÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• ya mÅ«laá¹ƒ, taá¹‡hÄ• avijjÄ• ya. idha pa dvÄ«hi sassatucchedadiá¹-á¹-hÄ«hi Ä• vaá¹-á¹-atÄ«ti __dvirÄ• vaá¹-á¹-Ä• _. sÄ• ca rÄ• gÄ __timalÄ• _. tatrÄ• ssÄ• moho sahajÄ• takoá¹-iyÄ• \Be I 80/ malaá¹ƒ hoti, rÄ• gadosÄ• up pana kÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• assÄ• pattharaá¹‡aá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• , tesu sÄ• pattharatÄ«ti __paÃ±ca apÅ«raá¹‡Ä«yaá¹-á¹-hena __samuddo_. ajjhattikabÄ• hiresu panesÄ• dvÄ• dasÄ• yatanes parivaá¹-á¹-atÄ«ti __dvÄ• dasÄ• vaá¹-á¹-Ä• _. apatiá¹-á¹-haá¹-á¹-hena pana __pÄ• tÄ• lo_ti
... pe ... pÄ• tÄ• laá¹ƒ, atari isi, uttari samatikkamÄ«ti attho. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. anomasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<45> paÃ±came __anomanÄ• ma_nti sabbaguá¹‡asamannÄ• gatattÄ• avekallanÄ• maá¹ƒ __nipuá¹‡atthadassi_nti bhagavÄ• saá¹‡hasukhume khandhantarÄ• dayo atthe passatÄ«ti __paÃ±Ã±Ä• dada_nti anvayapaÃ±Ã±Ä• dhigamÄ• ya paá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ kathanavasena paÃ±Ã asatta_nti paÃ±cakÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• laye alaggaá¹ƒ. __kamamÄ• na_nti bhagavÄ• mahÄ• bo gato, na idÄ• ni gacchati, atÄ«taá¹ƒ pana upÄ• dÄ• ya idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. __mahesi_nti mahan sÄ«lakkhandhÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ esitÄ• raá¹ƒ pariyesitÄ• ranti. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. accharÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<46> chaá¹-á¹-he \Ne I 77/ __accharÄ• gaá¹‡asaá¹…ghuá¹-á¹-ha_nti ayaá¹ƒ kira devaputto pabbajitvÄ• vattapaá¹-ipattiá¹ƒ pÅ«rayamÄ• no paÃ±cavassakÄ• le pavÄ• retvÄ• dvemÄ• kammÄ• kammaá¹ƒ uggahetvÄ• cittarucitaá¹ƒ kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ uggaá¹‡hitvÄ• salla pavisitvÄ• yo bhagavatÄ• majjhimayÄ• mo sayanassa koá¹-á¹-hÄ• soti anuÃ±Ã±Ä• to. tasm bhÄ• yÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti maÃ±cakaá¹ƒ ukkhipitvÄ• rattiÃ±ca divÄ• ca nirÄ• hÄ• ro kamm athassa abbhantare satthakavÄ• tÄ• uppajjitvÄ• jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• diyiá¹ƒsu. so dhurasm yo hi koci bhikkhu caá¹…kame caá¹…kamamÄ• no vÄ• Ä• lambanatthambhaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya cÄ«varaá¹ƒ \Ee I 86/ sÄ«se á¹-hapetvÄ• nisinno vÄ• nipanno vÄ• parisamajjhe alaá¹…kat desento vÄ• kÄ• laá¹ƒ karoti, sabbo so dhurasmiá¹ƒ kÄ• laá¹ƒ \Be I 81/ karoti nÄ• ma. iti ay kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissayamandatÄ• ya Ä• savakkhayaá¹ƒ appatto tÄ• vatiá¹ƒsabhavane niddÄ• yitvÄ• pabujjhanto viya paá¹-isandhiá¹ƒ aggahesi. tÄ• vadevassa suvaá¹‡á¹‡atoraá attabhÄ• vo nibbatti.

antovimÄ• ne sahassamattÄ• accharÄ• taá¹ƒ disvÄ• , ``vimÄ• nasÄ• miko devaputto Ä• g tÅ«riyÄ• ni gahetvÄ• parivÄ• rayiá¹ƒsu. devaputto na tÄ• va cutabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• ti, pab accharÄ• oloketvÄ• vihÄ• racÄ• rikaá¹ƒ Ä• gataá¹ƒ mÄ• tugÄ• maá¹ƒ disvÄ• lajjÄ«. paá¹ƒ á¹-hitaá¹ƒ ghanadukÅ«laá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ karonto aá¹ƒsakÅ«á¹-aá¹ƒ paá¹-icchÄ• detvÄ• ind adhomukho aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si. tassa kÄ• yavikÄ• reneva tÄ• devatÄ• ``samaá¹‡adevaputto aya evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu --- ``ayya, devaputta, devaloko nÄ• mÄ• yaá¹ƒ, na samaá¹‡adhammassa anubhavanokÄ• soâ€™â€™ ti. so tatheva aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si. devatÄ• ``na tÄ• vÄ• yaá¹ƒ sallakh paggaá¹‡hiá¹ƒsu. so tathÄ• pi anolokentova aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si.

athassa sabbakÄ• yikaá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ• saá¹ƒ purato á¹-hapayiá¹ƒsu. so chÄ• yaá¹ƒ disvÄ• cuta mayÄ• imaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ patthetvÄ• samaá¹‡adhammo kato, uttamatthaá¹ƒ arahattaá¹ƒ sampattiyÄ• vippaá¹-isÄ• rÄ« ahosi, ``suvaá¹‡á¹‡apaá¹-aá¹ƒ paá¹-ilabhissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ yuddhaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡amallo \Ne I 78/ mÅ«lakamuá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ labhitvÄ• viya. so - saggasampatti nÄ• ma sulabhÄ• , buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• tubhÄ• vo dullabhoâ€™â€™ ti cintet asambhinneneva sÄ«lena accharÄ• saá¹…ghaparivuto dasabalassa santikaá¹ƒ Ä• gamma á¹-hito imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ abhÄ• si.

tattha __accharÄ• gaá¹‡asaá¹…ghuá¹-á¹-ha_nti accharÄ• gaá¹‡ena gÄ«tavÄ• ditasaddehi __pisÄ• cagaá¹‡asevita_nti tameva accharÄ• gaá¹‡aá¹ƒ pisÄ• cagaá¹‡aá¹ƒ katvÄ• vadati.
sandhÄ• ya vadati. ayaÃ±hi niyÄ• macittatÄ• ya attano garubhÄ• vena devagaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ``dev na roceti. ``pisÄ• cagaá¹‡oâ€™â€™ ti vadati. nandanavanaÃ±ca ``nandanaâ€™â€™ nti av vadati \Be I 82/. __kathaá¹ƒ yÄ• trÄ• bhavissatÄ«_ti \Ee I 87/ kathaá¹ƒ niggamanaá¹ƒ bhav atikkamo bhavissati, arahattassa me padaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÅ«taá¹ƒ vipassanaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkhath atha bhagavÄ• ``atisallikhateva ayaá¹ƒ devaputto, kiá¹ƒ nu kho idaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• vajjen pabbajitabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• --- ``ayaá¹ƒ accÄ• raddhavÄ«riyatÄ• ya kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• dev caá¹…kamanasmiá¹ƒyeva attabhÄ• vo asambhinnena sÄ«lena Ä• gatoâ€™â€™ ti cintesi. b Ä• dikammikassa akataparikammassa antevÄ• sino cittakÄ• ro bhittiparikammaá¹ƒ viya --- ` samÄ• dhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• vehi, kammassakatapaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ ujuá¹ƒ karohÄ«â€™â€™ ti paá¹-hama Ä• cikkhanti, kÄ• rakassa pana yuttapayuttassa arahattamaggapadaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nabhÅ«taá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±atÄ• vipassanaá¹ƒyeva Ä• cikkhanti, ayaÃ±ca devaputto kÄ• rako abhinnasÄ«lo, ek suÃ±Ã±atÄ• vipassanaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkhanto __ujuko nÄ• mÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha.

tattha __ujuko_ti kÄ• yavaá¹…kÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ abhÄ• vato aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggo ujuko nÄ disÄ• _ti nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ sandhÄ• yÄ• ha. tasmiá¹ƒ hi kiÃ±ci bhayaá¹ƒ natthi, taá¹ƒ vÄ• patta ``abhayÄ• nÄ• ma sÄ• disÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ. __ratho akÅ«jano_ti aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko pÄ• katikaratho akkhe vÄ• anabbhaÃ±jite atirekesu vÄ• manussesu abhiruá¸·hesu kÅ«jati ariyamaggo. so hi ekappahÄ• rena caturÄ• sÄ«tiyÄ• pi pÄ• á¹‡asahassesu abhiruhantesu \ viravati. tasmÄ• ``akÅ«janoâ€™â€™ ti vutto. __dhammacakkehi saá¹ƒyuto_ti kÄ• yikaceta dhammacakkehi saá¹ƒyutto.

__hirÄ«_ti ettha hiriggahaá¹‡ena ottappampi gahitameva hoti. __tassa apÄ• lambo_ti yathÄ rathe á¹-hitÄ• naá¹ƒ yodhÄ• naá¹ƒ apatanatthÄ• ya dÄ• rumayaá¹ƒ apÄ• lambanaá¹ƒ hoti, e ajjhattabahiddhÄ• samuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ hirottappaá¹ƒ apÄ• lambanaá¹ƒ. __satyassa_ \Ee I rathassa sÄ«hacammÄ• diparivÄ• ro viya imassÄ• pi maggarathassa sampayuttÄ• sati par lokuttaramaggaá¹ƒ \Be I 83/. __sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hipurejava_nti vipassanÄ• sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-pubbayÄ• yikÄ• ti sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hipurejavo, taá¹ƒ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hipurejavaá¹ƒ. yathÄ• rÄ• japurisehi kÄ• á¹‡akuá¹‡iÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ___nÄ«haraá¹‡ena magge sodhite pacchÄ• rÄ• vipassanÄ• sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• aniccÄ• divasena khandhÄ• dÄ«su sodhitesu pacchÄ• parijÄ• namÄ• nÄ• maggasammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi uppajjati. tena vuttaá¹ƒ ``dhammÄ• haá¹ƒ sÄ• sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hipurejavaâ€™â€™ nti.

iti bhagavÄ• desanaá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• avasÄ• ne cattÄ• ri saccÄ• ni dÄ«pesi. desanÄ sotÄ• pattiphale patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• si. yathÄ• hi raÃ±Ã±o bhojanakÄ• le attano mukhappamÄ• á aá¹…ke nisinno putto attano mukhappamÄ• á¹‡eneva tato kabaá¸·aá¹ƒ karoti, evamevaá¹ƒ arahattanikÅ«á¹-ena desanaá¹ƒ desentepi sattÄ• attano upanissayÄ• nurÅ«pena sotÄ• pat ayampi devaputto sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ patvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ gandhÄ• dÄ«hi pÅ«jetvÄ• pa

7. vanaropasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<47> sattame __dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«lasampannÄ• _ti ke dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• , ke sÄ«lasa imaá¹ƒ paÃ±haá¹ƒ thÄ• varavatthunÄ• dÄ«pento __Ä• rÄ• maropÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha pupphÄ• rÄ• maphalÄ• rÄ• maropakÄ• . __vanaropÄ• _ti sayaá¹ƒjÄ• te aropimavane sÄ«m cetiyabodhicaá¹…kamanamaá¹‡á¸• apakuá¹-ileá¹‡arattiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nadivÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• naá rukkhe ropetvÄ• dadamÄ• nÄ• pi vanaropÄ• yeva nÄ• ma. __setukÄ• rakÄ• _ti visame set paá¹-iyÄ• denti \Ne I 80/. __papa_nti pÄ• nÄ«yadÄ• nasÄ• laá¹ƒ. __udapÄ• na_nti yaá¹ƒkiÃ pokkharaá¹‡Ä«taá¸·Ä• kÄ• diá¹ƒ. __upassaya_nti vÄ• sÄ• gÄ• raá¹ƒ. ``upÄ• sayaâ€™â€™

__sadÄ• puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«_ti na akusalavitakkaá¹ƒ \Ee I 89/ vÄ• vitakkentas pavaá¸• á¸• hati. yadÄ• yadÄ• pana anussarati, tadÄ• tadÄ• tassa vaá¸• á¸• hati. imamat puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«â€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ. __dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«lasampannÄ• tenapi sÄ«lena sampannattÄ• dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«lasampannÄ• . atha vÄ• \Be I 84/ ev karontÄ• naá¹ƒ dasa kusalÄ• dhammÄ• pÅ«renti, tesu á¹-hitattÄ• dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• . tene sÄ«lasampannÄ• ti. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. jetavanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<48> aá¹-á¹-hame __idaá¹ƒ hi taá¹ƒ jetavana_nti anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• iko devaputto jetavanass buddhÄ• dÄ«naÃ±ca vaá¹‡á¹‡abhaá¹‡anatthaá¹ƒ Ä• gato evamÄ• ha. __isisaá¹…ghanisev bhikkhusaá¹…ghanisevitaá¹ƒ.

evaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamagÄ• thÄ• ya jetavanassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathetvÄ• idÄ• ni ariyamaggassa vijjÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __kamma_nti maggacetanÄ• . __vijjÄ• _ti maggapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . __
dhammÄ• . __sÄ«laá¹ƒ jÄ«vitamuttama_nti sÄ«le patiá¹-á¹-hitassa jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ uttamanti dass __vijjÄ• _ti diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹…kappÄ• . __dhammo_ti vÄ• yÄ• masatisamÄ• dhayo. __sÄ«la_n __jÄ«vitamuttama_nti etasmiá¹ƒ sÄ«le á¹-hitassa jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma uttamaá¹ƒ. __etena ma aá¹-á¹-haá¹…gikamaggena sattÄ• visujjhanti.

__tasmÄ• _ti yasmÄ• maggena sujjhanti, na gottadhanehi, tasmÄ• . __yoniso vicine dham samÄ• dhipakkhiyadhammaá¹ƒ vicineyya. __evaá¹ƒ tattha visujjhatÄ«_ti evaá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ an atha vÄ• __yoniso vicine dhamma_nti upÄ• yena paÃ±cakkhandhadhammaá¹ƒ vicineyya. _

evaá¹ƒ tesu catÅ«su saccesu visujjhati.

idÄ• ni sÄ• riputtattherassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathento __sÄ• riputtovÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha avadhÄ• raá¹‡avacanaá¹ƒ, etehi paÃ±Ã±Ä• dÄ«hi sÄ• riputtova seyyoti vadati. __upasamen 81/. __pÄ• raá¹ƒ gato_ti nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ gato. yo koci nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ patto bhikkhu, so __etÄ• v therena uttaritaro nÄ• ma atthÄ«ti vadati. sesaá¹ƒ uttÄ• namevÄ• ti. aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

9. maccharisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<49> navame \Ee I 90/ __maccharino_ti maccherena samannÄ• gatÄ• . ekacco hi attano v hatthaá¹ƒ pasÄ• retvÄ• pi na vandati, aÃ±Ã±attha gato vihÄ• raá¹ƒ \Be I 85/ pavisitvÄ• sak madhurapaá¹-isanthÄ• raá¹ƒ karoti --- ``bhante, amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ vasanaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• ga paá¹-ibalÄ• mayaá¹ƒ ayyÄ• naá¹ƒ yÄ• gubhattÄ• dÄ«hi upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• tuâ€™â€™ upÄ• sakoâ€™â€™ ti yÄ• gubhattÄ• dÄ«hi saá¹…gaá¹‡hanti. atheko thero tassa gÄ• maá¹ so taá¹ƒ disvÄ• aÃ±Ã±ena vÄ• gacchati, gharaá¹ƒ vÄ• pavisati. sacepi sammukhÄ«bhÄ• v vanditvÄ• --- ``ayyassa bhikkhaá¹ƒ detha, ahaá¹ƒ ekena kammena gacchÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ sakalagÄ• maá¹ƒ caritvÄ• tucchapattova nikkhamati. idaá¹ƒ tÄ• va mudumacchariyaá¹ƒ nÄ adÄ• yakopi dÄ• yako viya paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati. idha pana thaddhamacchariyaá¹ƒ adhippetaá¹ƒ, bhikkhÅ«su piá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya paviá¹-á¹-hesu, ``therÄ• á¹-hitÄ• â€™â€™ ti vutte, ``kiá¹ƒ mayha rujjantÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«ni vatvÄ• silÄ• thambho viya khÄ• á¹‡uko viya ca thaddho hutvÄ na karoti. __kadariyÄ• _ti idaá¹ƒ maccharinoti padasseva vevacanaá¹ƒ. mudukampi hi macc ``macchariyaâ€™â€™ nteva vuccati, thaddhaá¹ƒ pana kadariyaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma. __paribhÄ• sak á¹-hite disvÄ• , ``kiá¹ƒ tumhe kasitvÄ• Ä• gatÄ• , vapitvÄ• , lÄ• yitvÄ• ? mayaá¹ƒ attanopi n tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ, sÄ«ghaá¹ƒ nikkhamathÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«hi saá¹ƒtajjakÄ• . __antarÄ• yak saggantarÄ• yo, paá¹-iggÄ• hakÄ• naá¹ƒ lÄ• bhantarÄ• yo, attano upaghÄ• toti imesaá¹ƒ an __samparÄ• yo_ti paraloko. __ratÄ«_ti paÃ±cakÄ• maguá¹‡arati. __khiá¸• á¸• Ä• _ti kÄ• yi khiá¸• á¸• Ä• . __diá¹-á¹-he dhammesa vipÄ• ko_ti tasmiá¹ƒ nibbattabhavane diá¹-á¹-he dha __samparÄ• ye ca duggatÄ«_ti ``yamalokaá¹ƒ upapajjareâ€™â€™ ti vutte samparÄ• ye ca __vadaÃ±Ã±Å«_ti bhikkhÅ« gharadvÄ• re á¹-hitÄ• kiÃ±cÄ• pi tuá¹‡hÄ«va honti, atthato pa dethÄ• â€™â€™ ti vadanti nÄ• ma. tatra ye ``mayaá¹ƒ pacÄ• ma, ime pana na pacanti, pac \Ne I 82/ kuhiá¹ƒ labhissantÄ«â€™â€™ ti? deyyadhammaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvibhajanti, te vadaÃ±Ã± vimÄ• nappabhÄ• ya jotanti. __parasambhatesÅ«_ti parehi sampiá¹‡á¸• itesu. __samparÄ• saggÄ• â€™â€™ ti \Be I 86/ evaá¹ƒ vuttasamparÄ• ye sugati. ubhinnampi vÄ• etesaá¹ƒ tat samparÄ• yepi duggatisugatiyeva hotÄ«ti. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. ghaá¹-Ä«kÄ• rasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<50> dasame __upapannÄ• se_ti nibbattivasena upagatÄ• . __vimuttÄ• _ti avihÄ• brahmal upapattisamanantarameva arahattaphalavimuttiyÄ• vimuttÄ• . __mÄ• nusaá¹ƒ deha_nti idh paÃ±corambhÄ• giyasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni eva vuttÄ• ni. __dibbayoga_nti paÃ±ca uddhambhÄ• __upaccagu_nti atikkamiá¹ƒsu. __upako_tiÄ• dÄ«ni tesaá¹ƒ therÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• mÄ• ni. __ku ``kusalaâ€™â€™ nti idaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ imassa atthÄ«ti __kusalÄ«, _ tesaá¹ƒ therÄ• naá¹ƒ t anavajjaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sasi, thomesi pasaá¹ƒsasi \Ee I 92/, paá¹‡á¸• itosi devaputtÄ• ti vadati. __
idhaÃ±Ã±Ä• yÄ• _ti te therÄ• taá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ idha tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ sÄ• sane jÄ• nitvÄ• . __
gambhÄ«ratthaá¹ƒ. __brahmacÄ• rÄ« nirÄ• miso_ti nirÄ• misabrahmacÄ• rÄ« nÄ• ma anÄ• attho. __ahuvÄ• _ti ahosi. __sagÄ• meyyo_ti ekagÄ• mavÄ• sÄ«. pariyosÄ• nagÄ• thÄ• sa dasamaá¹ƒ.

Ä• dittavaggo paÃ±camo.

6. jarÄ• vaggo

1. jarÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<51> jarÄ• vaggassa paá¹-hame __sÄ• dhÅ«_ti laddhakaá¹ƒ bhaddakaá¹ƒ. __sÄ«laá¹ƒ yÄ• dasseti --- yathÄ• muttÄ• maá¹‡irattavatthÄ• dÄ«ni Ä• bharaá¹‡Ä• ni taruá¹‡akÄ• leyeva s jarÄ• jiá¹‡á¹‡akÄ• le tÄ• ni dhÄ• rento ``ayaá¹ƒ ajjÄ• pi bÄ• labhÄ• vaá¹ƒ pattheti, ummatta vattabbataá¹ƒ Ä• pajjati \Ne I 83/, na evaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ. sÄ«laÃ±hi niccakÄ• laá¹ƒ sobhati. bÄ sÄ«laá¹ƒ rakkhantaá¹ƒ ``kiá¹ƒ imassa sÄ«lenÄ• â€™â€™ ti? vattÄ• ro natthi. majjhimakÄ• l

__saddhÄ• _ \Be I 87/ __sÄ• dhu patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• _ti hatthÄ• á¸·avakacittagahapatiÄ• dÄ«na patiá¹-á¹-hitasaddhÄ• nÄ• ma sÄ• dhu. __paÃ±Ã±Ä• narÄ• naá¹ƒ ratana_nti ettha cittÄ«ka veditabbaá¹ƒ. vuttaÃ±hetaá¹ƒ ---

``yadi cittÄ«katanti ratanaá¹ƒ, nanu bhagavÄ• cittÄ«kato purisasÄ«ho, ye ca loke cittÄ«katÄ cittÄ«kato bhagavÄ• . yadi ratikaranti ratanaá¹ƒ, nanu bhagavÄ• ratikaro purisasÄ«ho, tass jhÄ• naratisukhena abhiramanti. yadi atulyanti ratanaá¹ƒ, nanu bhagavÄ• atulo purisasÄ«h sakkÄ• tuletuá¹ƒ guá¹‡ehi guá¹‡apÄ• ramiá¹ƒ gato. yadi dullabhanti ratanaá¹ƒ, nanu bhaga purisasÄ«ho. yadi anomasattaparibhoganti ratanaá¹ƒ, nanu bhagavÄ• anomo sÄ«lena sam vimuttiyÄ• vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanenÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

idha pana dullabhapÄ• tubhÄ• vaá¹-á¹-hena paÃ±Ã±Ä• ``ratanaâ€™â€™ nti vuttaá¹ƒ. __p sÄ• hi arÅ«pattÄ• pariharituá¹ƒ na sakkÄ• ti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. ajarasÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<52> dutiye __ajarasÄ• _ti ajÄ«raá¹‡ena, avipattiyÄ• ti attho. sÄ«laÃ±hi avipannameva sÄ• vipannasÄ«laá¹ƒ Ä• cariyupajjhÄ• yÄ• dayopi na saá¹…gaá¹‡hanti, gatagataá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne ni dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. mittasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<53> tatiye __sattho_ti saddhiá¹ƒcaro, jaá¹…ghasattho vÄ• sakaá¹-asattho vÄ• . __mitta_n pÄ• á¹-aá¹…kiyÄ• vÄ• aÃ±Ã±ena vÄ• yÄ• nena haritvÄ• khemantasampÄ• panena mitta \Ne I 84/. tathÄ• rÅ«pe roge jÄ• te puttabhariyÄ• dayo jigucchanti, mÄ• tÄ• pana asucimpi maÃ±Ã±ati. tasmÄ• sÄ• sake ghare mittaá¹ƒ. __sahÄ• yo atthajÄ• tassÄ• _ti uppannakicc vahati nittharati, so kiccesu saha ayanabhÄ• vena sahÄ• yo mittaá¹ƒ, surÄ• pÄ• nÄ• disahÄ __samparÄ• yika_nti samparÄ• yahitaá¹ƒ. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. vatthusuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<54> catutthe \Be I 88/ __puttÄ• vatthÅ«_ti mahallakakÄ• le paá¹-ijagganaá¹-á¹-hena puttÄ __paramo_ti aÃ±Ã±esaá¹ƒ akathetabbassapi guyhassa kathetabbayuttatÄ• ya bhariyÄ• pa catutthaá¹ƒ.

5-7. paá¹-hamajanasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<55> paÃ±came __vidhÄ• vatÄ«_ti parasamuddÄ• digamanavasena ito cito ca vidhÄ• vati.

<56> chaá¹-á¹-he \Ee I 94/ __dukkhÄ• _ti vaá¹-á¹-adukkhato. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

<57> sattame __parÄ• yaá¹‡a_nti nipphatti avassayo. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. uppathasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<58> aá¹-á¹-hame __rÄ• go uppatho_ti sugatiÃ±ca nibbÄ• naÃ±ca gacchantassa amaggo.
rattidivehi, rattidivesu vÄ• khÄ«yati. __itthÄ« mala_nti sesaá¹ƒ bÄ• hiramalaá¹ƒ bhasmakhÄ sakkÄ• sodhetuá¹ƒ, mÄ• tugÄ• mamalena duá¹-á¹-ho pana na sakkÄ• suddho nÄ• ma kÄ• vuttÄ• . __etthÄ• _ti ettha itthiyaá¹ƒ pajÄ• sajjati. __tapo_ti indriyasaá¹ƒvaradhutaá¹…gaguá¹‡avÄ«riyadukkarakÄ• rikÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ, idha pana á sabbÄ• pi kilesasantÄ• pikÄ• paá¹-ipadÄ• vaá¹-á¹-ati. __brahmacariya_nti methunavirati. a

9. dutiyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<59> navame \Ne I 85/ __kissa cÄ• bhirato_ti kismiá¹ƒ abhirato. __dutiyÄ• _ti sugatiÃ±ceva gacchantassa dutiyikÄ• . __paÃ±Ã±Ä• cenaá¹ƒ pasÄ• satÄ«_ti paÃ±Ã±Ä• etaá¹ƒ purisaá¹ mÄ• karÄ«â€™â€™ ti anusÄ• sati. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. kavisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<60> dasame __chando nidÄ• na_nti gÄ• yattiÄ• diko chando gÄ• thÄ• naá¹ƒ nidÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rabhanto hi ``kataracchandena hotÅ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• rabhati \Be I 89/. __viyaÃ±jana_nti ja padaá¹ƒ janeti, padaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ janeti, gÄ• thÄ• atthaá¹ƒ pakÄ• setÄ«ti. __nÄ• masann samuddÄ• dipaá¹‡á¹‡attinissitÄ• . gÄ• thÄ• \Ee I 95/ Ä• rabhanto hi samuddaá¹ƒ vÄ• path nÄ• maá¹ƒ nissayitvÄ• va Ä• rabhati. __Ä• sayo_ti patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• . kavito hi gÄ• thÄ• pavatta patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• hotÄ«ti. dasamaá¹ƒ.

jarÄ• vaggo chaá¹-á¹-ho.

7. addhavaggo

1. nÄ• masuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<61> addhavaggassa paá¹-hame __nÄ• maá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ addhabhavÄ«_ti nÄ• maá¹ƒ sabb opapÄ• tikena vÄ• hi kittimena vÄ• nÄ• mena mutto satto vÄ• saá¹…khÄ• ro vÄ• natthi. y pÄ• sÄ• á¹‡assa vÄ• ``idaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma nÄ• maâ€™â€™ nti na jÄ• nanti, anÄ• makotveva ta

2-3. cittasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<62> dutiye \Ne I 86/ __sabbeva vasamanvagÅ«_ti ye cittassa vasaá¹ƒ gacchanti, tesaá¹ƒy anavasesapariyÄ• dÄ• nametaá¹ƒ. dutiyaá¹ƒ.

<63> tatiyepi eseva nayo. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4-5. saá¹ƒyojanasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<64> catutthe __kiá¹ƒ su saá¹ƒyojano_ti kiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyojano kiá¹ƒ bandhano? __vicÄ• raá¹‡a pÄ• dÄ• ni. bahuvacane ekavacanaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ. __vitakkassa vicÄ• raá¹‡a_nti vitakko tassa

<65> paÃ±camepi eseva nayo. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. attahatasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<66> chaá¹-á¹-he __kenassubbhÄ• hato_ti kena abbhÄ• hato. su-kÄ• ro nipÄ• tamattaá¹ƒ. icchÄ• ya Ä• ditto. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

7-9. uá¸• á¸• itasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<67> sattame \Be I 90/ \Ee I 96/ __taá¹‡hÄ• ya uá¸• á¸• ito_ti taá¹‡hÄ• ya ullaá¹…ghito. cal taá¹‡hÄ• rajjunÄ• Ä• vunitvÄ• rÅ«panÄ• gadante uá¸• á¸• itaá¹ƒ, sotÄ• dÄ«ni saddÄ• dÄ« loko. __maccunÄ• pihito_ti anantare attabhÄ• ve kataá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ na dÅ«raá¹ƒ ekacittan mÄ• raá¹‡antikavedanÄ• ya pabbatena viya otthaá¹-attÄ• sattÄ• taá¹ƒ na bujjhantÄ«ti ``ma ti vuttaá¹ƒ. sattamaá¹ƒ.

<68> aá¹-á¹-hame sveva paÃ±ho devatÄ• ya heá¹-á¹-hupariyÄ• yavasena pucchito. aá¹-á¹-

<69> navame \Ne I 87/ sabbaá¹ƒ uttÄ• nameva. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. lokasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<70> dasame __kismiá¹ƒ loko samuppanno_ti kismiá¹ƒ uppanne loko uppannoti pucchati. _ ajjhattikesu Ä• yatanesu uppannesu uppannoti vuccati. __chasu kubbatÄ«_ti tesuyeva chas __upÄ• dÄ• yÄ• _ti tÄ• niyeva ca upÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• gamma paá¹-icca pavattati. __vihaÃ±Ã±a vihaÃ±Ã±ati pÄ«á¸·iyati. iti ajjhattikÄ• yatanavasena ayaá¹ƒ paÃ±ho Ä• gato, ajjhattikabÄ• h Ä• harituá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-ati. chasu hi ajjhattikÄ• yatanesu uppannesu ayaá¹ƒ uppanno nÄ• ma h santhavaá¹ƒ karoti, channaá¹ƒ ajjhattikÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• ya chasu bÄ• hiresu vihaÃ±Ã±atÄ addhavaggo sattamo.

8. chetvÄ• vaggo

1. chetvÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<71> chetvÄ• vaggassa \Ee I 97/ paá¹-hame __chetvÄ• _ti vadhitvÄ• . __sukhaá¹ƒ setÄ«_t aparidayhamÄ• nattÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ sayati. __na socatÄ«_ti kodhavinÄ• sena vinaá¹-á¹-hadom __visamÅ«lassÄ• _ti dukkhavipÄ• kassa \Be I 91/. __madhuraggassÄ• _ti kuddhassa paá¹-paccakkositvÄ• , pahaá¹-assa ca paá¹-ipaharitvÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ uppajjati, taá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya ma imasmiá¹ƒ hi á¹-hÄ• ne pariyosÄ• naá¹ƒ agganti vuttaá¹ƒ. __ariyÄ• _ti buddhÄ• dayo. paá¹-

2. rathasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<72> dutiye paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati etenÄ• ti __paÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ. dhajo rathassÄ• _ti mahantasm dÅ«ratova \Ne I 88/ dhajaá¹ƒ disvÄ• ``asukaraÃ±Ã±o nÄ• ma ayaá¹ƒ rathoâ€™â€™ ti ratho vuttaá¹ƒ ``dhajo rathassa paÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti. __aggi_pi dÅ«ratova dhÅ«mena paÃ coá¸·araá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ paá¹‡á¸• uraá¹-á¹-hanti evaá¹ƒ __raá¹-á¹-ha_mpi raÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±Ä• dhÄ«tÄ• pi pana __itthÄ«_ ``asukassa nÄ• ma bhariyÄ• â€™â€™ ti bhattÄ• raá¹ƒ patvÄ• va __dhÅ«mo paÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡amaggino_tiÄ• di vuttaá¹ƒ. dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. vittasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<73> tatiye __saddhÄ«dha vitta_nti yasmÄ• saddho saddhÄ• ya muttamaá¹‡iÄ• dÄ«nipi v kulasampadÄ• , cha kÄ• masaggÄ• ni, nava brahmaloke patvÄ• pariyosÄ• ne amatamahÄ tasmÄ• maá¹‡imuttÄ• dÄ«hi vittehi saddhÄ• vittameva seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ. __dhammo_ti dasaku __sukhamÄ• vahatÄ«_ti sabbampi sÄ• savÄ• nÄ• savaá¹ƒ asaá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hasukhaá¹ƒ Ä• va 98/ lokasmiá¹ƒ loá¹‡ambilÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ sabbarasÄ• naá¹ƒ saccameva madhurataraá¹ƒ. sacc sÄ«ghavegaá¹ƒ nadimpi nivattenti, visampi nimmaddenti, aggimpi paá¹-ibÄ• hanti, devampi taá¹ƒ sabbarasÄ• naá¹ƒ madhurataranti vuttaá¹ƒ. __paÃ±Ã±Ä• jÄ«viá¹ƒ jÄ«vitamÄ• hu seá¹ paÃ±Ã±Ä• jÄ«vÄ« gahaá¹-á¹-ho samÄ• no paÃ±casu sÄ«lesu patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya salÄ• kabha paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya jÄ«vati, pabbajito vÄ• pana dhammena uppanne paccaye ``idamatthaâ€™â€ paribhuÃ±janto kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ• ya vipassanaá¹ƒ paá¹-á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyapha jÄ«vati, taá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• jÄ«viá¹ƒ puggalaá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ jÄ«vatÄ«ti Ä• hu. tati

4. vuá¹-á¹-hisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<74> catutthe \Be I 92/ __bÄ«ja_nti uppatantÄ• naá¹ƒ sattavidhaá¹ƒ dhaÃ±Ã±abÄ«jaá¹ƒ se uggate janapado khemo hoti subhikkho. __nipatata_nti nipatantÄ• naá¹ƒ meghavuá¹-á¹-hi s meghavuá¹-á¹-hiyaÃ±hi sati vividhÄ• ni sassÄ• ni uppajjanti, janapadÄ• phÄ«tÄ• honti khe __pavajamÄ• nÄ• na_nti jaá¹…gamÄ• naá¹ƒ padasÄ• caramÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ gÄ• vo seá¹-á¹-gorase paribhuÃ±jamÄ• nÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ viharanti. __pavadata_nti rÄ• jakulamajjhÄ• dÄ«su v hi mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«naá¹ƒ anatthÄ• vahaá¹ƒ na vadati.

__vijjÄ• _ \Ne I 89/ __uppatataá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-hÄ• _ti purimapaÃ±he kira sutvÄ• samÄ«pe á¹-``devate, kasmÄ• tvaá¹ƒ etaá¹ƒ paÃ±haá¹ƒ dasabalaá¹ƒ pucchasi? ahaá¹ƒ te kathessÄ• m khantiyÄ• laddhiyÄ• paÃ±haá¹ƒ kathesi. atha naá¹ƒ itarÄ• devatÄ• Ä• ha --- ``yÄ• va pad

yÄ• va pagabbhÄ• mukharÄ• , ahaá¹ƒ buddhaá¹ƒ bhagavantaá¹ƒ pucchÄ• mi. tvaá¹ƒ mayh nivattetvÄ• tadeva paÃ±haá¹ƒ dasabalaá¹ƒ pucchi. athassÄ• satthÄ• vissajjento __vijjÄ• tattha __vijjÄ• _ti catumaggavijjÄ• . sÄ• hi uppatamÄ• nÄ• sabbÄ• kusaladhamme samugg seá¹-á¹-hÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuttÄ• . __avijjÄ• _ti vaá¹-á¹-amÅ«lakamahÄ• avijjÄ• . sÄ• hi nipata varÄ• . __pavajamÄ• nÄ• na_nti padasÄ• caramÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ jaá¹…gamÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ee I 99/saá¹…gho varo. taÃ±hi tattha tattha disvÄ• pasannacittÄ• sattÄ• sotthiá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡anti.
putto vÄ• hotu aÃ±Ã±o vÄ• , yesaá¹ƒ kesaÃ±ci vadamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ buddho varo. tassa hi anekasatasahassÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• á¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ bandhanamokkho hotÄ«ti. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. bhÄ«tÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<75> paÃ±came __kiá¹ƒsÅ«dha bhÄ«tÄ• _ti kiá¹ƒ bhÄ«tÄ• ? __maggo canekÄ• yatanappa aá¹-á¹-hatiá¹ƒsÄ• rammaá¹‡avasena anekehi kÄ• raá¹‡ehi kathito. evaá¹ƒ sante kissa bhÄ« dvÄ• saá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hiyo aggahesÄ«ti vadati. __bhÅ«ripaÃ±Ã±Ä• _ti bahupaÃ±Ã±a ussa na bhÄ• ye_ti imasmÄ• lokÄ• paraá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ gacchanto na bhÄ• yeyya. __paá¹‡idhÄ• yÄ __bahvannapÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be I 93/ gharamÄ• vasanto_ti anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikÄ• dayo viya bahv __saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gÄ«_ti accharÄ• ya gahitampi nakhena phÄ• letvÄ• parassa datvÄ• va bhu vuttatthameva.

idÄ• ni gÄ• thÄ• ya aá¹…gÄ• ni uddharitvÄ• dassetabbÄ• ni --- ``vÄ• caâ€™â€™ nti hi imi vacÄ«sucaritÄ• ni gahitÄ• ni, ``manenÄ• â€™â€™ tipadena tÄ«á¹‡i manosucaritÄ• ni, ``kÄ• tÄ«á¹‡i kÄ• yasucaritÄ• ni. iti ime dasa kusalakammapathÄ• pubbasuddhiaá¹…gaá¹ƒ nÄ• n gharamÄ• vasanto_ti iminÄ• yaÃ±Ã±aupakkharo gahito. __saddho_ti ekamaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, __n __saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gÄ«_ti ekaá¹ƒ, __vadaÃ±Ã±Å«_ti ekaá¹ƒ. iti imÄ• ni cattÄ• ri aá¹…gÄ• ni sa á¹-hito catÅ«sÅ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha.

aparopi \Ne I 90/ pariyÄ• yo --- vÄ• cantiÄ• dÄ«ni tÄ«á¹‡i aá¹…gÄ• ni, bahvannapÄ• nanti gahito, saddho mudÅ« saá¹ƒvibhÄ• gÄ« vadaÃ±Ã±Å«ti ekaá¹ƒ aá¹…gaá¹ƒ. aparo dukanayo manaÃ±cÄ• â€™â€™ ti idamekaá¹ƒ aá¹…gaá¹ƒ, ``kÄ• yena pÄ• pÄ• ni akubbamÄ• no, bah gharamÄ• vasantoâ€™â€™ ti ekaá¹ƒ, ``saddho mudÅ«â€™â€™ ti ekaá¹ƒ, ``saá¹ƒvibhÄ• g etesu catÅ«su dhammesu á¹-hito dhamme á¹-hito nÄ• ma hoti. so ito paralokaá¹ƒ gacchanto
paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. najÄ«ratisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<76> chaá¹-á¹-he \Ee I 100/ __nÄ• magottaá¹ƒ na jÄ«ratÄ«_ti atÄ«tabuddhÄ• naá¹ƒ yÄ• va kathiyati, tasmÄ• na jÄ«ratÄ«ti vuccati. porÄ• á¹‡Ä• pana ``addhÄ• ne gacchante na paÃ± jÄ«raá¹‡asabhÄ• vo pana na hotiyevÄ• â€™â€™ ti vadanti. __Ä• lasya_nti Ä• lasiyaá¹ƒ, ye á¹-hitova, nisinnaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne nisinnova hoti, telepi uttarante á¹-hitiá¹ƒ na karoti. __pamÄ• d kilesavasena vÄ• pamÄ• do. __anuá¹-á¹-hÄ• na_nti kammasamaye kammakaraá¹‡avÄ«riy sÄ«lasaÃ±Ã±amÄ• bhÄ• vo vissaá¹-á¹-hÄ• cÄ• ratÄ• . __niddÄ• _ti soppabahulatÄ• . tÄ• ya nisinnopi niddÄ• yati, pageva nipanno. __tandÄ«_ti aticchÄ• tÄ• divasena Ä• gantukÄ• lasiy tÄ• ni cha chiddÄ• ni vivarÄ• ni. __sabbaso_ti \Be I 94/ sabbÄ• kÄ• rena. __ta_nti nipÄ• tan vajjeyya jaheyya. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

7. issariyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<77> sattame __satthamala_nti malaggahitasatthaá¹ƒ. __kiá¹ƒ su harantaá¹ƒ vÄ• rentÄ«_t nisedhenti. __vaso_ti Ä• á¹‡Ä• pavattanaá¹ƒ. __itthÄ«_ti avissajjanÄ«yabhaá¹‡á¸• attÄ• ``i bhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• namuttamaá¹ƒ, varabhaá¹‡á¸• aâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha. atha vÄ• sabbepi bodhis mÄ• tukucchiyaá¹ƒyeva nibbattantÄ«ti ``itthÄ« bhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• namuttamaâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha.
malaggahitasatthasadiso, paÃ±Ã±Ä• satthassa vÄ• malanti satthamalaá¹ƒ. __abbuda_nti v lokasmiá¹ƒ vinÄ• sakÄ• ti attho. __haranto_ti salÄ• kabhattÄ• dÄ«ni gahetvÄ• gacchanto. s paá¹-á¹-hapitakÄ• leyeva manussehi pariccattÄ• ni. tesaá¹ƒ tÄ• ni haranto samaá¹‡o piyo h puÃ±Ã±ahÄ• niá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya vippaá¹-isÄ• rino honti. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. kÄ• masuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<78> aá¹-á¹-hame \Ne I 91/ \Ee I 101/ __attÄ• naá¹ƒ na dade_ti parassa dÄ• saá¹ƒ katvÄ• á¹-hapetvÄ• sabbabodhisatteti vuttaá¹ƒ. __na pariccaje_ti sÄ«habyagghÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ na pa sabbabodhisatte á¹-hapetvÄ• yevÄ• ti vuttaá¹ƒ. __kalyÄ• á¹‡a_nti saá¹‡haá¹ƒ mudukaá¹ƒ. _
vÄ• caá¹ƒ. aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

9. pÄ• theyyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<79> navame __saddhÄ• bandhati pÄ• theyya_nti saddhaá¹ƒ uppÄ• detvÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ de uposathakammaá¹ƒ karoti, tenetaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. __sirÄ«_ti issariyaá¹ƒ. __Ä• sayo_ti vasanaá issariye hi abhimukhÄ«bhÅ«te thalatopi jalatopi bhogÄ• Ä• gacchantiyeva. tenetaá¹ƒ vuttaá parikaá¸• á¸• hati. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. pajjotasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<80> dasame __pajjoto_ti padÄ«po viya hoti. __jÄ• garo_ti jÄ• garabrÄ• hmaá¹‡o viya hoti sajÄ«vÄ• na_nti kammena saha jÄ«vantÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be I 95/ gÄ• vova kamme kammasahÄ• y gomaá¹‡á¸• alehi saddhiá¹ƒ kasikammÄ• dÄ«ni nipphajjanti. __sÄ«tassa iriyÄ• patho_ti sÄ« iriyÄ• patho jÄ«vitavutti. __sÄ«ta_nti naá¹…galaá¹ƒ. yassa hi naá¹…galehi khettaá¹ƒ appam kaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ na hoti, so kathaá¹ƒ jÄ«vissatÄ«ti vadati. dasamaá¹ƒ.

11. araá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<81> ekÄ• dasame __araá¹‡Ä• _ti nikkilesÄ• . __vusita_nti vusitavÄ• so. __bhojissiya_nti a __samaá¹‡Ä• _ti khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savasamaá¹‡Ä• . te hi ekantena araá¹‡Ä• nÄ• ma. __vusitaá¹ ariyamaggavÄ• so \Ee I 102/ na nassati. __parijÄ• nantÄ«_ti puthujjanakalyÄ• á¹‡akato paá lokiyalokuttarÄ• ya pariÃ±Ã±Ä• ya parijÄ• nanti. __bhojissiya_nti khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savasamaá¹‡Ä bhujissabhÄ• vo nÄ• ma. __vandantÄ«_ti pabbajitadivasato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya vandanti. __pat patiá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ \Ne I 92/. __samaá¹‡Ä«dhÄ• _ti samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ idha. __jÄ• tihÄ«na_nti api c pabbajitaá¹ƒ. __khattiyÄ• _ti na kevalaá¹ƒ khattiyÄ• va, devÄ• pi sÄ«lasampannaá¹ƒ samaá ekÄ• dasamaá¹ƒ.

chetvÄ• vaggo aá¹-á¹-hamo.

iti sÄ• ratthappakÄ• siniyÄ• saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• ya-aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya devatÄ• saá¹ƒyuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

2. devaputtasaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ

1. paá¹-hamavaggo

1. paá¹-hamakassapasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<82> devaputtasaá¹ƒyuttassa \Ne I 93/ \Ee I 103/ \Be I 96/ paá¹-hame __devaputto_ti devÄ nibbattÄ• purisÄ• devaputtÄ• nÄ• ma, itthiyo devadhÄ«taro nÄ• ma honti. nÄ• mavasena devatÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuccati, pÄ• kaá¹-o ``itthannÄ• mo devaputtoâ€™â€™ ti. tasmÄ• heá¹ devatÄ• â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• idha ``devaputtoâ€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ. __anusÄ• sa_nti anusiá¹-devaputto bhagavatÄ• sambodhito sattame vasse yamakapÄ• á¹-ihÄ• riyaá¹ƒ katvÄ• tidas abhidhammaá¹ƒ desentena jhÄ• navibhaá¹…ge --- ``bhikkhÅ«ti samaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya bhikkhu, pa ti (Vibh 510). evaá¹ƒ bhikkhuniddesaá¹ƒ kathiyamÄ• naá¹ƒ assosi. ``evaá¹ƒ vitakketha, mÄ•
evaá¹ƒ manasikarotha, mÄ• evaá¹ƒ manasÄ• kattha. idaá¹ƒ pajahatha, idaá¹ƒ upasampajja III 19). evarÅ«paá¹ƒ pana bhikkhuovÄ• daá¹ƒ bhikkhuanusÄ• sanaá¹ƒ na assosi. so taá¹ƒ s bhagavÄ• pakÄ• sesi, no ca bhikkhuno anusÄ• saâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha.

__tena hÄ«_ti yasmÄ• mayÄ• bhikkhuno anusiá¹-á¹-hi na pakÄ• sitÄ• ti vadasi, tasmÄ• . _
paá¹-ibhÄ• tÅ«_ti tuyhevesÄ• anusiá¹-á¹-hipakÄ• sanÄ• upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• tÅ«ti. yo hi paÃ±haá

ca sakkoti sabbaÃ±Ã±utaÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena saddhiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsanditvÄ• kathetuá¹ƒ. yo vÄ• na pana kathetuá¹ƒ. yo vÄ• \Ee I 104/ neva kathetukÄ• mo hoti, kathetuá¹ƒ na ca sakkoti. sabl bhagavÄ• paÃ±haá¹ƒ bhÄ• raá¹ƒ na karoti. ayaá¹ƒ pana devaputto kathetukÄ• mo ceva, sa tasseva bhÄ• raá¹ƒ karonto bhagavÄ• evamÄ• ha. sopi paÃ±haá¹ƒ kathesi.

tattha \Ne I 94/ __subhÄ• sitassa sikkhethÄ• _ti subhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ sikkheyya, catusaccanissita dasakathÄ• vatthunissitaá¹ƒ sattatiá¹ƒsabodhipakkhiyanissitaá¹ƒ catubbidhaá¹ƒ vacÄ«sucar __samaá¹‡Å«pÄ• sanassa cÄ• _ti samaá¹‡ehi upÄ• sitabbaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡Å«pÄ• sanaá¹ƒ \Be aá¹-á¹-hatiá¹ƒsabhedaá¹ƒ kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ, tampi sikkheyya bhÄ• veyyÄ• ti attho. ba bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ upÄ• sanampi samaá¹‡Å«pÄ• sanaá¹ƒ. tampi `kiá¹ƒ, bhante, kusalaâ€™â€™ paÃ±Ã±Ä• vuddhatthaá¹ƒ sikkheyya. __cittavÅ«pasamassa cÄ• _ti aá¹-á¹-hasamÄ• pattivas sikkheyya. iti devaputtena tisso sikkhÄ• kathitÄ• honti. purimapadena hi adhisÄ«lasikkhÄ• dutiyapadena adhipaÃ±Ã±Ä• sikkhÄ• , cittavÅ«pasamena adhicittasikkhÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ imÄ• ya sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sitameva hoti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. dutiyakassapasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<83> dutiye __jhÄ• yÄ«_ti dvÄ«hi jhÄ• nehi jhÄ• yÄ«. __vimuttacitto_ti kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• na __hadayassÄ• nupatti_nti arahattaá¹ƒ. __lokassÄ• _ti saá¹…khÄ• ralokassa. __anissito_ti t anissito, taá¹‡hÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyo vÄ• anissito. __tadÄ• nisaá¹ƒso_ti arahattÄ• nisaá¹ƒso. idaá arahattÄ• nisaá¹ƒso bhikkhu arahattaá¹ƒ patthento jhÄ• yÄ« bhaveyya, suvimuttacitto bhave udayabbayaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• anissito bhaveyya. tantidhammo pana imasmiá¹ƒ sÄ• sane pubba

3-4. mÄ• ghasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<84> tatiye __mÄ• gho_ti sakkassetaá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ. sveva vattena aÃ±Ã±e abhibhavitvÄ• __vatrabhÅ«, _ vatranÄ• makaá¹ƒ vÄ• asuraá¹ƒ abhibhavatÄ«ti vatrabhÅ«. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

<85> catutthaá¹ƒ \Ee I 105/ vuttatthameva. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. dÄ• malisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<86> paÃ±came __na tenÄ• sÄ«sate bhava_nti tena kÄ• raá¹‡ena yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±ci bhavaá¹ƒ n nÄ• mesa devaputto, khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa kiccavosÄ• naá¹ƒ natthi. khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savena hi Ä• 95/ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ \Be I 98/, aparabhÄ• ge mayÄ• arahattaá¹ƒ pattanti mÄ• tuá¹‡hÄ« vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ daá¸·haá¹ƒ karotu parakkamatÅ«ti cintetvÄ• evamÄ• ha.

atha bhagavÄ• ``ayaá¹ƒ devaputto khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa kiccavosÄ• naá¹ƒ akathento mama katheti, kiccavosÄ• namassa kathessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• __natthi kicca_ntiÄ• dim ayaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• asaá¹ƒkiá¹‡á¹‡Ä• . bhagavatÄ• hi aÃ±Ã±attha vÄ«riyassa doso nÄ• ma d imaá¹ƒ devaputtaá¹ƒ paá¹-ibÄ• hitvÄ• ``khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savena pubbabhÄ• ge Ä• savakkhayatt kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ• ya vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ, aparabhÄ• ge sace icchati, karotu, n yathÄ• sukhaá¹ƒ viharatÅ«â€™â€™ ti khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa kiccavosÄ• nadassanatthaá¹ƒ e patiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. kÄ• madasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<87> chaá¹-á¹-he __dukkara_nti ayaá¹ƒ kira devaputto pubbayogÄ• vacaro bahalakilesatÄ vikkhambhento samaá¹‡adhammaá¹ƒ katvÄ• pubbÅ«panissayamandatÄ• ya ariyabhÅ«mi devaloke nibbatto. so ``tathÄ• gatassa santikaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• dukkarabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• rocessÄ evamÄ• ha. tattha __dukkara_nti dasapi vassÄ• ni ... pe ... saá¹-á¹-hipi yadetaá¹ƒ ekantapa samaá¹‡adhammassa karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ nÄ• ma, taá¹ƒ dukkaraá¹ƒ. __sekhÄ• _ti satta sekhÄ• .
samÄ• hitÄ• samupetÄ• . __á¹-hitattÄ• _ti patiá¹-á¹-hitasabhÄ• vÄ• . evaá¹ƒ pucchitapaÃ± uparipaÃ±hasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• panatthaá¹ƒ __anagÄ• riyupetassÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha \Ee __anagÄ• riyupetassÄ• _ti anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ niggehabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ upetassa. sattabhÅ«mikepi vuá¸• á¸• hatarena Ä• gantvÄ• ``mayhaá¹ƒ idaá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti vutte pattac nikkhamateva. tasmÄ• ``anagÄ• riyupetoâ€™â€™ ti vuccati. __tuá¹-á¹-hÄ«_ti catupaccaya cittavÅ«pasamabhÄ• vanÄ• ya.

__te chetvÄ• maccuno jÄ• la_nti ye rattindivaá¹ƒ indriyÅ«pasame ratÄ• , te dussamÄ• dah samÄ• dahanti. ye ca samÄ• hitacittÄ• , te catupaccayasantosaá¹ƒ pÅ«rentÄ• na kilamanti sÄ«laá¹ƒ pÅ«rentÄ• na kilamanti \Be I 99/. ye sÄ«le patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• satta sekhÄ• , te ariyÄ jÄ• lasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ kilesajÄ• laá¹ƒ chinditvÄ• gacchanti. __duggamo_ti ``saccametaá¹ƒ indriyÅ«pasame \Ne I 96/ ratÄ• , te dussamÄ• dahaá¹ƒ samÄ• dahanti ... pe ... ye sÄ«le pat maccuno jÄ• laá¹ƒ chinditvÄ• gacchantiâ€™â€™. kiá¹ƒ na gacchissanti? ayaá¹ƒ pana dug maggoti Ä• ha. tattha kiÃ±cÄ• pi ariyamaggo neva duggamo na visamo, pubbabhÄ• gapaá¹ parissayÄ• honti. tasmÄ• evaá¹ƒ vutto. __avaá¹ƒsirÄ• _ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡asirena adhosirÄ• hutv ariyamaggaá¹ƒ Ä• rohituá¹ƒ asamatthatÄ• yeva ca te anariyamagge papatantÄ«ti ca vuccan maggo_ti sveva maggo ariyÄ• naá¹ƒ samo hoti. __visame samÄ• _ti visamepi sattakÄ• ye s

7. paÃ±cÄ• lacaá¹‡á¸• asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<88> sattame __sambÄ• dhe_ti nÄ«varaá¹‡asambÄ• dhaá¹ƒ kÄ• maguá¹‡asambÄ• dhanti nÄ«varaá¹‡asambÄ• dhaá¹ƒ adhippetaá¹ƒ. __okÄ• sa_nti jhÄ• nassetaá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ. __pa paá¹-ilÄ«naseá¹-á¹-ho. paá¹-ilÄ«no nÄ• ma pahÄ«namÄ• no vuccati. yathÄ• ha --- ``kathaÃ paá¹-ilÄ«no hoti \Ee I 107/. idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhuno asmimÄ• no pahÄ«no hoti ucchinna anabhÄ• vaá¹ƒkato Ä• yatiá¹ƒ anuppÄ• dadhammoâ€™â€™ ti (AN I 4.38; Nidd I 87). __pac paá¹-ilabhiá¹ƒsu. __sammÄ• te_ti ye nibbÄ• napattiyÄ• satiá¹ƒ paá¹-ilabhiá¹ƒsu, te lokuttar susamÄ• hitÄ• ti missakajjhÄ• naá¹ƒ kathitaá¹ƒ. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. tÄ• yanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<89> aá¹-á¹-hame __purÄ• á¹‡atitthakaro_ti pubbe titthakaro. ettha ca titthaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma dvÄ diá¹-á¹-hiyo, titthakaro nÄ• ma tÄ• saá¹ƒ uppÄ• dako satthÄ• . seyyathidaá¹ƒ nando, vaccho purÄ• á¹‡Ä• dayo pana titthiyÄ• nÄ• ma. ayaá¹ƒ pana diá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ uppÄ• detvÄ• kathaá¹ƒ kammavÄ• ditÄ• ya. esa kira uposathabhattÄ• dÄ«ni adÄ• si, anÄ• thÄ• naá¹ƒ vattaá¹ƒ paá akÄ• si, pokkharaá¹‡iyo khaá¹‡Ä• pesi, aÃ±Ã±ampi bahuá¹ƒ kalyÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ akÄ• si. so tas nibbatto, sÄ• sanassa \Be I 100/ pana niyyÄ• nikabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• ti. so tathÄ• gatassa s sÄ• sanÄ• nucchavikÄ• vÄ«riyappaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttÄ• gÄ• thÄ• vakkhÄ• mÄ«ti Ä• gantvÄ• _

tattha \Ne I 97/ __chindÄ• _ti aniyamitaÄ• á¹‡atti. __sota_nti taá¹‡hÄ• sotaá¹ƒ. __parakkam vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ katvÄ• . __kÄ• me_ti kilesakÄ• mepi vatthukÄ• mepi. __panudÄ• _ti nÄ«hara. _
idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti --- kÄ• me ajahitvÄ• muni jhÄ• naá¹ƒ na upapajjati, na paá¹-ilabhatÄ«ti kayirÄ• thena_nti yadi vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ kareyya, kareyyÄ• tha, taá¹ƒ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ na osakkeyya. __
parakkame_ti daá¸·haá¹ƒ enaá¹ƒ kareyya. __sithilo hi paribbÄ• jo_ti sithilagahitÄ• pabbajjÄ raja_nti atirekaá¹ƒ \Ee I 108/ upari kilesarajaá¹ƒ Ä• kirati. __akataá¹ƒ dukkaá¹-aá¹ƒ seyyo_ti akatameva seyyo. __yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±cÄ«_ti na kevalaá¹ƒ dukkaá¹-aá¹ƒ katvÄ• katasÄ• maÃ±Ã± kiÃ±ci sithilaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ evarÅ«pameva hoti. __saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-ha_nti dukkarakÄ• rikavataá¹ƒ sÄ• sane paccayahetu samÄ• dinnadhutaá¹…gavataá¹ƒ saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-hameva. __saá¹…ka saritaá¹ƒ, ``idampi iminÄ• kataá¹ƒ bhavissati, idampi iminÄ• â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ Ä• saá¹…k
__Ä• dibrahmacariyikÄ• _ti maggabrahmacariyassa Ä• dibhÅ«tÄ• pubbapadhÄ• nabhÅ«tÄ

9. candimasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<90> navame __candimÄ• _ti candavimÄ• navÄ• sÄ« devaputto. __sabbadhÄ«_ti sabbesu __lokÄ• nukampakÄ• _ti tuyhampi etassapi tÄ• disÄ• eva. __santaramÄ• novÄ• _ti turito vi atÄ«tatthe vattamÄ• navacanaá¹ƒ. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. sÅ«riyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<91> dasame __sÅ«riyo_ti sÅ«riyavimÄ• navÄ• sÄ« devaputto. __andhakÄ• re_ti cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡uppattinivÄ• raá¹‡ena andhabhÄ• vakaraá¹‡e. virocatÄ«ti __verocano.
maá¹‡á¸• alasaá¹‡á¹-hÄ• no. __mÄ• , rÄ• hu, gilÄ« caramantalikkhe_ti antalikkhe caraá¹ƒ s gilÄ«ti vadati. kiá¹ƒ panesa taá¹ƒ gilatÄ«ti \Be I 101/? Ä• ma, gilati. rÄ• hussa hi attabhÄ• vo uccattanena aá¹-á¹-hayojanasatÄ• dhikÄ• ni cattÄ• ri yojanasahassÄ• ni, bÄ• hantaramassa bahalattena cha yojanasatÄ• ni, sÄ«saá¹ƒ nava yojanasataá¹ƒ, nalÄ• á¹-aá¹ƒ tiyojanasataá paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sayojanaá¹ƒ, mukhaá¹ƒ dviyojanasataá¹ƒ, ghÄ• naá¹ƒ tiyojanasataá¹ƒ, mukhÄ• tiyojanasatagambhÄ«raá¹ƒ hatthatalapÄ• datalÄ• ni puthulato dviyojanasatÄ• ni \Ee I 109/.

paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sa yojanÄ• ni. so candimasÅ«riye virocamÄ• ne disvÄ• issÄ• pakato \Ne I 98/ t otaritvÄ• mukhaá¹ƒ vivaritvÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hati. candavimÄ• naá¹ƒ sÅ«riyavimÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• tiyo pakkhittaá¹ƒ viya hoti. vimÄ• ne adhivatthÄ• devatÄ• maraá¹‡abhayatajjitÄ• ekappahÄ• re vimÄ• naá¹ƒ kadÄ• ci hatthena chÄ• deti, kadÄ• ci hanukassa heá¹-á¹-hÄ• pakkhipati, kadÄ kadÄ• ci avagaá¹‡á¸• akÄ• rakaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±janto viya kapolantare á¹-hapeti. vegaá¹ƒ pana vÄ vÄ• ressÄ• mÄ«ti gaá¹‡á¸• akaá¹ƒ katvÄ• tiá¹-á¹-heyya, matthakaá¹ƒ tassa bhinditvÄ• nikk vÄ• naá¹ƒ onameyya. tasmÄ• vimÄ• nena saheva gacchati. __pajaá¹ƒ mama_nti candima mahÄ• samayasuttakathanadivase sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ pattÄ• . tena bhagavÄ• ``pajaá¹ƒ m mama esoti attho. dasamaá¹ƒ.

paá¹-hamo vaggo.

2. anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikavaggo

1. candimasasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<92> dutiyavaggassa paá¹-hame __kacchevÄ• _ti kacche viya. __kacche_ti pabbatakacche nipakÄ• _ti ekaggacittÄ• ceva paÃ±Ã±Ä• nepakkena ca samannÄ• gatÄ• . __satÄ• _ti sati
--- ye jhÄ• nÄ• ni labhitvÄ• \Be I 102/ ekodÄ« nipakÄ• satÄ• viharanti, te amakase pabbat vÄ• magÄ• viya sotthiá¹ƒ gamissantÄ«ti. __pÄ• ra_nti nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ. __ambujo_ti maccho.
kilesaÃ±jahÄ• . yepi jhÄ• nÄ• ni labhitvÄ• appamattÄ• kilese jahanti, te suttajÄ• laá¹ƒ bhin nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ gamissantÄ«ti vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. veá¹‡á¸• usuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<93> dutiye \Ee I 110/ __veá¹‡á¸• Å«_ti tassa devaputtassa nÄ• maá¹ƒ. __payirupÄ• siyÄ• __anusikkhare_ti \Ne I 99/ sikkhanti. __siá¹-á¹-hipade_ti anusiá¹-á¹-hipade. __kÄ• le te appa te appamÄ• daá¹ƒ karontÄ• . dutiyaá¹ƒ.

3. dÄ«ghalaá¹-á¹-hisuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<94> tatiye __dÄ«ghalaá¹-á¹-hÄ«_ti devaloke sabbe samappamÄ• á¹‡Ä• tigÄ• vutikÄ• va dÄ«ghattabhÄ• vatÄ• ya evaá¹ƒnÄ• maá¹ƒ ahosi. so puÃ±Ã±Ä• ni katvÄ• devaloke nibbatt tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. nandanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<95> catutthe __gotamÄ• _ti bhagavantaá¹ƒ gottena Ä• lapati. __anÄ• vaá¹-a_nti tathÄ• ga sabbaÃ±Ã±utaÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pesentassa rukkho vÄ• pabbato vÄ• Ä• varituá¹ƒ samattho ``anÄ• vaá¹-aâ€™â€™ nti. iti tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ thometvÄ• devaloke abhisaá¹…khatapaÃ±haá __kathaá¹ƒvidha_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __dukkhamaticca iriyatÄ«_ti dukkhaá¹ƒ atikkamitvÄ __sÄ«lavÄ• _ti lokiyalokuttarena sÄ«lena samannÄ• gato khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savo. __paÃ±Ã±Ä• _d __pÅ«jayantÄ«_ti gandhapupphÄ• dÄ«hi pÅ«jenti. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5-6. candanasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<96> paÃ±came __appatiá¹-á¹-he anÄ• lambe_ti heá¹-á¹-hÄ• apatiá¹-á¹-he upari anÄ• lam appanÄ• yapi upacÄ• renapi suá¹-á¹-hu samÄ• hito \Be I 103/. __pahitatto_ti pesitatto.
__nandÄ«rÄ• gaparikkhÄ«á¹‡o_ti parikkhÄ«á¹‡anandÄ«rÄ• go. nandÄ«rÄ• go nÄ• ma tayo imÄ• ya gÄ• thÄ• ya kÄ• masaÃ±Ã±Ä• gahaá¹‡ena paÃ±corambhÄ• giyasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni, n uddhambhÄ• giyasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni, nandÄ«rÄ• gena tayo kammÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• rÄ• \Ee I saá¹ƒyojanÄ• ni tayo ca kammÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• rÄ• pahÄ«nÄ• , so gambhÄ«re mahoghe kÄ• mabhavo, rÅ«pasaá¹ƒyojanena rÅ«pabhavo gahito, tesaá¹ƒ gahaá¹‡ena arÅ«pabhavo nandÄ«rÄ• gena tayo kammÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• rÄ• gahitÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ yassa tÄ«su bhavesu t gambhÄ«re na sÄ«datÄ«tipi dasseti. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

<97> chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ vuttatthameva. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

7. subrahmasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<98> sattame __subrahmÄ• _ti so kira devaputto accharÄ• saá¹…ghaparivuto nandanakÄ« pÄ• ricchattakamÅ«le paÃ±Ã±attÄ• sane nisÄ«di. taá¹ƒ paÃ±casatÄ• devadhÄ«taro parivÄ paÃ±casatÄ• rukkhaá¹ƒ abhiruá¸·hÄ• . nanu ca devatÄ• naá¹ƒ cittavasena yojanasatikopi r Ä• gacchati, kasmÄ• tÄ• abhiruá¸·hÄ• ti. khiá¸• á¸• Ä• pasutatÄ• ya. abhiruyha pana madh gÄ• yitvÄ• pupphÄ• ni pÄ• tenti, tÄ• ni gahetvÄ• itarÄ• ekatovaá¹‡á¹-ikamÄ• lÄ• divasena abhiruá¸·hÄ• upacchedakakammavasena ekappahÄ• reneva kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• avÄ«cimhi anubhavanti.

atha kÄ• le gacchante devaputto ``imÄ• saá¹ƒ neva saddo suyyati, na pupphÄ• ni pÄ• tenti gatÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• vajjento niraye nibbattabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ disvÄ• piyavatthukasokena ruppa tÄ• va yathÄ• kammena gatÄ• , mayhaá¹ƒ Ä• yusaá¹…khÄ• ro kittakoâ€™â€™ ti. so --- ``sa avasesÄ• hi paÃ±casatÄ• hi saddhiá¹ƒ kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• tattheva nibbattitabbaâ€™â€™ nti ruppi. so --- ``imaá¹ƒ mayhaá¹ƒ sokaá¹ƒ sadevake loke aÃ±Ã±atra tathÄ• gatÄ• niddhamitu natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• satthu santikaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• __niccaá¹ƒ utrasta_nti gÄ• thamÄ•

tattha \Be I 104/ __ida_nti attano cittaá¹ƒ dasseti. dutiyapadaá¹ƒ purimasseva \Ee I 112/ ve __nicca_nti ca padassa devaloke nibbattakÄ• lato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• yÄ• ti attho na gahetabbo, so paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya niccanti veditabbaá¹ƒ. __anuppannesu kicchesÅ«_ti ito sattÄ• haccayena yÄ uppajjissanti, tesu. __atho uppatitesu cÄ• _ti yÄ• ni paÃ±casatÄ• naá¹ƒ accharÄ• naá¹ƒ nira diá¹-á¹-hÄ• ni, tesu cÄ• ti evaá¹ƒ imesu uppannÄ• nuppannesu dukkhesu niccaá¹ƒ mama u abbhantare á¸• ayhamÄ• no viya homi bhagavÄ• ti dasseti.

__nÄ• Ã±Ã±atra_ \Ne I 101/ __bojjhÄ• tapasÄ• _ti bojjhaá¹…gabhÄ• vanaÃ±ca tapoguá¹‡ sotthiá¹ƒ na passÄ• mÄ«ti attho. __sabbanissaggÄ• _ti nibbÄ• nato. ettha kiÃ±cÄ• pi bojjha paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ gahitÄ• , indriyasaá¹ƒvaro pacchÄ• , atthato pana indriyasaá¹ƒvarova paá¹-h indiyasaá¹ƒvare hi gahite catupÄ• risuddhisÄ«laá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ hoti. tasmiá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hito bh nissayamuttako dhutaá¹…gasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ tapoguá¹‡aá¹ƒ samÄ• dÄ• ya araÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ p bhÄ• vento saha vipassanÄ• ya bojjhaá¹…ge bhÄ• veti. tassa ariyamaggo yaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá uppajjati, so ``sabbanissaggoâ€™â€™ ti bhagavÄ• catusaccavasena desanaá¹ƒ vinivattes desanÄ• pariyosÄ• ne sotÄ• pattiphale patiá¹-á¹-hahÄ«ti. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8-10. kakudhasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<99> aá¹-á¹-hame __kakudho devaputto_ti ayaá¹ƒ kira kolanagare mahÄ• moggallÄ• natth daharakÄ• leyeva therassa santike vasanto jhÄ• naá¹ƒ nibbattetvÄ• kÄ• laá¹…kato, brahm naá¹ƒ kakudho brahmÄ• tveva saÃ±jÄ• nanti. __nandasÄ«_ti tussasi. __kiá¹ƒ laddhÄ• _ti tu manÄ• paá¹ƒ labhitvÄ• hoti, tasmÄ• evamÄ• ha. __kiá¹ƒ jÄ«yitthÄ• _ti yassa hi kiÃ±ci mar jiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti, so socati, tasmÄ• evamÄ• ha. __aratÄ« nÄ• bhikÄ«ratÄ«_ti ukkaá¹‡á¹-hit __aghajÄ• tassÄ• _ti dukkhajÄ• tassa, vaá¹-á¹-adukkhe á¹-hitassÄ• ti attho. __nandÄ«jÄ• ta __agha_nti evarÅ«passa \Ee I 113/ hi vaá¹-á¹-adukkhaá¹ƒ Ä• gatameva hoti \Be I 105/. ``du patthayatÄ«â€™â€™ ti hi vuttaá¹ƒ. iti aghajÄ• tassa nandÄ« hoti, sukhaviparia¹‡Ä• mena d nandÄ«jÄ• tassa aghaá¹ƒ hoti. aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

<100> navamaá¹ƒ vuttatthameva. navamaá¹ƒ.

<101> dasame Ä• nandattherassa anumÄ• nabuddhiyÄ• Ä• nubhÄ• vappakÄ• sanatthaá¹ dutiyo vaggo.

3. nÄ• nÄ• titthiyavaggo

1-2. sivasuttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<102> tatiyavaggassa \Ne I 102/ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ vuttatthameva. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

<103> dutiye __paá¹-ikaccevÄ• _ti paá¹-hamaá¹ƒyeva. __akkhacchinnovajhÄ• yatÄ«_ti akk balavacintanaá¹ƒ cinteti. dutiyagÄ• thÄ• ya __akkhacchinnovÄ• _ti akkhacchinno viya. dutiy

3-4. serÄ«suttÄ• divaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<104> tatiye __dÄ• yako_ti dÄ• nasÄ«lo. __dÄ• napatÄ«_ti yaá¹ƒ dÄ• naá¹ƒ demi, tassa pa na sahÄ• yo. yo hi attanÄ• madhuraá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jati, paresaá¹ƒ amadhuraá¹ƒ deti, so dÄ• nas deyyadhammassa dÄ• so hutvÄ• deti. yo yaá¹ƒ attanÄ• bhuÃ±jati, tadeva deti, so sahÄ• y attanÄ• yena tena yÄ• peti, paresaá¹ƒ madhuraá¹ƒ deti, so pati jeá¹-á¹-hako sÄ• mi hutvÄ• ahosiâ€™â€™ nti \Ee I 114/ vadati.

__catÅ«su dvÄ• resu_ti tassa kira raÃ±Ã±o sindhavaraá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sodhivÄ• karaá¹-á¹-hant ahesuá¹ƒ, nagaraá¹ƒ roruvaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma. tassa ekekasmiá¹ƒ dvÄ• re devasikaá¹ƒ satasahas vinicchayaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne satasahassaá¹ƒ. so bahuhiraÃ±Ã±asuvaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ rÄ• sibhÅ«taá¹ƒ kammassakataÃ±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppÄ• detvÄ• catÅ«su dvÄ• resu \Be I 106/ dÄ• nasÄ• lÄ• yo dvÄ• re uá¹-á¹-hitaÄ• yena dÄ• naá¹ƒ dethÄ• ti amacce á¹-hapesi. tenÄ• ha --- ``catÅ«su dv dÄ«yitthÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

__samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡akapaá¹‡addhikavanibbakayÄ• cakÄ• na_nti ettha __samaá¹‡Ä• __brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• _ti bhovÄ• dino. samitapÄ• pabÄ• hitapÄ• pe pana samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá duggatÄ• daliddamanussÄ• kÄ• á¹‡akuá¹‡iÄ• dayo. __addhikÄ• _ti pathÄ• vino. __vanibb dinnaá¹ƒ, kantaá¹ƒ, manÄ• paá¹ƒ, kÄ• lena, anavajjaá¹ƒ dinnaá¹ƒ, dadaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ pasÄ• c brahmalokaâ€™â€™ ntiÄ• dinÄ• nayena \Ne I 103/ dÄ• nassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ thomayamÄ• ``pasatamattaá¹ƒ detha, sarÄ• vamattaá¹ƒ dethÄ• â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«ni ca vatvÄ• yÄ• camA __itthÄ• gÄ• rassa dÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ«yitthÄ• _ti paá¹-hamadvÄ• rassa laddhattÄ• tattha uppajj dhanaá¹ƒ pakkhipitvÄ• raÃ±Ã±o amacce hÄ• retvÄ• attano amacce á¹-hapetvÄ• raÃ±Ã±Ä mahantataraá¹ƒ dÄ• naá¹ƒ adaá¹ƒsu. taá¹ƒ sandhÄ• yevamÄ• ha. __mama dÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹ tattha dÄ«yittha, taá¹ƒ paá¹-inivatti. sesadvÄ• resupi eseva nayo. __kocÄ«_ti katthaci. __dÄ asÄ«tivassasahassÄ• ni. ettakaá¹ƒ kira kÄ• laá¹ƒ tassa raÃ±Ã±o dÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ«yittha. tatiya <105> catutthaá¹ƒ vuttatthameva. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. jantusuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<106> paÃ±came \Ee I 115/ __kosalesu viharantÄ«_ti bhagavato santike kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• gantvÄ• viharanti. __uddhatÄ• _ti akappiye kappiyasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• ya ca kappiye akappiyasaÃ sÄ• vajjasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• ya ca sÄ• vajje anavajjasaÃ±Ã±itÄ• ya ca uddhaccapakatikÄ• hutvÄ• uggatanaá¸·Ä• , uá¹-á¹-hitatucchamÄ• nÄ• ti vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. __capalÄ• _ti pattacÄ«varamaá¹ yuttÄ• . __mukharÄ• _ti mukhakharÄ• , kharavacanÄ• ti vuttaá¹ƒ hoti. __vikiá¹‡á¹‡avÄ• cÄ• divasampi niratthakavacanapalÄ• pino. __muá¹-á¹-hassatino_ti naá¹-á¹-hassatino sativirahit ettha pamussanti. __asampajÄ• nÄ• _ti nippaÃ±Ã±Ä• . __asamÄ• hitÄ• _ti appanÄ• upacÄ caá¹‡á¸• asote \Be I 107/ baddhanÄ• vÄ• sadisÄ• . __vibbhantacittÄ• _ti anavaá¹-á¹-hitacitt panthÄ• ruá¸·habÄ• lamigasadisÄ• . __pÄ• katindriyÄ• _ti saá¹ƒvarÄ• bhÄ• vena gihikÄ• le __jantÅ«_ti evaá¹ƒnÄ• mako devaputto. __tadahuposathe_ti tasmiá¹ƒ ahu uposathe, uposa __pannarase_ti cÄ• tuddasikÄ• dipaá¹-ikkhepo. __upasaá¹…kamÄ«_ti codanatthÄ• ya upa ``ime bhikkhÅ« satthu santike kammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• nikkhantÄ• , idÄ• ni pamatt panete pÄ• á¹-iyekkaá¹ƒ nisinnaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne codiyamÄ• nÄ• kathaá¹ƒ gaá¹‡hissanti, samÄ codissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti uposathadivase tesaá¹ƒ sannipatitabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• upasaá¹ ajjhabhÄ• sÄ«_ti sabbesaá¹ƒ majjhe á¹-hatvÄ• gÄ• thÄ• abhÄ• si.

tattha \Ne I 104/ yasmÄ• guá¹‡akathÄ• ya saddhiá¹ƒ nigguá¹‡assa aguá¹‡o pÄ• kaá¹-o ho kathento __sukhajÄ«vino pure Ä• su_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __sukhajÄ«vino pure Ä• su_nti subharÄ• \Ee I 116/ ahesuá¹ƒ, uccanÄ«cakulesu sapadÄ• naá¹ƒ caritvÄ• laddhena missak adhippÄ• yena evamÄ• ha. __anicchÄ• _ti nittaá¹‡hÄ• hutvÄ• .

evaá¹ƒ porÄ• á¹‡akabhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathetvÄ• idÄ• ni tesaá¹ƒ avaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ __dupposa_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __gÄ• me gÄ• maá¹‡ikÄ• viyÄ• _ti yathÄ• gÄ• me gÄ• pÄ«á¸·etvÄ• khÄ«radadhitaá¹‡á¸• ulÄ• dÄ«ni Ä• harÄ• petvÄ• bhuÃ±janti, evaá¹ƒ tumhepi tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ jÄ«vikaá¹ƒ kappethÄ• ti adhippÄ• yena vadati. __nipajjantÄ«_ti uddesaparipu anatthikÄ• hutvÄ• sayanamhi hatthapÄ• de vissajjetvÄ• nipajjanti. __parÄ• gÄ• resÅ«_ti p kulasuá¹‡hÄ• dÄ«sÅ«ti attho. __mucchitÄ• _ti kilesamucchÄ• ya mucchitÄ• .

__ekacce_ti vattabbayuttakeyeva. __apaviddhÄ• _ti chaá¸• á¸• itakÄ• . __anÄ• thÄ• _ti apa susÄ• ne chaá¸• á¸• itÄ• kÄ• laá¹…katamanussÄ• . yathÄ• hi susÄ• ne chaá¸• á¸• itÄ• nÄ Ã±Ä• takÄ• pi nesaá¹ƒ nÄ• thakiccaá¹ƒ na \Be I 108/ karonti, na rakkhanti, na gopayanti, ev Ä• cariyupajjhÄ• yÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒ santikÄ• ovÄ• dÄ• nusÄ• saniá¹ƒ na labhantÄ«ti apaviddhÄ tatheva honti. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. rohitassasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<107> chaá¹-á¹-he __yatthÄ• _ti cakkavÄ• á¸·alokassa ekokÄ• se bhummaá¹ƒ. __na cavat aparÄ• paraá¹ƒ cutipaá¹-isandhivasena gahitaá¹ƒ. __gamanenÄ• _ti padagamanena. __nÄ• satthÄ• saá¹…khÄ• ralokassa antaá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya vadati. __Ã±Ä• teyya_ntiÄ• dÄ«su Ã±Ä• pattabbanti attho.

iti devaputtena cakkavÄ• á¸·alokassa anto pucchito, satthÄ• rÄ• saá¹…khÄ• ralokassa kat paÃ±hena saddhiá¹ƒ satthu byÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ sametÄ«ti saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya pasaá¹ƒsanto __acc

__daá¸·hadhammo_ti \Ne I 105/ daá¸·hadhanu, uttamappamÄ• á¹‡ena dhanunÄ• samann dhanuÄ• cariyo. __susikkhito_ti \Ee I 117/ dasa dvÄ• dasa vassÄ• ni dhanusippaá¹ƒ sikkhit usabhappamÄ• á¹‡epi vÄ• laggaá¹ƒ vijjhituá¹ƒ samatthabhÄ• vena katahattho. __katÅ«pÄ• dassitasippo. __asanenÄ• _ti kaá¹‡á¸• ena. __atipÄ• teyyÄ• _ti atikkameyya. yÄ• vatÄ• so atikkameyya, tÄ• vatÄ• kÄ• lena ekacakkavÄ• á¸·aá¹ƒ atikkamÄ• mÄ«ti attano javasampat __puratthimÄ• samuddÄ• pacchimo_ti yathÄ• puratthimasamuddÄ• pacchimasamuddo padavÄ«tihÄ• ro ahosÄ«ti vadati. so kira pÄ• cÄ«nacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ á¹-h pacchimacakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ akkamati, puna dutiyaá¹ƒ pÄ• daá¹ƒ pasÄ• ret paracakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ akkamati. __icchÄ• gata_nti icchÄ• eva. __aÃ±Ã±a dasseti. bhikkhÄ• cÄ• rakÄ• le kiresa nÄ• galatÄ• dantakaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ khÄ• ditvÄ• anotatte sampatte uttarakurumhi piá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya caritvÄ• cakkavÄ• á¸·amukhavaá¹-á¹-iyaá¹ƒ nisinno tattha muhuttaá¹ƒ vissamitvÄ• puna javati. __vassasatÄ• yuko_ti tadÄ• dÄ«ghÄ• yukakÄ• vassasatÄ• vasiá¹-á¹-he \Be I 109/ Ä• yumhi gamanaá¹ƒ Ä• rabhi. __vassasatajÄ«vÄ«_ti ta anantarÄ• yena jÄ«vanto. __antarÄ• va kÄ• laá¹…kato_ti cakkavÄ• á¸·alokassa antaá¹ƒ ap pana tattha kÄ• laá¹ƒ katvÄ• pi Ä• gantvÄ• imasmiá¹ƒyeva cakkavÄ• á¸·e nibbatti. __appat antaá¹ƒ appatvÄ• . __dukkhassÄ• _ti vaá¹-á¹-adukkhassa. __antakiriya_nti pariyantakaraá¹ attabhÄ• ve. __sasaÃ±Ã±imhi samanake_ti sasaÃ±Ã±e sacitte. __loka_nti dukkhasaccaá¹ƒ samudayasaccaá¹ƒ. __lokanirodha_nti nirodhasaccaá¹ƒ. __paá¹-ipada_nti maggasaccaá¹ƒ.

Ä• vuso, imÄ• ni cattÄ• ri saccÄ• ni tiá¹‡akaá¹-á¹-hÄ• dÄ«su paÃ±Ã±apemi \Ee I 118/, imas cÄ• tumahÄ• bhÅ«tike kÄ• yasmiá¹ƒ yeva paÃ±Ã±apemÄ«â€™â€™ ti dasseti. __samitÄ• v __nÄ• sÄ«satÄ«_ti na pattheti. chaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ.

108-109__._ sattamaá¹-á¹-hamÄ• ni vuttatthÄ• neva. sattamaá¹ƒ, aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

9. susimasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<110> navame __tuyhampi no, Ä• nanda, sÄ• riputto ruccatÄ«_ti satthÄ• therassa vaá¹‡á¹ vaá¹‡á¹‡o ca nÄ• mesa visabhÄ• gapuggalassa santike kathetuá¹ƒ na vaá¹-á¹-ati. tassa sa hi matthakaá¹ƒ na pÄ• puá¹‡Ä• ti. so hi ``asuko nÄ• ma bhikkhu sÄ«lavÄ• â€™â€™ ti vutte

gorÅ«pasÄ«lo so. kiá¹ƒ tayÄ• aÃ±Ã±o sÄ«lavÄ• na diá¹-á¹-hapubboâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• ? ``pa ``kiá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±o so? kiá¹ƒ tayÄ• aÃ±Ã±o paÃ±Ã±avÄ• na diá¹-á¹-hapubboâ€™â€™ ti? vÄ vaá¹‡á¹‡akathÄ• ya antarÄ• yaá¹ƒ karoti. Ä• nandatthero pana sÄ• riputtattherassa sabhÄ• therassa deti, attano upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kadÄ• rake pabbÄ• jetvÄ• therassa santike upajjhaá¹ƒ g upasampÄ• deti. sÄ• riputtattheropi Ä• nandattherassa tatheva karoti. kiá¹ƒ kÄ• raá¹‡Ä• ? a pasÄ«ditvÄ• . Ä• nandatthero hi --- ``amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ jeá¹-á¹-habhÄ• tiko ekaá¹ƒ asaá¹…khyey kappe pÄ• ramiyo pÅ«retvÄ• soá¸·asavidhaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijjhitvÄ• dhammasenÄ•
á¹-hitoâ€™â€™ ti therassa guá¹‡esu pasÄ«ditvÄ• va theraá¹ƒ mamÄ• yati. sÄ• riputtatthero ``sammÄ• sambuddhassa mayÄ• kattabbaá¹ƒ mukhodakadÄ• nÄ• dikiccaá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ Ä• ahaá¹ƒ icchiticchitaá¹ƒ samÄ• pattiá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjituá¹ƒ labhÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• yasmato 110/ pasÄ«ditvÄ• va taá¹ƒ mamÄ• yati. tasmÄ• bhagavÄ• sÄ• riputtattherassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá Ä• nandattherassa santike kathetuá¹ƒ Ä• raddho.

tattha __tuyhampÄ«_ti sampiá¹‡á¸• anattho pi-kÄ• ro. idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti --- ``Ä• nanda, s gocaro vihÄ• ro abhikkamo \Ee I 119/ paá¹-ikkamo Ä• lokitavilokitaá¹ƒ samiÃ±jitapasÄ• raá¹ asÄ«timahÄ• therÄ• naá¹ƒ ruccati, sadevakassa lokassa ruccati. tuyhampi ruccatÄ«â€™â€ tato thero sÄ• á¹-akantare laddhokÄ• so balavamallo viya tuá¹-á¹-hamÄ• naso hutvÄ• --- `` piyasahÄ• yassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathÄ• petukÄ• mo. labhissÄ• mi no ajja, dÄ«padhajabhÅ«t viya valÄ• hakantarato candaá¹ƒ nÄ«haritvÄ• dassento viya sÄ• riputtattherassa vaá¹‡á¹‡a cintetvÄ• paá¹-hamataraá¹ƒ tÄ• va catÅ«hi padehi puggalapalÄ• pe haranto __kassa hi nÄ abÄ• lassÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. bÄ• lo hi bÄ• latÄ• ya, duá¹-á¹-ho dosatÄ• ya, mÅ«á¸·ho mohe cittavipallÄ• sena vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ``vaá¹‡á¹‡oâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• avaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ ``avaá¹‡á¹‡eâ€ buddho, ayaá¹ƒ sÄ• vakoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• na jÄ• nÄ• ti. abÄ• lÄ• dayo pana jÄ• nanti, tasm __na rucceyyÄ• _ti bÄ• lÄ• dÄ«naá¹ƒyeva hi so na rucceyya, na aÃ±Ã±assa kassaci na ruc evaá¹ƒ \Ne I 107/ puggalapalÄ• pe haritvÄ• idÄ• ni soá¸·asahi padehi yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ va __paá¹‡á¸• ito, bhante_tiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __paá¹‡á¸• ito_ti paá¹‡á¸• iccena samannÄ• g á¹-hitassetaá¹ƒ nÄ• maá¹ƒ. vuttaÃ±hetaá¹ƒ --- ``yato kho, Ä• nanda, bhikkhu dhÄ• tukusalo

ca paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• dakusalo ca á¹-hÄ• nÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• nakusalo ca, ettÄ• vatÄ• kho, Ä• bhikkhÅ«â€™ ti alaá¹ƒ vacanÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti (MN III 124). __mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±o_tiÄ• dÄ«s samannÄ• gatoti attho. tatridaá¹ƒ mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• dÄ«naá¹ƒ nÄ• nattaá¹ƒ (Paá¹-is III 4) -- __mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• _? mahante sÄ«lakkhandhe pariggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , m paÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhe, vimuttikkhandhe, vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanakkhandhe pariggaá¹‡hÄ• t á¹-hÄ• nÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ni, mahÄ• vihÄ• rasamÄ• pattiyo, mahantÄ• ni ariyasaccÄ• ni, ma sammappadhÄ• ne, iddhipÄ• de, mahantÄ• ni indriyÄ• ni, balÄ• ni, bojjhaá¹…gÄ• ni, mahan
I 120/, mahantÄ• ni sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni, mahÄ• abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• yo, mahantaá¹ƒ paramatth pariggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• .

sÄ• pana therassa devorohanaá¹ƒ katvÄ• saá¹…kassanagaradvÄ• re á¹-hitena satthÄ• rÄ pucchite taá¹ƒ vissajjentassa pÄ• kaá¹-Ä• jÄ• tÄ• .

katamÄ• __puthupaÃ±Ã±Ä• _? puthu nÄ• nÄ• khandhesu, (Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti put nÄ• nÄ• dhÄ• tÅ«su, puthu nÄ• nÄ• Ä• yatanesu, puthu nÄ• nÄ• paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• desu, nÄ• nÄ• suÃ±Ã±atamanupalabbhesu, puthu nÄ• nÄ• atthesu, dhammesu niruttÄ«su paá¹-ib nÄ• nÄ• sÄ«lakkhandhesu, puthu nÄ• nÄ• samÄ• dhi-paÃ±Ã±Ä• vimutti-vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡ada nÄ• nÄ• á¹-hÄ• nÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• nesu, puthu nÄ• nÄ• vihÄ• rasamÄ• pattÄ«su, puthu nÄ• nÄ• nÄ• nÄ• satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nesu, sammappadhÄ• nesu, iddhipÄ• desu, indriyesu, balesu, bojj nÄ• nÄ• ariyamaggesu, sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalesu, abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• su, puthu nÄ• nÄ• janasÄ• dhÄ paramatthe nibbÄ• ne Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti puthupaÃ±Ã±Ä• .

katamÄ• __hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• _? idhekacco hÄ• sabahulo vedabahulo tuá¹-á¹-hibahulo pÄ• paripÅ«reti, indriyasaá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ paripÅ«reti, bhojane mattaÃ±Ã±utaá¹ƒ, jÄ• gariyÄ• nuyoga samÄ• dhikkhandhaá¹ƒ, paÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhaá¹ƒ, vimuttikkhandhaá¹ƒ, vimuttiÃ±Ä• á¹‡adas paripÅ«retÄ«ti, hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . hÄ• sabahulo pÄ• mojjabahulo á¹-hÄ• nÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• naá hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . hÄ• sabahulo vihÄ• rasamÄ• pattiyo paripÅ«retÄ«ti hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . h paá¹-ivijjhati. satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne \Ne I 108/, sammappadhÄ• ne, iddhipÄ• de, indriyÄ• ni, bal bojjhaá¹…gÄ• ni, ariyamaggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . hÄ• sabahulo sÄ• maÃ±Ã abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• yo paá¹-ivijjhatÄ«ti hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• , hÄ• sabahulo vedatuá¹-á¹-hipÄ• mojjaba nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ sacchikarotÄ«ti hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±Ä• .

thero ca sarado nÄ• ma tÄ• paso hutvÄ• anomadassissa bhagavato pÄ• damÅ«le aggasÄ paá¹-á¹-hapesi. taá¹ƒkÄ• lato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya hÄ• sabahulo sÄ«laparipÅ«raá¹‡Ä• dÄ«ni akÄ

katamÄ• \Be I 112/ __javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• _? yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci rÅ«paá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccup dÅ«re santike vÄ• , sabbaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccato khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . duk khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . yÄ• kÄ• ci vedanÄ• ... pe ... yÄ• kÄ• ci saÃ±Ã±Ä•
... yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sabbaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã dukkhato, anattato khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . cakkhu ... pe ... jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ aniccato, dukkhato, anattato khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti javanap atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ khayaá¹-á¹-hena, dukkhaá¹ƒ bhayaá¹-á¹-hena, asÄ• rakaá¹-á¹-henÄ• ti tulayitvÄ• tÄ«rayitvÄ• vibhÄ• vayitvÄ• vibhÅ«taá¹ƒ katvÄ• rÅ«pa javatÄ«ti javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ khayaá¹-á¹-hena ... pe ... vi jarÄ• maraá¹‡anirodhe nibbÄ• ne khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti javanapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ•
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ. cakkhu ... pe ... jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ paá¹-icc

khayadhammaá¹ƒ vayadhammaá¹ƒ virÄ• gadhammaá¹ƒ nirodhadhammanti \Ee I 122/ tulay vibhÄ• vayitvÄ• vibhÅ«taá¹ƒ katvÄ• jarÄ• maraá¹‡anirodhe nibbÄ• ne khippaá¹ƒ javatÄ«ti katamÄ• __tikkhapaÃ±Ã±Ä• _? khippaá¹ƒ kilese chindatÄ«ti tikkhapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . uppannaá¹ nÄ• dhivÄ• seti, uppannaá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• davitakkaá¹ƒ ... uppannaá¹ƒ vihiá¹ƒsÄ• vitakkaá¹ƒ ... akusale dhamme ... uppannaá¹ƒ rÄ• gaá¹ƒ ... dosaá¹ƒ ... mohaá¹ƒ ... kodhaá¹ƒ ... upanÄ• h paá¸·Ä• saá¹ƒ ... issaá¹ƒ ... macchariyaá¹ƒ ... mÄ• yaá¹ƒ ... sÄ• á¹-heyyaá¹ƒ ... thambhaá¹ƒ mÄ• naá¹ƒ ... atimÄ• naá¹ƒ ... madaá¹ƒ ... pamÄ• daá¹ƒ ... sabbe kilese ... sabbe duccarite abhisaá¹…khÄ• re ... sabbe bhavagÄ• mikamme nÄ• dhivÄ• seti pajahati vinodeti, byantÄ« gametÄ«ti tikkhapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . ekasmiá¹ƒ Ä• sane \Ne I 109/ cattÄ• ro ca ariyamaggÄ• , cattÄ catasso ca paá¹-isambhidÄ• yo, cha ca abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• yo adhigatÄ• honti sacchikatÄ• phass tikkhapaÃ±Ã±Ä• .

thero ca bhÄ• gineyyassa dÄ«ghanakhaparibbÄ• jakassa vedanÄ• pariggahasutte desiyam chinditvÄ• sÄ• vakapÄ• ramiÃ±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-ividdhakÄ• lato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya tikkhapaÃ± ``tikkhapaÃ±Ã±o, bhante, Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtoâ€™â€™ ti.

katamÄ• \Be I 113/ __nibbedhikapaÃ±Ã±Ä• _? idhekacco sabbasaá¹…khÄ• resu ubbegab ukkaá¹‡á¹-hanabahulo aratibahulo anabhiratibahulo bahimukho na ramati sabbasaá¹…khÄ• appadÄ• litapubbaá¹ƒ lobhakkhandhaá¹ƒ nibbijjhati padÄ• letÄ«ti nibbedhikapaÃ±Ã±Ä• . an appadÄ• litapubbaá¹ƒ dosakkhandhaá¹ƒ ... mohakkhandhaá¹ƒ ... kodhaá¹ƒ ... upanÄ• haá¹ƒ bhavagÄ• mikamme nibbijjhati padÄ• letÄ«ti nibbedhikapaÃ±Ã±Ä• .

__appiccho_ti santaguá¹‡aniguhanatÄ• , paccayapaá¹-iggahaá¹‡e ca mattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• , eta iminÄ• lakkhaá¹‡ena samannÄ• gato. __santuá¹-á¹-ho_ti catÅ«su paccayesu yathÄ• lÄ• bh yathÄ• sÄ• ruppasantosoti, imehi tÄ«hi santosehi samannÄ• gato. __pavivitto_ti kÄ• yavive vivekaá¹-á¹-hakÄ• yÄ• naá¹ƒ nekkhammÄ• bhiratÄ• naá¹ƒ, cittaviveko ca parisuddhacittÄ• n paramavodÄ• nappattÄ• naá¹ƒ, upadhiviveko ca nirupadhÄ«naá¹ƒ puggalÄ• naá¹ƒ visaá¹…
tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ vivekÄ• naá¹ƒ lÄ• bhÄ«. __asaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho_ti dassanasaá¹ƒsaggo savanasa samullapanasaá¹ƒsaggo paribhogasaá¹ƒsaggo kÄ• yasaá¹ƒsaggoti, imehi paÃ±cahi saá¹ƒs paÃ±cavidho saá¹ƒsaggo rÄ• jÅ«hi rÄ• jamahÄ• mattehi titthiyehi titthiyasÄ• vakehi upÄ• sa bhikkhÅ«hi bhikkhunÄ«hÄ«ti aá¹-á¹-hahi puggalehi saddhiá¹ƒ jÄ• yati, so sabbopi therassa asaá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho.

__Ä• raddhavÄ«riyo_ti paggahitavÄ«riyo paripuá¹‡á¹‡avÄ«riyo. tattha Ä• raddhavÄ«riyo bh uppannakilesassa á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡ituá¹ƒ na deti, á¹-hÄ• ne uppannassa nisajjaá¹ƒ, n seyyaá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡ituá¹ƒ na deti, tasmiá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ iriyÄ• pathe uppannaá¹ƒ tattha tatthev pana catucattÄ• lÄ«sa vassÄ• ni maÃ±ce piá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ na pasÄ• reti. taá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya ``Ä•

Ä• ha. __vattÄ• _ti \Ne I 110/ odhunanavattÄ• . bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ajjhÄ• cÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ``aj kathessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti kathÄ• vavatthÄ• naá¹ƒ na karoti, tasmiá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ yeva á¹-hÄ attho.

__vacanakkhamo_ti vacanaá¹ƒ khamati. eko hi parassa ovÄ• daá¹ƒ deti, sayaá¹ƒ pana aÃ± kujjhati. thero pana parassapi ovÄ• daá¹ƒ deti, sayaá¹ƒ \Be I 114/ ovadiyamÄ• nopi sirasÄ• ekadivasaá¹ƒ kira sÄ• riputtattheraá¹ƒ sattavassiko sÄ• maá¹‡ero --- ``bhante, sÄ• riputta, t nivÄ• sanakaá¹‡á¹‡o olambatÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. thero kiÃ±ci avatvÄ• va ekamantaá¹ƒ ga nivÄ• setvÄ• Ä• gamma ``ettakaá¹ƒ vaá¹-á¹-ati Ä• cariyÄ• â€™â€™ ti aÃ±jaliá¹ƒ paggayha ``tadahu pabbajito santo, jÄ• tiyÄ• sattavassiko.

sopi maá¹ƒ anusÄ• seyya, sampaá¹-icchÄ• mi matthakeâ€™â€™ ti || (Mil VI 4.8) ---

Ä• ha.

__codako_ti \Ee I 124/ vatthusmiá¹ƒ otiá¹‡á¹‡e vÄ• anotiá¹‡á¹‡e vÄ• vÄ«tikkamaá¹ƒ disvÄ
bhikkhunÄ• nÄ• ma evaá¹ƒ nivÄ• setabbaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ pÄ• rupitabbaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ gantabbaá evaá¹ƒ nisÄ«ditabbaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ khÄ• ditabbaá¹ƒ, evaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jitabbaâ€™â€™ nti tantivas deti.

__pÄ• pagarahÄ«_ti pÄ• papuggale na passe, na tesaá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ suá¹‡e, tehi saddhiá¹ vaseyyaá¹ƒ.

``mÄ• me kadÄ• ci pÄ• piccho, kusÄ«to hÄ«navÄ«riyo.

appassuto anÄ• daro, sameto ahu katthacÄ«â€™â€™ ti || --- evaá¹ƒ pÄ• papuggalepi garahati, ``samaá¹‡ena nÄ• ma rÄ• gavasikena dosamohavasiken

doso moho pahÄ• tabboâ€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ pÄ• padhammepi garahatÄ«ti dvÄ«hi kÄ• raá¹‡ Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtoâ€™â€™ ti vadati.

evaá¹ƒ \Ne I 111/ Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandena soá¸·asahi padehi therassa yathÄ• bhÅ«tavaá ``kiá¹ƒ Ä• nando attano piyasahÄ• yassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathetuá¹ƒ na labhati, kathetu kiá¹ƒ tatheva hoti, kiá¹ƒ so sabbaÃ±Ã±Å«â€™â€™ ti? koci pÄ• papuggalo vattuá¹ƒ mÄ• labhatÅ vaá¹‡á¹‡abhaá¹‡anaá¹ƒ akuppaá¹ƒ sabbaÃ±Ã±ubhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ karonto jinamuddikÄ• ya laÃ± __evameta_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha.

evaá¹ƒ \Be I 115/ tathÄ• gatena ca Ä• nandattherena ca mahÄ• therassa vaá¹‡á¹‡e kathiya devatÄ• uá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• eteheva soá¸·asahi padehi vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathayiá¹ƒsu. tato Ä• kÄ sÄ«tavalÄ• hakÄ• uá¹‡havalÄ• hakÄ• cÄ• tumahÄ• rÄ• jikÄ• ti yÄ• va akaniá¹-á¹-habrahm eteheva soá¸·asahi padehi vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathayiá¹ƒsu. etenupÄ• yena ekacakkavÄ• á¸·aá¹ƒ cakkavÄ• á¸·asahassesu devatÄ• uá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• kathayiá¹ƒsu. athÄ• yasmato sÄ• riputta devaputto cintesi --- ``imÄ• devatÄ• attano attano nakkhattakÄ«á¸·aá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya \Ee I 125
gantvÄ• mayhaá¹ƒ upajjhÄ• yasseva vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathenti, gacchÄ• mi tathÄ• gatassa sa vaá¹‡á¹‡abhaá¹‡anaá¹ƒ devatÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ karomÄ«â€™â€™ ti, so tathÄ• akÄ• si. taá¹ susÄ«mo_tiÄ• di vuttaá¹ƒ.

__uccÄ• vacÄ• _ti aÃ±Ã±esu á¹-hÄ• nesu paá¹‡Ä«taá¹ƒ uccaá¹ƒ vuccati, hÄ«naá¹ƒ avacaá nÄ• nÄ• vidhÄ• vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• . tassÄ• kira devaparisÄ• ya nÄ«laá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ atinÄ atipÄ«takaá¹ƒ, lohitaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ atilohitaá¹ƒ, odÄ• taá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ accodÄ• tanti, catu vaá¹‡á¹‡anibhÄ• pÄ• tubhavi. teneva __seyyathÄ• pi nÄ• mÄ• _ti catasso upamÄ• Ä• gat __jÄ• timÄ• _ti jÄ• tisampanno. __suparikammakato_ti dhovanÄ• diparikammena suá¹-á¹-hu __paá¹‡á¸• ukambale nikkhitto_ti rattakambale á¹-hapito. __evameva_nti rattakambale nikkh ekappahÄ• reneva virocituá¹ƒ Ä• raddhÄ• . __nikkha_nti atirekapaÃ±casuvaá¹‡á¹‡ena kata ghaá¹-á¹-anamajjanakkhamaá¹ƒ hoti. __jambonada_nti mahÄ• jambusÄ• khÄ• ya pavattana mahÄ• jambuphalarase vÄ• pathaviyaá¹ƒ paviá¹-á¹-he suvaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹…kurÄ• uá¹-á¹-hahan katapiá¸·andhanantipi attho. __dakkhakammÄ• raputtaukkÄ• mukhasukusalasampahaá¹-á¹-kammÄ• raputtena ukkÄ• mukhe pacitvÄ• sampahaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ. dhÄ• tuvibhaá¹…ge (MN II akatabhaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ gahitaá¹ƒ, idha pana katabhaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ.

__viddhe_ti dÅ«rÄ«bhÅ«te. __deve_ti Ä• kÄ• se. __nabhaá¹ƒ abbhussakkamÄ• no_ti Ä• kÄ iminÄ• \Ne I 112/ taruá¹‡asÅ«riyabhÄ• vo dassito. __sorato_ti \Be I 116/ soraccena saman nibbisevano. __satthuvaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• bhato_ti \Ee I 126/ satthÄ• rÄ• Ä• bhatavaá¹‡á¹‡o. satthÄ aá¹-á¹-haparisamajjhe nisÄ«ditvÄ• ``sevatha, bhikkhave, sÄ• riputtamoggallÄ• neâ€™â€™ nayena therassa vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• harÄ«ti thero Ä• bhatavaá¹‡á¹‡o nÄ• ma hoti. __kÄ• laá¹ parinibbÄ• nakÄ• laá¹ƒ pattheti. khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savo hi neva maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ abhinandati, na jÄ«vi divasasaá¹…khepaá¹ƒ vetanaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• á¹-hitapuriso viya kÄ• laá¹ƒ pana pattheti, oloke attho. tenevÄ• ha ---

``nÄ• bhinandÄ• mi maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ, nÄ• bhinandÄ• mi jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ.

kÄ• laÃ±ca paá¹-ikaá¹…khÄ• mi, nibbisaá¹ƒ bhatako yathÄ• â€™â€™ ti || (Th 1001-1002).

10. nÄ• nÄ• titthiyasÄ• vakasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<111> dasame __nÄ• nÄ• titthiyasÄ• vakÄ• _ti te kira kammavÄ• dino ahesuá¹ƒ, tasmÄ• c sagge nibbattÄ• , te ``attano attano satthari pasÄ• dena nibbattamhÄ• â€™â€™ ti saÃ±Ã±i dasabalassa santike á¹-hatvÄ• amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ satthÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathessÄ• mA paccekagÄ• thÄ• hi kathayiá¹ƒsu. tattha __chinditamÄ• rite_ti chindite ca mÄ• rite ca. __hat ca dhanajÄ• nÄ«su ca. __puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vÄ• panÄ• _ti attano puÃ±Ã±ampi na samanupassa puÃ±Ã±Ä• puÃ±Ã±Ä• naá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko natthÄ«ti vadati. __sa ve vissÄ• samÄ• cikkhÄ«_ti so katapuÃ±Ã±Ä• nampi vipÄ• ko natthÄ«â€™â€™ ti vadanto sattÄ• naá¹ƒ vissÄ• saá¹ƒ avass Ä• cikkhati, tasmÄ• mÄ• nanaá¹ƒ vandanaá¹ƒ pÅ«janaá¹ƒ arahatÄ«ti vadati.

__tapojigucchÄ• yÄ• _ti kÄ• yakilamathatapena pÄ• pajigucchanena. __susaá¹ƒvutatto_ti s __jegucchÄ«_ti tapena pÄ• pajigucchako. __nipako_ti paá¹‡á¸• ito. __cÄ• tuyÄ• masusaá¹ƒ susaá¹ƒvuto. cÄ• tuyÄ• mo \Ee I 127/ nÄ• ma sabbavÄ• rivÄ• rito ca hoti sabbavÄ• riyutto c sabbavÄ• riphuá¹-o cÄ• ti ime cattÄ• ro koá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ• . tattha __sabbavÄ• rivÄ• rito_ti vÄ paá¹-ikkhittasabbasÄ«todakoti attho. so kira sÄ«todake sattasaÃ±Ã±Ä« hoti \Be I 117/, tasm valaÃ±jeti. __sabbavÄ• riyutto_ti sabbena pÄ• pavÄ• raá¹‡ena yuto. __sabbavÄ• ridhuto_ti dhutapÄ• po \Ne I 113/. __sabbavÄ• riphuá¹-o_ti sabbena pÄ• pavÄ• raá¹‡ena phuá¹-á¹-ho Ä• cikkha_nti diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ ``diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ meâ€™â€™ ti sutaá¹ƒ ``sutaá¹ƒ meâ€™â€™ ti Ä niguhanto. __na hi nÅ«na kibbisÄ«_ti evarÅ«po satthÄ• kibbisakÄ• rako nÄ• ma na hoti.

__nÄ• nÄ• titthiye_ti so kira nÄ• nÄ• titthiyÄ• naá¹ƒyeva upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ko, tasmÄ• te Ä• ra kÄ• tiyÄ• no_ti pakudho kaccÄ• yano. __nigaá¹‡á¹-ho_ti nÄ• á¹-aputto. __makkhalipÅ«raá¹ pÅ«raá¹‡o ca. __sÄ• maÃ±Ã±appattÄ• _ti samaá¹‡adhamme koá¹-ippattÄ• . __na hi nÅ«na teyeva loke sappurisÄ• ti vadati. __paccabhÄ• sÄ«_ti ``ayaá¹ƒ Ä• koá¹-ako imesaá¹ƒ nagga dasabalassa santike á¹-hatvÄ• vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathetÄ«ti tesaá¹ƒ avaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathessÄ• n patiabhÄ• sÄ«ti.

tattha __sahÄ• caritenÄ• _ti saha caritamattena. __chavo sigÄ• lo_ti lÄ• mako kÄ• lasigÄ• l vevacanaá¹ƒ. __saá¹…kassarÄ• cÄ• ro_ti Ä• saá¹…kitasamÄ• cÄ• ro. __na sataá¹ƒ sarikkh sappurisÄ• naá¹ƒ sadiso na hoti, kiá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ kÄ• lasigÄ• lasadise titthiye sÄ«he karosÄ«ti?

__anvÄ• visitvÄ• _ti ``ayaá¹ƒ evarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ satthÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ avaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ katheti, te vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathÄ• pessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• tassa sarÄ«re anuÄ• visi adhimucc __Ä• yuttÄ• _ti tapojigucchane yuttapayuttÄ• . __pÄ• layaá¹ƒ pavivekiya_nti pavivekaá¹ƒ pÄ ``nhÄ• pitapavivekaá¹ƒ pÄ• lessÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti \Ee I 128/ sayaá¹ƒ kese luÃ±canti. ``cÄ pÄ• tessÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti naggÄ• vicaranti. ``piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tapavivekaá¹ƒ pÄ• lessÄ• m bhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ vÄ• bhuÃ±janti hatthesu vÄ• . ``senÄ• sanapavivekaá¹ƒ pÄ• lessÄ• mÄ• â€™ kappenti. __rÅ«pe niviá¹-á¹-hÄ• _ti taá¹‡hÄ• diá¹-á¹-hÄ«hi rÅ«pe patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• . __devalok devalokapatthanakÄ• mÄ• . __mÄ• tiyÄ• _ti maccÄ• , te ve maccÄ• paralokatthÄ• ya samn __iti_ \Be I 118/ __viditvÄ• _ti ``ayaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ etesaá¹ƒ avaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathetvÄ• id katheti, ko nu kho esoâ€™â€™ ti Ä• vajjento jÄ• nitvÄ• va. __ye cantalikkhasmiá¹ƒ pabhÄ• antalikkhe candobhÄ• sasÅ«riyobhÄ• sasaÃ±jhÄ• rÄ• gaindadhanutÄ• rakarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ p te_ti sabbeva te tayÄ• . __namucÄ«_ti mÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• lapati. __Ä• misaá¹ƒva macchÄ• naá¹ macchÄ• naá¹ƒ vadhatthÄ• ya baá¸·isalaggaá¹ƒ \Ne I 114/ Ä• misaá¹ƒ khipati, evaá¹ƒ tayÄ• rÅ«pÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ vadhÄ• ya khittÄ• ti vadati.

__mÄ• á¹‡avagÄ• miyo_ti ayaá¹ƒ kira devaputto buddhupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ko. __rÄ• jagahÄ«yÄ• rÄ• jagahapabbatÄ• naá¹ƒ. __seto_ti kelÄ• so. __aghagÄ• mina_nti Ä• kÄ• sagÄ• mÄ«naá udakanidhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ. idaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ hoti --- yathÄ• rÄ• jagahÄ«yÄ• naá¹ƒ pabbatÄ• na himavantapabbatÄ• naá¹ƒ kelÄ• so, Ä• kÄ• sagÄ• mÄ«naá¹ƒ Ä• dicco, udakanidhÄ• nÄ• na cando, evaá¹ƒ sadevakassa lokassa buddho seá¹-á¹-hoti. dasamaá¹ƒ.

nÄ• nÄ• titthiyavaggo tatiyo.

iti sÄ• ratthappakÄ• siniyÄ• saá¹ƒyuttanikÄ• ya-aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya devaputtasaá¹ƒyuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

3. kosalasaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ

1. paá¹-hamavaggo

1. daharasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<112> kosalasaá¹ƒyuttassa \Ne I 115/ \Be I 119/ paá¹-hame \Ee I 129/ __bhagavatÄ• sadd yathÄ• khamanÄ«yÄ• dÄ«ni pucchanto bhagavÄ• tena, evaá¹ƒ sopi bhagavatÄ• saddhiá¹ sÄ«todakaá¹ƒ viya uá¹‡hodakena sammoditaá¹ƒ ekÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ agamÄ• si. yÄ• ya ca --- khamanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci yÄ• panÄ«yaá¹ƒ, kacci bhoto ca gotamassa sÄ• vakÄ• naÃ±ca app lahuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ phÄ• suvihÄ• roâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dikÄ• ya kathÄ• ya sammodi, ta pÄ«tipÄ• mojjasaá¹…khÄ• tasammodajananato sammodituá¹ƒ yuttabhÄ• vato ca __sammo atthabyaÃ±janamadhuratÄ• ya cirampi kÄ• laá¹ƒ sÄ• retuá¹ƒ nirantaraá¹ƒ pavattetuá¹ƒ arah saritabbabhÄ• vato ca __sÄ• raá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ_. suyyamÄ• nasukhato ca sammodanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, sÄ• raá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ. tathÄ• byaÃ±janaparisuddhatÄ• ya sammodanÄ«yaá¹ƒ, atthaparisuddh anekehi pariyÄ• yehi sammodanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ sÄ• raá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ vÄ«tisÄ• retvÄ• pariy ito pubbe tathÄ• gatassa adiá¹-á¹-hattÄ• guá¹‡Ä• guá¹‡avasena gambhÄ«rabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ vÄ ajÄ• nanto ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ«di, ekamantaá¹ƒ nisinno kho yaá¹ƒ ovaá¹-á¹-ikasÄ• raá¹ƒ kat lokanissaraá¹‡abhavokkantipaÃ±haá¹ƒ satthu sammÄ• sambuddhataá¹ƒ pucchituá¹ƒ __bha

tattha __bhavampÄ«_ti pi-kÄ• ro sampiá¹‡á¸• anatthe nipÄ• to, tena ca cha satthÄ• re sam pÅ«raá¹‡Ä• dayo ``sammÄ• sambuddhamhÄ• â€™â€™ ti paá¹-ijÄ• nanti, evaá¹ƒ bhavamp idaá¹ƒ pana rÄ• jÄ• na attano laddhiyÄ• , loke mahÄ• janena \Ee I 130/ gahitapaá¹-iÃ±Ã±Ä bhagavÄ• buddhasÄ«hanÄ• daá¹ƒ nadanto __yaá¹ƒ hi taá¹ƒ mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• _tiÄ• dimÄ• ha mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• _ti anuttaraá¹ƒ sabbaseá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sabbaÃ±Ã±utaÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asaá¹…khÄ• t abhisambuddhoti attho. __samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• _ti \Ne I 116/ pabbajjÅ«pagamanena \E jÄ• tivasena brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• . __saá¹…ghino_tiÄ• dÄ«su pabbajitasamÅ«hasaá¹…khÄ• to s __saá¹…ghino_. sveva gaá¹‡o etesaá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti __gaá¹‡ino_. Ä• cÄ• rasikkhÄ• panavasen Ä• cariyÄ• ti __gaá¹‡Ä• cariyÄ• . Ã±Ä• tÄ• _ti paÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• pÄ• kaá¹-Ä• . ``appicchÄ• sa vatthampi na nivÄ• sentÄ«â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ samuggato yaso etesaá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti __yasassin laddhikarÄ• . __sÄ• dhusammatÄ• _ti ``santo sappurisÄ• â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ sammatÄ• . __
andhabÄ• laputhujjanassa. __pÅ«raá¹‡o_tiÄ• dÄ«ni tesaá¹ƒ nÄ• magottÄ• ni. __pÅ«raá¹‡o __makkhalÄ«_ti. so pana gosÄ• lÄ• ya jÄ• tattÄ• __gosÄ• lo_ti vutto. __nÄ• á¹-aputto_ti nÄ __belaá¹-á¹-haputto_ti belaá¹-á¹-hassa putto. __kaccÄ• yano_ti pakudhassa gottaá¹ƒ. kesak __ajito kesakambalo_ti vutto.

__tepi mayÄ• _ti kappakolÄ• halaá¹ƒ buddhakolÄ• halaá¹ƒ cakkavattikolÄ• halanti tÄ«á¹‡i ``vassasatasahassamatthake kappuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti kappakolÄ• ha vassasatasahassamatthake loko vinassissati, mettaá¹ƒ mÄ• risÄ• , bhÄ• vetha, karuá¹‡aá¹ƒ nti manussappathe devatÄ• ghosentiyo vicaranti. ``vassasahassamatthake pana buddho up buddhakolÄ• halaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma hoti --- ``ito vassasahassamatthake buddho uppajjitvÄ• dham paá¹-ipannena saá¹…gharatanena parivÄ• rito dhammaá¹ƒ desento vicarissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ``vassasatamatthake pana cakkavattÄ« uppajjissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti cakkavattikolÄ• halaá¹ƒ nÄ vassasatamatthake sattaratanasampanno catuddÄ«pissaro \Ee I 131/ sahassa puttaparivÄ• cakkavattirÄ• jÄ• uppajjissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti devatÄ• ugghosenti.

imesu tÄ«su kolÄ• halesu ime cha satthÄ• ro buddhakolÄ• halaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• Ä• cariye payiru cintÄ• mÄ• á¹‡ivijjÄ• dÄ«ni uggaá¹‡hitvÄ• --- ``mayaá¹ƒ buddhamhÄ• â€™â€™ ti paá¹-iÃ± mahÄ• janaparivutÄ• janapadaá¹ƒ vicarantÄ• anupubbena sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ pattÄ• . tesaá¹ƒ rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• , ``mahÄ• rÄ• ja, pÅ«raá¹‡o kassapo ... pe ... ajito kesaka sabbaÃ±Ã±Å« kirÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• ``tumheva ne nimantetvÄ• Ä• nethÄ gantvÄ• tehi, ``rÄ• jÄ• vo nimanteti. raÃ±Ã±o gehe bhikkhaá¹ƒ gaá¹‡hathÄ• â€™â€™ ti vu ussahanti, punappunaá¹ƒ vuccamÄ• nÄ• upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kÄ• naá¹ƒ cittÄ• nurakkhaá¹‡atthÄ• agamaá¹ƒsu. rÄ• jÄ• Ä• sanÄ• ni paÃ±Ã±Ä• petvÄ• \Ne I 117/ ``nisÄ«dantÅ«â€™â€™ ti Ä rÄ• jusmÄ• nÄ• ma pharati, te mahÄ• rahesu Ä• sanesu nisÄ«dituá¹ƒ asakkontÄ• phalake nisÄ«diá¹ƒsu.

rÄ• jÄ• ``ettakeneva natthi tesaá¹ƒ anto sukkadhammoâ€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• Ä• hÄ• raá¹ƒ ad muggarena pothento viya ``tumhe buddhÄ• , na buddhÄ• â€™â€™ ti paÃ±haá¹ƒ pucchi. te `buddhamhÄ• â€™ ti vakkhÄ• ma, rÄ• jÄ• buddhavisaye paÃ±haá¹ƒ pucchitvÄ• kathetuá¹ buddhÄ• ti mahÄ• janaá¹ƒ vaÃ±cetvÄ• Ä• hiá¹‡á¸• athÄ• â€™ ti jivhampi chindÄ• peyya, a kareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti sakapaá¹-iÃ±Ã±Ä• ya eva `na mayaá¹ƒ buddhÄ• â€™ ti vadiá¹ƒsu. at nikaá¸• á¸• hÄ• pesi. te rÄ• jagharato nikkhante upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kÄ• pucchiá¹ƒsu --- ``kiá¹ƒ Ä• paÃ±haá¹ƒ pucchitvÄ• sakkÄ• rasammÄ• naá¹ƒ akÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti? rÄ• jÄ• ``buddhÄ• mayaá¹ƒ --- ``sace ayaá¹ƒ rÄ• jÄ• buddhavisaye paÃ±haá¹ƒ kathiyamÄ• naá¹ƒ ajÄ• nanto a bahuá¹ƒ apuÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti raÃ±Ã±o anukampÄ• ya `na mayaá¹ƒ budd buddhÄ• eva, amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ buddhabhÄ• vo, udakena dhovitvÄ• pi harituá¹ƒ na sakkÄ• ti. it ti \Ee I 132/ Ä• haá¹ƒsu --- raÃ±Ã±o santike `na mayaá¹ƒ buddhÄ• â€™ ti vadiá¹ƒsÅ«ti, idaá evamÄ• ha. tattha __kiá¹ƒ pana bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo daharo ceva jÄ• tiyÄ• , navo ca pabbajjÄ paá¹-iÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• vadati. tattha __ki_nti paá¹-ikkhepavacanaá¹ƒ. ete jÄ• timahallak ca ``buddhamhÄ• â€™â€™ ti na paá¹-ijÄ• nanti, bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo jÄ• tiyÄ• ca daharo pab paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti? mÄ• paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• hÄ«ti attho.

__na uÃ±Ã±Ä• tabbÄ• _ti na avajÄ• nitabbÄ• . __na paribhotabbÄ• _ti na paribhavitabbÄ• .
kathetukamyatÄ• pucchÄ• . __khattiyo_ti rÄ• jakumÄ• ro. __urago_ti Ä• sÄ«viso. __aggÄ«_ imasmiá¹ƒ pana pade desanÄ• kusalatÄ• ya attÄ• naá¹ƒ abbhantaraá¹ƒ katvÄ• sÄ«lavanta ettha \Be I 122/ ca daharaá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• , ukkamitvÄ• maggaá¹ƒ adento, pÄ nisinnÄ• sanato anuá¹-á¹-hahanto, hatthipiá¹-á¹-hÄ• dÄ«hi anotaranto, heá¹-á¹-hÄ• katvÄ• aÃ±Ã±ampi evarÅ«paá¹ƒ anÄ• cÄ• raá¹ƒ karonto khattiyaá¹ƒ avajÄ• nÄ• ti nÄ• ma. ``bhadd mahÄ• kaá¹‡á¸• o mahodaro --- kiá¹ƒ nÄ• ma yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci corÅ«paddavaá¹ƒ vÅ«pasametuá rajjaá¹ƒ anusÄ• situá¹ƒ sakkhissatÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«ni vadanto paribhoti nÄ• ma. aÃ±jan Ä• sÄ«visapotakaá¹ƒ kaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dÄ«su piá¸·andhanto aá¹…gulimpi jivhampi á¸• aá¹ƒsÄ• p nÄ• ma \Ne I 118/. ``bhaddako vatÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• sÄ«viso udakadeá¸• á¸• ubho viya kiá¹ƒ nÄ• kassacideva kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ pharituá¹ƒ sakkhissatÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«ni vadanto paribhoti khajjopanakamattampi aggiá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• hatthena kÄ«á¸·anto bhaá¹‡á¸• ukkhalikÄ• ya khi sayanapiá¹-á¹-hasÄ• á¹-akapasibbakÄ• dÄ«su vÄ• á¹-hapento aggiá¹ƒ avajÄ• nÄ• ti nÄ• m kataraá¹ƒ nu kho yÄ• gubhattaá¹ƒ pacissati, kataraá¹ƒ macchamaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ, kassa sÄ«taá¹ƒ tiÄ• dÄ«ni vadanto paribhoti nÄ• ma. daharasÄ• maá¹‡erampi pana disvÄ• ukkamitvÄ• ma rÄ• jakumÄ• re vuttaá¹ƒ anÄ• cÄ• raá¹ƒ karonto bhikkhuá¹ƒ avajÄ• nÄ• ti nÄ• ma. ``bhadda mahÄ• kaá¹‡á¹-ho mahodaro yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci buddhavacanaá¹ƒ uggahetuá¹ƒ yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci araÃ± vasituá¹ƒ sakkhissati, saá¹…ghattherakÄ• le manÄ• po bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ tiÄ• dÄ«ni va sabbampi na kÄ• tabbanti dassento __na uÃ±Ã±Ä• tabbo na paribhotabbo_ti Ä• ha.

__etadavocÄ• _ti etaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• bandhaá¹ƒ avoca. gÄ• thÄ• ca nÄ• metÄ• tadatthadÄ«

visesatthadÄ«panÄ• pi, tatrimÄ• tadatthampi visesatthampi dÄ«pentiyeva. tattha __khattiya adhipatiá¹ƒ. vuttaÃ±hetaá¹ƒ ``khettÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipatÄ«ti kho, vÄ• seá¹-á¹-ha, `khattiyo khatti dutiyaá¹ƒ akkharaá¹ƒ upanibbattaâ€™â€™ nti (DN III 131). __jÄ• tisampanna_nti tÄ• yeva l jÄ• tisampannaá¹ƒ. __abhijÄ• ta_nti tÄ«á¹‡i kulÄ• ni atikkamitvÄ• jÄ• taá¹ƒ.

__á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ hÄ«_ti kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ vijjati. __manujindo_ti manussajeá¹-á¹-hako. __rÄ• ja uddhaá¹-adaá¹‡á¹£• ena, so appako nÄ• ma na hoti, dasasahassavÄ«satisahassappamÄ• á pakkamate bhusa_nti \Be I 123/ tasmiá¹ƒ puggale balavaupakkamaá¹ƒ upakkamati. __rakkh attano jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ rakkhamÄ• no taá¹ƒ khattiyaá¹ƒ parivajjeyya na ghaá¹-á¹-eyya.

__uccÄ• vacehÄ«_ti nÄ• nÄ• vidhehi. __vaá¹‡á¹‡ehÄ«_ti saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• nehi. yena yena hi v gocaraá¹ƒ labhati, yadi sappavaá¹‡á¹‡ena, yadi deá¹£• á¹£• ubhavaá¹‡á¹‡ena, yadi dhamaniv kalandakavaá¹‡á¹‡enapi caratiyeva. __Ä• sajjÄ• _ti patvÄ• . __bÄ• la_nti yena bÄ• lena gh naraá¹ƒ vÄ• nÄ• riá¹ƒ vÄ• á¹£• aá¹ƒseyya.

__pahÅ«tabhakkha_nti bahubhakkhaá¹ƒ. aggissa hi abhakkhaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma natthi. __jÄ• lina __pÄ• vaka_nti \Ne I 119/ aggiá¹ƒ. pÄ• vagantipi pÄ• á¹-ho. __kaá¹‡havattani_nti vattanÄ«t gatamaggo kaá¹‡ho hoti kÄ• á¹£·ako, tasmÄ• ``kaá¹‡havattanÄ«â€™â€™ ti vuccati.

__mahÄ• hutvÄ• nÄ• _ti mahanto hutvÄ• . aggi hi ekadÄ• yÄ• vabrahmalokappamÄ• á¹‡c __tattha pÄ• rohÄ• _ti tattha agginÄ• daá¹£• á¹£• havane pÄ• rohÄ• jÄ• yanti. __pÄ• rohÄ• _ vuccanti. te hi agginÄ• daá¹£• á¹£• haá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne mÅ«lamattepi avasiá¹-á¹-he pÄ• dato roha vaá¹£• á¹£• hanti, tasmÄ• ``pÄ• rohÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuccanti. puna rohanatthena vÄ• __pÄ• ro rattindivÄ• naá¹ƒ atikkame. nidÄ• ghepi deve vuá¹-á¹-hamatte jÄ• yanti.

__bhikkhu á¹£• ahati tejasÄ• _ti ettha akkosantaá¹ƒ paccakkosanto bhaá¹‡á¹£• antaá¹ƒ paá¹-paharantaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipaharanto bhikkhu nÄ• ma kiÃ±ci bhikkhutejasÄ• á¹£• ahituá¹ƒ na sakko na paccakkosati, bhaá¹‡á¹£• antaá¹ƒ na paá¹-ibhaá¹‡á¹£• ati. paharantaá¹ƒ na paá¹-ipaharati, vippaá¹-ipanno tassa sÄ«latejena á¹£• ayhati. tenevetaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ. __na tassa puttÄ• pasav puttadhÄ«taropi gomahiá¹ƒsakukkuá¹-asÅ«karÄ• dayo pasavopi na bhavanti, vinassantÄ«ti vindare dhana_nti tassa dÄ• yÄ• dÄ• pi dhanaá¹ƒ na vindanti. __tÄ• lÄ• vatthÅ« bhavanti te daá¹£• á¹£• hÄ• vatthumattÄ• vasiá¹-á¹-ho matthakacchinnatÄ• lo viya bhavanti, puttadhÄ«tÄ vaá¹£• á¹£• hantÄ«ti attho.

__tasmÄ• _ti \Be I 124/ yasmÄ• samaá¹‡atejena daá¹£• á¹£• hÄ• matthakacchinnatÄ• lo viy bhavanti, tasmÄ• . __sammadeva samÄ• care_ti sammÄ• samÄ• careyya. sammÄ• samÄ khattiyaá¹ƒ tÄ• va nissÄ• ya laddhabbaá¹ƒ gÄ• manigamayÄ• navÄ• hanÄ• diÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaa kÄ«á¹£·Ä• panena laddhabbaá¹ƒ vatthahiraÃ±Ã±asuvaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• diÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ aggiá¹ƒ n pattabbaá¹ƒ yÄ• gubhattapacanasÄ«tavinodanÄ• diÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ, bhikkhuá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya asutasavanasutapariyodapana-saggamaggÄ• dhigamÄ• diÄ• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ sampassamÄ• vuttappakÄ• ro Ä• dÄ«navo atthi. kiá¹ƒ imehÄ«â€™â€™ ti? na sabbaso pahÄ• tabbÄ• . iss vuttappakÄ• raá¹ƒ avajÄ• nanaÃ±ca paribhavanaÃ±ca akatvÄ• pubbuá¹-á¹-hÄ• yipacchÄ• upÄ• yehi khattiyakumÄ• ro tosetabbo, evaá¹ƒ tato issariyaá¹ƒ adhigamissati. ahituá¹‡á¸• ik akatvÄ• nÄ• gavijjaá¹ƒ parivattetvÄ• ajapadena daá¹‡á¸• ena gÄ«vÄ• ya gahetvÄ• visaha dhovitvÄ• peá¸·Ä• yaá¹ƒ pakkhipitvÄ• kÄ«á¸·Ä• pentena caritabbaá¹ƒ. evaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ nissÄ• labhissati. yÄ• gupacanÄ• dÄ«ni \Ne I 120/ kattukÄ• mena aggiá¹ƒ vissÄ• sena bhaá¹‡á¸• apakkhipitvÄ• hatthehi anÄ• masantena gomayacuá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dÄ«hi jÄ• letvÄ• yÄ• gupacan taá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya Ä• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ labhissati. asutasavanÄ• dÄ«ni patthayantenapi bhikkhuá¹ vejjakammanavakammÄ• dÄ«su ayojetvÄ• catÅ«hi paccayehi sakkaccaá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ta asutapubbaá¹ƒ buddhavacanaá¹ƒ asutapubbaá¹ƒ paÃ±hÄ• vinicchayaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhamm tisso kulasampattiyo cha kÄ• masaggÄ• ni nava ca brahmaloke patvÄ• amatamahÄ• nibbÄ imamatthaá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya __sammadeva samÄ• care_ti Ä• ha.

__etadavocÄ• _ti dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• pasanno pasÄ• daá¹ƒ Ä• vikaronto etaá¹ƒ ``a ntiÄ• divacanaá¹ƒ avoca. tattha __abhikkanta_nti abhikantaá¹ƒ atiiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ atimanÄ• paá attho. ettha ekena abhikkantasaddena desanaá¹ƒ thometi ``abhikkantaá¹ƒ, bhante, yadidaá dhammadesanÄ• â€™â€™ ti. ekena attano \Be I 125/ pasÄ• daá¹ƒ ``abhikkantaá¹ƒ, bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ Ä• gamma mama pasÄ• doâ€™â€™ ti.

tato paraá¹ƒ catÅ«hi upamÄ• hi desanaá¹ƒyeva thometi. tattha __nikkujjita_nti adhomukhaa heá¹-á¹-hÄ• mukhajÄ• taá¹ƒ vÄ• . __ukkujjeyyÄ• _ti uparimukhaá¹ƒ kareyya. __paá¹-icchan tiá¹‡apaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dichÄ• ditaá¹ƒ. __vivareyyÄ• _ti ugghÄ• á¹-eyya. __mÅ«á¸·hassÄ• _ti dis Ä• cikkheyyÄ• _ti \Ee I 136/ hatthe gahetvÄ• ``esa maggoâ€™â€™ ti vadeyya. __andhakÄ kÄ• á¸·apakkhacÄ• tuddasÄ« aá¸• á¸• harattaghanavanasaá¹‡á¸• a meghapaá¹-alehi catura hoti --- yathÄ• koci nikkujjitaá¹ƒ ukkujjeyya, evaá¹ƒ saddhammavimukhaá¹ƒ asaddhamme p asaddhammÄ• vuá¹-á¹-hÄ• pentena, yathÄ• paá¹-icchannaá¹ƒ vivareyya, evaá¹ƒ kassapas sÄ• sanantaradhÄ• nÄ• pabhuti micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-higahanapaá¹-icchannaá¹ƒ sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ v maggaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkheyya, evaá¹ƒ kummaggamicchÄ• maggapaá¹-ipannassa me saggamokk andhakÄ• re telapajjotaá¹ƒ dhÄ• reyya, evaá¹ƒ mohandhakÄ• re nimuggassa me buddhÄ• c tappaá¹-icchÄ• dakamohandhakÄ• raviddhaá¹ƒsakadesanÄ• pajjotaá¹ƒ dhÄ• rentena mayh pariyÄ• yehi pakÄ• sitattÄ• anekapariyÄ• yena dhammo pakÄ• sitoti.

evaá¹ƒ desanaá¹ƒ thometvÄ• imÄ• ya desanÄ• ya ratanattaye pasannacitto pasannÄ• kÄ• __esÄ• ha_ntiÄ• dimÄ• ha. tattha __esÄ• ha_nti eso ahaá¹ƒ. __bhagavantaá¹ƒ saraá¹‡aá¹ bhikkhusaá¹…ghaÃ±cÄ• _ti \Ne I 121/ bhagavantaÃ±ca dhammaÃ±ca bhikkhusaá¹…ghaÃ± saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gacchÄ• mi. __upÄ• sakaá¹ƒ maá¹ƒ, bhante, bhagavÄ• dhÄ• retÅ«_ti maá¹ƒ b evaá¹ƒ dhÄ• retu, jÄ• nÄ• tÅ«ti attho. __ajjatagge_ti ajjataá¹ƒ Ä• diá¹ƒ katvÄ• . ajjadaggeti v da-kÄ• ro padasandhikaro, ajja aggaá¹ƒ katvÄ• ti attho. __pÄ• á¹‡upeta_nti pÄ• á¹‡ehi upe pavattati, tÄ• va upetaá¹ƒ anaÃ±Ã±asatthukaá¹ƒ tÄ«hi saraá¹‡agamanehi saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ gata kappiyakÄ• rakaá¹ƒ maá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• dhÄ• retÅ«ti ayamettha saá¹…khepo, vitthÄ• ro pana dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• ya sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalasutte sabbÄ• kÄ• rena vuttoti. paá¹-h

2. purisasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<113> dutiye \Be I 126/ \Ee I 137/ __abhivÄ• detvÄ• _ti purimasutte saraá¹‡agatattÄ• idha __ajjhatta_nti niyakajjhattaá¹ƒ, attano santÄ• ne uppajjantÄ«ti attho. __lobhÄ• _dÄ«su lubb dussanalakkhaá¹‡o doso, muyhanalakkhaá¹‡o mohoti. __hiá¹ƒsantÄ«_ti viheá¹-henti nÄ• se __attasambhÅ«tÄ• _ti attani sambhÅ«tÄ• . __tacasÄ• raá¹ƒva samphala_nti yathÄ• tacasÄ naá¸·aá¹ƒ vÄ• attano phalaá¹ƒ hiá¹ƒsati vinÄ• seti, evaá¹ƒ hiá¹ƒsanti vinÄ• sentÄ«ti. dutiya

3. jarÄ• maraá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<114> tatiye __aÃ±Ã±atra jarÄ• maraá¹‡Ä• _ti jarÄ• maraá¹‡ato mutto nÄ• ma atthÄ«ti vuc __khattiyamahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• _ti khattiyamahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• nÄ• ma mahÄ• sÄ• rappattÄ• khattiyÄ heá¹-á¹-himantena koá¹-isataá¹ƒ nidhÄ• nagataá¹ƒ hoti, tayo kahÄ• paá¹‡akumbhÄ• valaÃ± rÄ• siá¹ƒ katvÄ• á¹-hapitÄ• honti, te __khattiyamahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• _ nÄ• ma. yesaá¹ƒ brÄ• hma asÄ«tikoá¹-idhanaá¹ƒ nihitaá¹ƒ hoti, diyaá¸• á¸• ho kahÄ• paá¹‡akumbho valaÃ±janatthÄ• y katvÄ• á¹-hapito hoti, te __brÄ• hmaá¹‡amahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• _ nÄ• ma. yesaá¹ƒ gahapatÄ«naá nihitaá¹ƒ hoti, kahÄ• paá¹‡akumbho valaÃ±janatthÄ• ya gehamajjhe rÄ• siá¹ƒ katvÄ• á¹-ha __gahapatimahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• _ nÄ• ma.

__aá¸• á¸• hÄ• _ti issarÄ• . nidhÄ• nagatadhanassa mahantatÄ• ya __mahaddhanÄ• _. su upabhogabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• naá¹ƒ mahantatÄ• ya __mahÄ• bhogÄ• _. anidhÄ• nagatassa jÄ• ta __pahÅ«tajÄ• tarÅ«parajatÄ• _ \Ne I 122/. vittÅ«pakaraá¹‡assa tuá¹-á¹-hikaraá¹‡assa pahÅ __pahÅ«tavittÅ«pakaraá¹‡Ä• _. godhanÄ• dÄ«naÃ±ca sattavidhadhaÃ±Ã±Ä• naÃ±ca pahÅ tesampi jÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ natthi aÃ±Ã±atra jarÄ• maraá¹‡Ä• _ti tesampi evaá¹ƒ issarÄ• naá¹ƒ j natthi aÃ±Ã±atra jarÄ• maraá¹‡Ä• , jÄ• tattÄ• yeva jarÄ• maraá¹‡ato mokkho nÄ• ma natthi hoti.

__arahanto_tiÄ• dÄ«su \Be I 127/ \Ee I 138/ Ä• rakÄ• kilesehÄ«ti arahanto. khÄ«á¹‡Ä• et Ä• savÄ• ti __khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savÄ• _. brahmacariyavÄ• saá¹ƒ vuá¹-á¹-hÄ• pariniá¹-á¹-hitavÄ• s maggehi karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ etesaá¹ƒ katanti __katakaraá¹‡Ä«yÄ• _. khandhabhÄ• ro kilesabh kÄ• maguá¹‡abhÄ• roti, ime ohitÄ• bhÄ• rÄ• etesanti __ohitabhÄ• rÄ• _. anuppatto arahat etesanti __anuppattasadatthÄ• _. dasavidhampi parikkhÄ«á¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ et __parikkhÄ«á¹‡abhavasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• _. sammÄ• kÄ• raá¹‡ehi jÄ• nitvÄ• vimuttÄ• ti __sam maggapaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya catusaccadhammaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• phalavimuttiyÄ• vimuttÄ• ti attho. __b bhijjanasabhÄ• vo. __nikkhepanadhammo_ti nikkhipitabbasabhÄ• vo. khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa h Ä• rammaá¹‡ato paá¹-ividdhaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ hi na jÄ«rati. idha panassa jÄ«raá¹‡ad evamÄ• ha. atthuppattiko kirassa suttassa nikkhepo. sivikasÄ• lÄ• ya nisÄ«ditvÄ• kathitant bhagavÄ• citrÄ• ni rathayÄ• nÄ• dÄ«ni disvÄ• diá¹-á¹-hameva upamaá¹ƒ katvÄ• , ``jÄ«rant gÄ• thamÄ• ha.

tattha __jÄ«rantÄ«_ti jaraá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡anti. __rÄ• jarathÄ• _ti raÃ±Ã±o abhirÅ«hanarathÄ• suvaá¹‡á¹‡arajatÄ• dÄ«hi suá¹-á¹-hu cittitÄ• . __atho sarÄ«rampi jaraá¹ƒ upetÄ«_ti evarÅ«p anupÄ• diá¹‡á¹‡akesu sÄ• radÄ• rumayesu rathesu jÄ«rantesu imasmiá¹ƒ ajjhattike upÄ• d maá¹ƒsalohitÄ• dimaye sarÄ«re kiá¹ƒ vattabbaá¹ƒ? sarÄ«rampi jaraá¹ƒ upetiyevÄ• ti attho.
pavedayantÄ«_ti santo sabbhÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ sataá¹ƒ dhammo na jaraá¹ƒ upetÄ«ti evaá¹ƒ p dhammo nÄ• ma nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ na jÄ«rati, ajaraá¹ƒ amatanti evaá¹ƒ kathentÄ«â€™â€ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• gamma sÄ«danasabhÄ• vÄ• kilesÄ• bhijjanti, tasmÄ• taá¹ƒ sabbhÄ«ti vu kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ dassento ``santo have sabbhi pavedayantÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. idaá¹ƒ hi vutta dhammo na jaraá¹ƒ upeti, tasmÄ• santo sabbhi pavedayanti. ajaraá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ sataá¹ Ä• cikkhantÄ«ti attho. sundarÄ• dhivacanaá¹ƒ vÄ• etaá¹ƒ sabbhÄ«ti. yaá¹ƒ sabbhidhamma pavedayanti kathayanti, so sataá¹ƒ dhammo na jaraá¹ƒ upetÄ«tipi attho. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. piyasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<115> catutthe \Ne I 123/ \Be I 128/ __rahogatassÄ• _ti rahasi gatassa. __paá¹-isallÄ«nass ekÄ«bhÅ«tassa. __evametaá¹ƒ, mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• _ti idha bhagavÄ• imaá¹ƒ suttaá¹ƒ sabbaÃ± __antakenÄ• dhipannassÄ• _ti maraá¹‡ena ajjhotthaá¹-assa. catutthaá¹ƒ.

5. attarakkhitasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<116> paÃ±came __hatthikÄ• yo_ti hatthighaá¹-Ä• . sesesupi eseva nayo. __saá¹ƒvaro_ti sabbattha saá¹ƒvaro_ti iminÄ• kammapathabhedaá¹ƒ apattassa kammassa saá¹ƒvaraá¹ƒ c lajjÄ«gahaá¹‡ena cettha ottappampi gahitameva hoti. paÃ±camaá¹ƒ.

6. appakasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<117> chaá¹-á¹-he __uá¸·Ä• re uá¸·Ä• re_ti paá¹‡Ä«te ca bahuke ca. __majjantÄ«_ti mÄ• r __atisÄ• ra_nti atikkamaá¹ƒ. __kÅ«á¹-a_nti pÄ• saá¹ƒ. __pacchÄ• sa_nti pacchÄ• tesaá¹ƒ.

7. aá¸• á¸• akaraá¹‡asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<118> sattame __kÄ• mahetÅ«_ti kÄ• mamÅ«lakaá¹ƒ. __kÄ• manidÄ• na_nti kÄ• mapacc kÄ• makÄ• raá¹‡Ä• . sabbÄ• ni hetÄ• ni aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±avevacanÄ• neva. __bhadramukh rÄ• jÄ• aá¸• á¸• akaraá¹‡e nisÄ«di. tattha paá¹-hamataraá¹ƒ laÃ±jaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• nisinnÄ• sÄ• mike kariá¹ƒsu. rÄ• jÄ• taá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• --- ``mayhaá¹ƒ tÄ• va pathavissarassa sammuk parammukhÄ• kiá¹ƒ nÄ• ma na karissanti? paÃ±Ã±Ä• yissati dÄ• ni viá¹-aá¹-Å«bho senÄ• rajjena, kiá¹ƒ mayhaá¹ƒ evarÅ«pehi laÃ±jakhÄ• dakehi musÄ• vÄ• dÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ ekaá¹-á ti cintesi. tasmÄ• evamÄ• ha. __khippaá¹ƒva oá¸• á¸• ita_nti kuminaá¹ƒ viya oá¸• á¸• itaá¹ƒ oá¸• á¸• itaá¹ƒ kuminaá¹ƒ pavisantÄ• na jÄ• nanti, evaá¹ƒ sattÄ• kilesakÄ• mena vatthukÄ jÄ• nantÄ«ti attho. sattamaá¹ƒ.

8. mallikÄ• suttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<119> aá¹-á¹-hame \Ne I 124/ \Be I 129/ __atthi nu kho te mallike_ti kasmÄ• pucchati? aya duggatamÄ• lÄ• kÄ• rassa dhÄ«tÄ• , ekadivasaá¹ƒ Ä• paá¹‡ato pÅ«vaá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• ``mÄ• khÄ• dissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti gacchantÄ« paá¹-ipathe bhikkhusaá¹…ghaparivÄ• raá¹ƒ bhaga pavisantaá¹ƒ disvÄ• pasannacittÄ• taá¹ƒ bhagavato adÄ• si. satthÄ• nisÄ«danÄ• kÄ• raá cÄ«varaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• petvÄ• adÄ• si. bhagavÄ• tattha nisÄ«ditvÄ• taá¹ƒ pÅ«vaá¹ƒ parib vikkhÄ• letvÄ• sitaá¹ƒ pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• si. thero ``imissÄ• , bhante, ko vipÄ• ko bhavissatÄ«â€ ajjesÄ• tathÄ• gatassa paá¹-hamabhojanaá¹ƒ adÄ• si, ajjeva kosalaraÃ±Ã±o aggamahesÄ taá¹ƒdivasameva ca rÄ• jÄ• kÄ• sigÄ• me bhÄ• gineyyena yuddhena parÄ• jito palÄ• yitvÄ mÄ• lÄ• rÄ• maá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ• balakÄ• yassa Ä• gamanaá¹ƒ Ä• gamesi. tassa sÄ• vattaá¹ pasÄ«ditvÄ• taá¹ƒ antepÅ«raá¹ƒ atihÄ• rÄ• petvÄ• taá¹ƒ aggamahesiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hape athekadivasaá¹ƒ cintesi --- ``mayÄ• imissÄ• duggatakulassa dhÄ«tuyÄ• mahantaá¹ƒ issar yaá¹ƒnÅ«nÄ• haá¹ƒ imaá¹ƒ puccheyyaá¹ƒ `ko te piyoâ€™ ti? sÄ• `tvaá¹ƒ me, mahÄ• rÄ• ja maá¹ƒ pucchissati. athassÄ• haá¹ƒ `mayhampi tvaá¹ƒyeva piyÄ• â€™ ti vakkhÄ• mÄ«â€™â vissÄ• sajananatthaá¹ƒ sammodanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ kathento pucchati. sÄ• pana devÄ« p buddhupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yikÄ• dhammupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yikÄ• saá¹…ghupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yikÄ• mahÄ• cintesi --- ``nÄ• yaá¹ƒ paÃ±ho raÃ±Ã±o mukhaá¹ƒ oloketvÄ• kathetabboâ€™â€™ ti. sÄ• s rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ pucchi. rÄ• jÄ• tÄ• ya sarasena kathitattÄ• nivattituá¹ƒ alabhanto sayampi sa ``sakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ idaá¹ƒ, tathÄ• gatassa naá¹ƒ Ä• rocessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti gantvÄ• bhag __nevajjhagÄ• _ti nÄ• dhigacchati. __evaá¹ƒ piyo puthu attÄ• paresa_nti yathÄ• ekassa a paresaá¹ƒ puthusattÄ• nampi attÄ• piyoti attho. aá¹-á¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

9. yaÃ±Ã±asuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<120> navame \Be I 130/ __thÅ«á¹‡Å«panÄ«tÄ• nÄ«_ti thÅ«á¹‡aá¹ƒ upanÄ«tÄ• ni, thÅ«á¹

__parikammÄ• ni karontÄ«_ti ettÄ• vatÄ• tehi bhikkhÅ«hi raÃ±Ã±o Ä• raddhayaÃ±Ã±o tath pana raÃ±Ã±Ä• ayaá¹ƒ yaÃ±Ã±o Ä• raddho? dussupinapaá¹-ighÄ• tÄ• ya. ekadivasaá¹ƒ ki sabbÄ• laá¹…kÄ• rappaá¹-imaá¹‡á¸• ito \Ne I 125/ hatthikkhandhavaragato nagaraá¹ƒ anus vivaritvÄ• olokayamÄ• naá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒ itthiá¹ƒ disvÄ• tassÄ• paá¹-ibaddhacitto tatova paá¹-i antepuraá¹ƒ pavisitvÄ• ekassa purisassa tamatthaá¹ƒ Ä• rocetvÄ• ``gaccha tassÄ• sassÄ assÄ• mikabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ vÄ• jÄ• nÄ• hÄ«â€™â€™ ti pesesi. so gantvÄ• pucchi. sÄ• ``eso nisinnoâ€™â€™ ti dassesi. rÄ• japuriso raÃ±Ã±o tamatthaá¹ƒ Ä• cikkhi. rÄ• jÄ• taá¹ƒ puris ``maá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hahÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. ``nÄ• haá¹ƒ, deva, upaá¹-á¹-hahituá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• m ``upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ nÄ• ma na Ä• cariyassa santike uggahetabbaâ€™â€™ nti balakkÄ• re gÄ• hÄ• petvÄ• upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kaá¹ƒ akÄ• si. upaá¹-á¹-hahitvÄ• gehaá¹ƒ gatamattameva ca ``upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• kena nÄ• ma raÃ±Ã±o vacanaá¹ƒ kattabbaá¹ƒ, gaccha ito yojanamatte amhÄ sÄ«sadhovanapokkharaá¹‡Ä« atthi, tato aruá¹‡amattikaÃ±ca lohituppalamÄ• laÃ±ca gaá¹‡h nÄ• gacchasi, rÄ• jadaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ karissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• pesesi. so rÄ• jabhayen gato.

rÄ• jÄ• pi tasmiá¹ƒ gate dovÄ• rikaá¹ƒ pakkosÄ• petvÄ• , ``ajja sÄ• yanheyeva dvÄ• raá¹ƒ rÄ• jadÅ«toâ€™ ti vÄ• `uparÄ• jadÅ«toâ€™ ti vÄ• bhaá¹‡antÄ• nampi mÄ• vivarÄ«â€™â mattikaÃ±ca uppalÄ• ni ca gahetvÄ• dvÄ• re pihitamatte Ä• gantvÄ• bahuá¹ƒ vadantopi dv parissayabhayena jetavanaá¹ƒ gato. rÄ• jÄ• pi rÄ• gapariá¸·Ä• hena abhibhÅ«to kÄ• le nisÄ kÄ• le nipajjati, sanniá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ alabhanto yattha katthaci nisinnakova makkaá¹-aniddÄ

pubbe \Be I 131/ ca tasmiá¹ƒyeva nagare cattÄ• ro seá¹-á¹-hiputtÄ• paradÄ• rikakammaá¹ nÄ• ma lohakumbhiyÄ• nibbattiá¹ƒsu. te pheá¹‡uddehakaá¹ƒ paccamÄ• nÄ• tiá¹ƒsavassas gacchantÄ• kumbhiyÄ• talaá¹ƒ pÄ• puá¹‡anti, tiá¹ƒsavassasahassÄ• ni upari gacchantÄ• te taá¹ƒ divasaá¹ƒ Ä• lokaá¹ƒ oloketvÄ• attano dukkaá¹-abhayena ekekaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ vat asakkontÄ• ekekaá¹ƒ akkharameva Ä• haá¹ƒsu. eko sa-kÄ• raá¹ƒ, eko so-kÄ• raá¹ƒ, eko n Ä• ha. rÄ• jÄ• tesaá¹ƒ nerayikasattÄ• naá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ sutakÄ• lato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya sukhaá¹ taá¹ƒrattÄ• vasesaá¹ƒ vÄ«tinÄ• mesi.

aruá¹‡e uá¹-á¹-hite purohito Ä• gantvÄ• taá¹ƒ sukhaseyyaá¹ƒ pucchi. so ``kuto me, Ä• cari \Ne I 126/? vatvÄ• , ``supine evarÅ«pe sadde assosiâ€™â€™ nti Ä• cikkhi. brÄ• hmaá¹‡o - supinena vuá¸• á¸• hi vÄ• hÄ• ni vÄ• natthi, apica kho pana yaá¹ƒ imassa gehe atthi, taá¹ƒ hoti, gotamasÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• kiÃ±ci na labhanti, brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ uppÄ• dessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti, ``bhÄ• riyo ayaá¹ƒ, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, supino tÄ«su jÄ• nÄ«su e vÄ• bhavissati jÄ«vitantarÄ• yo vÄ• , devo vÄ• na vassissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. kathaá¹ƒ Ä• cariyÄ• ti? ``mantetvÄ• Ã±Ä• tuá¹ƒ sakkÄ• , mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• ti. gacchatha Ä• cariyehi sad sotthiá¹ƒ karothÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

so sivikasÄ• lÄ• yaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡e sannipÄ• tetvÄ• tamatthaá¹ƒ Ä• rocetvÄ• , ``visuá¹ƒ v vadathÄ• â€™â€™ ti tayo vagge akÄ• si \Ee I 143/. brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• pavisitvÄ• rÄ• jÄ• naá rÄ• jÄ• purohitassa kathitaniyÄ• meneva kathetvÄ• ``kathaá¹ƒ sotthi bhaveyyÄ• â€™â€™
--- ``sabbapaÃ±casataá¹ƒ yaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ yajitvÄ• etassa kammassa sotthi bhaveyya, evaá¹ƒ, kathentÄ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• haá¹ƒsu. rÄ• jÄ• tesaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• anabhinanditvÄ• appaá¹-ikkositv dutiyavaggabrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• pi Ä• gantvÄ• tattheva kathesuá¹ƒ. tathÄ• tatiyavaggabrÄ• hm ``yaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ karontÅ«â€™â€™ ti Ä• á¹‡Ä• pesi. tato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• usab Ä• harÄ• pesuá¹ƒ. nagare mahÄ• saddo udapÄ• di \Be I 132/. taá¹ƒ pavattiá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• ma tathÄ• gatassa santikaá¹ƒ pesesi. so gantvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ vanditvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ nisÄ
--- ``handa kuto nu tvaá¹ƒ, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, Ä• gacchasi divÄ• divassÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• ha. rÄ• supinake cattÄ• ro saddÄ• sutÄ• , sohaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡e pucchiá¹ƒ. brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• `bhÄ sabbapaÃ±casataá¹ƒ yaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ yajitvÄ• paá¹-ikammaá¹ƒ karomÄ• ti Ä• raddhÄ• â€™â€ mahÄ• rÄ• ja, saddÄ• sutÄ• ti. so yathÄ• sutaá¹ƒ Ä• rocesi. atha naá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• Ä• ha -- imasmiá¹ƒyeva nagare cattÄ• ro seá¹-á¹-hiputtÄ• paradÄ• rikÄ• hutvÄ• nandopanandÄ• y saá¹-á¹-hivassasahassamatthake uggacchiá¹ƒsu.

tattha eko ---

``saá¹-á¹-hivassasahassÄ• ni, paripuá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ni sabbaso.

niraye paccamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ, kadÄ• anto bhavissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti || (Pv 802; J I 4.54) --- imaá¹ƒ \Ne I 127/ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ vatthukÄ• mo ahosi. dutiyo --- ``sohaá¹ƒ nÅ«na ito gantvÄ• , yoniá¹ƒ laddhÄ• na mÄ• nusiá¹ƒ.

vadaÃ±Ã±Å« sÄ«lasampanno, kÄ• hÄ• mi kusalaá¹ƒ bahuâ€™â€™ nti || (Pv 805; J I 4.56) - imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ vatthukÄ• mo ahosi. tatiyo ---

``natthi anto kuto anto, na anto paá¹-idissati.

tadÄ• hi pakataá¹ƒ pÄ• paá¹ƒ, mama tuyhaÃ±ca mÄ• risÄ• â€™â€™ ti || (Pv 803; J I 4.55)

imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ vatthukÄ• mo ahosi. catuttho --- ``dujjÄ«vitamajÄ«vimhÄ• , ye sante na dadamhase.

vijjamÄ• nesu bhogesu, dÄ«paá¹ƒ nÄ• kamha attanoâ€™â€™ ti || (Pv 804; J I 4.53) --- imaá¹ƒ \Ee I 144/. te imÄ• gÄ• thÄ• vattuá¹ƒ asakkontÄ• ekekaá¹ƒ akkharaá¹ƒ vatvÄ• tat mahÄ• rÄ• ja, te nerayikasattÄ• yathÄ• kammena viraviá¹ƒsu. tassa saddassa sutapaccay vuá¸• á¸• hi vÄ• natthi. ettakÄ• naá¹ƒ pana pasÅ«naá¹ƒ ghÄ• tanakammaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma bhÄ• dhammakathaá¹ƒ \Be I 133/ kathesi. rÄ• jÄ• dasabale pasÄ«ditvÄ• , ``muÃ±cÄ• mi, nesaá haritÄ• ni ceva tiá¹‡Ä• ni khÄ• dantu, sÄ«talÄ• ni ca pÄ• nÄ«yÄ• ni pivantu, sÄ«to ca nesaá upavÄ• yatÅ«â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• , ``gacchatha hÄ• rethÄ• â€™â€™ ti manusse Ä• á¹‡Ä• p palÄ• petvÄ• taá¹ƒ pÄ• á¹‡asaá¹…ghaá¹ƒ bandhanato mocetvÄ• nagare dhammabheriá¹ƒ

atha rÄ• jÄ• dasabalassa santike nisinno Ä• ha --- ``bhante, ekaratti nÄ• ma tiyÄ• mÄ• ho dve rattiyo ekato ghaá¹-itÄ• viya ahesuâ€™â€™ nti. sopi puriso tattheva nisinno \Ne I 128/yojanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma catugÄ• vutaá¹ƒ hoti, mayhaá¹ƒ pana ajja dve yojanÄ• ni ekato katÄ• ni bhagavÄ• --- ``jÄ• garassa tÄ• va rattiyÄ• dÄ«ghabhÄ• vo pÄ• kaá¹-o, santassa yojanassa vaá¹-á¹-apatitassa pana bÄ• laputhujjanassa anamataggasaá¹ƒsÄ• ravaá¹-á¹-aá¹ƒ ekantad rÄ• jÄ• naÃ±ca taÃ±ca purisaá¹ƒ nerayikasatte ca Ä• rabbha dhammapade imaá¹ƒ gÄ• tha ``dÄ«ghÄ• jÄ• garato ratti, dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ santassa yojanaá¹ƒ.

dÄ«gho bÄ• lÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsÄ• ro, saddhammaá¹ƒ avijÄ• nataâ€™â€™ nti || (Dhp 60).

gÄ• thÄ• pariyosÄ• ne so itthisÄ• miko puriso sotÄ• pattiphale patiá¹-á¹-hahi. __etamatthaá kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ• nitvÄ• .

__assamedha_ntiÄ• dÄ«su --- porÄ• á¹‡arÄ• jakÄ• le kira sassamedhaá¹ƒ purisamedhaá¹
vÄ• cÄ• peyyanti cattÄ• ri saá¹…gahavatthÅ«ni ahesuá¹ƒ, yehi rÄ• jÄ• no lokaá¹ƒ saá¹…ga nipphannasassato \Ee I 145/ dasamabhÄ• gaggahaá¹‡aá¹ƒ __sassamedhaá¹ƒ_ nÄ• ma, sa attho. mahÄ• yodhÄ• naá¹ƒ chamÄ• sikaá¹ƒ bhatta-vetanÄ• nuppadÄ• naá¹ƒ __purisamedh purisasaá¹…gaá¹‡hane medhÄ• vitÄ• ti attho. daliddamanussÄ• naá¹ƒ hatthato lekhaá¹ƒ ga vinÄ• va vaá¸• á¸• hiyÄ• sahassadvisahassamattadhanÄ• nuppadÄ• naá¹ƒ __sammÄ• pÄ• pÄ• seti, hadaye bandhitvÄ• viya á¹-hapeti, tasmÄ• sammÄ• pÄ• santi vuccati. ``tÄ• ta mÄ nayena saá¹‡havÄ• cÄ• bhaá¹‡anaá¹ƒ vÄ• cÄ• peyyaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma, piyavÄ• cÄ• ti attho. eva saá¹…gahitaá¹ƒ raá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ iddhaÃ±ceva \Be I 134/ hoti phÄ«taÃ±ca pahÅ«taannapÄ• na manussÄ• mudÄ• modamÄ• nÄ• ure putte naccentÄ• apÄ• rutagharadvÄ• rÄ• viharanti.
aggaá¸·Ä• naá¹ƒ abhÄ• vato __niraggaá¸·a_nti vuccati. ayaá¹ƒ porÄ• á¹‡ikÄ• paveá¹‡Ä«.

aparabhÄ• ge pana okkÄ• karÄ• jakÄ• le brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• imÄ• ni cattÄ• ri saá¹…gahavatt raá¹-á¹-hasampattiá¹ƒ parivattetvÄ• uddhaá¹ƒmÅ«lakaá¹ƒ katvÄ• assamedhaá¹ƒ purisame

yaÃ±Ã±e nÄ• ma akaá¹ƒsu. tesu assamettha medhanti vadhantÄ«ti __assamedho_. dvÄ«hi ekavÄ«satiyÅ«passa ekasmiá¹ƒ majjhimadivaseyeva sattanavutipaÃ±capasusataghÄ• tabh bhÅ«miÃ±ca \Ne I 129/ purise ca avasesasabbavibhavadakkhiá¹‡assa yaÃ±Ã±assetaá¹ƒ ad medhantÄ«ti __purisamedho_. catÅ«hi pariyaÃ±Ã±ehi yajitabbassa saddhiá¹ƒ bhÅ«miyÄ• a vuttavibhavadakkhiá¹‡assa yaÃ±Ã±assetaá¹ƒ adhivacanaá¹ƒ. sammamettha pÄ• sentÄ«ti _ sammaá¹ƒ khipitvÄ• tassa \Ee I 146/ patitokÄ• se vediá¹ƒ katvÄ• saá¹ƒhÄ• rimehi yÅ«pÄ• nimuggokÄ• sato pabhuti paá¹-ilomaá¹ƒ gacchantena yajitabbassa satrayÄ• gassetaá¹ƒ adh pivantÄ«ti __vÄ• japeyyo_. ekena pariyaÃ±Ã±ena sattarasahi pasÅ«hi yajitabbassa beluvay sattarasakadakkhiá¹‡assa yaÃ±Ã±assetaá¹ƒ adhivacanaá¹ƒ. natthi ettha aggaá¸·Ä• ti __nira pariyaÃ±Ã±ehi yajitabbassa saddhiá¹ƒ bhÅ«miyÄ• ca purisehi ca assamedhe vuttavibhava sabbamedhapariyÄ• yanÄ• massa assamedhavikappassevetaá¹ƒ adhivacanaá¹ƒ. __mahÄ• mahÄ• karaá¹‡Ä«yÄ• . __sammaggatÄ• _ti sammÄ• paá¹-ipannÄ• buddhÄ• dayo. __nirÄ• __yajanti anukula_nti anukulesu yajanti, yaá¹ƒ niccabhattÄ• di pubbapurisehi paá¹-á¹-hapita aparÄ• paraá¹ƒ anupacchinnattÄ• manussÄ• dadantÄ«ti attho. navamaá¹ƒ.

10. bandhanasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<121> dasame __idha, bhante, raÃ±Ã±Ä• _ti idaá¹ƒ te bhikkhÅ« tesu manussesu Ä• nanda sukatakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rocentÄ• Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ. raÃ±Ã±o kira sakkena kusarÄ• jassa dinno paveá¹‡iyÄ• Ä• gato. rÄ• jÄ• alaá¹…karaá¹‡akÄ• le taá¹ƒ maá¹‡iá¹ƒ Ä• harathÄ• ti Ä• ha.
``á¹-hapitaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne \Be I 135/ na passÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• antogh pariyesitvÄ• dethÄ• â€™â€™ ti bandhÄ• pesi. Ä• nandatthero te disvÄ• maá¹‡ipaá¹-isÄ• n Ä• cikkhi \Ee I 147/. te raÃ±Ã±o Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• ``paá¹‡á¸• ito thero, therassa vacana paá¹-isÄ• makamanussÄ• rÄ• jaá¹…gaá¹‡e udakacÄ• á¹-iá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• sÄ• á¹‡iyÄ• pa Ä• haá¹ƒsu --- ``sÄ• á¹-akaá¹ƒ pÄ• rupitvÄ• ettha gantvÄ• hatthaá¹ƒ otÄ• rethÄ• â€™â€™ ``rÄ• jabhaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ vissajjetuá¹ƒ vÄ• valaÃ±jetuá¹ƒ vÄ• na sakkÄ• â€™â€™ ti. so geha upakacchake á¹-hapetvÄ• sÄ• á¹-akaá¹ƒ pÄ• rupitvÄ• Ä• gamma udakacÄ• á¹-iyaá¹ƒ pakk paá¹-ikkante rÄ• jamanussÄ• cÄ• á¹-iyaá¹ƒ hatthaá¹ƒ otÄ• retvÄ• maá¹‡iá¹ƒ disvÄ• Ä• ha ``Ä• nandattherena kira dassitanayena maá¹‡i diá¹-á¹-hoâ€™â€™ ti mahÄ• jano kolÄ• hala taá¹ƒ kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ tathÄ• gatassa Ä• rocentÄ• imaá¹ƒ pavattiá¹ƒ Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ. satthÄ• - bhikkhave, yaá¹ƒ Ä• nando manussÄ• naá¹ƒ hatthÄ• ruá¸·hamaá¹‡iá¹ƒ Ä• harÄ• peyya \Ne paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• attano Ã±Ä• á¹‡e á¹-hatvÄ• ahetukapaá¹-isandhiyaá¹ƒ nibbattÄ• naá¹ƒ tiracc hatthÄ• ruá¸·haá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ Ä• harÄ• petvÄ• raÃ±Ã±o adaá¹ƒsÅ«â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• ``ukkaá¹-á¹-he sÅ«ramicchanti, mantÄ«su akutÅ«halaá¹ƒ.

piyaÃ±ca annapÄ• namhi, atthe jÄ• te ca paá¹‡á¸• itaâ€™â€™ nti || (J I 1.92) --- mahÄ• sÄ• rajÄ• takaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__na taá¹ƒ daá¸·ha_nti taá¹ƒ bandhanaá¹ƒ thiranti na kathenti. __yadÄ• yasa_nti yaá¹ƒ Ä• __sÄ• rattarattÄ• _ti suá¹-á¹-hu rattarattÄ• , sÄ• rattena vÄ• rattÄ• sÄ• rattarattÄ• , sÄ• raa rattÄ• ti attho. __apekkhÄ• _ti Ä• layo nikanti. __Ä• hÅ«_ti kathenti. __ohÄ• rina_nti catÅ«s Ä• kaá¸• á¸• hanakaá¹ƒ. __sithila_nti na Ä• yasÄ• dibandhanaá¹ƒ viya iriyÄ• pathaá¹ƒ nivÄ• bandhanena baddhÄ• paradesampi gacchantiyeva. __duppamuÃ±ca_nti aÃ±Ã±atra lokutta asakkuá¹‡eyyanti. dasamaá¹ƒ.

paá¹-hamo vaggo.

2. dutiyavaggo

1. sattajaá¹-ilasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<122> dutiyavaggassa \Be I 136/ paá¹-hame \Ee I 148/ __pubbÄ• rÄ• me migÄ• ramÄ• tup pubbÄ• rÄ• masaá¹…khÄ• te vihÄ• re migÄ• ramÄ• tuyÄ• pÄ• sÄ• de. tatrÄ• yaá¹ƒ anupul satasahassakappamatthake ekÄ• upÄ• sikÄ• padumuttaraá¹ƒ bhagavantaá¹ƒ nimantetvÄ• bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa satasahassadÄ• naá¹ƒ datvÄ• bhagavato pÄ• damÅ«le nipajjitvÄ• -- buddhassa aggupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yikÄ• homÄ«â€™â€™ ti patthanaá¹ƒ akÄ• si. sÄ• kappasata ca saá¹ƒsaritvÄ• amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ bhagavato kÄ• le bhaddiyanagare meá¹‡á¸• akaputtassa dh sumanadeviyÄ• kucchismiá¹ƒ paá¹-isandhiá¹ƒ gaá¹‡hi \Ne I 131/. jÄ• takÄ• le cassÄ• visÄ akaá¹ƒsu. sÄ• yadÄ• bhagavÄ• bhaddiyanagaraá¹ƒ agamÄ• si, tadÄ• paÃ±cahi dÄ• rikÄ paccuggamanaá¹ƒ gatÄ• paá¹-hamadassanamhiyeva sotÄ• pannÄ• ahosi. aparabhÄ• ge s migÄ• raseá¹-á¹-hiputtassa puá¹‡á¹‡avaá¸• á¸• hanakumÄ• rassa gehaá¹ƒ gatÄ• . tattha na mÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hapesi, tasmÄ• migÄ• ramÄ• tÄ• ti vuccati. tÄ• ya kÄ• rite pÄ• sÄ• d __bahi dvÄ• rakoá¹-á¹-hake_ti pÄ• sÄ• dadvÄ• rakoá¹-á¹-hakassa bahi, na vihÄ• radvÄ• ra pÄ• sÄ• do lohapÄ• sÄ• do viya samantÄ• catudvÄ• rakoá¹-á¹-hakayuttena pÄ• kÄ• rena p pÄ• cÄ«nadvÄ• rakoá¹-á¹-hakassa bahi pÄ• sÄ• dacchÄ• yÄ• yaá¹ƒ pÄ• cÄ«nalokadhÄ• tu varabuddhÄ• sane nisinno hoti.

__parÅ«á¸·hakacchanakhalomÄ• _ti parÅ«á¸·hakacchÄ• parÅ«á¸·hanakhÄ• parÅ«á¸·halo dÄ«ghanakhÄ• cÄ• ti attho. __khÄ• rivividha_nti vividhakhÄ• riá¹ƒ nÄ• nappakÄ• rakaá¹ƒ pabbajitaparikkhÄ• rabhaá¹‡á¸• akaá¹ƒ. __avidÅ«re atikkamantÄ«_ti avidÅ«ramaggena nag __rÄ• jÄ• haá¹ƒ_ \Ee I 149/, __bhante_ti ahaá¹ƒ, bhante, rÄ• jÄ• pasenadi kosalo, mayhaá jÄ• nÄ• thÄ• ti. kasmÄ• pana rÄ• jÄ• loke aggapuggalassa santike nisinno evarÅ«pÄ• naá aÃ±jaliá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti. saá¹…gaá¹‡hanatthÄ• ya. evaá¹ƒ hissa ahosi --- ``sacÄ• haá karissÄ• mi \Be I 137/, `mayaá¹ƒ puttadÄ• raá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya etassatthÄ• ya dubbhojanadukkh ayaá¹ƒ amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ aÃ±jalimattampi na karotÄ«â€™ ti attanÄ• diá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ sutaá¹ƒ paá¹ katheyyuá¹ƒ. evaá¹ƒ kate pana anigÅ«hitvÄ• kathessantÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmÄ• evamakÄ• ajjhÄ• sayajÄ• nanatthaá¹ƒ evamakÄ• si.

__kÄ• sikacandana_nti saá¹‡hacandanaá¹ƒ. __mÄ• lÄ• gandhavilepana_nti vaá¹‡á¹‡agan sugandhabhÄ• vatthÄ• ya gandhaá¹ƒ, vaá¹‡á¹‡agandhatthÄ• ya vilepanaÃ±ca dhÄ• renten

__saá¹ƒvÄ• senÄ• _ti sahavÄ• sena. __sÄ«laá¹ƒ veditabba_nti ayaá¹ƒ susÄ«lo vÄ• dussÄ upasaá¹…kamantena jÄ• nitabbo. __taÃ±ca kho dÄ«ghena addhunÄ• na ittara_nti taÃ±ca veditabbaá¹ƒ, na ittarena. dvÄ«hatÄ«haÃ±hi saá¹ƒyatÄ• kÄ• ro ca saá¹ƒvutindriyÄ• kÄ• ro __manasikarotÄ• _ti sÄ«lamassa pariggahessÄ• mÄ«ti manasikarontena paccavekkhanten jÄ• nituá¹ƒ, na itarena. __paÃ±Ã±avatÄ• _ti tampi sappaÃ±Ã±eneva paá¹‡á¸• itena. bÄ• lo jÄ• nituá¹ƒ na sakkoti.

__saá¹ƒvohÄ• renÄ• _ti kathanena.

``yo hi koci manussesu, vohÄ• raá¹ƒ upajÄ«vati.

evaá¹ƒ vÄ• seá¹-á¹-ha jÄ• nÄ• hi, vÄ• á¹‡ijo so na brÄ• hmaá¹‡oâ€™â€™ ti || (MN II 457) -- ettha hi byavahÄ• ro vohÄ• ro nÄ• ma. ``cattÄ• ro ariyavohÄ• rÄ• cattÄ• ro anariyavohÄ• r ettha cetanÄ• . ``saá¹…khÄ• samaÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±atti vohÄ• roâ€™â€™ ti (Dhs 1313-131 ``vohÄ• ramattena so vohareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti (SN I 1.25) ettha kathÄ• vohÄ• ro. idhÄ• pi e hi sammukhÄ• kathÄ• parammukhÄ• ya kathÄ• ya na sameti, parammukhÄ• \Ee I 150/ ka tathÄ• purimakathÄ• ca pacchimakathÄ• ya, pacchimakathÄ• ca purimakathÄ• ya. so kat ``asuci eso puggaloâ€™â€™ ti. sucisÄ«lassa pana purimaá¹ƒ pacchimena, pacchimaÃ±ca sammukhÄ• kathitaá¹ƒ parammukhÄ• kathitena, parammukhÄ• kathitaÃ±ca sammukhÄ• ka sucibhÄ• vo jÄ• nitunti pakÄ• sento evamÄ• ha.

__thÄ• mo_ti \Be I 138/ Ã±Ä• á¹‡athÄ• mo. yassa hi Ã±Ä• á¹‡athÄ• mo natthi, so uppanne gahetabbaggahaá¹‡aá¹ƒ katabbakiccaá¹ƒ apassanto advÄ• ragharaá¹ƒ paviá¹-á¹-ho viya ca kho, mahÄ• rÄ• ja, thÄ• mo veditabbo_ti. __sÄ• kacchÄ• yÄ• _ti saá¹ƒkathÄ• ya. duppaÃ±Ã geá¹‡á¸• u viya uppalavati, paÃ±Ã±avato kathentassa paá¹-ibhÄ• naá¹ƒ anantaraá¹ƒ hoti. u maccho khuddako vÄ• mahanto vÄ• ti Ã±Ä• yati. __ocarakÄ• _ti heá¹-á¹-hÄ• carakÄ• . __o carantÄ• pi heá¹-á¹-hÄ• --- carakÄ• va honti. __ocaritvÄ• _ti avacaritvÄ• vÄ«maá¹ƒsitvÄ• , Ã±atvÄ• ti attho. __rajojalla_nti rajaÃ±ca jallaÃ±ca. __vaá¹‡á¹‡arÅ«penÄ• _ti vaá¹‡á¹‡asaá __ittaradassanenÄ• _ti lahukadassanena. __viyaÃ±janenÄ• _ti parikkhÄ• rabhaá¹‡á¸• aken mattikÄ• kuá¹‡á¸• alovÄ• _ti suvaá¹‡á¹‡akuá¹‡á¸• alapatirÅ«pako mattikÄ• kuá¹‡á¸• alova.

lohaá¸• á¸• hamÄ• sako. paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ.

2. paÃ±carÄ• jasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<123> dutiye \Ne I 133/ __rÅ«pÄ• _ti nÄ«lapÄ«tÄ• dibhedaá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. __k kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ uttamaá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-hanti rÅ«pagaruko Ä• ha. sesesupi eseva nayo. __yato_t __manÄ• papariyanta_nti \Ee I 151/ manÄ• panipphattikaá¹ƒ manÄ• pakoá¹-ikaá¹ƒ. tattha d puggalamanÄ• paá¹ƒ sammutimanÄ• paÃ±ca. puggalamanÄ• paá¹ƒ nÄ• ma yaá¹ƒ ekassa hoti, tadeva aÃ±Ã±assa aniá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ akantaá¹ƒ. paccantavÄ• sÄ«naÃ±hi gaá¹‡á¸• uppÄ• kantÄ• manÄ• pÄ• , majjhimadesavÄ• sÄ«naá¹ƒ atijegucchÄ• . tesaÃ±ca moramaá¹ƒsÄ• d itaresaá¹ƒ tÄ• ni atijegucchÄ• ni. idaá¹ƒ puggalamanÄ• paá¹ƒ. itaraá¹ƒ sammutimanÄ• paá¹ iá¹-á¹-hÄ• niá¹-á¹-hÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ nÄ• ma loke paá¹-ivibhattaá¹ƒ natthi, vibhajitvÄ• pan vibhajantena ca na atiissarÄ• naá¹ƒ mahÄ• sammatamahÄ• sudassanadhammÄ• sokÄ• dÄ tesaÃ±hi dippakappampi Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ amanÄ• paá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti. atiduggatÄ• naá vasenapi na vibhajitabbaá¹ƒ. tesaÃ±hi kaá¹‡Ä• jakabhattasitthÄ• nipi pÅ«timaá¹ƒsassa rasc amatasadiso hoti. majjhimÄ• naá¹ƒ pana gaá¹‡akamahÄ• mattaseá¹-á¹-hi kuá¹-umbikavÄ• a 139/ iá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ kÄ• lena aniá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ labhamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ vasena vibhajitabbaá¹ƒ. taÃ±

Ä• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ javanaá¹ƒ paricchindituá¹ƒ na sakkoti. javanaÃ±hi iá¹-á¹-hepi rajjati aniá¹-iá¹-á¹-hepi dussati aniá¹-á¹-hepi. ekantato pana vipÄ• kacittaá¹ƒ iá¹-á¹-hÄ• niá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ par kiÃ±cÄ• pi hi micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hikÄ• buddhaá¹ƒ vÄ• saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ vÄ• mahÄ• cetiyÄ• dÄ« Ä• rammaá¹‡Ä• ni disvÄ• akkhÄ«ni pidahanti domanassaá¹ƒ Ä• pajjanti, dhammasaddaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni pana tesaá¹ƒ kusalavipÄ• kÄ• neva honti. kiÃ± gÅ«thagandhaá¹ƒ ghÄ• yitvÄ• khÄ• dituá¹ƒ labhissÄ• mÄ• ti somanassajÄ• tÄ• honti, gÅ« cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, tassa gandhaghÄ• yane ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, rasasÄ• yan akusalavipÄ• kameva hoti. bhagavÄ• pana puggalamanÄ• pataá¹ƒ sandhÄ• ya __te ca, ma __candanaá¹…galiko_ti idaá¹ƒ tassa upÄ• sakassa nÄ• maá¹ƒ. __paá¹-ibhÄ• ti maá¹ƒ bhag ekaá¹ƒ kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti paÃ±Ã±Ä• yati. tassa te paÃ±ca rÄ• jÄ• no Ä• muttam \Ee I 152/ Ä• pÄ• nabhÅ«miyÄ• nisinnavaseneva mahatÄ• rÄ• jÄ• nubhÄ• vena paramena dasabalassa \Ne I 134/ santike á¹-hitakÄ• lato paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya divÄ• padÄ«pe viya udakÄ• l sÅ«riyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne khajjopanake viya ca hatappabhe hatasobhe taá¹ƒ tathÄ• gataÃ±ca teh sahassaguá¹‡ena virocamÄ• naá¹ƒ disvÄ• , ``mahantÄ• vata bho buddhÄ• nÄ• mÄ• â€™â tasmÄ• evamÄ• ha.

__kokanada_nti padumassevetaá¹ƒ vevacanaá¹ƒ. __pÄ• to_ti kÄ• lasseva. __siyÄ• _ti bha avigatagandhaá¹ƒ. __aá¹…gÄ«rasa_nti sammÄ• sambuddhaá¹ƒ. bhagavato hi aá¹…gato ra aá¹…gÄ«rasoti vuccati. yathÄ• kokanadasaá¹…khÄ• taá¹ƒ padumaá¹ƒ pÄ• tova phullaá¹ƒ evameva bhagavantaá¹ƒ aá¹…gÄ«rasaá¹ƒ tapantaá¹ƒ Ä• diccamiva antalikkhe virocamÄ• n saá¹…khepattho. __bhagavantaá¹ƒ acchÄ• desÄ«_ti bhagavato adÄ• sÄ«ti attho. lokavohÄ vacanaá¹ƒ hoti. so kira upÄ• sako --- ``ete tathÄ• gatassa guá¹‡esu pasÄ«ditvÄ• mayhaá¹ƒ \Be I 140/ denti, ahampi te bhagavatova dassÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti cintetvÄ• adÄ• si. dutiyaá

3. doá¹‡apÄ• kasuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

<124> tatiye __doá¹‡apÄ• kakura_nti doá¹‡apÄ• kaá¹ƒ kuraá¹ƒ, doá¹‡assa taá¹‡á¸• ulÄ• n tadÅ«piyaÃ±ca sÅ«pabyaÃ±janaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jatÄ«ti attho. __bhuttÄ• vÄ«_ti pubbe bhattasam muhuttaá¹ƒ vissamitvÄ• buddhupaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ gacchati, taá¹ƒdivasaá¹ƒ pana bhuÃ±jan hatthe dhovitvÄ• agamÄ• si. __mahassÄ• sÄ«_ti tassa gacchato balavÄ• bhattaparÄ«á¸·Ä mahantehi assÄ• sehi assasati, gattatopissa sedabindÅ«ni muccanti, tamenaá¹ƒ ubhosu pa yamakatÄ• lavaá¹‡á¹-ehi bÄ«janti, buddhagÄ• ravena pana nipajjituá¹ƒ na ussahatÄ«ti idaá ``mahassÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ. __imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ abhÄ• sÄ«_ti, rÄ• jÄ• bhojane \ kilamati, phÄ• su vihÄ• raá¹ƒ dÄ• nissa karissÄ• mÄ«ti cintetvÄ• abhÄ• si. __manujassÄ• _ __kahÄ• paá¹‡asata_nti pÄ• tarÄ• se paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• saá¹ƒ sÄ• yamÄ• se paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• santi ev __pariyÄ• puá¹‡itvÄ• _ti raÃ±Ã±Ä• saddhiá¹ƒ thokaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• ``imaá¹ƒ maá¹…galaasiá¹ mahÄ• rÄ• jÄ• â€™â€™ ti? asukassa nÄ• ma dehÄ«ti so taá¹ƒ asiá¹ƒ datvÄ• dasabalassa á¹-hitakova ``gÄ• thaá¹ƒ vadatha, bho gotamÄ• â€™â€™ ti vatvÄ• bhagavatÄ• vuttaá¹ƒ pa __bhattÄ• bhihÄ• re_ \Ne I 135/ __sudaá¹ƒ bhÄ• satÄ«_ti kathaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sati? bhagavatÄ• bhagavÄ• hi naá¹ƒ evaá¹ƒ anusÄ• si --- ``mÄ• á¹‡ava, imaá¹ƒ gÄ• thaá¹ƒ naá¹-o viya patta avaca, raÃ±Ã±o bhuÃ±janaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hatvÄ• paá¹-hamapiá¹‡á¸• Ä• dÄ«supi avatvÄ• vadeyyÄ• si, rÄ• jÄ• sutvÄ• va bhattapiá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ chaá¸• á¸• essati. atha raÃ±Ã±o hatthes apanetvÄ• sitthÄ• ni gaá¹‡etvÄ• tadupiyaá¹ƒ byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• punadivase tÄ• vatak pÄ• tarÄ• se ca vatvÄ• sÄ• yamÄ• se mÄ• vadeyyÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti. so sÄ• dhÅ«ti paá¹-i raÃ±Ã±o pÄ• tarÄ• saá¹ƒ bhutvÄ• gatattÄ• sÄ• yamÄ• se bhagavato anusiá¹-á¹-hiniyÄ• m 141/. rÄ• jÄ• dasabalassa vacanaá¹ƒ saritvÄ• bhattapiá¹‡á¸• aá¹ƒ pÄ• tiyaá¹ƒyeva chaá¸• dhotesu pÄ• tiá¹ƒ apanetvÄ• sitthÄ• ni gaá¹‡etvÄ• tadupiyaá¹ƒ byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ Ã±atvÄ• pu taá¹‡á¸• ule hariá¹ƒsu.

__nÄ• á¸·ikodanaparamatÄ• ya saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• sÄ«_ti so kira mÄ• á¹‡avo divase divase tathÄ
gacchati, dasabalassa vissÄ• siko ahosi. atha naá¹ƒ ekadivasaá¹ƒ pucchi ``rÄ• jÄ• kittakaá ti? so ``nÄ• á¸·ikodanaâ€™â€™ nti Ä• ha. vaá¹-á¹-issati ettÄ• vatÄ• purisabhÄ• go esa, ito mÄ• vadÄ«ti. iti rÄ• jÄ• tattheva saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• si. __diá¹-á¹-hadhammikena ceva atthena sa ettha sallikhitasarÄ«ratÄ• diá¹-á¹-hadhammikattho nÄ• ma, sÄ«laá¹ƒ samparÄ• yikattho. bh sÄ«laá¹…gaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma hotÄ«ti. tatiyaá¹ƒ.

4. paá¹-hamasaá¹…gÄ• masuttavaá¹‡á¹‡anÄ•

